

AUSTRIAN CHANCELLOR COMPLAINS OF THE HARD PEACE TERMS

SIXTY THOUSAND TELEGRAPHERS ARE EXPECTED TO JOIN STRIKE WHICH BECAME EFFECTIVE TODAY

President Konenkamp of Union Declares Thousands More Will Be Called If Demands of Men Are Not Met—Officials of Companies Affected State That Only a Small Proportion of Employees Belong to the Union.

Chicago, June 11.—The nation-wide strike of union commercial telegraphers, called by President Konenkamp of the C. T. U. A. became effective this morning at 7 o'clock (central time).

The companies against which the strike is called include the Western Union Telegraph Company, the Postal Telegraph Company, the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and a number of small telegraph companies in various parts of the country. Union officials estimated that within telegraphers would leave their keys during the day, and that on June 12 more than one hundred thousand electrical workers would go on strike, while officials of the telegraph companies asserted that no such number of employees were involved. Western Union officials said that only a few of their employees were members of the Commercial Telegraphers Union of America, and that business over their lines would not be materially affected by the strike. Issues involved in the strike include the right to organize and bargain collectively, wages and working conditions.

Picketing Commences. President Konenkamp established headquarters here and announced that he would direct the strike from this city. At a meeting of telegraphers early this morning, the union decided to picket at seven o'clock, and at seven o'clock pickets were placed around the general offices of the companies in the city.

Leased wire operators were not involved in the strike, but Mr. Konenkamp said that it might be necessary to call them out in order to inform the demands made by the commercial men. A dispatch from Omaha, Neb., early this morning, which stated that telegraphers in the Western Union and the post offices walked out at midnight, was later denied, and it was said by officials of the companies that none of their employees had quit work.

At Los Angeles, Cal., it was announced by L. J. Marshall, first international vice-president of the union, that operators of the Federal Telegraph Company, a Pacific Coast corporation, would not be ordered to strike as a result of an agreement satisfactory to both sides had been reached.

Operators of that company have been treated fairly, Mr. Marshall said, and have been ordered to strike to their jobs.

NINETY-FIVE PER CENT OF MEN CLAIMED TO BE OUT IN CAPITAL. Washington, June 11.—Union leaders claim that about 1,200 or 35 per cent of the forces employed at the National Union and Postal Telegraph Companies here walked out today in compliance with the strike order. Several days ago by S. J. Konenkamp, president of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union. Company officials early today had no definite figures on the actual number of men who left their keys, but estimated that about 35 per cent of the forces claimed by the strike leaders. They claimed service was not seriously interrupted, but that the situation would be taken by the department and the situation now is entirely in the hands of private enterprise.

With the resolution of Senator Kellogg, passed yesterday, which provides for the return of the telegraph to its original owners, "forthwith" scheduled for speed action in the House Thursday, there was a feeling that the strike would be taken by the department and the situation now is entirely in the hands of private enterprise.

UNION TELEGRAPHERS START PICKETING AT NEW YORK OFFICES. New York, June 11.—With the national strike order of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union in effect at 8 a.m., neither the union headquarters nor the offices of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies had definite information as to its effect here, and that next would be the offices of the companies.

Union men began picketing in front of the Western Union offices at an early hour, notifying all employees entering the building that the strike was in progress.

KONENKAMP DECLARES MEN ARE GOING OUT IN LARGE NUMBERS. Chicago, June 11.—Soon after the hour set for the men to strike, Mr. Konenkamp said that it probably would be two or three days before the full strength of the strike was known. Reports indicated that the men were going out steadily. He estimated that in this district, comprising Illinois and part of Indiana and Wisconsin, about 2,000 men of both the Western Union and postal companies would strike. In

The pilot gave the newspaperman what he thought he could stand, and the latter had to stand for it anyway. RANKS OF WINNIPEG STRIKERS GROWING THINNER, MAYOR GRAY PLANS TO PREVENT CLASHES

Additional Special Constables Were Sworn In Today in an Effort To Check Further Disorders—Efforts Will Be Made To Run Street Cars On Thursday.

Winnipeg, June 11.—Steps were taken today by Mayor Gray to prevent a repetition of the clash last night when a crowd of strikers pulled Sgt. Frederick Coppins, a special constable, from his horse and beat him so severely that he is not expected to recover.

Additional special constables were sworn in to take the place of the policemen who were discharged because they refused to sign an oath not to go out on a sympathetic strike, and the mayor said he believed that sufficient mounted constables were now in the service of the city to prevent any further disorders of a serious character.

Further desertions today from their ranks were admitted by the strike leaders, and it was announced that an attempt would be made tomorrow to run street cars, which have been out of service for three weeks.

WOMEN EAGER TO MAKE TRIPS OVER THE CITY IN AN AIRPLANE

Far More Female Applicants For Seats Than There Are Male.

If "a battalion of death" were to be raised in London, it looks as if plenty of fair recruits could be found for the ranks. The interest of London women has demonstrated itself in the big rush for bookings to make aeroplanes trips over the city while the opportunities are afforded.

Yesterday morning, about the time the squadron of Curtis planes arrived in command of Lieut. Maxwell, the booking office in the Majestic Theatre began to be besieged with requests for bookings from women and girls, eager to go up in the air.

They Want To See. Some of them laughingly explained that the world of the future, which they saw from the top of the world, looked like the world of the future, which they saw from the top of the world.

Inquiries were made concerning the aeroplanes, and the ladies expressed their interest in the aeroplanes, and the ladies expressed their interest in the aeroplanes.

PRESBYTERIAN BUDGET FOR MAINTENANCE MUST DOUBLE IN FIVE YEARS

Report of Committee of Fifty on Forward Movement Presented to General Assembly

HAMILTON, June 10.—The report of the committee of fifty on the forward movement of the church was presented by Rev. Principal Gaudier of Knox College, at the session of the Presbyterian General Assembly this afternoon. The speaker outlined the objectives of the committee which called for a doubling of the church's budget for maintenance in the next five years and the raising of a special fund of four million dollars as an equipment and extension fund to meet the needs of the new era of construction. Principal Gaudier asserted in submitting the report that the nation faced the danger of a degeneration of morals. This was the psychological moment for the great forward movement launched by the churches and co-operation was essential.

Justice to Minister.
A heated debate took place on the case of Rev. Thomas Bennett, which was presented by Rev. Dr. Reid of Montreal. Rev. Thomas Bennett, it was stated, was a minister 73 years of age, who had served the church for 41 years. Instead of receiving the annuity of $600 which, it was asserted, was due to him, he was receiving only $37 annually. The aged minister was ruled out of participation in the fund on a technicality.

Black Grub Attacks Early Corn Crop in Ingersoll District

Too Soon to Predict Extent of Damage—Precautions Needed.

INGERSOLL, June 10.—That a small black grub has attacked some of the early corn crops in the district is the complaint of a number of farmers. While there is considerable evidence of the destructive tendencies of the grub in the early crops, it is too soon to say just how serious the pest may become. The situation will doubtless receive the immediate attention of farmers generally, and precautionary methods will be taken.

METHODISTS PROTEST AGAINST DELIVERY OF MILK ON SUNDAY

Goderich Conference Ends To Meet in Stratford in 1920.

MANY CHANGES MADE
Final Draft Makes Transfer of a Number of Ministers.

[STAFF REPORTER.]
GODERICH, June 10.—After a nine days' strenuous session, the London Methodist Conference was adjourned on Tuesday afternoon to meet again next year in Stratford, the billeting to be on the Harvard plan.

The whole delegation attending the conference this year was delighted with its stay in Goderich, and the attendance was exceptionally good. However, it was not without some difficulties, and many that boarded the train for home after lengthy sessions and some very little sleep. The conducting of the church of the Methodist Church is no child's play.

A party of some thirty or so, destined for London, had an hour and a half, and immediately on the home journey, set out from the hot and dusty station for the nearest and best ice cream parlor. This was quite a considerable walk, and what was the chairman of the ministerial committee, Ex-President J. E. Holmes of London, when crossing the entrance and a cooling drink. However, after some inquiry, a second shop was found, and a few minutes' supply of refreshment was obtained. The party like ice cream.

Business during the last day was mostly devoted to the appointment of officers and committees for the coming year. The report of the Sabbath observance committee, however, called forth a rather lengthy discussion on the subject of Sunday manufacture of milk products. This report suggested that action be taken in regard to Sunday deliveries, Sunday delivery of milk and Sunday excursions by boat or automobile.

In reference to the milk question, a resolution was made by W. K. Hagar, the effect that the conference ask the attorney-general to prosecute such factories as are manufacturing milk products on Sunday, and requiring the delivery of milk to the farmers, if this work were not a matter of necessity, as was declared.

Send Government Expert.
Furthermore, in order to protect the farmers from companies which might deliver milk on Sunday for the purpose of making money, it was resolved that the department of agriculture be petitioned to send an expert to test the quality of the Monday morning milk.

In reference to this question, the Rev. W. A. Walden of Brownsville, the Rev. J. got along perfectly well without delivering milk on Sunday for the purpose, and I do not see why we cannot keep milk, especially as facilities for keeping milk are so much better today. I feel like fighting this thing, and I am sure that the men of Brownsville will stand by me in this. I believe that they would sell their cows before they would support this thing. No company, whose headquarters is in New York, is going to boss the Sunday at Brownsville.

WINNIPEG, June 10.—Corp. Wm. Frederick Coppins, V. Besides two ribs being broken by kicks, and serious injuries to the head, he is believed to be suffering from internal injuries.

WINNIPEG, June 10.—Serious clashes resulted from demonstrations by strike sympathizers against returned soldier constables from 3 to 5 o'clock this afternoon. A large crowd gathered between the city hall and Portage avenue and Main street, where strikers and sympathizers disarmed and assaulted individual special police.

A squad of special police and mounted police then paraded the affected area. Stones were thrown by the crowd, the police retaliating by the use of their batons on the heads of demonstrators.

A number of returned soldier constables and demonstrators were beaten severely before the special police restored order. Mayor Gray announced that he believed the constables could control the situation, and that the troops would not be called.

May Spirit of Redmonds Lead Ireland to Peace

Those who have been staunch friends of home rule for Ireland, and who found themselves driven from the position of supporting the sorry burlesque brought about by such a fanatic as Casement, hope that ere long the spirit of John and William Redmond may be invoked to cure the troubles of the Emerald Isle. It cannot be much more than a hope, and the decision of the United States Senate by a vote of 60 to 1, asking that Ireland be granted the right of self-determination, may only aggravate the situation, just as the visit of prominent Irish-Americans, may have stretched the tension once again.

But, on the other hand, there is a theory that Lloyd George, despite the fact that he is supported by a party that is opposed to home rule almost to a man, has been moving quietly toward a solution, and that he has discussed the matter with President Wilson in such a manner, perhaps, as to make clear that suggestion from the United States, the home of so many hundreds of thousands of expatriated Irish, would not work to the harm of Ireland nor render more difficult the cutting of bonds that tie the hands of the British premier.

There is no doubt that the average Irishman is distrustful of the British premier and the present combination which supports him. Ireland believes Lloyd George broke faith with the race, and with such noble Irishmen as the Redmonds, who typified the son of Erin, ready to declare a truce while the war was in progress. But Casement and the melancholy brooding of misled men, who believed him a deliverer, set fire to the structure while the war was in progress, and brought about a chaos at the moment when Irish service in the war and the example of the Redmonds should have won Ireland's victory for all time.

Now there are whisperings of local government for all the race divisions of the British Isles—Scotland, England, Wales and Ireland—similar in form to the legislatures of the Canadian provinces. These governments would handle local affairs, just as Quebec and Ontario each legislate for itself. While in national issues there has been conflict fed by bigotry between the two provinces, yet as to their local affairs there is never a cleavage. Quebec handles its local affairs and Ontario keeps strictly to itself, each the monarch of all it surveys within its own borders, so long as the rights of all provinces are not affected. Ireland might ask a good deal more in the way of revenue control. At the present time, in fact, Ireland and the supporters of Ireland seem to be uncompromising in their demand for separation. But a broad policy of local government, which would make of Ireland a distinct country, largely in control of its own affairs (as much in control as Canada, for instance), would leave little to be desired. If Englishmen, Scotsmen, Welshmen and Irishmen, have direct control of the most vital matters, can anything be achieved beyond that point—and would such a consummation not add immeasurably to the peace and stability of that vast family which, with all its conflict and domestic quarrels, has much of opportunity ahead in making the world greater and finer and less strife-torn.

Reporter Puts Over "Scoop" On the U. S. President

Aside from the aggravation that may develop between France and Britain and the United States because of the insertion of the full text of the peace treaty in the Congressional Record at Washington, the enterprise of the Chicago newspaper reporter who secured the document and brought it to America will be recognized. This was probably the greatest newspaper "scoop" the world has known.

Even the exploit of Blowitz, correspondent of the London Times, who secured the terms of the Franco-Prussian treaty in advance of other newspapers, is faded by the exploit of Frazier Hunt, who not only secured the document, but carried it to the Government of his country, an unofficial, free-lance emissary, and had the members of Congress spread the document upon the nation's official minutes, while the president himself was refusing the text and declaring that it must not be published. It was something of a "scoop" on the president himself, and may arouse his anger, but the reporter will find his justification in the fact that Congress seized upon his journalistic prize and adapted it to the purposes of government.

This was not the first exploit of Hunt. In point of daring and sharp wits, it may be among the least of his journalistic accomplishments. Recently this scribe returned from Petrograd, whither he had gone by difficult ways, to ascertain the exact state of affairs in the Russian capital at a time when the Bolsheviks were in control, and massacre stories and tales of attack on foreigners were being issued. The courage involved in the enterprise would be the possession of many men, but Hunt was able, upon arriving in Petrograd, to secure access to the leaders and offices of the Bolsheviks. He was free to come and go, and he was able to send by wireless long dispatches describing conditions. His statements were anything but friendly to the Bolshevik cause, but he cleared up a lot of misconceptions, and probably brought an influence to bear upon the situation as a whole.

The war and the days after the war have been singularly deficient in great personal newspaper triumphs. Men have become famous for descriptive writing or as tactical specialists; Hunt has struck out on new lines, and shattered the dictum that the journalist of today must wait upon the word of statesmen and officials. Hunt had on his side of the argument from an ethical standpoint, the fact that his action was supported by the Congress of the United States, even though the president refused to make public the text on the ground that he would be breaking faith with his colleagues at the peace table. Someone in high authority furnished the treaty to Hunt. He delivered it to the Government before printing it; it cannot be claimed that his feat is marred by a dishonorable act, and considered as the capstone accomplishment of recent journalistic history, it places Hunt among the immortals in the reporters' hall of fame.

Mexico Nagging Once More

Mexico is again figuring frequently and sensationally in the news dispatches, and in a manner disquieting to the United States Government. Carranza loudly proclaims that Mexico has no desire to enter a league of nations, and boldly announces that his countrymen will not recognize the Monroe Doctrine. He even threatens to officially repudiate that policy. So long as it is mere bluster nobody need pay much attention, but it is significant that coincident with these blustering of Carranza, Villa reappears stronger than ever, campaigning not far from the American border.

It is by no means outside the possibilities that Carranza and Villa may have come to some sort of an understanding. Mexico is under heavy financial obligations to several European powers. If the United States could be exasperated into an invasion by some of Villa's atrocities, Carranza would expect jealousy to give him the support of some other interested power or powers. An ominous fact is that no attempt has been made to protect the northern states. Here the bandit armies have the field to themselves, and are a perpetual menace to Americans. The United States has been obliged to keep a force of 20,000 men along the frontier, and this is being rapidly strengthened because of urgent appeals from the border states.

It is certain that the rare patience shown Mexico by Washington will not stand the strain of another Villa raid. There is likely to follow a cleaning up of the entire Mexican situation by the United States. And it is certain that all the other powers will give their moral if not a measure of material assistance for the job. The world is weary of the constant nag of Mexico's internal dissensions, and irritated by her attitude towards foreigners, many of whom are responsible for her commercial and industrial enterprises. There will be a unanimous agreement in favor of the United States taking over this worthless nation as its particular mandatory to cleanse and regulate into some degree of decency.

Rowdy Ball and the Fan

A noted big league player has just been indefinitely suspended for applying abusive epithets to the occupants of the bleachers. His excuse was that the bleachers had been "riding" him unmercifully, finally exasperating him to the point of verbal explosions more pointed than polite. The incident has started a discussion in the American press on the subject of rowdy ball. Especially it has raised the question as to whether the "riding" of visiting players by home fans fits in with the best traditions of sport. Splendid pastime that it is, whether to play or to watch, there are many who consider the attempt to unnerve a player (rattle him) is unfair and unchivalrous. Why not permit the teams to fight it out on their own merits as skillful athletes? they ask. What satisfaction is to be had, anyway, from a win largely due to upsetting the visitors' morale through their baiting by a thousand onlookers?

The trouble in sport today, and it applies to hockey, lacrosse or soccer quite as directly as to baseball, is that the spirit behind both players and audience is win at any price. The game is not being played for its own sake as much as formerly. The result is that into these fine recreations has crept an inextinguishable trickery. If a player can "get away with it," no matter how flagrantly he may break the rules, he is considered clever, that is, if he is a member of the home team. To cut a base when the umpire is not looking will always bring applause from the fan. While the onlooker takes this view of sport he must expect the player to adopt much the same ethics. The diamond will be rid of rowdism and questionable artifice the moment the public frowns on it. The public is to blame as much, if not more, than the player.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

WHEN FATHER DECIDES.
By R. Ray Baker.

It was no use, the motor just wouldn't start. Not a sputter could Anne Davis get out of it. She tugged and tugged at the flywheel, but the motor was not even a buzz to reward her efforts. She looked down the river, vexed and despairing. The boat was floating at a fair rate of speed, and unless she could get it moving in the other direction before long she would have little prospect of arriving at the Rest-White cottage before dark.

Already it was dusk, but she managed to make out something coming up stream. She heard the creaking of oarlocks and presently a shadowy shape loomed into view. It was a row-boat with a man bending vigorously at the oars.

"One of the inhabitants," Anne decided, "but he is a little disdained in her voice. Meeting one of them in the village she would not have favored him with passing notice, but now any kind of man would be welcome. She hailed the stranger.

"Good evening, will you, please?" He rested with his oars partly out of the water. "Did you call me?" he shouted, after brief hesitation. "Yes, I can't get this old engine started," she said, pointing to the motor. "With some skill but much more difficulty he managed to get the rowboat moving. Anne was so glad to be out of about the same size, for the gasoline-propelled vehicle was far from being comfortable. She was sitting in a rowboat in which a one-cylinder engine had been installed, and it was replete with all the conveniences of the modern world, with whom Anne was staying at the resort, had learned for the season.

And she was so glad to be out of the motor, she had started out early in the afternoon, feeling that it would be a little conceited over being the pilot and sole owner of the miserable little rowboat. The expression of the fishermen's misgivings over the venture, but Anne generally had her own way, and was possessed of a reputation for being a self-reliant sort of girl, so she was allowed to make the trip alone.

Everything went smoothly until she had covered about half of the ten-mile journey on the way back, when the engine went dead without warning. Not another boat of any description was in sight, for it was at that time of day when most folks are poring over the evening meal. She must have drifted two miles when the rowboat came into sight.

Anne breathed a sigh of relief when the newcomer grasped the gawdlike of the motor and nudged over at her. He had brought a lantern, and by its light she could see that he was a rather good-looking young man of perhaps twenty-six. He had on a green shirt and blue overalls, and on his head was a wide-brimmed straw hat. "What a fine boat!" he said, and she caught a glimpse of a tin can and a fishpole in the bottom of the boat, and in order to be so singularly useful, she whether he had any luck. Imagine Anne Davis discussing the subject of fishing with a country rustic! Imagine Anne Davis, the breaker of men's hearts back in the big city, talking familiarly with a denizen of this country town!

"Pity, fair," he replied, and his voice seemed to be singularly musical. "I got half a dozen—or seven, I forget just which it is. Found them together, and don't move, will you, while I crawl over and see if I can start your engine."

Anne, however, hoping he understood the business of getting from one boat to another. He caused considerable rocking, but nothing serious happened, and presently he was tinkering at the engine, while she held tensely in her hand the handle of the oars. "Wait a minute," he called, and she remembered that she had left the motor to attach the painter of his boat to the post in the water. "I'm going to give the wheel a spin, and the boat started down stream with a clug-chug that, under ordinary circumstances, was far from musical, but it sounded almost like chimes to Anne in this lonely place.

"Turn it around," she called. "I'm going up the river. It got turned the other way while we were floating, and I was trying to start the engine."

He soon had the boat breasting the current, and again she sighed with relief. "Guess I better take you home," he suggested. "It's pretty dark now, and besides, you look tired, and besides—I need the ride myself."

Naturally she assented. After he had proved so useful she could not very well dismiss him and send him back to tinker with the engine. On the way she got to musing and decided it would be a great risk to carry on a little flirtation with her new acquaintance. She started by introducing herself, and in return he told her that his name was Harry Saunders, and that he was spending the night at the Culbertson cottage, and after some slight hesitation she accepted.

So it came about that the breaker of men's hearts in the big city came out to break out in the country. But she got fooled. Before the evening was through Anne Davis had fallen in love for the first time in her life.

"Stuff and nonsense!" roared Uriah Davis. "Do you mean to tell me you have picked out a farmer for a husband? I tell you you're insane!" Anne, raving mad. Look at your opportunities here in Detroit.

"It's no disgrace to live in a small town," Anne told him. The summer season was over and she was home after a three weeks' love affair that started out frivolously and developed into a very serious case.

"Well, I won't have it, that's all," her father insisted. "You aren't going to disgrace the family like that. A girl of your beauty can pick off a man of money without any trouble."

Anne bit her lip savagely and stamped a foot. "I don't want a man of money. I want Harry, and I'm going to have him or I'll die with him!" She left the room, sobbing, and went and climbed into her bed, where, bolstered by several pillows, she wrote a "good-by, forever" letter to Alanson.

Mr. Davis evidently was determined to see that things went to his liking; for the next day he came home with the announcement that he had invited his young law partner to the house for dinner.

"You've heard me speak of White," he said. "You know, he's been with me in business for two years, and I've never yet got around to having him meet my family. He's a hustler, all right; in fact, he's worked up until he's been carrying the burden of my firm's practice. He worked so hard that he broke down last spring, and he's only back in the harness a week, and he's long rest, which appears to have done him lots of good. He's the man for you, Anne. I prove it to you, and you will, too, if you can forget this silly country romance, for he's an attractive young chap."

Anne pointed in her room, but when her father summoned her down to meet Mr. White, she put on her best smile and straightened her hair and added a few finishing touches of powder to her face, then went to the reception-room. It was just as well to humor her father, she thought. It would not do to treat his partner shabbily.

When she descended the stairs she saw a slender, well-dressed, well-groomed young man talking to Mr. Davis. They immediately stopped their conversation when she appeared and introductions were in order.

The next noon, at luncheon, her father inquired: "Well, Annie, how did you like Mr. White?" She looked across the table with a happy little smile and lifted her coffee cup. After a few sips she placed it on the table and replied: "Fine, father. He and I are engaged. We're to be married next month."

Mr. Davis all but choked on a piece of meat. He seemed to swallow half a glass of water to prevent strangulation.

"Great heavens!" he ejaculated, gasping. "So soon? Of course, I heartily approve, but it seems rather sudden."

"But what about this country lover?" Anne laughed. "Well, you see, father, Mr. White happens to be the country lover. His name was Harry Saunders down at Alanson, and mine was Susie Smith. You see, we each started out fooling another, but we really fell in love."

Replies To "Puzzled."

Copyright, 1919, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

Here is the answer to your letter, "Puzzled." It didn't take me one minute to think it out. You aren't the only person with such a problem to solve.

Not a week passes but I get letters from a blind, foolish girl who thinks that they can fly in the face of every established rule of decency and honor and common sense.

and be rewarded by living happily ever after. That's the reason I thought it might be interesting to publish your letter, almost in full.

"My employer is married, and I love him"—and you tell it not as you would say, "I wanted a diamond ring and so I went to my friend's house and stole it," or "I needed money for a new hat and so I picked a pocket to get it."

And yet that is just exactly the kind of thing you are confessing when you say that you're in love with a married man. Can't help it. Well, maybe you can't, but you can at least have sense enough to be ashamed of it.

That man belongs to another woman.

You have no right even to think of him. Who are you, to consider yourself at the expense of another woman and a little, helpless child—to say nothing of the man himself?

There have been cases when men have divorced their wives to marry other women, and have been happier and better off in every way afterward. But these cases are so few and so far between that they aren't worth the trouble of counting.

Shilly-shally, dilly-dally, maybe and maybe not, here today and gone tomorrow—what kind of a man is a man who cannot make up his mind as to his own affairs and keep it made up without any assistance from you?

This man hasn't even asked you to sympathize with him.

He would probably resent it very much if he knew you thought of such a thing.

Open Your Eyes.

How do you know that he isn't deeply in love with his wife and anxious for a reconciliation with her?

Who is it that tells you all these interesting little things about him and his domestic affairs? What do they know about it—and how do they find out?

Not what do they guess, or wonder, or suspect—but what do they actually know?

How would your employer like it if he knew that you were discussing him and his most intimate personal affairs with outsiders?

"Positive he loves me, but he hasn't spoken of love"—why, you poor, foolish, conceited little girl. The man probably is fond of you, just as a man is fond of a good friend and loyal employee, but that doesn't mean he's in love with you. If he were in love with you as you think he is, he could never spend five years with you day in and day out, without saying something about it.

No man on earth ever did a thing like that or ever can do it.

If he had any just cause to leave his wife, he wouldn't have to give up his baby girl that you talk so much about. He could take her right along with him.

The reason he doesn't get a divorce is probably the one best reason in the world—he doesn't want to.

You're only twenty-four. Go away. You'll find a good, clean, honest man somewhere else, and the man who finds such a love in his heart for you won't wait five years before he tells you so.

"Clean, honest love." How can you use such words about a love that is secret and forbidden?

Take your own life into your hands, if you must. Humiliate yourself to the last degree if you are determined to do so, but do it with your eyes wide open, and be prepared for the consequences.

What are the consequences of such an affair?

To a woman—disgrace, humiliation, remorse and bitter, bitter grief. Don't think you're an exception to the rule—don't think your case is different from the case of any other girl and any other man.

The Same Old Story.

It isn't a new story.

Only this time, do you know—little, foolish sister—I'm sorry for the man. He must suspect by this time how foolish you are.

Tell him you're going to take another situation, in another town, and watch the relief creep into his eyes.

Ten chances to one he's living away nights trying to figure out some way to get rid of you. Plain words, these—for a plain situation.

Take them as they are meant—in all kindness.

Daily Bible Question Club

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS ON THE UNIFORM LESSON FOR SUNDAY, JUNE 9, 1919.

ONE GOLDEN TEXT SUGGESTION.
[By Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.]
Prayer.—Matthew 6:33. Luke 10:41.

QUESTION FOR TODAY.
8. Verse 12. Does God mean here that he will forgive us exactly as we forgive others, or is there a difference? Give your reasons.

9. Verse 13. In what way, if any, does God lead us into temptation?

10. Verses 14-15. Why is God obligated, or not, to forgive us if we forgive others?

Golden Text.—In nothing be anxious; but in everything, by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known unto God.—Phil. 4:6.

PRAY ABOUT SPECIFIC THINGS.

God gives us the ability to think ourselves through many problems, to make our own plans for much of the work which we have to do in life, and when we have power to do things alone, God is pleased when we exercise that power.

There's no man is hungry, for instance, no matter how thankful he is for the food which has been provided for him to satisfy his hunger, there is no need for him to ask God to help him to eat, because God has already given him that ability. But even then the repose of his soul upon God greatly helps his digestion and inclines to good health.

But there are problems which come to us almost daily which it behooves us to discuss these specific things with God, asking him for wisdom, which he never fails to give.

ANNUAL REPORTS OF TWO THRIVING MOTHERS' CLUBS

Empress Avenue and Talbot Street Have Good Year.

During the past year the Empress Avenue Mothers' Club, which has 41 members, raised one hundred dollars to carry on the work of the club, which has been devoted to Red Cross work, the Children's Aid Society and giving entertainments for soldiers. Liberal sums have been given to the various organizations which have held campaigns, and the women have helped wherever possible by taking a part in the campaigns. Mrs. J. C. Bryant is the president of this thriving little club.

Talbot Street.

In the annual report of the Talbot Street Mothers' Club, it was shown that the club has devoted much of its time, and given liberally to the Child Welfare Association since its commencement last year. The members have assisted in the club's work weekly in the Talbot street school. The club just recently presented six beautiful prints handsomely framed to the Y. W. C. A. King street residence to make the girls' rooms look more attractive. Making clothing for the Children's Shelter has also been a special work of the club. During the winter the members kept a box of good second-hand clothing and little shoes for the small tots who required clothes from time to time. At the club's club always served tea to the mothers with small children.

The young girls of the school assisted. The newly-elected officers were: Mrs. Eberhard, president; Mrs. Kovat, vice-president; and Mrs. McKenna, secretary-treasurer. The club will resume its meetings in the fall.

Dear Miss Grey,—Just a few lines to ask you if you could tell me what the Horoscope for September 12 was? I vision is blurred, your eyesight dim; if you are obliged to wear glasses, go to your druggist and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one in a fourth of a glass of water and bathe the eyes from two to four times a day. Sound, comfortable eyes and improved eyesight will make the world look brighter.

Note: Doctors say Bon-Opto strengthens eyesight 50% in a week's time in many instances.
