A Stupid Campaign.

What service to humanity or particular benefit to either Britain or Germany can be secured by the publication of details of the strain through which these countries passed four months ago is not evident to the ordinary mortal. But it is obvious that the stirring of ill-will between the two nations by crimination and recrimination can do abundance of evil. The crisis has passed and no second crisis should be created by the stirring up of the memories of evil days. Let the dead past bury its dead, and let both people press on to the work of humanity in the living present. Of course, each nation must take its own precautions for integrity and security. The scattered nations of the Empire and the lack of fortifications render attacks easy. If the Navy is not overwhelmingly strong. With a weak navy, British Commerce, on which the whole Empire depends, British food supply, on which the people at home depend, become vulnerable. With a navy supreme at sea, and able to master an enemy wherever found, the vulnerability of the scattered Empire is converted into invulnerability. It is therefore an axiom of Imperial security to strive for an invincible Navy, so far as human effort can effect it; but that affords no good reason for hostility or ill-will to Germany. The force of circumstances is compelling Germany to expand her trade and to seek for an outlet for her overflowing population. Seat of the lands of the Temperate Zone which were vacant a century ago are now under the rule of English speaking people. Even Africa has been largely partitioned out during the past generation and daily is becoming less and less the Dark Continent, with the uncharted blanks of the maps of our schoolboy days. The emigration of Germans to English speaking lands, the stiffness of commercial competition have contributed largely to the tension, and particularly the building of a fleet of modern warships during the past decade has put Britons on their guard. So long as Britons keep on their guard and keep the supremacy of the seas there will be safety. The temptation to Germany is strong, but her course is not unnatural and must be expected and prepared for. Germany offers nothing worth while tempting to Britain. Britain has nothing to gain

Police Court News.

(Before Judge Knight)
A drunk had to pay $1 or do 3 days. A drunk was dismissed; another had to pay $5 with the option of 14 days. Another drunk was called upon to the same. A drunk and disorderly, using profane language, had the option of $2 or 7 days. A drunk and disorderly was ordered to pony up $10 or do time. Another drunk got off scott free. A drunk in charge of a horse and cart had to pony up hire.
John Benson, seaman, was fined $20 or one month for stealing sea boots and was sent down for two months without the option of a fine for a second larceny.
A man was fined $5 for using a horse with a sore on its back and wound under its collar.
A man who broke the regulation for disinfection in case of disease had to pay $5 on the summons of Inspector O'Brien.
An assault case was dismissed.

ROW AT COOKSTOWN ROAD.—Two young men created quite a commotion at Cookstown Road last night at 9.45. They had a dispute over the wrestling match between Olson and Anderson. They grew so excited that blows quickly followed. Two women of the neighborhood interfered and parted them. A large crowd gathered.

Fell Off the Train.

A passenger by the outgoing express last evening fell off the train a short distance west of Irvine Station. He was under the influence of liquor and insisted on staying out on the platform. Conductor Pushie when he missed him backed up the train and on a search of the locality being made the passenger was found lying in the bushes at the road side. He had crawled there from the side of the track. He was taken on board and carried to Woodford's Station, his destination. He was not injured.

Great Achievement
Merely on the score of achievement one can but feel proud that such a great work should have been produced in England, but beyond this pride the reader feels the joy of possession. A notable, invaluable, and handsome addition has been made to his library.—Daily Mail.

New Method
The first point that makes it memorable, as we have said, that, unlike all its predecessors unlike any other book of similar design and scale, it has been finished at once. . . . The whole of the 29 volumes have been passed under the editorial eye before any one of them was given to the world; and thus there has been secured a unity of system, a harmony and homogeneity, which would have been impossible if the issue had been made volume by volume.—The Times.

Historical Incident
The publication of the 11th edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica by the University of Cambridge is something more than a merely literary event. It attains the dignity of a historical incident, full of national importance. . . . Unlike in its fullness of treatment, its comprehensive character, its authoritative nature—of ending upon the work of the highest authorities—we believe the present edition to leave behind any and every other publication of the kind, and its successful completion is a matter of congratulation, not only to those responsible for it, but to the English nation at large.—The Daily Telegraph.

Incomparable
"If we have appeared warm in our eulogy of this new edition, we have said not a word that we should wish to withdraw. The Encyclopaedia Britannica in its new form is a work in which the nation may feel a just pride. There has been nothing to compare with it in the past. . . . Scholarship and research in no country have produced anything on the same scale."—Westminster Gazette.

A Great Undertaking
"Criticism is swallowed up in admiration at the administrative ability which has brought so large a scheme to so successful a realisation."—Morning Post.

Up-to-Date
"Each article contains the latest available information on its subject, and the events and discoveries of last year are recorded, not merely occasionally, but uniformly. The work, in fact, is all that the available knowledge of to-day or yesterday can make it."—Standard.

Universal Knowledge
". . . It represents, literally, universal knowledge so far as it can be acquired by reference to the printed document."—Scotsman.

"The Right Thing at the Right Time."

"One ventures to predict that, with the appearance of the Eleventh Edition, the Encyclopaedia Britannica will become an intimate and indispensable part of the life of millions of people. The reason for this lies in the nature of the work. In the way it is produced, and in the needs and tendencies of these days of ours which it comes to supply. It has come at the right time, and in the right way, and is the right thing."—Manchester Dispatch.
