The Eastern Trust Company.

A few reasons why an estate can be better administered by the Eastern Trust Company than by a personal executor or administrator:—

1. The Company affords the estate absolute security; it has a paid-up capital of $331,000.00, and a reserve fund of $239,300.00.
3. Its existence is perpetual. Your estate, in the event of the death of a personal executor or administrator, must look around for a substitute, and the work of administration is impeded during that time, and the new executor is unfamiliar with the policy of his predecessor, and confusion results. This company's existence is perpetual, and there is a continuity of policy in its administration that the death of its officers does not break.
4. It possesses the confidence of governments, universities and prominent charities, and administers their funds.
5. A number of other advantages which will appear in due course.

Rids Poisons From the Blood, Clears Up the Complexion

Sallow Skin, Pimples, Pains and Aches Are Soon Gone When Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills Are Used.

The doctor feels your pulse and looks at your tongue, but at the same time he is reading your condition in your face. The sallow complexion tells him that your liver is not doing its work, the pimples tell him that the kidneys are not properly purifying the blood, he realizes that the bowels are constipated and the system overloaded with poisons.

"KYRA," The Ward of the Earl of Vering.

CHAPTER IX. The "Noble" Marquis.

Lilian Devigne, after she had shown Charlie Merivale out by the side door, stood in the conservatory, with Percy's letter in her hand, an uneasy restless expression on her face, and a wistful, uncertain, disquietude at her heart.

No woman ever born was wholly worldly and bad. Lilian Devigne was not, and she felt that she was, to use her own expression, "in peril of making a fool of herself," that is to say, she was beginning to feel an interest, a liking, an affection, for the man she had, hating accidents, promised to marry; this kind of thing was specially dangerous to a girl in the position, whose sole end and aim in life was to secure a good match; feeling, inclination, everything but calculating prudence, must be thrown aside; and now—

She looked at the letter, and then up at her mother, who entered at the moment, and to whom she handed the note, without a word.

Lady Devigne's face grew clouded and puzzled.

"Gone down to Vering, to see that old bear, the earl. What's that for? What does it mean, Lilian?"

Lilian shrugged her shoulders. "You have the note, mamma; the boy brought it, and could tell me nothing but that Percy Chester was sent for, summoned like a valet, or a lawyer's clerk."

Lady Devigne beat her hand with the note, meditatively.

"I wonder what the earl wanted to see him for? Something about the will, perhaps; or—do you think he has heard anything, and—"

Then she stopped, and looked anxiously at her daughter. Lilian Devigne plucked a flower, with cool nonchalance.

"Considering that Percy Chester proposed to me only last night, that surmise is rather improbable, mamma."

"Yes, yes; but people talk; the old man may have heard of Percy Chester's constant attentions, and—well, Jack Chester does not bear me—us—any good will," and she flushed, uneasily.

"He was in the old set, my dear, and knows—well, more than we should like known generally. I am afraid the earl would not welcome the all-

Tonsillitis, Sore Throat, Chest Colds, Can be Cured Over Night

They Vanish Quickly if Nerviline is Well Rubbed In.

When the throat tickles, when it hurts to draw a long breath, when you feel as if a knife were stuck in your side, it's time to draw out the congestion that will soon become pneumonia.

An ordinary cough syrup has no chance at all—you require a powerful penetrating liniment.

Nothing is known that possesses more merit in such cases than Nerviline. Rub it liberally over the sides and chest—rub it in hard.

The warm, soothing effect of Nerviline will be apparent in five minutes. Nothing like it for quick relief—and small, get whispered and known almost before they have taken place, the news of Percy's conquest was rumored, and the club gossips were wondering where the victor could be.

"Can't be true," murmured Sir Toffie. "Chester hasn't been brought down, or else he'd be on the drive with her to-day. Miss Devigne has missed fire!"

Surmising pretty correctly the running fire of criticism and conjecture, the belle, leaning back in her attitude of perfect repose and serenity, seemed lost in a sweet, peaceful reverie, and took no heed of her mothers frequent sotto voce remarks.

Lilian looked up, and a faint smile played on her lips, as her serene gaze rested on a little cob of the old-fashioned sort, and surrounded by a little throng of friends and eager parasites.

At some distance one might take the Right Honorable the Marquis of Orland for a young man; at a shorter distance he appeared rather middle-aged; indeed, it was not until you were quite close that you learned, with very likely, a shock of surprise, that his lordship was a very wonderfully preserved and exquisitely made up old man.

No one knew his age; no one had ever seen him look any different to what he was now; the wicked wags declared that he had been born in a wig, false teeth, and a pair of stays, and added that, if the latter article of dress was taken off, even for a moment, all that would remain of the Marquis of Orland would be a small, crumpled heap of dust and ashes.

He had been, in his youth—say a hundred years ago—one of the fastest of his set. Paris knew him as the wicked marquis; there was some houses in town that were never open to him, even now that he was too old to be dangerous, too toothless a wolf to be feared; but the majority of the world still worshipped and groveled at his feet, and mothers whispered, in awe-struck tones, of the Orland estate, and the uncountable Orland gold, and their daughters.

Lady Devigne had known him for years. She herself had, when first launched on the surf of society, some secret ambitious hopes in regard of him for herself; and now the wild hope of her life was to see her daughter Marchioness of Orland. She knew that, if vice met with its due punishment, the old, padded top might there and then be stricken from his kid-lined saddle by an indignant and outraged Heaven; she knew that his life was one long record of sin and ruthless cruelty against her sex; she knew, and all the world knew. But she would have sobbed for joy if the noble wretch had asked her to give him her young and lovely daughter.

No wonder she trembled with eagerness and anxiety as the varnished face and padded shape came suddenly before her. The marquis had had seen Lilian, had admired her, had paid some sort of attention to her, in Paris, and over here he was following them, as it might be, in London.

At the thought that there might be a slight chance of the marquis, and the remembrance of last night's work, she turned pale and sick with mortification, then controlled her face into its placid smile, and waited his approach.

With the set grin upon his face, that seemed as if it were painted on with the bloom of morn, and all the other proper tints that his valet so artistically applied, the most noble the marquis ambled toward them, chattering to those about him like a monkey, ogling the pretty faces around him, raising his hat, with a mechanical movement, fearfully, mechanically, and grotesquely juvenile; then, suddenly, when quite close upon them, he saw an unrecognized the mother and daughter—quite close upon them, because he was nearly blind, and had almost come to false eyes, with the rest.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS How They Relieve

The grin deepened until the enamel cracked dangerously, off went the hat, and, to the joy of her ladyship, his feeble hand pulled up the cob.

"My dear lady, how are you?" Like everything else, the marquis' voice was false, and his pronunciation artificial, with a plentiful misapplication of the letter E. "Cheermed to meet you—so surprising! Didn't know you were in London. And Miss Lilian, as beautiful as ever! Do you still pick the daisies in the morning dew?"

This was in reference to a confession of Lilian's, made to impress him with her rustic simplicity, for your jaded fops like rusticity and freshness—that she had been up early one morning picking daisies in the Bois de Boulogne.

Lilian smiled sweetly. "There are none 'in London, marquis," she murmured, with an exquisite pout.

"Ah, only lilies!" lisped the most noble, with an engaging leer; "at least one, that I would get up at any hour to see!" and he pressed his withered hand on his padded chest.

Lilian gave the proper smile. "I am afraid that is only an empty compliment, marquis," she said, shaking her head. "You would not get up very early for the rarest flower in the botanical."

"Let me hope that you bloom through the day," said he. "Where are you staying?"

"Park Lane, my dear marquis. A most charming place!" put in Lady Devigne, with ill-concealed eagerness. "So very quiet and comfortable. You must come and see us. There are other flowers in the conservatory besides lilies, and my Lily shall make you a posy."

"How cheering! It is too sweet to be true," remarked the marquis, ogling Lilian. "May I come to-morrow? And will you cut me a nice bunch, or make me a daisy chain?"

"For what use?" pouted Lilian. "You would not wear it."

"By Gad, I would!" protested the marquis. "I am almost tempted to test you!" smiled Lilian. "And are you going to stay long in town?"

"All depends," he replied, with the vacant stare which sometimes, do what he would, settled in his eyes; "all depends, my dear Miss Devigne. I did not think of staying more than a week, but I did not calculate upon so great an attraction," and he touched his chest again.

Brown is distinctly in favor for quaint taffeta dresses—wood brown, tete de negre, cinnamon and vandyke are all favored tones.

Will You Take Two At Our Risk?

In Zootic these are combined into an exceedingly pleasant tonic which in two weeks will work quiet wonders in your health. If at the end of two weeks' honest trial you cannot report real progress toward health we will refund the purchase price. Doesn't this convince you that you should start trying it to-day? Sold by T. Your Boys and Girls.

What child can't be kept busy for hours if he has something he can mold into any form or shape? When plain old fashioned mud pies can be such fun, what magic can be worked with colored clays which are easily molded?

The modeling clay costs only twenty five cents a pound or thirty in the colors, and with it all manner of pretty forms from jugs to turtles can be made.

With just a little help from mother a good deal can be learned about form and line in this way and small hands can be taught to obey the eye. But even left to his own devices, entirely, a wee chap can have much fun and come to no harm with a tray of modeling clay.

The War Week by Week.

(By Observer.)

The paucity of news of a definite nature which marked the greater part of last week was amply compensated by the starting intelligence that first reached us on Friday evening. Events of the greatest magnitude are taking place at several points on the fighting line, but all else seems dwarfed by the great naval battle in the North Sea, easily the greatest in the history of the world. It is impossible as yet to form any estimate even of the bare facts of the engagement—the actual losses sustained by either side, still less to appreciate its meaning, which may well be of more account.

Fortunately, each fresh message seems to bring better tidings. What was at first consternation over a calamitous defeat has given place to satisfaction that the losses were far more evenly divided than at first reported, and the increasing hope that it was in reality no defeat at all but a victory. The general nature of the battle seems clear enough. The greater part, if not all, of the German high sea fleet left its base at Kiel and emerged into the North Sea. Before it had time to go far, it was intercepted by a battle-cruiser squadron off the coast of Jutland. At first sight it may seem that the latter were foolhardy to accept an engagement against such overwhelming odds, where they would be subjected to the concentrated fire of a far greater number of ships of all kinds. But it must be remembered that the premier function of the British Navy is to keep the German navy in: above all, to preserve at all costs communication between England and France. The German fleet must be stopped. It was stopped, and the numerically weaker force that held it up gave, we may be sure, a magnificent account of itself.

There are many details of the nature of the fighting which will be awaited with interest. The prominent part played by destroyers on both sides is very striking. The British destroyer is a fine ship, greatly superior to the German. It seems that these little craft in many instances rushed in, risking, and many of them meeting, annihilation, to get near enough to the great battleships to discharge their deadly torpedoes with more certain chance of success. It will not be surprising if it transpires that some of our large ships were sunk in this way. Another feature is the work of the Zeppelins, which on this occasion have given proof of the only real military value which experts have ascribed to them. Before the British battleships could reach the scene, these aerial scouts had given the warning of their approach, and the German fleet did not stay to meet them.

"The British control the North Sea." In this laconic message the essence of the situation is contained. We are satisfied with it, let the Germans boast as they may of victory. They will do so, of course, and we have no reason to believe that the accounts spread broadcast through Germany will be marked by too nice regard for the truth. The soldier destined for sacrifice at Verdun will be informed that the British fleet is at the bottom of the sea. If the result of it all is renewed confidence in the German army, which is to say renewed offensives, we shall be only too well pleased. It is precisely what we want.

Meanwhile, events of really greater import have been happening on land. Simultaneously with the naval battle comes the report of an enormous concentration of German forces at Verdun. The fighting has been violent and desperate during the past fortnight, the Germans launching attacks after attack and shifting them between Cumleers and Le Mort Homme on the West to Vaux on the East. Possibly they are on the eve of a supreme effort, which was intended to take place at the same time as the companion effort at sea, which has ended as we have seen. If so, we can regard it with equanimity. They have made little impression on the French defence, which we know has inflicted enormous losses upon them. The French do not lack reserves, and they have not yet asked further assistance from the British than that afforded by the lengthening of the front held by them.

Very similar is the situation in the Trentino, where Vienna may well become the Italian Verdun. Until the shock of the Austrian attack they were back, the Italians had been advancing methodically and in the face of great obstacles upon Trent, which they threatened to capture from six separate directions. The nearest and most important line of advance ran from Riva to Rovereto. It now seems that the positions won here by the Italians were not sufficiently consolidated, and were carried by the Austrians with considerable loss in guns and prisoners. But the enemy seems now to be firmly held in the neighbourhood of Posina and Arserio, which lie directly in the way to Vicenza, and much heavy fighting may be expected here.

The marked contrast between these highly concentrated offensives and last year's operations against Russia has led many observers to see in it signs of approaching exhaustion of the Teutonic forces, which are not numerous enough to undertake extended advances over large areas. This may be correct, or it may simply be that the Germans perceive that their only chance lies in piercing the opposing lines rather than in driving them back. But a concentrated attack makes possible a concentrated defence, and both Italy and France have the ability so to concentrate without sensibly weakening their whole line. When the great allied offensive comes, it is almost certain to be of the other kind—an advance at every point, robbing the Central Powers of the advantage of position, and preventing them from rushing troops from one front to the other.

Persistent rumours indicate the possibility of an early advance by the Entente forces from Salonika: it is certain to come sooner or later. If these forces are sufficiently strong, the time would be well chosen, with Germany and Austria fully occupied and unable to render Bulgaria much assistance. The incursion of the Bulgarians into Greece at Demir Hisar, and concentration of their troops at Neurokop, both of which are reported, probably mean a thrust upon the flank of the Anglo-French army if it moves north through Serbia. It will be interesting to see how far the Greeks will permit the Bulgarians to carry their aggressions into their territory. There is little to report from the Russian front while in Mesopotamia the Turks seem to have held the Russians in check, at least for a time. There is every likelihood of a great battle in this region shortly. Russia is steadily bringing up her troops, while it is known that Turkey is summoning all her forces that she can spare to save Bagdad. Should the Turkish resistance be broken and Bagdad fall, it will be the beginning of the end for Turkey. The strategy of the whole military situation is unfolding itself. Whatever happens elsewhere, on land or sea, there are four cardinal points on which to focus attention: Verdun, Trentino, Mesopotamia and, though possibly not yet, Salonika. On each hangs a separate issue, and on them all the event of the war.

Private Thos. J. Hennebury Died of Wounds.

Private Thomas Hennebury, son of Mr. George McE. Hennebury, of the Evening Telegram staff, has made the supreme sacrifice. Yesterday the following message was received by his father from the Record Office, Ont.: "Deeply regret inform you 438614 Pte. Thos. Hennebury, infantry, officially reported died of wounds May 27th." Private Thos. Hennebury was 30 years of age, an old C.L.B. boy, and not a few of his old associates will remember his kindly smile and friendly disposition. Thirteen years ago he left here for Western Canada. Within that period he visited other places as well, but wherever he went he made good. Shortly after the outbreak of the war, he gave up a lucrative position and sacrificed his all to go and fight for King and Country with the 52nd Battalion C.E.F. He has two brothers, Sergeant Ewan S. and Alexander Hennebury of the First Nfld. Regiment and now on active service in France. A pathetic circumstance is that only quite recently a field card was received by the father of the young deceased soldier. Tom was then in Belgium and while in a dug out wrote home. At the time of writing he was well and in good spirits. Now, he has died that others may live. Truly no more fitting epitaph of him could be written. To the sorrowing parents, brothers and other relatives and friends we tender our deep sympathy.

SATURDAY'S FIRE.—An alarm of fire was sent in from box 24 on Saturday morning, the Central and Eastern companies to the house of Mr. Reddy, on Victoria Street where a slight fire was in progress. The fire, which was in the kitchen, was caused by one of Mr. Reddy's children setting fire to a mat. A stream from the chemical quenched it in quick time, but not before a hole was burnt in the floor.

A Great Success.

Twenty-five Hundred Passengers to and from Bowring Park. One of the newest features in railway excursions for Newfoundland was introduced on Saturday afternoon, when the "Jitney" train service which beyond doubt proved a great success, surpassing all expectations of the Passenger department of the Reid Nfld. Co. At 1.45 pm. the 1st train pulled out from the yard tracks next to the Promenade, just west of the railway station, having on board 300 happy holiday seekers, who were rejoicing in the honour of the first "Jitney" train passengers. Included in the number was an old white bearded gentleman surrounded by a band of little laughing grand-children, who's daddy is now somewhere in France, while a few seats away sat a young mother, with her cooing little babe playing with its bonnet strings, picnic parties and family groups, armed with baskets filled to overflowing with nice things, were also there. The small boys with their frothing poles and the little girls with their skipping ropes, added a touch of real mirth to the day's outing. The train was no sooner off when crowds began to gather on the Promenade waiting to board the second train, which left at 2.45 consisting of nine cars, with a total of 500 passengers, this being the heaviest train for the day. Back and forth from the park to the city the "Jitney" trains left and arrived on schedule, and each time a goodly number of persons made the trip. On checking up the day's receipts it was found that close on 2,500 passengers had travelled on the "Jitney" trains during the afternoon and night.

Besides this service, the other train branches of the Company's business were kept busy, and it is estimated that from 5.30 Friday evening to the arrival of the shore train Saturday night upwards of 3,000 persons were conveyed to and from St. John's. It looks as if the "Jitney" train is come to stay, and in doing so, will afford an opportunity to the average working man to have at least one day's outing with his wife and little ones, that otherwise would be beyond his slender purse.

Shooting Competition.

The volunteers shooting competition for the prizes donated by Mr. K. Blair will begin on the South Side Rifle Range early next week. Judging by the number of possibilities scored within the past month it looks as if it will be difficult to decide the winner. Sergt. Instructor Burns, who was granted a special course in musketry at Ayr, Scotland, is one of the instructors who are doing splendid work in teaching the men the main points in shooting.

NORTH SEA FIGHT.

LONDON, To-day. Impossible to give a coherent story of the great battle which lasted many hours with scattered engagements. The British and German reports contradict each other flatly on the main facts. The British assert that the German fleet retired when the British battleships retired while the German official statement maintains that the German forces were in battle with the entire British fleet. The British assert they had only two divisions engaged and that all units of these were not able to participate in the fighting. Admiral Jellicoe, Commander of the Grand Fleet, remained in area of battle after Germans had retreated and swept it thoroughly in search of enemy ships and survivors. The King's message to Jellicoe states: Germans robbed British of the opportunity of gaining a decisive victory by retiring immediately after the opening of general engagement. Vice-Admiral Beatty commanding battle cruiser squadron presumably on old flagship Lion, was again in the thick of the action, every arm most modern naval warfare employed—battleships, cruisers, torpedo boat destroyers, submarines, even Zeppelins, whether most destruction accomplished by gunfire or torpedoes not known. British officials say battle was fought by methods known and practised by all navies. There were no surprises, no new devices, weapons or strategy. How far Zeppelins contributed to German successes is a matter in dispute, as only one airship came within sight, according to British accounts, and she soon, badly damaged, withdrew, but Germans lay stress on assistance rendered by their air service and neutrals report the presence of six Zeppelins in the North Sea, belief again among British public that scouting Zeppelins kept the German fleet informed by wireless of the approach of the enemy, his numbers and formation. Admiralty has no information concerning the report that the German dreadnought Hindenburg was sunk.

LONDON, To-day. A statement issued to-night by the British Admiralty, confirming previous accounts of the battle between British and German fleets, reiterates German accounts of German losses are false, that although evidence is still incomplete, enough is known to justify their stating that German losses were greater than the British, not merely relative in the strength of the two fleets, but absolutely, there is the strongest ground for believing, the statement says, German losses include two battleships, two dreadnought battle cruisers of the most powerful type, two latest light cruisers, and additional small craft including a submarine, text statement follows: Until the Commander-in-Chief has had time to consult with officers engaged and write a full despatch, any attempt to give detailed history of the naval engagement which began on the afternoon of May 31 and ended in the morning hours of the 1st June, would evidently be premature, but the results are quite plain that the Grand Fleet came in touch with the German High Seas Fleet at 3.30 in the afternoon of May 31, and the leading ships of the two fleets carried on a vigorous fight in which battle cruisers, fast battleships and subsidiary craft all took an active part, losses were severe on both sides, but when the main body of the British fleet came into contact with the German High Seas Fleet, a very brief period sufficed to compel the latter, who had been severely punished, to seek refuge in their protected waters, this manoeuvre was rendered possible by the visibility and mist, although the Grand Fleet were now and then able to get a momentary contact with their opponents, no continuous action was possible, they continued the pursuit until the light had wholly failed, while British destroyers were able to make successful attacks upon the enemy during the night. Meanwhile, Admiral Jellicoe having driven the enemy into port returned to the main scene of action and scoured the sea in search of disabled vessels. By noon next day, June 1, it became evident there was nothing more to be done, and he returned, therefore, to his base four hundred miles away, refueled his fleet and in the evening of June 2nd was again ready to put to sea. The British losses have already been fully stated, and there is nothing to add or subtract from the account published by the Admiralty. The enemy losses were less easy to determine, and the account they have given to the world is false, certain we cannot yet be sure of the exact truth, but from such evidence as has come our knowledge, the Admiralty is entertaining no doubt but the German losses are heavier than the British, not merely in the relative strength of the two fleets, but absolutely there seems to be the strongest ground for supposing the included German losses are two battleships, two dreadnought battle cruisers of the most powerful type, two latest light cruisers, Wiesbaden and Elbing, a light cruiser of the Rostock type, and light cruiser Frauentlob, nine destroyers and a submarine.

BERESFORD SAYS "BRITISH VICTORY."

LONDON, To-day. Admiral Lord Charles Beresford, retired, speaking to-day of the fight off Jutland between the British and German fleets, said: "Though hard earned sea fight it was a British victory, there was no mistake in this strategy, the British objective was to sink the German fleet or compel it to return to its base, in the absence of Zeppelins for scouting purposes the British navy was compelled to send out heavy cruisers as outside scouts because the light cruisers would have been driven in without securing the needed information. Vice Admiral Beatty, in pursuance of this object, tackled a vastly superior force, hoping to delay it until Vice Admiral Jellicoe's battle fleet arrived to destroy the Germans. Vice Admiral Beatty achieved a brilliant success because on arrival of Vice Admiral Jellicoe, the Germans fled. We attained our object but the Germans failed to attain theirs. We lost cruisers which we can afford to lose; Germany lost battleships which they cannot afford to lose.

HOLDS UNDISPUTED SUPREMACY.

LONDON, To-day. That Britain still holds undisputed supremacy of the seas, is the judgment of Winston Spencer Churchill, recently First Lord of the Admiralty, who has now resumed Parliamentary duties after service with his regiment at the front, whose opinions on Naval matters are still eagerly sought in England. Churchill gave the Associated Press the following statement: "I have had an opportunity of examining the reports of the Admirals, and considering the information in possession of the Admiralty, the following facts seem to me to be established. Naval supremacy of the British fleet in capital ships depends upon super-dreadnoughts armed with 13.5 inch guns and 15 inch guns. These are sufficient by themselves to maintain control of the seas; these vital units of first rank we have only lost one, the Queen Mary. There appears to be no doubt that the Germans have lost at least one comparable ship; if this should be the Lutzow or Derfflinger, that vessel is a heavier loss to them actually and relatively than the Queen Mary is to us. Counting the vessels second in order, we have lost the Indefatigable and Invincible; these are in an entirely different class from super-dreadnoughts, and valuable vessels as they are, do not rank as primary units at the present time. Dreadnought battleships of the Westfallen type, would be a loss comparable to either of the armoured cruisers. The Black Prince, Defence and Warrior belonged to the third order of ships of which we possess a very large superiority. The sinking of the two brand new German light cruisers Wiesbaden and Elbing is in fact more grievous loss to the enemy. In all these vessels the most serious feature is the loss of their splendid irreplaceable crews. Destroyer casualties appear about equal on terms; we being stronger are gainers. Our flotilla long sought such 'opportunities. Our margin of superiority is in no way impaired. The despatch of troops to the continent should continue with the utmost freedom, the battered condition of the German fleet being an additional security to us. Hazy weather and fall of night and the retreat of the enemy, alone frustrated the persevering efforts of our brilliant commanders Sir John Jellicoe and Sir David Beatty to force a final decision. Although it was not possible to compel the German main fleet to accept battle, the conclusions reached are of extreme importance as all classes of vessels of both sides have now met, we know there are no surprises or unforeseen features. An accurate measure can be taken of the strength of the enemy and his definitook a change which further helped the Germans. A thin drizzle reduced the visibility and the British gunners thus were greatly handicapped, while with the western sun behind them the British ships were easily picked out on the horizon, whereas the Germans were able to conceal their strength, covered as they were by the coast of Jutland. Having succeeded at length in drawing the whole German fleet out of its safe quarters, Vice-Admiral Beatty, although greatly outnumbered and running heavy risks, determined to hang on grimly in order to detain the enemy in full strength. It was a daring manoeuvre, but the British fought doggedly and with great pertinacity despite all disadvantages. The fight lasted about a couple of hours when the British battle cruisers Invincible, Indomitable and Inflexible were in sight. Rear Admiral Hood flying his flag on the Invincible as second in command of the battle cruiser squadron, they rushed into action none too soon for Vice-Admiral Beatty's battered fleet. Odds favored the German boats, numbers and position of British ships clearly distinguishable against the light, while the German fleet were sheltered behind a mine field and lay well into the shadow of the shore where a mist made them difficult targets. The conflict was mainly a battle of big guns. The Invincible, after fighting with great gallantry and considerably damaging the enemy, met her doom and sank quickly. But much more formidable aid was now at hand and it soon became evident that the Germans meant business. The small craft soon were brushed aside and with the big ships about 15 miles apart the first exchange of shots took place, and judging by the columns of water rising on all sides there could be no doubt that the pick of the German battleships were hurling broadsides, while the famous new Hindenburg, though not been officially mentioned, there is reason to believe she was heavily engaged. Admiral Beatty's ship Lion gave a magnificent account of herself, then came the Queen Mary, the battle-scarred Tiger, Princess Royal, Indefatigable, the last named famous for her feats in the battle of the Falklands. From a 15 miles range it rapidly reduced to ten, then five miles. By this time a perfect inferno was raging as the opposing battle squadrons rained broadsides upon one another. Soon after the battle began in earnest one big German cruiser received a direct hit and a moment later she was enveloped in flames, sinking almost immediately. Up to this time most of the fighting had been done by German battle cruisers, but vessels of the Kaiser class now joined the fray, giving the Germans enormous advantage both in ship and gun power. When the story of the battle is fully known, it probably will be shown that one of the deadliest enemies of the British was the German mine field. Attackers also had to contend with the danger from submarines and Zeppelins, and the mine field prevented full freedom of action on the part of the British squadron, which was confined in a narrow area, while the Zeppelins and submarines, which were near their base, were able to operate in such a manner as to be a most important factor in the battle. Court adjourned for recess at 1 p. m. and continued at 2.30 o'clock.

GIRL FAINTS ON THE STREET.

A young girl named Verge, a domestic in the service of Mr. W. J. Horwood, while passing the West End Fire Hall last evening became suddenly ill and falling to the ground became unconscious, she was taken into the Fire Hall where she recovered and was afterwards conveyed to her home.

ite inferiority freed from any attempt of uncertainty. I cannot record these facts without expressing my profound sympathy with those who have lost their dearest ones, many of the most gallant sailors our Island has ever nurtured. Some of our most splendid officers have gone, but they have died as they would have wished to die in blue water action, which as it is studied will more and more be found to be a definite step towards the attainment of complete victory."

REAR ADMIRAL ARBUTH NOT LOST.

NEW YORK, To-day. A despatch from London says that Rear Admiral Arbuth was not lost in the Defence; but of 775 men every man went down.

STEAMER SUNK.

LONDON, To-day. The British steamer Golconda, 5374 tons, was sunk off Orfordness; five of the crew are missing.

HEAVY OFFICER CASUALTIES.

LONDON, To-day. The official list of casualties among officers show that hardly a single officer of the line escaped from the British cruisers sunk in battle. Additional casualty list of petty officers shows 43 saved from the Queen Mary, Invincible, Fortune, Ardent and Shark. None were saved from the Indefatigable, Defence, Black Prince, Tipperary, Turbulent, Nomad or Nestor. The list gives the names of 65 killed aboard the Warrior, 27 wounded; on other ships engaged in the fight, 115 men were killed, 85 wounded.

MEMBERS OF GERMAN CREW LIBERATED.

LONDON, To-day. Twenty-one members of the crew of the German cruiser Elbing, destroyed in the great naval battle, and one British ship's surgeon, who were brought to Ymuiden aboard the Dutch trawler Bertha, has been liberated, in accordance with the Red Cross Convention, because the Bertha, after rescuing the men did not communicate with the war vessels, according to an official to the Netherlands. Government forwarded from the Hague Reuter Telegram Company.

The survivors of the German cruiser Elbing left for Germany on Saturday evening by permission of the Dutch Government they had been landed at Ymuiden. Commander Madlund made a brief report to the German Minister at the Hague stating to the effect that the Elbing was hit only once. The shot disabled the wireless apparatus; afterwards in the darkness of the night he reported the Elbing disabled by collision, whereupon the crew abandoned and blew up the ship. The men then got away in their own boats with the exception of those who were picked up by the Dutch trawler which brought them into Ymuiden. Commander Madlund made a longer report to Berlin. The captain of the trawler understood it was a German torpedo boat that rammed the Elbing.

MANY WOUNDED ARRIVE AT SOUTH SHIELDS.

SOUTH SHIELDS, To-day. Many of those wounded in the sea fight have been brought here and placed in hospital. Even those seriously injured, display fortitude and composure, and are proud of the part they took in the battle. They relate that the Germans tried to blind the British crews with searchlights. One British destroyer, according to these survivors, did remarkable work. She attacked a German battleship and successfully torpedoed it and subsequently sank a German submarine which was about to attack. The Frauenlob's men said their ships had suffered severely in the earlier fighting, during which her deck had been swept by murderous fire from the British. The torpedo hit her amidships and exploded in the engine room lifting the ship high in the water. She sank in several minutes.

ABSENCE OF FEELING OF DISAPPOINTMENT.

LONDON, To-day. Public opinion as reflected in the editorials of Sunday's papers, shows a complete absence of feeling of disappointment which arose when the first official account of the naval battle was issued. The later report showing that the German losses were greater than had been supposed together with evidence that the Germans avoided the struggle with the British main fleet, created a better feeling throughout the nation. There is still, however, an undercurrent of dissatisfaction in some quarters with the strategy displayed by the British high command. The Observer, in an editorial, complains that the traditions of the British navy from the time of Hawkes to Nelson, in winning complete shattering victories, has not been maintained at that, and that it is undignified for the British nation to haggle as to whether its navy secured in the great battle "a fair margin" of advantage. The paper suggests there has been a faulty policy of strategy which calls for investigation. The Observer says: "We have missed the victory and must seek it again; we dare not falter with our historic position." Other papers maintain that although Great Britain has done nothing to brag about, there is no occasion for depression.

RUTH CAMERON

"Cheer up," said the Authorman to Molly, the little stenographer lady; "five years from now, you'll look back on all this quite calmly."

"That's cold comfort," said Molly; "besides, I know I never shall. It was such a foolish, unnecessary mistake to take that apartment when we might have waited and got one we liked ever so much better. I know I never shall be able to think of it to my dying day without hating myself and feeling perfectly wild."

"Poor Molly, of course she will, but of course she can't realize it now! She isn't old enough to know yet how time softens and changes the aspect of many things."

She May Find It Wasn't a Mistake At All.

There may come a day when she will realize that the taking of the less attractive apartment, wasn't a mistake at all. Her present location may bring her friendships that mean indefinitely more than the possession of a few extra comforts.

Or, even if she still regards it as a mistake, there will be none of that poignant regret she now feels. She will see whatever good came of her choice, she will know that her mistake taught her to be less hasty in her decisions, and she will realize that it was a part of the pattern of her life.

Not Many of Us Could Quite Say This

"I would scarce now have any of those untoward accidents and events of my life reversed. I would no more alter them than the incidents of some well-contrived novel," says Charles Lamb. "Methinks it is better that I should have pined away seven of my fairest years when I was thrall to the fair hair and fairer eyes of Alice W— than that so passionate a love adventure should be lost. It is better that our family should have missed that legacy which Dorrell cheated us of, than that I should have at this moment two thousand pounds 'in banco' and be without the idea of that specious old rogue."

The Older One Grows The Less One Regrets

"The older one grows the less one regrets. Time, who takes away with one hand the passionate longings of youth and its intense capacity for enjoyment, gives with the other a broader view of life, a more philosophic sense of its import.

Everything that has happened has taught us something. Happiness has come from unexpected quarters; even that greatest evil, the death of some beloved one, has not come utterly empty handed—"more homelike seems the vast unknown since they have entered there." And all the time the pattern is weaving, and beautiful and ugly experiences, sad days and glad days, wise choices and what seems to us mistakes are being woven into a whole whose symmetry we begin dimly to perceive.

HAS GERMAN EFFICIENCY FAILED!

New York Evening Post:—The will to conquer even in Prussia must operate through the knowledge how to conquer. But now in the popular demand for a man to feed Germany through sheer power of will there is manifest faith in the mere magic of personality. Because a certain administrator had displayed ruthless determination in ruling over the stiff-necked Poles in Posen, he is spoken of as the man who can by so willing create food where there is no food. Or can it be that the food is there, and that it is the fabled German organization which has failed to work?

Fashions.

By GEORGE FITCH

Author of "At Good Old Slivash"

Fashion is a weird magician who can make a skin-tight sleeve on a woman's dress look like a dream of lissome beauty in June and like a dressed-up umbrella rib the following May.

The Hindoo sorcerers are supposed to be wondrous at making people see things which aren't so, but fashion puts the Hindoo in the amateur class. Fashion can make an intelligent woman fall in love with a market basket trimmed with cat's fur and cabbages and hound her husband for days until he buys it with the $97.50 which he was saving up for an encyclopedia.

Nature can turn a man's hair white in a night, but Fashion can turn a woman's hair golden in an hour and turn it red and even a light shade of green the next day if necessary.

Nature can build a woman with a twenty-eight inch waist and thirty-two inch hips and feel fairly well satisfied with the job. But Fashion can give a woman a twenty-inch waist and can run it up and down from her neck to her knees according to directions from Paris; and it can also make a woman happy as a bird with no hips at all.

Nature can put roses in a woman's cheek; when she is perfectly well, but Fashion can put them there at 3 p.m. rain or shine, every day in the year, and keep them there until they are washed off with gasoline at bedtime.

Nature gives woman enough hair to do up in two braids and twenty minutes. Fashion can beat this by half a bushel and an hour and a half.

Fashions originate in Paris and travel slowly westward, reaching New York the following spring and Chicago a year later. By the time they have reached Wahoo, Neb., they are comparatively harmless and automobiles will pass a Wahoo girl dressed in the height of Wahoo fashion without shying.

Fashions were made by kings, but dressmakers now set them, and the world is full of worried women who are waiting for the spring announcement before deciding whether to stay plump or thin or straight or curved for the ensuing summer; and also whether to buy ear rings, toe rings or nose rings.

You may have a dress distinctly original by painting some simple motive in oils on the hem or in all-over design.

Hundreds of children are suffering from "Measles" at the present time, and one has to be very careful in trying to avoid the complications that often follow them.

Saturday or Sunday, which of these days should the Christian keep as his Sabbath?

The above question has been discussed in this city for some time and has disturbed the minds of many. FISHING TIME

The fish are frequent in the brook, and I must take my line and hook, and see if I can catch a shark that will occasion some remark. I know not why I always feel like going after trout or eel, about this year; the inclination's rather queer. For well I know I will not bring, when I come home, a decent string; some bony fish that would not fetch a half a plunk will be my catch. And I'll be spotted o'er with sores, where all the insects out of doors got in their work with drills and stings and teeth and other red-hot things. And I'll be sunburned, I suppose, until the bark peels off my nose, and I'll be coated thick with mud, from falling in the babbling food. I'll be a run of the jay who in the morning went away, all bilious in his gay and joyous-eyed, Apollo in his pomp and pride. I know all this, and yet; by Jink, I must go fishing every spring; it is a stunt imposed by Fate—so here is where I dig some bait.

Neutrality of Spain Landed by Britain.

London, May 25.—England to-day is full of enthusiasm for the way Spain has maintained her neutrality. A high British official said to-day:

"No praise is too high for the manner in which Spain has kept absolutely neutral. She would have been able to squeeze both us and France badly if she had wished, instead of which she has kept absolute balance, while King Alfonso's efforts in behalf of the wounded and missing have insured our gratitude.

"Stories of German submarine bases on the Spanish coasts are absolute inventions. We are certain they don't exist."

LATEST LECTURE

ON THE BRITISH FRONT.
LONDON, To-day.

The British official statement issued at midnight reads: Fighting was very severe and continued unceasingly southeast of Ypres between Hooze and the Ypres-Milpen railway. Following their initial advantage obtained yesterday evening in penetrating our forward line in this neighborhood the Germans pushed their attack during the night and succeeded in pushing through our defences to a depth of 700 yards, in the direction of Zellebeke. Canadian troops, however, who are holding this section of defences launched counter strokes at 7 o'clock which have succeeded in gradually driving the enemy from much of the ground gained. Canadians behaved with the utmost gallantry, counter attacking successfully after heavy continued bombardment; enemy losses severe. Large numbers of German dead were abandoned on recaptured ground. Opposite the entrance to our line near Fricourt, north of the River Somme, a small party of a regiment raided the German line last night bringing back a few prisoners. This party had a sharp engagement in a German trench and suffered some casualties, but succeeded in bombing several German dugouts. Southwest of Angres, last night, we carried out a successful enterprise. Our party entered a German trench and disposed of the garrison above ground and bombed five dugouts before retiring without loss. To-day there has been a good deal of artillery activity about the Loos Salient. Yesterday our aeroplanes, favored by fine weather, accomplished much successful work.

MANY FAMILIES IN MOURNING.

LONDON, To-day.
Many families high in the Peerage, are mourners as the result of the North Sea battle. Rear Admiral Hood, who went down with the Invincible, was the son and heir of Viscount Hood; Lieut. Commander Fielding was a son of Lord Glanville, and Lieut. Algernon Percy was a nephew of the Duke of Northumberland; the Commander of the torpedo boat destroyer Nestor, Commander Edward Bingham, was a son of Lord Clanmore's, while midshipman Cecil Molyneux was a son of the Earl of Sefton.

HINDENBURG SUNK!

EDINBURGH, To-day.
Survivors arriving here from British destroyers are convinced that they sent to bottom the Dreadnought Hindenburg, the pride of the German navy. These sailors say that the Hindenburg was struck successfully by four torpedoes while destroyers rushed in alongside her hull, tearing her to pieces, until this mighty ship reeled over and sank.

GERMAN WARSHIP SYDLITZ PURSUED.

COPENHAGEN, To-day.

A despatch from Ribe, Jutland, says that the German battle cruiser Sydlitz was sighted on Thursday morning 68 miles west of Fann Islands going south pursued by British warships; she was badly damaged and had two large holes aft.

MAY PROVE THE TURNING POINT.

LONDON, To-day.

The morning papers with fuller details available on the naval battle show no tinge of pessimism. The Morning Post calls the fight "A Victory," so momentous that the results may prove the turning point of the war.

Stranded Steamer Towed to Port

The s.s. Portia, Capt. J. Kean, returned from the westward yesterday, having been as far as Bonne Bay. Coming east the Portia went to the assistance of the Danish steamer Lyngfjord, which was ashore at St. Vincent's, Holyrood, in St. Mary's Bay. The Lyngfjord, bound to Cardiff wheat laden from Baltimore went aground during a dense fog. The Portia succeeded in getting her off and towed her to port. The Dane is damaged and is leaking. She will be docked for repairs.

Hr. Grace Notes.

To-day, June 3rd, is being kept as a holiday here, it being the birthday of our King. Stores are closed and flags are flying to the breeze in honor of the day.

Mr. Alex. Noseworthy, of the Post Office staff, St. John's, arrived by yesterday's train to spend a few days with relatives on the Southside.

Mr. R. Granville has been awarded the contract to repair Military Road and Garland Street. A fine coating of clay is being put on, and the sight on both streets cleared of anything that would stop them in their work of carrying off the surface water. Our new board seems to have hit on the right idea as to road making, and the expenditure of road grants placed in their hands, and they are to be congratulated on their first efforts.

We were very pleased to see our popular townsman John Casey, Esq., J.P., out about to-day, and to hear he is fast gaining strength after his late illness.

Miss Florence James, the 12-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene James, died on Thursday night, having succumbed to an attack of measles. She was a very bright little girl and the parents have the sympathy of all our townspeople in their great bereavement.

Master Ronald Kitchen, who has worked for the past two years at the Standard Office, leaves to-morrow for Bell Island where he will join the staff of the Bell Island Miner.

The schr. Margaret R. John Keefe, master, will leave for Labrador on Monday if a suitable time offers. Several other schooners are also ready to sail for the coast.

We regret to hear that Mr. Walter Rogers is very ill at present. His friends, however, are hopeful that he will soon show signs of regaining his strength.

Messrs. Munn & Co. are having the front of their Water Street premises repaired. The work is being done by Mr. R. Lee.

We are pleased to hear that our Shoe Factories are running at high pressure. The season promises to be the busiest on record.

"The Broken Wrist" is an exciting Biograph drama, the story of an hospital nurse and two doctors. "The Fable of the Tip and the Treasure" is one of George Ade's best comedies. Don't miss seeing to-day's show; it's a first class one.

MEASLES—SERIOUS.—The epidemic of measles to the extent of hundreds of cases, continues in the city and worse than ever, as several deaths have occurred lately through this cause, the victims being children in every instance.

"Firsts" in the War.

A Contribution of Inquiring Mind Tells Us Some Interesting War Facts.

When and where did we fire the first shot in the Great War? On sea, the ball was probably opened by the Grafton, about midnight on August 4, 1914, but a shot across the bow of a German barque in the North Sea, made her crew prisoners, and seized her as a war prize.

But the honour of landing the first blow on sea fell to the Amphion, which on August 5th, 1914, sank the German mine-layer Koenigen Luise. The Amphion herself was sunk by a mine on the following day, and was the first of our losses. We did not score against German warships proper, however, till August 9th, 1914, when the Birmingham sent the U-15 to the bottom.

In land operations our first shot was fired on August 20th, 1914, by the 4th Dragon Guards. The same regiment was the first to begin killing at about 5 a.m. on August 22nd, when a part of C Squadron opened fire on a number of the enemy at a distance of about 600 yards. The first Hun to fall was an officer.

It seems clear, further, that on this occasion the 4th Dragons not only took the first prisoners, but fired the first machine-guns used on our side in the war.

As regards the first shell fired on land, there is some dispute, both E and D Battery, Royal Horse Artillery, claiming the record. The evidence in favor of the former, however, is much the stronger. It went into action at Bray, near Mons, at 11.15 a.m. on August 22nd, and the case of the first shell it fired is now in England.

When, again, was gas first used? The earliest record is 5 a.m. on April 22nd, 1915, when the Germans released it in the northern sector of the Ypres salient, and among the first, if not absolutely the first, of the units to get the "benefit" was the 2nd London Heavy Battery, Royal Garrison Artillery (Territorials), some of the men of which were "gassed."

Here is another hotly-disputed point: Which regiment gained the first Victoria Cross? The Royal Engineers say the record is theirs; and both an officer and a lance-corporal in that famous corps certainly won the coveted distinction on August 23rd, 1914. The officer was Captain Theodore Wright, who, at Mons, attempted under heavy fire to connect up the line to demolish a bridge, and, though wounded in the head, made a second trial. He was mortally wounded at Vailly on September 14th. On the same day—August 23rd—Lance-Corporal C. A. Jarvis won the V.C. for great gallantry at Jemmapes.

But the Royal Engineers were run very close by both the 15th Hussars and the 4th Batt. Royal Fusiliers, to each of which fell a V.C. on August 23rd, 1914. In all, the most-prized of military decorations was won four times on that fateful day.

A New Novel by a New Writer.

The Honey Pot by Countess Marysinska. It is a story of the stage, and never perhaps have the expectations and disappointments of the aspirant for a successful stage career been more naturally described. Two girls, Maggie and Lexie, hold the interest throughout. They are excellently contrasted. Maggie, the daughter of an actress, having been associated with the stage from her earliest childhood and influenced by its freedom, while Lexie has been brought up in refinement and wants a career for the use of her talent. It is not too much to say that Maggie, the lovable and loving girl who, with all her worldly wisdom, falls a prey to the man who captures her fancy, is a triumph of characterization. Natural and human she is the heart of the book; but hardly less interesting is Lexie's stubborn fight with its happy ending and the many intimate pictures of the life of the chorus girl. The whole story rings true. Paper, 60c.; Cloth, 90c.

ON THE NORTH SEA BATTLE.
(From the 'Daily News'.)

The Invincible took part in the battle off the Falkland Islands in December of 1914, when the German Pacific Squadron which had made its way into the Atlantic after defeating the British squadron under Admiral Cradock off the Chilean coast, was destroyed.

The National Tidende, of Copenhagen, says that on Thursday night ten German torpedo boat destroyers passed through the Little Belt from the North going very slowly. It adds that a torpedo boat badly damaged, was lying off Lyngborg Island, north of Cape Horn.

A Dutch trawler has arrived at the Hook of Holland with one dead and seven live Germans, saved from the battle, another trawler brought into Ymuiden, three German officers, 12 German sailors, and a wounded British sailor.

The Queen Mary took a prominent part in the Heligoland engagement under Capt. William Hall, now connected with the Intelligence Division of the Admiralty.

The Indefatigable and Invincible took a leading part in the sinking of Admiral Von Spee's squadron near the Falkland Islands. They were also engaged in the bombardment of the Dardanelles.

Rear Admiral Hebbingham stated in the Reichstag that the main portion of the German fleet had returned to harbor with the men in splendid spirits, and that the German ships and guns had stood the test well.

Six Zeppelins took part in the North Sea fight. One was badly damaged but is reported to have reached the Schleswig coast with several wounded men and with her supplies jettisoned.

The recent movement of the German fleet is said to have resulted from the Kaiser's insistence at his last visit to Wilhelmshaven.

Speaking of the Zeppelins' part in the North Sea naval fight, the London Daily Express aptly says: "These Zeppelins undoubtedly aided the German fleet in its return to port. These monsters of the air have shown themselves of small military value in their raids over British countries. Their real function, however, is to play the parts of the eyes of the fleet. The withdrawal of the German ships before the British giants could deliver effective blows suggests that they were far-seeing eyes."

Rear Admiral Horace Hood, who was second in command of the battle cruiser squadron with the Invincible, as his flagship, is probably amongst the lost.

Several German mines are reported to be adrift in the North Sea, and a Copenhagen despatch says that a cruiser, nationality unstated, struck one of them and sunk, only a few of the crew being saved.

There were 350 men on the German cruiser Flaucht. Only 3 are reported as saved. She sunk in ten minutes.

Seven survivors of the British Destroyed Shark, were landed at Hull on Friday in a Danish steamer. They were picked up in the North Sea after being adrift six and a half hours on Thursday. One has since died.

It is feared that the loss of British lives exceeds 5,000 officers and men, including the whole crew of the Queen Mary.

A statement made by the President of the Reichstag, that the Warspite and Alcaster were lost, is officially denied by the British Admiralty.

Admiral Beatty commanded the battle cruiser squadron in the recent naval battle.

Highlanders' Parade.
Yesterday morning the Newfoundland Highlanders under command of Lt.-Col. Paterson held their first church parade for the season, about 80 took part, a creditable showing considering the fact that a like number have enlisted in the Newfoundland Regiment out of a total strength of 130.

Headed by the bagpipes the Brigade proceeded to St. Andrew's Church, the Rev. J. S. Sutherland officiated and also delivered an impressive sermon, which was listened to with deep interest by every lad present.

After service the Highlanders accompanied the volunteers who had attended the service, to the Armoury, and then returned to their headquarters via Harvey Road. Lieut.-Colonel Paterson addressed the men and complimented them on their large turnout, also the splendid lot of new recruits that were filling the places of those who had volunteered. It was also announced that the cup offered by Lieut.-Col. Paterson had been won by Corp. Adams in the recent shooting competition, his score being highly creditable.

McKay, C. F. Cowney, H. L. Goodman, J. Healey, J. E. Buskirk, H. S. Somerton, G. Ramsely, F. Reginald, Miss M. McLellan, Miss E. M. Collins, Miss L. Hickman.

In Milady's Boudoir.
The article is written especially for the brunettes, although if the little blonde sister reads it, and wishes to follow its advice, it will not prove injurious.

Women with naturally dark hair should use the yolks of eggs for the shampoo or California claret beaten up with two or three whole eggs. Natural blondes who have no fear of their darkening properties will also get good results from the eggs, for these contain the iron and sulphur needed for stimulation and the renewal of hair-coloring fluid.

A cake of old castle soap dissolved in a quart of hot water also provides a good cheap cleanser, and if the jelly made is always kept in a wide-mouthed jar in the bathroom there will never be any excuse for using a soap unfit for their hair.

The raw eggs or soap jelly must be applied to the scalp alone and always with a massage and after the hair has been slightly moistened.

For a full suit of hair, beat up three whole eggs with an egg beater until they are light, adding about two tablespoonfuls of tepid water during the beating.

Apply this to the scalp all over the head, taking care not to run the egg down into the hair, and if the scalp seems much incrustated with dust work in two tablespoonfuls of the soap jelly on top.

Do the first washing in no more than a quart of water—so as to get all the strength there is in the soap and eggs—but after this have the rinsings generous and numerous.

Wire-Tapping Inquiry Ends in Accusations.

Mayor Mitchell Not Yet Decided Regarding Resignation.

New York, May 27.—The Thompson Legislative Committee wound up its investigation late yesterday of the tapping of private telephone wires by the police after hearing the testimony of two of the detective sergeants who did the spying on the conversations of the Catholic priests whom Mayor Mitchell accused of conspiring to wreck his administration and defeat the ends of justice.

The only other witnesses were Walter J. Drummond, son of Michael J. Drummond, former Charities Commissioner, and Dr. Daniel C. Potter, of Brooklyn, who was charged with trying to evade subpoena servers of the Strong Committee that investigated the Charities Department.

Both men denied much of the conversation the policemen said they had overheard on the tapped telephone wires. Dr. Potter enlivened the proceedings by attacking Mayor Mitchell and Charities Commissioner John A. Kingsbury.

The examination of the policemen brought out the fact that it is not unusual for them to listen in on the tapped wires of lawyers and physicians in the search of crime or suspected criminals.

In such cases the witnesses testified, however, that the confidential relation between lawyer or physician and client was not abused, as only enough conversation was listened to to locate a suspect that was wanted. The policemen also stated that in some cases the trunk lines of hotels were tapped and the conversations of all hotel guests listened to.

Mayor Mitchell Accused.
This, it developed, was true in the case of the Hotel Irving, where Robert W. Hebbord, former secretary of the State Charities Department was living at the time the priests' telephone wires were tapped. This made the fourth wire that was tapped in connection with the charities investigation, although Mayor Mitchell testified that only three wires were tapped—those of Dr. Potter, his son, Dean Potter, and Father Farrell. The wire-tappers did not get any of Mr. Hebbord's conversations.

Dr. Potter accused Mayor Mitchell of being a traducer of the dead and with having a desire to retail scandal. He denied knowing that an honorarium of $5,000 had been raised for his benefit by the late Mgr. McMahon until three years later.

Certain mistaken friends of his, he said, thought to make him a present, but soon abandoned the plan and then Mgr. McMahon put in a general fund. Mgr. McMahon, he said, was crushed and humiliated by the insults heaped upon him and died.

After the session had ended, Mayor Mitchell made public a report of the entire matter turned in to the late Mayor Gaynor by Raymond B. Fosdick, then commissioner of accounts. Statements in the report were to the effect that the money was raised to help Doctor Potter out of the financial troubles. The report also stated that Father Mallick J. Fitzpatrick, treasurer of the Mission of the Immaculate Virgin, had purchased with $800 of the funds of the institution a judgment which Austin Nichols and company obtained against Doctor Potter.

Mayor Still Undecided.
After Doctor Potter had finished his testimony, Senator Thompson, chairman of the Commission, announced his belief that Doctor Potter had not tried to evade subpoena servers from the Strong Committee, but that he had simply waited until others had testified first. Doctor Potter admitted this was true.

In ending his investigation of the wire-tapping subject, Senator Thompson suggested that it would be advisable for a committee to be appointed to investigate the entire charities subject. His committee, he said, could not go into the matter.

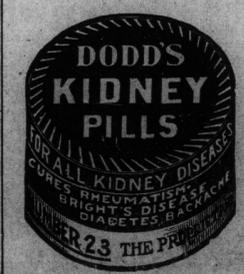

Mayor Mitchell denied that the telephone wires of Father Joseph Dineen and Mgr. Dunn had been tapped by the police. "I have made the most careful and painstaking investigation," said the Mayor, "and have been informed, and know it to be true, that Father Dineen's and Mgr. Dunn's wires were not supervised by the police."

The Mayor said he had not yet determined upon any action regarding the bringing of criminal proceedings against persons named in his testimony.

Senator Thompson, in ending the inquiry, criticized the police system of wire espionage, and said it would have to be curbed by legislative enactment.

"Give me six months at the listening-in switchboard of the police in Greenwich street," he said, "and I will break the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. or any other big banking house in America. The police have too much power in this, and it will have to be curbed."

Little girls are wearing jumpers for morning play hours. They are cut as a one-piece frock, except the bottom, which is planned to gather up into bloomers. These jumpers may be prettily trimmed and they save petticoats.

H. W. LeMessurier, C.M.G.

We extend our very heartiest and cordial congratulations and good wishes to Henry W. LeMessurier, Esq., Deputy Minister of Customs, on whom His Majesty the King has been pleased to confer the honour of Commander of St. Michael and St. George. It is needless to mention that the appointment is a popular one and meets with widespread approval, because the recipient of the honour is one of our best known and estimable citizens. His services have been valued and useful to Homeland and Empire, particularly at the present juncture. He was attached to the Garrison staff when a young man and the greater part of his life has been a close student of his native land. His knowledge of research is far-reaching; he is looked upon as a bureau of information concerning the Trade and Commerce of the Country. During his career he has edited a newspaper and took a prominent part in political life with credit and success. At present he is Deputy Minister of Customs and which responsible post he has occupied for over twenty years past and successive Governments and Governors have admired and commended him. Not the least conspicuous and praiseworthy are his contributions to Empire and local trade and customs statistics and a visit to his office is always included in the itinerary of the present day newspapermen. As an authority on commercial and industrial topics he stands pre-eminent. We trust that Mr. LeMessurier will enjoy health and happiness in the eventide of his life which we hope will be long.

The Soldiers and Sailors Club

In the Casino Theatre to-night Dr. Grenfell will give an address upon his experiences in France and Flanders, while attending the military hospitals. The proceeds of the lecture will be devoted to the payment of the improved lighting fixtures being installed in the rooms to be used by the Soldiers and Sailors' Club. The Ladies' Committee hope that the public will patronize the lecture in large numbers, and in doing so assist in providing good Club rooms for the men of the Newfoundland Regiment and of the Naval Reserve.

Insane Man Jumps From Train.

A middle aged man belonging to Dunville, P. E., became insane on board a train on Saturday while on his way to St. John's from Grand Falls and jumped off near Brigus Junction. The train was going at a fairly good rate when the man disappeared, though fortunately when picked up was not hurt much. He was again put aboard the train by train men and accompanied to the city by Constable Bishop. On being examined by a doctor he was pronounced insane and was conveyed to the Lunatic Asylum.

LIGHT, HEAT, COMFORT!

The proprietor of one of the best known multiple shopping systems is credited with saying, "Give me any old shop, in any old street, and I'll guarantee to make it in twelve months the most widely known and best frequented shop in the district." He was asked to explain. Holding up three fingers he said, "I believe in the trinity of LIGHT, WARMTH, COMFORT. I should dazzle the moths until the candle drew them. I should bring them into a warm, comfortable shop, filled with a soft, pleasing radiance, and the rest is—well, mere child's play."

Mixed metaphors, perhaps, but expressive. Now we can more than imagine the kind of shop this well-known individual would open, for we pass it in almost every town—always a landmark to the street. No one fails to notice it. There is an indefinable air of welcome and invitation as one stands for a moment on the pathway and lets one's gaze travel inside it. The subdued, restful lighting effect that so charms because of its very unobtrusiveness, the absence of dark corners, the intangible feeling that if one would step inside one would be sure of experiencing a delicious sense of warmth and comfort and cheerfulness—all these are part of its appeal. Truly a shop with an individuality.

We cordially invite all progressive business men to visit our showroom and see our latest Lighting and Heating Appliances, by the adoption of which the ideal outline in the above extract from a London paper may be easily secured. Our new RADIO X Lamp and GASTHEAM Radiators fill all light and heat requirements.
