The soloists were Miss Louise Elliot (soprano), Mr. W. J. Winch (tenor), and Mr. G. B. Ronconi (hass) of Boston, Miss Martin (contralto) of New York, and Mr. Fred Warrington (baritone), Toronto, and it is to be hoped it will not be her last, as she is a most accomplished artiste. Her voice is one of great richness and purity, sweet in tone and full of sympathy, cultured and refined to a degree, and without the slightest trace of any inequality, either in tone or execution, to mar a most p rfect and artistic performance. Her singing of the solos "Jerusalem" and "I Will Sing of Thy Great Mercies" was received with great applause. Miss Martin had not much to do, but that little Le did well. Her rendering of the solo "But the Lord is Mindful of His Own," was expressive and pathetic and led to a unanimous encore, which Mr. Fisher was obliged to decline on account of the great length of the work. Mr. Winch is so well known here that it is only necessary to say that his so'os were rendered with that degree of care and feeling which has made him so deservedly popular. Mr. Roncomi did not prove as great an attraction as his associates. He seems to sing entirely from his throat and this defect combined with an indistinct enunciation considerably marred his efforts. Mr. Warrington, though his part was small, sang with his accustomed ability.

The House of Industr

The life of the Forty-ninth Congress exptorily at noon on March 4 next; re no such bill can be passed this fair," you will say, "just the same for both sides; what objection can there be to that?"

We reply that it is most emphatically not just the same for both sides—no, " not by just the same for both sides—no, " not by just the same for both sides—no, " not by just the same for both sides—no, " not by just the same for both sides—no, " not by just the same for both sides—no, " not by just the same for both sides—no, " not by just the same for both sides—no, " not by just the same for both sides—no, " not by just the same for both sides, what objection can there be to that?"

Miss Lill Stackpoole painted the last portrait of Lord Iddesleigh. It is now in the Beacousald be that they would have to admit manufactures only, and none other, would thus be admitted free in virtue of the treaty. But on our side the difference would be something tremendous, Canada being a British colony, cannot collect duties on British goods while admitting the same kinds of goods free when coming from a foreign country. Such a treaty, therefore, would open our markets, not only to American products, but to British products as well. But even this is not all, for British export warehouses are filled, not alone with goods of home production, but with goods from France, Belgium, Germany, and elsewhere on the continent of Europe. To distinguish the latter from British-made goods is tinguish the latter from British-made goods is the Duckes of Albany, widow of the latter from British goods and the second of the Conkround and the Schauber of Albany, widow of the latter from British good timental goods, got up expressly in imitation of saleable British makes. This is something to the truth of which our own importers and buyers can abundantly testify. And Great Britain, be it remembered, admits free the manufactures of the whole world, except in cases where a customs duty on the imported article is necessary to balance an excise duty on the home product. The result would be that, whereas our neighbors would be opening their ports to Canada only, we would be opening our ports to Great Britain as well, and through Great Britain to all the world besides.

Under the former Reciprocity Treaty this difficulty did not occur. For, although the articles scheduled free from the States had also to be free when imported from the Mother Country, yet our interests were not formed inasmuch as the scheluled articles Mother Country, yet our interests were not fine the fact of the late Baron Stieglitz for 1,500,000 roubles. It is said that the Grand Duke will the shortly marry the Princess Alexandra of Greece, who is 17 years of age.

London Truth: I am informed that the marriage of Miranda will be celebrated either in Cannes, whither she is going after appearing at a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return to a charity concept in Paris, or on her return t Mother Country, yet our interests were not affected, inasmuch as the sche luled articles were all such as we do not import from beyond sea at all. There would be no import of English wheat, or flour, cr pork, or beef, into Canada, duty or no duty. Coal and salt form the only possible exceptions that occur to us just now; and they could never count wery heavily. Between a treaty confined to natural products only, and one including manu-natural products only, and one including maintfactured goods as well, the difference is simply immense—to Canada. No attempt to explain how this difficulty is to be got over, Canada still remaining a part of the Empire, has been made, and it is safe to say that none ever will be made. Perhaps the Mother Country might asive it by permitting us to let American goods free, at the same time putting duties on British goods, and still remaining part of the Empire, as at present. But this is not likely, to say the least.

The Mail is not well advised when it says that the adoption of Mr. Butterworth's bill, which would throw down the customs barriers altogether, and establish absolute free trade,
"would be a statesmanlike way of quieting

Let the Mail think again, and next let us hear what the Toronto Globe and the Halifax Chronicle, also Mr. Blake and Sir Richard, have to say on the subject. The two Free Trade leaders should certainly speak out upon it forthwith; and the circumstances they owe it to the estances they owe it to the ander the circumstances they owe to country that they "speak now," and that within forty-eight hours of hearing the news

CHICAGO, Feb. 15.—Wheat and pork took opposite roads to-day. Wheat was again very weak, closing one cent lower than yesterday, while pork was active and buoyant and 524c to 60c a barrel higher than yesterday. Wheat opened steady on fayorable callo advices, but fell back heavily with free offerings. Export clearings were moderate and receipts fair. Corn followed wheat closely; offerings were free and prices dropped off ic. Oats were weak and lower on increased receipts. Hayers were anxious to take hold of pork early in session, and offerings at the start were quite liberal. temper soon turned bullish. May advancing from $13.70 at opening to $14.35, and fell back to $14.20, rallied and closed at $14.30. One of the causes assigned for reaction was belief that free offerings of past two or three days had centered in hands of men who are supposed to control bulk of products here. This tended to make "shorts" nervous, and caused them to cover outstanding contracts freely. Lard closed 71c to 10c higher. Leading futures closed as follows: Wheat—Feb. 723c, March 34c, May 394c.
