A MISSISSIPPI DUEL. Vicksburg, Miss., Aug. 31.-A duel between Hon. Charles Cott, president of the failed Rosedale Bank, and C. Wright, editor of the Vicksburg Dispatch, was fought four miles from this city. Two shots were exchanged, Wright being slightly wounded by the second. Before a third could be fired the chief of police arrived and interfered, the bout being declared off. The distance was ten paces, 38-calibre revolvers. The trouble grew out of a newspaper controversy over the fail-ure of the Rosedale Bank. KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

Indianapolis, Aug. 31.—The election of members of the board of control of the nights of Pythias endowment fund occurred yesterday and resulted as follows: President, J. A. Hinsey, Illinois; members, W. H. Loomis, of Michigan; J. W. Blackwell, of Kentucky. President Hinsey was elected by acclamation. The contest between Mr. Ed-munds, of South Dakota, and Mr Blackwell, of Kentucky, resulted in a victory for the latter by a vote of 98 to 29. The contest between Mr. Loomis, of Michigan, and Mr. Davis, of Colorado, resulted in a victory for the former by a vote of 69 to 54.

CARVING UP CHINA. Pekin, Aug. 31.-A high member of the Tsung Li Yamen (Chinese Foreign Office), who is a British sympathizer, complained, in the course of a recent interview, that Great Britain's assurances of support against Russian aggression were belated. "Why." said this functionary, "without such a declaration until Russia had secured Port Arthur and France obtained concessions in the south? The disintegration of the empire has begun, and today the necessity for strong action is less urgent than when Russia first obtained a foothold." He admitted that China had broken her promises to England, but this, he argued, was because Russian pressure was too strong to be resisted. He complained of "British ignorance of Russia's line of action," and asked: "Why does not England approach Russia directly with a declaration that Russia's interference in China will be regarded as a casus belli? Women are peculiarly constituted and their general health is peculiarly dependent upon the health of the specially feminine organism.

It is the health of these delicate and important parts that "makes the wheels of general health go round." Their strength and vigor are as important to a woman as a mainspring to a watch, or a sprocket and chain to a bicycle. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best of all medicines for delicate women. It makes them strong where they most need strength. Taken during the "interesting interval," it banishes the usual squeamishness and makes baby's admission to the world easy and alpainless. It fits a woman for in-door work and out-door sports. Honest druggists don't advise substitutes.

"I cannot say enough in praise of Dr. Pierce's Pavorite Prescription, as it has undoubtedly saved my life," writes Mrs. Florence Hunter, of Corley Logan Co., Ark. "I miscarried four times; could get no medicine to do me any good. I tried the 'Favorite Prescription' and after taking several bottles, I made my husband a present of a fine girl. I think it is the best medicine in the world."

A man or woman who neglects constipation suffers from slow poisoning. Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipa-tion. One little "Pellet" is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. All medicine dealers.

This is a full-length portrait of an evolutionist who substitutes the bestial origin for the divine origin. I showed that the origin for the divine origin. I showed into use. You see evolution at every ity. At every stage of animal life, as well as at every stage of human life, there is evidence of direct action of

Besides that, it is very evident from another fact that we are an entirely different creation, and that there is tions at 60 miles the hour, their locomotives meeting on the same track. I showed that all the evolution scientists, without any exception, were pronounced infidels; that evolution was a

They admit that there is a "missing link," as they call it, but there is not a missing link—it is a whole chain gone. Between the physical construction of the highest the physical construction of the highest guess, and guess about the brute, and the physical construction of the highest animal, and the physical construction of the lowest man, there is a chasm as wide as the Atlantic Ocean. Evolutionists tell us that somewhere in Central Africa, or in Borneo, there is a creature half-way between the brute and the man, and that that creature is the highest step in the human creation. that we have no consanguinity with the dog that fawns at our feet, or the spider that crawls on the wall, or the the highest step in the human creation. It is not that we are stronger than they, for the lion, with one stroke of his paw, could put us into the dust. It is not that we have better eyesight, for the eagle can descry a mole a mile away. It is not that we are fleeter of foot, for a roebuck in a flash is out of sight, just seeming to touch the earth as he goes. Many the animal creation surpassing us in fleetness of foot and in keenness of nostril and in strength of limb; but notwithstanding all that, there is something within us that tells us we are of celestial pedigree. Not of the mollusk, not of the rizipod, not of the primal germ, but of the living and omnipotent God. Lineage of the skies. Genealogy of heaven.

I tell you plainly that if your father was a muskrat, and your mother an opossum, and your great aunt a kangaroo, and the toads and the snaping turtles were your illustrious predeces-sors, my father was God. I know it. feel it. It thrills through me with an emphasis and an ecstasy which all your arguments drawn from anthropology and biology and zoology and morology and paleontology and all the other ologies can never shake. Evolution is one great mystery. It hatches out fifty mysteries, and the fifty hatch out a thousand, and the thousand hatch out a million. Why. my brother, not admit the one great mystery of God, and have that settle all the other great mysteries? I can more easily appreciate the fact that God by one stroke of his omnipotence could make man than I could realize how out of five million of ages he could have evolved one, putting on a little here and a little there. It would have been just as great a miracle for God to have turned an orang-outang into a man as to make a man out and out— the one job just as big as the other. It seem to me we had better let God have a little place in our world somewhere. It seems to me if we cannot have him make all creatures we had better have him make two or three There ought to be some place where he could stay without interfering with the evolutionists. "No," says Darwin, and so for years he is trying to raise fantailed pigeons, and to turn these fantail pigeons into some other kind of pigeon, or to have them go into some thing that is not a pigeon — turning them into quail, or barn-yard fowl or brown-thresher. But pigeon it is. And others have tried with the ox and the dog and the horse, and they stayed in their species. If they attempt to cross ever it is a hybrid, and a hybrid is always sterile, and goes into ex-tinction. There has been only one successful attempt to pass over from speechless animal to the articulation of man, and that was the attempt which Balaam winessed in the beast that he rode; but an angel of the Lord, with drawn sword, soon stopped that long eared evolutionist.

But says some one: "If we cannot have God nake a man, let us have him make a horse." "Oh, no!" says Huxley, in his great lectures in New York years ago. No, he does not want any god around the premises. God did not make the horse. The horse came of the pilohopus, and the pliothe orohippus, and so away back, all the living creatures, we bace it in a line until we get to the moneren, and no evidence of divine intermeddling with the creation until we get to the moneren, and that, Huxley says, is of so low a form of life that the prob-ability is it just made itself, or was the result of spontaneous generation. What a narrow escape from the necessity of having a God.

As near as I can tell, these evolutionists seem to think that God at the start had not made up his mind as p exactly what he should make, and having made up his mind partially, he his been changing it through all the ages.

I believe that God made the word as he wanted to have it, and that thehappiness of all the species will depend upon their staying in the species where they were created.

Once upon a time there was in anatural amphitheater of the forest a ionvention of animals, and a gorilla. Western Africa came in with his dub and pounded "Order!" Then he sat down in a chair of twisted forest not. The delegation of birds came in and took their position in the galleries of the hills and tree-tops. And e delegation of reptiles came in, and they took up their position in the pit of the valley. And the tiers of rocks were coupied by the delegation of intermediate ate animals, and there was a great aquarium and a canal leading into it through which came the monsters of the deep to join the convention. And on the table of rock there were four or five primal germs, under a glass case, and in a cup on another table of rock there was a quantity of protoplasm. Then the gorilla of the African forest with his club pounded again -"Order! Order!" and then he cried out, "Oh, you great throng of beasts and birds and reptiles and insects, I have called you together to propose that we move up into the human race, and be beasts no longer; too long already have we been hunted and caged and harnessed; we shall stand it no longer." At that speech the whole convention broke out into roars of enthusiasm like as though there were many menageries being fed by their keepers, and it did seem as if the whole convention would march right up and take possession of the earth and the human race. But an old lion arose, his mane white with many years, and he uttered his voice, and when that old lion uttered his voice all the other beasts of the forest were still, and he said: -" Peace, brothers and sisters of the forest. I think we have been placed in the spheres for which we were intended; I think our Creator knew the place that was good for us." He could proceed no further, for the whole convention broke out in an uproar like the House of Commons when the Irish question comes up, or the American Congress the night of adjournment, and the reptiles hissed with indignation at the leonine Gambetta, and the frogs croaked their contempt, and the bears growled their contempt, and the panthers snarled their disgust, and the in-sects buzzed and buzzed with excitement, and though the gorilla of the African forest with his club pounded, "order, order," there was no order; and there was a thrusting out of adderine sting, and a swinging of elephantine tusk, and a stroke of beak and and a swing of claw, until it seemed as if the convention would be massacred. Just at that moment, at the door of this natural amphitheater of the forest, the curtain of the leaves lifted, and the bolts and bars of the tree branches were shoved back. and Agassiz, and Audubon, and Silliman, and Moses. And Agassiz cried: "Oh, you beasts of the forests, I have studied your of apes and the hiss of serpents and the ancestral records, and found you always croak of frogs-to an idea in one or two have been beasts, you will always be beasts; be contented to be beasts."

And Audubon aimed his gun at a look of more than Demosthenic, or Homeric, or Dannesque power: "What is man that gallery, and as it dropped struck a serpent | man, that thou visitest him? Thou hast to get up higher. And Silliman threw a and hast crowned him with glory and honmals, and Moses thundered, "Every beast over the works of thy hand; thou hast put after its kind." And, lo! the parliament of all things under his feet. All sheep and wild beasts was prorogued, and went home to their constituents, and the bat flew out fowl of the air, and the fish of the sea, and into the night, and the lizard slunk under the rock, and the gorilla went back to the the seas. Oh, Lord, our Lord, how exceljungle, and a hungry wolf passing out ate up the primal germs, and a clumsy buffalo upset the protoplasm, and the lion went to his lair, and the eagle went to his eyrie, and the whale went to his palace of crystal and coral, and there was peace-peace in my friends, I have to say to you that I am the air, peace in the waters, peace in the not so anxious to know what was my origin

Born of a beast, to die like a beast; for the evolutionists have no unrolling of providential obscurities, unrollidea of a future world. They say the mind ing of rainbow to canopy the throne, unis only a superior part of the body. They say our thoughts are only molecular formation. They say when the body dies, the whole nature dies. The slab of the sepulchre is not a milestone on the journey upward, but a wall shutting us into eternal nothingness. We all die alike-the cow, the horse, the sheep, the man, the reptile. RETURNED THE COMPLIMENT. The Saints had to swallow their own medicine yesterday. In the previous game they filled up a prescription that was a bitter pill for the locals, but yesterday the cranks at Tecumseh Park saw the same prescription prepared by Mr. Lute Johnson, as dispenser, and some lively assistants. The visitors were made to realize the vast difference between "9 to 1" and "1 to 9." It was a case in which inverse ratio was not to their taste.

Throughout the game was snappy, and but for the third inning, close. In this inning Kern, who has usually been a puzzle for London, was not himself at all. He forced in two runs before there was a man out, and suffered a fusillade of hits. The inning began by Sheehan's fumble of Johnson's grounder. Meara and Mohler each bunted just far enough from Busse to be safe. At this critical juncture Mr. Kern failed to keep cool, and Smink was given a base on balls, forcing Johnson home. Meara walked to the plate when Laroque was hit by a pitched ball. Carey's double and by Keenan and Lohman brought in the other five of the seven runs. Lohman was caught at second on Ward's hit to Kern, and Ward went out at first after he had started down the line under the impression that Kern had offered to pitch. Johnson flew out to Lyons. In the sixth inning the locals were retired on four pitched balls. Keenan scored Mohler in the ninth on a drive to left, good enough in Jo-Jo's opinion, but not in Umpire England's. Smink but not in Umpire England's. Smink after a missed third strike was the in this inning was called out for intermeans of giving Hamilton two runs in ference. He tried to bunt a high ball, the second, and an error by Hagerty and held the bat in front of Sullivan for a second or two. Meanwhile Mohler was piking it down to second. The little catcher claimed Smink's bat prevented him from trying to head off the steal, and Smink went to the bench. while Mohler was put back to first. Pears caught Meara out in the eighth. and made a beautiful throw to Sullivan to cut off Ward. It seemed from the stand that Pierre reached the plate safely, but Umpire England's opinion was different. The Saints' solitary run came early in the game-the first inning. Sheehan sent a drop fly between Carey, Mohler and Ward. Tibald made a sacrifice hit, and Sullivan singled to Smink, who tried to cut off Sheehan

WHEEL. CHAMPIONSHIP SCORES

Baltimore, Aug. 31 .- The weekly bulletin issued by Chairman Mott, of the L. A. W. racing board, announces the following as the score of the leaders in the national championship: Bald, 149: McFarland, 117: Major Taylor, 115: Kimble, 107; Cooper, 97; Arthur Gardiner, 77; Freeman, 59.

THE FISTIC ARENA.

THREE ROUNDS ENOUGH. Port Dalhousie, Aug. 31.-A boxing contest took place here on Monday between Alexander Sloan, of East Saginaw, Mich., who renetly defeated Kid Lalond in two rounds, and Kid Gilbey, of this place. Sloan knocked Gilbey out in three rounds.

McPARTLAND VS. DALY. New York, Aug. 31.-Kid McPartland, of this city, got a decision over Jack Daly, of Wilmington, Del., after fighting 25 rounds, before the Greater New York Atheletic Club on Monday night. The last time these two men met Daly got the decision on a foul in the 17th round. The bout was devoid of foul work, and one of the cleanest and cleverest exhibitions ever given under the Horton law. There was little to choose between the men at the end of the go. Daly's friends lost a lot of money on the result.

LAWN TENNIS. INTERNATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP. Niagara, Ont., Aug. 31 .- W. S. Bond, of Chicago, is the international champion for the second year in succession. In a hard fight with Leo Ware, the Canadian champion, he won the beautiful Niagara trophy by the score of 6-4, 1-6, 9-7, 6-4. Scores:

Men's singles, championship round — W. S. Bond, Chicago, beat Leo Ware, Harvard, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4, 10-8. Ladies' singles, championship round -Miss Juliette Atkinson, Brooklyn, beat Miss Marie Wimer, Washington, 10-8, 7-9, 6-4, 6-3. Men's doubles, semi-final round-Leo

LACROSSE.

ST. MARY'S VS. GALT. The Galt team went to St. Mary's Tuesday afternoon to play the final series of home-and-home games in the C. L. A. with the Alerts, and were defeated by 9 to 3.

CRICKET. CANADIANS LOSE.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 31.-The inbetween ternational cricket match Canada and the United States concluded yesterday, and resulted in a victory for the United States team by an inning and one run. The United. States eleven scored 250 runs in their first, the Canadians making only 113 runs. To avert a one-inning defeat they needed 137 runs, but though their batting improved over the first inning, they fell one run short of the require-The only Canadians to make doublt figures were: Saunders, 27; Lyon, 13; Chambers, 22; Philpotts, 10; McGivern, not out, 20; Goldingham, 17; Chambers, 34: Counsell, 11: W. Some of the Tenders Conditionally Accepted.

No Decision as to Raising Needed Additional Funds.

Proposed Agreement With the County Council Falls Through.

Lineman Summerhayes Presented With the Royal Humane Society's Certificate for Bravery.

The city council talked "hospital" for several hours last night. Some of ing committee were conditionally accepted, but a delay in the work seems as to how the additional funds were to be raised, and the proposed agreement with the county council was repudiated. Ald. McCallum and Nutkins

Were the absentees.

Chairman Carrothers presented the report of the hospital committee—the sixth which has been submitted to the council-as follows: 1. Your committee recommends that the tender of Smith Bros. to do the plumbing at Victoria Hospital, according to specifications, for $3,233 17, be 2. That the tender of Smith Bros. to put in marble in connection with the plumbing, in accordance with speci-fications, for $2,249 00, be accepted. Your committee begs to report that the consulting physicians on the committee strongly recommends the putting in of the marble. 3. That the tender of Martyn Hammett, to lay tile floors in the hospital, in accordance with specifications. for the sum of $1,920 00, be accepted.

bers, to supply and complete heating and ventilating system for hospital, as per plans and specifications by himfor $11,440 00, be accepted. that his tender to supply two Nopper automatic boiler cleaners for $200 00 be accepted. 5. Your committee recommends that an electric lighting plant be installed in the hospital, and that the tender of the Canadian General Electric Company, to supply two generators for same for $1,800 00 and two Leonard Ball engines for $1.300 00, be accepted. 6. That the tender of the London Electric Company to supply switchboard and instruments for power plant for $420 00, be accepted.

7. Your committee recommends that the following proposition be made to the county council as a basis of agree-ment for 20 years for treatment of county patients in new Victoria Hospital, viz.: That the city's capital in hospital be fixed at $75,000 00. county to subscribe towards the cost of construction the sum of $15,000, being one-fifth of the amount of city's capital investment in said building. and to pay the actual cost per day for each county patient. The city charge as maintenance each year 3½ per cent on the above said capital of $75,000 00, and the county to be allowed the same rate of interest on its capital investment. Ald. O'Meara had no fault to find with the committee. They had done their duty. But it should be remembered that the city had only $70,000 to spend. The question was, Were they ready to run over that amount? To his mind, if they did there was no question but that next year the additional amount would have to be raised by direct taxation. It would put next year's council in an awkward position. and it would put the ratepayers in an awkward position. Ald. Taylor said Ald. O'Meara was too late with his objection. The speaker was opposed to the course pursued by the committe at the outset, because he did not have faith in the estimates. All the tenders should have been called at once, no doubt, but the only course now was to go

Ald. Graham cut into the committee ruthlessly. It was not too late, he said, to stop this extravagance. They, could still consider the matter, and made a deep cut in the estimates. He did not at all fall in with the idea of a $15,000 mortgage to the county council. Better borrow the money in the city, he said. The committee had made a mistake in accepting the architect's estimates-figures which were not bona fide, as was apparent from the tender for the heating. As a solution for the problem the speaker suggested that one of the long wards, the building of which is not yet started, be cut out of the plans. This would leave ample accommodation and bring the expense down $15,000. It would not interfere with the construction or appearance of the building, he said. and would leave ample accommodation for fifteen years at least. Why should they put up such a large building for the mere sake of being extravagant? "To go on would be showing our great weakness, for it was a great weakness that we allowed ourselves to be drawn in the way we have been," he continued. He moved to have the long ward cut out. Ald. O'Meara seconded. Ald. Taylor retorted with warmth that the member from No. 4 ward was not doing his duty to the unfortunate poor if he wanted to cut off the free ward.

The mayor ruled Ald. Graham's motion out of order, as the contracts had Ald. Graham-I appeal against the ruling. I have the contracts in my pocket, and there is a clause which gives us the power to do this, and I think your worship knows it. Ald. O'Meara, in answer to Ald. Taylor, said he believed they should put the poor patients in the good quarters, and not stick them in a condemned ward at the back of the building. There was too much of that go ing on. They could provide accommodation for the poor all right. The ruling of the mayor was sustained on a vote of 10 to 5, Ald. Douglass, O'Meara, Winnett, Graham and Dreaney voting nay.

Ald. Carrothers would not vote, but said he agreed with Ald. Graham. Ald. Winnett held that they couldn't go on and let the contracts. Ald. Hunt, in reply to Ald. Taylor, said they could put in a heating plant for the hospital for very little in excess of Mr. McBride's estimate. The architect was not to be blamed for the extras. If the committee had chosen to adhere closely to the plans the buildings would not have cost more than the estimates, but on good advice extras had been tacked on. His reason for voting for the additional expenditure was that the consulting physicians had strongly advised the committee not to let a few thousands stand in the way of a good building. He had never favored a partnership with the county council, and he moved that the contracts be accepted conditionally for that portion of the heating which would not exceed $70,000. When the committee became possessed of the additional funds the whole contract would go to the successful tenderer. Ald. Winnett claimed that Ald. Hunt had changed his opinion greatly and had made a most remarkable backdown. Referring to the mayor's motion, he said it was the most extraordinary ruling ever heard of in the council. Why, in the name of common sense, was it out of order? It was more out of order to ask this council to spend $20,000 when they hadn't it. If Ald. Graham's motion were out of order, Ald. Hunt's was, too. can't make fish of one and flesh of another," he said, and he took strong exception to spending money for brick and mortar which would not be needed for several years.

Ald. Hunt showed that he had not changed his attitude, and again reminded Ald. Winnett, in defense Architect McBride, that by deducting the extras, the cost would be brought within the $70,000.

The mayor advised the aldermen to keep their heads cool. The money would be forthcoming, he said. If Ald. Graham would take the interest in hospital matters that the cmmittee and tust had done-Ald. Graham-As my motion is ruled out of order, is it necessary to speak to The Mayor-I am just going to explain-

Ald. Graham--Well, I want the privilege of replying.

The mayor went on to say that it was poor policy on the part of Ald, Graham to put his opinion on hospital matters in opposition to the medical men of the city. He also twitted the finance chairman for being so poorly posted about the financial side of the cuestion. The agreement suggested with the county council was better than the present one. As for extras, the architect was not to blame. The committee had been advised by the consulting physicians to make the additional expenditure, and it was wise. They would have a hospital equal to any in Canada-equal to the Royal Victoria in Montreal, even, when finished. Ald. McPhillips strongly supported the mayor. He had noticed that members outside of the committee had most to say about the work. After rehears ing the history of the contracts, he dealt exhaustively with the proposition to the county council. The city would get 31/2 per cent interest on the capital account-

Ald. Graham-We could get the patients without the interest.

Ald. MoPhillips replied that it had been hinted by the county council that if the city were to turn their backs on the county, a county hospital would be built in Strathroy or some point west. Continuing, he said all buildings cost in excess of the estimate. Ald. Greenlees favored extreme caution. If the contracts had exceeded the estimate only a few thousand dollars no one would object but with th excess of $20,000 he was inclined to favor altering the plans to reduce the expenditure. He moved to this effect, and Ald. Winnett seconded.

Ald. Carrothers said to save himself and the other members from an infunction, he would move the tenders be accepted on the condition that no contract be gone on with until such time as the corporation be duly authorized to issue debentures or be in possession of the necessary funds. Ald. McPhillips seconded.

Ald. Hunt was opposed to Ald, Carrothers' amendment, because it would mean the adoption of all the clauses in the report. Some of them he ob-Ald. Carrothers said it was his intention to make his motion after the report had been taken up clause by clause, but it had been forced upon

Ald. Graham said he would support Ald. Greenlees' motion. The matter would then come up again when the mayor probably wouldn't have the portunity of acting in such a highhanded manner. Ald. Jolly-By Ald. Greenlees' motion the committee would be at the mercy of the contractors. The motion was lost Ald. Hunt moved that the mayor and Chairman Carrothers interview the government for the purpose of getting ower to issue debentures. Ruled out of order. On the understanding that Ald. Carrothers' motion would come in later, the report was taken up clause by clause. The first clause was adopted. The motion to accept the tender for marble was defeated on a vote of 9 to those opposing it being Ald. Belton. Douglass, O'Meara, Jolly, Hunt, winnett, Graham, Cooper, and Dreancy.

A letter was received from Mr. Flock, on behalf of the W. A. Johnson & Co. of Toronto, protesting against the manner in which the contract for electric light generators and engines had been dealt with by the committee. Hunt's motion to refer it back to the committee carried. Ald. Carrothers would not move the adoption of the clause relating to the proposition to the county council. Ald. Winnett moved to refer it back to the committee. Ald. McPhillips championed it. They could not ignore the county council, The county, he said, had a vested right in the hospital grounds and buildings today to the extent of $8,000.

Ald. Winnett (sotto voce)-No, no! Ald. McPhillips, continuing, said the committee had done the best they could, and the council should support Winnett's motion carried.

Ald. McPhillips — Then some steps should be taken to notify the county council that you have seen fit to repudiate the proposal. Ald. Carrothers' motion passed, Ald. O'Meara and Douglass voting nay. Mr. James Summerhaves, the telephone lineman, who saved Mary Lynch from drowning in the Thames near Clark's bridge a couple of weeks ago.

and who made a plucky effort to save the little girl's brother Jimmy, was presented by the mayor, on behalf of the Royal Humane Society, with a handsome certificate for his bravery. The mayor accompanied the presentation with some fitting remarks, and Mr. Summerhaves was heartily applauded as he withdrew from the coun cil chamber Ald. Cooper's bylaw to amend the market rules so that perishable goods might be auctioned on the market at any time in the day was proteste against by Messrs. Chauncey Smith and G. G. Steele, fruit dealers. Ald. Cooper said the object of the bylaw was to satisfy the consumers, so that they could get fruit at an earlier hour than 11 o'clock. The bylaw had a close call, but finally passed.

Canada's Booming Trade.

It is interesting to note that while Sir Charles Tupper pronounces the tariff changes as sweeping, his newspaper aides endeavor to make believe that the tariff has not been lowered for the benefit of the consumer, and that it is the same old tariff! We have been seeing some talk recently about a contemplated Conservative convention. One stalwart Conservative paper, in fact, has been calling for one in order that the assembled wisdom may get rid of Sir Charles as a leader, because it reaches the conclusion that so long as he is leader the party cannot win. That may or may not be the right course; it is a purely domestic matter, which we will let the Conservatives settle among themselves. Sir Charles, of course, suits us. What we desire to point out is that Sir Charles has once again proved his right to take a front pew among the false prophets. From all parts of Canada, and of the British Empire, comes testimony against the Conservative leader. The London (England) Canadian Gazette, for example, thus refers to the outlook for Canada's staple in-

"The tide has distinctly turned; and Canadian agriculture - the industry which, above all others, is the mainstay of the country's prosperityseems to have entered upon an era of greater progress and sounder development than it has ever known before."

Then we have the Toronto World, which cannot be accused of having any very strong regard for the Liberal Government of Canada, thus bearing testimony to the progress which the country is making under the new re-

"Toronto is becoming herself again. The old-time activity is in evidence again on the streets, in the factories, in the stores and offices. The population is increasing every day. people are to be seen on the streets. The cars carry larger numbers of passengers, and the receipts are bigger than ever, notwithstanding the great se in the number of bicycles. A confidence pervades all feeling of classes of the community. The estate agents say that the market for property is regaining much of its former state of buoyancy. Mostly all the factories are running up to their full capacity, while many are being enlarged, and several new factories either have been recently started or are now being constructed and equipped. And what is more encouraging than the immediate present is the immediate future. The crops all over Canada are most promising, more settlers than ever are coming into the country, while the mining industry is flourishing. It is quite evident that we have seen the end of the seven lean years in Canada, and that an era of prosperity has

From the Northwest we have the following striking statement by the Regina (N. W. T.) Leader, a journal at one time controlled by that uncompromising opponent of the Laurier Administration, Mr. N. F. Davin, M.P.:

"In characterizing the preferential tariff as a sweeping change, Sir Charles Tupper was more truthful than those Conservatives who have asserted that no change was made in the tariff. It was a radical departure from the old order, both in the way of giving consumers cheaper goods and showing practical appreciation of Canada's kinship with the United Kingdom. Sir Charles' 'blue ruin' picture, however, has not been realized. Present events are showing what a mistaken prophet Charles was. It is especially significant that just at the time when full effect is given to the preferential tariff, Canadian manufacturers everywhere are enlarging their factories and enjoying greater prosperity than ever before. The tariff reductions which Sir Charles said would surely The tariff reductions ruin all industries have on the contrary nerved the manufacturers .. to greater enterprise, with manifest benefit to themselves and to the whole people of Canada."

Judging by the non-success of his prophesies in regard to these recent events, we can well understand why Sir Charles Tupper assumes the role of the sphinx with reserence to the international conference at Quebec. It would be odd, indeed, if so old a politician as Sir Charles did not profit in some degree by his recent tough experiences. Having had his predictions with regard to the Canadian preferential tariff proved to be utterly unreliable, it is not astonishing to find the Opposition leader retiring in disgust from the prophecy business under the cloak of the patriot. Nevertheless, when the result of the deliberations of the international commissioners is made known, we expect to find Sir Charles resuming business at the old stand, with after-results not one whit of an improvement for him over those which he made regarding the pro-British tariff that he so foolishly denounced last year.

Dean Mackenzie, of Brantford, in a sermon explaining why, though a not consider prohibition the most efctive method, urged upon his hearne necessity of redoubling their example, as heretofore.

The Fight For the Open Door. Much has been said and written recently about the British "sphere of influence" in China, but comparatively few know just what the term implies. There are really two ways open to Great Britain to attack the trade of the teeming millions of inland China, as pointed out by the distinguished traveler and investigator, Mr. Archibald Colquhoun, at a recent meeting of the Royal Geographical Society. One is from the seaboard; entering China by the main rivers, notably the Yangtse, the main artery of China and the West River, which passes through the Southern Provinces. The other is from Britain's land base, Burmah, through Yunnan.

The Yangtse-Kiang, or Blue River is an enormous stream. It takes its rise in that land of mystery, Thibet, and covers by its winding course a distance of some three thousand miles, of which two thousand are navigable. The Chengtu plain, which is situated in the upper region traversed by this great river, is described as a land of prosperous cities and villages, of innumerable "palatial" farm houses among cedar, bamboo and fruit trees. Over its streams are built fine bridges with roofs decorated with lacquer and gold. It has stately temples, water and oil mills, boundless fertility and wealth. For two thousand years it has enjoyed immunity from droughts and great Chinese Empire that yet remains to be opened to modern commerce. The country along the upper stretches of this great river is rich in undeveloped resources of iron, coal and gold. Only the ignorance and exclusiveness of the population has prevented an immense foreign trade in these waters. Every obstacle had been placed in the way of replacing slow and unsatisfactory junk traffic by modern steam vessels. Even when an enterprising Englishman did get liberty to navigate the upper end of the Yangtse, the Chinese officials had all sorts of absurd excuses for preventing the inauguration of the reform. It was asserted that the greatest danger would be incurred among the gorges, where the vertical cliffs were infested by large monkeys, which would certainly hurl rocks down on the unhappy crew, destroying both them and their steamer. The steamer could have proceeded under the treaty without a permit, but its owners, not desiring to fall foul of the Chin-Government, sold the vessel to the authorities, who withdrew it, and thus for years steam navigation was postponed and a field of profitable trade for Great Britain was kept closed for at least decade. The days of alliance have now gone by for ever, and it is recognized that if the British will not energetically take hold of the great natural opportunities to trade in undeveloped China, Russia and Germany will do out the English-speakers. The distinguished traveler whose views we have referred to holds that it is from Burmah on the one hand, and from Shanghai and Hong Kong on the other, that Britain must, by the aid of steam, applied overland, and by waterway, effectively occupy the Upper Yangtse region, the key to Britain's position in China. China has ceased to be a buffer, however desirable British statesmen might consider to have it remain as such, and Britain must find means for effectively occupying the Yangtse region and Southern China if she would hold own in the Far East. As Mr. Chamberlain has pointed out. the commercial supremacy of the empire is menaced by recent combinations of powers opposed to British trade interests, and their assult, as the Colonial Secretary has explained, if successful, "would menace our existence in a way in which it never has been threatened since the time when the great Napoleon attempted to lav an interdict upon British trade."

If. as is reported, Lord Charles Beresford has gone on a mission to report to the British Government how best to combat the combination of selfish interest that menace the supremacy of Britain in the East, his report cannot too soon be submitted.

Mr. Foster's Intemperance,

When speaking of his political opponents, at Rossland, Hon. Geo. E. Foster, ex-Finance Minister, said that they were liars, because they had not yet carried out all the pledges that they made when in Opposition, Suppose Mr. Foster applies his standard to himself and his fellow-managers of the Conservative party. What whopper-mongers they must be regarded, when their record is borne in recollection! We suppose, however, with that fine sense of self-preservation that has strong upholder of temperance, he did always made him seek refuge in a maze of words, when caught in inconsistency, he would say that he was never like his political opponents; he promote temperance by pre- was merely a most superior individual, who had moments of weakness!

Contented Canada.

Because it is the dull season of the year for the press, probably, a few Canadian contemporaries are indulging in speculative politics, and declaring that Canada has no desire for annexation to the United States, but aspires to be an independent republic at an early day. The fact is, Canada was never more content than at the present with her connection with Great Britain. Never before has she moved forward so rapidly within a few years. As a part of the British Empire, Canada owes her recent start in the direction of accelerated prosperity to the friendly spirit which she has shown to the Mother Country during and since the Diamond Jubilee year. The many millions that have been spent in Canadian railway enterprises have not begun to exercise anything like the amount of influence in the promotion of her prosperity that have been exercised by the preferential provisions in the Canadian tariff. The people of Canada ought to learn from this fact lesson. They ought to see that the progress and prosperity of Canada depend more largely upon the active sympathy and good-will of the United Kingdom than on anything else; and when from this one exhibition of our attachment to the Mother Land, and to the Empire, we have gained so much, we are not likely to run away from the path of progress the moment we have entered upon it.

The people of Canada are beginning to realize that it is possible to grow in wealth, in political influence in the world, and in the exercise of self-government, without destroying the ties which bind us to the Empire, and without destroying those relations upon which that union depends. The statesmen of Great Britain scarcely realized the immense importance of closer un= ion of all parts of the Empire until the year of the Diamond Jubilee, in which the Dominion, through its Prime Minister, took so prominent a part. But they realize it now.

Coming Home Again. The holiday season is ending, the chools are about to open, and many who have wandered in search of change and rest, are returning home. A holiday is a good thing for the man who has earned it; in fact, he is the only man who really enjoys it. In these days summer holidays are fashionable. In the old land people of all classes get to the sea shore for a larger or shorter period; and in Canada many take long journeys by rail or boat. When a man's work involves a monotonous routine or a severe mental strain, it is good for him to breathe for a little while a freer, more restful atmosphere. The holiday seeker is glad to go, and, as a rule, glad to return. One of the greatest pleasures of going from home is the joy of getting back again. The holiday is an in-The great thing is the business of one's life, whatever that may so, and will put up barriers to keep be. The holiday has served its purpose if it has quickened one's appreciation for home, and sharpened one's appetite for work. If the holiday has been well spent, it will supply pleasant memories, which will come up again and again in the busy hours; but, after all, the chief end has been gained, when we have cause to feel that there is no place like home, and nothing so healthful as work.

London Heads the Procession. London holds yearly one of the two best Fairs on the big continent dis-

London is all right

In the coming vote on prohibition, there are two classes who are not troubled much with intellectual difficulties -those who are convinced prohibitionists, and those who are out and out Instead of tears I'd give them cheers supporters of the liquor traffic. If these were all the parties involved, the struggle would be fierce, but it would be on a simple issue. But as a matter of fact there are many sober, thoughtful citizens who feel that the particular form of this vote puts them in an awkward dilemma. They do not wish to vote for the liquor traffic, or to give a vote which seems to give their countenance to the evils and excesses connected with that traffic. On the other hand, they do not believe that the time has come for a drastic prohibitory measure, and are afraid that if it were, by a spurt, to carry a law far in advance of the present state of public opinion, that evils would result of yellow jacket, or a peacock feather, or a worse kind than those we have now to deal with. Their position is not that they would rather bear those ills we have than fly to others that we know not of; but that a gradually increasing pressure of moral suasion and corrective legislation would be far more likely to serve the interests of temperance. It is probable that this is the position of a large body of sober and thoughtful citizens. They are not like Flaneur, who indulges in small jests at the expense of the teapot party"; in fact, they wish to stand apart from that kind of flippancy. They feel the seriousness of the problem, and feel their responsibility for the moral life of the community, but are not convinced that immediate and total prohibition is possible or desirable. These people are inclined to resent the plebiscite as an anwelcome dilemma. Nor is it fair to sneer at them as half-hearted reformers, as mere theorists. Their "searchings of heart" will be good for the country, and perhaps one of the main benefits of the piebiscite will be the thoughtful discussion which it is calling forth on one of the most important social problems. We doubt if any man in Canada knows more of the Dominion, or mor the British Empire, than Principal Grant. He was one of the first to travel on horse-back across the then unknown Canada stretching westward to the Pacific. He has visited Australia. He is now doing Newfoundland, and, through the Toronto Globe, telling the people, in his usual interesting style, what he saw and heard.

A Lost Leader.

[Events.] Where is the Hon. George E. Foster these days? Now that his dear old friends, the prohibitionists, are hard at work trying to bring about the reform for which he used to do battle at the modest figure of $10 a night, surely he ought to take a hand in the fight. It will never do for him to stand idle while the battle rages around him. He must buckle on his armor and go at it, or go down in history as the great bamboozler. The hour has come for him to choose.

Politics! Politics! [Events, Ottawa.]

I have the best of proof that the Conservatives have thought it out, and this is what they figure on, according to a prominent member of the party, who in the heat of argument let me into the secret: "I are," he said, "going to vote for prohibition, not because believe in prohibition, but because a majority for it will put the Government With me it is party and party only, and I can tell you, if prohibition is carried, it will be because the Conservatives have supported it in order to embarrass the Liberal Government and help to defeat them at the next general elections." This opened my eyes to a new phase of the question.

English Sparrows.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: If I had my way, I would give the Englishmen who brought sparrows to this country at least ten years. I say the Englishmen, for I feel certain that no Scotchman or Irishman would have done such a foolish act. Like most of the home boys and girls, they should have been left where they were hatched. However, they are here, the pugnacious little thieves, and like the Spanish in Cuba, they must be fought to keep them under control. One of the most effective ways of doing so has been sparrow matches among the boys.

A meeting is called, captains are choen, and they select 20 or more on each side. Then the hunt begins. All the barns for miles around are visited at night. Some of the boys stand in convenient places with lanterns, others rouse up the birds from their sleeping places. They at once fly for the lights, and are knocked down by dozens with stubs of brooms or bats made on purpose. Their heads are cut off and preserved, and upon a certain prearranged night the two sides meet, the heads are counted, and the losing side has to pay for an oyster supper In this way thousands were destroyed in one section. I think city councils might adopt some plan to destroy them in winter, which could easily be done if proper means were taken.

I have promised the boys of Vanneck. Ilderton and Duncrief the use of my empty house on my north farm on Monday evening next, Sept. 5, to organize a sparrow hunt match, and I would advise as many as possible to be "Yes." replied Senator Sorghum, "but Li understands his business. Acute Rheumatism

Pains In the Foot and Limb-A Complete Cure Accomplished by Hood's Sarsaparilia.

"For a number of years I was afflicted with acute rheumatism in my left side and all the way down my limb into my foot. I live five blocks from my work and had to stop and rest several times in going and coming. I could get no relief from my trouble and was on the point of giving up my job when I happened to hear of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I purchased a bottle of this medicine and a vial of Hood's Pills and began taking them. Before I had half finished them I was relieved and it was not long before I was completely cured. I never lose an opportunity to praise Hood's Sarsaparilla, for my cure meant a great deal to me, as I have a family and must always be at my post." WEEKLY REVIEW.

Wheat deliveries were moderately good this week; the demand and price were both steady. Oats declined considerably, closing at 75c to 80c for new, and 80c to 85c for old.

Feed barley sold at 80c; malting, 85c No peas, corn or any other kind of grain came in. Eggs advanced to 12c by the basket.

Butter was steady. Poultry shows no change in price. The supply was good. Meats were all quiet and unchanged, except dressed hogs; they declined to $5 50 and $6, closing weak.

Hides, etc., were steady. In fruits the receipts were moderately heavy, the quality varied. Peaches, plums, apples, melons and pears formed the bulk. Tomatoes were scarce and higher, closing at 60c to 75c a bushel. The range of prices given for fruits is regulated by size of baskets and quality of fruit.

Prices for hay ranged from $6 to $7, $6 50 being the usual figure. The following list gives latest values for principal lines:

R., said: "There is wording of the constitution, rendered absolutely nothing in that report; it's A Chicago telegram says: If the plans of the executive officers of the consolidated Vanderbilt system of railroads are carried out, the headquarters of the three biggest eastern roads will be soon moved to Chicago. Immediately after the consolidation of the Vanderbilt lines-the New York West Shore, Lake Shore, Michigan Central and Nickel Plate—several months ago, the scheme of centralizing the general offices of the different lines, as well as the finances, was suggested, it is said by President Callaway, of the New York Central. The idea is now said to have been agreed to by all the interested parties. The contemplated change as outlined by one close to the head of one of the roads will bring the headquarters of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, the New York, Chiago and St. Louis (Nickel Plate), and the Michigan Central to Chicago, leaving the general offices of the New York Central and the West Shore in New York as at present. As an indication that the owners of these roads are rounding up things preparatory to an important change, it may be said that during the last few weeks, one of the lines, the Michigan Central, received orders to cut off the heads of a large number of traffic solicitors, and a sav one small department.

Experienced men are at work on the repairs night and day, and in a short time everything is expected to be in complete working HOSPITAL FIGURES.

The Victoria Hospital was to have been built for $70,000. Architect Mc-Bride shows that his estimate was only $713 too low. He points out that the amount of contracts first let is $57,240, and there is added on the original plans electric wiring, $1,300; plumbing, $3,233, and heating, $8,940, making a total of $70,713. The other contracts let and recommended to be let are extras. Although the successful tender for the heating amounts to $11,440, there is $2,500 of that which should be charged to the power plant. Mr. McBride holds that his commission should not be included in the cost of the biulding. The elevators, he says, should properly be classed as furnishings.

A tour of the grounds is astonishing. The Main Building has been greatly improved. A big change has been made throughout the whole interior, and the addition of the spacious art gallery, 60 feet long by 50 feet, feature the great importance of which will be readily recognized by everyone. There are no side-lights in the new building, all the light entering from above. The Ladies' Art Club are taking a deep interest in the work, and the board is closely following their wishes, with the result that the art annex will hereafter prove one of the chief attractions of the Western. It will be completed tomorrow night. In the Agricultural Hall the booths have been taken out and 20 large tables have been put in cross-wise, giving exhibitors about one-third more The interior of the Horticultural Hall has also been completely changed, providing a great deal more space and improving its appearance. Several improvements in the Poultry Shed will be readily recognized and appreciated by exhibitors. In the great cattle and sheep barn about 80 pens for sheep have been added, and four maternity stalls. Outside the shed are 120 for sheep and swine, and the conven-ience and comfort of exhibitors has been considered in several ways, such as new gang ways for unloading, etc. An important improvement has been in the loading facilities at the G. The Noted Dreyfus Case To Be Reopened.

An Important Witness Confesses Forgery.

Paris, Aug. 31.-The arrest of Lieut.-

Col. Henry, on the discovery that he is the author of an important letter which figured in the Dreyfus case, is one of the most sensational developments in the whole of this extraordinary affair. Col. Henry has been throughout the fighting champion of the army against Col. Picquart, with whom he fought a duel. This new development evidently entirely alters the aspect of both the Dreyfus and the Zola cases, and practically nulliles the evidence of Gens. Pellieux and Boisdeiffere, and the declaration of the minister for war, M. Cavagnac, in the Chamber of Deputies. In fact, some people believe that perhaps the real turning point in the Dreyfus case has been reached, and that the arrest of Col. Henry will lead to a revision of the trial of the prisoner on Devil's Island. It appears that so soon as M. Cavagnac assumed the office of minister of war, he charged the official bureau to make a thorough research of the Dreyfus case, and it was this inquiry which resulted in the discovery of documents lately read in the Chamber of Deputies by M. Cavagnac, showing that proof of the guilt of Dreyfus was forged. When Col. Henry was summoned to the ministry for war and was questioned by M. Cavagnac in the presence of Gen. Boisdeiffere and others, he at first affirmed the authenticity of the incriminating document. But when discrepancies were pointed out, he at first admitted adding sentences and Before the Police Court-Preliminary finally admitted fabricating the whole. letter.

It is affirmed, however, that this discovery has not changed Cavagnac's opinion in the culpability of Dreyfus, but the minister is determined to punish all the guilty parties, no matter what their rank may be. Col. Henry is to be tried by court-martial.

COL. HENRY CONFESSED FOR-

GERY. Colonel Henry confessed to having committed forgery "owing to the absolute necessity for finding proofs against Dreyfus, and it is understood that the document in question is the letter which has hitherto been alleged to have been written by the German military attache to the Italian military attache in October, 1896. Finally, it is said, that when the interpolation in the Dreyfus case was coming up in the Chamber of Deputies, this letter was secretly committed to the court, and was the chief evidence upon which Dreyfus was committed. The papers supporting Dreyfus demand the release of Col. Picquart, who goods were given by Middleton, who is imprisoned on charges connected with the Dreyfus affair, and they also to be sent to the B. and W. office in insist upon a revision of the Dreyfus Brantford not later than the 15th of

A GLOOMY PICTURE. Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 31. - J. R. Anderson, who returned from Klondike, via the Edmonton route, says the suffering there is very great. Anderson was informed by one prospector, who came from far down the Mackenzie River, that there were hundreds, if not thousands, of miners, mostly Americans, who were half starved, and stalled on all the Canadian overland routes. There is also a great scarcity of water. It is difficult to describe the disgust and abject misery of these people camped clean out of the track of civilization, living on half-rations, and unable to move one way or the other. The Peace River diggings are washed out. There must have been a number of deaths, as many are now in bad shape. Of 5,000 who left Edmonton from March to May, only three people got through to

Examination of the "Railway Promoter" - Charges of Bigamy and Theit Pending.

Woodstock, Aug. 31.-Hundreds came into town to hear the evidence against Reginald Lancelot Middleton, the promoter of the alleged Brantford

Middleton is alleged to have swindled. and the account is $5316. Mr. Coles testified that on Aug. 4 Middleton was introduced to him by Mr. Charles Pyne as "Capt. Middleton, of the new road." Middleton said the C. P. R. was at the back of the new railroad, and would pay the bills. Orders for said that all vouchers for goods were each month. Middleton had said he was chief engineer of the road, and that he had built the Crow's Nest Pass Railway. Witness swore that the clear understanding on which he sold the goods was that the C. P. R.

would pay for them. Alf Rubbra, of the Sentinel-Review staff, swore that Middleton had led him distinctly to understand that the C. P. R. was building the road. On several occasions Middleton said he was chief engineer of the road.

The prisoner was remanded for one week. The defense admitted that the C. P. R. had nothing to do with the new road and asked that the case be disposed of now. The crown authorities laid a charge of bigamy against Middleton, it being alleged that he married Sarah Smith, of Sarnia, when he was already married to Lillian Munro, of Toronto. The Ottawa police have received word that Middleton will be prosecuted whether convicted on the other charges or not, for stealing a valuable collection of coins from the postoffice department, Ottawa.

Sam had sagaciously remarked that, as they really wanted to go to Australia, the secret wasn't any longer of much value to them; while, did they ever need it, the very fact of their having been paid to sign proved what they knew was true. He had failed to observe that the confession of having extorted money under false pretenses laid them open to a conviction for felony. Miss Squeicher, going to a side cupboard, brought out a penny bottle of ink and a stumpy pen. With the latter she was about to scrawl her name when Lucille checked her.

"Stay," she said. "Your signing it Is useless without witnesses." "Witnesses! You want 'em?" ejaculated Miss Squelcher. "Why, I should respectable woman, and a lank, fairhaired, washed-out young man, the paper was signed in due form, Mrs. Squeicher, with considerable importance, affixing her cross.

When they were again alone, Lucille said, placing several notes on the but there was that in Lucille's tones which told them she was resolute. Sam having flourished off a receipt, Lady Westbrook at once took her departure. As she stepped into the street she drew a long breath. How refreshing was even that misty, gloomy air to the atmosphere of the Squelchers' room. For the last time-for the last time!" she kept repeating to herself, as she hastened down to the street to the cab. "Drive to where you took us up as quickly as possible," she said, as got in; then sinking back, she "Safe-safe! I believe they really mean what they say this time.' of one hundred pounds. They had just reached Parkin and Gotto's when a gentleman came rapand was driven off.

As he went swiftly by a change had come over Susan Squelcher. Her color turned less florrid; her eyes opened to their very widest. Clutching her brother's arm, she cried: "Good gracious! Oh, Sam, if it "Isn't what?" "Lieut. Selwyn; and she, her ladvship, assured me he was dead."

CHAPTER XIII. Captain Selwyn sat over his breakfast buried in thought. He had sat down with rather a good appetite, and the Times, conveniently folded to rest against the coffee-pot before him, had supplied nature's craving for nutriment and literature at the same time. Suddenly, however, the fork, conveying a morsel of an omelette to his mouth, dropped with a rattle on to his plate, and the sailor, catching the paper towards him, read with avidity and surprise the advertisement which had | attracted his attention. Over and over again he read, and the more his countenance expressed astonishment and perplexity. Rising after awhile, he paced the room, the paper grasped in his hand. "Strange-very strange," he muttered. 'It must be meant for me; yet-yet-He paused and finally resumed his chair; but not his breakfast. His appetite had gone. He read the advertisement once more; then, leaning his head on his hand, exclaimed:

"I can't make it out!" Captain Selwyn was yet in London, till searching for his wife who so mysteriously had fled, and hidden herself from him-the young wife in whose purity he believed as in heaven. Ill success had won deeper furrows on his bronzed face. His clear eyes were saddened, and preoccupied in expression. He was certainly aged. He had loved her devoutly, unselfishlyso unselfishly that one of his chief desires to find his wife arose from his wish to tell her she need not fear him; if their marriage had been forced upon her, if it had grown distasteful, to assure her she was free. He was yet thinking when the servant brought in the card of a visitor. It was Morris Chalmers, and Captain Selwyn bade him be shown up at once. Well, how wags the world with you, old felow?" asked his friend, taking a chair.

"About the same as yesterday," smiled the sailor, who had met Chalmers on that day. "Well," and smoothing his exquisitely-fitting gloves, he quietly regarded the speaker, "it appears to me from your countenance, that it is not the same. You look confoundedly bothered." "Is my countenance such a traitor?

"With rare exceptions, most countenances are traitors," rejoined Morris Chalmers. "Why, man, your forehead is as crumpled as a lady's when she finds her first gray hair.' "A serious matter, truly, that; but I would gladly change with her." "Holding your trouble the greatest? The same trouble, eh, Selwyn?" and the speaker's tones were sympathetic. "The same, Morris; and ever to be the same, until I find her.

"Have you had no news?" "None; yet--" "Yet it is in reference to your wife that you are worried this morning, and, egad! have left your breakfast nearly untasted. Bad, that. Thanks." Captain Selwyn had pushed the clar-et towards him, and he filled a glass. "My dear Morris," said the sailor, "I made a confident of you in respect to my domestic sorrow, and am going to do so further. When I said I had no news that was scarcely correct. I have been given to understand that my wife is really here., in London." "Really! That is some clue, my boy. Who was your informant? Is it reliable authority?"

"There is the doubt. I have been greatly surprised this morning by an announcement which I feel must refer to me. But read it for yourself." He handed the Times to the visitor, folded down at the sensation column.

"What's this?" asked Chalmers. 'Charlie, to Charlie's pet?' "No, no, the one beneath."

"Ah! I see." And he read as follows: "If Lieutenant W. S-n, who two nights ago took a handsom cab at the Oxford Street end of Rathbone Place is in search of any one he has found missing, he need not leave London to do it. Let him seek not a hundred miles west of Temple Bar." "Gan this be addressed to you.

Selwyn?'

"To whom else could it so aptly apply?" "But you are not a lieutenant." "I was once. It must be for me, Chalmers. Look at the initials, W. S-n; while two nights ago I did take a handsome cab at the Oxford street end of Rathbone Place." 'Some one must have seen you who knows you. "And who knows her? -She is in London. "And west of Temple Bar." "Yes; and any hour," the honest sailor's face flushed-"I may behold Would it were this day!'

"What do you intend to do?" "Well, I thought of answering the "I should." 'Offering a reward for further information, el "I don't think I should do that at first," responded Morris Chalmers, slowly, as if reflecting. "I would not appear to eager to grasp at it. It may, after all, be worth nothing. I should merely say: "W. S-n, who took a cab at Rathbone Place on the 5th ult., has seen the advertisement in reference to that matter, and would be happy if the advertiser would give him a personal interview. "That will do capitally. "I'll drive Shoud I not put my address?" "No; as they have not," replier Morris Chalmers, shrewdly. You may rest certain that any one who knows and takes and interest in you, is perfectly well acquainted with where you are living. Suppose, now, it is a trap? You say, did your wife get an inkling that you were on her track she would avoid you. Jenny, of the interest I took in the great enterprise you had embarked on; of my wishes and prayers that it might prove for the good of both, writes Carlyle to his sister soon after her marriage, in the Sentember Atlantic. On the whole, all very fair and well. You know I have all along regarded Hanning as an uncommonly brisk, glegg little fellow, since the first time I saw him (hardiy longer than my leg, then), and prophesied handsome things of him in the world. It is very rare and very fortunate when two parties that have affected each other from childhood upwards get together in indissoluble partnership at last. May it prove well for you, as I think it will. You must take the good and the ill in faithful mutual help, and whoever or whatever fail you, never fail one another way with all dexterity and prudence through that Cotton Babylon looking sharp about him; knowing always, too, that "honesty is the best policy" for all manner of men. Do thou faithfully second him, my bairn, that will be the best of lots for thee. I think it possible that now and then, especially when you are left alone, the look of so many foreign things may seem dispiriting to was. you, and the huge smoke and stour of that tumultuous Manchester (which is idly down Rathbone Place, halled a not unlike the uglier parts of London) handsom that was passing, jumped in, produce quite other than a pleasant impression. But, take courage, my we man. "you will use, you will use," get hefted to the place, as all creatures do. There are many good people things among the innumerable Keep snug within your own doors. Stylish Inexpensive Frocks. There is no question but it costs than in winter; so many more gowns are required, that although each one may not cost such a lot of money, the sum total is decidedly startling. Forturnately for people who have to con-sult economy, this year there are many ways in which it is possible to remodel last summer's gowns.

The profuse use of lace, which is one of the marked fashions this season, is a great assistance in remodeling old gowns. A waist that looks hopelessly shabby can be cleaned, and then the body of it entirely covered with lace. If the sieeves, too, are shabby, they also can be covered with lace, but they will look better if made of the same material as the gown. In putting on the lace it is much better to use lace by the vard from five to six inches in width, instead of lace net on the piece, fective than a fine one.

Remodeling skirts is not an easy and a heavy lace is infinitely more eftask but it is surprising how some of last year's, or, better still, year before last's skirts can be done over, The width was so much greater that by using a narrower pattern considerable material can be cut over and put into a flounce. The attached flounces can be made quite scant. But when a piece of work of this sort is attempted, it must be thoroughly well done from the start. The old skirt would best be ripped apart, if not entirely so, at all events to within a quarter or half a yard of the belt. The pattern of the new shape must then be laid on it, and if it is at all carefully cut the skirt will look quite new. Two or three narrow ribbon ruches will add greatly to it, particularly if black be used. These should be put on at the quite plain. If a last year's skirt hangs well and is in good order, only having lost its fresh look a good plan is to trim it with three or four rows of black braid half-way up. This can be put on plain or in a zigzag pattern. Trimming with black always freshens up an old gown, than those of last year, and this difficulty is often most annoying, but a ruffle or flounce of ribbon or taffeta silk will work wonders. It is best to put this on so that it is longer in the back than the front. If absolutely necessary there can be three at the back and only two, or even one, in front. When a skirt is too narrow, a panel can be inserted of silk or satinblack or some contrasting shade-and this can be covered with lace if a very I have no doubt Robert will shift his elaborate effect is desired. A narrow front breadth arranged in this way looks very well, and entirely changes the style of the skirt. Sashes are a great boon, and they will be in fashion again. Made of ribbon of taffeta or of mousseline de soie, and most elaborately trimmed, they will quite cover up the back of the gown, and hide any effect in a delightful Cold Fish.

One of the most inviting and tasty of dishes for a supper on a warm night-especially a Sunday night supper-is a dish of cold fish. By this, in that vast weaving-shop, many good sish that is simply cold is by no means mackerel or salmon is pickled (in hot boiling vinegar), is cooled off and then served ice cold, with mayonnaise of French dressing, the dish it rests on being decked with lemon and hard boiled egg. Another substantial ar-ticle of food for hot days is boned chicken surrounded with jelly. jelly mentioned is made of the bones, and the meat is kept as much in the shape of a chicken as possible.

Etiquette at the English Court. Etiquette at the Court of St. James is neither so elaborate nor so strict as that of many foreign courts-notably more money to dress well in summer those of Vienna, Berlin and St. Pet-

But an invitation from the sovereign is a command, and must be treated as such. If through illness or deep mourning an invited guest is unable to go, a note must be written to the lord chamberlain, to his office, stating the reason, and expressing great regret that it was "out of their power to obey her majesty's command." The word "command" must be used. A previous engagement can never be to Buckingham Palace or Marlbor-ough House. The guests walk up stairs and enter the ballroom unannounced, and no official reception is accorded them. Dancing does not be gin until after the arrival of the royalties. No rule excludes anyone from joining the royal quadrille, but it is better taste to avoid dancing in the immediate royal circle, near the dais, unless specially requested to do so. People take their departure when they please, as at an ordinary ball. Only private carriages are allowed within e gateway of the palace. If the court is in mourning, the guests are expectted to wear mourning, according to the official notice in the Gazette. At the Queen's entertainments, n places are of right reserved for class of persons; any of Her Majesty's guests may take whatever seat happens to be vacant. But custom has decreed that a place should be kept the royal circle for duchesses and those ladies whose husbands have been viceroys of Ireland, and this row of seats is termed the banc de duchesses. Placés are also reserved near the dais for ambassadors and ministers, with their wives and daughters, also for the household, and members of the government and their families. London Ladies' Field. A Scientific and Artistic Invention. If there is one thing a woman yearns for it is change, but it is not everyone who can afford the luxury of brannew dresses, blouses, ribbons, etc., and, therefore, it came about that to Printing House Yard immediately. Maypole Soap was invented. With a few cakes of this wonderful soap what transformations can be effected, and the dainty results to be obtained with literally no trouble would be absolutely astounding were we not to take inconsideration the giant strides which science has taken during the 19th century: Science and Art having once joined hands, there is small wonder that their combined efforts have met with such marvellous success. Up to a short time ago the process of dye ing was a positive torture to the thrifty housewife, who recognized that cleanliness was not only a virtue next in value to godliness, but it was also an essential from an economical point of view. Who does not remember the days of powder dyes, when before even the stuff was dissolved the least thing that came into contact with the preparation was indelibly stained. again, look at the trouble; a particular dye for a particular material, and powder and patches into the bargain. (Surely these belong to a by-gone age!)

To obtain a pure and even tint, and a dye which can be used on all materials alike, whether they be silk, satin, cotton, wool or mixtures, you must use a dye prepared with soap. None other will do. Maypole Soap is the only home-dye which fulfils the requirements demanded by all modern and up-to-date women, it ensures absolute cleanliness and equality in color. Maypole Soap is easy, quick, fast and effective. No other dye can equal it, and therefore none can beat it. Once used always used. Powder and patches no longer, but genuine and cleanly home-dyeing forever! Make no mistake, it is only Maypole Soap which can make home-dyeing a pleas-ureable and profitable investment. **

Young Lady Assaulted by a Rufflan While on Her Way Home From Church.

A cowardly assault was committed on Sunday night just over Clark's bridge. Miss Kate Thompson, daughter of Mr. Thomas Thompson, of Westminster, attended St. James' Episcopal Church, where her brotherin-law, Rev. E. W. Hughes, of Tilsonburg, preached the sermon. When returning home Miss Thompson was accompanied by a lady friend a portion of the way. A man followed them, but no particular attention was paid to When Miss Thompson crossed him. the bridge the fellow asked permission to see her home. She declined, and he followed her a short distance to a dark place, where he dealt her a severe blow in the face, which knocked out a couple of teeth. Miss Thompson struck back, at the same time calling for help, which soon arrived, and the ruffian beat a hasty retreat. There is no clue to the identity of Miss Thompson's assailant. The lady is a member of the choir of Christ Church.
