GILLETT'S PURE FLAKE LYE

The Imprisoned Heiress —OR—
The Spectre of Egremont.

CHAPTER VI.

"There is no light there," he said, after observing it for a brief period. "I thought the singer came from that part of the house. It was certainly not the voice of the Lady Alexina."

"My lady don't sing like a blessed angel," observed the old man, dryly. "And it was an angel that sung but low. I never heard a voice like that anywhere else."

"I never heard a voice that thrilled my heart like this," murmured his lordship, inaudibly. "I wish she would sing again. Can the voice belong to some inmate of Egremont, some dependent, or—"

He paused, half started from his seat, and stared wildly at the window.

A light had suddenly appeared, and now began to burn steadily, and with its ruddy glare sent out streaming rays upon the sea.

"What can that mean?" he exclaimed.

"It's always the way, my lord. She is going to appear. Poor Lady Jasmine!"

At that moment Lord Ashcroft beheld a woman's form at the window, perfectly revealed by its back ground of ruddy light.

She was a slender creature, clad in antique style, with long hair flowing over her shoulders, with a pale, wild face, as well as he could perceive, and with her hands clasped in an attitude of prayer.

She was gazing upward at the moonlit heavens, and did not seem to see the boat rocking on the waves below the cliff.

There was an air of indescribable wildness about her—a weird grace and beauty, that fascinated Lord Ashcroft even more than the music had done.

It was not difficult to believe her a visitant from another sphere, and his lordship resigned himself to the fancy watching her with a reverent curiosity as she continued her observation of the stars.

For a few moments she stood thus, and then her face was turned the sea. She looked up and down the long line of gently heaving waves, and Lord Ashcroft involuntarily arose, standing erect, in the strange, wild hope that her glance might rest upon him.

"She always does so," muttered the old sailor.

His lordship's efforts to attract her attention were soon rewarded, for her gaze rested upon him with peculiar earnestness.

"That is the way the Lady Jasmine watched her friend a hundred years ago," said old Duncan, under his breath. "She thinks she sees him again. Look there!"

The strange being had unclasped her hands, and now extended them imploringly, as if craving friendship and protection.

Lord Ashcroft involuntarily opened his arms as if to receive and shield her from all harm.

"Poor thing!" muttered the old sailor. "She's living over the murder again after all this time. If her spirit could only be laid!"

The object of his comments continued holding out her arms, and waving them as she observed the corresponding movement of Lord Ashcroft, but suddenly her motions stopped, a hand was observed in a menacing attitude over her head, and a wild cry rang out upon the night air, sounding shrill and clear upon the waters.

And then, in a single moment, the strange light died out, the woman and the menacing hand disappeared, and the window had regained its former appearance.

The mansion was as black as before.

Astonishment held Lord Ashcroft speechless for many moments, and he continued to gaze, in the vain hope of her reappearance.

She did not come again.

"I must have dreamed!" murmured his lordship, at length. "I must have been the victim of some illusion!"

"Begging your pardon, my lord," said the seaman, starting up and at-

Old man now feels 35
Mr. Colbourne, a man of eighty years of age, after having taken Carnol, now feels like a man of thirty-five.

When the average man or woman passes the age of three score and ten (seventy years), generally his system needs toning up once in a while. Naturally his vitality is reduced. He is easily fatigued. Sometimes his appetite fails him. He doesn't always sleep soundly. Mr. Colbourne says that his father, who is 80 years of age, felt like a man of thirty-five after taking Carnol, but read the son's letter: "I want to recommend your Carnol tonic to everyone who is in need of a good tonic. I had very sore lungs and was in a very weak condition. People said I wouldn't live for six months. I was thoroughly discouraged to think that I had only a short time to live. One night I was reading a newspaper and saw Carnol advertised, so I made up my mind to try it, and the very first bottle I took I noticed I was gaining in weight and felt much stronger. Now I wouldn't be without Carnol. I recommended it to one of my brothers, who, after the flu, had a very weak lung, and who received great benefit from taking Carnol. My father, who is now a man of eighty years of age, says that he feels like a man of thirty-five after having taken Carnol. Everybody I recommend Carnol to says they wouldn't be without it. They say it is a life-saver."

—Thos. Colbourne, 13 Champagne Street, Ottawa, Ont. 11-24

tending to his sails. "It's the ghost you have seen."

"Well, then, my good Duncan, you may include my name in the list of persons who have seen Egremont! Your explanation is as good as any I can offer. I have either seen a specter, or else," his lordship added, "I have stumbled upon a terrible mystery! The latter supposition is incredible, so I must content myself with the former."

But contented he was not.

He was unusually silent as they sailed near the mansion, and he requested old Duncan to land him at the foot of the rock stairs.

As the weather was so mild this task was easily accomplished.

He sprang out upon the lowest stair bade good-night to the old seaman, watched him sail back to the beach, and then ascended the steps to the mansion, resolved to say nothing of his evening's experience—thinking that time, perhaps, might throw further light upon the strange mystery.

CHAPTER VII.

On returning to the mansion after his strange adventure, Lord Ashcroft was pleased to note that his absence had not been remarked.

An enjoyable evening ensued, and it was late when Lord Ashcroft entered his chamber, which adjoined a spacious sitting-room.

He went to his couch, flung off his dressing-gown upon a chair beside it, laid his watch and purse, as was his custom, upon a small French stand at his bed's head, beside his decanter of drinking water, and then sprang lightly into bed.

After a short time he drew about him the silken curtains draping his bed, and shut out all sights, and nearly all sounds, except the howling of the winds around the mansion, and the steady ticking of his watch, which sounded with unusual distinctness because placed upon marble.

And then he sank into a dreamy state which was neither sleeping nor waking, and the chief sensation he felt was a vague pleasure in hearing the winds rave without and his watch tick steadily beside him.

An hour—two hours—thus passed. His dreaminess had deepened into a light slumber, in which all consciousness was not lost, and his breathing had become regular, like the breathing of a profound sleep.

Suddenly, although he did not open his eyes or change his steady respiration, every sense became active and alert, and he was broad awake.

A simple thing had aroused him. He had missed the ticking of his watch.

It was a handsome one, of the best maker, and he had used it for years without having discovered a single fault in it.

That it had stopped of itself now he did not believe.

For a moment he persuaded himself that he still heard its ticking, although so faintly as to suggest that it had been removed from the marble-topped stand and muffled in cloth, but the impression was momentary.

Not the slightest sound in his chamber was to be heard.

The very stillness was oppressive.

And now came over his lordship a sense of danger that was inexplicable. A weight seemed upon his limbs, his heart quickened its beatings, under that mysterious foreboding, and he opened his eyes in vague expectation of beholding something terrible.

But his gaze rested only upon the ample folds of the bed drapery that inclosed him.

He was a man of courage and of the greatest presence of mind in sudden dangers.

His first impulse was to bound from his bed and search his room—his second, and the one which he obeyed, was to remain perfectly quiet.

He remembered the murderous assault in the fir plantation on his journey to Egremont, and the thought then occurred to him that possibly another attempt was about to be made upon his life.

In that case what should he do? He had no weapons at command but his strong, stout arms, and upon them he depended for safety.

Suddenly he thought of a fact that he had observed before retiring.

There were two bell-ropes in his bedroom, and one of them was hung just within his bed curtains.

With a slow, cautious movement, he put out his hand toward it, careful not to make the slightest noise, and simulated the breathing of a sound sleeper.

EARLY TRAINING.

"My little boy, Charles A. I remember," remarks Jim Suliga, "is m' o' t' sublime; the world can show no kid who's grander in intellect, I'll bet a dime. You ought to hear that boy reciting old Orsini's wild, I'm p-a-s-sioned lines, and when it comes to heavy writing he makes famed bards take in their signs." When I drop in to talk of weather, or rubber prices at the store, or bargain sales in lutes and leather, that little boy soon takes the floor. His father puts him through his paces, and pomes are read, and songs are sung; and I would like to talk of places and then I know when I was young, "Ain't he a wonder!" asks the parent, "his speed you will never see!" and, though I might, I feel I daren't express the thoughts that rise in me. He has his share of sterling merit, this little Alexander lad, and throughout life he will wear it but for the folly of his dad. This mode of training is a blunder, and Alexander yet will groan, for no one likes the Human Wonder whose gifts are greater than our own. I'll fare the lad who's beginning his journey 'mid a shower of praise; some little prize he may be winning, but he'll be lonesome all his days. He'll have the manner of descending, which sort of thing will never do if he'd have friends, while he is wending this little vale of sorrow through.

The Sirdar is Dead at the Hands of Assassins

British Government Demands Strong and Immediate Action in Egyptian Outrage -- Wembley May be Opened Again Next Year--Washington is Not Convoking an Arms Conference.

664 PERISHED.
BATAVIA, Java, Nov. 20. It is definitely established that 664 persons perished in the earthquake which recently shook central Java.

STRONG NOTE WILL GO TO EGYPT
LONDON, Nov. 20. Strong immediate action will be demanded by the British Government in representations to the Egyptian Government as a result of the attempt on the life of Sir Lee Stack, Sirdar of the Egyptian army, in Cairo, yesterday. It was indicated in official quarters here today. Several of the Cabinet Ministers were at Number 10 Downing Street during the morning and their conferences with the Premier are expected to lead to the dispatch of a sharp note to Cairo. This note will probably demand immediate investigation of the affair and arrest of the assassins, and may touch upon the subject of stopping the circulation of Anti-British propaganda in Egypt.

SUCCESS TO WOUNDS.
CAIRO, Nov. 20. Major General Sir Lee Oltiver Stack, Governor-General of the Sudan and Sirdar of the Egyptian army since 1919, has succumbed to the bullets of assassins. He died late to-night in a Cairo hospital. The Sirdar was attacked yesterday by a group of men who falling to achieve their purpose with a bomb opened fire on him with revolvers. General Stack was wounded in the abdomen, the hand, and the foot, and one of the bullets passed over the lung. From the first his condition was serious, and there was very slight hope this morning that he would recover. After an operation performed yesterday he passed a fairly good night, but the loss of blood was so great that two transfusions were necessary. He was conscious until this afternoon, then a change for the worse occurred and he gradually slipped away.

SIRDAR IS DEAD.
CAIRO, Nov. 20. Major General Sir Lee Stack, Governor-General of the Sudan and Sirdar of the Egyptian army, died at midnight to-night, following wounds which he received at the hands of assassins.

CHAMBERLAIN WILL HEAD DELEGATES.
LONDON, Nov. 20. Foreign Minister Austen Chamberlain announced at the Foreign Office today that he would attend the League of Nations Council meeting at Rome, December 8th, as the head of the British delegations. This announcement is taken as an indication that the Conservative Government's policy will be one of closest co-operation and support for the League.

OXFORD, Eng., Nov. 20. The famous New Zealand rugby football team, the All Blacks, which has been touring England, and winning all its games, to-day defeated Oxford University by 35 to 15 before a record crowd.

REPUBLICANS ELECTED IN IRELAND.
DUBLIN, Nov. 20. By-elections to the Dail Eireann in South Dublin city and North Mayo have resulted in the election of Republicans by a substantial though not overwhelming majority. This is regarded in some quarters as a serious setback to the Government, but the results were apparently partly due to the apathy of electors, fewer than fifty per cent. in Dublin voting.

CANADA FOR ERADICATION OF NARCOTICS.
GENEVA, Nov. 20. Canada threw its support to U.S.A. proposals for control and ultimate eradication of the narcotic evil, when the international opium conference resumed its session to-day.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 20. Charles A. Matthews, Jr., former Assistant Provincial Treasurer, sentenced here recently to two years in the penitentiary for complicity in the Provincial bond sale scandals, was taken to Kingston penitentiary this morning to begin the working out of his sentence. ANOTHER SCHR. RAIDED BY LIQUOR PIRATES.
NEW YORK, Nov. 20. The liner President Harding reported to the offices of the U.S.A. line here to-day that last evening she rendered assistance to the Canadian schooner Veronica, which had been left in a helpless condition 100 miles off Cape Sable, after a raid by liquor pirates.

LAST OF THE VILLAS SHOT.
HOUSTON, Texas, Nov. 20. The last of the famous Villa family, notorious Mexican bandits, has met death before a Federal firing squad, according to reports here. Confirmation of the death of Hipolito Villa, brother of Pancho Villa, near Jimenez, Chihuahua, was received from the Mexico City correspondent of La Tribuna, a local Mexican language newspaper.

RUMOUR PERSISTENT.
GENEVA, Nov. 20. The latest rumour circulating in Geneva on the disarmament question is that President Coolidge will convocate a new arms conference, not to meet in Washington, but somewhere in Europe, perhaps at the Hague. Those circulating this report insist that the Washington Government already has soundly rejected the new British Government on the subject.

STRIKE SETTLED.
LONDON, Nov. 20. It was announced this afternoon that the strike of the meat handlers organized in the London Dock cold storage warehouses, had been settled.

DENIED IN WASHINGTON.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 20. The State Department issued a flat denial of the rumours current in Geneva that the Washington Government was taking steps to convocate a disarmament conference in Europe.

ONE KILLED AND TWO INJURED IN DITCHED CAR.
TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 20. Morris Kayler, 30, Toronto, was instantly killed; Solomon Altman, 38, was probably fatally injured, and Solomon Gordon suffered a fracture of the collar bone when a motor driven by Altman was ditched on the provincial highway about three miles east of Brighton, yesterday.

VOYAGER ARRIVES AT BERMUDA.
HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 20. Alain Jacques Gerbault, the French tennis star, who is making a voyage alone from New York to the South Sea in the 30 foot sloop, Finissec, arrived at Bermuda yesterday on the first lap of the journey, after having encountered severe weather which badly damaged the craft. Gerbault will be delayed here several days making repairs.

TROTSKY AND COMMUNISTS SCRAPPING.
MOSCOW, Nov. 20. War Minister Trotsky has again incurred the censure of his colleagues in the Communist Party. They charge him with misrepresenting in his recent book, entitled "Nineteen Seventeen" relations between Lenin and the Communist Party on the eve of the October revolution. Russia's military leader is accused of breaking the pledge made last year to the Party Congress not to engage in adverse activities against the central committee of the Party.

Children's Hospital Needs More Money

AN APPEAL WILL BE MADE TO THE PUBLIC FOR $100,000.

There are five thousand children in Nova Scotia in need of hospital treatment to-day, and the President and Directors of the Children's Hospital, Halifax, in session, decided to appeal to the public for $100,000 in order that they may carry on their share of the work they have embarked upon. The Children's Hospital of Halifax was established and has been maintained purely as a private enterprise. There is no government assistance behind it. The serious situation which confronted the Directors at their fourteenth annual meeting last night, was the debt upon their present building for which there are immediate demands to be paid, besides which there was an indebtedness to the Provincial Government for heating the hospital from the general heating plant of the Victoria General. It was hoped that the Government would continue to be a lenient creditor. Of the $100,000 required $50,000 will be for extension of the present building in order to care for more children and $50,000 for endowment and maintenance. Brick for brick will be the motto for the campaign.—Morning Chronicle, Nov. 15.

Lord Bertie's
Disconcerting Diary

Lord Bertie's Diary—which Hodder and Stoughton are to publish, and of which parts are appearing in the Morning Post—is a very disconcerting book. It contains many things which should lead to some investigation. Lord Bertie, our Ambassador in Paris at the outbreak of the war, was obviously a very outspoken and able man, and he presents what he has to say in a very forceful way. He saw far too many things of which he was disappointed.

Here is one entry, dated June 1, 1915.

"Somebody in London has odd ideas as to what is seemly. The new Chancellor of the Exchequer is to meet his Italian counterpart on Friday; he is to be accompanied by four officials and two servants; he wishes to leave London on Thursday and to have a special train with restaurant car from Calais to Nice, where they must arrive at 10 a.m. on Friday. I was to ask for such a special, and another for the return journey. I telegraphed the result yesterday (Monday) evening, which was that the special could be provided at the cost of £600. I thought that this would choke the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who evidently imagined that the French Government would provide the trains at their own cost, for in a further telegram it was asked whether there would be any objection to a King's Messenger travelling to Marseilles in the special.

"The French Government had explained that, were the railways to be used State Railways, the specials could have been provided at a cheaper rate. The Chancellor of the Exchequer expressed gratitude for the offer, but on reconsideration proposed that arrangements should be made for a special train from Calais to Paris, to connect with the ordinary train leaving Paris for Nice. He will return by the ordinary train from Nice, but he wants a special from Paris to Boulogne, though the ordinary train would answer his purpose. What would London say if the French Minister of Finance desired to meet his Norwegian counterpart at Wick, and expected the British Government to provide and pay for a special from Folkestone to Wick and back?"

Our Motor Triumph

"The effect of the present Motor Exhibition at Olympia will be to give a specially marked stimulus to the popularity of motoring," says the Times. "Owing to the drop in prices and the general advance in equipment cars of the 1925 models are going to make motoring not only cheaper, but definitely more comfortable and convenient."

"For about £150 it is now possible to buy a two, three, or even a four-seater car of trustworthy build and sound design, in a variety of different makes, which will run fifty miles and over to the gallon at a speed on the level of forty-five to fifty miles an hour. There may not be very many who can afford to pay from £300 to £3,000 for the more luxurious types of car, but with touring machines of a popular type and cost at one end of the scale, and at the other a wide selection of touring cars of from 40 to 70 brake horse-power, capable of carrying seven people, motoring may be expected to increase more rapidly in 1925 than even during the last two years.

"This island, with its high relative proportion of train services will never have the same need of motor-cars as America, which last year produced over 4,000,000 and owns 88 out of every 100 of the 18,000,000 odd motors in the world. If every car in that country were seated for roughly seven persons there would be room in existing cars for the whole of the population. Such a proportion between population and motor-cars can hardly be expected in Great Britain, but there is still ample room, or there will be when British roads are wider and straighter, for a much larger number than that represented by the 1,141,900 motor licences which were issued last year.

"For this great market, rapidly expanding as the average citizen learns to appreciate the advantages of a system of transport which takes him up and sets him down at his own door, British manufacturers—even at Olympia, on their native heath—have to compete with trade rivals from France, Italy, Belgium, Holland and America. In certain makes, especially in what may be called super-cars, and a wide range of smaller and cheaper machines of from eight to twelve or fourteen horse-power, they have no superiors. In five years they have built up again an industry which was almost wiped out by the war, but is now the third largest of the engineering trades, giving employment and paying thirty millions a year in wages to 200,000 workers."

Third-Class Travel at Sea

"Much more is likely to be heard next year concerning third-class travel on the Western Ocean," says the Times City editor. "The development of this class of passenger business, which started with select parties travelling for educational purposes, has continued to spread, and has been assisted by the greater consideration shown by the American immigration authorities towards third-class passengers who are tourists, and whose stay in America is for only a limited period.

"Third-class accommodation on a modern Transatlantic liner is very different from what it was before the war, and, while not comparable with the luxury of the first and second class, nevertheless provides quite a number of comforts. This, coupled with the need for economy on the part of many travellers, is producing a new type of voyager, for which the shipping companies are prepared to cater by reserving a section of the third-class accommodation especially for passengers in this category. The possibility is held out of the creation of a new travelling public, which will help to offset the absence of emigrant traffic for so many months of the year.

The circular movement is particularly marked in lace dance frocks.

How Machines Emancipate

THE WORKER AND HIS PURSE.

An Enthusiastic Article on the Emancipation Which Modern Machinery Has Brought to the Worker and Improved his Position.

An enthusiastic article by William Basset in the Forum sings a song of the emancipation of the workers by modern machinery. He makes a plausible case.

"Those who are unused to a manufacturing plant often assume that to work day in and day out at a loom, or a drill press, or a steam hammer must be most revolting in its monotony. I have frequently heard callers speak of a factory they were visiting as a hell, although to me it seemed a rather neat, safe, and ship-shape place. It perhaps a trifle noisy. It depends upon the point of view.

Since Johnson's Day.

"Much as Dr. Johnson saw in a brewery not merely a collection of vats and pipes, but the means of becoming rich beyond the dreams of avarice, so I see in a boiler shop not a hell of noise and hot metal, in which toil the slaves of machines, but rather the means of freeing thousands of women from carrying coal up countless flights of steps to tens of thousands of stoves. I see not only the more comfortable lives that those boilers will bring; I see in the noisy but light and easy-to-handle riveting hammer, a machine which saves a dozen men the back-breaking work of swinging heavy heavy sledges. I see one man do more work with it in eight hours than the dozen would have done in a twelve-hour day.

"I know that while the dozen would have fallen in bed within an hour after the whistle blew, worn out with their efforts, the 'slave' of the riveter is fit and ready for a half dozen hours of play. And this slave of a machine has more money to spend and more comforts on which to spend it than had the freeman of the hand hammers. That one picture portrays most of the ways in which machines have set men free from slavish drudgery and have made them command over goods that a king could not have owned in days of handwork and craftsmanship.

Less Fatigue, Greater Earnings.

"I could cite hundreds of cases where machines, in displacing hand work, have resulted in less fatigue and greater earnings to the worker, increased production, and lower prices to the consumer. To the uninitiated observer a rapidly moving machine may seem to demand a killing pace from its attendant, but actually it practically never does. In the first place an intelligent manufacturer knows—and the others soon find out—that a speed which fatigues the worker produces a lower output in a day than does a slower pace. It is not admission that leads engineers to study operations in order to find easier and less fatiguing ways to do work. It is because they realize that the easier the work the greater the production. Frequently I have seen the daily production of a man and his machine increased twenty per cent. by reducing the speed ten per cent.

These Who Denounce Machines.

"I have yet to see a machine in any industry that does not make the operation easier for the worker than when the same work was done by hand. The trouble with those who denounce machines is two-fold. The machine impresses them as sort of noisy, inhuman—an inexorable device that would as soon eat the flesh of the worker as the metal it is fed. They do not understand the machine and they seem to feel that the worker fears it as much as does the uninformed up-lifter who is doing the pitying. Second, these pitiers and critics do not know how those operations were performed before the horrid machine came into being. Therefore, they cannot see that the machine attendant is either of a more mentally, one who without a machine could not make a living, or of a far higher type than was the man who formerly did the work by hand.

"This was strikingly but unintentionally demonstrated at a textile exhibition where, side by side, were shown in operation the old hand loom and the modern Jacquard loom. The old weaver on the hand loom is thought of as a craftsman, while the modern weaver is pitied as merely an attendant to a machine. Yet the principal difference between a hand loom and a power loom is that one uses man power while the other uses mechanical power. The old time weaver operated the loom harness with a treadle and threw the shuttle by hand. He was merely an inefficient power plant, and looked about as happy and inspired when he worked his hands and feet as does the plug horse in a tread mill. The Jacquard loom is a complicated—almost intelligent—piece of machinery that requires expert attention from its operator. The slaves of this machine are white collar men—alert, intelligent, and not to be told by their looks from the engineer who supervises the building of a Panama Canal or a monster bridge.

Machines Help Wages.

"We have seen that the condition of a worker at a machine is not slavery, either actually or in his opinion; that on the contrary, the machine has given him higher wages for shorter hours of easier work.

"It hardly seems necessary to point out that when he comes to spend his higher wages machines emancipate him still further.

"Cynics profess to doubt whether the availability of larger quantities and new kinds of consumers' goods, made possible by machine production, actually increases the happiness or welfare of mankind. They condemn the moving pictures as low-browed amusement, the cheap automobile as a nuisance, the talking machine as canned music, and newspapers as trash. But the fact remains that the workers find amusement and happiness in all these things.

Today's Bargains.

"Four or five days' labour will buy a good-looking suit of machine-made clothes which a century ago would have cost two months wages. A comfortable and serviceable pair of shoes costs but a couple of days' labour against a week's labour before machines displaced the cobbler. A shirt, pleasing to the sight and skin, costs but an hour's wage. A coarser, less slightly shirt, would have taken days of a hand worker's time to make or to buy.

"A machine will joint furniture better and give it a more beautiful finish than can the most painstaking craftsman. Antique furniture is clumsy, some of it is rickety in construction, and the beautiful finish is far more the result of age than of craftsmanship. Antique furniture, rarely well made, well finished, or even beautiful. Our looms to-day produce more beautiful, finer, and better lasting fabrics than ever came from the hand loom."

Public Opinion.

The Ghost of Bedlam

FAMOUS BUILDING WITH AN EERIE LEGEND.

A building that gave a new word to the English language is about to leave London. When we speak of madness or disorder as "Bedlam" we are using the corrupted form of Bethlehem, the "Hospital of the Star of Bethlehem" having been London's first asylum for the insane. Now it has been decided to move this institution from its present site, at the junction of Lambeth and Kennington Roads, into the country.

As long ago as 1346 Simon Fitz-Mary, Sheriff of London, founded a "Priory of the Star of Bethlehem" on the spot where Liverpool Street Station now stands. It was soon turned into a hospital for lunatics, and after many changes of site it was moved to the present building, erected in 1812. It is, among other things, the home of one of London's old ghost stories.

The Stolen Guinea.

In 1870 a young native of India lodged with a merchant on Fish Street Hill, hard by London Bridge. Rebecca, the servant of the house, a woman of plain features and retiring manners, fell in love with the stranger, unknown to himself.

When he left he placed a guinea in her hand, thanked her for the services she had rendered, and departed on his way. To everyone's surprise Rebecca shrieked, and began to run after his chaise. She had gone suddenly mad, and was removed to Bedlam.

There she remained till her death many years later, and, according to the story, she clutched the guinea in her hand for the rest of her days, and was to have been buried with it still in her clasp.

But it is said that a keeper took it from her dead hand before she was actually buried; and according to a legend that persisted for many years, her ghost haunted the rooms and corridors of Bedlam, searching for the guinea of the man she had loved, and asking the inmates whether they had seen it.

PEPYS BEHIND THE SCENES

Nov. 8th.—Up very betimes, and Mr. Boyd takes us in his motor boat to Twillingate. The weather very cold and a blinding sleet storm, so I might chilled to the very marrow, and mighty glad to make land. Landing, Mr. A. Manuel meets us and takes us to his store where we warm ourselves and dry our clothes. But Lord, never have I seen such an appearance of winter so early in the year, and was much interested at the dog teams that were running everywhere about the streets. Anon, having found a lodging for ourselves, Povey and I to walk about and see something of the place. The south side of Twillingate, I do notice, is divided from the north side by a great tuckle, across which there is a bridge, that do look, indeed, to be strongly made. The both sides of the island are crowned with great hills which do make the cold winds much stronger in the winter time. In the afternoon, we to the south side, there to wait on Mr. T. Ashbourne, and he invites us to see his seal oil factory on Monday. Anon, meeting Mr. Linfield, and Mr. Davis that is manager of the Banque to have much pleasant discourse.

Nov. 9th (Lord's Day). Up late, being a mighty cold day, and I freeze when I go abroad, albeit I am warmly wrapped. So to Mr. Manuel's, and he drives Mr. Davis and me to the Notre Dame Bay hospital and makes me known there to Dr. Parsons, that is the resident chirurgeon. This hospital, I do learn, is the Twillingate War Memorial, and the money to build it has been raised through private subscriptions and a grant from a certain trust fund that is connected with the Grenfell Association. Dr. Parsons is a very pleasant man, and takes much trouble to show me through the hospital, nor have I ever seen an institution better equipped for its purpose. Anon, taking our leave of Dr. Parsons, we back to the north side and I to sup with Mr. Manuel at his home. At night, we to Mr. Davis' and have much pleasant discourse through the evening. So home and to bed.

Nov. 10th. This day to wait on Mr. Ashbourne and he shows me his seal oil factory, mighty interesting. So also to take me about his fish premises which are very large, almost the largest in the country. Anon by motor boat to Exploits, the sea very rough and poor Povey lying down the whole time and will never, I think, get over seasickness. Arriving at Exploits, Mr. Manuel again makes us welcome and bids us to his home where we do recover ourselves from the cold and the unpleasantness of the trip. This day popples are sold in remembrance of to-morrow, which is Armistice day, and the custom is now spread over all the island, and the proceeds do go to the funds of the War Veterans.

Nov. 11th.—This day, to rest all the day, being mighty tired, and moreover am much troubled of a great cold of my head.

Nov. 12th.—Bid farewell this day to my good friends at Exploits, and leave by the steamer Clyde for Lewisporte, and did greatly enjoy the run down the Arm; mighty pretty. So, coming to Lewisporte, to call on Mr. Woolfrey and Mr. R. Manuel, and to have much discourse with them on divers matters. We did leave this night at fifteen minutes of midnight by train for Notre Dame Junction.

Nov. 13th.—No sleep all this day, being made to wait until 3 of the morning at the Junction, for the express, and then no hope of having any rest, being that both sleeper and day coach are crowded, even to the smoking compartments. So compelled to sit through the night in the greatest possible discomfort, and the air so thick that one could cut it almost with a knife. Anon, arriving at Shoal Harbour, to walk to Clarenville, where I make the acquaintance of Mr. Stanley and Mr. Froude and divers others. Waiting there for the express, I take the branch train this night for Trinity. Mr. K. Brown and Mr. Bannister travel with me, and much good discourse till we reach Trinity, where I leave the train. So driving by motor coach to the Garland Hotel, to bed, mighty tired.

Nov. 14th.—Up very betimes and to busy myself about Trinity. Among other things do call on the manager of the Banque, that is Mr. Rankin, whom I did know well. Meeting Mrs. Ericson, she do tell me of a great fire at Windsor, Nova Scotia, and much of the towns destroyed, which is news to me, and is the second time there has been a fire in this place, being but a few years since that the University of King's College was destroyed. I did also meet, among others, Mr. Lockyer, Mr. White and Mr. Morris, with whom much pleasant discourse. But what is a great source of gratification to me is that, all do know me by my writings, and did little think my poor journal was so widely known. Meeting Mr. D. Ryan, to discourse with him of divers matters, but chiefly concerning public affairs. This night to play at Bridge, to my great content.

Nov. 15th.—Lay long, being somewhat tired, and am greatly troubled by a rheum of my head which worries me. So up and about with Mr. Rankin, and to see something of the place. To my great discontent indeed not see Canon Lockyer, being that he too writes for the Telegram sheet and his writings are mighty interesting. This night, Mr. Green, Mr. Morris, and Mr. Somerton coming in, we to have a game of cards, which do pass the time pleasantly. Anon, talking over many things with Mr. White and we to discuss the stock markets with great interest, and indeed, I do glean much knowledge, and learn for the first time what is a bull and what a bear.

Nov. 16th (Lord's Day). This night to Mr. Grant's, by invitation, and meet there Mr. Hiscock, the rector of Trinity, that I did know many years ago, in my school days. Much good discourse all the evening to my great content. Anon, with great reluctance, do leave for the station to take the train to Bonavista.

Nov. 17th. The train coming in at 1 of the clock, I abroad, and start my journey to Bonavista. But Lord, what a night, and doubt if I have spent one so wretchedly, being that the train is slow and much time lost at all stations. The car cold also, and I suffer greatly from my rheum which troubles me beyond words. At last, do reach Bonavista at 7 of the clock and so to the inn kept by Mrs. Thorne, where I have breakfast and then set about my business. Calling on Mr. McCarthy and Mr. Hennebury, they both to speak of my journal and Mr. McCarthy tells me I do keep very close to the writings of the great Samuel, my ancestor, whose works he has read. Later to wait on Mr. Templeman, and do meet again Mr. Reader, and others that I did not know before. Mr. A. Templeman coming in, he carries me in his motor coach to Cape Bonavista, that was the first land seen by Cabot, and do show me through the light-house which is the second oldest in the country. This the first light house I have ever been through, and was much struck by the arrangement of the lights and greatly amazed by the complications of the machinery which do operate the fog alarm. The cape a mighty bleak spot, and very lonely. So to lunch with Mr. Templeman and at night he drives me to Catalina, and then on to Port Union. But Lord, what a sight this place is, and seen from the distance, like to a great city, being ablaze with electric lights such as I have never seen before save in a time of celebration. And the stores of the Union Companies the largest I have seen anywhere in the country. A thing that surprises me is that the electric lights are left burning right through the day in Bonavista, Catalina and Port Union. This day, I do wait on Dr. Forbes, and he do treat me for my cold, which is now in a great state and causes me the utmost misery. I do call also on Mr. Hall, the Banque manager and he sends some money for me to my wife, whom I did leave but poorly supplied. To bed this night with a hot water bottle which Mrs. Thorne kindly gives me.

Nov. 18th. Up betimes and to leave by the train for St. John's. Mr. Templeman coming to bid me goodbye. The journey a long one and are delayed somewhat by a washout on the line. A thing to note on this line is the number of curves and I did remark also, a loop which is mighty interesting nor have I seen one like it before. Arriving at length at Shoal Harbour to bed at an early hour.

Nov. 19th. Called betimes, being that the Humber Special is due at 8 of the clock, yet comes not to Shoal Harbour till half after 11. So to board it, and make good time to St. John's, which we do reach at half after 6.

St. Andrew's Society
CARD PARTY AND DANCE.
The St. Andrew's Society held a card party and dance at their Club rooms last night, which was largely attended and proved very enjoyable. The card tournament began at eight o'clock, and was participated in by a large number of players. The prize winners were announced as follows: Misses Scott and Ross; Messrs. G. Cross and H. J. Taylor. Dancing then followed at 9 p.m. and continued until an early hour this morning. Upwards of eighty couples took part. The music was supplied by the Society's eight piece orchestra. It is the intention of the Society to hold a social event every two weeks and the schedule is now being drawn up for the winter months.

MUTUAL INSURANCE CLUBS.

(H. F. SHORTIS)
Article VII.

Now that I have given you a full account of 'jovial' meetings, I am going to give some records of Mutual Insurance Meetings. The earliest Insurance Club that I know of was started by Henry Corbin Watts of Carbonear in 1806. He states that "he is prepared to accept Insurance for local fishing vessels in Conception Bay. Also that this Mutual Insurance Club, for which he is the Manager, can show exceptional records, as low as 2 per cent. and 3 per cent. per annum, and one year without a single loss. I need hardly say that Mr. Watts was the father of my old almost centenarian friend, the late Mr. Claudius Watts, and the grandfather of our esteemed citizen and popular official of H.M. Customs, the late Mr. H. J. Watts. Mr. H. C. Watts had been for years the General Manager of the millinery firm of George & James Kemp of Carbonear. Mr. George Kemp had retired to his old home in Poole, and was Member of Parliament for Dorsetshire. Mr. Watts, who was his nephew, and now decided to start business on his own account, and after his long experience with this firm, had a large circle of friends, and was well qualified to look after Mutual Insurance matters.

The following is a list of those present at the Annual Meeting in Carbonear in 1835:—Edward Pike, Francis Taylor, Edward Hanrahan, Edward Dwyer, John Nichol, Charles McCarthy, Felix McCarthy, James Howell, Francis Pike, James Legge, Daniel Lacey, John Meaney, George Penney, Nicholas McKee, Charles Hamilton, John McCarthy, Richard Bransfield, John Howell, Nicholas Nichol, William Brown, John Lynch, Thomas Butt, William Burke, Felix McCarthy Jr., Nicholas Ash, Thomas Oates, Robert Ayles, Edmund Guiney.

All the above were captains and owners of decked vessels, or the legal representatives of the owners. They were arranging for the sealing voyage, and the season was from March 4th till May 31st. All payments of losses shall be made good in Spanish Dollars, valued at Five Shillings each. They all agreed to remunerate the owners for total loss occasioned by winds, seas, rivers, rocks, ice, lightning, fire (in port or at sea)—enemies, pirates, thieves, or by any means whatever, provided the masters and the mariners shall not be able to prevent it. The Club shall not make good any loss arising from barratry or the master or mariners. Neither shall it pay for losses occasioned while smuggling or in illicit trade. The surveyors of this Club are:—

Carbonear—Wm. Taylor, Felix McCarthy, John Nichol.
Bay Roberts—Samuel Mercer.
Port de Grave—Patrick Delaney.
Spaniard's Bay—William Andrews.
Ship Cove—John Richards.
Bareneed—Robert Gosse.
Brigus—James Norman, William Percy S.S., John Gushue.

It shall be necessary for each vessel to be supplied with a spare rudder with two pintles. A proper place in each vessel for Gun Powder.

The following were appointed joint Treasurers of this Society or Club:—Messrs. Robert Pack, of the firm of Gosse, Pack & Fryer; John Elson of Slade, Elson & Co.; George Forward and William Bemister.

At this meeting they also arranged to continue the Insurance for the summer season, but the Sealing Risk and the Fishing Season were to be kept separate. It will be noted that the Managers of the principal firms looked after the financial part of the business, but each member of the Club was directly interested, and were to render assistance whenever the Club Flag was seen flying—which was a white flag, with the letter C in the middle.

I notice some very familiar names among these captains. Edward Pike was better known as Capt. Neddy Pike, one of the most successful seal-killers of his day. He always loaded the Melrose particularly.

Capt. Francis Taylor I have written about more than once. It was he who fitted out his brig "Providence" for the seal-fishing in the month of January, and first took a load of fish to Oporto, but was taken prisoner off Bordeaux (France) by a French man-of-war, who mistook him for a pirate, with his large crew, all fully armed, but he eventually turned up in St. John's in the month of April with over 5,000 seals, and was presented with a silk flag by the Commercial Society in honor of his wonderful and successful exploit.

In my next article I shall tell about the Insurance Club of Harbor Grace, and how they all "sat on" Mr. Thos. Ridley at one of their meetings, but he proved equal to the occasion. (to be continued.)

Ears That Tell Age

Up to the present it has been impossible to tell the age of a fish with any degree of accuracy. But now Professor W. J. K. Harkness of the University of Toronto declares that by looking into the fish's ear one can tell its age. This scientific conclusion will prove of value to fish can-

The Suggested Labrador Boundary Pourparler.

The following message referring to a suggested conference on the Labrador Boundary question has been received by the Daily News from a correspondent in Ottawa:

(Special to the Daily News.) Quebec, Nov. 20.—A conference will be arranged in the course of December to discuss the possibility of an agreement between Newfoundland, Canada and the Province of Quebec regarding the delimitation of Labrador. This was officially announced this evening by Premier Taschereau, on the return from abroad of Mr. Aime Geoffroy, K.C., of Montreal, who is now representing the Province of Quebec in the succession case of the King vs. Smith. Pourparlers will be opened between the parties interested in the delimitation of Labrador, he stated. For years this case has been the subject of negotiations, but none yet has succeeded; the affairs having been before the Privy Council for a number of years without being argued yet, due first to the Great War, and later an attempt to come to some settlement. This fall the pleas were to be made, but there having been rumors of a conference being possible first on the subject, there was a further delay and it has now been suggested that a round table interview be held in a final attempt to come to terms, if possible. Premier Taschereau would not state what he expected from these pourparlers. Whether they will include a plan by which some of the portions of Labrador, which are the subject of contention, would be taken over by Canada at a reasonable price, does not appear to be decided upon. Quebec and Newfoundland are at the extreme regarding the rights on the Labrador territory, the former only conceding the coast to the last named. On the other hand for years Newfoundland has considered as its own the whole territory which, in addition to containing rich forestry and ores, also has within its limits the falls of the Hamilton River which could be developed and permit the establishment of huge mills. Until the rights of the contesting parties have been definitely set, neither of them are anxious to start any development work in that region, but in the meantime Newfoundland has been granting permits to exploit the timber limits.

In an interview this morning with the Prime Minister it was learned that he had been approached by Premier Taschereau of Quebec in connection with the suggested conference, and that a reply had been sent intimating that the Newfoundland Government was prepared to consider the proposal to participate in a pourparler with the representatives of the Federal Government and the Government of Quebec. In a later message Mr. Taschereau suggested that as Hon. M. Geoffroy, counsel for Quebec, had not yet returned from England, the matter might be deferred until after his arrival. No further steps have been taken as yet and the Prime Minister stated that the concurrence of all three Governments must be obtained before any definite announcement could be made.

The Management of the Railway beg to announce for the information of the travelling public, that the final week-end excursion for the season of 1924 will be from November 27th to December 1st. After these dates the reduced fares now in effect for this season will be withdrawn and cancelled.

bling the numerous exhibits which can only be removed with difficulty, the suggestion that the exhibition should be continued for another year is most reasonable. Millions visited Wembley during the past summer, but there are many millions who did not have the opportunity and who would be delighted to view this Empire in miniature if another chance offered.

The experience gained by the countries which were represented this year would be of the greatest value in deciding what was or was not an attraction, and how their exhibits could be most effectively arranged.

In our own case, if Newfoundland is again to exhibit, Fish and fish products of every possible kind, cured or packed in every recognized manner, should occupy the most conspicuous place in the pavilion, with the other exhibits be given space according to their relative value. In charge of the former we would suggest having a fish enthusiast, a man who is proud of the fact that we are a fishing country, and who could speak convincingly of the superior quality of our products, and if necessary give a practical demonstration of their merits.

Without in any way intending to criticize those responsible for the Newfoundland display last summer, for in fact the praise it received shows that it was most creditable to all concerned, we cannot but conclude from remarks made by those who visited Wembley that Newfoundland's staple products were not given the prominence they deserved. While it is desirable that our various industries and other resources awaiting development should be shown to their best advantage, it is essential that the country's characteristic industry should be the most important feature in such an exhibition.

Officers' Mess of Nfld. TO-DAY'S MESSAGES. Wedding Bells at Port au Bras

The Officers' Mess held a most successful meeting last evening at the Sterling Restaurant. The President, Major J. W. March, was in the chair and there was a fair attendance. Several matters engaged the attention of the meeting and were generally discussed.

Amongst the items dealt with was the matter of the second re-union for 1924, and after some discussion it was decided to hold same by having a dinner at the Sterling Restaurant on Monday, December 1st. A Dinner Committee was appointed, and it is hoped that all members will endeavour to be present on that occasion and make the Dinner a success.

After the business of the meeting was finished a very pleasant social hour was spent. Songs, choruses, etc., were rendered in good style, the accompanist being T. P. Halley. It was altogether one of the most successful meetings of the Mess, and breathed the spirit of the days of 1914-18.

Triumph Scored BY "LUCRETIA LOMBARD" HERE.

"Lucretia Lombard," the screen adaptation of Kathleen Norris' novel of the same name, opened to a capacity audience in the Nickel Theatre yesterday, and judging from the contented faces and remarks of the people as they filed out at the close of the performance the picture was a success.

One night, after a particularly trying incident with her husband, Lucretia gives him an over dose of morphine, which she thinks is aspirin, Lombard having juggled with the powders.

On the occasion of the coroner's inquest, Lucretia meets Stephen Winslip, the district attorney, who is also the victim of a loveless marriage. Lucretia is strangely attracted towards Stephen. He also feels the magnetism of her wonderful personality and they soon fall in love with each other.

Stephen's young wife soon finds out the state of affairs and broken-hearted runs away to her country camp. Monte Blue and Irene Rich are cast at Stephen Winslip and Lucretia Lombard. Supporting them are Marc McDermott, Alex B. Francis, John Roche, Lucy Beaumont, Otto Hoffman and Norma Shearer.

Food Kept Fresh by Dehydration

Three-Year-Old Eggs for Omelette—Fresh Fish, Same Age—Banana Coffee—Vegetables and Fruits Kept Indefinitely Without Canning.

Eggs three years old but fresh enough for omelette, fish three years caught but good enough for supper is the dazzling prospect held out by A. F. Spaw, dehydrated food expert who has arrived in Montreal to give information in various quarters of his methods of preserving foods.

Housewives despondent as winter sends egg prices soaring to the dollar mark, as salmon mounts and green vegetables sour can take heart. Mr. Spaw has with him meat, fish, eggs, fruit and vegetables which have survived many winters. Three years have passed since a sheep's tongue last helped the sheep with its vocal exercises. The onions, cabbages and carrots have not smelt of earth for many months. But all are perfectly wholesome good and ready for use, and with ordinary cooking and a preliminary soaking in water provided all the constituents for a full-course meal.

Evaporated Food.

The secret lies in the dehydration of foods, which is synonymous with evaporation. Mr. Spaw says. His process consists of driving the water, which is such a large constituent of most foods, out of the food in question without steaming or boiling or use of chemicals by passing hot air over the product and drawing out all the water. Under this process, the food retains all its nutritive qualities and natural flavor, and can be kept indefinitely without going bad. Meat, fish, and vegetables are just as good, three years after they were procured as they were at first, and just as palatable and tasty when cooked. In the dehydration of fish no salt or preservative is used, and the result is superior, he claims to canfish, while in addition it is much less expensive.

Vegetables like cabbages and onions when subjected to the dehydration process are sliced. One and a half ounces of these dehydrated vegetables are sufficient to make soup for five people. To cook them, the housewife must first cover them with water when they begin immediately to swell up and regain their natural freshness and color, having had restored to them the water taken from them by the dehydration process. In the case of dehydrated fruits, they must first be put in water for two or three hours, then stewed or cooked in the ordinary way.

Banana Coffee.

Mr. Spaw has with him samples of dehydrated apples. Nothing has been wasted during the dehydration process. For the cores and peelings have been made by him into fine quality apple jelly. The peeling and cores of one bushel of apples will make seven half-pint glasses of jelly, he states.

In addition to dehydrating foods, Mr. Spaw has experimented with and perfected new foods. He recommends banana coffee, made by dehydrating bananas, then roasting and grinding up the dehydrated substance. Banana coffee is brewed in the same way as ordinary coffee for drinking and is, Mr. Spaw declares, the most perfect imitation of coffee. It further has the advantage that one pound of banana coffee goes as far as two pounds of ordinary coffee.

Housewives who lament the fact that bread will go stale will learn with interest of sweet potato flour. If the housewife would only use 25 per cent. potato flour with her ordinary flour, she would never be bothered with stale bread, the dehydration expert says. He further points out economic advantages to be gained by the use of potato flour. In 1910 the increase in wheat production in the United States was only 12 per cent. more than in 1900, but the increase of population was 21 per cent. The demand is growing greater than the supply and unless some substitutes are discovered, there will not be sufficient for the people's needs, he maintains, hence the importance of finding substitutes. The only thing sweet potato flour will not do which ordinary flour does is to make a light loaf of bread, Mr. Spaw declares. But used as an addition to ordinary flour to the proportion of 25 per cent. it does away with staleness, for potato flour will never grow stale.

Banana flour is excellent for baby's food. There is nothing better, according to Mr. Spaw. Made like porridge, it is not only ideal for infants, but a good breakfast food for adults.

One of Mr. Spaw's methods of making converts for dehydration is to invite people to dinner and give them nothing but dehydrated foods. The menu of one such dinner included crab cocktail, vegetable soup, shrimp, omelette, fried smelts, boiled salmon, clam fritters, green peas, sweet potato biscuits, spinach, apple and pumpkin pie, sweet potato cakes, banana coffee and candied bananas, all made from dehydrated products.

To carry out his experiments with foods, Mr. Spaw has travelled all over the world, experimenting and setting up dehydration plants in many cities. In addition to teaching men how to take charge of them, he has visited, he states, every country except Russia. During the war he did much work in dehydration of foods. A native of Albany, New York, he has

"STAFFORD'S DRUG STORE NEWS" RESOURCEFULNESS

M. Coty, the head of many great perfume factories in France, experienced great difficulty in making his start toward success. When only a poor chemist he discovered a new mixture of unusual merit, but he peddled the process in vain to all the leading perfume makers.

Turned away from his last chance, he instantly decided upon an unusual plan of action. Just as he was leaving, he dropped on the floor a small unstoppered bottle containing his entire stock of the precious liquid. A few days later he received a brief letter from the company. It said: "We cannot longer refuse to help you. That illustrious fluid has made of this office a veritable paradise. Come and see us." To this interesting incident M. Coty attributes his success. Those who look beneath the surface, will understand that the dropping of the bottle simply manifested an ability to think clearly, decide positively, and act immediately. In short, M. Coty possessed the qualifications for an executive.

Why not make your home, office or any place you may be working be also a veritable paradise. It's very hard to do this without you are enjoying good Health and Strength, and thousands of people are neglecting themselves every-day by not being careful enough over their Body. If you require perfect Health and Strength you will find nothing better to restore it than Brick's Tasteless. The proof of this being the very best preparation on the market is that by the end of this year the sale will be over Ten Thousand Bottles.

(Before Mr. Justice Kent).

Kinz vs. Leonard Gillespie Reid—Before a Special Jury.

(Yesterday Afternoon).

When the hearing of the above matter resumed yesterday afternoon, the accused was again called to the stand and examined about the right front wheel. He said the spokes in the vicinity of indentation on the rim were bent. He believed the mark on the rim was made by the pressure. If it were a blow the spokes would have broken. The mark in the rim was made by the bumper. It was completely detached when found afterward. The hooks came out on the left hand side and the bumper was broken on the right hand side. There was nothing that could give the blow before the car went over in the ditch. He believed that when the car went over the embankment it turned over on its left side and the pressure on end of the bumper caused it to make the indentation on the rim. When the wheels went down over the bank the rear of the car swung towards town and turned over. This would explain why the windshield was bent forward. Had it come head-over-heels it would be bent backwards. Having regard to the dent in the wheel the wheel segment at the time must have been in front and slightly downward. The Judge, jury, witnesses and counsel for both sides at this point went outside the Court to examine the car. The machine was on a sloop and a square surrounding it was roped off. Mr. Howley asked witness to point out to the jury the dent in the back of the car caused by an accident during August last. The dent was on the rear left-hand corner. Witness was then asked to show the position of the right front wheel when it was dented. The broken bumper was then put in its original position by the witness and it was shown that the end of the bumper fitted in the dent in the wheel. The bumper was broken at the bolt hole. No portion of the stumps would fit the dent in the wheel the witness said. Witness then illustrated what happened the car after going over the bank so as to bend the windshield forward. If the car went head-over-heels, he explained that the windshield brackets would have bent backwards. Following the examination by Mr. Howley, the Crown Counsel, Mr. Bradley, asked to explain some features about the breaking of the bumper and the probability of the end of it going into the rim of the wheel. Crown Counsel claimed that he had not proven it had gone in between the tire and the rim to make the dent.

Re-examined by Mr. Howley. Witness said the force came when the car was turning over and was from the left to the right. After returning to the court room the accused was again placed on the stand and his examination by Mr. Howley continued. Witness said that the double track was caused by the back of the car swinging as he came from the left side of the road to pass the bus. Witness said that after returning to consciousness he wrenched his foot clear and then asked if anyone was underneath. "If Paterson, he thought, answered first. He then called for help and got Paterson out, and when more assistance came they lifted the other side of the car. Witness then helped to carry some of the bodies to the side of the road. He had no idea of the time that elapsed after the accident until he saw Dr. Anderson. Witness remembered telling some people how the accident happened when the Inspector General came along. Witness said he was in an awful condition mentally. All his limbs were shaking and he could not speak distinctly. There was no examination of him made as far as he knew. He had been going around without his shoe up to the time he was placed under arrest. He was brought to town and placed in a cell. Dr. Paterson visited him there about 4 o'clock but only spoke to him through the cell door. He saw the cut on his chin and wanted to dress it, but the policeman on duty would not allow him to have it done. He did not get medical treatment until 7 or 8 hours afterwards, when he was released. Witness thought that a driver was in the greatest danger when a car turns head-over-heels. Those in front would stay there and be crushed. Those in the rear would be thrown out. In the case under review all who sat in the front seat escaped, and the only one of those in the rear to escape was the man who sat on the floor. He believed that he himself was swung out of the car when it swung around.

Cross-examined by Mr. Hunt. The car is a four-cylinder Stutz. The car is more powerful than the ordinary four cylinder car, it has quite a powerful engine. It would be capable, he thought, of doing sixty miles per hour. He would not say it could not do over sixty miles. There is a model known as the Bearcat; this is not a Bearcat. At Holland's there was a company of seventeen; and there was a dinner in honor of some rugby games. The dinner was over about 10 or 10.15 and they left about eleven. In the interval there were a couple of speeches made; there was just an impromptu evening. During the dinner there were certain refreshments; these were served with the meals. The last drink was served about 10.30. The last whiskey he had was only about the width of his finger. There was no liquor in the car after 10.30. He had no more after that; and that was in Holland's house. After dinner we went in the direction of Manuels and when he saw Crosbie's car he turned; he did not see Arthur Monroe. He left not long after Crosbie. He found the foot-brake working alright. Coming out he stopped by the C.L.B. Camp. The next place he stopped was on Topsall Hill. The stop was made to get water and fix the gear. He did not know Carey but remembered the occasion. He would not say that five of his party were intoxicated. They had done something with Carey's car but he considered they were merely skylarking. After that he went to a house on the right hand side of the road to get water; he did not know whose house it was. Someone came to the door and handed him a bucket, got the water and handed it to Sleator. Up to that time he was going in second gear, and was not going more than 25 miles. The engine was boiling owing to being in second gear so long. After fixing the gear and continuing towards town, he was going between twenty and thirty miles. McKinlay had promised to give him a speedometer, but had not done it. Witness has been driving for ten years, and when he said he was going at a certain speed, he based this on his experience. A safe speed this night would be between twenty and thirty miles per hour. He passed a car near the Octagon, but did not know whose car it was; he would not know Pedigrew's car. He did not know how long that car was in sight; he thought he had passed it on the level. The down grade near Donovan's extends for about 250 yards. It was on the slope downwards he saw the tail light. It would be about 150 or 200 yards. At the time he was not coasting. He was alternately coasting and speeding by the engine. At the top of the hill he would be doing about 30. At first after seeing it, he thought it was a car going the same direction as he was and he did nothing. Along the white fence to the west of Donovan's there are about four telegraph poles. He was about 100 yards from the bus when he slowed down to between 15 and 20 miles. Witness can't estimate speed within 10 miles. He could see the tail light distinctly up to this time; he also saw the lights in the window, high up; he was much closer when he realized it was a bus; he was about 150 feet from the bus then. At this time his head lights and tail lights were on. At this time the road was clear, except for the bus; he saw no man. Up to this time only the putting on of the brake would cause anyone in the back to sit up. When he saw it was a bus he saw no one on the road. He saw a couple of men near the bonnet of the bus, when he was passing it. Coming up to the bus the speed was moderate. At that time he was looking at the front of the bus in case someone should walk out. He saw one or two men in front of the bonnet of the bus. He thought he had passed the danger point, if any, and he took his foot off the brake to put it on the accelerator. Coming up to the bus he was coasting with the car in high gear; the only brake then would be the brake of the engine. After passing what might be the danger zone, his lights were on the straight road, and they saw no one ahead. Then he put his foot on the accelerator and, having done so, he saw three men standing right in front; they were very near. He could not say what speed he was going at this point. Two men disappeared; one man was on the right and was seen for a fraction of a second. Up to the time of hitting the men, he had no knowledge of going over the stump. He would say that it would be impossible for the men to be hit before the stumps were gone over. The front of the mud guard did not hit King; he could not say what part of the car did hit King who was given a glancing blow. If the body was thrown twenty feet witness would say he hit a straight blow. In spite of Lovett's evidence witness thought Whitty was off the road when he was hit. The tracks went back from the stump about 100 feet; for the most part they were a double track. The only explanation witness could give as to the finding of Whitty's cheque book was that he had dropped it. It would be impossible for Whitty to be hit where the cheque book was found, because it could not have got to the ground before the car passed over. If the car was going at a moderate speed these stumps would not be sufficient to stop the car, but they would throw the weight to the left. The theory of the witness is that the brake was not put on until the car was 24 feet behind the stumps. If the car had done what Mr. Silverlock had said, it would be smashed to pieces and not in its present condition; he thought that Mr. Silverlock's theory was absolutely ridiculous. At McGill he studied physics but not mechanics but he has learned from his experience a good bit about motor cars. The brakes were not on before coming to the stumps and the marks were caused not by the brakes, but by the wheel. When the car turned to go down the bank, he was at the wheel. His theory was, that time the car swung round. When the car went over the bank he saw the trees ahead, and that is all he remembered, and anything that happened after that is only a matter of theory. The front of the car was turned down the bank, and the back followed so that the car turned over and came wheels up. When the Inspector General came in, witness was in a bad state as a result of the accident. He did not remember speaking to Dr. Anderson, but the doctor was there when he was speaking. He did not remember Dr. Parsons. He thought that when he came to the lockup it was quarter past three. He did not go up to Donovan's at all. The marks he had were very slight. It seemed as if there were an awful crowd in there, but he thought they had left before him. He did not remember being placed under arrest. After arrival at the lockup he was put in a cell, but did not go to sleep. Dr. Paterson came in about an hour after this. He remained in the cell until 10 o'clock, when he was let out on bail. He did not know why Dr. Paterson was not allowed in. The Doctor talked through the bars of the cell. Witness did not ask for medical attendance, he said he was alright. The length of the car was between 13 and 15 feet. There were three in the front seat, but this fact did not interfere in any way with the operation.

Maurice Hitcham, sworn, examined by Mr. Emerson. Witness is a motor mechanic and is employed at Reid's. He has been in the work for the past eight years. He has been connected with the Reid car since it came here. There is a dent in the left hand rear part of the car, but it was caused by backing into a pole. If any adjustments had to be made to the car, witness had to do it. The brakes were adjusted about one week before the accident. After the adjustment the brakes were working alright, but the right was not, it meant too much work to fix it at the time. Witness examined the car at Fort Townsend, in company with Frank Marshall. A good test of the brakes was made at the time. The car has no speedometer. A speedometer does not add to the efficiency of a car, nor does being without them take from the car's worth.

Cross-examined by Mr. Bradley. The gear box is on the back axle. The hand brake is used only for parking purposes, but when the foot brakes are working, the hand brake is practically unnecessary, except when parking a car. The car would accommodate eight passengers. Witness did not know the width of the front seat, but there is ample room there for 3 men.

Frank Marshall, sworn, examined by Mr. Emerson. Witness is the proprietor of a garage. He has sixteen years experience in motor mechanics, one year of which was spent in the United States. He saw Leonard Reid's car and took part in an examination of the brakes of it at Fort Townsend. At first one side did not work as well as the other but afterwards both were locked and he put his full weight on the wheels and they withstood the test.

Mr. Howley then stated that there was another witness which he should like to call, but as the hour was late he could not produce him immediately. Judge Kent stated that if there were any more witnesses, he would come back at 7.30, as he wanted to have all the evidence concluded before to-day.

Mr. Howley, after consultation with his colleague informed the court that as the witness he would call was merely a technical one, he would rest the case where it was.

The court then adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning, when the addresses of the Counsel will begin. (For further reports of the Reid Case, see page 13.)

Fish Provide Unexpected Rich Harvest

UNUSUALLY LATE RUN OF MACKEREL POURS $16,000-A-DAY STREAM OF WEALTH INTO LIVERPOOL.

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 18.—Mackerel still seem to be bound for Liverpool, and to-day Mosher's trap at Western Head had about 80,000 pounds of large fish, some weighing as high as four and five pounds. The crew are working night and day getting these fish iced and packed ready for the American market where the present high price is very attractive.

Hartman's trap also had about 20,000 pounds to-day, in addition to their large catch of Tuesday. This trap was full of fish and it appears that a great many meshed which would cause a dead weight on the tackle and sunk it, allowing what is estimated at 50,000 fish to escape. Only those meshed were left in the trap, and they could only be got with difficulty. It is estimated that $35,000 worth have been landed here the last three days.

The fish came very unexpectedly, as it is much later than usual. Fishermen generally argued that after the 10th of November the mackerel had gone by, and accordingly when these struck most of the traps were put away for the winter.

The Chas. L. Capt. Levy, arrived this evening with 20,000 pounds of fish, having been out two days. Nickerson Bros., who are the managing owners of this boat, recently declared a dividend of 33 per cent to the shareholders.

This boat has proven a particularly attractive investment. Having been in operation but seven months the dividend means the shareholder has received practically one third of his money back after deductions were made for operating expenses, and ordinary wear and tear. The above firm has completed arrangements to have another vessel built here considerably larger than the Chas. L., the stock in which is rapidly being taken up and it is expected more will follow.

The outlook of the fishing business is very bright, and it is considered that an industry which is admirably suited to the town is receiving the right kind of handling.

Bishop Gore as Champion of Criticism

"In the latest product of his pen, The Doctrine of the Infallible Book, as in the old 'Lux Mundi' days, Dr. Charles Gore stands forth as the champion of a sane Biblical criticism," says the Expository Times.

"The strange thing is that, at this time of day, such criticism should still be in need of defence. Did not Sir George Adam Smith assure us twenty-five years ago that, so far as at least as the Old Testament was concerned, the battle had been fought and won, and that there was now nothing left but to pay the indemnity? And since then hundreds of books have been written from the frankly modern standpoint which ought to have long ago convinced all who care for the Bible how constructive, how sane and how devout was the spirit of those who had adopted that standpoint.

But every age has to fight its own battle. The old difficulties, already met and answered, re-emerge and have to be met and answered again. The necessity for maintaining, in the interests alike of Truth and Religion, the rights of reasonable and temperate criticism, has been once more abundantly evidenced by the vigour of the Fundamentalist controversy which is raging in America. And Dr. Gore's able defence of these rights is welcome; for it is only too true, as he tells us he has reason to believe, that England as well as in the United States there is a revival to-day of the position that faith in Christianity, as really the divinely-given gospel for the world, is bound up with the old-fashioned belief in the Bible as the infallible book.

"He writes this little book, at the request of the Student Christian Movement, to demolish this old-fashioned belief and to replace it by a better, which maintains that inspiration does not necessarily involve infallibility or absolute accuracy in matters of historical detail. Dr. Gore reminds us that there is no warrant even in the New Testament for identifying inspiration with infallibility. St. Luke makes no claim to inspiration, but only to exhaustive investigation and accuracy. The Evangelists differ quite freely in detail, and occasionally the Fourth Gospel corrects the tradition represented by the other three.

"Certain statements of St. Paul imply that he does not write as one who regarded himself as infallible; and in view of all these considerations it must be regarded as a happy circumstance that the Church never attempted to define inspiration. Neither the Bible nor the Church binds Christian people to any theory; they are free to go wherever the facts may lead."

Supreme Court.

KING vs. Leonard Gilmore Reid—Before a Special Jury.

At 10 a.m. Mr. Howley began his summing up and used the plan put in evidence to illustrate the various facts he wished to establish. The case he said at first bristled with difficulties. The Crown has charged Leonard Reid with manslaughter and it is the Crown's duty to prove manslaughter and therefore must prove negligence on the part of the accused. On the other hand the Defence does not have to convince the jury that there was recklessness or negligence in the driving of the car. Mr. Howley then went through the whole story as told by the witnesses called by the Crown and those by the Defence, pointing out where there was an agreement and where disagreement was evident. The plan submitted to witness Lovett was used by defence to point out the place where King and Whitty were when Reid's car came along. On this plan witness Lovett had made indication as to what was just above the stump. Difference of the Crown witnesses as to the position of the bus was also pointed out. The distances as given by each witness were scaled off on the plan and marked with colored pins. There were, he said, six different positions for the bus given by as many Crown witnesses. Regarding the position of Lt. King, Mr. Howley pointed out that, taking the evidence of the five Crown witnesses who agreed that the bus was near the second telegraph pole, it would give four different positions for the point where King was standing, and eight positions for where he fell. Five of these said it was west of the stump, but none agreed as to the point where the body was actually found. Mr. Howley pointed out that these different stories should have a bearing on the amount of evidence they should place on other parts of the evidence given by the Crown witnesses. He claimed that Lovett, King and Whitty were not at the stump. 150 feet west of where the car overturned. At the time the car came along he claimed they were standing near where the car turned off the road. Had Lovett been standing near the stump, he would have been able to see the shooting like a projectile, as stated by Mr. Silverlock. He pointed out that two of the Crown witnesses, Sileator and Mellor, who were members of the Red party, spared him nothing and should be credited. There was a variety of estimates of speed which were set out at from 20 to 50 miles per hour. The most competent to judge was Grouchy, the bus driver, who said that it was impossible for anybody to say what was the speed of the car. Those who gave evidence for the Crown varied as much as they did in the positions they gave to the bus. The theory of speed had been calculated by the dent in the right front wheel, the dent in the rear left side of the car, and the marks made by the application of the brakes and the absence of wheel marks; but it had been subsequently shown that these were caused by other forces than supposed by Mr. Silverlock. When he built up his theory, Counsel argued that had the car approached the point where it turned off the road at a speed of 20 miles per hour, it would not have left the tire marks in the sloping side of the bank. It was beyond a coincidence, he pointed out, that where King's and Whitty's bodies were found was in line with where the car turned off the road. This supported, he said, the story as told by the accused. The finding of Capt. Whitty's cheque book near the stump did not warrant the conclusion that the wheel of the car had come over it. It fell from Whitty when he was hit, it would not have reached the ground if the wheel of the car had come over it. He before the car passed. It might have been, the Counsel argued, that Whitty had dropped the book some time previous to the passing of the car. Unless the jury accepted the theory that it was at the stump that Whitty was hit they would have to reject all the evidence based from this point and acquit the accused. The evidence of Murphy who stated that he, forty minutes after the accident, discovered a wheel mark east of the stump as well as westward was not inconsistent with the evidence of the other witnesses who examined the ground some time afterwards and found no mark at all. In order to believe Silverlock's evidence that the car jumped 24 feet they would have to disbelieve the evidence of fact as stated by Murphy. The theories of the manner in which the car turned over were next dealt with, after which he argued that the position of the abrasion on the thigh and the absence of a broken bone proved that Reid had swerved his car to avoid hitting King. Re the blowing of the horn, Counsel argued that the belts gave much greater warning of the car's approach than any blowing of the horn could give and his conclusion was that the three men were not out on the road at the time. Counsel then reviewed the medical evidence to show that the accused was not drunk. Several witnesses said they saw no signs of liquor on him. The several witnesses who deposed to his taking several drinks told how the drinks were taken over a considerable period of time and accompanied by food. Mr. Howley pointed out that no evidence had been produced to show where the hats of either Capt. Whitty or Lt. King were found. It would have been of wonderful assistance in determining the place where they were hit had they been produced. Mr. Howley asked careful consideration of the jury to decide that Reid was not guilty of the charges laid against him and closed his argument at ten minutes to one when recess was taken. At 2.30 p.m. Mr. Hunt for the Crown began his summing up.

Supreme Court.

REX vs. J. T. MEANEY.

Court resumed session at 2.30 p.m. yesterday.

Mr. F. Berteau was again placed in the box for examination.

Witness described the position of the room on the second floor, where liquor was kept. The room was open as a passage and people had easy access to it. Witness said stock had been taken since he went there in July, 1923. He checked over the retail stock of the department. The Custom's Department took stock of the principal stock which was in bond. Mr. Berteau's accounts of his stock taking was submitted. It was taken on July 22nd, several weeks after Mr. Meaney left the department.

Mr. Fox objected to the list being put in, on the grounds that it was evidence referring to a date after the accused had left the Department.

Mr. Winter claimed that this list was necessary, in order that the stock should be proved, as to how it came in and how it went out.

Witness said that the list contained the list of stock as he found it.

Capital stock taken on July 15th, 1923.

Retail stock taken on Aug. 6th, 1923.

Stock valuation $15,400.40 cost price.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fox, witness said that retail price would exceed cost price considerably (per case). Rum was not included in the stock taking because it was not gauged. There were no other liquors in stock not included. Witness knew of no special deposit or accounts in his time. Witness did not know of liquor being taken from the department. Since he went to work at the department, alterations have been made and the liquor stores upstairs have been partitioned off from the regular passage. Witness knew of an outside party not attached to the staff of the department who was caught taking away liquor in his pockets. Witness under re-examination, told the court that the liquor thus apprehended was valued at approximately $21.00.

Wm. Donnelly, sworn and examined. He was Deputy Auditor General. He audited the accounts at the Controller's Department in 1921-22-23. He audited the accounts by checking scripts. The scripts were considered as the revenue section of the department. He found them correct. Witness also checked the bank account including the receipts. Witness knew of a special account being amounts paid in by the Controller. These were amounts not represented by scripts. These deposits were marked "special deposits" and went into the same account. Witness knew of no stock taking. It would be impossible thus to trace leakages or losses. There was some talk of stock taking being done. It was never done. Witness deposed that as an auditor he couldn't possibly audit the accounts of the department without a stock taking.

Sidney Morris, sworn and examined by Mr. Winter. He was engaged as accountant by Reid Son & Watson. That firm made inquiries into accounts of the Liquor Control Department in Nov. and Dec., 1923. Mr. Warren, the Prime Minister gave instructions for the investigation and witness did the work himself. He took a list of the liquor imported during two years and with a price list, priced the stock according to sale price, allowing for stock in hand before that period, and allowed for book debts, etc. Witness said that list of liquors in stock from storekeeper's books previously put in evidence. Witness had been in country five years, and had been connected with same firm for seven years, previously in London. The work consists of general accountability. Witness said he was not a qualified chartered accountant.

Mr. Fox therefore objected to the witness's testimony being received as expert evidence.

Witness said he knew several senior clerks in this city doing chartered accountants work. Witness was one of the staff of the firm now in charge. There were two clerks his senior in the office.

The objection was overruled by Chief Justice after deliberation.

Continuing, the witness stated that checking over the copies of the Customs entries with the books of the storekeeper, he found them to tally. He made a list entailing the year July 1st, 1920 to July 1st, 1921, which consisted of a summary taken from the books already in evidence, of the liquors imported to the department. Witness testified that the list was correct. The values, he said, were the retail selling values obtained from the price list of the Department. Thus the value of the liquor was ascertained. The witness also explained regarding the dilution of rum and its value, that duty on rum is paid on proof gallons. Duty entries gave the extent of the rum imported. A point here arose regarding the percentages of the diluted rum on which the witness based his calculations which necessitated the recall of Mr. Grant of the Controller's Department.

Mr. Grant placed in the box, told the court that rum was sold at $1.20 and $2.00 and $2.00 from 1921 to 1923. The $2.00 rum was used for manufacturing purposes. Rum was sold at $1.30 when the department opened first. Rum is imported at about 40% over proof. Witness did not know the proportion of water and rum used in the dilution.

Mr. Holden, recalled and examined by Mr. Winter, stated that the rum sold by the Dept. at $2.00 was 30% rum. When he went to work first, rum was sold at $1.30. This rum was 78%.

Cross-examined by Mr. Fox, the witness said that in 1919 the 78% rum was sold. Later 30% and 66% rum was used. He could not state that all the rum used in the Department was diluted in these proportions.

Re-examined, witness told Mr. Winter that at one time rum was 20% under proof, later it was changed to a stronger mixture. The witness could not say if the rise in price and the strengthening of the rum were simultaneous changes.

Sidney Morris again examined. He made his calculations of the amount of rum used from the percentages of dilution and by ascertaining the date when the department ceased selling the $1.30 rum which had the highest percentage of water. Witness was then asked by the crown to revise his calculations of the audit correcting the change in the dilution from 78% to 66%.

Mr. Carmichael called and sworn. He was an official of the Bank of Montreal. Deposits from the Liquor Department were made at the Bank (according to a statement which witness had prepared, and which was put in evidence).

This ended the case for the Crown with the exception of Mr. Morris's statement. The court took recess in the interim.

Returning to the court room, Mr. Morris was re-examined and submitted the list of stock revised by him, in which 23 gallons of water were mixed with 50 gallons of rum, used by the department. The remainder of Mr. Morris's list contained his calculations of the amount of all liquors used by the department in the time limits referred to. After some perusal of this summary it was submitted and put in evidence. This contained the summarized totals for the 2 years, $1,208,236.80 plus; the six weeks from July to August, 1923, $49,811.00, which made a total value (sale price) of the stock handled in that time of $1,258,047.80. This represents sales price of all goods on the department for this period. Thus had all the liquor been sold this amount should have been realized. The amount paid into the Bank during these years, totalled the sum of $1,007,880.65.

Mr. Carmichael recalled and submitted a further list of deposits made by the Controller's Department from July 1st, 1923 up to Aug. 6th, 1923, totalling $55,000.67.

The amount deposit up to Aug. 6th, 1923 thus was $1,063,381.33. A difference of $194,666.47 thus remained. This amount should have been represented by stock. This stock amounted to $15,000 roughly. Book debts, etc., would further increase the shortage. The account of these debts was furnished witness by Mr. Berteau and made the total shortage $178,699.36. Witness testified that this would be the correct calculation of the shortage in the Department.

Cross-examined, witness testified that the figures for the quantity of rum were obtained from the Customs entries, which were checked with the storekeeper's books. This finished the case for the crown.

Mr. Fox proposed to the court for the withdrawal of the case from the jury. He submitted that there was not a trace of evidence to show that the accused was guilty of the charges one and two. The evidence proved no ingredient of larceny, nor had it proved any fraudulent purpose against the accused. In fact, he stated, the crown had failed to prove any point in its case. Quoting a similar case, Mr. Fox stated that the Crown had to prove that the accused had taken some specific article. In reference to the charges of embezzlement, the Counsel stated there was not sufficient evidence to prove this, there being merely some inadequate evidence produced showing a shortage. Quoting several cases, Mr. Fox showed that it was necessary for the crown to prove that the prisoner diverted to his own use some specific amount before the accused could be found guilty.

Counsel for the accused submitted that in a count for larceny, some specific article must be shown to have been stolen, or in the count for embezzlement some specific amount must be proved to have been misappropriated. In the evidence there is not a trace of proof or a single fact to show that the prisoner had diverted any of the returns of the department to his own benefit.

Mr. Fox also stated that there should have been a proof of employment. It was not sufficient to state that he acted in his capacity of Controller, but to bring out the evidence of his appointment. Whereas there is not a shadow of proof to show that Mr. Meaney was ever Controller. Therefore the evidence of Grant, he said, carried no importance whatever. Here also, Mr. Fox, quoted several cases in the jurisprudence, and claimed that the prosecution had totally failed, and moved that the case should be withdrawn from the jury.

Mr. Winter in reply first admitted the Crown had not proved Mr. Meaney in the absolute controllership, but deposed that Grant's evidence was sufficient to prove that the accused was in charge of the Department. In reference to Mr. Fox's reasons for asking for a withdrawal, the crown counsel contended that the (general deficiency) in the Controller's Department was sufficient to have the charge proceeded with. Specific amounts were needless to quote. Mr. Winter pointed out that there was no attempt to account for the amount of the deficiency. And as a failure to account for a deficiency is sufficient to warrant an inquiry the case should be fully dealt with.

In conclusion, Mr. Winter referred to Mr. Fox's opening point that the Crown had not proved Mr. Meaney guilty of the larceny of the liquor or money. That was correct. No witness had done so, but he maintained that eye witnesses or circumstantial evidence was not necessary to prove this. If the evidence of the administration of justice would be almost impossible. Mr. Grant, however, the accused's subordinate, swore that Mr. Meaney took money obtained from orders unlawfully issued and did not account for that money. There was nothing nebulous in connection with the evidence and Mr. Winter deposed that there was abundant ground to submit the case to the jury.

Mr. Fox in reply repudiated several of the deductions Mr. Winter had made from quoted cases. His Lordship the Chief Justice then ordered adjournment, and reserved Mr. Fox's objections.

(To-day's proceedings)

Court resumed session at 10 a.m. to-day.

Mr. Fox told the court that it was not his intention to call any witnesses for the defence, but that he would at once place before the jury the case on behalf of the prisoner. He reminded the jurors of their responsibility, in considering the charge. He then referred to the four counts against Mr. Meaney. The first two counts being for larceny, and the latter two for embezzlement. Counsel for the defence then defined the terms of larceny and embezzlement.

Larceny was made up of several ingredients all of which had to be proved against the prisoner to prove him guilty of that offence. Embezzlement similarly had various ingredients which had to be fully proved.

In larceny proof was necessary that the accused had taken some article or sum of money to be stolen and in embezzlement some specific article or amount had to be misappropriated. A man could not be convicted on assumption. The crown had to prove the case without any doubt remaining. For if any doubt remained after the closing of the case for the Crown, then it was the duty of the jury to give the accused the benefit of that doubt. A general deficiency in account was not sufficient to sustain the charge of larceny or embezzlement. Mr. Meaney had entered the liquor department in 1920 and was suspended from the office in 1923. No stock taking was made in the hands of his predecessor in office, nor was there any stock taking until August 6th, 1923, a considerable time after the accused left the department. The stock or account of the cash at the bank Mr. Meaney couldn't have any idea of the state of the department's accounts. But a few months of very close care was taken that itemized statements were prepared to show how Meaney carried out his work during the period.

Reviewing the evidence, Mr. Fox first perused the testimony of Holden whose evidence he said was sadly lacking in detail. He simply testified that barrels, cases and puncheons came from bond and the witness didn't know what they contained. He kept books for his own control, but he might have made regular entries, when removing goods from bond, or might not have. If the Crown brought evidence against the accused, showing that liquor imported, it was his duty to prove how many bottles and gallons were brought in. Holden in describing the method of stock taking, could not say if all the rum had been thus treated. In fact, counsel contended, nobody knew, or no evidence was there to show, how many thousands of gallons of rum went out of the controllers at proof, undiluted.

Again counsel pointed out, that the accused was charged with the larceny of liquor diluted and at sale price, amounting to 56,000 gallons. All the Crown had to do in its mathematics yesterday, was to show that the amount of the charge could have been doubled, and this was supposed to be a definite charge. If for instance 20,000 gallons of rum came into the liquor department Mr. Meaney was charged with the larceny of nearly 50,000 gallons, after it had been diluted.

Regarding Grant's evidence, counsel reviewed the outdoings of the salesman at the department, where liquor was sold for scripts and without them. Mr. Grant had shown that anybody could enter the department and get away with quantities of liquor. The public had free access to the stock-room and retail store, and there was no possibility of preventing people in these circumstances, from stealing liquor. These incidents counsel said, were indicative of what went on in the department and he asked if it were possible for the accused to be held responsible because he did not know how many bottles of liquor had been stolen. Again liquor imported was frequently pilfered. Empty cases, puncheons and barrels, bottles of water and other means, were responsible for great shortages, and so there was a myriad of ways in which that shortage could be accounted for. Again another important point was that stock-taking, taken on August 6th, 1923, was the first source of figures used by the Crown. What might have happened to the stock left by Meaney by August? Could it not have been pilfered and the stock left by Meaney a delinquency in that department in his turn he reviewed the evidence of Holden, Morris and Power, showing that in the summary produced by the auditor, that where corrections or alterations were made, a greater delinquency was taken against the accused, and that at the request of his own counsel. As for Mr. Fox's statement that the case was not specific in its charge, Mr. Winter thought that, on the contrary, no case was so exact, or so mathematically correct as this one. Regarding the defence's point on the crediting of the accused with the cost price of the remainder of the

Defender of London

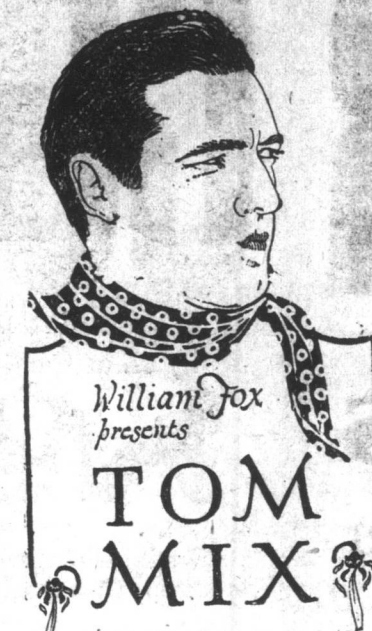

DEATH OF SIR PERCY SCOTT.
Sir Percy Scott, Bart., the former chief of London's air defences, and one of the most versatile geniuses produced by the Navy, succumbed to a heart attack at his London residence, Sailor, gunner, inventor, and trenchant controversialist, he was the pride of his friends and the terror of his enemies—and he had plenty of both. He was born on July 10, 1853, and joined the naval training ship Britannia in 1866, where one of his youthful companions was the present Earl of Ypres. In 1874 Sir Percy served in the Ashanti War with distinction, and from that time onwards his name has been associated with gunnery, at which he became one of the greatest experts of our time. In 1898 he took command of the cruiser Scylla in the Mediterranean. It was not long before the Scylla became the most-talked-of ship in the Fleet. Gunnery was then at a low ebb, and the provision for training was but scanty. The average for the Navy was 31 per cent. of hits, and when, under Captain Scott, as he then was, the Scylla achieved 80 per cent. there were many who could hardly credit the news. Sir Percy Scott made a great name with the public by his activities during the South African War. It was in this war that he became famous as the man who landed 4.7 naval guns and took them to the front at Ladysmith on carriages of his own invention. At the first instance his offer to do this was refused by the military authorities, notwithstanding that the British retreat from Dundee had left the British base open to the formidable attack of Boer siege guns, and that his 4.7's had a range equal to anything the Boers could bring up. Then General White, seeing disaster ahead from these same enemy siege guns, wired for help. Admiralty experts decided that it was impossible to get the terrible guns up in time; but Scott undertook to have two 4.7's ready in 12 hours, and, in fact, he had four ready in the time. Captain Lambton arrived at Ladysmith with them in the nick of time, the Boer's "Long Tom" was silenced, and the town and his beleaguered force were undoubtedly saved by their means. In 1905, after becoming a Rear-Admiral, Sir Percy was appointed the first Inspector of Target Practice. When he held the command of the First and Second Cruiser Squadrons he received orders, while at gun practice in the Channel, from his Admiral, Lord Charles Beresford, to return to harbour in order that his vessels might be painted. Sir Percy's signal to a cruiser on the occasion was the cause of a terrible commotion in the Navy. The message read:—
Paintwork appears to be in more demand than gunnery.
Come into harbour and paint your ship and look pretty.
The message reached the ears of Lord Charles, with whom Sir Percy had more than one difference of opinion, and the incident was closed by the official censure of the offending officer. In 1908, on his appointment as Vice-Admiral, Sir Percy hauled down his flag and devoted himself to his invention of gun control. In 1913 he retired voluntarily and was created a baronet by the King. He rejoined the service on the outbreak of war in 1914, and was for a time in charge of the artillery defences of London against enemy aircraft. Since the war he had been chiefly conspicuous as the critic of the big battleship, the day of which, according to him, has been terminated by the advent of the bombing aeroplane. "What is the use of a battleship?" was answered to the liking by the midshipman whose reply, recorded by Sir Percy, was "No damned use at all." Sir Percy Scott leaves a widow, who at the time of her marriage to him in 1914 was the widow of Colonel Arthur Pole Welman. The new baronet is Sir Douglas Winchester Scott, the deceased admiral's son by his first marriage. The King was represented at a funeral service for the late admiral, which was held at St. Margaret's Church, Westminster. His Majesty's representative was Admiral Sir Somerset Gough-Calthorpe. The principal mourners at the funeral service were Sir Douglas Scott, son; Miss Rosemary Scott, daughter; Mr. Malcolm Scott, the well-known comedian, brother; and Mrs. Coulson, aunt. The congregation included Admiral of the Fleet Sir Henry Jackson. By special desire of the late Sir Percy his remains were cremated, and the ashes were subsequently taken on board a cruiser 30 miles to sea and buried with full naval honours in the neighbourhood of the "Nab" Lightship. Sneeze Signs

In the ancient days of Greece and Rome, a sneeze was supposed to bear in its train far greater portents than a mere cold.

To sneeze whilst rising from the table, or bed was said to indicate approaching death. Yet to sneeze between midday and midnight under favourable planetary conditions was an augury of happiness. Again, if the Greek or Roman turned to the right while sneezing, it was regarded as a happy omen.

Woman Doctor's Devotion

The mining village of Clay Cross, in Derbyshire, is talking of the devotion to duty of Dr. Mary Michael, a local "medico." When an accident happened in a local pit recently she was immediately summoned. A miner had been seriously injured by a fall of roof.

Dr. Michael did not wait for him to be brought to the surface, but descended the shaft and made her way for two miles underground until she came to the victim. By the light of a miner's lamp she did her work of healing. Not until her patient had been bandaged and taken to the surface would she leave the shaft. When she did, she was warmly cheered for her pluck.

Herring Fishers and Wireless

The herring fishers have special reason to be grateful for the perfection of wireless telegraphy. A few years ago the comparatively few trawlers which had been equipped with wireless installations by the Admiralty during the war were regarded as curiosities.

To-day most of the large trawlers, and certainly all the fleets of trawlers, have at least one boat equipped with wireless. This enables them to keep in touch with ports and owners.

"They can learn when fish is scarce and prices likely to justify a race back to port, or when a general gull has forced prices so that they might as well stay another night at sea." The wireless installations also enable them to keep in touch with the aeroplanes which have been used for "spotting" shoals of herring, so that the trawlers can move off at once to the most profitable fishing grounds.

There is another benefit, for in the slack hours, while trawls or nets are drifting, the men off duty can pick up concert programmes from distant centres.

Woman a Bundle of Nerves

"Everything irritates me—I am a bundle of nerves, I ache all over and can't sleep and am so depondent." This extract from a letter written from one woman to another describes the condition of many women who suffer from feminine ailments. Nothing will relieve this distressing condition so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs. For fifty years it has been restoring sick and ailing women of the Dominion of Canada to health and strength.

The Magnetic Spell

When ships pass on their way to and from Liverpool, and come to a particular spot in the Mersey, their compasses become agitated in a wholly improper way.

Some magnetic spell is laid on them and the only explanation that has suggested itself is that the iron parts of some ship wrecked there have become magnetized by some shift in the wreck's position joined to the action of waves or currents.

There are a number of places in the world where something magnetic on the coast or on the sea bottom affects a ship's compasses. Magnetic Island, off Townsville, on the east coast of Australia, was so called because it appeared to upset the compass of Captain Cook's ship; and in the Gulf of St. Lawrence there are similar disturbances.

The hydra of to-day, though it has shrunk to something like an eighth of an inch in total length, has the same capacity for regeneration shown by its mythical relative. A small fragment of hydra, provided that it contains all three layers of which the body is composed, can grow into a perfect new animal, while the specimen from which the piece came rapidly replaces the lost tissue.

lives, and fringed at its free end by a rosette of hollow tentacles surrounding the mouth, which is situated at the summit of a little dome.

These tentacles first paralyze and then seize the prey—small waterfleas and the like—which they convey to the mouth.

As the whole body is active and very contractile, a considerable area of the surrounding water (in proportion of the size of the animal) is explored for food. Under the microscope the body is seen to consist of three layers of tissue—an inner, known as the "endoderm," which lines the alimentary canal, and an outer, known as the "ectoderm," consisting of muscle fibres and interstitial cells, which, being embryonic, can grow into buds or reproductive organs to replace lost parts as occasion may require—the two layers being separated by a structureless plate.

By Ruth Cameron.

WOULD HE?

He thinks he'd like a woman who never disagrees with anything he says.

But would he? "He" is the husband of the woman who doesn't always agree with her husband in everything, and sometimes says so in other words. Almost Any Woman's husband, at least in America.

He thinks he'd like a woman who never expressed any idea opposed to her own but who has decided that she never even showed a suggestion of disagreement in her expression.

Who never had any tastes or opinions except reflections of his?

But would he?

I wonder.

The Kind She'd Have To Be.

She would have to be one of three kinds of women.

Either a woman who really never had had ideas of her own, who was naturally without spirit or vivid interest in anything, for if you have vivid interest you also have ideas and opinions.

Or she would be a woman who had had ideas of her own and spirit and life, but who had had them crushed out by a husband who was too domineering and too egocentric to tolerate anyone around him except personalities that he could crush life out of.

Or, third, a woman who has ideas of her own but who has decided that she never get along best with her husband by being a complete hypocrite, and pretending always to agree.

How Can She Respect Him.

This kind of woman may love her husband in a way but she never respects him. How could she? She has said to herself in effect: "This is plainly impossible to get along with this man on a 50-50 basis. I cannot expect fair play with him. But I can handle him if I make up my mind to this and humor him by pretending to think and feel what I don't think or feel at all, and live my own life underneath."

There are men who can live a lifetime with a woman like that, and never suspect how they are being kidded. But they are not men of any very high mentality or keen perceptions.

If Almost Any Woman's husband is a man of any real mental power or any real sporting instincts I don't believe he would truly care for that idealized woman who never disagrees with anything he says, any more than he would like a meal that was nothing but strawberry shortcake and cream puffs, and ice cream.

That's tiresome.

Of course no man likes a wife who is always arguing and disagreeing with him over every little thing. That is tiresome and irritating, especially when a man comes home weary after using his brains all day.

But a mixture of tact and spirit is a pretty good blend and the kind I think almost every woman's husband really loves, even though in a moment of irritation he may think differently.

Municipal Council

WEEKLY MEETING.

The weekly meeting of the Council was held yesterday afternoon. Mayor Cook presided and Councillors Martin, Outeyridge, Collier, Ryan and Dowden were present.

A communication was read from the Secretary-Treasurer, Sergeants Mess, G.W.V.A. with regard to the proposed lighting of Monument at foot of Garrison Hill, and asking if the Council would be willing to finance this undertaking, of which he forwarded estimate of cost. It was decided that the matter stand over for the present.

Mr. Bert Hayward protested against the erection of a Public Convenience near his garage, Water Street West. His communication will be considered.

Mr. Harold Mitchell wrote re Tax on Commercial Travellers, stating that in his opinion, this tax should not be imposed on a commercial traveller whose firm already has a representative in the city. In the Act it is clearly defined that "Commercial Travellers not domiciled in the Colony shall pay the fee imposed." The Council, therefore, can take no action in the matter.

Mr. J. Neville requested that a light be erected at the West End Cabstand. The site has already been selected and the light will be installed at the earliest opportunity.

Superintendent Morris of the Newfoundland Light & Power Company in answer to Council's letter re street lights out, stated that immediately upon notification same had received attention.

In the matter of the dilapidated building, Water Street West, which has been the subject of a communication from the Child Welfare Association and his Honor Judge Morris, the Medical Officer of Health informed the Council that notice had been served on the occupants on the 8th inst. to vacate the building within the time allowed by the Act, namely ten days, and that this order had been complied with on the 17th inst.

The City Clerk tabled information as regards expenditure which would be involved in the expropriation of land for widening of Pennywell Road, which, he stated, would be a very costly undertaking. The Council not being in a position financially to deal with the matter, it was ordered deferred.

The Medical Officer of Health reported 1 new case of Diphtheria, 2 Scarlet Fever and 3 Typhoid in the city during the past week.

Complaint was made that a well on the Southside Road, West of Brown's Bridge, has lately been polluted. The Engineer was ordered to give this immediate attention, and to make arrangements for the placing of a suitable covering on the well.

It was reported that certain persons are dumping refuse in the old railway yard, East End. The Manager of the Nfld. Railway is to be written and his attention called to this fact; also he is to be asked to have a sign erected there prohibiting dumping.

Reports of the City Engineer, Sanitary Supervisor and other officials were tabled.

After disposing of the usual routine business the meeting adjourned.

Obituary

CAPT. JOB KNEE.

We regret to chronicle the passing of Capt. Job Knee, whose death occurred at his home Badger's Quay on Oct. 20th. Capt. Knee, who up to two months ago enjoyed excellent health became afflicted with an internal trouble which quickly ravaged his once robust system.

On the 8th of October he was ordered home by his physician for a rest. After arriving home he was treated by Dr. A. Kean and Jamieson. His sufferings were borne with remarkable fortitude and patience, while a faithful anxious life partner cheered and consoled him.

and kept an almost constant vigil by his bedside. The late Capt. Knee was in his 72nd year. During the past 25 years he was master of the Notre Dame Bay Boats "Alert" and "Clyde" he was well and favourably known and held in the highest esteem by all who knew him.

Universal Belief in a Future Life

"A remarkable article on Consensus and Immortality, by the Rev. W. R. Matthews, Dean of King's College, London, appeared in the Church Quarterly Review for April," says the Expository Times.

Dealing with the argument for immortality from the consensus of many minds, Mr. Matthews says:—"As a matter of fact, the belief in a future is not one painfully and slowly acquired by humanity. There is scarcely any conviction so wide-spread, and the farther back we go, the firmer is the belief and the more general. It is true that often this belief is in no sense a source of hope and comfort to those who hold it. Often, too, it has failed to have any ethical value. Still it is there, for whatever reason held."

"What, then, is the value of this consensus? Any consensus may be of value for either of two reasons. It may guarantee the correctness of a train of reasoning. Or it may confirm the observation of some object which has been a matter of experience. So far as the question of immortality is concerned, there has been a remarkable agreement among thinkers from Socrates onwards as to the primacy of mind and value. But, striking as this is, we may not perhaps deduce our conclusion too readily from it.

"The consensus on the subject of the future life is rather one of experience than one of rational deduction. The origin of religion is to be sought in a level of experience which is pre-rational. Beliefs about spirits were the first religion. The days of the 'rationalist' hypothesis about the origin of religion are numbered. Religion begins with feeling in the presence of an object.

"Similarly, the 'rationalist' explanation of the universal belief in a future life is out of the question. Apart from anything else, it would be surprising that the same hypothesis should occur independently to so many varied peoples. What, then, is the object in the presence of which this creative emotion arises which generates the belief in immortality? It is simply man's own self. It is the incomprehensible reality of his own being. His beliefs about a future are attempts to rationalize the mystery of

Mr. Ford and the Prince of Wales

"That is why the consensus is so valuable. It is not the agreement in a chain of reasoning or its conclusion. It is agreement in a simple, profound experience, a perception which, because it is so simple and direct, is invariable and universal. This lies behind the primitive belief of the savages and the intellectual structures of the philosophers alike."

Trees Act as Aerials

Forest rangers in the large reserve in the State of Washington have succeeded in making trees talk. Two of them, tired of carrying wire, experimented, and found that they could make the branches of firs and hemlocks act as aerials.

They drove a copper nail into the base of the trunk, connecting it to the base of the tree. They then sent radio sending wireless waves. Messages have been received two or three miles away by this method.

More experiments are being conducted in the woods to increase the efficiency of the method, so that any station can be informed of any occurrence by wireless instead of telephone.

BELIEF
Since laughter comes and laughter goes
And all the winds of summer pass,
When underneath the drifted snows
They sleep the violet and the rose,
The scarlet poppy and the grass,
Doubt you, beside your window pane,
That summertime will come again?

So cold the wind, so bleak the sky,
So cruel is the sting of frost
That everything which charmed the eye
But yesterday as you walked by
From life now seems forever lost;
Yet do you doubt on such a day
That there will be another May?

When out of life the laughter goes,
And sorrow's winds blow bleak and cold,
And steal from lovely cheeks the rose,
And with death's seal fair eyelids close.

Then to your faith can you not hold?
Have you not courage and belief
To bear your winter-time of grief?
The barren fields shall green again
In silent trees the birds shall nest;
Then shall life desolate remain,
Bleak and eternal gloom and pain?
Are roses more than mortal's bliss?
Not so! For us who feel death's sting
God keeps a lovelier, ampler spring!

Successful Sale of Work

The sale of work by the Wesley Ladies' Aid was continued yesterday afternoon, and was largely patronized.
A pretty brisk business was kept up until after 6 p.m., and resulted in quite a large sum being raised. At night a concert followed, which proved very enjoyable. Among those who contributed numbers were:—
Misses Leslie, Langmead, Taylor,
Pelley and Curtis; Mrs. L. C. Mews;
Messrs. Colley, T. P. Halley, Wiley and Myers. The sale was an unqualified success from every standpoint, and the Ladies' Aid Society are to be congratulated on their efforts.

Wedding Bells.

EDNEY—CHAFF.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Thomas' Church on Monday evening last at 7.30, when Miss Ivy Edney was united in the Holy Bonds of Matrimony to Mr. William Chaff, the ceremony being performed by Rev. J. B. Elliott. The nuptial knot was tied in the presence of the relatives of the bride and groom. The bride wore a fawn crepe de chine dress with hat to match, and entered the church leaning on the arm of her uncle, William Edney. She was attended by her sister, Miss Rose Edney.
While the groom was ably supported

Treasure of the Deep

ATTEMPT TO SALVAGE OCEAN GOLD

There lies at the bottom of the ocean off Virginia Capes a vessel containing treasure worth £400,000, and an attempt is being made by a syndicate to recover it. The treasure consists of a large shipment of gold, silver, lead, and copper, which was being carried on the liner Merida, when she sank after collision with the mail steamer
Admiral Farragut, during a voyage to New York from Havana in 1911.
Part of the treasure was sent to New York by the Mexican Government at the time of the Madero revolt. It is supposed that the Merida had on board 22 tons of silver bars, bags of gold, and two large safes containing diamonds and jewellery. The latter are believed to include the famous Maximilian rubies which were owned by Empress Marie Charlotte. Since the sinking of the Merida two efforts have been made to salvage the treasure, but both failed. Now two steam trawlers, the Foam and Spray, have been engaged by a syndicate, and have left dock at Brooklyn to make a further search. It is expected that this time the treasure-hunt will be successful, as the trawlers carry three trained divers equipped with deepsea diving apparatus. The expedition has maps showing the exact location of the Merida, 182ft. below the surface of the ocean about 60 miles off the Virginia Capes. If the present venture is a success, treasure-finding expeditions may be undertaken to other parts of the world, where sunken vessels are known to lie.

A Revolutionary Car for Every Owner

THE BROUGHAM

In literal sense, a revolutionary car! What other term could describe the Chrysler Six—a car that gives a high gear speed range of 2 to over 70 miles per hour—that weighs only 2705 pounds and yet can be driven in comfort 60 miles an hour on a cobbled street or a rutted road.

Never has there been a car within many hundreds of dollars of the Chrysler price, that could begin to do the things it does.

Never has there been a car that combined such startling performance with such economy of investment, maintenance and operation.
