Russian Papers are Significantly Silent Over Czar's Narrow Escape—Industrial Situation Becoming Grave—Workmen Petition the Czar—North China's Neutrality Assured.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 20.—Nothing better illustrates the condition of Russian journalism than the appearance of the St. Petersburg papers on the morning after an occurrence which nearly cost another violent death to the history of the ruling family of Russia.

There are treatment headlines but almost no editorial reference and the most brief mention possible of the unexpected hull of grape shot around the little chapel in which the emperor and the Romanoff family had gathered for the great religious festival of the Epiphany and blessing the waters of the Neva.

The account of the state ceremony prepared by the court marshal is long and rich in detail, describing the appearance and garb of the individual participants and the progress of events from minute to minute.

THE McCARTHY CASE.

Interesting Point Raised in a Liquor Licence Case at the Police Court This Morning.

The case against James McCarthy for violating the liquor license law by having a door between his liquor and grocery stores on Dock street, came up at the police court this morning, and several witnesses were examined.

Inspector Jones stated that Mr. McCarthy applied for a liquor license, to be taken out in the name of Alexander Ferguson Co., of Glasgow, which was granted. Later on Mr. McLeod, who is interested with McCarthy, wanted the license changed, and asked that his own name appear instead.

Mr. Morrill asked for a dismissal of the case on the ground that the words in the act "licensed premises applied to every part of the building in which the bar room was situated and he had a perfect right to have a communication between the two storages to the second floor. Mr. Morrill claimed that under no fair construction of the law could the liquor store be said to adjoin the grocery store. Then again Mr. McCarthy really holds a wholesale license.

Mr. Henderson contended that Mr. McCarthy had not a wholesale license. He stated that he did a wholesale liquor business at the foot of Union street. He kept samples at No. 8 Dock street but no stock.

WISDOM'S WHISPERS.

Women can manage a flirtation and avoid producing ugly complications. A man falls in love with a woman without knowing just why or wherefore. To some women affection means nothing more than self interest or gratification of vanity.

Men who openly discuss affairs of the heart usually have several black marks to their credit. When a woman talks a great deal about a certain man she wants others to think that it is purely a case of accident. After a man has had a spell of the blues he takes on the manner of one who is highly pleased with himself. It is easy for women to become a barrow look and still notice the man around her.

To a man it is exceedingly difficult to give anything like an accurate description of a woman. The words show a man that most attract a woman are his neckwear and his hair.

When a woman has large feet she affects an odd and mannish shaped shoe. Maria—Has your father forgiven Tom for causing you to drop with him? Mary—Father has forgiven me. He is giving me under great obligations Tom and tells him the litching is now out for his own good.

Maria—Then you will be at home good day? Mary—Tom is welcomed there on condition that I keep away.

LATER.

Durham, N. H., Jan. 20.—(Special)—The express train from St. John and Halifax, on the western division of the Boston and Maine, was wrecked here this morning. A defective iron plate upon the passenger car in a culvert, injuring 11 persons, four seriously.

The most seriously injured were: Miss Belle Donald, Hampton, N. B. severe injuries to her head and shoulder, dislocated arm; Colored porter of Pullman car who refuses to give his name; head and shoulders lacerated and bruised; being thrown through car window; Albert H. Hall, Portland, Maine, internal injuries; Charles Dunn, Jr., Portland, Maine, head and hip injured.

It is said that all these will recover. The other who received injuries necessitating medical attention were: George Reed, Island Falls, Me., injured scalp and arm; Mrs. Samuel Clark, New York, head bruised and face injured; Calob, Coo, Rockport, Me., head hurt; J. Grindle, Bangor, wounded on head; Mr. Grindle is with the Standard Real Estate Co. and is a builder.

George Kavanaugh, Harvard, Mass. injured to head; John McGinnis, Boston, injured about head; Mrs. Allen Howard, Fredericton, N. B., arm fractured. About a dozen other persons received bruises or minor injuries from the sudden stop of the train.

The express, with about 100 passengers on board left St. John at 10 o'clock Thursday night, having come through from Sydney, C. B., and Halifax. Time was lost coming through eastern Maine and the train was about two hours late just before it reached Durham.

Intending to make up as much time as possible the engineer of the train, driving the locomotive at a high rate of speed gave a start of 50 miles an hour. A feature of the wreck of the overturned passenger was the quick and effective relief of students from the New Hampshire State College of Agriculture, the members of which institution are located within 100 yards distant from the point where the wreck occurred. About 150 male students responded, while ten female members of the college acted as nurses in the carriage during the journey.

"And some that smile have in their hearts, I fear, millions of mischief."—Julius Caesar, Act IV, Scene I.

His muttered something impatiently advanced a step nearer, but instantly resumed his polite demeanour when I began to shut the cabin door in his face.

"Let me plead with you for all you hold most dear—for your lover's life," he urged. "If these people tomorrow night at latest, Arthur Rivington will be taken and hanged. Roger Marsha is London to-day laid information with the Home Secretary that the fugitive was at Toland Bay, and I have reason to believe that the place will be turned upside down in order to find him. No chance will be given him for explanation. He will be executed the moment they get him back to goal."

"It was a terrible choice to be called upon to make. If I refused Herzog's advances I might be condemning Arthur to death; on the other hand, if I accepted them, I might be placing a fresh weapon in the hands of my enemies.

"But the choice was no longer mine to make. I had dallied too long for the heavy tread of Captain Belcher's boot warned me to close the door. At the same time Herzog stepped swiftly back into the cabin, with a ready greeting for his first on his lips.

"You have suggested it all right, captain," he said. "If you could see one better and reach the shore tonight it would be as good as hundred in your pocket over the job. I am authorized to act as paymaster in any special emergency."

"Can't be done for any amount of money," replied Belcher, evidently, however, impressed if not mollified by the monetary offer.

"The tide has been too quick for us, and you've been too slow. If those fellows don't drop anchor in ten seconds, we'll touch bottom. I should have stayed to see the order carried out, but for this raging thirst. Ah, there she goes!"

The cabin rattled, the engines reversed for half a minute, and I knew that the Nightshade had taken up her anchor. I held my breath until the tide should surge again. If only I could be sure that the move had been made lest Roger Marsha should see the resemblance on recovering from the blow which Herzog alleged that he had dealt him, how happy I should have been. How I would have exercised all my power to make another opportunity of speaking with Herzog again before he slept.

As it was, the conversation which

In less than five minutes he was acquainted with all my adventures, from Roger Marsha's tracking me to Mrs. Webley's shop, down to my long drive from Marsha Hall to the docks in Sir Gibson's company, and the ruse by which I was induced to go below into the cuddy. Herzog's manner of receiving my narrative was instructive. He heard of my danger in the burning Mill House quite impassively, but he showed keen interest in Mrs. Webley's behaviour and in all that passed at Marsha Hall.

"You have had some narrow escapes, and have been among some very unkind people, young lady," was under the impression that the news-vendor woman gave you the right address, where Clara Rivington wrote to Roger Marsha, when she sent you to the Mill House?"

"At the time I thought so, though I was puzzled when I learned at Chipping Wye that the Mill House had been so long unoccupied," I replied.

Herzog laughed and tumbled for a cigar. "The excellent Mrs. Webley," he proceeded as he struck a match, "sent you to the Mill House because, during your absence from her shop, Roger Marsha slipped in and paid her to do so. Being on his father's estate, he knew of it as a solitary house, where he would be able to bring you and your pursuit of him to an untimely end. Roger Marsha really received his unacknowledged wife's letters at his rooms in Jermy street, with the 'Danvers Crane' envelope covered by fresh ones re-addressed by Mr. Webley. On one occasion, however, that meddlesome female made a fatal slip in merely crossing out the 'Danvers Crane' and re-addressing the same envelope."

"How do you know that?" I gasped.

"I suspect that this extraordinary man always had an eye for dramatic effect. Striking something of an attitude, he produced a package from his breast pocket.

"Because there are the letters," he said, holding them out to me. "I was not left alone in Roger Marsha's chambers yesterday for nothing."

"Am I to take them?" I faltered, unnerred by his sudden action.

"Certainly. Within limits I am a man of my word," he smiled. "You have satisfied me that Marsha can be convicted without my being compromised by that gifted family, so I keep my promise. But I have more for you. Take care of that box, Miss Chilmark, for in conjunction with the letters it will remove the rope from the neck of the interesting young man with whom it has been my privilege to associate, and will place it round that of as big a scoundrel as ever deserved hanging. I speak dispassionately, as one who lays no claim to probity for his own sake."

The object which he now extracted from his voluminous pocket and proffered for my acceptance was a chocolate box, tied with faded pink ribbon and decorated with the gaudy picture of a lady of preternatural beauty.

"The comfits in that box," he explained, "are identical with those with which Roger Marsha poisoned Mrs. Rivington and her daughter,

London, Jan. 19.—An alarming collision in which three trains were involved, including two Scotch expresses, occurred on the Midland railway near Harmsley, early this morning. Four passengers and two railwaymen were killed and a score were injured, of which seven were seriously hurt. The accident occurred in a fog, the third train running into the wreckage resulting from the first collision. The cars of one of the Scotch expresses burst into flames and were soon ablaze from end to end. There were not many passengers on the trains or the casualties must have been far heavier as the trains were heavily loaded with goods. The wreckage was telegraphed and splintered into match-wood. Among the injured is Robert Brough, the artist.

Flowers suffered and the French littoral. The beautiful garden of Nice and its neighborhood are severely barren. It is impossible to estimate the loss. Florists at Cannes say it will be at least 4,000,000 francs ($800,000). Despatches give gloomy pictures of the devastation caused by this cold spell which is the worst the Riviera has ever known.

ST. JOHN, N. B., JANUARY 20, 1906. The St. John Evening Times is published at 19 and 21 Canterbury Street, every evening (Sunday excepted), by the St. John Times Printing & Publishing Co., Ltd. A company incorporated under the Joint Stock Companies Act.

PRODUCTIVE PRISON WORK.

The annual report of the superintendent of prisons in New York state contains some interesting figures relative to the productive work of the labor force of prisoners. A summary of the report shows that the number of productive industries now carried on in the three state prisons is 24, which gave employment in 1904 to 1,800 prisoners, 1,128 prisoners being employed "on other work." The largest number engaged in any one industry was 169, who were employed in making mats and matting at Sing Sing, and the next highest number was 124, engaged in making towels on hand looms at Clinton Prison. The value of the manufactured supplies shipped from the prison factories during the year was $668,143.73, an increase over the previous year of $24,785.10. These supplies all went to institutions of the state or of political divisions of it.

AS TO RAILROAD RATES.

Railway interests naturally argue that the time is not opportune for the United States congress to touch the question of railroad rate-making. It is also argued by opponents of government interference that the result would be injurious to the transportation interests of the country. A leading financial paper combats those arguments very well by pointing out in reply to the first objection that the best time to introduce such legislation is when the country is prosperous and a strong government of conservative tendencies is in power. Sooner or later, it asserts, such legislation must come, and it is less likely to be radical now than under a democratic government, or in a period of hard times. With regard to expressed fears of disorganizing results to follow an enlargement of the powers of the interstate commerce commission, this journal recalls a former prophecy as follows:—

"Two years ago men of sober judgment predicted business chaos as a result of the Northern Shoshone presentation, and every alarmist in the country heaved a sigh of relief against its approaching ruin. It never came. Government securities were never firmer than on the day of the case's disposition, the business of the country never halted, and men were much too busy to congratulate each other on their own and the nation's escape from a catastrophe. The country is too big, its interests too vast and diversified, its people too sensible, its rulers too honest and wise to permit a manufactured apparition like that of business and the steady march of national progress. All the huge animals nourish huge parasites, and the size and the number of these only attest the vigor and the strength of the animal itself.

"And so it will be with the 'trust' evil, the tariff burden, roadless financing,—with all the greedy crookedness that the alarmists shake in the people's faces and before which they will all be settled in orderly fashion and in due season when their time comes. The law will find a way."

THE DEADLY CIGARETTE.

Because Her Husband Objected to Her Use of Them Chicago Woman Committed Suicide. Chicago, Jan. 20.—Because her husband objected her for smoking cigarettes, a habit which had undermined her health and which she could not conquer, Mrs. Sadie Thompson, wife of Robert Oliver Thompson, son of the Oak Park Episcopal church, killed herself with poison. While she was in the fatal grips of the drug, the sight of her grief-stricken husband and little daughter, and his desire for life, and she prayed that she might live. According to the testimony of the coroner at the inquest, his wife had been addicted to the cigarette habit for seven years. "She has often had angry words over it," said Thompson, "and she often had tried to break herself of the habit, but she would always go back to it again. The deadly cigarette killed her." She was irritable and nervous because of smoking and once before four years ago she tried to kill herself by taking morphine.

Bishop Talbot's Case.

New York, Jan. 20.—The World says:—"The second presentation to be brought against Bishop Echebert Talbot of the diocese of central Pennsylvania upon charges made by Dr. W. E. Irvine is now being prepared as the result of a conference held in this city by three lawyers and Dr. Irvine. It is said that several of the original presenters who live in Philadelphia attended the meeting as well as some of those who live in New York. "Dr. Irvine arrived in New York yesterday and sought out Herbert Noble, counsel in the first case, who, it is understood, will handle the second."

Their Romance Ends.

New York, Jan. 20.—Dead from carbolic acid, Wm. Hauser and his bride of a few months, were found tonight in a room in a hotel in Harlem. They registered there under an assumed name yesterday. Nothing was found in the room to indicate whether the acid was self-administered, but the coroner after investigating said he believed the pair had agreed to commit suicide together. Hauser and his bride separated some weeks ago, but had met frequently.

African Rebellion.

Berlin, Jan. 19.—The news from German South West Africa of the surrender of several of the chiefs of the Hereros, including William Marrow, gives rise to hopes that the Herero part of the African rebellion is ending. However, other forecasts will proceed to Africa. About 2,300 fresh troops are either about or preparing to embark. The total there is less than 11,000. A correspondent asks if the room on the top floor of the post office used for civil service examinations, and fitted with desks, could not be assigned for the purpose of a night school.

A MAGNIFICENT DREAM.

A magnificent dream, which he declares with enthusiasm may be made a splendid reality, is discussed by A. B. Walker, L. L. B., the Negro philosopher, in this city, in the book "A Message to the Public," just issued from the press.

DEVELOPMENT ON THE BORDER.

Sprague's Falls Promises to Boom in the Near Future—Extensive Building Operations. St. Stephen, Jan. 19.—The border towns have been getting a goodly share of cold weather since New Year's day. On Sunday last the thermometer ranged lower than at any time during the past fifty years. The government instrument went to 59 below zero some others went to 46. On Wednesday morning 32 below was recorded on Wednesday night, about midnight the thermometer fell on the glass, and this morning at 8 o'clock, 30 above indicated a great change for the better. The accounts for the year, 1904, appeared in book form this week. The financial record looked well, with a balance in hand of about $4,000. The accounts are annually submitted in book form just previous to the election of Mayor and council, so that ratepayers know whether they are satisfied with the council. The election will be held on Wednesday next and no doubt after the excellent showing, there will be no opposition to Johnson, D. C.; J. A. Tattore, lecturer; J. Monaghan, and S. S. Treartran, D. L.—After the election the next meeting of the lodge will be held in May at the Rolling Dam when final arrangements will be made for the 12th of July celebration.

MUNICIPAL LIGHTING.

Great Success in Chicago—New York Taking it up. (Boston Transcript.) The leading officials of New York city, a majority of the press and many of the leading citizens seem to have reached the conclusion that the only way in which independence of the lighting monopoly can be done is by the establishment of a municipal lighting plant, or at least by bringing that utility directly under municipal control. Mayor McClellan has reluctantly taken that stand. While he believes in limiting as much as possible the business functions of government, he urges in the present instance two compelling reasons, first, that the city is in the hands of a monopoly, and second, that this monopoly is extortionate and unreasonable. It is, however, a questionable venture in the minds of some. They think it smacks of socialism and they distrust the public servants who they trust to control the control of such a department.

PHILOSOPHY.

A dress with a train is a woman's long suit. The thermometer doesn't respond to a call down. The match that doesn't strike isn't to be made light of. Some fellows never foot the bill without kicking about it. Most men will admit that they have more brains than money.

It's all right to take things as they come if you don't expect too much. It's a good thing to know enough about law to keep out of its clutches. When a woman makes a fool of herself over a man she takes it for granted.

The mother of the expert accountant little knew that she was nursing an adder at her breast.

No, Maud, dear, in taking lessons on the corset it isn't necessary to engage the services of a private tutor. "Bright isn't always right," observed the Wise Guy. "Well, it's mighty seldom left," murmured the Simple Maud.—(Philo's Record.)
