of the imperial house has been bred a sailor; also there has sprung up a desire for foreign commerce and a colonial policy.

It is this colonial policy which is now occupying the German mind to the almost entire exclusion of other subjects. Recent events in the Southern Pacific and in Gentral Africa where Germans have been concerned have in-atigated this fervid interest in colonial affairs. Prince Bismarck on Saturday addressed the German parliament in support of the African man expedition to the Dark Continent for the conquest and flatter German jingoism.

Bismarck's speech, as found in our cable de-spatches, is remarkable for two things: (1) his declaration that every move he is making in the Pacific and in Africa is in thorough accord with England; and (2) that heretofore he has not been a elf puts it in a rather exaggerate figure: 'If the locomotive of empire has struck out a track for itself, I will not be the one to throw stones in its way."

The Chancellor's speech overflows with regard for England and English colonial policy, with which he is, he says, in thorough accord. He speaks of England as German's historical ally of the past one hundred and fifty years, and throughout his whole deliverance there is a pronounced effort to show what a thorough friend he is of England. Even above and reyond his "colonial policy" is this declaration of Bis-marck's of regard for England. Some may say it is for sinister purposes, but after due allow German life, the undisputed fact remains tha origin, race, language and religion, would in may, however, be that Bismarck was moved to make this pro-English speech in view of a Boulanger triumph in the French elections of yesterday, and which in Germany would be Another View of Bismarck's Policy-Sam Islands has been brewing for some time back But now, to the surprise of all but the excep-tionally well-informed few, it bursts out into what looks like the beginnings of war between great civilized Powers. Before, it has appeared as it the conflicting claims of certain savage chiefs were mainly what was at issue; but nov we understand that something graver is what's the matter. Shall Germany be allowed to make herself dictator and controller, to the exclusion of Great Britain and the United States, over a group of islands occupying an important maritime position in the South Pacific, which promises soon to develop into an important commercial position too? That "big bluffer," Bismarck—as he is fitly called would bestride this narrow world like a Colossus; and seems, like Shakespeare's Sir Oracle, to think that when he opes his mouth no dog must bark. So far British and Americans have shown every disposition to work together in opposi tion to German offensiveness and browbeating and it is a thousand pities that just now there should be no British Minister at Washington, and no American Minister at London. It is so far satisfactory, however, that Premier Salisbury had a conference with Mr. Phelps just before the latter left London, and that the impression is rather a favorable one from what little has been revealed of what was said or done on the occasion. There has been enough "unpleasantness" between Britain and America already, and it has to be remembered that Canada's old fishery trouble with Brother Jonathan is still pending. But, however the two Governments are getting along with each other, it seems evident Ethat the British and the American peoples respectively are well disposed to work together in

There is such a plentiful lack of information amongst us concerning the Samoan Islanders, and the trouble in which they now find themselves, that we avail ourselves pretty freely of what The New York Tribune calls an able and exhaustive review of the Samoan question by Commissioner Bates, who visited the Islands in 1886 on behalf of Mr. Bayard. Mr. Bates is a lawyer of Wilmington, in Delaware, stands high at the bar, is a staunch Democrat and also an intimate friend of Mr. Secretary Bayard. Now for some extracts, which may help people here to a better understanding of what is now one of the stirring questions of the

The Samoan group was opened to navigation by the Wilkes expedition. We (the Americans) have been represented by consular agents there since about 1850. The people are sturdy, warlike, remarkably intelligent, enterprising, eloquent, content and honest. They are copper hued. The men are handsome and the women often very beautiful. Their social and political system is a peculiar mixture founded partly on popular rights and partly on hereditary authority. There are a multitude of chiefs, the grades between them being, however, clearly defined and strongly marked. Great respect is paid to rank. The two chief families in the group are the Malietoss and the Tupuas. Tradition says the Tupuas are a younger branch of the Malietoss, as the Orleans family of France is the younger branch of the ancient Bourbon dynasty. The greatest Malietos of all hived many years ago, and his memory is an inspiration to the people. He led them in a long series of brilliant wars, ending in the subjugation of their ancient enemies, the Tongas. Malietoa has for the Samoans the same significance that the word Cæsar had for the Romans. As each Roman Empefor, whether, Augustus, Nero, or what, was a Cæsar, so each head of the family founded by the conqueror Savea is called Malietoa.

Moli, the father of the Malietoa whom the Government kidusaped, died nearly thirty years ago. His son's name is Laupena, the present rights avereign.

Moli died, his half-brother, Talavou, contested the throne with Laupeps, and a long series of wars ensued, which the Tupuan chiefs did their utmost to foment in the hope of establishing their family in power. At this time the foreign influence was chiefly exercised by missionaries, who supported the young man Laupepa. Their intervention resulted in a compromise, by which the uncle became King and the nephew Vice-King with the right of succession. To this arrangement the Tupuans gave an unwilling consent.

more recently in East Africa:

And now the trouble begins. Germany and England had acquired large interests in the group: the German interest being through a single trading company. The German Commercial and Plantation Company. This is a powerful corporation doing business in many of the South Pacific groups, with its head-quarters at the Samoan port of Apis. Right here let me say that the German interest in these islands is really the interest of this one company. The Germans talk loudly about their many residents there engaged in commerce, but all their people are employed in this company. I am not prepared to charge it, for I cannot prove it, but I am at the same time morally certain that high officials in Berlin hold compromising relations with this South Pacific corporation. Upon no other theory is Prince Bismarck's conduct in giving us assurances of one purport and in tolerating the action of his agents in Samoa to just the opposite effect explicable.

Mr. Bruce Harman was afterwards elected Hon. Secretary.

The clubs then divided and went to separate apartments to elect a Managing Committee of ten—five from each club. At the meeting of the Toronto, C. A. B. Brown took the chair and H. Parsons was appointed Sacretary.
