Messrs. C. C. Richards & Co. GENTLEMEN, - I fell from the bridge leading from a platform to a loaded car while asing from a platform to a loaded car while assisting my men in unloading a load of grain.
The bridge went down as well as the load on ing hens must be kept busy. Make them work for every mouthful. It makes the hens so fat that the shells are scarcely thicker than tissue paper, and a portion would be broken in marketing. Free range, plenty of shade and loose soil, good feed and clear water are the essentials n the growth of young chicks. Such treatment makes large, early matured and vigorous cockerels and causes pullets to begin laying at 41 months.

Keep the hen house as clean as possible, and especially in May, and in September wash it with boiling water, so that the floor may be thoroughly scalded. Also during May and September rub the feathers of the fowls thoroughly with sulphur. For largest yields of eggs keep in moderate confinement, undisturbed by dogs, boys, etc., and add to the above ration lean meat, cut bone, grit, charcoal, crushed oyster shells, plenty of green feed, a little cayenne pepper, poiled beets and all table scraps that are not greasy or tainted.

When the fowls have a range and can eat grass, insects, seeds, etc., in abundance, they will fill their crops two or three times during the day, and the greatest mistake that can be made is to give them feed at the parnyard. No hen will lack for food if she is on a grass plot, and no hen will produce many eggs if she is heavily fed on grain in summer. When food is plentiful on the range there should be no cost to the farmer.

All domestic animals, even fowls, respond to kindly treatment. Give a horse a piece of apple or sugar a few times and he will expect it and whinny for it. Watch your swine while they feed and they will thrive. Feed a hen a few times out of your pocket with bits of crusts and she will watch you and expect it and even take it out of your

A writer in the Scientific American says has cleared his premises of vermin by making whitewash yellow with copperas and covering the stones and rafters in the rat might go, he put the copperas, and scat-tered it in the corners of the floor. Sulphur to Children.

The free use of sulphur the moment one of the children has a cold prevents diphtheria. I never heard of a case-of diphtheria where the children were made to eat sulphur every time they had a cold. A lump as big as a pea every night when they go to bed is a good plan if they are not as well as you think they ought to be. It won't hurt them, and it may save lots of trouble and suffering.

-The most life giving and digestible food that can be given to one just recovering from an illness is chopped beef. Take a pound of the finest round of raw beef, cut off all the fat, slice two onions, pepper and salt. Chop the onions and meat together, turning them over and over, until both are reduced to a pulp. Spread on slices of rye bread, and eat as Sandwiches. There is nothing which quiets the nerves without bad results, like onions. The use of them induces sleep, and much strength is obtained from them. This is the ideal food for convalescents, or for any one who is in a weak state of health.
