Why Do They Come?

During the past tourist season Canada was the holiday ground for many thousands of American tourists. They come from all portions of the southern republic, and they come in such numbers that the influx resembled the gathering for a great convention.

Why do they come? Because Canada has yet much of that which appeals to the real man or woman, natural scenery and natural beauty that have not yet been despoiled by the hand of industry, that have not lost their charm by the introduction of an artificiality decreed by the lover of nature and the out-of-doors; Canada has restful and nerve-restoring conditions of life that enable one to return to duty with the vacation objective accomplished, namely, renewed energy and a feeling that one has gained something in education—for travel is education.

Why do they come again? This question has been answered times without number by our visitors. They come again because they are made to feel welcome—made to feel at home. This welcome was very clearly stated recently by Z. W. Cannon, Manager of the Glaciers to Gulf Motorway Association, whose home is in San Antonio, Texas. "So you would like to know how Canada has treated me?" said Mr. Cannon. "Well, I have never been treated better by any people of any state or nation. Within three minutes after crossing the international border they had me feeling just as much at home as though I were down in some Texas town." Great numbers of letters have been received by the Department of the Interior from tourists who are not only satisfied but delighted with their visit to Canada, and have expressed in no uncertain terms their intention to again spend their vacation in this country.

Canadians are proverbially courteous, and this has been fully recognized by our visitors. Little wonder then that they will come again. While the words of the dear old son, "There is no place like home," are intensely true, the next best is where one is made to feel at home, and Canadians have that faculty in large measure.

ISSUE No. 45-25.

The Fighting Ranger

BY F. J. McCONNELL and GEORGE E. FRYER.

Out in front the ranch defenders were slowly gaining ground on the rustlers. Under their steady gunfire the rustlers were rapidly falling back. "We'll have them on the run soon," said Bud to Miquel, riding next to him.

From the distance came the sound of the hoofs of the stampeding cattle yet loose.

"They've opened the corral," cried Miquel.

At this moment, with the ranch cowboys pressing strongly forward, the ranks of Buck McLeod broke, and they started fleeing on the run. Buck, cursing, tried vainly to call them back and continue the battle, but with several of them wounded, and their courage breaking down, they headed their leader no longer. Dismayed, he turned and fled after them, the cowboys giving chase.

"Come," said Bud to Miquel, "we're not needed here any more. Let's chase back, close the corral, and save as many of the steers as we can."

They spurred off toward the corral. At the gates they found the two rustlers who were stampeding the milling herd through into the lane. They opened fire. Taken by surprise, the two rustlers fled precipitately without even returning the fire.

Laboriously Bud and Miquel slid the corral gate shut against the still oncoming steers, and finally had the balance of the herd locked in.

When the flying hoofs of the cattle ceased passing over them, Mary and Terence breathed a sigh of relief. They waited a moment to make sure that no more would come, then rose to their feet.

"We hear, looks like your boys got them on the run," said Terence. "They've got away with part of the herd, but I'll trap them."

Mary looked at him pleadingly. "Oh, don't go back to them," she said. "Stay. They'll discover you if you rejoin them."

"No, Mary, I must—it's for your sake. I'm learning things about this gang, and the real chief behind their operations, that are important—to save your father, and the ranch."

He looked at her lovingly. Then he noticed Bud and Miquel coming down the lane toward them.

"The boys—they mustn't know about me—make believe you're struggling," he said.

He seized her with mock business, and she struggled. During the struggle he planted a kiss on her lips—tenderly—laughing—and for a moment she ceased to struggle while she returned it. "This won't do, Mary," he laughed under his breath. "Fight me, fight me." She laughed too and resumed her struggle.

Bud and Miquel, running, were coming close.

"I've hurled his beloved to the ground and scalded the fence, Bud and Miquel, coming up, more concerned over Mary than the escaping rustler, bent over her limp body, giving Terence ample opportunity to escape. Mary, pretending unconsciousness, continued to lie still to hold the boys from pursuing him.

When she finally permitted them to "revive" her and escort her back to the house there was no more sign of the "rustler" who had "attacked" her. None of the boys returning from the running gun battle with the fleeing gang had seen him either.

"One thing puzzles me," said Bud, as the boys gathered together and discussed the fight, and those who had been wounded, bathed and bandaged their hurts. "The rustlers' guys help me and tie me up, and run off, then one of 'em cuts the ropes and frees me, and runs off after the rest of 'em. Now what do you make of that?"

CHAPTER XXIV.

HARD KNUCKLES.

Buck and his men, back at their camp early next morning, were counting the cattle they had stolen, and commiserating about the debacle of their raid.

"If some traitor hadn't let those ranch birds loose from the bunkhouse I'd have had the whole herd," growled Buck.

He looked over the men, then snarled: "Where's that road agent—Idaho Bill?"

They counted heads and discovered the new man was missing. At this moment Topaz Taggart rode into camp, and calling Buck said:

"Stella Montrose is coming to meet me. Leave some of the boys here for another little job. Send the rest of them over the border with those cows, pronto."

Buck told him about the disappearance of Idaho Bill. Taggart's eyes glared.

"We must find the double-crosser," he snapped, "before he can expose us. I have a way of dealing with skunks."

Back of the brush at the camp lay Terence, watching and listening intently. With him was Komi, whom he had met on his way. Terence hastily scribbled a note, and handed it to the Indian.

"Take this to Mary Marshall; then wait for her at your hut on Sierra Diablo," he said. "I'll come later."

The Indian mounted his horse and sped off. Terence leaped to his saddle and rode into the camp.

"Look—there he is," shouted one of the men as Terence appeared.

Two of the men jumped him, only to meet his bare knuckles and be knocked cold. As Buck came up shouting: "Well! give him a rope's end," and the other men crowded round, Terence drew a gun.

"Idaho Bill ain't in the habit of takin' rough jokes in the dark," Terence said, calmly but menacingly. "Maybe you kin shed some light."

"The man I used," said Terence, "is missing," Buck snarled accusingly. "Why?"

"I've been savin' your necks by throwin' them ranch punchers off your trail, that's what I been doin'," Terence answered derisively.

"You mean you double-crossed us on the job?" Buck asked.

Terence leaped from his horse and grabbed Buck by the throat, cried, "You lie! I got good eyes—an' they're lookin' at the guilty snake now."

Buck answered with a staggering blow to Terence's jaw. Terence retaliated in a flash, and the two men closed in fierce combat. Two of the men made to interfere, but Taggart stopped them.

"Let 'em fight it out themselves," he said.

They did. For half an hour, Terence held the offensive almost throughout. They slugged and punched each other mercilessly. Each hit the ground time after time. Buck more often than Terence. But both were game fighters, gluttons for punishment, always coming back for more. Until finally in one of his rushes, Terence plunged at Buck, hitting like a battering ram, registering iron blow after iron blow, till Buck fell crumpled upon the ground, cut, bleeding, battered, and completely done in.

He lay still, and Terence, facing about to the others, well backed up himself, but grimly game for more, shouted:

"Any of you hombres got funny ideas about me?"

None responded.

Then from now on Idaho Bill's running the gang," Terence yelled.

They exchanged looks of approval at this announcement, and Taggart stepped forward and looked him over with calculating half-suspicious eyes.

After a moment Taggart said:

"Guess the right man won—you'll do for the job," and offered his hand.

CHAPTER XXV.

SEIGE.

At the Bar M that morning they were making plans for protection against further attacks, when Komi rode in and delivered the note from Terence to Mary. Excitedly, she read it aloud, to Stella and Bud:

"I've found the sheriff at Pico he can trap rustlers with stolen steers at Coyote Pass near Mexico line. You ride to Komi's hut quick and await me there. I've found my wolf. If we can locate Laqui gold your troubles will be ended—Idaho."

"Who's blazes is Idaho?" asked Bud.

Mary was on the point of revealing that it was Terence; then she remembered he asked that no one be told, and simply replied:

"A friend we can rely upon." She went on:

"The phone wires were cut last night—how shall we get word to the sheriff? Is the airplane in shape for use?"

Bud scratched his head, and said, "Maybe a little risky, but—"

"I'll go with you, Bud," Stella broke in. "If it's got wings we'll make it fly as we used to in the old flying circus days."

He hesitated a moment and finally agreed.

"Miquel and Komi can go with me," said Mary, "and the other boys will stand guard on the ranch until a posse comes."

Bud ran out, instructed the other boys, and got the plane ready. Miquel came with horses for himself and Mary. The plane flew off with Stella and Bud, and Mary and Miquel mounted and followed Komi to keep the rendezvous with Idaho.

Half an hour later, with the stolen cattle on the way to the border, in charge of several of the rustlers in command of Terence, alias Idaho Bill, Taggart and several others awaited Stella at their secret rendezvous. Hearing a noise in the sky, they saw the plane hovering up above them.

"What in the hell does this mean?" growled Taggart, watching intently.

Up there in the sky, Stella, sitting behind Bud, had been gazing down over the sink of the cockpit for some time. Finally, seeing what she wanted down on the ground, she deliberately jammed one of the steering wires which passed through her compartment.

Bud felt the flying machine leave his control. He grabbed desperately at the levers, then cried:

"The steering controls have jammed."

"If we fall with the machine it may cost our lives," Stella replied. "There's only one parachute, but one of us must reach the sheriff. I'll jump it." And she began to unfold the parachute.

Bud protested, but Stella ignored his pleas. He could not leave his place, trying to pilot the plane in the face of death. Before he could realize it, Stella leaped from the plane with the parachute, just as she had in the old circus days as a stunt.

The plane kept on. Bud could not regain control. He sought a safe spot to make an emergency landing. But there was none in sight, and the plane kept dropping—dropping—

Taggart and his men saw the daring leap from the plane, watched the parachute unfold, and rushed to the spot where it seemed likely to land.

Down through space Stella came falling, and finally landed, safely. She quickly disengaged herself from the parachute, and bolted toward Taggart and his men. As Taggart came up he lifted her onto his saddle, faced about and rode back whence he had come.

The crippled plane fell into a clump of trees, a few minutes later. Bud emerged from the wreckage, miraculously unhurt. Looking about, he saw the parachute lying on the ground, not far off, and started toward it.

While he was staring at it, he became aware of horses approaching. It was Mary, Miquel and Komi. They pulled up in surprise as he ran to greet them.

"The plane wrecked," he said. "But Stella dropped with the parachute before the fall. She must have gone to the sheriff."

"Then come with us, Bud—there is no time to lose," cried Mary.

Bud leaped up behind Miquel, and they were off.

"You chose a good way to come," leaped Taggart to Stella, as they rode into the camp.

"Well, I was in a hurry," she replied. "Wait till you hear what I've got to tell you."

She recounted to him what had transpired at the ranch, how by flying to him she had prevented word reaching the sheriff, and about the note from Idaho Bill, concluding:

"And the Marshall girl's on her way to the hut of this Indian, Komi, at Sierra Diablo, to meet this Idaho fellow, for some treasure hunt."

"Hmmm, this is serious," growled Taggart, fondling his topaz watch chain, as he realized the real reason for all his plotting was endangered.

"We must act at once."

"Mighta known he was a double-crosser, that Idaho," put in Bud.

As Taggart began making plans with Stella, one of his men broke in upon them.

"Just saw that Marshall girl and a couple of fellows riding like fury down the road there," he said. "They stopped and picked-up the guy who fell in the plane, then beat it off."

"Chase at once," shouted Taggart. "Seize them all."

Buck and the other rustlers mounted hastily, and led by the man who had seen Mary's party, dashed off on the chase.

Down in Coyote Pass, Terence, still disguised as Idaho Bill, was supervising another group of the rustlers driving the stolen cattle through the pass. They had run only a few through, when after looking at his watch, he called out:

"Boys, keep these steers in the pass until I return from—the boss."

The men nodded, and Terence wheeled his horse and spurred off.

Canada's Northern Outposts.

The Canadian government steamer "Arctic" has just returned from her annual northern cruise, reaching Quebec and docking without any fuss or feathers. This is in accordance with the most critical Canadian way of doing things. The "Arctic" has been making the trip to the north country for a number of years, and police posts have been established on Ellesmere Island, at Kane Basin, 2,300 miles due north of Ottawa. At Craig Harbor, on the southern end of Ellesmere Island, another police post is established and buildings have been erected.

Canada has an enormous area in the islands to the north of the mainland. A glance at the map of this portion of the country will satisfy the most critical Canadian as to the natural resources in that portion of the country, and while to-day they cannot be said to be of great commercial value, one never knows what a few years will bring forth, and it may be that these natural resources, in the form of minerals, will some day attract capital and industry. On Bylot Island, in Baffin Bay, the early explorers obtained coal supplies, and the Hudson's Bay Company at present uses coal from these deposits for some of its posts.

The Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Department of the Interior has a good map of the northern territory that is very interesting to adult students of Canada and her resources.

King Tut's Beauty Secrets

Beauty secrets have been found in some strange circumstances and strange places, but no cosmetic can have a more romantic history than one which may in a few months' time be placed at the disposal of the young ladies of to-day.

It was recently stated by Mr. Carter that among the objects found in the tomb of Tutankhamun was a cosmetic vase. The cosmetic contained was still plastic and fragrant, and it was hoped that it would be reproduced.

Mr. Carter expressed his confidence that this 3,000-year-old beauty secret would be useful to the ladies of present generation.

A DELICATE POSITION

Wedding presents are frequently distinguished for their usefulness and gift-making at any time is always attended with some danger, but there is a contractor near Albany who realizes that the most generous intentions are likely to turn out disastrously. The Albany Journal tells how it came about:

A faithful Irish employee announced his desire to take a month's vacation in order to visit his brother in the West. He had worked so well and steadily that his employer not only granted the request, but made him a present of a new valise. The night before Tim was to leave he received the gift, accompanied by a few appreciative words.

Tim stared at the valise for a minute and then asked: "What am I to do with that?"

"Why put your clothes in it when you go away, of course," answered the contractor.

"Put a clothes in it, s' it?" said Tim, "an' phwat will Oi wear if Oi put me clothes in thot?"

MILDMAY EVANGELICAL CHURCH CELEBRATES JUBILEE

The completion of fifty years of Christian service by the Mildmay Evangelical Church, was appropriately marked by the congregation this week. On Sunday morning, Rev. M. L. Wing, the presiding elder, preached an eloquent sermon, and in the evening, Rev. E. D. Becker, of Hanover, a former and well-beloved pastor took charge of the service. Both preachers commented upon the great work that had been done by the local church in character building in this community.

On Thanksgiving morning Rev. F. Meyer of Elmwood, also a former pastor, preached a fine sermon appropriate to the occasion, and in the evening, Mr. Nicholas Schwalm, one of the oldest and most faithful members of the local church, presented the following very interesting history, covering the activities of the church during the past fifty years. Mr. Schwalm has the sincere thanks and appreciation of the congregation for his compilation of this historical data.

Dear Friends: You know that we are in these days celebrating the 50th anniversary of the founding of our congregation and also of the erection of our church.

We are now going to review and present to us these fifty years that have gone by.

This presentation shall bring to our minds some or all the important events that have taken place in this congregation during the fifty years.

In order to get a right beginning it is necessary to go back a little further than the first year and we will begin with the year 1873.

At this time some members of our church had located here. They had come here to stay, to do business, to work, and as we say, to make a living.

But they wanted to do more than that. They also wanted to worship God. Not only in their homes separate and privately, but also united and publicly.

For this purpose, they went together and formed a prayer meeting class with Wm. Schneider as their leader. The names of these members can be seen on card No. 1. They also started a Sunday School of which our S. S. now is a continuation. It never froze up in the winter and dried up in the summer.

Not long after this was done they sent the Leader to the Quarterly Conference Board of the Carrick circuit with the request that their pastor should come and preach to them occasionally, and a little later it was arranged that Rev. P. Alles, pastor of that circuit, should come and preach to this class in the afternoon of every second Sunday.

For this, and for the Sunday School they rented the Methodist Church. In the spring of 1874, Rev. G. M. Graff became the successor to Rev. Alles and continued to preach for this small Mildmay class.

During the summer more members came here and in the fall they desired to become a congregation and build a church.

On the 11th day of December in this same year of 1874 they held a meeting at which Rev. Joseph Umbach, at that time P.E. of this district, presided, and Rev. G. M. Graff acted as secretary. Eleven other members were present, whose names can be seen on card No. 2. Now at this meeting and upon a motion of J. H. Thomas, and seconded by Chris Eckel, this our congregation was established and received its name. Yes, on the 11th day of Dec., 1874, it came into existence, and Rev. G. M. Graff was the first preacher. At his meeting three trustees were appointed, whose names can be seen on the card which presents the 3 committee.

And it was also resolved that a subscription list should be prepared to raise money to buy lots for a church site, and the trustees and the preacher were authorized to buy the same, subject to the approval of the congregation.

Now, whereas the congregation was established, so near the end of the year 1874 we call 1875 its first year and will proceed to its presentation and to the history thereof.

In the spring of this year, Rev. G. M. Graff was taken from the Carrick circuit and Rev. S. Krupp was sent to be his successor.

Along this time the congregation held a special meeting in which steps were taken to proceed with the building of the church. A Building Committee was appointed, consisting of the trustees and two other members. Their names are on Card No. 3.

In an astonishing short time all preparations to build were made and Jacob Hesch, at that time one of our Catholic neighbors, was engaged to do the mason work. In the meantime, Geo. Schwalm, my brother, had taken the contract of the carpenter work, and he and I started at this work as soon as the foundation was ready. A few more hands were employed and the work went rapidly ahead. When it was ready for lathing and plastering, Schmidt Bros. of Balaklava went at it and did their work, and Peter Dierlamm, a brother of Rev. H. Dierlamm, did the painting.

While the carpenters were working at the tower, one man fell from a height of about 20 ft., but was not seriously hurt.

One day when Rev. Joseph Umbach came along he noticed the somewhat peculiar ornamental work on the transom in the outside door frame he said "Nun da sollen Pflie geschossen werden gerade aufs heartis Das ist schen." Meaning "Here shall arrows be shot right upon the heart. That's fine."

You can see the heart and arrow if you look up as you go out.

All the work of the church was completed about the end of the year and it was dedicated in the month of January in the year of 1876, which will now be presented.

An important occurrence in this year was the dedication of this church, at which Bishop Yeakel, a very tall man, officiated. The singing was led by a man who was a great singer, not by name, not the father of our present pastor. No, his name was J. H. Thomas, and he was a good singer. Some other good singers were here too. Mrs. Wm. Helwig was one of them, and if you will pardon me, I will say that Nich. Schwalm was also there, and he was a bass singer. There was to some extent a choir.

No particulars regarding the number of preachers that were present, and so forth, are available, but we suppose that when this church was dedicated to the Lord, He was near, and the people had a blessed time.

Soon after this a great revival took place at which about 50 people were converted from the power of Satan to God. Yes, it was a remarkable revival.

We will now turn to the years 1877 and 1878.

Up to this time this congregation belonged to the Carrick circuit. In spring of 1877, the conference put the congregations of Walkerton and Mildmay together and called it the Walkerton Mission, and J. A. Schmidt was its first pastor, and he was here until conference in the year of 1879.

During this term J. Bechtel was recommended for the ministry.

During this term something took place which sounds like an allegory. A man who at one time had been very happy, began to associate with people that were not of the best and he got like them. A little later he went with some that were worse and he himself got worse also. And finally he got so that he could mock and scorn at that which was good and sacred and in this way he did much that was wrong, and he became liable to severe punishment and got in a sad condition. He came in this church that was built 50 years ago, and among the congregation that was established on the 11th day of Dec. in the year 1874. He saw that he had done so much that was wrong. It troubled him. He became very sorry for it, and confessed it. Upon this he was informed that one had been punished for him, and in his place, and for all his wrong doing. This he believed and he got happy again. This is, however, only one of the many instances like that that have taken place.

We will now turn to 1880. In this year Rev. S. Weber, an aged man was the pastor, and was assisted by J. Bechtel and Chas. Eby, two local preachers. The annual conference was held here in this year for the first time. Whereas our membership was now 115 and Walkerton only 32 the name of the mission was changed and called Mildmay Mission.

We will now turn to 1881 in which Rev. Wm. Schwantes was the pastor. Along this time there were four cottage prayer meeting classes, two in Mildmay, one in Balaklava and also a Young People's Class. All held their regular meetings and they were well attended. They were a blessing to the members, especially to new converts.

Years 1882-83. During these years, the Presbyterians held their services in our church until they had built their own. Rev. G. Herlan was our pastor.

Years 1884-85-86. During these years, Rev. S. Krupp, who had the remarkable revival just 10 years previous was again our pastor. In 1886 the third house to the south was bought for a parsonage and was used as such for a number of years.

1887. This was an average year. Rev. D. Dippel, an elderly man, was the pastor. He is remembered as one that held class meetings and asked every member how he was getting on spiritually.

1888-89-90. Rev. Geo. Brown was the pastor. During his term, especially in 1888, good improvements were made. The gallery which was much needed for S. S. room, was built and the Church was repainted.

Referring to another thing, you know that sometimes something is done in a congregation that you hear from a long time. Sometimes sounds good and sometimes not. In this year the congregation did something from which we have heard ever since, and still hear from it. Perhaps some one knows about it and can tell what it was.

During this term there was also a great revival and in 1890 the conference again was held here, it being the second time.

1891-92. A. Y. Haist, pastor. These two years might be called average years. In the year 1892 the Mission was changed to a station.

ADAMS

Variations—Adam, Adamson, MacAdie, MacKeggie, Ayson, Addison, Atkins, Atkinson, Adkins, Adkinson, Adie, Edie, MacEsson.

Racial Origin—English and Scottish. Source—A given name. The family name of Adams is, of course, a shortened form of Adamson, or "Adam's son."

This surname, together with the many variations which have been formed from the medieval diminutives of the given name, is unusually widespread, because the given name itself was far more common in the Middle Ages than it is to-day. The medieval English were a sturdy, simple folk, comparatively few of whom could read, and so they lacked the modern facilities to search through the Scriptures for names for their children that the modern ability to read, coupled with the development of printing, would have given them. There was little incentive to learn to read, since books could be produced only by handwriting and were excessively expensive. Hence they got their knowledge of the Scriptures by word of mouth, and naturally the name which stuck in their memories were those connected with the most dramatic passages. Naturally the story of the creation was among the most prominent, which explains why the name of Eve as well as Adam was so popular.

"Adcock" was a diminutive of the given name. It became a family name, as "Adcockson," and was finally shortened again to Adcock. "Ad" and "Adkin" or "Atkin" were also forms of the given name, giving rise to Addison, Adkins, Adkinson, Atkins and Atkinson.

The Scottish or Celtic form of the given name was "Adham." A sept of the Clan Gordon bears this name, tracing it to Adam de Gordon, Anglo-Norman founder of the clan in the twelfth century.

MacAdam is a sept name in the Clan MacGregor. The Clan Aid, or MacAdie, is a branch of Fergusons. Adamson, Ayson, Esson and MacKeggie, all of which are said to be derived from the given name of Adam, are septs of the Clan Mackintosh.

means the stored wisdom of experience. What youth anticipates age remembers. Both of them "have" it and both are good. Ninety-nine years means richness of life lived and still possessed. Twenty means richness of life yet to be gained. Money is, at best, a minor tool of either.

The Optimist.

It was the second day that the shipwrecked crew had been adrift in the open boat, and the hearts of some were beginning to sink. There was one, however, who refused to be despondent. He sang nearly all the time, and tried to crack jokes with the chief mate. Suddenly he jumped up. "What's that?" he shouted, excitedly, pointing into the distance. "Isn't that land over there?" The mate's gaze followed the pointing finger hopefully, but the light died out of his eyes as he said, dejectedly, "No, that's not land. It's only the horizon."

"Well, hang it," said the optimist, bending to his oar, "that's better than nothing. Let's pull!"

INVESTMENTS

By Edgar A. Guest

I have some extra dollars which were better saved than spent And so I'll buy a gilt-edged bond to earn me 4 per cent.; I'll call that an investment, 'tis a term all bankers use, But one which money-minded men so frequently abuse, Not all investments pay in gold; some pay in peace of mind And some in happy memories of days when we were kind.

Life gives us countless dividends in payment for our deeds, The marigolds are coupons which we cut from planted seeds, The good will of our neighbors is a joy which we collect From having neighbored with them in a way they could respect, Our children are investments, too, in which our worth shall show, For seldom 'tis by luck or chance good men and women grow.

We are investors, one and all, by each a choice is made; Some risk their lives in art and some invest them in a trade, And who shall give his best to life shall reap his dividends In peace of mind and happiness, the love and trust of friends; But who invests in selfishness, in cunning or in shame, Shall find, however filled his purse, he's played a losing game.

Blatant poverty of spirit is a failure that is worse Than the error of wrong judgment which brings poverty to purse, For money may be squandered and a stock not worth its cost, But a good name lives forever and a kind deed's never lost, So I'd invest my hands and brain in all life's finer things And seek the compensation which that sort of venture brings.

White Wings.

Little white butterfly, floating so high Over the roofs so brown, What do you here in the heavy air Of this murky, mercantile town?

Here is no loveliness, here are no sweets, Blossoms nor perfume nor dew, To tempt the wing of a delicate thing, A beautiful being like you.

Say, were you sent by the Infinite Love, Sent from the starry height, To a homesick heart in the clamorous mart, With a message of love and light?

"Dim and brief are the ways of grief, But the blue is a boundless vast; The souls white wings are tireless things, And soon are the shadows past."

—Lillian Leveridge.

A WOMAN'S WORK IS NEVER DONE

No Wonder Health Gives Out and She Becomes Weak and Despondent.

It is literally true concerning woman in the home that her work is never done. She starts with housework when she rises in the morning and is kept busy up to the time she retires at night. The work must be done whether she is feeling well or not. It is no wonder that she often breaks down under the strain. She becomes breathless at slight exertion, feels exhausted if she walks up stairs. Headaches and dizzy spells become frequent, and life seems a burden. Much of this trouble is due to the fact that her blood has become thin and watery, and to regain her good health she must take a reliable blood-enriching tonic such as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The great value of this tonic medicine is shown by the statement of Mrs. Mary Nolan, Lindlaw, Sask., who says:—"When I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was a physical wreck. It was with great difficulty that I could do light housework. I suffered from headaches, my heart would beat violently at the least exertion, and I always felt tired and depressed. I did not sleep well at night, and I had no appetite—my limbs would swell as in dropsy. It was at this stage that a neighbor advised me to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had used the pills for some weeks before I began to feel their benefit, and thus encouraged I continued taking them for several months, when I was again as strong and well as ever I had been. I have no hesitation in saying that these pills are a remarkable blood builder and strength renewer and I shall ever be grateful for what they did for me."

You can get these pills from your druggist, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

You do not have to coax and threaten to get the little ones to take Baby's Own Tablets. The ease with which they are given, as compared with liquid medicines, will appeal to every mother. None is spilled or wasted; you know just how big a dose has reached the little stomach. As a remedy for the ills of childhood arising from derangements of the stomach and bowels they are most satisfactory. Mrs. Rose Voyer, Willimantic, Conn., says:—"I used Baby's Own Tablets in the Canadian Northwest and found them a wonderful medicine for children's troubles, especially indigestion and constipation. I have also given them to my children for simple fever and the restlessness accompanying teething and they always gave relief. I can recommend Baby's Own Tablets to all mothers."

"Seen you a good deal with a soldier lately. But that's private I suppose?" "Private your aunt! He's a lieutenant, I'd have you to know!"

Dodging the Census.

It is no joke being a census official in Kenya Colony, where, according to recent reports, the natives have objected to the enumeration of the population because they think that it is unlucky to count themselves or their wives.

In other countries the counting of heads has sometimes presented difficulties. The first Chinese census showed a total population of 28,000,000. It was taken to serve as a basis for the imposition of a poll-tax. Some years later another census was taken, the object this time being to organize the provision of relief in a period of famine. The population had grown to 105,000,000.

Probably the most remarkable census ever taken was that the results of which are contained in Domesday Book. It gives a complete and living picture of the England of that day, and has been described by one authority as unique. The information it contained, however, was not always given willingly.

Infinite trouble is taken in the preparation of the Indian census, but one story, told by a British administrator, shows that there also the way of the census-maker is hard. On one occasion he had to point out to a native enumerator some discrepancy in his figures. "But surely," protested the enumerator, "your honor can supply noughts at discretion?"

The Woman in the Middle of the Street.

There is an amusing story of the early days of the Russian Revolution, After the Czar had abdicated, a stout old woman was seen leisurely walking down the middle of one of the busiest streets in Petrograd, at no small peril to herself and to the great confusion of traffic. A policeman pointed out to her that there was a pavement for pedestrians, and that the streets were for wagons and automobiles. But she was not to be convinced. "I'm going to walk just where I like," she said; "we've got liberty now."

You cannot help having some sympathy with that old dame. She didn't understand what liberty was, but she had had little chance of learning in that land of tyranny. Liberty was a new thing to her, like a new toy. She didn't know how to use it, but she wanted to see what it felt like. She had got liberty, and surely she could walk where she pleased. She didn't see that, if everybody walked or drove just where he pleased, heedless of any body's inconvenience or danger, the result would be chaos. To get along at all there must be rules of the road that limit our right to do as we like.

The woman had not thought it out. The golden age had come, and she wanted to feel its reality, to show that she was unmistakably free.

When we assert our right to "do as we like," to "live our own life," we are as thoughtless as this old dame in the streets of Petrograd. Freedom is not a question of doing as we like; it is rather a question of doing as we ought. Liberty is a responsibility before it is a right. Freedom implies voluntary obedience to the moral law.

Band Music.

The popularity of the brass band as a necessary part of a big—or a small—industrial settlement is evident in the fact that there are thousands of such bands in Great Britain and America. And the band contests of both countries are famous. By now, with the calibre of the brass instruments so much improved by invention their powers are greatly expanded and all classes of music are possible to them. The advance both in the standard of music in use by bandmen and in their performance of it, is one of the most striking features of musical progress.

Keep Minard's Liniment handy. Looked Bad.

A much respected citizen had left three umbrellas to be repaired. Later in the day he had luncheon in a restaurant and, as he was departing, absent-mindedly took an umbrella from a hook next to his hat.

"That's mine," said a woman at the next table. He apologized and went out. When he was going home that evening in a street car with his three repaired umbrellas the woman he had seen in the restaurant got in. Glancing at him and at his umbrellas, she remarked pleasantly: "I see you had a good day."

Charm is something that makes the snub nose of one woman her most attractive feature, while on another woman, lacking charm, it is a tragedy.—Miss Evelyn Laye.

NERVOUS BREAK-DOWN

Pains in Back and Legs Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ford, Ontario.—"I had a nervous break-down, as it is called, with severe pains in my back and legs, and with fainting spells which left me very weak. I was nervous and could not sleep nor eat as I should and spent much time in bed. I was in this state, more or less, for over two years before Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me by my neighbor. Before I had taken five doses I was sitting up in bed, and when the first bottle was taken I was out of bed and able to walk around the house. During my sickness I had been obliged to get some one to look after my home for me, but thanks to the Vegetable Compound I am now able to look after it myself. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine in turn with the Vegetable Compound, and I certainly recommend these medicines to any one who is not enjoying good health. I am quite willing for you to use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. J. STRECHER, 180 Jos. Canisio Avenue, Ford, Ontario.

Nervousness, irritability, painful times, run-down feelings and weakness are symptoms to be noted. Women suffering from these troubles, which they so often have, should give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. All druggists sell this medicine.

POTATOES NEA TOP OF GROUND ARE FROZEN

Reports that continue to come in from the country districts emphasize the tremendous loss that is sure to follow the unprecedented cold weather of a week ago, when the ground was frozen so hard as to bear the weight of loaded wagons, and rendering plowing impracticable.

Not alone the damage to the apple crop, but great loss will, it is said ensue in the potato output. All these close to the top of the ground are frozen, and where this is not the case, extensive rot is reported. Some farmers have decided not to take them up on this account. Practically all the mangolds are pulled and it is not thought likely that the turnips, few if any, of which are harvested will be injured. Farmers give little credence to the statement issued by the Department of Agriculture that the apple crop is not seriously affected by the frost, as the keeping quality is greatly impaired in any event, ranking only as "wind-falls".
