CANNIBALISM IN RUSSIA.

Dreadful Results of the Scarcity of Food —Parents Eat Their Dead Children's Bodies.

dren's Bcom.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 25.—The distress among peasantry is increasing. Potatoes are failing in many districts, and a new insect, known as Zooka, more destructible to corn than the Hessian fly, has appeared. The whole population of some villages in Astrachan are dying of starvation. The doctors prescribe corn instead of medicine. There are stories afloat of parents eating their children at Nijni Novgorod. The authorities in many places are levying a tax on laborers wherever they obtain work.

Wholesale Incendiarism.

Sr. Petersburg, Sept 25.—Twenty-eight farms, with all the cattle and stores, have been destroyed by fire of an incendiary origin at Kozieglow, Russian Poland. To delay the fire engines the incendiary out the ropes of the bells.

No More American Cardinals at No More American Cardinals at Present.

London, Sept. 25. — The Chronicle's Rome correspondent says it is practically settled that no American cardinals will be appointed at present. Six of the new cardinals will be Italian and one Hunghaian.

Fatal Panic fu a Church. JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Sept. 25.—Just be-fore 12 o'clock last night a panic occurred in the Harmony Baptist Church (colored), during which one woman was killed, three received fatal injuries and about twenty persons were seriously crushed and bruised. Women Admitted to Methodist Confer.

ZANESVILLE, Ohio, Sept. 25.—The Ohio Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, by a vote of 125 to 27, has voted to admit women to general conferences as lay delegates. Mindson, Ont., Sept. 25.—As a Grand Trunk train was passing Tecumseh yester-day a body crushed and covered with blood was noticed by the engineer lying near the semaphore. It was identified as that of Charles Grant, one of the oldest section

The Deadly Thresher. Belleville, Sept. 25.—Finley Clark met an awful death yesterday while threshing at the barn of J. C. Huff, of Black River, in Prince Edward county. Clark was coming down from the mow by the way of the feed-table of the machine, and while being warned of danger stepped upon the feed board and slipped slowly into the cylinder, board and sipped slowly into the cylinder, which, revolving at lightning speed, literally ground his leg to pieces from sole to hip. Surgical aid was procured as speedly as possible, but proved of no avail. As the shock paralyzed the body he suffered no pain, and yet his mental faculties maintained their seaturely incorrect with the seaturely of the same of the state of the same of the s tained their natural vigor, and with his own hands he rendered no small assistance in the efforts at extrication. The fatal occur-rence took place at 11:30 and he breathed his last at 6 o'clock in the evening. The sudden changes liable at this season result in cold in head, followed by catarrh and perhaps consumption and death if not speedily treated. Nasal Balm almost in-stantly relieves cold in head, and never fails to cure catarrh in its worst form. The Fair Has Been Pronounced a Financial Success.

Citizens Also Have Profited Largely in a Business Way.

Exhibitors Removing Their Stock and Goods - Those Who Have Exhibited Express Their Satisfaction Over the Result-A Happy Ending.

The Fair is over, and a grand success it has been. The weather has not caused a break, and a constant stream of visitors have filled the grounds. While everything may not have gone as smoothly and satisfactorily as might have been the case, there has been as much satisfaction over the arrangements and the manner of their completion as on any previous year. The board is liberally supported by the London press and people, and there are suggestions that may be given that it would be well for the board to consider and act upon. There always will be criticism on events of this kind, and much of it is honestly and kindly made; and the lair board that accepts suggestions and The Fair is over, and a grand success it pf it is honestly and kindly made; and the fair board that accepts suggestions and gives them a fair consideration is composed of men who are entitled to the confidence and continued support of the people. So also those who have criticisms to make should present them in a friendly way and not in the offensive manner in which trities to frequently neafer their complaint. not in the offensive manner in which critics too frequently prefer their complaint. While London people liberally support the Fair, the city on the other hand is largely benefited by it, and neither those who believe improved arrangements may be made and have suggestions to make, nor the members of the Fair Board who may have complaints presented to them have any reason. bers of the Fair Board who may have com-plaints presented to them have any reason to be afflicted with the "big head." If consideration moderates the address of all parties concerned some improvements in the running of the Fair may yet be made. It is satisfactory to know that while the re-ceipts of the Fair Board have been large citizens have not suffered, not less than ceipts of the Far Board have been large citizens have not suffered, not less than $250,000 having found its way into the pockets of the people. This sum will directly or indirectly benefit every citizen. To the intelligent yeomany of Western To the intelligent yeomanry of Western Ontario and our friends in all the towns

Ontario and our friends in all the towns and villages in the neighboring counties the Fair Board and citizens of London are like indebted for the expression of their confidence and friendliness as manifested by their attendance at the Fair. THE TWO-DAY BUTTER CONTEST.

One of the newest and, to dairy farmers and breeders, most interesting features of the Fair was the two-day butter-producing take prize of $50 for the cow of any pure reed making the most butter in two days. As previously approunced in the ADVER-HSER, it was decided not to actually make tock method test its percentage of butter at and by simple multiplication and addiion determine the total butter fat product of the two days. Were the cows' milk octually turned into butter it would show greater result, as good commercial butter contains from 12 to 15 per ent, of moisture, caseous matter, itc. Mr. C. A. Zavitz, superintendent of experiments at the Agricultural College, Buelph, conducted the test and so far as recould learn performed his duties in a highly satisfactory manner all counds. highly satisfactory manner all round. hree breeds were represented. Shorthorns. Arshires and Jerseys, and an Ayrshire tow proved victorious, capturing the sweepstake prize. The greatest quantity fmilk given per day only reached about 0 pounds, fat percentages ranging from 2.03 9.56, but the Shorthorn cow whose milk was so abnormally rich in butter fat did no give two pounds at a milking, so that she was "not in it" by long odds. Quantity and quality must both be there to make a profitable and prize-winning butter cow. profitable and prize-winning butter cow. The total butter fat product by the sweepttake winner in the two days was 2.25 pounds, which, had it all been converted into butter, might have made about 2½ pounds, or 1½ pounds per day, which is not sonsidered very havy butter making. The intries, winners and total two day butter-lat products wereas follows: Nancy (sweep-ttake winner, Agehite, owned by M. Ballantyne, 9250 pends butter-fat, Kits Alelantyne, 9250 pends butter-fat, Kits Alelat products were so flows: Nancy (sweep-take winner, Ayshire, owned by M. Ballantyne, 2.250 pands butter-fat; Kita Jee, Jersey, owned by G. & E. Smith, 2.174; Matilda Sth (winner of first Shorthorn Association prize) Shorthorn, 2.131 pounds; Eva, Ayrehire, orned by Geo. Hill, 1.732 lbs; Jennic of Anneubrain, Ayrshire, owned by Kains Bros., 1241 pounds; Mitred (winner second Shorthorn Association prize), Shorthorn, owned by W. Watt, 821 pounds; Kirklevington Dichess, Shorthorn, owned by James Crera. 539 pounds. It was a simple, satisfacty style of a test, and should be continued by the Fair board in future years.

London, Saturday, Sept. 26.

CAN LORD STANLEY INDORSE THIS VERDICT?

The infamy has been accomplished. Sin Hector Langevin has been acquitted of all blame for the huge plundering in the department controlled by him. It is held by the high tax majority in the House of Commons that he can in no sense be made responsible for the peculations of hundreds of thousands of dollars that have taken place while he managed the Public Works Department. It is true the majority is only 15, but still it is humiliating to know that the leaders of a great political party should deliberately call upon their follow ers to vote this man innocent in face of the damning evidence to the contrary. Still, it may be just as well that the full depths of the degradation shall be reached now, if it is fated the worse shall come before the

There is a very significant difference between the beggarly majority of fifteen in a comparatively full House, and the majorities of from 40 to 70 that Sir John Macdonald was accustomed to obtain in previous Parliaments. The numbers show on what a slender thread the life of the arraigned Government stands. It has whitewashed Sir Hector, while condemning minor offenders, in face of the protestations of its members. But the cause is not far to seek. The knowledge is general that the condemnation of Lan gevin would involve the condemnation of Chapleau, of Haggart, and of half a dozen others in the aggregation. What more natural then that these men should resolve to stand or fall together. They hang to gether lest perchance they hang separately. The country cannot approve of such partiality. The honest men in both parties, the honest men of no very decided party alliance, must now be convinced that the country's honor and good name cannot be advocated by sending a McGreevy or a Senecal into exile while the men who alone afterded these men facilities for exploiting the public treasury are voted "jolly good fellows," acquitted of all blame and told to wait a little and higher honors

The Governor-General should suspend his holiday amusements long enough to seriously consider the whole question of the right of these men to longer pretend that they honestly represent the Canadian people. It is now on record that the existence of the rascalities laid bare in the course of the long and memorable session now drawing to a close was brought to the attention of the Government prior to last Parliamentary contest. The Government then refused to investigate the charges. Sir John Macdonald told his informant that he knew there was no truth in them. On the hustings the accusations, sustained by documentary proof, were repeated, and were again denied by the Ministers. Now these most serious charges and many more have been proved, to the hilt, and forsooth we are told that the dereliet Ministers are in no sense to be held responsible; that the false pretenses upon which they secured a bare majority in the House should not be taken notice of by

Members of the Quebec Government have been accused of wrong-doing, and though the Legislature has had no chance of considering or investigating the charges, Lieutenant-Governor Angers—a good Con-servative, like the Governor-General—has demanded full explanations and a royal commission to inquire into the alleged misdefenders of Langevin, Haggart and Chapieau. Shall there be one view of a Governor's duty applied to the smaller legislative body and another to the greater one

A COMMENTARY ON PREMIER ABBOTT.

Much as the Canadian people came now of the arts and wiles of Hon. J. J. C. Abbott in the matter of the Pacific Railway scandal, as revealed by the investigations of eighteen years ago, it is safe to say that much remains unrevealed, which, if brought to light would help to show up the "old conniver" in his true colors. The following letter is now printed for the first time:

"MONTREAL, Aug. 2, 1872. "Dear —, I have yours of the 30th today as I was in the county on the 31st and yesterday. I have of course heard partieulars of the meeting at Grenville, which I considered satisfactory. There is no doubt whatever that Pridham is not only willing and energetic, but really clever, and I have great confidence from what I saw in Grenville waterday that we shall do well at the wille yesterday that we shall do well at the poll if there should be one. My impression is that there will not be a poll, as so far there has been no response to Bellingham's attempted excitement on railway matters. "There has been no final arrangement yet of the willow there they be well as the property of the willow there is a between the rival of the railway question between the rival would-be kings. Indeed negotiations between them have practically ceased for the moment, but I think matters are settling down into a position which will leave the casting vote pretty much in the hands of the Government, and I think now arrangements are likely to be made that the casting the Government, and I think now arrange-ments are likely to be made that the casting voice will be thrown in Allan's direction. It is extremely difficult to deal with the matter, inasmuch as any announcement in Lower Canada of any advantage promised to Allan over the other party would prob-ably hurt Sir John A. in Upper Canada. We are therefore keeping very quiet about the matter, but I feel confident that the promises Sir George makes as to his inten-tions and the exercise of his influence are such as to place matters practically under such as to place matters practically under the control of our company. There is noth-ing so definite as I would have wished about the matter, but I am not dissatisfied with the extent to which Cartier has committed himself. mitted himself.

"Of course you will be cautious in discussing the matter with any Upper Canadian, or, in fact, with anyone. The announcement here has been made that Cartier's pledges have been satisfactory; but no details are given as yet, and it is not intended they shall be given if it can be intended they shall be given if it can be avoided in the end, but by putting off the elections here as long as possible the damage will not be so great if Cartier should find himself obliged to state publicly or otherwise that he favors the Lower Cardia Carmenar, Yours sincerely. Canadian Company. Yours sincerely, "J. J. C. Abbott."

Mr. Abbott was at this time deep in the Pacific Scandal plot. He knew just how far Sir George Cartier was committed to the scheme of Sir Hugh Allan and his American associates, for he was the man who drew up the agreement whereby the money of Allan and his American associates, was paid over to Sir George, Sin John A., Sir Hector and the rest of them to buy a majority for the Government in the new Parliament. He was therefore in a position to speak with authority when he ould say that matters were settling down into a position that would leave the casting vote in the hands of the Government and that the casting vote would be thrown in Allan's direction. The Government was not in a position to do anything else, in view of the agreement and the money paid thereunder. The "two rival would-be kings," were, of course, Sir Hugh Allan and Si David MacPherson-"Long David," as Mr. Abbott was in the habit of calling him in those days. But even so clever a conniver as Mr. Abbott foundit "extremely difficult" to play the would-be kings against each tage promised to Allan over the other party would hurt Sir John A. in Upper Canada. "We are therefore keeping very quiet about the matter, but I feet confident that the promises Sir George makes as to his intentions and the exercise of his influence are such as to place matters practically under the control of our company." Mr. Abbott has always been credited with knowing the side on which his bread was buttered, and "Our Company" was at that time receiving his closest attention. He would not on any account have it known in Upper Canada at that early date how matters were shaping. for that would play the deuce with Sir John A. "Long David" had to be toyed with and kept in the dark a little longer, until most of the elections in Upper Car were over. Then, "by putting off the elections here as long as possible, the dammage will not be so great if Cartier should find himself obliged to state publicly or otherwise that he favors the Lower Cana-dian Company." And for the very best of

This long unpublished letter of Hon. J. J. C. Abbott is very interesting. It is a commentary on the man; and the better the epple of Canada know him as revealed by words and works the worse they will like him. He is to-day the same J. J. C. After the Governor-General has counted his fish, we would submit to Lord Stanley the propriety of considering this question in a serious, non-partisan mood. Surely he cannot believe that if the constituencies had been in March last fully seized of the feets regarding the plundering of the people, they would have excused the men responsible for it, and have voted that they were in no sense to be held accountable for the multitude of shady transactions by which, in one way or another, they profited.

Communication Between Mars and the Earth.

the Earth.

[Victor Fournel in Le Correspondant.]

A generous person—a lady of Pau—has bequeathed to the Academy of Science 100,000 francs, to be awarded to the person who, during the next ten years, shall discover a means of communication with a star and receiving an answer therefrom. She designates specially the planet Marr, to which the attention of the savants is already directed. Of all the planets Mars is the one which most resembles the Earth. Mars has our continents, our seas, our lislands, our clouds, our rains, our snows, our seasons, our nights and our days. The year there is notably longer than with us, but the day exceeds ours by a half hour only. It is natural to believe that this body, like the earth, is inhabited with beings like men, whose science and civilization are developed nearly like ours. Starting with this principle, one must believe also that those beings busy themselves with astronomy, that, consequently, they have telescopes; in a word that they study the earth as we study Mars. They cannot be lacking in an observatory nor in a Bischofnheim to make them a present of instruments of extraordinary power; nor in a Camille Flammarion to help them with those faculties of vision which belong to nobody but to him—always, be it understood, upon the condition that such beings exist.

They do exist, however, and their ex-tence is proved by the fact that canals ave been traced on the surface of their lanct. If the inhabitants have not been tions between disembodied spirits and men, we do not think incredible. But all the so-can she have been, and that comes to the same thing, every canal being the work of man's hand. At least, provided the nature of Mars is not more perfect than ours, and that they work there after the manner of our engineers. Moreover, signals have been seen there—luminous points arranged in symmetrical figures—seen so clearly that, it is impossible to doubt that the inhabitants of Mars are trying to put themselves in communication with the earth. These luminous points form a luminous telegraph—something like the fires which in Greece transmitted, from aummit to summit, the news of the taking of Troy—only somewhat stronger. Remember that Mars is only 14,000,000 leagues away from the earth. These 14,000,000 leagues away from the earth, of which the moon is a district. At such an insignificant distance nothing prevents our seeing canals—provided only that the canals are large enough and the telescopes sufficiently powerful.

The question is how to answer these considerable quantity of water will flow under the Pont Neuf of Paris.

In fixing ten years as the period within which the prize must be awarded, the excellent lady of Pau, I venture to think, has made the time a trifle too short. It would have been more prudent in her to have allowed ten centuries. It is to be feared that, for the present, the only persons fitted to contend for the prize will be Lord Bulwer Lytton, ambassador from England at Paris, the author of "The Coming Race," and M. Jules Verne, the author of "From the Earth to the Moon," and that the decay of this alluring prize will serve only to excite imaginations already too active, and to hasten the disarrangement of some skulls. If the Academy of Sciences accepts the trust, may it stand from under the rain of manuscripts which will fall upon it!

A Remarkable Find.

At the present moment the attention of scholars is being directed to Egypt, a discovery of great importance having been made there by the well-known explorer, Mr. Flinders Petrie. The value of the "find," which consists of portions of a lost play of Euripides, of passages from the Phedo of Plato, and some other literary fragments, does not appear at first sight. It is the question of their date, and the possibilities opened up of further similar It is the question of their date, and the possibilities opened up of further similar discoveries, which has so stirred the learned world. Professor Mahaffy and Sayce, who have had the labor of deciphering the records, have produced proofs, which scholars everywhere accept as valid, that these fragments go back as far as the third century B. C.—that is, that they are almost contemporary with the age of the writers themselves. A comparison of the Phædo fragment with the Alexandrine recension, on which our modern texts are based, reveals painfully the extent to which these texts have been corrupted. The manner of the "find" was remarkable. Mr. Petrie had noticed that certain mummy cases at Gureb, in the markable. Mr. Petrie had noticed that certain mummy cases at Gureb, in the Fayoum, were not made of wood, but layers of papyrus gummed together. Some of them bore faint traces of writing, and this writing turns out to be nothing less that these Greek texts. The world will now be on the look out from the same source for "early copies" of all the great masters of Greek literature. Who can tell what the mext treasure troy may be? Or who shall say it may not be a Greek gospel which say it may not be a Greek gospel which will put the Codex Sinaitious in the shade? In the light of present revelations we may be prepared for almost any discovery.

Serpentine, which afforded noble opportunities for navigation. His pocket contained nothing but a £50 note. He hesitated long, but finally yielded. Twisting the bill with unusual care, he set it afloat. At first the tiny craft spun helplessly in the current, but finally getting its bearings, struck out boldly for the opposite shore. The reckless poet, hastening across the river, awaited it with grave solicitude, and after much maneuvering ran it ashore. Removing it from the dangerous element he spread it carefully in the sun to dry, his face beaming the while with proud exitifaction.

An inquirer who advocates the claims of modern spiritualism to a careful and candid investigation asks of us certain direct questions, to which we give here a categor-questions, to which we give here a categorical reply.

1. The editor of the Christion Union has investigated spiritism. He has done so at first hand, by attending scances and testing personally the operations of mediums; he has done so at second hand by examining critically and carefully both the literature which is the product of supposed spiritual communications and the result of investigations by men of candid and scientific communications and the result of investigations by men of candid and scientific spirit, whose facilities for investigation and ability to conduct an investigation were greater than his own. The result of all these processes is his deliberate conviction that there is "nothing in it."

2. We do not believe that the phenomena to spiritime have had a row effect to of spiritism have had any effect to strengthen or deepen a healthful belief in immortality; or to promote a true, wise reverence for the immortal and the spiritual reverence for the immortal and the spiritual; or to develop either beliefs or works which promote a larger, richer, better life of humanity. That there may be means of communication between human spirits other than through any recognized material media, that there may even be communications between disembodied spirits and men, we do not think incredible. But all the evidence points to the conclusion that the so-called communications afforded by professional mediums are tricks of legerdemain; and we do not think that it is every in-

Fastidious Speech.

The question is how to answer these signals in such a way that the answers can be seen and understood; and here the matter becomes complicated. Edison himself, I fear, has not yet discovered an electric lighthouse of luminous power adequate to send rays to a distance of 14,000,000 leagues, even by combining apparatuses. Suppose, moreover, that they perceive our signals as we perceive theirs—which last Signor Schiaparelli, of Milan, declares is the case—that would be but a slight beginning of conversation, equivalent at most to the hello! with which dialogues by telephone are started. We should have to be formed by agreement a common language, something like an optic Valapuk, and at such a distance that would be inconvenient. From time to time we hear of games of chess played across the Atlantic, between players, of whom one is at Paris and the other at New York; or of conversations between prisoners by means of raps on the wall, one rap meaning a, and 24 raps z, which is a little slow; but in those cases both know the rules of the language they are speaking. Before, from these two sides of space, the construction of a Martian-Terrestrial die. rap meaning a, and 24 raps z, which is a little slow; but in those cases both know the rules of the language they are speaking. Before, from these two sides of space, the construction of a Martian-Terrestrial dictionary has advanced far enough to allow of the beginning of a mutual understanding, a considerable quantity of water will flow under the Pont Neuf of Paris.

WORDS THAT BURN.

A HAUNTING THOUGHT. [By Elizabeth Stuart Pheips.]
If the wind is the breath of the dying,
As ancient legends say,
What rebel soul defying, Sweeps down the storm to-day?

What fruitless, mad regretting Uttered that lingering wail? What life of war and tempest Is spilled upon the gale?

If the wind is the breath of the dying, Across this sea of light, What saintly roul, replying. Goes out to God to-night?

Whom does this moonlit zephyr Uplift on its white breast? What spirit, pure and patient, In rapture sinks to rest? A BREATH OF MORN. [By Maurice Thompson.]

Webster's Ready Wit.

More or less sportiye artifice enters into the parry-and-thrust of lawyers' combats in court. Fancy the drollery of a man like Webster playing upon the word "doctor." Harper's Magazine says:

Daniel Webster, when in full practice, was employed to defend the will of Roger Perkins, of Hopkinton. A physician made affidavit that the testator was struck with death when he signed his will.

Webster subjected his will.

Webster subjected his testimony to a most thorough examination, showing, by quoting medical authorities, that doctors disagree as to the precise moment when a dying man is struck with death, some affirming that it is at the commencement of the disease, others at its climax, and others still affirming that we begin to die as soon of as we are born.

"I should like to know," said Mr. Sullivan, the opposing counsel, "what doctor maintains that theory."

"Dr. Watts," said Mr. Webster, with great gravity:

"The moment we begin to live We all begin to die."

The reply convulsed the court and audience with laughter.

BY JULIAN RALPH.

While traveling on the Canadian frontier fact summer, I heard of a story of missionary seal and self-saorifice, which I am going to repeat as I heard it, with the doubts and contradictions that followed it, in the belief that the publication will bring the truth to light. There is this one great advantage in this course—that underlying the confusing fog of the narretive lies news of a band of undoubted heroes whose lives are at once dedicated to religion and martyred by a degree of voluntarily-accepted toil, hardship and exposure such as should lift them to the summit of our admiration.

I refer to the missionaries laboring among the wood Indians in the great region morth of the northernmest settlements of Canada. The men I speak of are Episcopalians, I must first say, to avoid any suspicion of sectarian partisanship, that I have never before happened to have my interest aroused in them as it has been once or twice in the enthusiastic and unselfish careers of other missionaries whom I have encountered in the enthusiastic and unselfish careers other missionaries whom I have encountered other missionaries whom I have encountered in the same country.

We are outfitting at Neplgon, Ontario, for a journey upon the great water-way into the north that begins there, or rather ends, in a harbor on the north shore of Lake Superior. In charge of a little mission chapel at Neplgon is the Rev. Robert Renlson, a tall, vigorous, intelligent and masterful-looking man, who made no pause between taking his degree at an Irish college and plunging into the rudest mission work on the shores of Lake Neplgon, where never a priest had been before him. He cleared a half-acre of ground with his own right arm, set up a log-cabin, set his nets for a winter store of frozen fish, and began to teach the Indians—not religion merely, but how to work and save and get comforts, and live like reasoning beings. In something like half a dozen years the nucleus formed of a half acre clearing and a log hut grew into a settlement of eight houses. houses, a clearing of 30 acres—all under cultivation—a circle of 40 copper-hued communicants and an assistant missionary, obtained by training one of the Indians to be a school teacher, catechist and preacher.

Last winter Mr. Renison's new mission residence, burned down and he lost every dence burned down and he lost every earthly possession. Temporarily he was staying at Nepigon, where I met him. So much to indicate the sort of man Mr. Reni-

Knowing that he had lived 100 miles,

Knowing that he had lived 100 miles, more or less, deeper in the wilderness than where we were I sought him to learn what I could of the country and Indians he had found. In the course of our talk he told me about Mr. (or Father) Benson, mentioning him causually as a person doing work yet further away from the border.

"I have heard of him before a few times," said he; "always from the Indians, who are fond of him. But not long ago an Indian made the journey from my part of the country up into the diocese of Moosonee, where Mr. Benson is, and came back saying: 'Mr. Benson is very poor. He needs clothes; he had hardly any, but he gave me half what he had.' His is a peculiar district. The Indians have no villages or places of frequent resort. They are many miles apart, and he has to walk or paddle from one to another and live with them, sharing with them, if he or they have anything; hunting with them, or going hungary when it so happens."

As I have intimated, I knew more or less about Western British America, have crossed it three times, have hunted there, fished there, and have listened to hundreds of the stories of trappers, traders, surveyors or sportsmen who know different remote fished there, and have listened to hundreds of the stories of trappers, traders, surveyors or sportsmen who know different remote parts of it. I knew, therefore, what incalculable hardship and self-sacrifice must attend such a career as was suggested in the few words I had heard about Mr. Benson. There is no forest or wilderness region within our borders that is anything like it. We have worse spots—ours are of desert land—but they are only worse in a different way, and they are small. This region (beyond the Height of Land, north of the St. Lawrence and the great lakes) extending on There is no forest or wilderness region within our borders that is anything like it. We have worse spots—ours are of desert land—but they are only worse in a different way, and they are small. This region (beyond the Height of Land, north of the St. Lawrence and the great lakes) extending on either side of Hudson Bay to the arctic circle is a vast empire in size, without roads, except canalways, wooded yet for the most part without valuable timber, rame-steeked, yet largely with animals the most part without valuable timber, game-stocked, yet largely with animals chiefly valued for their fur; sparsely inhahit ed by poor, fish-eating Indians who have no tribal form or pride, and, finally, a country where the winters are exceptionally long and bitterly cold. Wherever deer, caribou and moose are found beyond ally long and bitterly cold. Wherever deer, caribou and moose are found beyond the Height of Land they are apt to be poor in flesh and worm-eaten in fur. It is a country of present value to the Hudson Bay Company alone, and that great corporation does more than pay the Indians for the skins of the wolf, fox, beaver, martin, fisher, musquash they bring in; it frequently gives them long loans of food and clothing without which they would vanish from the face of the earth. The Hudson Bay Company's officers and men, in their widely separated posts, are the only human

Bay Company's officers and men, in their widely separated posts, are the only human beings in that country who know even the ruder comforts of life.

The more I thought of all this the more evident it became that Mr. Benson's peculiar method of performing missionary work marked him as a heroic figure in that field and in that next to unknown land. Therefore, the next morning I sought Mr. Renison for further information. He told me that Mr. Benson's headquarters were at me that Mr. Benson's headquarters were at breed.

If the reader will look at the broad, bare and usually yellow-colored expanse which used to be called British America on his map of our continent, he may not find Martin's Falls; but he will see the Albany Martin's I'alis, but he will see the Albany River, and he may take my word for it that it is in a country of such a character as is above described. Then, if he has under-stood that Mr. Benson goes occasionally to the shores of Hudson Bay, he must picture the missionary in a region tenfold less ad-mirable. There the wildest optimist hopes for me future dayslowment, beyond a short the missionary in a region tenfold less admirable. There the wildest optimist hopes for no future development beyond a short route to Europe. The shores of the great bay are very low, and the region from back is composed of what is called "muskeg," or swamp land, wet as sponge in summer, broken by sparse and puny trees, and besieged by mosquitoes (and a diabolical pest called the "bull-dog") to an extent which renders the long and terrible winter, that hides all nature under ice and snow, a season of joy and thanksgiving.

While I was at Nepigon I read, in a church paper called Our Forest Children, an account of a visit by the bishop of Algoma to the Indians on the upper shore of Lake Nepigon—far this side of Mr. Benson's field of labor. The bishop traveled by boat and portage four days, and, getting among the Indians whom he sought, invited them to come to a feast on a little island on the lake. "Pork, flour and tea composed the bill of fare." The pork and tea were boiled and the flour was made into pancakes. The Indians sat all about and his Lordship distributed the provender, "going his rounds with pancakes in one hand and a lump of pork on a two-pronged fork in the other." When all were fed the bispop spoke "simple words and plain." I repeat this story as illustrative of the work these missionaries are doing. That being a bishop's experience, fancy what Mr. Benson's must be!

In another church publication called the Algoma Missionary News, I found this advertisement:

"The missions of Algoma Mills, Broad-

vertisement:

"The missions of Algoma Mills, Broadbent, and Silver Mine, near Port Arthur, are still vacant. The bishop will be glad to open correspondence with clerical applicants. Requirements: A good physique, sanctified common-sense, and whole-hearted devotion for work. Inducements: Abundance of work, the hearty confidence and co-operation of the bishop, and a stipend as large as the diocesan funds will admit."

large as the diocesan funds will admit."

Meaning to write to Bishop Harden from Winnipeg for further news from Mr. Benson we took the cars for the West after our fishing trip up the Neplgon. On the cars I met a gentleman who had gone, not long before that, to several Hudson Bay posts in the region under discussion,

"Who told that story?" this traveler inquired.

"An Episcopal missionary," said I.

"You never can believe one of those missionaries," said he; there is no such person as Benson. He could not be and do what you say without my knowing it. I have lived in this wilderness 30 years, and I never pay any attention to what a missionary says."

There is no reason for giving this skeptic's name, yet it is necessary for me to say that he is a man of high repute and his calling was of a nature to make it surprising that was of a nature to make it surprising that he had not heard of Mr. Benson. Yet I still believed in Benson

At Winnipeg I obtained the official list of the Episcopal clergy and missionaries and assistants, and, lo! there was no such name as Benson in the record of the Moosoname as Benson in the record of the Moosonee or any other western diocese. Knowing how thoroughly familiar the Hudson Bay officials are with all that is of interest or importance in the far north, I applied at the headquarters of the great trading company in Winnipeg, and the obliging clerks busied themselves in inquiring and searching among their books of reference; but they neither knew of Mr. Benson nor could they find trace of him. They suggested that there might be a confusion of names and that Archdeacon Vincent of the Moosonee diocese might be the man in question.

ROCHESTER, U. S. A., all the country whose streams flow into the Hudson Bay; but both the Church and the Hudson Bay; but both the Church and the Knows no such territory an enormous district is still so-called by the Episcopal of the undivided, original territory, has been missionary and bishop in the north more than a quarter of a century, and retains a keen interest in matters concerning other dioceses, than his own. He said, at none and confidentially, that the story I had heard was an account of the habits and work of Bishop Bompas of the diocese north of the Mackenzie River. He knew the name of every clergyman in the country and yet had never heard of Benson, while the "almost reckless" spirit of self-sacrifice and constant exposure of life and limb credited to Benson were well-known characteristics of the career of Bishop Bompas. In Bishop Bompas's far-away and wild territory the Indians hunt in bands of 60 or 70, and the little territory and which he were heard in the contract of the latest and the latest their lives, teaching them, and sharing with them what clothing or food or game he gets and can spare."

Mr. Renison said that he had heard that this Benson is a half-breed (which lessens the force of his undertaking somewhat, yet smakes it seem possible); that he was educated by Bishop Harden, of the diocese of Mosonee, at a little so-called college the bishop maintains; and that he has a sort of reconnotic ringor turning-place somewhere besides Hudson Bay, as well as at Martin's Falls.

When the Indian who brought the latest news of him met Mr. Benson in the wilderness, the missionary had been oft on one of his long tours, and had worn out his clothes; what he could spare he gave away. There are no white people at Martin's Falls. The manager of the Hudson Bay post is a half-breed.

The greater hero of the two. But what about Benson? Who is Benson?—[New York Independent.]

LETTER BOX

DUNNINGVILLE, Mich., Sept. 14, 1891.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

We are going to have hot cake and peaches with cream and sugar on for our tea to-night. Don't you wish you could come and have some with us? This is a great country for fruit. Some of our neighbors have sold 600 and 800 bushels of peaches alone. They are very cheap here; fruit is very plentiful. We have lovely potatoes and lots of turnips; they are as big as my head now, and I guess they will grow some yet. We are going to school, Julia, Tilly and I. Poor Robbie went two days and he got sick, and ma kept him home to-day. He likes to follow the plow. Sport, his dog is with him. Well, I guess I must stop and bring in the night's wood, for it is getting late. Good night, dear auntie. From your niece,

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

I thought I would write too, as Julia and Floey were writing. I like to write, but I have to print most of my letters, only when Julia helps me. We have a lovely bird; we call him Tinker. He is losing his feathers and don't sing worth a cent those days. I can send you some of his feathers if you would like them. I got a letter from Carrie Andrews yesterday. I tell you I was glad to hear from her, for I just love her. I am going to answer it soon. Well, her. I am going to answer it soon. Well auntie, I can't let you have my little brother for $1. He is getting nicer all the time. From your little niece,

Do you know, I was wondering if I would not have been very embarrassed to have found a baby waiting for me at the ADVERTISER office some morning. Because, you see, I am very busy, and how in the world should I have taken care of it ?-AUNT PRUDENCE.] DUNNINGVILLE, Mich., Sept. 13.

DUNNIGUILLE, MICH., Sept. 13.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

It is now some time since I got your answer, but I have been so busy that I couldn't get time to write before. Again I didn't know whether I had better write I didn't know whether I had better write any more to you or not as some of my own aunties were kind of jealous and thought my ma must have lots of time and money when she let me write to you. Ma does all her own work, has six children, and comers and goers, but as we are old friends and as you always answer I like to write. Now I must tell you the first thing that my pa has sold our colt, St. Nicholas, to Mr. Wm. Scott, the lumber merchant, of this place, for $150. It was Robbie's colt, but pa gave him another one and he calls it place, for $150. It was Robbie's colt, but pa gave him another one and he calls it Royal George. Do you think that is a nice name? My pa has been pulling stumps. He stumped five acres. They were great big pine stumps. He has a stumping machine of his own. I wish you could see him pulling them. He has them put in a fence. Now, dear Auntie, I guess this is all I can think of just now, so good-bye, from your niece.

I suppose you are able to help mother [I suppose you are able to help mother in a great many things when you are not at school ?-AUNT PRUDENCE.]

KINCARDINE, Ont., Sept. 18, 1891.

DEAR AUNT PRUDENCE:

I should like to be one of your nephews, too. May I? I have read every letter and every answer that have appeared in your department since its beginning. Some of them were very interesting and others were not. My father is a school teacher. He says he has always taken the ADVERTISER and I mean to when I am grown up for I and I mean to when I am grown up, for I think it is the best paper in Canada. I am in father's class at school. It is funny to in father's class at school. It is funny to be taught by your own father. I notice the boys never make remarks about him to me, and say "Hang that old teacher," like they did in the room before. I am very, very fond of astronomy. Perhaps, if I study hard enough, I may be an astronomer some day. Who can tell? I am 12 years old, and tall for my age. From you very loving nephew,

JACK CARY.

[I think you are very fortunate to have your father for a teacher. You will have an intensely interesting life if you ever become an astronomer.—Aunt Prudence.]

System of Medicine.

All diseases successfully treated by a new system of non-polsonous and tasteless medicines. Send for free book explaining system and testimonials of the most remarkable cures on record.

Thave been a great sufferer from a female weakness of long standing, and have been treated by several physicians, and have else under treatment in the Toronto Hospital, and all failed to cure me. I saw a medical book explaining the Histogenetic System, and resolved to give it a trial. I consulted Dr. Rear, who prescribed these remedies and assured me they would cure me. I had my doubts, but was determined to try once more, I took treatment two weeks, and am utterly astonished at the results. I am nearly well and no language can describe how thankful am that my life is spared. This testimony is voluntary, and I give it honing that hundreds of my sex may try the medicines and receive the same marvelous good that I have. They are good to take, and, unlike any medicine I ever took before, leave no bad effects.

MRRS. J. FAMVOETT.

June 5, 1890. 102 John street. Toronto,

I was attacked with congestion of the liver and inflammation of the kidneys, attended with excruciating pains in my side and back. Could not lie on either side—could scarcely Vote exercise pains in hy side and back. Could not lie on either side—could scarcely breathe. The slightest movement caused agon. It is a significant to the side of a dangerous liness with Histogenetic Medicine after she had beengiven up by four skillful physicians. In one week my pain was gone and liver and kidneys acting as well as ever. The cure is complete. It acts the most like magic of any medicine I ever took. I sincerely hops that the suffering ladies of Toronto and elsewhere may try the sayerior merits of these pure and tasteless medicines. My object in glying this testimony is purely through sympathy for the sick and dying.

C. W. Williams has notified Budd Doble by wire that he will make him a present of $2,500 if he will bring Nancy Hanks to Independence and start her in a race against Allerton during the first week in November. This is absolutely unconditional, Doble to get the money whether he wins or loses. If he accepts Allerton will be specially prepared for the race, which was not the case in the recent race between the two, the stallion being in service up to the week is already a standard animal.

From a census bulletin just issued it appears that the horses in the United States numbered 6,249,174 in 1860, 7,145,370 in 1870, 10,357,488 in 1880, and 14,976,017 in 1890—having more than doubled in twenty years, as will be seen. Mules and asses do not increase so rapidly; there were 1,151,148 in 1860, 1,125,415 in 1870, 1,812,808 in 1880, 2,296,045 in 1890. Of horses three States report over 1,000,000 each on hand last year—Illinois, Iowa and Texas. Two others (Missouri and Kansas) have over 900,000 apiece.

C. W. Williams has notified Budd Doble by wire that he will make him a present of $2,500 if he will bring Nancy Hanks to Independence and start her in a race against Allerton during the first week in Novemdebtedness, a description of the baggage or other property, the time and place of sale and the name of the auctioneer. The pro-ceeds of the sale are applied in payment of the claim, cost of advertising and sale and the surplus, if any, is to be paid over to the person who owned the property sold. You the case in the recent race between the twothe stallion being in service up to the week of the race. Disinterested judges here declare that Allerton will be able to go in 2:10 by November, and to trot a race that will make all creation stare.

Apropos of the fact that the Board of Control of the South Side Park, St. Louis, has decided to do away with Sunday racing,
the American Trotter very sensibly says:
"The determination is a wholly commendable one. Sunday sport on the race track is not only unnecessary, but is detrimental to the first purpose in the hearts of all true horsemen who have so large an interest in turf pastimes among the people. A man may not have a very high regard for the sacredness of the Sabbath himself, but he ought to have a decent respect for the opinion of others who think strongly on this subject, and there is no doubt that the people who patronize race tracks for the more recreative refreshment that they afford in the received money from father, getting a horsemen who have a friend the money taken from father and pay for the farm, or opinion of others who think strongly on this subject, and there is no doubt that the people who patronize race tracks for the mer recreative refreshment that they afford are largely made up of the latter class. In the superior intelligence of the age horse racing is not considered as it once was, and it behooves the managers of trotting associations to stimulate a still higher interest by pruning away such influences as tend to keep people with fastidious moral perceptions aloof."

There is a pathetic story, says the Horseman, about High Tariff, the colt that fell dead in the race for the American Derby at Chicago, and Poet Scout. The latter was to make the running for High Tariff, which he did, but High Tariff fell dead at the end of a mile, and Strathment won the race. Poet Scout and High Tariff were nearly full brothers in blood and were never separated from the time they were weaned. They ran in the same lot and were kept in adjoining stables, with a board removed so they could see each other. In the evening after the race Poet Scout looked for his dead companion. He would not eat, but would walk around the stall and look out of the door. Hewhinnied all night and for days would look in vain for his mate. When his feed was put in his box he would take a mouthful of oats and run to the door and whinny, but High Tariff never came. Poet Scout is a changed horse, and all connected with the stable say that he grieved as much as any human being ever grieved at the short time ago I was suffering from Kidney his bill the suble say that he grieved as much as any human being ever grieved at the short time ago I was suffering from Kidney his bill the suble say that he grieved as much as a proposition, in which would include the farm able such as a local content of the father and pay for the farm, or give an equal share to each of the hisr from father and pay for the farm, or give an equal share to each of the hark each of the hisr from his wife and butter is a claim to his property? Below is the standard, as revised and adopted by the American Trotting Register Association:

1. Any trotting stallion that has a record of 2 minutes and 30 seconds (2:30), or pactallion that has a record of 2 minutes and 25 seconds (2:25), or better, provided any of his get has a record of 2:35 trotting, or 2:30 pacing, or better; or provided his sire for dam is already a standard animal.

Potato Digging.

According to most reports, the potato crop will be a good one in Western Ontario and the digging season will soon be at hand. As far as practicable, this should be done on dry, sunshiny days, so that the tubers may be gathered in for storage as free from dirt and moisture as possible. Care should be taken to exclude the light from the cellar, or wherever else they may be kept. The Farmers' Review throws out the following additional suggestions on this subject: "The potato grower that has many acres of crop to dig, and every man that makes potato-raising one of his chief operations, sannot afford to be without a digger. The man that has but a few acres to dig cannot, perhaps, afford to buy a digger, and must, thereit.

man that he but a few acres to dig cannot, perhaps, afford to buy a digger, and must, therefore, depend on hard labor or use his ingenuity in devising some addition to the walking plow that will render it serviceable as a potato digger. Many take the mold-board off and put on in its place a double mold-board made of iron rods attached to a plow point or "lay" having an unusually high breast and wings. The lay and sole run under the rows, the high breast opens out the soil, and the rods, instead of pressing it to each side, as would solid mold-boards, lift and stir it and throw the tubers on the surface. Plows more or less true to on the surface. Plows more or less true to this description are on the market, but a serviceable implement can easily be con-structed by any practical country black-mith. After running the digger through baskets or barrels, from which they are dumped into the wagon. For potato picking the best baskets have wooden sides, bow bandle, and a bottom of wide mesh wire net.

These baskets allow all dry dirt to sift out and enable the pickers to make a cleaner job. When the potatoes have been picked it is well to thoroughly drag the field with heavy harrows, or best to plow and then cun the harrow over, bringing all remaining potatoes to the surface. Potatoes and vines left in the soil are detrimental instead of valuables resurveit is therefore well to valuable as manure; it is therefore well to make as clean work of the harvesting as possible, and get the field immediately into a winter grain crop, either to be pastured or turned under as green manure in spring, or allowed to stand as a grain crop if circumstances allow. The best possible way to store the crop is to let someone else attend to it. That is, the crop should be sold at once for the best price that can be obtained. A large crop makes the profit, and the difference between the cost of storing it and the first price progurable usually shows that first price procurable usually shows that immediate selling is best policy." The Air and Sun In Farming. The air is the other store-house of plant food. Between 92 and 98 per cent. of all the substances of plants comes from the air. The man who farms well, will have his plants grow a suitable distance apart, as far as practicable, in order that the air may circulate freely and the sun shine in circulate freely and the sun shine in brightly, that the plants may get from the air the food it contains for them. This is air the food it contains for them. This is one reason why it does not pay a man to grow a crop of broadcast corn; the stalks are so close together that there is not enoughcirculation, the plants have less vigor and the soil becomes exhausted. The spring in my watch is merely what the plant food is in the soil. The spring is a contrivance into which I store my own strength; the plant food is a convenience into which the sun can store his strength, his energy. And then, when a horse cats a bundle of hay, he is merely transferring into horse-power, the power which the sun rolled into that peculiar plant-spring. In that way the sun is doing all the work of the world. The man who furnishes in the soil no plant-food for the young plant, keeps the sun idling on his field all the day long. So a man ought to make it his pleasure as it is his privilege to harness the old sun every day in his farm work, and make it do his will by making it roll its strength into every day in his farm work, and make it do his will by making it roll its strength into such plants as he wants for his service.

Now, a man could never afford to hire half a dozen men on a farm and have them a dozen men on a farm and have them

'Joaf' all day long, while he is wearing himself out with working. But the man who wears himself out with working and keeps the sun idling all day long, is doing a far more foolish thing. So a man should recognize that he has the right—that he has the rower-recontred the sun's work has the last cultivation has, as we learn from keeps the sun idling all day long, is doing a far more foolish thing. So a man should recognize that he has the right—that he has the power—to control the sun's working, make it work upon his fields, and thus save himself from the reproach of leaving the best working power in the world idling on his place. The farmer requires skill, he needs knowledge, he must have above all things good judgment in order that he may fitly control and exercise the power placed at his command. The man who farms successfully and skillfully in dairy farming will always have abundance of plant food in his soil, and therefore he will keep the sun working for him by giving the sun the raw material out of which to build plants.

There are now who are all the while requirements. There are now here are all the while requirements. working for him by giving the sun the raw material out of which to build plants. There are men who are all the while run-ning counter to these old foundation laws that were made for agriculturists. One man thinks that it makes no difference how much sunshine he has or how little. It makes all the difference in the world, and that is why in Canada we have the best chance in all the world from making farming pay, because we have more sunshine than they have anywhere with an equally favorable climate in other respects.—From Large or Small Seed-Which? There is no more important operation on the farm than seed selection. ing results: Seed wheat fully matured was selected out of one bin, and by sifting two lots of seed were taken, one extremely large, the other small. The large weighed 63.9 pounds per bushel, the small only 40.5 pounds, a difference of more than 50 per cent. Each lot of seed was divided into four separate parcels, and four separate sowings were made. The land was good wheat land, but not especially manured. The large seed sprouted the quickest, made the best growth, was taller, and on the average made ten bushels per acre more than the small seed. The advantages from the large seed were as follows: Greater rapidity of growth and development of crop early in seed were as follows: Greater rapidity of growth and development of crop early in the season, greater yield of grain and of straw, better weight and better quality of grain for milling. If it was not for the lesson this teaches, this experiment would have been an absurd one. Any man who thinks at all must know that good crops can only come from good seed. The only way to get large seed from a lot is to have a sieve that will let all small seed, weed seed and all, right through, and hold back the large seed." Too many farmers yet think only of the number of acres they can sow, only of the number of acres they can sow, giving practically no attention to seed selection and soil preparation. No wonder they have poor crops.

Poultry Yard Notes. There are probably more Leghorn, Plymouth Rock, and Light Brahma fowls bred throughout the United States than of any other three breeds, and possibly of all other breeds. The Leghorn will rank first in number, the Plymouth Rocks and Light Brahmas following very closely.

Upon the attention given to growing chicks during hot days will determine largely the success at the close of the summer season. In hot weather young growing chicks suffer from heat, and need certain foods that do not produce fat, but more that bring bone and muscle.

Eggs when they command only eight cents per dozen in the market should be carefully packed in sait and stored away for higher prices. This method will keep eggs nicely, and by October they will bring at least twenty cents per dozen. Certainly the margin of profit at this figure is ample.

Many who have failed to make a success many who have failed to make a streets in other pureuits in life go at poultry-keeping with the idea that it is profitable and easy, with little or no labor. They learn after a time what it means to hatch and rear 1,000 chicks. One or two years' experience dispels their first idea and they are glad to quit.

Ducks are not as good field foragers as chickens or turkeys; their short legs and flat, web feet retard their movements. On and or other water they would make up a pond or other water they would make up for their awkwardness on land, and go through much exercise that is good for them. The duck is exempt from many prevailing diseases to which other poultry are subject. They are usually excellent layers, the Pekin duck leading all in this respect.

preventing them from going to seed. The cut stubble, weeds, grass, etc., rot down more easily, forming an excellent mulch for the enrichment of the soil. Waldo F. Brown, the well-known Ohio farmer and writer, has long practiced this plan and recommends it for the reason above cited, but more especially in the case of newly seeded clover fields, as the cutting prevents winter-killing, strengthens and thickens the plants just as it does a lawn or hedge.

The Wonderful Little Bee.

Bees work at night in the hive, and build comb as perfectly as if an electric light had shone there all the time. Many times we have been asked why they prefer darkness, but there are good reasons for doing so. All know that honey is a liquid without any solid sugar in it. But after standing, it gradually assumes a crystalline appearance; in other words, it granulates, and ultimately will become a solid mass. Some have stated that this change is due to the same agent which alters the molecular arrangement of the iodine of the silver on the excited collodion plate, and determines the formation of the camphor and iodine crystals in a bottle. We are informed that Prof. Schieber inclosed honey in well-corked flasks, some of which he kept in perfect darkness, while others were exposed to the light. The result has been that the portion exposed to the lightsoon crystallizes, while that kept in the dark remains unchanged. Hence, we see why the bees are so careful to obscure the glass windows which are sometimes placed in their hives. The existence of the young depends upon the liquidity of the saccharine food presented to them, and if light were thrown across this in all probability it would prove fatal to the means of the hive.

Why Eggs Spoil.

Eggs spoil of ineffectual attempt to hatch. Whenever a fertilized egg is raised to a temperature of 92 degrees the hatching process begins, and when the temperature falls much below this point the process ceases. These conditions are found in the warm days and cool nights of summer. During the long hot day the hatching process is at work; during the short cool night it ceases. work; during the short cool night it ceases. After three or four alterations of this kind the embryo chick dies, and the rotting process begins. Now it is evident that if the eggs were not fertilized the hatching would not begin, neither would the rotting, and hence there would be an absence of rotten eggs says S. H. Warner in "Stock and eggs, says S. H. Warner in "Stock and Home." The remedy, therefore, is to pre-vent fertilization of the eggs.

It looks now that far more of the butter made in Western dairy sections that have a made in Western darry sections that have a surplus, that used to go East for a market, will have to go West this fall and summer to supply the consumers in the mountains and on the Pacific slope. Says Hoard's Dairyman: "This will tend to make butter scarce and higher all around. We say to all dairy farmers, contrive all practicable ways to feed the cows well and cheaply, so they will pour down the elements of which they will pour down the elements of butter and cheese are made, for the are going to be good from now till spring at least. Fortunately the productive industries of the country are flourishing, so the people will have ample means to pay good prices for all the products of the cow."

What is Scrofula

The is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the gland of the neck, produces undightly lump or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations unsuly ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scordia combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it. How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla's unqualted, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. AGUATIC.

New Westminster, Sept. 25.—Twenty thousand pepple witnessed the races on the Frazer River. The weather was perfect. O'Connor was the favorite in the betting, but hundreds were placed between Hanlan and Stephenson. Just before the race O'Connor bet $100 even with Dutch that the would beat him. Dutch backed himself heavily. Dutch drew the inside position, Riephenson next to him, Hanlan third and O'Connor outside. Dutch had decidedly the best position. At the word "go" Dutch struck out at 40 to the minute and forged ahead. O'Connor started at 36 strokes and Hanlan at the same. O'Connor was backing into position as the word was given and had the worst of the start, but his long, steady, sweep brought him on even terms with Dutch before the quarter was reached. Hanlan palled in magnificent form. O'Connor led all the way down the course and rounded the buoy eight lengths behind O'Connor, followed closely by Stephenson. Dutch got his head between his knees and labored like a giant, but couldn't close the gap that the Toronto boys had opened. OTTAWA, Sept. 25 .- In the Public Ac-OTTAWA, Sept. 25.—In the Public Accounts Committee this morning, on motion of Hon. Mr. Foster, it was decided to refer the shorthand notes taken in the case of the New England Paper Company vs. Berthiaume to a sub-committee composed of Messrs. Foster, Bowell, Costigan, Cartwright and Lister to inquire whether any of the evidence had any relation to the present inquiry, and to report to the committee.

Mr. Barber, paper manufacturer of Georgetown, was then called. To Mr. Muloch the witness said early in the summer Mr. Bowell invited him to his room and in the course of conversation asked him if Mr. Senecal was demanding money from persons selling to the bureau. Witness told him what had been done in his case.

which he (Chapleau) had indorsed. Berthiaume was the proprietor of the paper, and he (Chapleau) had only indorsed the notes in question. He had no profit and no interest in the firm then owning the paper. Mr. Chapleau went on to say that he had written his law-partuer, Mr. Brown, for a copy of the evidence. He had at the outset opposed the production of the evidence on principle, but now he had no objection to produce it. Continuing he denied most emphatically that he had ever signed or been a party to any agreement between Berthiaume and onthuling he denied most emphabically that he had ever signed or been a party to any agreement between Berthiaume and the paper company. He desired to reiterate his previous assertion that Mr. Lister should have brought the charges against him in Parliament—not before the committee. Lister was bound in honor, he said, to prove the charges or lose his seat. In conclusion Chapleau drew attention to the fact that both Young and Berthiaume before the committee had exculpated him from any shadow of suspicion. After a lengthy discussion the committee decided to accept Chapleau's suggestion that Messrs. Mulock and Lister be allowed access to the evidence in the Montreal case already referred to. Mr. Chapleau then put in a declaration from McElroy, the agent of Potter & Co., New York, to the effect that the Government bought the printing presses at a bargain.

¿CONCLUSION OF M'CARTHY'S RESOLUTION.

The following is the conclusion of the resolution proposed by Mr. McCarthy on the Langevin-McGreevy scandal:

4. That as no specific charge of this nature was made against the late Minister, this House, while compelled to call attention to this view of the matter, does not think it is required to render any more definite conclusion in the matter.

In addition to the foregoing reasons the House has no hesitation in recording its opinion that, judged by the well-known constitutional rule which makes the Minister responsible to Parliament for the administration of the Department over which he presides, the late Minister of Public Works, irrespective of the considerations dealt with in the last preceding paragraph, cannot be absolved from his Ministerial responsibility, and in that regard merits the censure of this honorable Heuse.

And the House recommends that in adaddition to such action as may seem to be called for under the findings hereinbefore expressed such legal proceedings as may be available be taken against those who were concerned in the conspiracy, and for that purpose the books and papers which were before the committee be retained, or so many of them as may be necessary for such prosecution.

Finally, the House desires to record its prosecution.

Finally, the House desires to record its Finally, the House desires to record its conviction that the inquiry directed by the House has been rendered unsatisfactory, incomplete and in some respects abortive by what the House cannot help characterizing as willful perjury of some of the witnesses examined before it, and the committee recommends that Nicholas K. Connolly and Michael Connolly and such other witnesses as the law officers may advise that there is evidence on which indictments for perjury should be preferred, be prosecuted therefor.

Mr. Chapleau then made a lengthy statement. At the outset he said he stid not know of the suit of the New England Paper Company against Berthlaume, of La Presse, until the present inquiry was begun. He had taken the trouble to read the evidence, which even at the trial the judge had decided was irrelevant. The Secretary of State then proceeded to read a translation of the shorthand notes taken in the Montreal courts. It was an extract from Young's evidence. Young had stated that Berthlaume had told him if the New England Company could get contracts with the Government Mr. Chapleau would have been a magistrate of the county of Lambton. He saw the hardened faces of men and women who passed him—eyes and mouths grown sullen in the struggle to live. What was their crime, these wretched people? He saw faces sodden with drink. Was not drink an effect rather than a cause? Was not vice itself an effect? What had these miserable girls done to be condemned, with reddened checks and blackened eyes, and she crying vuigarity of cheap finery, to cread the midnight pavements? Poverty and degradation and woe seemed a heritage. Here were children, dirty, half-fed, and searcely clothed, running amongst the crowd. A few more years and they would be as those who had transmitted to them their inheritance of want and pain.

He reached Charing Cross and turned out of the Strand. Here, on the steps of St. Martin's Caurch, crouched a girl with an infant in her arms; there, on the benches in the square, at the shadowy figures of others who were homeless. The Nelson column was sharply defined against a sky pale as a thrush egg. The fountains were not playing, and the water in the basin was still and silvered. The lions were bathed in the monlight.

Paine's Celery Compound brings light out of darkness and suffering, and gives a fresh lease of life, enabling all to drink deeply from those true springs of earthly pleasures that forget the passing hours. The most reliable and strongest testimonials from all parts of Canada prove conclusively that this great remedy is far removed from all the poor and deceifful preparations of the day, and is ranked by the ablest physicains as one of their trues and most important one of their truest and most important nedicines. Give it a trial at once ye who are broken down in body and sore at heartand ye shall rejoice with joy unspeak-

Children's Portraiture.—Frank Cooper's portraits of children are greatly admired. If there is one department in our profession we have got down finer than the others it is the portraiture of children of all ages, from the little "cherub" of 3 months up to the lively boys and girlsjust entering their teens. The children! Yes; bring the chil-dren, singly or bring them on in groups. F, Coopen, artistic photographer, Dundas street, near Richmond.

The following comment we copy from the ADVERTISER: The great attraction to the left on entering the main building is the display of W. S. Bryers Barkwell, consisting of those fragrant and lasting perfumes, Fedora and Winona Bouquet, the great sensations. Here hundreds of ladies may be seen to throng around that center with their handkerchiefe extended to the spray of the atomizer till they are almost saturated. Then they pass on sweetly smilling at being the happy possessor of those popular odors for which Mr. Barkwell received first prize at the Provincial Exhibition and so completely filled the Crystal Falace to the great admiration of all. Surrounding those are toilet articles and pharmaceutical proparations, all of which are most harmoniculty arranged in every particular and contained in an inclosed case on either side of which is to be seen elegant show bottles towering to great height and containing liquids of various, bright and bautiful colors, but we would not do Mr. We falled membership and the province of the president parts of the Provinces, which he sends to all parts of the Provinces, which he sends to all parts of the Provinces, which he sends to all parts of the Provinces, which he sends to all parts of the Provinces, which he sends to all parts of the Provinces, which he sends to all parts of the Provinces, which he sends to all parts of the Provinces, which all the heaves.
