HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY. OFFICIAL SYNOPSIS OF PROCEEDINGS

our. The next question that the House will have to consider is at what age we are to give it to them. In England the franchise is given at the age of thirty. At this session of the British House a petition was filed asking that the age be reduced so as to give the franchise to the women at the same age as the men, that is twenty-one. But it was found that if the women got the vote at twenty-one there would be two million more women to vote than men and as they would swamp the votes of the men they were not given it. Now we ask ourselves at what age we should give it to the women. In Canada they have made it twenty-one. In England they have made it thirty. I think that in England a large number of the women do not vote. A large number of them are very indigent about it and I think that one might be inclined to imagine that a great many young maidens just passed thirty would be a little diffident about going to a public booth. However that may be I am inclined to believe that the age to give it would be twenty-five. I don't concede at all that the woman is not as well qualified to vote at twenty-one as the man is, but I have my doubts as to whether the vote ought to have been given to the men at twenty-one. At the same time I think, if the votes were given to the women at the age of twenty-five it would meet the point. The next question is what privileges we are to extend to the women under the vote? And this Bill gives permission to the women to sit in the House of Assembly exactly on the same terms as the men do, and their privileges are exactly the same. The Bill calls for a woman sitting in the House of Assembly to have an income of four hundred and eighty dollars, or she must be the owner of property to the value of twenty-five hundred dollars. Of course, I don't say that the women are going to make a desperate effort to get into the House of Assembly, but if they are given the vote I submit that they should be given the right to get the proper people to represent them.

Mr. Speaker, I shall be making more remarks on this subject when it goes into Committee. I only wish to introduce this afternoon, but I want to sum up my few remarks now by saying that all arguments go to show that the women of Newfoundland are merely looking for their just rights, and the question we have to ask ourselves in this House this afternoon is: Are we going to give way to their very reasonable requests? Are we going to give the women what they are asking for? Or are we going to make the public pronouncement that, in the opinion of the majority of this House, the women of this country are less deserving, the intelligence of the women of this country is less developed and the judgement of the women of this country is less to be depended upon than that of the women of any other part of the English speaking world?

I have much pleasure, Mr. Speaker, in moving the second reading of the Bill.

THE ATTORNEY GENERAL said that in seconding the measure he was doing so because he was convinced that no other course was open to them than to give the women the right of voting. He had supported the matter from the very first and had always given it his support. In that he was never influenced by numbers, for that was the time for it to be given her. The whole thing had been summed up in the concluding remarks of the Prime Minister, in that the vote should only be withheld on the grounds that the women of the country were uneducated mentally for it. It had been his experience professionally to find that the cool deliberation of the women was of more value than the judgement of the man. Woman was to-day a big factor for good in the world and should not be excluded from this right. It was most unfair to try and dodge the issue by excluding from public life, owing to the effect on her temperamentally. In concluding he expressed himself as having no fears as to the result and that women would use their right quite as intelligently as men do.

MR. WARREN claimed, that despite the Prime Minister, the Bill was going to be a party measure with his party, and that the whole party was formally committed to the support of the Bill. He referred to his personal connection with the measure, but disclaimed that there had been any discourtesy to the women more than there had been in the Imperial Parliament this year when they refused to lower the age limit from thirty to twenty-one. He had remarked before that the Speech from the Throne had forecasted some radical legislation and in that he had been right. This Bill with the Redistribution Bill were radical and the two Bills together were going to have a very beneficial effect on the country. As to the temperamental argument he pointed out that the British women, according to his own observations had not been changed by the vote.

MAJOR CASHIN in speaking on the measure from the point of view of the ex-service man, pointed out very graphically the splendid work done by women in the War, and thought it only right, fit and proper for the House to support the measure unanimously.

MR. ASHBOURNE as one who had also been through the war supported the Bill, and agreed with Major Cashin, that every member should support it, and that it should receive the support of every man in the country.

THE COLONIAL SECRETARY desired to congratulate the women on the achievement of a point in their campaign when victory was almost in sight, and declared that he had always been in support of the measure. He took the position that anyone that was fit to vote was fit to sit. He was at one with the Attorney General when he had said that the women should have had the vote on demand. We had not hesitated to call upon them when we needed them during the war, and we could not have won without them, and now there should be no hesitation in granting them the vote. One very good reason in support of their claim, was that their earning power to-day was easily equal to that of men, and they were as great producers. He felt very glad that the measure would be carried during their administration, for he really believed that it was only in the nature of a square deal to the women.

MR. MOORE had great pleasure in endorsing all that his colleagues had said on the subject, and joined with the Colonial Secretary in complimenting the women on achieving the present stage in their fight for their right, and had great pleasure in supporting the Bill.

MR. BROWNE (St. John's West) availed of the opportunity to express in public the strong views in favour of the Bill that he had already expressed to the women themselves. He had had the opportunity in Canada, whilst engaged in training work, and in munition work to really see the amazing things that women were capable of doing during the war. The great democratic principle should prevail, that Government for the people should be by the people, and the women of the nation were an essential part of the people.

CAPTAIN WINSOR declared for the information of the Prime Minister that he had already promised the women of Bonaville in the vote. He had been deeply impressed by the delegation of women that had waited upon him for his support. They proved to be very business like and wasted neither his time, nor their own, when they had received his answer. This could not be said of all the male visitors to his office. He had heard from men that had served the forces, and he thought it was his duty and the duty of every member to vote for the Bill.

MR. HALFYARD regretted the absence of the Leader of the Opposition from the House, owing to a cold, for he felt that the measure would receive his support. He personally supported the Bill.

MR. PUDESTER pointed out that many of the members had said that they would offer further remarks when the Bill came to Committee and that as he would be precluded from that privilege he would like to make a few remarks now. He was going to vote for it, and in doing so he was not the victim of any propaganda, but had always believed that the women should have the right to vote. The had gained that right during the war but they should not have had to win it. It was a matter of justice and a matter of natural right that they should have the vote and a say as to who should govern their country. There is, and there can be, no good or sufficient reason for refusing them the vote. Women are the equal of men and if the men had the vote, then so should the women. It gave him very great pleasure to be able now to give the measure his unqualified support.

HON. M. S. SULLIVAN thought that it was a foregone conclusion that the measure would be passed unanimously. He had pledged his word to the women's delegation and he meant to keep his promise. The women of our country played their part in the war as well as those of other countries and there was no reason why we should make any apologies for giving them the vote.

MR. HIBBS believed as he always did in the principle of the measure. He regretted the references to the previous events in the history of the Bill and felt sure that no present member of the House was responsible for the shelving of the measure before.

MR. H. B. C. LAKE said he had informed the delegation that he came to the House with an open mind on the subject. He had hoped to hear some of the opponents of the Bill speak and give their reasons against it, but he feared that the presence of the ladies had frightened them. The women of Burin, he said, were strongly in favour of it and so was he.

MR. GRIMES said that he was glad to see that the Prime Minister had some saving grace at last, and was living up to his slogan of a "square deal" in bringing in the measure. He had always supported it and thought that in justice to the women it should be passed un-animously. The Bill was read a second time and will go to a Committee of the whole House to-morrow. The House then adjourned until the usual hour Tuesday afternoon.

TUESDAY, MARCH 10, 1925. The House met at the usual hour and immediately got down to business.

PETITIONS. MR. GODDEN presented a petition from Hart's Delight on the subject of a road.

MR. GODDEN on behalf of Mr. Duff, presented a petition from Carbonar on the same subject.

HON. SIR JOHN CROSBIE presented a petition from the truckmen of St. John's with respect to the proposed legislation re the rules of the road.

This petition was supported by Mr. Hickman and Mr. Linegar.

HON. M. S. SULLIVAN presented a petition from Red Island respecting the coastal service, and one from Angels Cove respecting a breakwater. The petitions were endorsed by Mr. Simnot.

HON. F. G. BRADLEY presented a petition from Brigus respecting the public wharf at that place. The petition was supported by Hon. Sir J. C. Crosbie, and by Captain W. C. Winsor. He also presented petitions from Port de Grave respecting a breakwater, and from Bareened on the subject of a road.

MR. HALFYARD presented a petition from Heart's Content respecting a public building.

THE HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE gave notice of introduction of a Bank Amendment Bill.

The War Pensions Amendment Act was read for the third time and ordered to be sent to the Legislative Council, with a message requesting the concurrence of that body.

The House went into Committee of the Whole respecting the Lobster Bill which passed without amendment and was ordered to be read a third time.

The Committee of the Whole on the Firearms Bill was deferred.

The House went into Committee to consider the Woman's Franchise Act.

THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION in rising to accord his wholehearted support to the measure only regretted that it had not been granted some years ago, so that many a political catastrophe might have been averted. He asked that the Committee might rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again, as there were some amendments to the Bill that the Opposition wanted introduced and they wanted slightly more time to discuss them. They were mostly minor amendments and would not affect the principle of the Act, but would merely make it all the more workable.

THE PRIME MINISTER felt that before the Committee rose they would like to know the exact nature of the proposed amendments in order that he might be prepared and asked that the Leader might give the Committee this information.

THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION said that the main amendment had regard to the placing of booths in the large industrial centres in order that non resident electors might not be disenfranchised as was now the case in some of the larger centres, notably the Humber area.

THE PRIME MINISTER pointed out that the object of this measure was the securing to women of the right to vote, and that the Leader of the Opposition was making use of the Bill to insert other amendments that were altogether extraneous. He regarded this action as being most unfair.
