CHAPTER VIII.

"I am married," Dallas said, coolly, yet shrinking a little from the keen twinkle of the American's eye, knowing that he had walked into a trap. "My wife is in the next carriage; I have only come in here for a smoke."

He knew that they would see the announcement in the Times the next morning, and draw their own conclusions as to the gallantry of the bridegroom and the amiability of the bride.

The American does see the notice while he is eating his breakfast the next morning, and he shrugs his shoulders. A breach of gallantry toward a woman who is young and newly married is a heinous fault in a lady-adoring American's estimation.

"I always thought that young Glynne wouldn't 'pan out' much," he says to himself, contemptuously. "Begins by stubbing the girl as soon as he is sure of her money!"

But, when Dover is reached, after a choice dinner—served in their own sitting-room—as they were expected at the hotel—followed by a cup of good coffee and a cigarette, Captain Glynne begins to think he must really make an effort to restore his young wife to her usual state of happy fondness for him and blissful enjoyment of his society.

"She is upset about something, I can see plainly—poor little goose!" he says to himself, smiling at the ease with which he can bring sunshine or shadow upon her life's pathway.

He is not in the least apprehensive of non-success, though he knows that Yolande appears curiously feverish, odd, and contradictory in her manner, and that, although she is talking freely and even gayly about their wedding breakfast and the guests, and the

MOTHER OF TWIN BOYS

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieved Her of Inflammation and Great Weakness

West St. John, N. B.—"I was in a general run-down condition following the birth of my twin boys. I had a great deal of inflammation, with pains and weakness. Finally my doctor recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. He said that your medicine would be the only thing to build me up. I am sure he is right, for I am feeling much better and am gaining in weight, having gone down to ninety-three pounds. I was in bed for over a month, but am up again now. I have recommended the Vegetable Compound to my friends and give you permission to use my letter."—Mrs. ELLEN A. RITCHIE, 23 Rodney St., West St. John, N. B.

There are many women who find their household duties almost unbearable owing to some weakness or derangement. This trouble may be slight, yet cause such annoying symptoms as dragging pains, weakness and a run-down feeling.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for such conditions. It has in many cases relieved these symptoms by removing the cause of them. Mrs. Ritchie's experience is the case of many.

weather and the east wind, and the Channel crossing in the morning, her tones are sharp and brief, her smiles few and cold.

She has not changed her dress, but has wound a scarf of soft yellow lace around her throat, and fastened it with a long gold clasp set with rubies. In her brown velvet gown and the yellow lace scarf, with the rubies glittering like points of fire, with her flushed cheeks and fever-bright eyes, she is strangely pliant and pretty, even to the fastidious eyes of Dallas Glynne.

"By Jove, the little woman knows how to dress artistically!" he tells himself, well pleased. "That is a comfort!"

"That is a very pretty gown you are wearing, Yolande," Captain Glynne graciously remarks aloud to his young wife. "Did you choose it yourself?"

"Yes—partly, and partly through mademoiselle's advice," Yolande replies, with a faint smile. "It is a becoming shade and well cut."

"It is," he agrees, rather surprised to find his compliment has not flattered her with pleasure and gratitude. "Mademoiselle has correct ideas about millinery, if she hasn't about other things," he continues, almost as if he were muttering to himself, while he lights another cigarette. "The gowns I saw this morning on your Aunt Sarjent and some of those other ladies were enough to give one jaundice! Wasn't it pea-green velvet and some yellow fur Mrs. Sarjent wore?"

"Yes—otherwise emerald velvet and light sable," Yolande replies, with the same chill smile and a curling lip. "Aunt Sarjent is a clever, shrewd woman—a good-hearted woman, too; but she possesses no taste in dress. She is vulgar—naturally. We are vulgar people all of us—sprung from the common people, you know."

Captain Glynne crosses his legs, and leans back in his chair, surveying his glib bride with a satisfied smile and a slight frown.

"You are not vulgar," he says in accents of reproof, his smile and frown growing more haughty. "You would not be Mrs. Glynne if you were, I can assure you."

"Should I not?" Yolande inquires, scornfully, looking at him with eyes that blaze—the handsome, self-satisfied, cold-hearted aristocrat who has sacrificed her to his need for money, and spoiled all her life merely to avoid earning his own livelihood.

"Oh, yes, I think I should—so matter how vulgar—in the circumstances!"

She almost hates and despises him at this moment, and yearns fiercely to wound him in some manner to the very core of his selfish heart, to make him taste a little of the misery he has thrust upon her for her daily portion as long as they both shall live.

Captain Glynne drops his cigarette in his amazement—more at the look in his young wife's face than even at the strangeness of her tone and manner. As he stoops to pick it up, the smoldering cigarette burns his fingers; and a keen pang of regret thrills through poor Yolande's tender, womanly heart at witnessing even this small suffering of her false, cruel love. Half a dozen words of tender humility at this moment would change her mood and purposes—and the current of both their lives, it may be—forever. She would weep out the secret of her burning grief and disappointment in her husband's arms, and wildly plead like Beau for even such slight relief as there is left to bestow, for such warmth and comfort as are to be found in the ashes of his burned-out passion for another woman.

"What circumstances?" he demands, imperiously, his dark brows drawing together. "What do you mean, Yolande? You are speaking and acting rather oddly, my dear," he adds, trying to control his rising irritation.

"For there is something wrong; and, if I don't take care, I shall have a scene," he tells himself in some alarm.

"One would think you hadn't vowed all sorts of vows this morning," he says, smiling at her languidly, with a touch of ridicule in his tones—"to be a most loving and dutiful little wife to me!"

The words, the smile, the tone of cynical amusement with her petulance, are as flame to flax. The blood rushes to Yolande's face, crimsoning her very brow, and her brain seems on fire and whirling. She has lost all control of herself in the frenzy of pain and jealous rage, and the wild, mad, taunting words pour out in a torrent.

"So I did; but it was a lie!" she exclaims, clenching her hands and standing up confronting him, stately and vengeful—he has never imagined that gentle Yolande could look like this handsome fury. "It was a lie—a lie, Captain Glynne—as great a lie as your vow was! I'll never be your loving, dutiful wife—never! I would kill myself first! You have deceived me and wronged me, vilely, cruelly, for the sake of that wretched money! Take it—take it all; but leave me free of you and your cruel, cruel falsehood!"

"Have you gone suddenly mad, or are you practicing for amateur theatricals, Yolande, may I ask?" Dallas Glynne demands, rising to his feet, and steadying himself by leaning on the table, for he feels absolutely stunned with shocked surprise for a moment.

The cause of this passionate outbreak reveals itself also to him at the same time, and he is hot and cold with wrath and dismay.

"That double-faced traitress has told her!" he thinks, grinding his teeth. "I'll wring that woman's neck the next time I meet her!"

"You know well the reason I have for this," Yolande says, slowly and hoarsely. Her rage has spent itself already; nothing but her misery and pain remains. "I heard what—that person—mademoiselle said to you this morning, what you said to her. You married me only for money, and now the girl you do love—with a piteous glance of timid hopefulness that waits even now for a word of contradiction—has money, and you can't have her. I wish I had known in time to set you free."

He is sorry for her; he cannot but be sorry for her. The piteous eyes, the trembling, despairing tones touch him deeply. Nevertheless she is not Joyce Murray, the woman he loves. She is only the woman who loves him jealously and passionately, and to whom he is wedded for life. "It's a contumacious nuisance!" he thinks with angry impatience. "I always was afraid of this sort of thing with her!"

"There is no use in wishing impossibilities," he says, in response to her passionate words. "Since you listened to a conversation which you were never intended to hear, you ought to be satisfied that I would never have acted dishonorably toward you."

"What do you call dishonorably?" Yolande says slowly. The last spark of hope is sizzling out now.

The New President Sworn in by His Father

Passive Resistance Must End Before Negotiations Begin—Diamond Robbery on a Liner.

FATHER SWEARS IN SON AS PRESIDENT.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.

John Coolidge, former Vice-President of the United States, who was sworn into office succeeding the late President Harding at an early hour this morning by his aged father in his home at Plymouth, Vermont, has been born and reared, and has spent his life in the United States. He was sworn in at a ceremony at his home in Plymouth, Vermont, at 10 o'clock this morning. He was surrounded by a large number of secret service men and attaches that ever surround a President of the United States. An army of newspapermen were assembled to cover his arrival. The ceremony was broadcast from the Grand Central Pennsylvania station.

REARRANGEMENT OF SCHEDULE OF THE FUNERAL TRAIN.

From there the remains will be taken by special train to Marion, Ohio, the home of Warren Harding, where the funeral services will be held Friday, which will be proclaimed a day of national mourning.

FRANCE INSISTS ON REPARATION PAYMENT.

PARIS, Aug. 3.

Premier Poincaré's recent note to London informed the British Government that France could not negotiate with Germany, until passive resistance in the Ruhr was brought to an end, and the evacuation could not be considered until final agreement was reached, and reparation payments were made or assured. The substance of the note was made public last evening. The French Premier's note also suggested that if the London Government would let Germany know that it did not approve of its policy, that was threatening the ruin of Europe, the situation would be adjusted immediately.

The Expenditure on Liquor.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—The published statement showing a half a million dollars profit on Liquor Sales during the past year call for serious comment. Add to the above profit, the duty, first cost, and the water for dilution also the expenses and the total will represent a business of probably a million and a half. This is undoubtedly larger than the total business conducted by the 40 odd saloons in pre-prohibition days. During Capt. Bonias first year as controller the act was enforced to a very fair degree and the medicinal requirements of the country were supplied by about $75,000 worth of liquor although much of this was no doubt used for beverage purposes.

THE NATION MOURNS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 3.

The nation to-day mourned the passing of its leader, the people of the United States from coast to coast, and in lands to the Gulf, and in territories beyond the seas, bowed their heads in grief for their President was dead.

WEEK-END NOTES.

(I. C. MORRIS.)

CANON LOCKYER, THE HISTORIAN OF TRINITY.

Like other places, Newfoundland has had its share in literary men, who have devoted their talent to the welfare of the country. In the list have been such distinguished names as Toque, Pedley, Harvey, Howley, Pilot, Frowse and Smith; each of whom have left their impress upon the literature and history of Newfoundland. Those authors are all of the past, and it does not seem that many are preparing to take their place, to carry on that good work to which they devoted so much of their time. Our present local writers are none too many; notwithstanding our educational advantages and scholarships; but amongst those who still write, the name of Canon Lockyer has gained a worthy place in the hearts of the people. It can be truly said of Canon Lockyer that he is the Historian of Trinity, and that, with our popular citizen, Mr. Shortis, who has done so much for his country, and especially for Harbour Grace, he has won a foremost place. Canon Lockyer's writings have much in their favor, hence it is that they are eagerly read by all classes of our people, both at home and abroad. The Canon's style is at once interesting and absorbing, and exudes a freshness which makes his writings a source of pleasure, as well as a source of instruction.

Besides this, there is manifested through all the Canon's writings that high spirit of honor and fair play which reveals the gentleman, as well as the scholar. The Canon's contributions may be safely read at the fireside, and be admitted into the family circle, as a source of education and instruction; and they are also worthy of a place in more literary circles; and in all cases they tend to edification.

In addition to the high moral tone of Canon Lockyer's notes, there is attached to them a potential historical value, which is not only an asset at the present time, but will be of greater value in the years to come, when the historians of the future will compile the true record of Newfoundland and its people. This record has yet to be written, and it is from such writings as Mr. Shortis' and Canon Lockyer's and others of their class, that the volumes must be chiefly compiled. Canon Lockyer's contributions reveal close research, and cautious detail, both from a commercial and domestic standpoint. The men, who by their enterprise and industry, made Trinity what it has been, have been justly dealt with by the good Canon, and the men who settled its harbour and blazed the way, and founded its homesteads, have had faithful recognition paid to them. There has been no respect of persons with the good Canon in his work; and whether men came to rule or to serve, whether they brought prestige or penny, it matters not; the record as given by Canon Lockyer speaks for them all—and does their memory ample justice. The Canon has taught Newfoundland many good lessons; and he has revealed to us many interesting facts of our earlier history, which were buried in the archives and recesses of our churches in the outports.

Only a man of Canon Lockyer's diligence and fidelity could successfully bring those statistics to light; and he having clothed his facts in such choice language, and expressed his opinions with such Christian spirit, the value of his work has thus been enhanced; and that which otherwise would perhaps appear dry and uninteresting, has become popular and attractive. It is not amiss to say that Canon Lockyer has won the love of his countrymen, and especially the love of Trinitarians, the world over, for like many other parts of our country, Trinity has sent her sons and daughters far afield. To those especially who have gone, the Canon's writings have been a comfort and a pleasure, and have awakened many memories and touched many chords, which must vibrate with veneration and love. Thus he has made for himself a place in the hearts of the people; and has already a living monument in the sanctity of their thought and appreciation. What Canon Lockyer has written of Trinity may also be written of other parts of Newfoundland. It has been the writer's privilege to look into the records and ledgers of the old outport firms, which one hundred years ago flourished along our coast; and these records contain sufficient data to ascertain and instruct the present generation in many chapters. The pity is, we have not more men of the type of Canon Lockyer to do his work. However, we feel assured that the reading public will endorse these sentiments in favor of the good Canon; and that a thousand hearts will respond to what we have written, and will give it their approval, their blessing and their amen.

The custom of society is to wait until men are gone to place upon their bier and their monument tokens of praise. While this is quite in order, and is commendable, a little more recognition of service may not be out of place while men are doing it. Hence we accord our "well done" to Canon Lockyer; and trust he shall be spared for many years to serve his Church as well as his country; and that as he has brought blessing and instruction to thousands of hearts already, he will continue the same, and add more laurels to his good work.

As many firms who are now languishing would be on the road to prosperity if they received a fair share of the money now consumed by the illegal liquor business of the government.

Yours truly,

BUSINESS.

THE EVENING TELEGRAM

THE EVENING TELEGRAM, LIMITED, PROPRIETORS. All communications should be addressed to The Evening Telegram, Ltd., and not to individuals.

St. John's, Newfoundland, Saturday, August 4, 1923.

August 4th and Its Lesson.

Come the three corners of the world in arms. And we shall shock them: nought shall make us rue, If England to itself do rest but true.
Nine years ago to-day the message sped around the world announcing Britain's determination to stand by her obligations to her neighbours across the Channel, and to use the whole of her strength and her resources to resist the Monster of Oppression that was threatening to destroy everything that stood for right and freedom and security.

A Signal Success.

Quite apart from politics, if that be possible in referring to matters political, the success achieved by Mr. W. Walsh yesterday in the House of Assembly is deserving of special praise. He was informed by the Prime Minister that, in response to his oft repeated plea on behalf of the worn out fisherman, a further grant of $15,000 towards Old Age Pensions would be voted. Previously this amount had been used for the maintenance of the Royal Naval Reserve, now unfortunately no longer in existence, and no more worthy object could have been chosen upon which to expend the amount.

Magistrates Court.

A drunk in charge of a horse was granted his release. A resident of the Higher Levels, arrested by the police at the instance of his wife for being drunk and disorderly in his home, was also allowed to go. The wife failed to appear against him. Two sailors belonging to the Norwegian steamer Modesta, who deserted their ship at Harbor Deep, were arraigned in court this morning at the instance of Mr. F. Miller, purser S. S. Portia, claiming passage money from England to St. John's.

Silver Cliff Mine.

Mr. W. A. MacKay, who is at present in the city from Argentina, reports that everything is working out very satisfactory at Silver Cliff. A recent analysis of the concentrates shows an exceptionally high value of silver. An order for a trial shipment of several hundred tons has been received. The ore has already been mined and as soon as it is put through the concentrator the shipment will be made.

GOVERNMENT. Argyle left Argentina 3.15 p.m. yesterday on Meratehen route. Clyde left Moreton's Harbor 1.30 p.m. yesterday, outward. Glenoe leaving Argentina this afternoon. Home left Erie Bay 5.35 p.m. yesterday, going north. Kyle at Port aux Basques. Sagona left Hr. Grace 5 a.m., outward. Malakoff left Clarendville 8.30 a.m. outward. No report steamers Wren or Watchful. Ring 1346 for Neary's Dry Kinding Wood.—Jul 12, 1923

The Hour, What of the Man?

There is a tide in the affairs of men which taken at the flood leads on to fortune. —SHAKESPEARE. In our Newfoundland, my brothers, in this Isle of Terra Nova. There are shameful deeds and charges laid against the People's Rulers. In the lofty seats of Statecraft, in the Lodges of the Fathers, Where we look for noblest virtues— Where we look for highest wisdom—

There alas we turn in sorrow. Turn with dark and dire suspicion, Saying as we walk in sadness, "Has all honesty departed? Must our substance e'er be wasted? Must our will be robbed of profit? Must we be dispelled forever By the montebank and boaster?"

Now the Public Burden cripples, And we shall shock them: nought shall make us rue, If England to itself do rest but true.
In despair they're flying seaward, Fleeting as from out a doomed land, From a plighted God stricken doomed land. To the far land of the stranger! "When shall cease this waste, my brothers, Cease this exodus begotten by unscrupulous betrayers Of the People's trust and honor?"

The Vanitie Shoppe.

We draw attention of our many readers to the opening announcement of the Vanitie Shoppe by Mrs. Jean Hearn (nee Jean McKay). Mrs. Hearn has just returned from New York, after taking a six months' course at the well known Beauty Parlor of Carlson & Carlson. The proprietors of this shop won the recent competition in that city for Permanent Hair Waving. We bespeak a successful business career for Mrs. Hearn.

Shipping.

S. S. Silvia left New York at noon to-day for Halifax and this port. The ship has about 70 passengers making the round trip. S. S. Sable I. left North Sydney at 2 p.m. for this port. Schr. Harriet, with a cargo of fish from Earle & Sons, arrived at Oporto on Wednesday after a splendid passage of 14 days. S. S. Stella Maris has cleared from Port aux Basques with a cargo of fish. S. S. Hangarland has sailed from Agathana for Sydney with 10,000 tons of wheat. S. S. Wataka has arrived at Oporto from Sydney with 2,000 tons of coal. Schr. Maris (Danish) has arrived at Fogo salt laden from Cadiz. Schr. Energy is clearing for Salmon Bight, Labrador, to load fish for market.

Fishery Reports.

Fortune Bay.—From English Harbor West to Honey Point up to July 31st, two thousand quintals of fish had been landed. There are 20 dories and skiffs operating. Owing to there being no belt supply fishing is being done with nets. The trap fishing in this section is over. The lobster fishery has closed. The factories putting up from 3 to 4 cases each. Burgeo and LaPelle.—From Red Island to Connaire sixty fishing boats and 8 traps have secured 3250 quintals of fish to date. The prospects however, are improving. During the past week squid struck in and hook and line men are doing well. The lobster fishery now closing was a blank.

Train Notes.

Thursday's west bound express arrived at Port aux Basques 3 hours late. The incoming express left Howley 8.30 a.m. 6th of tomorrow morning. The usual cross country express will go out to-morrow at 1 p.m.

In Passing.

There are to-day three hundred old age fishermen thanking Mr. W. J. Walsh, M.H.A., for his successful effort in securing for them pensions which had not been for his continuous agitation would have not been awarded them. Mr. Walsh deserves well the plaudits tendered to him in the Assembly yesterday but we doubt much if they contain the same satisfaction to the member as will the appreciation of the toilers who will share in this fifteen thousand dollars allocated to them by virtue of the strong appeals made by their representative on many occasions particularly that of last evening.

The question asked in the House yesterday relative to the reported Minute-of-Council which was passed by the Executive, providing for the purchase of two sealing steamers is one that should be of much interest to the public. According to information received we learn that a resolution of a similar character was considered by the late executive but was turned down and that one of the first acts of the present administration was to endorse same. From the same source we learn that these two steamers which will be outfitted for the seal fishery will be used in the summer months in the West India trade.

It is the intention of the sponsors of the resolution to have the vessels freight raw sugars from Cuba and other centres to Port Union or some other relegated spot where refineries will be erected. We bring the matter to the attention of the Assembly in the hope that our information which is not of an official character is not correct as such a procedure only invites additional scandals to the many already unearthen as the result of incompetent and indifferent politicians who seek to have the Government fulfil their personal election pledges at the expense of an already overburdened people.

Funeral Obsequies of Late President.

In sorrow unutterable San Francisco last night bade good-bye to all that was mortal of Warren G. Harding, who until a few hours ago was President of the United States. Last night thousands lined the streets leading from the Palace Hotel, where President Harding died Thursday night, to the Southern Pacific Station, where the body was placed on board a special train to be taken to Washington. Ninety and a half hours will be occupied for the trip. When it ends at ten thirty Tuesday morning the body will rest awhile in the White House where President Harding served the nation for nearly two and a half years, and then in the Capitol, where as Senator from Ohio he represented his native State for six years. Funeral services will be held in the Capitol Rotunda late Wednesday, and then will begin the final journey to Marlon, Ohio.

Calcutta Gone to Halifax.

According to a message from the Sub-Collector at Blanc Sablon, the H.M.S. Calcutta arrived at Forteau on Sunday and left again on Tuesday morning for Halifax. The Sub-Collector also reports that the fishery to-date has been a failure and the prospects are poor. Mosquito Oil at Stafford's 20c. per bottle.—July 30, 1923. Rosalind Delayed. S. S. Rosalind did not get away until 3 p.m. on the three hours delay in the schedule being due to the fact that the longshoremen did not work the ship on Thursday evening or night, contending that the latter afternoon should be observed as Regatta Day. The delay to the ship will likely be made up between Halifax and New York.

Portia Arrives From Northward.

FOOB FISHERY REPORTED. The Northern Coastal steamer Portia, Capt. Field, arrived in port at 2 o'clock this morning after a round trip of ten days. The ship went as far North as Quirpon, the weather was moderate, and no difficulty was experienced in making the various ports of call. Capt. Field brings very discouraging reports of the fishery. There is no fish at Gray Island, Conche, Englee and St. Anthony. While there is no sign South of these points, when the Portia was at Quirpon a good sign of fish was reported, while hook and liners were doing fairly well at Fish Hot Islands. At Hooping Harbour and La Seie there is some fish going with the hook and liners, but traps are doing practically nothing. When the ship was at La Seie coming South, one trap accounted for 25 barrels, the first for the season. The weather has been very cold with B.N.W. winds prevailing the greater part of the time. The Portia brought a part freight and the following passengers:—Messrs. J. Clouston, Cole, D. Sackery, S. Blackler, Faulkner, J. W. Brown, Bishop, C. Barnes, J. Avery; Messadams Butt, James and child, Blackler, Miffin, Elliot, James, Hurdley and boy, Bishop; Misses Butt, Blackler, Stewart, Elliot, Goodyear, Newhook, Tobin, Goodwin, Button. The ship sails again on Wednesday next, taking a full list of passengers, mostly round-trippers.

SPORTOGRAPHS

ATTENTION, SWEEP HOLDERS!
The correct official time for the FISHERMEN'S RACE on Wednesday July 4th. Thursday's papers will be 10.15 and "Sporto" attempted to correct it yesterday. However, through a typographical error it was made 10.15 and this was missed in the proofing. It was not until the paper was on the press that the typographer's error was discovered. The Telegram extends apologies to those whom it caused to mislead.

HEARWARD BOY TO OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE

The fleet heels of H. M. Hearward, Catus College, Cambridge, will be the way to an Oxford-Cambridge regatta on the track and field events from Harvard and Yale at the University Stadium here to-day.

The twelve events were closely contested. The Britishers winning six events, the Americans three, and the Americans one. In such meets the first counts, so the score stood 6-3-1.

The 100 yard sprinter, took the lead in the broad jump—winning the Britishers call a Hat-trick or triple win.

Yale wasn't up to form. He failed to take second in the broad jump, although he has done much better than the winner did to-day.

Tanks Spring Surprise.
The tanks spring surprise, the Yankee team, surprised gamely and sprang a couple of surprises, particularly when Gage and the Ellis ran the quarter mile of Princeton, N.J., in an Oxonian, off his feet in the furlongs. Chapman won the mile in 50.35, an unexpected point for the visitors.

The light blue middle distance were too strong for the Yale team. Barnes, runners, and Lowe in half and Davis in the mile registered wins.

Yale kicked in with a solitary when Huhn stepped the low hurdle in 25.15, and Dickinson's tie the Harvard in the high hurdle, settled matters.

Other American Firsts.
The firsts were scored by Tibbets of Harvard in the two mile, and Yale in the high hurdles, and Yale, the vault, and East-Harvard, shotput.

A large crowd witnessed the regatta which in other years have been held in the exclusive Queen's grounds at Baron's court.

The best sportsmanship prevailed throughout, losers hastening to congratulate winners, and the teams fraternizing in the friendliest spirit.

A large representation from the American colony here saw their favorite crown to defeat. The Duke of Devonshire of York applauded the winners.

The thrilling event of the day was the two-mile run. McInnis of Oxford favored to win, got away in the lead and held it until half way around the final lap. Then Tibbets of Harvard came up with gigantic strides and went past the tiring Oxonian to win easily.

C.L.B. DRAW WITH B.L.S.
A small bunch only of fans turned up to see the Brigade make a draw with the "last years" champions. 'Twas a tight spot on the whole and had some of the excitement of the game. The outcome of the game was a draw, 1-1, and finding it easy, duplicated the stunt shortly before crosser. It looked like a 2 to 0 win for them, as more than half of the period had elapsed before Bill Hadden found the net for the Irish. Steve Constantine emulated his example shortly afterwards thus evening up the score.

The next game will be the C.E.I. and Guards on Monday night which completes the schedule. Then the postponed games come on and as there are some good clashes in the holdovers, the fans are looking forward to them with interest. By the way, may we ask the League officials what has become of the Old Timers' Game in aid of the Marine Disasters' Fund.

The general Secretary and trusty guardian of the funds announced with a flourish about a week or so ago.

FISHERMEN'S RACE.
GLOUCESTER, Mass.—The Boston schooner Mayflower, twice ruled out International fishermen's contests because of her yacht-like lines and great sail area, will have her chance in the open fishermen's race in Massachusetts Bay, Aug. 27, for the trophy offered by Sir T. Lipton. This event, open to the fishing schooners of all the world, will be raced under "Fishermen's Rules," with no restriction as to hull and sail measurements or ballast. It will be part of the programme for the celebration of Gloucester's 300th anniversary as a port.

Three other U.S. boats, the twenty of the Mayflower became known to-day when it was announced that three other U.S. schooners had entered for the Lipton trophy. The Henry Ford, defeated last year by the Lunenburg Bluenose, for the International Fishermen's Cup, is one of these. The Elizabeth Howard, runner-up to the Ford in last year's U.S. elimination races, is another; while the third is the new schooner Shamrock, now being fitted out at the Essex yards for a Boston fish firm. The new Columbia, an applicant for international honors at Halifax in October, will not race here, as she is engaged in salt fishing on the banks.

No Entries From Nova Scotia.
No entries are expected from Nova Scotia, where the owners are said to be reserving their resources for the international regatta next autumn. There is still hope of an entry from Newfoundland, the Commanche. The race will be twice around a 15 mile triangle, five miles to a side. The centennial committee announces that there will be no postponement on account of the weather and the skipper themselves profess to be praying for a northeast gale.

A.A.A. ARRANGING MEET.
A challenge race over the 5-mile distance is being arranged by the A.A.A. between Bell and O'Toole, the proceeds of which will go towards the Halifax Fund. Bell, however, cannot be reconducted before August 25th as he is very much underweight since the strenuous training for the Regatta in which he rowed twice. Racing enthusiasts can therefore look forward to a meet between them about the end of August.

YOU SAID IT!
If a golfer walks around the links for his health, any mail carrier ought to knock out Jack Dempsey.

Every session during his ten years in the House representing the district of Placentia and St. Mary's he had put forth this plea for old age and worn out fishermen who had given the best years of their lives in developing the interests of their native land. He said he would never grow tired advocating thus as the cause was a just and worthy one. Mr. Walsh made a whole-hearted appeal to the Premier and the Government who were prepared at all times to vote salaries of $3500 in a much less deserving cause. The worn out fishermen were without exception the most deserving class in Newfoundland and there were some hundreds of them on a waiting list. He in closing strongly urged the Government to consider the matter seriously and that something be done immediately. Mr. Walsh's plea for the aged fisherman was the plaudits of the Assembly as did also the announcement of the Prime Minister who likewise compliment Mr. Walsh.

At the House.
MR. WALSH SUCCEEDS IN HAVING NAVAL RESERVE VOTE OF $15,000 TRANSFERRED TO OLD AGE PENSIONS.
Opposition Oppose Appointment of Hon. A. News to the Position of Deputy Auditor General.
The speaker took the chair at 3.15 and after the reading of the minutes of the last sitting the following questions were asked:—
Mr. Sullivan—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister to inform the House what is the Government policy in connection with Export Duty on Cod Oil and Scotch-cured Herring. An Export Duty on codfish has been removed, it would appear that the continuation of Export Duty on Cod Oil and herring is more of an oversight than anything else.
Mr. F. J. Cashin—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister to lay the following information on the table of the House: (a) Who is Acting General Manager of the railway at the present time; (b) what salary is being paid him; (c) has the Government instructed the Acting General Manager to purchase the winter's supply of coal; (d) have tenders been called for the coal; (e) if tenders have been called for why not; (f) from whom has the coal been purchased and at what price—per short ton or long ton; F.O.B. Sydney or C.L.F. Newfoundland ports; if purchased F.O.B. Sydney what freight is being paid.
Mr. F. F. Moore—To ask Hon. the Colonial Secretary to table a detailed statement showing amounts due the Railway Commission or the Reid Mill Co., operating the railway on Government account for freights, etc., since July 1st, 1921; also state by whom such amounts, if any, are due.
In answer to the first, the Prime Minister stated that the matter as yet has not been considered by the Government.
The Premier in replying to No. 2, said that Mr. H. J. Russell was acting Manager and other information relative to the same question would be tabled later.
Number three question was in course of preparation by the Auditor General.
Mr. Walsh gave notice of question as follows:—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister to inform the House if a Minute-of-Council has been passed authorizing the construction of one or more steamers to be used at the seal fishery and West Indian trade, so to inform the House to whom the contract is given and what are terms of such contract and to lay on the table of the House copy of Minute-of-Council or any other document relating to same.
Mr. Moore—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister to table a statement showing the number, position and salary of appointees to the Civil Service since March 1st, 1923.
The House then went into Committee of the Whole on Supply when the estimates were considered. The votes for several departments were passed whilst others were deferred pending information which will be furnished next week.
Mr. W. J. Higgins intimated the intention of the Opposition to oppose the appointment of Hon. A. News, late Editor of the Advocate to the position of Deputy Auditor General. The Leader of the Opposition said it was a legacy of the late administration and there was no reason given as to why experienced men like Donnelly and others who faithfully performed the duties of the office for many years should be thus superseded by a man who hardly knew his way around the Government offices. It will be 5 or 6 years to learn the methods of the various institutions. He said it was an outrage to force such an appointment which was provided for in the additional estimates and asked that full consideration be given this matter before asking the House to vote on it.
Mr. Sullivan, who had previously asked the question regarding the pension awarded to W. J. Blandford who had been in the employ of the Government for two or three years, pointed out the unfair conduct of the Government in voting him a big pension and appointing another man to fill his position.
Mr. Higgins again availed of the opportunity to question the wisdom of three residents of the district of St. George's who were in the Government service and who, according to information received, were younger and more qualified to do their work than those whom the Government appointed in their places. He said it was a case of awarding party followers at the expense of the people. Before the votes of the departments concerned are passed the Premier will submit further information respecting same.
MR. WALSH ADVOCATES AND IS SUCCESSFUL IN SECURING A BIG VOTE FOR OLD AGE PENSIONS.
At this stage of the proceeding Mr. Walsh, who is commonly known in the House as the "friend of the fishermen" brought forth what many humorously term "This Hardy Annual" Old Age Pensions. In discussing the pension list, Mr. Walsh delivered a very impressive speech, he requested that the old age pension vote be increased.

OLD COUNTRY CRICKET.
LONDON.—In the match to-day between Surrey and Kent in the County Cricket Championship fixtures, P. G. H. Fender, Captain of the Surrey team, reached one thousand runs for the season, and also took his hundredth wicket. He is the first man this season to accomplish the double feat.
Surrey defeated Kent by 222 runs. Surrey 272 and 262 for seven wickets. Kent 125 and 126. This was the first time Surrey had defeated Kent in Kent since 1897.
Northants defeated Derby by one wicket. Derby 105 and 182. Northants 155 and 133 for nine wickets.
Lancashire defeated Warwick by an innings and fifteen runs; Warwick 122 and 112. Lancashire 249 for eight wickets, declared. Hallows 114 not out.
Notts defeated Worcester by 124 runs. Notts 271 and 218 for five wickets. Worcester 125 and 239. McLean 121.
Hampshire defeated Middlesex by eight wickets. Middlesex 279 and 263. Hampshire 443 and 190 for two wickets. Mead 145.
Yorkshire defeated Gloucester by ten wickets. Gloucester 133 and 134. Yorkshire 250 for three wickets, declared, and 38 for no wickets. Holmes 123 not out.

BANKER PRESENTS PRIZES.
Mr. B. L. Mitchell, former Manager of the Royal Bank here, has, we note from the Halifax Herald, offered a very valuable prize for the Bankers' Tandem canoe race, open to members of the staffs of the various banks and branches of Halifax and Dartmouth in the Natal Day Regatta being held there to-day.

LOSES CHAMPIONSHIP.
D. Hadfield, who won the world's championship sculls from Hoover of the United States, held it only very briefly, for he in turn lost it to J. Paddon, of Sydney, Australia. The title was at stake.
BRIGHTS!
On the road from anywhere, dim your lights!
There's another on the road with equal lights.
If you're driving with a glare,
You are adding to his care.
And, by golly, that's not rich.
So beware! Am I right?
Dim your lights! Dim your lights!
Damn those brights!

assembly to the one and a half million dollars which was charged up to "Relief," which he had no hesitation in saying was not spent in relief. He asked that the books of the department be submitted to the House so that the members might have an opportunity to examine the accounts. Mr. Sullivan also called the House's attention to the fact of the horse and sheep stock on the model farm, which Hon. Mr. Downey will enlighten the Assembly more fully at the next sitting.

HALF OF THE STORY WILL NEVER BE TOLD.
Sir Michael Cashin supported the views of Mr. Higgins in the matter, and asked that the books be carried up to the House. All the country has got so far by way of information, is broad generalities, but of particulars nothing, which is not good enough. Speaking of the loose way in which public accounts have been handled, he said there has never been anything like it in any country, and half the story has not yet been told. He spoke of the Experimental Farm as a scandal, and suggested that it be closed up and the animals sent down to some auctioneer to be sold.
Mr. Moore drew attention to a peculiar state of affairs at the General Hospital, where the Associate House Surgeon, Dr. Fox receives $600 a year while visiting doctors get as much as $1,150.
Mr. Vinlocombe wanted to know why the vote for Escasonia goes on while that institution no longer exists, but is now being used as a sort of gathering place for gamblers.
The Prime Minister said he would have enquiries made.
The House adjourned at 5.45 to sit again on Monday at 8 o'clock.

Our Riches From the Sea

A New England industry that cannot possibly move West is that of fishing. In that branch, at least, our geographical situation gives us a permanent advantage. While in a certain sense it is one of the most hazardous of occupations, one traditionally based on luck and chance, it is in another sense one of the surest. The demand for fish as human food is not likely to abate, and with the whole ocean at our disposal the supply is in no danger of giving out. Though the fish do not run evenly every year, they always come back. Fishing is one of the oldest of human employments, and it is likely to be permanent.

New Englanders have always been fishermen. Many of them are still so employed, but of all our industries fishing is perhaps the most haphazardly organized. While there have been improvements in methods of catching the fish, in treating and storing it, there is yet much to be done, and our methods of distribution are both costly and archaic. As an illustration, suppose that fish and other forms of marine foods were distributed as regularly and efficiently as our petroleum products are to-day. Being perishable, they are, of course, more difficult to handle, but there is plenty of room for improvement.

One of the standard dishes every French restaurant provides, at least in Paris and other cities, is "Moules a la mariniere." Seasoned with herbs, they are delicious and not expensive. Now the mussels found along the New England coast are as tender as those picked on the rocks of Brittany; only our people do not know how to use them. Another marine dish, served in all "popular" restaurants at least, is "Rate au beurre." It is our scorned "skates" properly cooked and served. Down on Cape Cod the trap nets are regularly clogged with skate, which is only thrown back into the water. There is no market for skate, say the fishermen, except in Philadelphia, and to send there costs more than the fish brings. Every high tide on the outer Cape shore washes up thousands of skate, on which the gulls make their meals. The same is true of a flat fish the natives call "sand pads." It is a delicious fish, but somehow the demand around Boston for any kind of flounder is never very great. In New York prices are much higher, but to send a barrel of fish from Cape Cod to New York by rail is both expensive and uncertain. Yet every night the New York boat goes through the Cape Cod canal, but does not stop. "If we could put our fish on board that boat," say the Cape Cod fishermen, "we could be sure it would be in New York the next morning."

In the marketing of fish products we have much to learn from the Scandinavian countries, as well as from France. Even on Cape Cod Norwegian smoked "sardines," or sprats, are sold in every grocery store. In Norway, where the soil is poorer than ours, one family out of every six gains its living from fish—the principal article of export. In Sweden there has been during the past few years an active propaganda to make better use of sea food. University professors make research experiments to determine the movements of fish, how to catch them and how to prepare them for market. Books are published frequently on marine life. Lectures on the same subject are common. This summer special "fish fairs" have been held in several cities, showing how fish is caught and how it can best be utilized both in public institutions and in the homes.

In June the Swedish government made an appropriation for the sending of samples of salted fish to Spain and other countries where the Swedish fishermen hope to compete with the Norwegians.

There are, of course, other riches to be drawn from the sea besides fish. Our civilization is also certain to require more and more motive power and some method may yet be devised to harness the tides that flow in and out of so many New England bays and tidal rivers, winter and summer, dry seasons and wet ones, with

WOMAN'S COMPENSATION.

Grow old along with me.
The best is yet to be,
The last hour of life for which the first was made;
Our times are in his hand
Who saith, "A whole I planned,
Youth shows but half; trust God;
see all, nor be afraid!"

— Browning.

Some weeks ago I wrote about the inevitable sadness mixed with her joy that comes to a wife when she sees her grown-up daughter join her husband in the sports and amusements in which she herself used to be his comrade, but for which she no longer has the strength nor the appetite.

A Letter Friend has rebuked me. Here is what she says:

The Happiest Moments.

"I have just read your article on 'The Woman and Life,' and I think you are wrong in thinking a mother feels sad in seeing her daughter supplant her in many ways. I am so unfortunate as to have no daughter; kindly sons, but my envy is all, not for the young people who are taking the mother's old part in life, but for the mothers who have the joy of living again their old happiness in their daughters' young lives.

"It is twice as much fun and happiness to me to see 'the children' happy as it ever was to me to play the part they are playing. When I see the daughters of my friends playing, dancing, swimming, anything young and joyous, and then look at my old friend, the mother's beaming face, I know beyond doubt that she is having the happiest moments of her life.

Mothers Rather Than Wives.

"I suppose it may be that I am of that class of women who are mothers rather than wives, but isn't that best and even natural for us who have passed beyond the mating period?"

"I am one of the fortunate few of whom people say that I am better looking at 45 than at 25. But if I am it is in a different way, for my hair is almost white, my former slenderness grown portly, and I look every day of my age.

"But to me, at least, middle age is no tragedy but a time of harvest and fulfillment. I am far happier than I was at 25, and old age and even wrinkles hold no terrors for me. Why do people think they must chase the fleeting joys and ways of youth forever? Why not take each age as it comes—each with its own joys and compensations."

A Mellowed Middle Age.

I don't like to be rebuked, but I like that rebuke. It is such a beautiful picture of middle age as it should be. I don't quite agree with her that it is always so. I have seen women who have hung back and fought against growing older with a bitterness that crowded the natural joys of mellowed and matured middle age out of their lives. But I do agree that the picture she paints of a mother who lives a second youth in her children's youth, is the more natural. And certainly the more beautiful.

There is no question but what Nature, by giving woman the larger role in the drama of creation, has penalized her physically. But perhaps this greater ability to enjoy her children's joy than the father has, is the spiritual compensation.

equal abundance. There are no such opportunities in the prairie states. There is enough energy sweeping up and down Bass river on Cape Cod twice a day to light and perhaps heat the whole Cape instead of by coal transported from Pennsylvania by rail.

Then there are the salt water minerals which some day may be extracted by some more economical process than is known to-day. In the past there have been salt works along our shores, and we may see them again, though in less primitive form. Sea water contains many things besides ordinary cooking salt. At the current Gothenburg Exposition this fact is being visualized through the display of a glass tube, representing a cubic meter of sea water. Alongside of it are smaller cubes, corresponding to the amounts of different minerals contained in that larger cube. From the water of a single bay a chemistry professor has calculated that enough minerals can be obtained, including silver, gold and radium, to meet the annual Swedish budget 300 times over. He has also devised a special evaporating tank. The main hitch, of course, is the power to pump up the water, but this he intends to obtain from windmills. Air power for such purposes was used in New England generations ago. It may be so employed again.

But whether evaporated or not, the sea water along our shores possesses curative properties which will always be in demand. It is an asset which helps to make New England the incomparable summer resort and vacation playground that it is. Its advantages in this respect can never be shipped West. Entertaining summer boarders is a form of export, which annually brings New England large sums, and on these we can always count.

Talented Local Singer Will Appear at Nickel.

MISS ELEANOR MEWS SINGS ON MONDAY NIGHT.

On Monday night, Miss Eleanor Mews, the well known local mezzo soprano soloist will appear in favorite renditions at the above theatre. Miss Mews' singing has aroused demonstrative enthusiasm, and her selection of solos is calculated to please most tastes. She is an artist to her finger-tips, and such singers are not to be heard every day of the year.

The picture attraction is of an unusual high quality, being Louis J. Gasnier's newest super-special entitled "Good Women." The story really sounds a warning to women against being carried away by the enthusiasm of political or business life, and points out that after all the woman's place is in the home; that she is the bulwark of the world, and

THE COMPETITOR.

Dave Doodad is a spidder whose sense is rather slim; he always knocks the dealer who may compete with him. Says he, "Old Hystack Horner has a s methods Berce and punk; his store around the corner is full of worthless junk. He bilks the foolish laddies who with him spend their brass; he sells them finnan haddies when they go there for bass. Upon a coin he pounces like some relentless hound, and gives eleven ounces when you demand a pound. I surely wouldn't trust him an inch, so help me John; his crookedness will bust him before the year is gone." I call on Hystack Horner when I am tired of Dave, grown weary of the scornor who talks of chest and knave. "What think you of your rival?" I ask this Hystack wight, who says, "The trade revival is growing day and night; the business fairly races, and I'm so busy now I am not keeping cases on Doodad or his frau. The way that things are humming there is no chance in view to watch Dave's every coming, and every going too. Hard times, I think, are planted, prosperity's in reach, and so I take for granted the fact that Dave's a peach." This Hystack's tolling gladly, and sees his assets rise, and Dave is sighing sadly, while he swats the flies.

Religious Ceremony.

AT THE PRESENTATION CONVENT, CATHEDRAL SQUARE.

Tuesday last, the Feast of St. Ignatius, the illustrious founder of the Jesuit Order, through whose instrumentality so many souls have been drawn into God's Kingdom...

The bride of Christ who made to Him the irrevocable dedication of herself by pronouncing their final vows were Sister Mary Bridget Gose...

The ceremony was conducted in the most impressive manner, for our Holy Mother, the Church, deems it but fitting to honor the self-renunciation of religious consecration with a ceremonial which is typical of the holocaust offered and the blessing bestowed.

Right Rev. Monsignor McDermott, Vicar General of the Archdiocese, presided at the ceremony, with Rev. Dr. Carter as Master of Ceremonies. There were also present Rev. P. J. Kennedy (Convent Chaplain), Rev. T. Flynn, B.A. (Chaplain St. Bonaventure's College), Rev. Joseph Connors and Rev. M. J. Kennedy (Cathedral).

The S.P.A. tent was a great success thanks to Mount Cashel, Messrs. A. V. Ross and Chas. F. Lester, and many other kind friends who assisted with donations.

Regarding a communication which appeared in one of the daily papers of the 26th inst., in reference to the destruction of plants, etc., at Bowling Park, the Superintendent reported he had gone into the matter and found nothing to warrant cause for complaint...

Communication of Pope's Furniture Factory regarding annoyance caused them by the St. John's property, and the fact that the insurance rates have been considerably increased owing to the building being a fire hazard...

Application of M. J. Murphy to repair houses 38 and 40 Hutchings St. was referred to the Engineer, as the buildings in question are in the fire zone.

As Others See Us

And as we see Ourselves.

(By OBSERVATOR.)

"Things look pretty equally, it must be allowed. And I don't see much sign of a bow in the cloud."

WHEN SILENCE BECOMES BETRAYAL OF TRUST.

At this juncture, and as long as the present uncertain and disquieting condition of things continues, public sentiment should be freely and forcibly expressed regarding the actions of the late Administration. There are times when silence becomes betrayal of trust, and when a great cause may be ruined by the weakness of its friends: times when the truest charity is the clearest speech, and when love for the many who are bewildered and pleading for light must overbear the love for an individual. To speak a truth needed for the helping of thousands is obedience to the Law of Compassion and not a breach thereof. I am told that some of the statements in my last article will injure me with "the powers that be." If that be so I cannot help it. It matters not at all that I should suffer, or that I should lose influence where and when most people are anxious to gain it. Personalities rise and fall like ripples on a lake. Generations come and go, and the transient reputation of any one person like myself is too trivial to be regarded; but it matters much that in the great struggle between right and wrong, between good and evil, between the true and the false, we should not allow a political structure to be buttressed by a belief that we know to be untrue, and that we should not cast into the stream of human thought the poison of a lie, to add it to all the poison already there, and so strengthen the destructive agencies which long after this personality has perished will be striving to slay honest political life among men here. The deathless Self within the personality cares not for the transitory praise or blame of party or faction, but its influence for the helping of the Colony in this emergency is impeded and delayed by every lie that adds its tiny contribution to the illusions which envelop our political life to-day.

"MUGWUMP" AND ITS MEANING.

Speaking of politics reminds me that the new English Premier, Mr. Baldwin, has applied humorously to himself the word "mugwump," and not for the first time. It is a not very euphonious relic of the Red Indian. In modern American phraseology it signifies roughly a non-party man, but its original meaning was practically identical with our "bigwig." It is a curious word to find in the Bible, but it appears in its Indian form in John Eliot's Massachusetts Bible of 1663, corresponding to the "dukes" of Genesis and Exodus. Here is probably the secret of his (Mr. Baldwin's) success in the House of Commons. He puts his thoughts, not fearing, into words. He is simple, straightforward and sincere. The House believes in his sincerity and is prepared to take his word. His Conservative followers have a great personal liking for him, while the opposition groups have an un concealed respect for him. The House trusts him. It knows instinctively that he would not allow that two and two sometimes make four, and sometimes a little more or less according to the needs of the moment. It knows that he would not give expediency the exclusive right of way. Now, this is just the kind of Prime Minister we need in Newfoundland to-day. Will the Hon. W. R. Warren measure up to our requirements? Perhaps he will. Let us patiently wait and see! In one respect, at least, there's a recognizable similarity between Mr. Warren and Mr. Baldwin. The latter told his party that he was prepared to go into the wilderness rather than stay with Mr. Lloyd George as Prime Minister. Everybody recognized the sincerity of his words: "I do not know what the majority here or in the country may think about it. I said what I thought was right, and I stick all through to what I believe to be right."

"THE BUDGET SYSTEM IN THE FAMILY."

Under the foregoing caption I find a very suggestive article in one of the American magazines. The "budget" principle is certainly a good and safe one to adopt, and in a community like ours, at the present time, would be incalculably beneficial in its results. There are very few people who cannot estimate pretty accurately what their income is going to be. And just as a business, to be successful, must earn more than it spends, so should a family live within its means and have a surplus at the end of the year. Micawber, Dickens tells us, was one of the most enthusiastic proponents of this practice; but, like many of us, he never practiced what he preached, in spite of the fact that his sermons in this subject were full of hard common sense. Perhaps a good method of incorporating the budget system in a family is to begin by keeping a detailed record of all expenditures; keep this record for two or three months, or whatever period is necessary for an accurate estimate. Most people will find that an astonishing percentage of income goes for the frills of life, the little luxuries and extravagances, and being cramped for funds is not usually due to the high cost of necessities, but to carelessness in small extra expenditures which the aggregate mount up surprisingly. The budget system is designed to stop the leaks, the many small leaks which combined together, increase the load of the domestic ship so tremendously.

PROTECTION AGAINST THE PROBABLE "RAINY DAY."

Of course, every family, like every business, has certain fixed charges which must be borne; there are rent, food, heat, light, clothing, education, insurance, and other items which cannot be evaded. The problem is to find out what percentage of income must go to pay for each of these things, and then see what is left over for amusement, for doctors, dentists, for emergencies, and for savings. All well-planned budgets should provide for savings, the protection every family needs against the probable rainy day. Yes, and taxes must also be taken into consideration. Each item has its special appropriation, and must not be exceeded. In order to make the budget workable, records of expenditures must be kept and charged against the proper account. This means a certain amount of book-keeping and trouble which many people are unwilling to assume, or, having started, fall to keep up after a little time. But results are certain to justify the trouble, as people who have undertaken the job and stuck to it are willing to testify.

A BASIS ON WHICH TO WORK.

There are few of us who have not heard how large a percentage of his income a man should spend for rent, for clothing, for amusement, and so on. With most people the item of rent is already known, determined for them usually, and with this item as a basis on which to work there is no reason why each family cannot make up its own budget. In planning it, it is well to make certain that every item is covered, and it is better to overestimate expenditure than to be too optimistic and find that the amount needed was placed too low. And saving should be regarded as an item of expense just as much as food, and not looked upon as a fund from which loans can be made at any time to make up deficits under other headings. The reason so many family budgets fail is because the families are not honest with themselves; like unscrupulous politicians, they falsify their accounts and commit breaches of book-keeping practice that would cost them their positions were they working for some one else. But if they will live up to the rules of the game, they will find that it is a real game, the winning of which brings its own reward!

THE GOVERNMENT AND THE PRESS.

In opposition to the belief generally current on the subject in political circles, I believe (1) that a Government is served by the existence of an independent Opposition press; (2) that a Government is not served by the existence of a partially subsidized press; and (3) that all Governments are also served (that is, benefited) by a free press. At first sight these propositions may seem to be absurd and not susceptible of proof. A little discussion of them, I trust, will show that they are not only sound but also reasonable and right. How, then, let me ask, is a Government that is, in any Government served by an opposition or independent press? I answer, "In all combinations of men employed administering the public affairs on behalf of the public. A newspaper press is simply a beam of light flashed across the community, something like that powerful arc of electric light which was flashed from the Vice-Admiral's ship the other night as she lay in port here. It reveals things. It expresses things. It shows up to a Government its own weak points, and, therefore, if that Government is an efficient one, aids it in remedying these, before grievances founted thereon reach the field of practical politics at all. Moreover, by a reflex action, it also shows the Government the weak points of the Opposition to it, and how these may be made use of to strengthen itself. What is it, this press, but a vast illuminator—a noble and powerful instrument for scattering the light abroad upon the minds of men! The arm of might to protect the weak! A vicegerent of the Deity, to bring within the jurisdiction of reason, conscience and common-sense all those matters and concerns that pertain to the well-being of the community.

A QUESTION AND AN EXPLANATION.

On several occasions during the general election in June last I remember to have been confronted with the question: "Why do we call voting 'polling'?" If I mistake not, voting was originally just a simple counting of heads or "polls." The word has figured in our tongue for centuries. Every one has read in history of the Poll or Head Tax, and even to-day we often refer to the people's "polls" as meaning heads. In 1832 the Reform Act was passed. This Act was the first of a series all aiming at a more adequate representation of the people. Before then the electorate comprised a very small proportion of the population, only freemen and a few other privileged people being allowed to vote. As a result many a little borough in the Old Country had only a dozen or so electors. These were summoned to the market or other centre, and voted by a show of hands. Sometimes the defeated candidate demanded a poll, and each elector was erected in which a booth would come and record his vote personally. This was the original "poll," and though the electorate has been successively enlarged, and the system of public voting long abolished, we—even out here in the overseas dominions—still keep the old-time word.

A VERY SUGGESTIVE POLITICAL REMINISCENCE.

In view of the "Budget Speech" delivered by the Hon. W. H. Cave in the House of Assembly on Tuesday last, let me here dovetail into this article a very suggestive reminiscence of the good old days when patriotic men controlled our public affairs, economy was the watchword and the Prime Minister—metaphorically speaking—sat across the "chest" with a loaded rifle in his hands. In his manifesto to the electors of Newfoundland in 1839, Sir William Whiteway said:—"The public debt of the Colony at the close of 1835, as certified by Messrs. Thomas R. Smith, Robert H. Prowse and James Goodfellow, the public auditors appointed by the Thorburn Government to investigate the affairs of the Colony, after I retired from politics, was $1,924,277.74. That was the total indebtedness, and to represent that sum there were all the main and local roads throughout the island, 1,230 miles of telegraph, 50 light-houses, the dry dock, and all the public buildings in St. John's and the outports. We had, then; you will remember, more than good and sufficient value for the whole public debt of the Colony up to the year 1835. Able-bodied pauper relief was completely done away with, the expenditure upon roads and public works was not permitted to exceed the legislative votes, and railway work was enterprises which had given steady employment at good wages to all who have found it necessary to supplement their earnings at the fisheries. The outlook in bright and cheerful. The credit of the Colony is sound, trade is active, labor, at good wages, is abundant, the favor of the Almighty continues to attend the avocations of our people, and they are contented and prosperous." What a contrast to conditions at the present moment. In those days the political creed of the average public man was as wide apart as the poles from that of the place-and-pay hunter of to-day. As a result, the revenue then never reached excessive proportions and the people paid their taxes cheerfully. Contrast the amount mentioned by Sir William Whiteway in the extract just quoted with the enormous sum required to-day to meet current obligations—$9,150,000 (nine millions one hundred and fifty thousand dollars). "Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon!" No wonder the "uncircumcised" rejoice and sing with the satirical poet—

"I do believe in any plan of levying the taxes
As long as, like a lumberman, I get just what I axe;
I go free trade through thick and thin, because it kind of rouses
The folks to vote,—and keeps us in our quiet custom houses.
I do believe in special ways of praying and convertin';
The bread comes back in many days, and buttered, too, for certain;
I mean in pryin' till one busts on what the party chooses,
And in convertin' public trusts to very private uses."

MINDING THE BABY.

He came to the door and he signaled to me
With his hand on his hip, very quiet to be.
His face was a picture of careworn despair,
As though tragedy dreadful had ventured in there;
His hair was awry and his eyes had a wild
Look and strange, like a man by some horror defiled.

"What's the matter?" I asked as alarmed as could be.
"Hush! I am minding the baby!" said he.
He tiptoed me to the furthest room.
"I'm sorry it's you," he began in the gloom.
"No, I don't mean just that! I am glad you are here.
But I thought when you rang—Oh, my brain isn't clear.
I don't know what I'm saying with so much to do!
I wasn't expecting a visit from you,
And her mother I wanted, I thought it was she,
And—I am minding the baby," said he.

"Did you ever mind one?" I answered him 'no!
"You have never stayed home so the mother could go?
You don't know the fear to be left all alone!
With a j or helpless babe, and that baby your own?
I'll tell you I've suffered the torments of death!
Not ten minutes ago she was holding her breath,
And I thought she was dying—that's awful to see
When you are minding the baby," said he.

I tried to assure him that all babies cry,
But I couldn't remove that wild look from his eye,
And all I could get him to answer or say
Was: "I never have spent such a terrible day—
I wish she were home!" "Did she go very far?"
"No, just to the store, but you know how they are!
And you don't know how long twenty minutes can be
When you are minding the baby," said he.

of the tragic happenings in 1773 or 200 years ago, as related in the notices of interments in the Church Register, point to a blood-fund, that had its roots in the Old Land, probably because who took part in it in Trinity were born. The very word Venetians of Corsica, and suggests hatred blood, and the greater light for the taking of a human life may ever expect to find light of any part of the Old Country, which the early settlers of the name and though the same of revenge once indulged in, there (and probably did) slumber years in the breast of some people; yet it always needed a drop of rum drinking to awaken to that point of activity, that in the taking of a brother's life for which they were forever and ashamed, when the brain of the damned effects of alcohol caused them to be branded murderers. About the year 1700, about on the outskirts of the Old Country in the Kingdom of the two farmers, whose daily of farming were as different the yearly results of their

Trinity Tracey was home loving, industrious, and God-fearing; John O'Brien often neglected work and went to town with no object in view than to spend the earnings at the public house and at the Sheebens along the coast. Such actions were followed by bad effects in the physical and mental life, and while John O'Brien's sober moments were a rare of the true reason why Tracey's farm was more prosperous than his; yet under the influence of drink he was filled with pride of his prosperous neighbor and got himself into the habit of accounting for it, in ways that were as untrue, as they were unkind. The more John O'Brien thought of it, the more he drank; and the more he drank, the more he determined to do something that would interfere with Michael Tracey's prosperity. Every time he passed Michael's farm on his way home from town late at night, he would stop opposite the big barn, and either go over the plans that he had made, or make new ones, to carry out the designs that the Devil was preparing him for, by means of the whiskey habit that was becoming stronger every day.

When one night a pistol shot was heard, and the countryside was lit up by the burning of Michael Tracey's barn, the neighbours were at a loss to account for the fire, and no one associated the pistol shot with it. Those who had gathered to try and save the property could not understand the absence of Michael from the farm during the fire. They found, however, that he had gone to town on foot during the day and it was taken for granted that he had not yet returned. After the fire was put out the neighbours returned to their respective homes, unconscious of either the cause of the fire, or the tragedy it was intended to cover. During the next morning, when Michael's farm-hand announced that his master was missing, the neighbours were increasingly puzzled and, still later, when it became known that his charred body had been found in the ruins of the barn, and that there was a bullet hole in his head; those who had heard the pistol shot previous to the barn fire having been discovered, were filled with suspicious fears.

Then there came (tricking back from town the remarks that John O'Brien had been heard to make in the public houses, about his neighbor; and the threats that he had uttered. Later, when it became known that a tramp had been sleeping under a hedge that night, had been awakened by the report of a pistol shot, and that he had seen John O'Brien hurry from the burning barn, their worst fears were realized. Though as yet no jury had given the verdict, they fully believed that John O'Brien, in a fit of drunken, jealous frenzy, had murdered Michael Tracey in the barn, and had fired the barn to hide his crime. In the meantime John had disappeared from the village; and although a search was made for him, he could not be found. The news of the tragic death of Michael Tracey spread far and wide, and a few weeks afterwards, Terrance Tracey, the only son of Michael, who had left home years before, turned up. Terrance had disgraced the family name and had broken his mother's heart with his utter disregard for the common decencies of life; and when he left the home and village, after his mother died, his father made no effort to find him. Though Terrance had not changed much for the better, he was evidently affected by the murder of his father. He had no love for farm life, and having sold the farm and everything belonging to it, he announced that his life would be devoted to the avenging of his father's death.

When the police were scouring the country for John O'Brien, he was on the high seas, a thousand miles from Limerick; and within the next week he was in Trinity, Newfoundland, and was shipped for the summer on a "salloper," collecting fish in Trinity Bay. He was known as a very reticent man, though he did his work faithfully. With the coming of winter he hired a small house near to his work, and lived largely to himself under the assumed name of Maurice Power. In the meantime Maurice Tracey was like a bloodhound on the scent of the man who had murdered his father, and because of some information that he got at the water-front at Limerick he snipped for the voyage on the brig Prosperous, bound for Trinity, Newfoundland. When he was paid off at the office of Benjamin Lester at Trinity, he shipped as a winter man with an old planter at Trinity, and became known as a sober, quiet citizen. For a while he could find no trace of John O'Brien, and no one by that name had ever been known in Trinity. One spring evening, however, as Terrance was walking around Hog's Nose, he saw a man working at the door of a little house not far from the main road. There was something about him that attracted Terrance's attention. He asked a passer-by who the man was, and was told that he was known as Maurice Power. To Terrance, however, he was John O'Brien, the man he was looking for; the murderer of his father.

Though later events showed how quickly he had made up his mind to avenge his father's death, yet there was too much of his mother's goodness in him to allow him to do so in his sober senses. Then, to the surprise of everybody who knew him, Terrance became a reckless drinker; though no one but himself knew what he was preparing himself for. One night in particular at the ram shop, he drank more heavily than usual, and his drinking companions became conscious of something about his actions that they could not understand, and when he left them at an earlier hour than he had ever done before, they were puzzled to account for it. In the meantime "Maurice Power" continued to live a lonely, quiet, sober life; and apart from their seeing him going to and fro between his house and his work, he had practically no existence in the life of his fellow workmen. On the morning of May 29th, 1773, Maurice was reported absent from his work. This was so unusual, that the agent sent a man at once to go to his house, and find out if he was ill. The man found the door barred inside, and getting no response to his calls and knocks, he looked through an open window in the back of the house. There he saw everything in disorder, and what looked like a man's body mixed up with it all on the floor. He reported to the agent what he had seen, and two men were sent to break in the door. They did so, and on the floor they found Power's body covered with blood, and cold in death. Everything was left as it had been found till the arrival of the magistrate. A coroner's inquest was held the next day, and though no one could think of who had committed the murder, the following entry in the Burial Register of St. Paul's Church of England, embodies the verdict, as follows:—

 "May 31st, 1773. Interred, Maurice Power. A jury appointed to examine this body found the appearance of violence on his throat; his neck seemingly broke, and several marks on his breast, elbows and bowels—'and brought in their verdict, Murder.' 'Add to these former evidences, a bloody shirt pretty much torn, found in his house. He was seen by the neighbourhood to go home in good health at night, and found in this condition in the morning.'"

No great efforts were made to find the murderer. Terrance Tracey, however, had gone from the public house the night before, straight to the house of "Maurice Power." Finding the door locked and "Power" asleep, he crawled through a window in the rear of the house; and when he left the house by the way he had entered, his father's death had been avenged, and he left Trinity for parts unknown, a murderer, as the result of a rash vow, which is always better broken than kept.

CAN YOU SWIM AND—IF NOT, WHY NOT?
 Strangers coming to Newfoundland are greatly surprised to find that so few of our men or boys can swim; and our people are at a loss to explain the reason why, this is so. I remember when the Seaman's Institute in St. John's was being equipped, that a lady in Boston sent her cheque to cover the cost of providing a swimming pool in it, so that the boys of Newfoundland might learn to swim. She had been led to do this because she read in a Newfoundland paper that a boy in Fogo had been drowned, because he could not swim. Now I don't suppose that many Fogo boys will be greatly benefited by the swimming pool at St. John's; but I presume that boys at St. John's have been helped by it. We don't ask for swimming pools in the outsharbour. Nature has provided the very best of such pools by the dozen in every place; and yet, the fact remains, so few of our boys learn to swim. The reasons are, I believe, (1) lack of confidence on the part of the boy to take the plunge, and to keep at it till he can swim; (2) failure on the boy's part to realize the actual pleasure of swimming, in addition to the practical use it may be to him some day, in either saving his own life, or that of some one else—and, both reasons,—because he has not been taught. All this could be changed, I believe, if a swimming master could be secured and classes formed for instruction. With the confidence that such a man would inspire by his own actions, ninety-five per cent. of the boys would join the class, and within a week or two would be veritable "young ducks" in the water. This would be required to be done only once, as the graduates would inspire others with the necessary confidence, and it would go on ad infinitum. Perhaps the executive of the Seaman's Institute at St. John's could supply the swimming master, and thus extend to the outports the privileges that have been so generously provided for St. John's. Much money has been spent, and is being spent on objects of far less importance to the well being of the boys and girls of Newfoundland, and who knows—somebody may act upon this suggestion before the water gets too cold and arrange for a swimming master for the outports—Fogo and Trinity included.
