POLITICAL ACTION

Trades Congress Recommend Locals to Take a More Active Part in Municipal Politics and Perfect Organization.

Canadian labor's greatest spokesman and advocate—the Trades and Labor Congress—has closed its annual session. It was the most successful, and kept pace with the growth of the movement in Canada.

Legislatively the Congress speaks for organized labor, and the delegates attending will compare favorably with any legislative body in this country in the having ability and intelligence.

Go forward in the watershed, and the proceedings will show that the labor movement is going forward with a steady grip of problems as they present them for solution.

The temperance sentiment is growing rapidly, as was evidenced by the discussion of it upon the floor of the Congress.

The independent political action movement is broadening out and getting stronger every day. The cause of this growth is not hard to seek. The long list of reverses and broken promises from the governments made some of the delegates open their eyes and look for the remedy.

The Montreal boys were almost too hospitable, and among the best things of their hospitality was the trip by trolley to Lachine and down the rapids by boat. The weather being none too warm, after the rapids were passed the delegates proceeded to exercise themselves by elevating the champagne in discussion on the boat. They were no respecter of persons, because from the chairman of Montreal's Reception Committee and Fraternal Delegate Richards as down the list all those who had a word to say got their "bumps."

Besides this trip, the delegates were treated to a splendid "banquet" party, at which several presentations were made, in the shape of a gold-headed cane to "Fraternal" Delegate Richards and a "pinny" to Mr. John F. Tabin, general president of the Boot and Shoe Workers' International Union.

Fraternal Delegate Richards made himself quite solid with the boys, and out of the generosity of their hearts they actually tore him away from the Montreal girls, otherwise he would likely have settled down peacefully with the "Gals," and the United States would have known him no more.

A thoroughly good time was given the delegates when not in session, and toward the end of the week complaints were heard of that tired feeling.

The Reception Committee of the Montreal Trades and Labor Council were certainly assiduous in their attentions to the wants of the delegates, while a number of other took it upon themselves to pilot little parties about the "vital spots" and "lonesome places," like the mountain and cemetery.

Some of the principal resolutions introduced at the Congress were:

One asking that saloons close on Labor Day in Quebec.

Asking the Quebec Government to pay the same rate of wages to laborers as paid in Montreal.

Asking for a law to compel the taking off of old and dirty before putting new paper on the walls.

Favoring the placing of labor candidates in every constituency.

The following one, styled the Socialist resolution: "Whereas the working class are underpaid as producers, and overcharged as consumers, be it resolved that this Congress place itself on record as being of the opinion that the only way for the working class to obtain the full benefit of their labor is the substitution of the co-operative for the competitive system of industry by the common ownership by the people of the means of production and distribution."

Resolutions were passed favoring the common ownership of the means of distribution and communication.

The Congress raised the per capita tax 20 per cent.

The Manufacturers expressed a willingness, in a letter, to meet with a committee from the Congress, but, whether intentionally or not, failed to appoint a committee to carry out their expressed intentions. Upon the Congress Committee asking for a reply to meet them they received a date that Mr. Young, the secretary, would meet them at any place, Toronto preferred.

The President's address was recommended by the committee in which it was referred, and they at the same time brought in a recommendation that the Congress strongly condemn the man elected on the labor ticket who joins hands with either of the parties in the House.

The same committee refused to concur in the British Columbia Executive's report, which practically recommended joining hands or fasting when it was impossible to elect a straight labor man.

POST CONFESSES LOSS OF MONEY

Maker of Post Mortem Cereal and Grave Nuts Writes a Plaintive Letter to the Papers

Come this fall across the State from the city whose feet are washed by the rising Battle Creek and to whom the same good stream has given its blood name. It is the fall of Orlando Hamilton, Parson Post, famed in the columns of the press, at so much per head as the man who hatched the glibly public out of millions of dollars by selling them Post Mortem Cereal and Grave Nuts.

"We have lost some money," shrieks. To a man who loves money much that his infatuation makes him damn those not in the money-making class, and one whose reason is already unsettled by his frenzied hatred of all who refuse to submit themselves to the absolute mastery of the possessor of wealth, the loss must be a terrible blow, and at once the listener who catches his doleful plaint looks on beyond Battle Creek, a few miles to the westward, and sees looming up with grim significance the Michigan Asylum for the Insane at Kalamazoo.

Furious Post's tale of woe is found in a letter which he has sent to every daily newspaper in the United States in the hope that they would sympathize with him because he had burned his fingers badly by waging war on labor organizations.

Not long ago he sent to all the dailies a much longer letter, in which he gave expression to the vilest charges against unions. He had been such a good advertiser that he thought they would publish his screed free of charge. He was badly fooled. One and all telegraphed him that they would run the letter at the usual advertising contract rates. Most of them would have run it without asking a cent, but every one of them pulled Post's leg, and every one of them gave it a good hard yank. This accounts in some measure for the money loss that is making him grope so much at present.

The latest letter is sent in such a way that "there's nothing in it" for the daily papers, consequently not one of them has printed a line of it. As long as Post continues to be a "mark" he will have to pay for what he gets.

The letter is full in its own way. Battle Creek, Mich., Sept. 3, 1904. "Gentlemen:—When the day comes that you cannot live up to all the complicated rules and demands of some labor union, and the union notifies adherents, under penalty of boycott, to withdraw their patronage and assist in your ruin, it will present an opportunity to consider the value of patrons that have backbone and principle enough, in the time of need, to stand by the publisher.

"During the past three years we have positively and flatly refused to desert certain newspapers that served us faithfully, notwithstanding the demand of labor unions that we help 'put them out of business.'"

"Then came the boycott and all sorts of things which I have not time to detail, but which have cost me a great deal of money, and have done me a great deal of harm."

"I am very gratified to see the cordiality with which the Manufacturers' Association received the letter from the Trades and Labor Council and at once arranged for a conference between delegates from both organizations. It is to be hoped that great good will come from this method of comparing the wants and claims of each party. It is, however, too much to expect that the manufacturers will be ready to make any concessions of the favors and privileges which they enjoy at the present time. The employees are great sticklers for freedom for themselves. They insist in their right to employ labor wherever they can get it to suit themselves, but they have done their utmost for many years to prevent the workers from enjoying the same degree of freedom in the purchase of their goods wherever they can get them at the cheapest rate. It is marvellous how the employees can be so blind or so unjust as to insist that the law shall give them the utmost freedom to buy their labor wherever they can get it the cheapest, but for the workers to enjoy the same right they regard as out of the question. The employers insist in protection for themselves, and competition for the workers."

"Many of the leading papers in the States are trying to bring the good times which they predict will continue for many years to come. They have the queerest idea of what constitutes good times. So long as the banks do not break, so long as Wall Street is all right, so long as the various wealthy combinations can pay big dividends, so long as the rich man fares sumptuously every day and is clothed in fine linen, just so long do they predict good times. They are blind as batskin as to the poverty of hundreds at the gates. To any

NOTES AND NOTELETS

The papers report that the worst distress in Britain. The 20th of the month, and the public mind a great weakness before anything like adequate remedies will be adopted. The distress is not among those who are perpetually idle, but it is among those who do the hardest of hard work when they get a chance. No, the men who do nothing to add to the wealth are still overwhelmed with excessive affluence, and those who do everything to produce the wealth find a small share for themselves.

Under the name of civilization and Christianity, we have still a tremendous amount of redneck barbarity. From a list published some years ago we call a few names with their incomes. The Duke of Beaufort, K.G., P.C., Lord Lond. Monmouth, etc., etc., $1,000,000; the Duke of Devonshire, $1,000,000; the Duke of Devonshire, $1,000,000; the Duke of Devonshire, $1,000,000.

The Duke of Devonshire manages to get along with a fortune of nearly 200,000 acres with a rental close on to a million dollars yearly. This is the size of the County of York, and brings him a rental of nearly half a million dollars yearly. city they can find hardship in the so-called best of times, but in this perpetual calamity of poverty, the slum, the sweat shop, the hovels of the toilers, the existence of the tramp, all these count for nothing in their judgment. When thousands are seeking charity to save their children from starvation, these writers can see the costly banquet, with its overwhelming luxuries, and, of course, have no sign of anything but prosperity. We can always find prosperity if we seek for it; but the man of truth will not ignore the horrors of that life which begins in the bitter fight for a bite to eat, and never escapes from the struggle till it ends in the grave.

What are the signs whereby these parties insure a continuance of prosperity? The vast increase in the internal trade of the country, the extension of the railroads, the vast increase in the clearing house returns. According to these oracles, these are the outward and visible signs of our growing prosperity. Now, you fellow of the hood and the pick, just read these figures running up into the hundreds of millions, and cease your growling. Don't you see the prosperity? Are not these figures big enough, or shall we make them greater? Haven't you seen the locomotive grow and grow till moguls can drop ten fold what the little engines used to draw? Why don't you rejoice at the vast increase in the grain exchange?

These heralds of prosperity forget only one thing. They are silent as centers as to the growing obligation of industry to tolerance. As fast as industry, aided with inventive genius, can increase the output of the factory or the farm, just so fast can the landowner increase his charge for the occupation of the land, or for access to the other natural benefits. As production has increased with loans and bonds, so much more has been claimed by the owners of the lands, the forests and the mines, that labor is always fast close to poverty. Where a man could at one time procure an acre of land with a week's work in New York, today he would have to give the labor of twenty thousand years to procure the same acre. So rapid and so such an extent, has the power of the landowner grown. Prosperity has come as a flood and inventive genius is increasing that prosperity every day; but as long as one part of humanity can say to the rest, "This earth is ours, and you must pay us for the occupation thereof," so long is that prosperity but the agony of Tantalus. This mythical hero had water to the lips, but whenever he tried to drink the water receded, so that he was famishing in the midst of plenty.

The man who insists on calling a spade a spade is not usually the subject of his own conversation.

Made a man has gone to the bad through his efforts to become a good fellow.

Mr. Quarles—Well, I see old Goldman is dead, and leaves upward of three millions. Wouldn't you like to be his widow?

OUR UNPOPULAR SLOGAN. "The products of the labor of the toiler for the capitalist and an equal for the toiler for the toiler."

THE POPULAR SLOGAN TO DAY. "The products of the labor of the toiler for the capitalist and an equal for the toiler for the toiler."

"IN EARTH AS IN HEAVEN" Babylon in all her splendor, And is spreading deeper and wider As the days are passing away.

And he who dwelt among toilers, On whose hearts the kingdom of God lay, Is ever going and better say.

And it may be by His wisdom, That the toilers shall show way: How can we obey the will of Heaven As we will in this world every day!

THINK OF IT, TOILERS! At the beginning of the 20th-century Canada we have had representatives of labor assembled in congress discussing the best policy for Canadian industrial affairs at the same time and in the same place as the representatives of wealth are solving the industrial problems of Canada and the Empire.

IN CHRIST'S DAY. It is one of the things that is hard to explain in Christ's day that he should despise the great power of militarism and pass by the wealthy and the cultured and select the hearts of humble toilers wherein to found His kingdom.

TO THEIR CREDIT. It is much to the toilers' credit that they found time to adopt a resolution recommending arbitration as superior to war in settling national disputes.

LABOR. When the toilers have proved that it is better that labor should control its own capital, then they will adopt the motto instead of the one our forefathers have used so long, of capital controlling labor.

MANHOOD STANDARD. When the toilers find that to measure a man by his manhood is better than measuring a man by his money, as well as when adopting the manhood standard instead of the cash standard they use to-day.

FREEDOM, VS. SLAVERY. When the toilers discover that by co-operation in the production and distribution of their products that they can secure industrial freedom, they will abolish the wage slave system in their industrial institutions.

WHEN. When the toilers establish co-operative industries instead of fighting competitive industries, co-operation will win because it is the very opposite of competition in the fact that co-operation does not compete.

CHRIST'S KINGDOM. Was founded on two ideas. He put in the toilers' hearts for the first time. He showed them that as their Father and every man as their brother, and these ideas are growing every day.

A toiler is a man who admits there are worse men on earth than himself.

I know of no organization that has been so long with signs and spotters as the I. A. of M. has been, and it is at the present time...

John Colman, Buffalo, president of the central labor body there, has returned to the Bronx City from England and Ireland.

The International Association of Machinists is concerned in an allied metal trades union label but has never had one of its own.

The local president of the Jewelry Workers said that this move on the part of the craft was a wise one, and would protect the buyer from imposition.

San Francisco is said to be the city where the labor unions have the most power in the United States, and where labor is most perfectly organized.

Without disparaging the public school, the cheap newspaper and the free library, it may be said that the principal educator of the workingman in this country has been the trade union.

TRADES & LABOR CONGRESS

The consistent course followed by Mr. A. W. Platteau, M.P. (Labour), during his term as a member of the House of Commons, is worthy of the highest commendation.

At the opening of the 11th session of Parliament, a meeting of our Executive Committee was held in the presence of Mr. J. G. O'Donoghue, of Toronto, M.P.

Another matter of some interest, and having a direct bearing on the question of a legal defence fund, and the necessity of being prepared to meet and combat similar cases wherever they occur.

Employers' Associations. Ray-Stannard Baker says of these unions of employers that, employers' associations, as now constituted, may be divided roughly into two classes.

The employers' associations, working with the so-called Citizens' Alliance of Ontario, are responsible for the right of lawlessness in that State.

These associations have their prototype in this country, and are patterned after the "Parricidal" type, pursuing similar methods, laying walking delegates, house agents, etc.

Speaker, declaring the third and vital clause to be out of order, but in its stead two-class form it was defeated by 25 to 23.

Another matter of very great importance to the workers is the proposed deal, and for which this country paid dear in the sacrifice of the pick and flower of the manhood of our people.

It is in my duty to correct this statement, as it is untrue, and in sympathy with the work, as being unfairly influenced by the Manufacturers' Associations.

While the organized labor movement in the United States has been making great strides, it is not in any way an essential part of the action.

It is with much pride that we are enabled to say that the forces of labor, and the uniting under the banner of international brotherhood.

Another valuable adjunct of trade unionism is the labor press, fearless and free from the influence of corporations, and are a potent factor for good.

Every effort should be put forth to prevent the product of prisoners entering the market, as the market with free labor. All goods made in prison and offered for sale, should be stamped, tagged, or labelled "prison-made."
