Wilfred T. Grenfell.

As I sit writing my boat is at the wharf ready for sea, while outside there is a thick, wet blanket fog. The heavy rumble of the Atlantic is sending great, green combers, foaming up on to the sides of the cliffs, there is a howling wind rattling our cordage; but we know we have a good ship, we are sure there is opportunity calling us outside, and so our reason as well as our hearts justify us in giving the order, "Let go the hawsers! Hoist away the throat and peak halyards, ease up the main sheet, and heigh ho!" We start out with an easy mind and a joyful heart, for whatever venture may be in store for us.

My long lecturing tour in England came to an end the last of April. It was managed by a lecture agency, and no emphasis was laid on the fact that it was in connection with "a Mission work." To become a mere appealer for money, even if in a good cause, is not an attractive work. If, however, one can find an opportunity to commend the following of Christ as the only satisfying life, it becomes possible to dignify even the unwelcome and monotonous task of money raising. It is a good thing, too, for a man to have to give an account of what his work is accomplishing.

Formerly the man in the street had very little use for Missions. This was partly the fault of the Missions. The medicine, law, engineering, education, religion and sociology of fifty years back, probably do not commend themselves to the modern mind. But the modern lack of interest in Missions is largely due to the fact that most men do not know what the missionary today stands for. Mr. and Mrs. W. demand that "ministries" of every kind shall be reasonable services; and when a man sees the uplift of the human race appealing at the bar of common-sense, he is immediately interested, and wishes to help. The men who have little interest in missions may or may not be more Christ's followers than those who profess much, but they certainly do not realize how much nearer the methods of today are to Christ's own—they fail to appreciate that they have ceased to be mere theological inquisitions. In proportion as we are believing more in God, so we must believe more and more in men. Otherwise we must confess to a much larger percentage of failure in Christ's efforts than I least am willing to concede. In drawing out men's sympathy for Missions, they get far more than they give. The vision of the future, like that of the Knights of the Holy Grail, gives men that marvellous "Hope" which is one of the three vital props of life.

Why does the moving picture, which we are conscious was devised solely for our amusement, attract such large crowds? Because those who are after dollars take so much more trouble, and go to more expense, to make their show attractive. How far ought we to make "mission meetings" attractive, and educational, and interesting? It is irrelevant, does it lower the tone, or does it dignify what hangs on the lips of dullness, really as "religion" as we are often taught? Can a missionary surgeon, trying to play Christ's part, neglect to get the "best" ether, the sharpest knife, the most highly trained operating nurse, in order to avoid doing cheap work? Surely it is not sensible for a Christian fisherman to refuse the expense of a safe and suitable boat in which to go out for fish. Is it possible that what we have to offer can have no attraction and common-sense? Actors, singers, and public entertainers, all know the secret of the moderation for patients. The expense of paying for the new work has exceeded the figure which I gave Lord Strathcona when he so generously undertook to defray it, but we are hoping that this excess will be met, and that we shall have in the present Lady Strathcona, who was born in Labrador, as sympathetic a helper in the work as her father always proved himself.

We hope to make further advance this year by offering the girls and women of the coast a new, beautiful and, we think, remunerative industry. During the past winter, while we were in London, Mrs. Grenfell went for a time and worked at the factory of the Mayfair Flower Workers, whose lovely shop on South Audley street is familiar to so many of my readers. Through the kindness of those who are in charge there, she was able to learn the making of artificial French decorative flowers. As we think that the girls here should be at least as "handy" as those in the factory class of London, we hope by Christmas to be able to offer for sale at the New York, Boston and Ottawa offices some reproductions of the Bankshire roses in pots—hyacinths, forget-me-nots and English daisies, as well as the jolly little orange trees, which have come so much into vogue in Paris. Quite aside from the pecuniary advantage which should accrue to the girls who are making these plants and flowers, we value the effect which the production of beautiful things must have in opening up the minds of workers.

The Co-operative Store at St. Anthony, which last year graduated from its infancy, and is now known to the shore as the "Spot-Cash Co-operative Company, Ltd.," owing to enforcement of the invaluable principle of "its descriptive name, has so far flourished as to pay a dividend to the twenty-nine fishermen stockholders, and, in addition, build a small branch store on the side of St. Anthony harbor where the Mission buildings are located. Nothing succeeds like success, and we hope that the "Spot-Cash Co-operative Company, Ltd." will be a text to demonstrate to a people brought up on a pernicious truck system of trade the enormous advantages of co-operation and cash dealing.

The mat industry has done excellently this winter under the management of the ladies at the Orphanage. This special industry, with mats depicting local scenes, is entirely self-supporting, has now a small fund to its credit, and has given many dollars' worth to the women of the shore this winter. The ladies at the Orphanage helped to bring about this desirable credit balance by a most novel and businesslike tea-party. All the staff was invited to a feast, but before they were allowed one cup of tea, or a single sandwich, each had to purchase a mat. We have now on hand an order from a New York shop for a sample mat of each pattern, and if these prove satisfactory, they hope to be able to dispose of our entire output. Such a market would be of infinite service to those to whom it means so much to be able to earn a few extra dollars.

The many friends of our much loved volunteer worker, Miss Eleanor Starr, will admire her courage in using her lurching while at home to fit herself more fully for the responsibilities of the position of volunteer nurse at an isolated station on the Labrador. At the earnest request of the people there, and by the kindly help and interest from friends, through the Church of England Mission at Quebec, as well as her own fine generosity in giving her time and services for what some people call "nothing," we are able to establish a new centre for spreading the sweet savour of the knowledge of Christ, without an increased demand on our already overtaxed general fund.

English friends will be glad to know that our helper of many years at Yarmouth, Miss Christine Peljow, has come out to give us the benefit of her expert knowledge in gardening and agriculture, and to oversee and stimulate our farming efforts. Messrs. Sutton and Sons, of Reading, have most kindly supplied us with all the seeds we need for the year; and even more than that, they have purchased and sent us seeds which they do not supply themselves, but which we needed.

The beautiful new boat "Amber Jack," has started for Battle Harbor with her excellent amateur crew, one sailor, and a pilot sent from Newfoundland. We very heartily thank the kind donor, Mrs. Shedd, and our friend and counsellor, Mr. Dean, for their share in procuring this beautiful adjunct to the work.

THE WEEK'S WAR NEWS

British Naval Victory

The British cruiser 'Undaunted' assisted by three torpedo boats sent four German destroyers to the bottom of the sea, on Saturday afternoon, on the Dutch coast. None of the British ships were damaged.

The Belgium army effectually aided by the British fleet have repulsed the German attacks between Nieuport and Dixmude.

Three officers and seventy men of Colonel Maritz's Rebel Force have been captured and four officers and forty men have voluntarily surrendered.

The Austrian fleet in the harbor of Cattaro, Dalmatia, attempted to escape on Sunday but were promptly driven back by the French Fleet.

WAR BRIEFS

No recent war incident has given Lord Kitchener greater satisfaction than the message from the Germans of Berlin, Ont., announcing a gift of $50,000 to the Patriotic Fund.

A dispatch says the German navy is well supplied with coal. But, what does it need coal for?

There is quite a rivalry between England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland, as to which of the four will send the greatest number of soldiers to the front in proportion to the population. King Albert of Belgium is reported to have been slightly wounded.

The Home Guards, Toronto, expect to provide 1000 men for the next contingent.

Fifteen hundred claims are already being paid fortnightly from the Belgian and Patriotic Funds, in Montreal. Four hundred are to French and Belgian reservists who have gone to the defence of their native lands. Eleven hundred are to Canadian and British reservists who have answered to the war call.

To add to the revenue of the United States, which has been diminished by the war, a stamp tax is proposed, such as was employed during the war with Spain, by which in a single year more than $40,000,000 was raised.

The British Government has placed a Welsh Collier at the disposal of the Nova Scotia Belgian Relief Fund, to carry the donations of the Province to Belgium.

Ottawa's three days campaign in behalf of the Patriotic Fund realized $371,215.

Machine shops in Toronto, Hamilton, Dundas, and Galt and several other towns have received orders for the making of 18 pound shrapnel shells. The shells are to be made in lots of one hundred. The condition is that one shell in each lot is to be tested, and if it is defective the whole lot is to be returned.

A party of German officers invaded the house of a Dutch gentleman. They were hospitably entertained with food and drink, and rewarded their host by throwing a beautiful clock into a glass mirror.

Lieut. Col. J. H. Burland, head of the Red Cross organization of Canada, at the front, died suddenly in England of angina pectoris.

The purchasing contracts for supplies for the troops has been taken out of the hands of the military department, and given to a sub-committee of the Cabinet, with Hon. Robert Rogers, Chairman.

It is agreed that wherever the Germans have dealt severe havoc to the Allies at the battle of Aisne, their success has been due to spies. They captured seven, one of them a woman, who used electric flashlights from a window.

A picked Yukon machine gun corps left Dawson City, on the 9th inst., for Victoria, where it will go into training until the second Contingent which is expected to embark about Christmas from Halifax, is ready to sail.

Australia proposes to give $500,000 to Belgium in recognition of her sacrifices.

Major Von Manteuffel, the German officer who is said to be responsible for the destruction of Louvain, is a prisoner in the hands of the French. What will they do with him?

Provisional schools for military training are to be started in different parts of Ontario.

Mr. Hart, of the Agricultural Department, Ottawa, expects to send to Halifax 25 carloads of mixed produce as Ontario's response to the Belgian Relief Fund.

The Canadian troops are to be put under a course of training on the famous Salisbury Plains before proceeding to the war.

The English and Scotch Universities will have only about half their usual quota of Students this winter, on account of the war.

The wife of the Belgian Minister of State is now in Montreal and other cities, speaking in the interest of Belgian relief, as a representative of the Queen of Belgium. 113 carloads of food and clothing were at Deep Water, Halifax on Friday on route to Belgium.

Liege, The City of Sieges

(By Dudley Clark.)

Magnificent! Amazing! Thus comments the civilized world upon the stirring scene with which this, greatest and grimmest of war dramas, has opened. The first mighty billows of German invasion beat in vain against this little Belgian rock. Magnificent! Amazing!

Amazing! Well, perhaps so. And yet when we come to consider the history of Liege, not so very amazing. For Liege is accustomed to being besieged. Since the day when Caesar, with 100,000 men behind him, marched upon it on his way to Britain, Liege has had many times to defend itself against the invader. For the insurrectionary temperament of the Liegeois spurred them again and again to revolt against the ruling princes of Europe. And Liege was duly chastised and subdued for a time.

In fact, the history of Liege is a record of insurrections, mainly directed by the liberty-loving, if somewhat bloodthirsty, burglers against the bishop-princes appointed to rule over them. Of these risings and their resultant sieges the most important is, perhaps, that quelled by Charles the Bold of Burgundy, who having failed in 1467 to subdue the rebellious burglers took such ruthless measures in the following year that the walls of the city were razed to the ground and few of the inhabitants escaped death either by drawing or by the sword. In "Quentin Durward" Sir Walter Scott portrays with vivid pen the stirring events of this period. Here is his pen picture of Liege in the fifteenth century:

"The lofty houses; the stately, though narrow and gloomy streets; the splendid display of the richest goods and most gorgeous armour in the warehouses and shops around; the walks, crowded by busy citizens of every description, passing and re-passing with faces of careful importance or eager bustle; the huge wains, which transported to and fro the former consistings of broadcloths and serge, arms of all kinds, nails and ironwork, while the latter comprehended every article of use or luxury intended either for the consumption of an opulent city or received in barter and destined to be transported elsewhere—all these objects combined to form an engrossing picture of wealth, bustle, and splendour, to which Quentin had been hitherto a stranger. He admired, also, the various streams and canals drawn from and connecting with the Maes, which, traversing the city in various directions, offered to every quarter the commercial facilities of water-carriage."

Liege was twice taken by the Emperor Maximilian. In 1491 it capitulated to the French; in 1702 it fell to Marlborough and in 1792 was again attacked and captured by the French forces. By the Congress of Vienna (May 31st, 1815) Liege and its territories were assigned to the Netherlands, but 1831 saw them incorporated in the independent kingdom of Belgium.

And the Liegeois! Here is the reply of the Chaplain of Schonwaldt Castle to the residence of the Bishops of Liege in the fifteenth century, to young Quentin Durward, who has contemptuously designated the bourgeoisie of Liege as "the rabble of a disorderly city, who will fly before the first flutter of a banner with men-at-arms arrayed beneath it."

"You do not know the men of Liege," said the chaplain, "of whom it may be said that, not excepting those of Ghent, they are at once the fiercest and the most untamable in Europe. Twice hath the Duke of Burgundy chastised them for their repeated revolts against their bishop, and twice hath he suppressed them with much severity, abridged their privileges, taken away their banners, and established rights and claims to himself which were not before competent over a free city of the Empire. And yet, with all these fresh recollections, with their breaches unrepaired, and their arsenals scarcely supplied, the sight of an archer's bonnet is sufficient to stir them to uproar."

Thus the Liegeois of the Middle Ages. And today how are they described?—"Active, intelligent, and enterprising. Fiercely and implacably hostile towards those who seek to infringe their privileges." The events of the past week have given full and terrible endorsement to this comment. The blood of the men that defied Charles the Bold of Burgundy flows today in the veins of the citizens of this fine old Belgian city.

Abundant Fluffy Hair is Impossible if You Have Dandruff

How often we hear a beautiful woman referred to as having a regal head!

Drude that head of its hair and instead of a queenly, royal bearing we have a fright. The hair makes all the difference. To have that glorious abundance of radiant hair which always crowns "a regal head," one should use Newbro's Herpicide.

Herpicide represents the last word in scientific hair culture. It destroys the dandruff, checks falling hair and corrects generally, diseases of the hair and scalp.

The positive results and its delicate but refreshing odor recommends Newbro's Herpicide to ladies of refinement everywhere.

Newbro's Herpicide is 50c and $1.00 sizes is sold and guaranteed to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

Through Europe on the Eve of War

A Record of Personal Experience

ENGLAND'S SOLEMN HOUR

We awoke from a long and refreshing slumber Wednesday morning to find all England plunged in the deepest gloom. Up to this Wednesday, August 5, it had been hoped that England would have remained neutral. I am inclined to think that the widespread sentiment for neutrality would have prevailed had not news come that Germany had attacked Belgium. Not only the regular peace workers but many in Parliament and elsewhere were urging neutrality.

In all churches on the previous Sunday there had been prayers for the maintenance of peace and sermon references to the menace of a world war. At Westminster Abbey in the afternoon, the Archbishop of Canterbury said that what was happening was fearful beyond all words. What did it all mean? Did it mean that the hopes once cherished of the battle flag being furled were a crazy delusion, and that war was so inevitable and essential a habit of the peoples of the earth that to look for peace was a fanatical and baseless dream? To think so would, as it seemed to him, be to belie the Christian faith, Christian promises, Christian hope. The thing which was now afloat in Europe was not the work of God but of the Devil. It was not the development of God's purposes, it was the marplot of them by the self-will, the sheer wrongness of man. They had got to get themselves, slowly it might be, but determinedly, as the generations passed, to eradicating and making unendurable the temper among men from which such things spring. To "shrivel the falsehood from the souls of men" in the name of the Prince of Peace, the Archbishop of York, in the Minister, said good might come out of the evil if it drew them together and bade them, when it was past, look back with shame upon those voices that had sought to divide class against class and people against people. The officials of the Brotherhood and Adult Schools Movements united in a request to all brotherhoods and adult schools to pass resolutions and use all other means of influence on Members of Parliament and the Government to localize the area of the war and to maintain, if at all possible, British neutrality. The Bishop of Hereford, in a notice to his clergy, asked them "to do everything possible in the name of our church to strengthen the Government in maintaining a policy of strict neutrality and laboring for peace."

Our own British delegates, immediately upon reaching London published the following urgent appeal to the nation in the cause of peace and neutrality: "We have just returned from Germany, where we have been attending the first international conference of the churches for the promotion of friendship among the nations. We have seen with our own eyes the amazing rapidity of the growth of the war fever and the widespread misery caused by the mere generation for warfare. "There is, however, clear evidence that the serious part of the German nation has entered only with the utmost reluctance on the present war and deplores the possibility of a fresh outbreak of bitterness and misunderstanding with Great Britain. "We are dismayed beyond measure at the thought that England may be involved in the cataclysm of the present conflict. In the original quarrel we, as a nation, have no lot or part. We have ties of warm friendship with the peoples both of Germany and France, and no hostility to any people in Europe. If we can, even now, maintain this position, we still have a wonderful opportunity of acting as peacemakers and the friends of all. If this opportunity is not to be lost, the conscience of our land must speak more speedily than the spirit of the hate and international ill-feeling, propagated by the voices which call for war. "For the sake of the land we love and our brethren of other lands, in the name of the God of our common worship, we appeal to our fellow-countrymen not to despair, even at this hour, of discovering a just and peaceful solution, and that to this end we lift up our prayers as with one voice to Almighty God."

The appeal bears the following signature: J. A. Kempthorne (Bishop of Lichfield), John Clifford, J. Allan Foker, W. H. Dickinson, W. Moore Ede (Dean of Worcester), W. Leigh-ton Grane (Prebend of Chichester Cathedral), Anna Barlow, Joan Mary Fry, Meriel L. Talbot, David Brook, J. Morgan Gibbon, R. C. Gillie, J. A. McKeigan, J. G. Tasker, Henry T. Hodgkin and V. D. Davis. Many even went so far as to urge England to observe neutrality after it was plain that Germany intended to invade Belgium. Protests against British intervention were backed by "The Manchester Guardian" and "The Daily News." A British Neutrality Committee was formed. In a manifesto signed by Lord Courtney, of Penwith, Mr. J. Ramsay MacDonald, Mr. G. M. Trevelyan, Mr. Gilbert Murray, Mr. J. A. Hobson and others, it was urged that England was bound by her engagements and vital interests to give armed support to France and Russia, and that it would be disastrous both to domestic and imperial interests to engage at this crisis in a great continental war. Mr. Joseph King voiced opinions largely held by those in favor of strict neutrality in a letter to the press on the neutrality of Belgium. He admitted that Britain equally with France and Germany had recognized the neutrality of Belgium, but held that though England was interested in the neutrality of Belgium, she was in no way pledged to defend that neutrality with the forces of the Crown. Rev. J. E. Roberts, M. A., B. D., Dr. A. S. Peake, and other Free Church leaders supported the neutrality demand. On Saturday a "protest of scholars" was issued in which they said: "We regard Germany as a nation leaving the way in the arts and sciences, and we have all learned and learning from German scholars. War upon her in the interest of Serbia and Russia will be a sin against civilization." The Socialists held a demonstration in favor of neutrality in Trafalgar Square as late as Saturday. As late as Wednesday "The Daily News" contained an announcement of "The Neutrality League," printed in big black-face type and covering a whole page of the paper. But after the news came that the Germans had actually entered Belgium all talk of neutrality, except on the part of a few, was blown to the winds, although some peace people held out to the last. By Wednesday all hope of neutrality was gone and our Conference assembled at the Westminster Palace Hotel, with England drawn into the war.

To this Mr. Baker responded, although it was hard for him to speak, for no man in England, unless it had been Dr. Dickinson, had worked so hard for good-will among the nations as had he. Great gains had seemingly been won, and the future looked brighter than ever. This First Church Conference for Peace was going to give still greater impulse, when lo! in only a week all had seemingly been swept away, proved useless, of no avail. Mr. Baker, speaking with great difficulty, told us what the presence of Americans had meant to them all in these hard hours. He refused to believe the work had been in vain. He felt that this calamity was a call of God to us all to work with a passion and devotion that should conquer the world. Perhaps out of this conflagration the churches would rise purified and say to the world: "This must happen never again forever."

After Mr. Baker had uttered these heartfelt words, I suggested that in the hour that remained Dr. Clifford, Mr. Mead, and others should tell us what in their mind should be the duty of the churches in the immediate future. What should we who were to say to our hearers and our readers when we had returned home? Should we feel that our efforts were useless, or should this be a call of renewed consecration, to a greater effort than we had ever before made? I said I would like to know what those present were going to say to the hundreds of people who would greet them with, "Where is your peace movement?" as of old they taunted the Psalmist with, "Where now is thy God?" These questions called forth the most remarkable utterances of the Conference, from such men as Dr. John Clifford, Edwin D. Mead, Dr. J. Morgan Gibbon, Dr. Philip S. Moxom (who was acting chairman), the Bishop of Lichfield, George W. Nasmyth, and Dr. Charles S. Macfarland. Among others who spoke was Lady Barlow. I am sorry I have no record of these addresses—confessions rather, for each one spoke from the heart, from deepest feeling and conviction. But I can sum up the three or four impressions that have remained with me from the truly great utterances of these men. As one man remarked it was worth coming to Europe to hear these words alone.

First, there was the deep conviction that Jesus Christ meant his kingdom to be peace, and a brotherhood that surpassed any national boundaries. He did not intend that men should kill each other in his kingdom. It was the duty of his ministers to work for that kingdom and to preach that kingdom regardless of immediate success, even though all men preferred evil. Secondly, we must not look upon this war as the failure of the peace movement. Great gains had been made in spite of everything. Two of the great nations of the world, England and France had done everything in their power to prevent it, speaking boldly for lasting peace, and had gone into it only at the last moment when dragged in. In every country there was a larger group than any previous year had found who had been outspoken against their nation going to war. Also this movement among the churches had created groups in every land whose friendship no war could break. The moment this war ceased the representatives of these groups would get together and take up the work just where it had been interrupted. Meantime the American group could keep up correspondence with the groups in the warring lands, looking to the speedy restoration of peace.

Thirdly, it might be that this war would be such an object lesson to the churches of the complete failure and breakdown of the present political order, of militarism as a means of preserving peace, of force as a method of settling international disputes, that they would be ready to turn to the new order with an eagerness not yet evinced and listen to our gospel with an attention never yet betrayed.

Fourthly, we who had been through such scenes had seen at first hand how war breaks every human tie, had had its iniquity, its abnormality, its utter contradiction to Christianity so burned into our soul that our messages would have a new intensity, our soul a deeper passion, and our voice a power and pathos that might move men mightily. The regular conference adjourned after a moment of solemn prayer and a meeting of the American delegates was called for four p. m. the following day. This meeting of the American delegates had been called especially to adopt a declaration to the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, which a committee of Federal Council delegates, consisting of Bishop E. R. Hendrix, Bishop Luther E. Wilson, Rev. Wm. Merrill, D. D., Canon George Wm. Douglas, D. D., Rev. Charles S. Macfarland, Ph.D., and Rev. Frederick Lynch, D. D., had been asked to prepare. (This declaration is printed in full in an Appendix to my "Through Europe on the Eve of War.") It is a document worthy of careful study. I would call special attention to one phrase, because I heard almost everyone of the eighty delegates, soon or later, express this sentiment, it being the one impression burned into every soul: "We are witnessing the reduction of absurdity of unchristian civilization; for peace is not to be secured by preparation for war (even if unchristian men compel their brothers in self-defense, for the sake of sacred territories, to make war.") The declaration was unanimously adopted, and the representatives of religious bodies in America not in the Federal Council asked permission to add their endorsement and so make it a declaration to all the Protestant Churches of America.

Resolutions of thanks to Mr. Carnegie were also passed at this meeting. For when the Americans reached London they found all banks closed for three days, and many of them were short of money. Others had no money at all, the extra expenses having exhausted all they had brought. Others had to buy new steamship tickets at high rates, the old ones on continental lines having become useless. The cable to America was uncertain. I at once telegraphed to Mr. Carnegie at Skibo, and he telegraphed back to the London branch of the Royal Bank of Scotland to let us have all the money we needed on his account. It came as a godsend to our stranded delegates. We immediately opened an office in Mr. Dickinson's rooms, where, every day, Mr. Nasmyth advanced money to the members of our party and their friends.

THE MAPLE LEAF

How it Became the National Emblem of the Dominion.

When was the maple leaf with the long-pointed lobes first adopted? A life-long resident of Toronto states that in his early twenties he attended a public meeting held at old St. Lawrence Hall, on King street, and that for the first time in all Canada the maple leaf was suggested, discussed, and adopted, that same night. He fixes the date, 1860, because it was a Canadian-born citizen's meeting to arrange ways and means to suitably entertain the Prince of Wales, who was about to visit Toronto. Hon. J. R. Robinson, father of the late Christopher Robinson, K.C., was in the chair, and many prominent men were on the platform. Among them were the famous educationalist, Rev. Dr. Ryerson, Col. Denison, Rev. S. Givins, W. H. Boulton, Col. Jarvis, and others. A big procession of welcome was thought by the majority the best way to greet the prince's visit off to a good start, and J. H. Morris, once a leading Toronto lawyer, considered that it would be a good idea for citizens who were native-born Canadians to parade as a unit, and all wear some distinctive badge. As brought out at the meeting, when the 100th, or Prince of Wales Canadian Regiment was presented in 1859 (the previous year), with new colors by the royal do-or—the late King Edward—an embroidered maple leaf supplemented the usual regimental insignia. That was absolutely the original use of the present emblem of the Dominion, and not, as is often stated, that fact as a cue, the city's late surgeon, Dr. Richardson, made a motion that the native-born processionists could do no better than adopt the same distinctive mark. Those present were fired with enthusiasm to accept some of the much-advertised display promised by St. George's, St. Andrew's and the St. Patrick Societies of that day, to catch the eye of the home throne's heir. Taking that fact as a cue, the doctor's scheme took the general fancy of the gathering instantly.

There are several of Dr. Richardson's family still living in Toronto. There is also a large connection, the Royal, British and Brest families being prominent Queen City names. All of these can take just pride in Dr. Richardson's memorable motion, duly carried down in old St. Lawrence Hall. Its full text may some day reach our school books.

"Moved by Dr. James H. Richardson, That all native Canadians, whether identified with the national societies or not, should wear the maple leaf as an emblem of the land of their birth." Dr. Richardson was widely known in the medical profession, and taught anatomy to a legion of practitioners scattered at present over Canada, when professor at Toronto School of Medicine. His grandfather served in the British navy under Lord Rodney, and came to this country in 1785, receiving an appointment in the Canadian Marine. His father, Bishop Richardson, of the Episcopal Methodist Church, was born at Kingston, but moved to little York in 1800. His home and farm were at the northeast corner of King and Yonge streets. Previous to his church association, his activities were, like his father's strongly militant otherwise. Serving as captain under Sir James Yeo in the war of 1812, he lost an arm at the British capture of Oswego.

Naturally, loyalty to the crown also distinguished Dr. Richardson, he having during a busy life found time to serve successfully as surgeon of the field artillery, the Merchants' Company, and in the 10th Royal Regiment—his 25 years' soldiering.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1914.

Will the present European war be long or short? As the days pass, this question keeps pressing itself upon public attention. Sometimes the answer is dictated by our hopes. We hope that the destruction of life, the waste of money, the poverty, misery and tears of widows and orphans will not continue, and we, therefore, cherish the opinion that some great victory, some unexpected, providential turn of affairs will soon bring the war to a close.

Sometimes, on the other hand, our thoughts are dictated by our fears. We fear that the passions of men will become so aroused, and the determination to be the conquerors on the part of the opposing forces will become so dominant that neither will submit while there are men to fight.

But, the question itself is quite ambiguous. The actual warfare may soon close, but, the settlement of the issues arising out of it may be long delayed.

When Iretoria, though encircled by strong forts, surrendered without resistance, to Lord Roberts, on June 5th, 1900, the South African war ended, so far as actual fighting is concerned. But, it was not until May 1902, that Articles of Peace were signed by the submission of the Boer leaders to British authority.

When the French Emperor resigned his sword at Sedan, to William the first, there was little doubt as to the issue of the war between the French and the Prussians. But, actual fighting continued for some time after the white flag had been raised.

It is best for us in the present case to be guided by the opinions and experiences of men who are at the head of our affairs at this important crisis. It is a gratification so say that they are men who hold in a remarkable manner the respect and confidence of the British people. And, the opinion prevails among them that the war will be prolonged. Mr. Winston Churchill says, "The end may come sooner, the victory may come to us more easily; then let us rejoice, but let us not count on an easy solution." Lord Roberts and Lord Kitchener are of the same mind. They expect that it will be necessary for a full million of British soldiers to cross the English Channel, before the call for troops will cease. This will require continued drafts of able-bodied men from all the outstanding portions of the Empire as well as the homeland. The British people must accept their opinion, as the rule of their conduct in this matter. As the necessity becomes more manifest, the response must, and we believe will, keep pace with it. Lord Rosebury, while leaning to the opinion that fire, famine, and pestilence will assist in bringing the actual warfare to an early termination, adds, "Whether the war be long, or whether it be short, sure I am of this, that if it be long, every alienated man in this country, will have to pass into the ranks of the army before we give in."

A PRAISEWORTHY EXAMPLE. A young soldier, recently enlisted, before retiring on the first night of his camp life, took out his pocket Testament, and read a portion. His companions noticed this, and on the first night made no remark; likewise on the second night. On the third night, one of them asked, "Do you always do that?" The reply was in the affirmative. The rejoinder was, "Well, then, why don't you give us the benefit of it?" He gladly consented, and on the following nights, they all gathered around him while he read his evening portion.

This incident carries its own moral.

The report of the Commission of Enquiry into the loss of the "Empress of Ireland" in June last, makes a closely-necked volume of six hundred and fifteen pages. The examination of the witnesses occupied about sixteen days, and was extremely minute and searching, indicating the strong determination of the members of the Commission to leave no effort untied in the endeavor to ascertain the real cause of the sad disaster.

The report lays the blame upon Mr. Toftness, the officer at the time in charge of the Storstad. "We can, however, come to no other conclusion than that Mr. Toftness was wrong and negligent in altering his course in the fog, as he undoubtedly did, and that he was wrong and negligent in keeping the navigation of the vessel in his own hands and failing to call the captain when he saw the fog coming on." The captain had ordered that he should be called if the fog came on. The officer did not call him because he thought there was no danger.

OBITUARY
EDMUND BENT

The death of Edmund Bent, of Bridgetown, on Wednesday, October 14th, removes from this town and County one of the oldest best known and most highly respected citizens.

The deceased was born in December 1822 and was therefore almost 92 years old. For several years past he had remained very close to his own fireside yet had enjoyed fairly good health and his memory and intellect showed very little impairment so that he was able to enjoy the calls of friends and neighbors and manifested interest and sympathy in all matters that had been of interest to him throughout his long life.

Until the day of his death he had been about his house as usual but on that morning he remained in bed as he complained of having a restless night. During the day he gradually sank and in the late afternoon passed peacefully away, death being due to heart weakness.

Mr. Bent was born in Granville belonging to one of the families that settled there years after the Acadians were expelled and some years before the arrival of the Loyalists. In early life he moved to Paradise where he built up one of the best farms in that section. In the "seventies" he sold to the late Charles Ruggles and removed to Bridgetown.

With his older brother he was for many years engaged in the apple business, and the two brothers were the most reliable and successful speculators in this line in the County. They were among the first, if not the pioneers in the discovery of the markets of Great Britain for our fruit.

Many years before the coming of the railroad through the Valley the deceased bought apples as far East as Aylesford and had them hauled with oxen to Bridgetown and shipped by schooner from here.

In the 1878 Local Election, Mr. Bent was a candidate of the Liberal party but with his party throughout the Province was unsuccessful. In 1883 he was appointed Registrar of Deeds for the County which office he continued to fill most satisfactorily until 1903 when he retired on account of his age.

The deceased, as a business man had been very successful and was one of the wealthiest men in the County yet without ostentation or pride and his frankness, honesty and fairness in all business transactions had made him many warm life long friends.

For many years he was an official member of the Bridgetown Methodist Church and to the end of his life maintained his interest in all church activities and enterprises that were for the betterment of the community and country.

He was the last survivor of his family, his brothers, LeVose, Seth and Ambrose, all were well known throughout this County all having predeceased him some years. Three children, Geo. F. of Bridgetown, Fred J. of Granville, and Mrs. Ally with whom he resided, survive him.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Jost on Sunday afternoon. At the grave the impressive and solemn Masonic service was performed by the officers and members of Rothsay Lodge, Captain J. W. Salter, Dr. Armstrong, J. H. Tupper and F. R. Elliott acting as pall bearers.

The day being particularly mild, although muddy, the funeral was largely attended. Mr. H. B. Hicks of J. H. Hicks & Sons had charge of the funeral arrangements at the house and grave and with his complete and modern equipment performed his part most successfully.

JOHN MOORE
A sadness prevailed in the quiet community of North Williamston on Oct. 10th, when it became known that Mr. John Moore had passed on to his eternal rest at the age of 72 years. The deceased had been in poor health for several months past so that his death was not wholly unexpected.

reside, whereby his christian integrity he had won the highest respect and esteem by the entire community who deeply sympathize with the bereaved ones in their sad hours of affliction.

The funeral which took place on the following Tuesday morning was largely attended by sorrowing relatives and friends. Rev. Mr. Campbell, of Bridgewater, former pastor of the deceased assisted by Rev. F. Armistead, of Lawrencetown conducted the services.

The remains were laid to rest in the Lawrencetown Cemetery. The floral offerings were very beautiful.

The deceased was a devoted husband, kind and loving father and brother and leaves to mourn a sorrowing wife, two sons, Robert at home, John, who is in the employ of N. H. Phinney & Co., Lawrencetown; two daughters, Mrs. W. S. Bustard, of Mechanic, and Mrs. W. S. Myles, of Sussex; four brothers who acted as pall-bearers and five sisters, besides a large circle of relatives who will learn of his death with deep regret.

There will be a glorious dawn, We shall meet to part, no never, On the resurrection morn.

Annual Meeting St. James Adult Bible Class.

The fifth annual meeting of this class was held in St. James schoolroom last Friday evening with a goodly attendance. Early in the evening the Secty—Capt. W. E. Gesner, presented his report for the preceding year. This showed the class met 26 times for study with an aggregate attendance for the season of 888. The largest number present at any one session being 46 (this twice) and the smallest 21. Later in the evening the following were elected on nomination to the various offices:—

PRESIDENT—Mr. A. F. Hiltz.
VICE-PRESIDENT—Mr. R. W. W. Purdy.
SECTY-TERAS—Capt. W. E. Gesner.
TEACHER—Rev. E. Underwood.
ASSISTANT TEACHER—Mr. T. Kelley.

QUESTION COMMITTEE—Messrs. T. Kelley, A. McCormick, and Miss A. Longley.

MEMBERSHIP COMMITTEE—Capt. W. R. Longmire, Mr. R. Lowe, Mrs. Longmire, Mrs. Underwood, Miss H. Hoyt.

SOCIAL COMMITTEE—Mrs. Daniels, Mrs. H. Ruggles, Mrs. O. Raffee.

The class will be conducted on much the same lines as in former years. Meeting for study in St. James schoolroom every Friday evening from 7:30 to 8:30, commencing next Friday.

The section for study this season will be St. Johns Gospel, beginning with chapter 9.

In condition there will be a box for general bible questions, answers to which will be given on the first Friday evening of each month.

A cordial invitation is extended to any who may feel interested to attend the class whether as members or visitors.

HYMENEAL
CHISHOLM-ANTHONY.

A very pretty wedding took place Wednesday evening, the 14th inst., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Anthony, "Riverview Cottage" when their youngest daughter, Hazel E., was united in marriage to Ralph T. Chisholm of Granville Ferry.

The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion.

In the parlor an arch of ferns and wax berries had been erected by young friends of the bride, and under this arch the couple stood while the nuptial vows were taken.

The bride looked charming gowned in white embroidered voile, wearing a veil, and carrying a shower bouquet of white asters.

The wedding march was beautifully rendered by Miss Dora Winchester.

Following the ceremony and congratulations a dainty collation was served.

The young couple, who were very popular, were recipients of a great many handsome gifts, including silver, china, linen and a substantial sum of money.

They left that evening for Granville Ferry where they will reside.

There will be a Basket Social in the Hall in Clarence on Friday, Oct. 23rd, under the auspices of the Ladies' Club. Proceeds will be used in decorating the Hall. All are welcome.

Albert Burns and Hal Hoyt have recently returned from a successful hunting trip in the South West. They captured a large bear measuring nine feet and weighed about four hundred pounds.

The Outlook: The splendidly arranged exhibits from the experiment- al farms at Nappan and Kentville shown at the Exhibition in Kentville drew special praise. Each was an education in itself showing how products can be arranged in attractive form.

The Outlook: One of the instructive exhibits at the Fair in Kentville was that from the entomological station at Bridgetown. This was in charge of George E. Sanders. It included the brown tail, codling and bud moth, army worm and many other insects of special interest to the Annapolis Valley farmer.

After being closed for repairs and renovation, St. Mary's Church, Belle Isle, is being re-opened this (Wednesday) afternoon with special service at 3 o'clock, the preacher being the Rev. Archdeacon Martell, Rector of Windsor. After the service a social gathering will be held in Belle Isle Hall thus affording the Archdeacon's many friends and opportunity of meeting him personally.

In connection with the Halloween's Supper to be held in the Grand Central Hotel, Oct. 31st, there will be an entertainment in the evening, fortune telling, etc.

If timid, don't appear. But if immune to fear. At eight o'clock come all who can. And join in the search of a missing hand.

Grand Central Hotel, Oct. 31st. On Wednesday last the home of Mrs. (Ed.) Pigott, South St., was the scene of a small but enjoyable "surprise at home." A number of her friends met together and after a very pleasant afternoon spent in work and chatting, served tea themselves, amid much gaiety. Mrs. Pigott though an invalid is very bright and cheery and enjoyed having her friends in this informal way. This is not the first of these surprises and we hope it will not be the last.

A large quantity of apples are being used in Bridgetown for the manufacture of "Grand of Evans' Fine" brand cider. The Annapolis Valley Cider Company have just shipped 12,000 casks to England on the S. S. "Kanawha." Nearly 3,000 barrels of apples were required for this shipment and this market is of considerable benefit to the fruit growers of the Annapolis Valley. The Government's efforts to create a sale at home for a proportion of this year's large apple crop has met with warm approval in the vicinity.

A very pretty wedding took place in St. Alfonso's Church on Tuesday morning at nine o'clock when Miss Edith P. Greenleaf, of Bridgetown, was united in marriage to Mr. Alphonso B. Gaudet, of Paradise. The ceremony was performed by Rev. T. J. Grace, of Annapolis Royal. The bride looked charming in a suit of cream serge with hat to match. After the ceremony the happy couple left for a short trip through the Valley. After their return they will reside in Paradise. The bride received many useful presents.

The Convention of the Methodist Young People's Societies of Nova Scotia opens today, Wednesday in Providence Church. The sessions will be held at 2 p. m. and 7.30 p. m. today. On Thursday there will be three sessions, at 9 a. m., 2 p. m. and 7.30 p. m. respectively. Addresses will be given and papers read at each session. Over sixty ministers and other delegates will be present. All the sessions are open, and the public are cordially invited.

A representative of the Monitor was passing the fire station recently and his attention was directed to the very careless and dangerous way the fire apparatus is handled. A number of lengths of large hose was seen piled in one corner and the water cart left near the door in the place usually occupied by the hose cart and the fire man tells us that it is almost impossible to keep the fire fighting apparatus in the shape they would like. It is alleged that the street department is responsible for a lot of the trouble. We trust that Bridgetown may not be visited by a fire while such a tangled exists. Give the fireman a cheer.

One of the most unique and original ideas we have yet seen, for increasing the Canadian Patriotic Fund, has just been put in force by the United Drug Company, the manufacturers of the famous Rexall preparations. Each proprietor of a Rexall Store, of which there are over 400 in Canada, has agreed to pay to the Canadian Patriotic Fund 5 per cent of the value of his entire purchases of Rexall goods bought between October 15th and December 31st. It is estimated this proposition will raise at least $400,000. The cause is a noble one and appeals to every Canadian. We hope the suggestion will be taken up by other co-operative concerns in the Dominion.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS

Mrs. Johnson Beardsley, of Port Lorne is the guest of Mrs. (Capt.) W. E. Gesner.

Mr. Laurie Palfrey, teller of the Bank of Nova Scotia, has been transferred to the main office, Halifax.

Red Cross Society Formed

At the call of Mayor Freeman a large number of the ladies of Bridgetown met in the Council Chamber, Tuesday afternoon of this week for the purpose of organizing a branch Red Cross Society. The following officers were appointed: President—Mrs. O. T. Daniels. Vice-President—Mrs. J. White Peters. Treasurer—Miss Mary Jost. Secretary—Mrs. G. C. Warren. Committee of Cutters—Mrs. Dr. Dechman, Mrs. Sam Eagleson, Mrs. J. Harry Hicks, Mrs. Edwin Ruggles. Committee of Buyers—Mrs. Duxton, Miss Grace Hoyt, Mrs. Fred Johnson, Mrs. Little. Committee to oversee work—Mrs. O. T. Daniels, Mrs. J. W. Peters, Mrs. Hector McLean.

Meetings are to be held Thursday afternoon of each week. A cordial invitation is extended to all the ladies of the town to join this society and assist in the great work of supplying the needs of the brave soldiers who are maintaining the honor of our beloved Empire in the "red" struggle in which she is now engaged.

Karakule Sheep Co. Prospers

The Secretary of the Dominion Karakule-Arabi Sheep and Fur Company, Limited, received a wire from Mr. McNitch on Saturday that he was starting for home with another importation of Karakules from the Crawford Ranch. The Directors are to be congratulated in being able to secure these sheep, and it is wonderful the way the demand has opened up all over the Dominion and with this addition to their Ranch they will be in a better position than ever to meet this increasing demand. This year's increase is all sold and part has been delivered, the balance will be delivered this month. The Directors are to be congratulated in being able to introduce and carry through to a successful issue this new industry, as they must have been somewhat handicapped by the present financial depression.

Letter of Appreciation.

F. R. BECKWITH, Esq., Bridgetown, N. S. Dear Sir,—I regret very much to find that your letter of Sept. 30th, has remained so long unanswered. I assure you that we appreciated fully the kindness of the people of Bridgetown, and would thank you for your kindly foresight in regard to the socks to go with the harrigans. This matter is receiving our best attention, and satisfactory arrangements have been made. Allow me to convey to you and the people of Bridgetown the warm thanks of the committee for your generous assistance. Yours truly, ARTHUR S. BARNSTEAD, Secretary.

Round Hill to the Front

The Public Hall of Round Hill was the scene of a great feast on Tuesday evening when the Women's Institute gave a tea meeting. The proceeds of which are to be devoted to Red Cross Work. A most delicious chicken supper was served and a bountiful supper was at hand. Moschelle friends contributed generously as well as patronized the entertainment. This village always works most harmoniously with Round Hill, and in the present instance joined heartily in filling a car for the needy Belgians. After the supper was over ice cream and candy was served. The Women's Institute wish to thank the people of Annapolis and Bridgetown for their kind patronage as well as the friends from the villages near at hand.

The Challenge of the Submarine

Under this caption an article appears in The Independent of October 5, that gives a lot of information on submarines, showing what a simply irresistible engine of war is this comparatively new submarine. It almost makes us think that battleship and battle cruiser are ended, as far as naval fighting goes, and that they must give place to this "shark of steel" that is now the terror of all war vessels.
In June last Sir Percy Scott of the British Admiralty voiced this when he said that battle-ship building should be abandoned and that it was a waste of money to launch these great dreadnoughts, that in a moment could be destroyed by these unseen yet all powerful submarines.
The danger from the submarine increases as its power and scope of action increase; and, in these strenuous war days, the submarines are going some. The British cruiser "Pathfinder" was sunk by a submarine 400 miles from the German coast.
Today Germany has 27 submarines, with 12 building, with a tonnage ranging from 240 to 1000 tons, with a speed of 20 knots on the surface for the larger ones, and a radius of action of 2300 miles.
Great Britain has 75 submarines built and 20 building; and her latest type is 1500 tons, oil motors, with a submerged speed of 18 knots—the fastest in the world. Some of these submarines are 200 feet in length.
So the idea is gone that these submarines are merely little crafts used for the protection of a harbor. They are really powerful war vessels and from their hidden mode of attack are the most dangerous engines in naval warfare that the genius of man has yet devised; and so far there has been nothing designed or invented that will tell when these attacks are to be made, nor will any defense against these dangerous and insidious "sharks of steel." It looks as if the future success in war is to be attained either beneath the waters that cover the earth or in the air above the earth. What a whirligig of old time agents has the inventive genius of man made in these 20th century days.

Cowless Butter

One naturally associates butter with registered dairy cows, green grass and bubbling springs in hillside pastures. The arid sections of the Southwest is the very reverse of this. Hillside pastures or bubbling springs are not common there. Water is so valuable that a milkman would not think of putting it in his bottles; while the small boys and little pigs must grow up without that most delightful of playthings—a big mud puddle to wade and roll in. Yet butter is to be an important product of that section, whether the dairy cow likes it or not. If you have a boy at the "hungry age" just give him a sandwich made with peanut butter; hold a watch over him and count the seconds until he calls for more, then you will understand why the use of peanut butter is so rapidly increasing. The Spanish peanut is pre-eminent among the crops fitted to withstand the heat and drought of the Southwest. It refuses to die when other vegetation is shrivelled up. The tops make good forage, while the feed value of an acre of the nuts is roughly estimated as the equivalent of 1,000 pounds of pork.
It is being learned that these dry area nuts make a superior quality of butter, therefore large quantities are being ground. One Oklahoma mill is now turning out 5,000 pounds of butter a day, and cannot keep up with its orders.
"The Great American Des. Co." promises in the near future to produce an immense amount of butter without milking a cow.

Eye of a Submarine

(Pearson's Weekly.)
The great fault of the early submarines was that they could not see once they were below the surface of the water. The invention of the periscope altered all that, and gave the modern submarine a marvellous eye by means of which it could see over the surface of the ocean, though the body of the submarine is completely below the waves. The eye of the submarine is a straight, hollow tube starting from the steering chamber of the vessel, and projecting above the surface of the waves when the boat is submerged.
As the periscope is only a matter of 6 in. in diameter, and only projects some 18 in. above the waves, it is a most difficult thing to see by an enemy. Its total length is about 15 ft. The submarine's eye is really a combination of telescope and camera obscura. At the top is a powerful lens, and inside at intervals all the way down, is a series of mirrors which carry the reflection of what is above the surface to the watcher in the submarine 15 ft. below.

LAKE OF THE WOODS MILLING COMPANY, LIMITED, MONTREAL

LOWER GRANVILLE

Oct. 20th.
Miss Langstroth, of Hampton, N. B., and Mrs. Hill, of Cunard, Kings County, are guests of Mrs. J. R. Elliott.
Mr. Howard Crosscup who has loaded a car with apples at "Karsdale Station" left on Monday for Cape Island, Shelburne Co. Y.
A number of friends of Miss Hazel Anthony gathered at her home on Monday evening the 19th inst. Rev. J. O. McMillan read a very nice address, in which he alluded to her approaching marriage, in behalf of the guests assembled he presented Miss Anthony with a beautiful china tea set as a slight token of their appreciation of her services as organist, which position she has very acceptably filled, for some time. Miss Anthony although completely surprised responded in a pleasing manner. The evening was very pleasantly spent in games and music, the company dispersing at a late hour after wishing Miss Anthony many years of happiness in her future life.

The box that John K. Winchester, Esq., placed in his mill at the beginning of the threshing season and to which he asked donations of oats for the three ministers, contained at the end of the season twenty-seven bushels which amount was divided and presented to the Ministers, who met at Mr. Winchester's home on Tuesday afternoon, the 15th inst. Refreshments were served and a very pleasant time enjoyed socially.
The work for the oppressed and now starving Belgians still continues in Lower Granville. Last Friday evening by the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Winchester, who opened their house for the purpose, a clam supper was held to aid in this most worthy cause. The supper proved a great success in every way. The house was ray with lanterns with-out, the hostess and waitresses appeared as Red-Cross nurses, flags and standards of the allies adorned the halls, and the supper was an excellent one. In the centre of each table stood a fine representation in miniature of a maimed and wounded soldier. Around his neck hung a cup which invited contribution to the fund. The house was crowded during the whole evening. A very pleasant time was enjoyed, and on the following day the sum of $50.55 was forwarded to Halifax.

The farmers were quite disappointed last Friday on account of the apple crop not coming. Many loads of cider apples are standing near the station and more to be hauled. There is quite a large crop of all kinds of apples here. The edible varieties are very smooth and finely colored, thus showing that spraying is not necessary to get good apples, as there has been little or no spraying here. The right kind of season is all we need.

The contents of the "Ministers' Box" was measured out on the 13th. Tuesday, at the home of Mr. J. K. Winchester, Lower Granville, and was found to be twenty-seven bushels of oats, nine for each of the ministers who labor in this field. Mr. Winchester made the presentation speech which was in his usually happy style. The three ministers being present responded in turn. Mr. Winchester was on hand with some light refreshments which of course went to the right spot. Mr. Winchester says contributors made this small gift as a token of their appreciation of these very nice men. The Ministers wish through this medium to thank all who in any way contributed to the success of the "Ministers' Box." Those who were present claim a very enjoyable event, and hope to see more of this same spirit in years to come.

The Belgian Exodus A Stream of Misery

Pathetic Scenes as 25,000 Fugitives Cross the Border into Holland

(Special Cable Despatch to The Globe.)

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The London Times' special correspondent at Rotterdam says:
I have just returned from the Belgian frontier, where I witnessed the most pathetic spectacle it ever has been my lot to behold. I left Rotterdam this morning, in company with two Dutch journalists, via Dordrecht, Breda, for Roosendaal. The previous night thousands of refugees had arrived at Rotterdam from Antwerp. The object of our expedition was to see for ourselves what was the situation nearer the Belgian border. This morning was beautifully fine, and Holland was looking at its best in the clear air and sparkling sunshine. Never shall I forget the terrible contrast presented by the peaceful landscape with the human sorrow and misery which for hours was forced upon our attention.

THE ADVANCE GUARD.

The advance guard of the fugitives was encountered at Dordrecht, straggling little bands of men and women trudging along the wayside, with children clinging to their hands and skirts. The number increased when Breda was reached, and as we approached nearer the frontier little knots of these unfortunates grew more and more frequent. Our motor car stopped at Gunders for a moment. Instantly a weeping Belgian girl approached, and begged me to tell her whether a certain Antwerp fort, in which her brother was serving, had been blown up as reported. From this moment onwards there was no cessation in the stream of wretchedness.

A PITIFUL PROCESSION.

We were assured 25,000 fugitives passed along one road, and that not a main road, from Antwerp to Holland. For many hours I watched the pitiful procession. Every conceivable species of conveyance was utilized for this Belgian exodus, and the roads were encumbered with the Belgian cows and calves in droves. It is said 200,000 cattle thus entered Holland. These are the source of milk supply for the homeless wanderers. Intermingled with them were people of both sexes and all ages, afoot. Large country wagons were loaded with little children. Young as the children were, they realized the tragic character of the occasion, and journeyed in unchildlike silence. Many of the carts were drawn by donkeys, others by dogs. In some of the household possessions had been hastily piled. One saw fowl, puppies, and canaries jostling with hard-boxes and bundles of clothing. Blankets and bedding were conspicuous among the possessions of the fugitives, who were totally ignorant of where their next night's lodging would be. One man had left on a bicycle preceding his family, whom he awaited in the little village street. As I was talking to him his wife and six young daughters and little son came up to him. Destitute, they had been walking five hours, and others for seven or more hours.

The Rexall Stores of Canada Contribute to The Canadian Patriotic Fund

THE Rexall Stores of Canada, 400 of the leading Drug Stores in Canada have unanimously agreed to contribute to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, FIVE PER CENT of their purchases of all Rexall Toilet Goods, Rexall Remedies and other merchandise manufactured or sold by the United Drug Company, Ltd., Toronto, from Oct. 15th to Dec. 31st, 1914.

This action of the Rexall Drug Stores of Canada has been undertaken co-operatively, because as a co-operative organization they realize how much more can be done unitedly than individually, and it has been taken for two reasons—to fulfil a humane duty in raising a fund for the relief work of the Canadian Patriotic Organization, and a patriotic duty in an endeavor to keep a large staff of Canadian employees busy.

The 400 Rexall Stores of Canada make an appeal to your sympathy and support in their noble work for increasing the funds of the Canadian Patriotic Organization and for the support of Canadian workmen because—

The fund that would be raised on the basis of last year's business can be tremendously increased if every man and woman in Canada will help a little by the simple process of purchasing Rexall Goods at the Rexall Stores.

No need to give space in this announcement to emphasize the high quality of Rexall Toilet, Medicinal goods. Sufficient to say that 7,000 of the leading Drug Stores in Canada, Great Britain, and the United States place their personal and collective reputations behind them; that the public in these countries endorse them to the extent of several million dollars worth of purchases a year.

Better goods are not made, and you take no risk in buying, for every Rexall Store will return you your money if any Rexall Product is not entirely satisfactory and do it, too, without the slightest objection.

There's a full list of Rexall products waiting for you at the Rexall Store in your town.

Ask for it—kindly pass the word along to your friends. It is the collective purchases of all that will make this Rexall Store Fund for the Canadian Patriotic Organization work a big one.

The Fund will be collected from each Rexall Store in Canada by the United Drug Company, Limited, Toronto, and will be paid by them direct to the officers of the Canadian Patriotic Organization, and the amount so collected will be published in this paper when paid over.

Rexall Goods are made in Canada and you can procure them in your town only from

Intensive Farming on Scientific Lines

Dr. Maurice F. Egan, American minister to Denmark, says that intensive farming could be carried on in this country with half the scientific application of the Danes, the high cost of living problem would be solved.
The per capita wealth of Denmark is greater than in any other country. Dr. Egan attributes this to the tendency to cut large estates into small farms and work these intensively. He says that a family in Denmark can take a twenty-acre farm and make a comfortable living.
Canada's Royal Commission on Industrial Training and Technical Education has called attention to Denmark's agricultural schools. They are all residential institutions. The pupils live on farms. The principal is the managing farmer and each school is run at a profit. There are three such schools in Denmark and the number of pupils is constantly increasing.
Necessity made the Danes intensive farmers, and they are making a success of agriculture where the land is much higher in price and poorer in quality than in the United States. Unlimited acreage and great natural productivity may be a serious handicap to agriculture in this country. But in recent years the fact has been brought home that there is real economy in making every acre produce the maximum. Our agricultural colleges are assisting in making this possible. Intensive farming is in its infancy in the United States, but there is evidence of sturdy growth. Each succeeding year sees American farms worked more efficiently than the years before.
