Father Campbell, S. J. Sails for the West.

Readers will join with us in wishing a pleasant journey, and a successful mission, and a speedy and safe return to Father Campbell, S. J., of Glasgow, who sails to-day (Saturday) by the S. S. Corinthian, to take up a series of missions among the Highland Catholics of Nova Scotia.

The congregation of St. Joseph's, Glasgow, consists for the most part of Irish Catholics; but if they were the very "Children of Temperance" themselves, they could not be more devoted than they are to their Highland pastor.

The early home of Father Campbell was in Balachula, where he was born in 1850. With a vocation for the Church he entered the Society of Jesus in 1871, and he went through the novitiate in Belgium. He afterwards continued his studies at Stonyhurst, taught for a time at St. Francis Xavier's Liverpool, and completed his studies for the priesthood, to which he was ordained at St. Bruno's in 1883. In 1884 he came to Glasgow to take up mission work at St. Joseph's. Although but recently ordained, Father Campbell could not be described as "a pale young curate."

He was tall, stalwart, and erect—something like six foot in height, and his head covered with a mass of thick, black, curly hair; with a boyish—almost mischievous—look over his open, cheerful face; and with a genial, ready "gait" and kindly manner that made the congregation at St. Joseph's take the new priest to its bosom at once. His coming almost synchronised with that of the late Father John Lee, S. J., the newly appointed pastor, who had spent many years of his life in mission work by the side of the Zulus; and for a time many of the people did not know whether Father Campbell was Father Campbell or Father Lee.

In 1886 Father Campbell was absent from Glasgow when he went to his Tertiarship; but he returned to St. Joseph's after about ten months, and remained till 1890, when he was transferred to St. Aloisius, Grenville. His term at Grenville lasted only about a year, and in 1892 Father Campbell was sent to parish priest at St. Joseph's where he has since remained.

His most arduous labors date from that appointment. While at the ordinary duties of a priest, which are never light in a large city, and seldom otherwise than arduous in a parish like St. Joseph's. His district was regularly and assiduously visited; and in the homes of the poor he was to be found sympathizing with them in all manner of misfortune, helping them when possible (and few knew the extent of the help given by Father Campbell then or since); soothing those who were inclined to "go off the books," and it might be whispered that in a desert case Father Campbell could give a soothing that none could rival. He had charge of that part of the parish which embraced Mace Lane, Milton Lane, Sterling Street, and other places in the rear of Woodlands. In those by-ways he was constantly to be seen; and the children especially knew him, not perhaps so well as they knew their own "Daddy Payne," but well enough to watch for him and wait for him to say "Is that you, Willie?"—for he knew them all by their Christian names, and would know them yet if he met them. At St. Joseph's he had similar work to do; but he was responsible for the finances of a large parish, and had to manage two large schools which were attended by nearly 2000 children.

The work and worry involved in the management of two such schools can well be imagined, and the financial responsibility laid upon his shoulders in connection with the parish were not less heavy. When the church was built and the parish established in 1880, there was a large, flourishing, working-class population in the "Black Quarry" district, but, later, several large public works were closed—among them the Bigle, Basin, Sun and Phoenix Foundries—and this led to a large decrease of the Catholic population in that part of Glasgow, and the parish was saddled with debts incurred in the erection of the church and the erection and subsequent enlargement of the schools. The removal of this debt was one of the tasks that Father Campbell had to set himself to when he was appointed to the charge. He carried the people of the parish with him in his efforts, and he himself has frequently led the congregation for its generosity and its loyalty. Shortly after his coming, a fancy fair was held to defray the cost of repainting the church; since then a special collection was taken up for the celebration of the jubilee of the church, and recently a special effort was made to defray the cost of erecting the new schools of the parish. For the jubilee the church was renovated, and re-decorated, and electric light installed. These, with quarterly collections common to all churches, were the only special efforts he asked the people to make during the past five years. When Father Campbell took over the charge of St. Joseph's there was a debt of £21,000 on the mission, and two years ago that had been reduced to £7000. Besides reducing the debt by that enormous sum—£14,000 in 13 years—under his organization a top story was added to St. Joseph's School at a cost of £2300; the halls in Mace Lane were also built at a cost of £1100, and not a farthing extra was asked—the cost of these buildings being taken from the ordinary income of the parish. Hot water has been introduced into St. Joseph's School, St. Columba's School, and the church; St. Joseph's Schools were sub-divided by the erection of new glass partitions; ground at the corner of Monroe Place and North Woodside Road has been bought, and on it have been erected the new schools which do credit to the diocese; another piece of ground has been secured at the corner of Braid Street and North Woodside Road, and quite recently a very valuable site was purchased in Mace Lane and Garaboe Road, so that there is now no mission in the diocese better equipped. He finds time, notwithstanding these many obligations, to devote occasional Sunday evenings to the Catholic Highlanders of the city, and in this connection it may be mentioned that he is the only Gaelic speaking Jesuit in the world if we except his brothers who speak Irish. His popularity among all classes is well known. It is the close personal interest which he takes in every member of his large congregation of something like 7000 souls which brings him into the hearts of his people. He knows the names of almost every member of almost every family in the parish, and he is part of the flock, and he and the flock are one. That is why his parishioners and his friends in Glasgow generally bid him "God-speed" on his mission to the Gael beyond the sea, and why they pray for his safe and speedy return from a mission which they pray will add to the only happiness that the priest can have. His Irish friends will join as heartily as any other in that prayer, for those to whom the "Gaelic Man" goes have, like themselves, descended from the victims of intolerance and persecution. Their ancestors were given the option of going to the Protestant Church or being left homeless in the Western Isles. They chose to be homeless; but there arose to be their friend the relative of their persecutor, and these Irish Catholic Highlanders emigrated to the Far West; their seed multiplied, and there are now in Nova Scotia more Gaelic-speaking Catholics than in the whole of the Highlands of Scotland. Father Campbell is awaited by them with eagerness—eagerly only equal to that with which his own people wait his return to his own land.—Glasgow Observer.

Father Lacombe and the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Father Lacombe, the famous Oblate missionary of the Canadian Northwest, was in Montreal recently, the venerable priest, who bears valiantly his fifty-eight years of hard labors among the Indians, was invited to the table of Archbishop Broche, Bishop Rossignol, and the provincial of the Jesuit and Oblate orders were among the guests.

The president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, occupied a place of honor next to Archbishop Broche. When Sir Thomas' turn came to speak he said among other eulogistic words about the hero of the feast, the following: "The other day I heard a missionary say jokingly, 'I pity the C. P. Railway Company if Father Lacombe lives for one hundred years.' My Lords and gentlemen, I am happy to affirm that, even if Father Lacombe were to live for two hundred years, the C. P. Railway would always be pleased to do him the same favors, for even then the company would not yet have paid its debt of gratitude towards him."

As a matter of fact, Father Lacombe has not only the privilege of travelling free with a secretary on all the lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway, but on the day following his family banquet he received from the president of the company also the privilege of using, free of charge, the telegraph lines of the company.

A Father's Gratitude.

In the terrible yellow fever epidemic of 1897, when so many were stricken in New Orleans, Father (now Archbishop) Blenk, then pastor of Algiers, came near laying down his life in his devotion and self-sacrifice to his people. All about were disease and death, and he was going from morning till far into the night ministering to his helpless flock. One day he was called to see a poor boy who was dying of the yellow fever. He went and there met the oft-told tale of a drunken father and a helpless wife and children, and now pestilence had come to still further sadden that unhappy home. Father Blenk found that the family were practically without aid; the mother lay ill in one room, the dying boy in another, and the father too much under the influence of liquor to help either. His great heart went out in charity and pity, as it always does. He left the home and going about sought to procure a nurse to go to the poor woman.

There was a strict law that year against non-ehold visitations among the pestilence stricken, a guard being placed at the doors to prevent visitors, in order to arrest the spread of the disease. At length Father Blenk succeeded in getting a good Irish woman to go and help the mother in her trouble, saying that he would remain and nurse the dying boy, who had no one to hand him even a glass of water. All night the devoted priest remained at the bedside of the sufferer. In the early morning the poor boy died and Father Blenk assisted in preparing him for burial. A few moments later a tiny cry was heard in the other room, and the little life that had come into the world went out with that of the afflicted mother who gave it birth.

Father Blenk performed the last sad rites and returned home with a raging fever. In a few hours Father Dempsey, his assistant, was stricken, too. For days Father Blenk and Father Dempsey lay at death's door. During this time, one dark night, a poor, hard-looking man knocked at the door of the presbytery, which was then only a poor, dilapidated kitchen building, and asked to see Father Blenk. The nurse refused, as she had a strict orders from the physicians to let no one enter. He pleaded with Father Joyce, the only priest who was not yet stricken, and thinking that it might be for the salvation of a soul he knew the man well. Father Joyce admitted him. The man fell on his knees at that midnight hour at the bedside of Father Blenk, and covering his hand with kisses he cried out between his sobs: "Oh, Father, give me your blessing for it is the blessing of a saint. You are dying because you gave your life for my poor boy." Father Blenk raised his feeble hand and blessed the man, saying: "If the sacrifice of my life can help to save your soul and keep you from drink, willingly, gladly I give it for such an end." The man said: "Father, I will never again touch a drop of liquor." And he kept his word.—New Orleans Morning Star.

Rette was one of the brilliant young men who fell under the spell of General Boulanger, and who after his suicide passed into the ranks of the socialists. "Duladod," he says in his latest volume, "we threw our selves into revolutionary socialism. More independent, more adventurous than the rest, I fell into the slough of the proud, the obsessed who dream of preparing a humanity satisfied in all its appetites, wading through heaps of gold over a globe without God or masters. Then I blasphemed in gross and blasphemous language, forgetting the Church and society, sowed hatred, preached revolt, brandished anarchy. Brief illusion! I came out of it unbalanced, oscillating between sensual paganism and a species of cloudy Buddhism that led me to deny the reality of the sensible world and to long for the night of the Nirvana. After the anarchist, after Pougnet, that cold hater, Sebastian Fears, the unroofed fall of him self, I knew that metaphysical Bressa James and that demagogic Buddhist Omeocoon. * * * The pret has, in spite of his conversion, kept the style that made him famous."

The late Bishop Dudley of Kentucky could administer a delicate rebuke, but usually took pains that the point should be obvious. A wealthy but unusually stingy member of his church told him he was going abroad. "I have never been on the ocean," said the old skiff-boat to the bishop, "and I should like to know something that will keep me from getting seasick." "You might swallow a nickel," responded the bishop.

A BAD STOMACH!

THAT IS THE SECRET OF DYSPEPSIA.

This disease assumes so many forms that there is scarcely a complaint it may not resemble in one way or another. Among the most prominent symptoms are constipation, sour stomach, variable appetite, distress after eating, etc.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

is a positive cure for dyspepsia and all stomach troubles. It stimulates secretion of the saliva and gastric juices to facilitate digestion, purifies the blood and tones up the entire system. Mrs. M. A. McNeill, Brock Village, N.S., writes: "I suffered from dyspepsia, loss of appetite and bad blood. I tried everything I could get, but to no purpose. I then finally started to use Burdock Blood Bitters. From the first day I felt the good effects of the medicine. I can eat anything now without any ill after effects and am strong and well again."

Mr. Borden and His Enemies.

The Guardian expresses concern over the plight of the Opposition in the Federal Parliament, and deems it opportune to advise upon Mr. Borden's qualities of leadership.

As stated in our last issue, the much heralded libel case of Mr. Emmerston, ex-Minister of Railways, against the Hon. Frederick Gleanon came to an abrupt termination on the 25th ult.

What is the actual condition of things within the Government? There is hardly a responsible or active minister at his post at Ottawa just now.

Ottawa Weekly Letter.

Ottawa, June 22, 1907.
Rideau Hall.

About eleven years ago a favorite theme of Liberal campaigners was the cost of Rideau Hall. At the elections of 1897, 1899, 1900, the cost of furniture, equipment and repairs of this house were topics to which the farmers were asked to pay attention.

And now Rideau Hall is to be a palace. The plan for the expenditure of $100,000 as a first instalment to pay for this castle. The plans have now been prepared, and the public will be interested to know that the whole of the building is to go. It will be replaced with an imposing structure of classical design of red granite.

The farmers will be delighted to learn that their own Minister has charge of this modest cottage. Since Mr. Hyman performed his exodus the Minister of Agriculture has been managing the Public Works Department.

IN DAYS GONE BY.
In old days when Rideau Hall magnificence was a topic for fair-minded men, the bills for ordinary repairs, furniture and maintenance ran from ten to sixteen thousand dollars.

THIS WAS TORY EXTRAVAGANCE.
1891 $18,007
1892 20,152
1893 22,941
1894 11,328
1895 14,908

A LITTLE HIGHER.
It will be remembered that Lord Aberdeen obtained increased accommodation in the last mentioned year. During the next five years there were no great signs of reform or retrenchment. The cost was as follows:

BUT LOOK AT THIS.
Now we begin to see democratic simplicity getting in its work.

ADDED TO CAPITAL.
The bills of last year covered $26,713 for improvements which is charged to debt account or capital. The $100,000 to be spent this year and the amount to be paid next year will also go into the public debt.

A SIGNIFICANT DECLARATION.
On the 6th of March of this year the Government majority in the House of Commons voted the following motion: "The Government ought not to continue in office public servants who are in violation of their duty, make use of their official positions to promote their private interests."

Officials in Private Business.

The particular case which led Mr. Boyce of Algoma to propose the above motion was that of J. Obed Smith, Immigration Commissioner at Winnipeg.

Mr. Smith has a salary of $3,000 a year, unless it has been increased. He is provided with clothing. At least he should last year 2 caps costing $12.25, 1 overcoat and 2 uniforms.

MR. SMITH'S CONFESSION.
The chief point in the charge made in Parliament was that Mr. Smith made use of his public position to assist him in his land transaction. The plaintiffs in the trial say that they relied upon his statements the more on account of his position.

MR. FISHER IS BUILDING IT.
The farmers will be delighted to learn that their own Minister has charge of this modest cottage. Since Mr. Hyman performed his exodus the Minister of Agriculture has been managing the Public Works Department.

MR. COSTE AS DESIGNER.
Another case, which was established by the admission of the Hon. himself on oath before the Public Accounts Committee, was that of Louis Coste, engineer of the Public Works Department.

MR. COSTE AS APPRAISER.
Two years later it became necessary for the Government to value this dock for purposes of subsidy, which was to be 3 per cent on the cost or value of the dock.

MR. COSTE AS SHAREHOLDER AND DIRECTOR.
But Mr. Coste got his settlement soon after the valuation was made. He had received $3,500. Of this $2,000 was paid in cash, and for the other $1,500 was allotted 30 shares of $5,000 of stock in the company.

At Westville, N. S. on the evening of Dominion Day a man named Murphy and two companions loaded a shot gun with salt to shoot dogs. The gun accidentally discharged when in the hands of one of the men and the fall charge of salt struck Murphy under the eye making a serious wound. He was operated upon in a hospital, but it is feared the injury may prove fatal.

The whole of one block of the fine beach section immediately adjoining Jamestown Exposition grounds at Norfolk, Virginia was swept by fire the other day. The big arcade hotel, the Berkeley Hotel, the Outlook Inn, the Carolina Hotel and several others and a large part outside the rear park are destroyed. The loss is about $300,000 partly insured. The burnt district includes forty hotels, and eating houses.

Halifax advices of June 27th say fishing in the Bay of Fundy, has been unusually good of late, all stations reporting that the catches of the past two months exceeded those of any similar season, during the past five years, both in quantity and size of fish. The prices are also good and the prospects for a prosperous year for the fishermen are most encouraging.

At St. Peter's harbor on Tuesday of last week, a man named Clifford Arnold who was about fifty years of age, had two sons who were out at their lobster traps, and a storm coming up suddenly the father feared for the safety of the boys and started out in a dory to meet them. He made the boys coming in and evidently attempted to turn his dory in the breakers when it upset and threw him into the water when he was drowned. The boys reached the shore all right. Arnold was a Nova Scotian and followed fishing.

G.—Charles Fitzpatrick, chief justice of the supreme court of Canada. G. C. M. G.—Sir William McGregor, governor of Newfoundland. Knight Bachelor—William Mortimer Clark, governor of Ontario. F. C. S. Longler, judge of the superior court of Quebec; Robert Gillespie Reid of Montreal for senior to Newfoundland; Nathaniel Dunlop, chairman of the Allan Line of steamship. K. C. V. O.—Sir Thomas Beauchamp of Montreal; Lord Dandow, C. M. G. Martin J. Griffin and A. D. C. Chief Parliamentary Librarian, Ottawa.

A Halifax despatch of June 29th says:—The retail butchers of Halifax have again put up the price of beef. This is the second advance in three months, as they claim there is not enough local cattle to supply half the demand, and that they cannot obtain the cattle from Western Canada, except at high prices. The price of beef is higher in Halifax than for years. All the butchers have not signed an agreement to put up prices, those standing out stating that if they are able to clear expenses, they will be satisfied. The new prices went into effect Monday as follows: Sirloin roast and steak 22 cents; rib roast, 17 cents; steak, (top round), 18 cents; steak, (cut through), 16 cents; rattle ran 14 cents; corned beef (plate and oval) 12 cents; corned beef (bracket) 10 cents. The Montreal dealers cannot say that there are any less cattle in the country but the demand is phenomenal. In Montreal round steaks 15 to 18 cents, sirloin 19 cents, blade steaks 12 to 15 cents, short roasts 8 to 11 cents and breast of beef 7 to 9 cents.

Dominion Day, Monday the 1st July, was very generally observed as a public holiday. Business was practically suspended in Charlottetown and large numbers left the city by train and steam cars. The day was showery and in some places very heavy rain fell. The heaviest rain in the city was during Sunday night and early Monday morning. While the rain probably interfered with the enjoyment of those on pleasure bent, it was of incalculable benefit to the crops throughout the Province. A salute of twenty-one guns was fired from Fort Edward at noon; the militia camp at Victoria Park were busy drilling morning and afternoon and their manoeuvres were witnessed by a large number of people. There were also athletic sports in the park in the evening which were very interesting. A number of Charlottetown people went to Summerside where very successful trotting took place. Games of base-ball were also played there between Charlottetown and Summerside teams. The Summersiders won in both contests. Very good trotting was done in the matches at Up-on-Park where a large crowd attended. Successful sports were held at Plover in which several of our Island athletes, who went over on the Northumberland participated. Altogether the farthest anniversary of the Canadian Confederation was patriotically celebrated throughout the Dominion. Our public buildings and many private buildings displayed flags and bunting, and not many outward incidents seem to have marred the joyous occasion.

No one saw the accident but trainmen believe that in opening the vestibule, Brakeman Doyle was thrown from the car by a lurch of the train, and killed by the fall. He was not missed until after the train arrived at Moncton.

A London despatch says:—However his ministers and politicians may regard Lord Dandow, the King himself clearly retains the highest regard for him. Today's honor list records his appointment as Knight Commander of the Royal Victorian Order and rightly or wrongly this peculiarly royal distinction is regarded as the King's personal comment on the ministry's neglect to employ Lord Dandow and his subsequent resignation.

Rev. Father Campbell, S. J. of Glasgow, referred to at some length on the first page of this issue, is now engaged in giving missions, in Gaelic, in many parishes in the diocese of Antigonish. His engagements in these missions will probably occupy most of his time up to the 1st of October, when he has to be back in Glasgow. In the meantime, he may find it possible to pay a short visit to this Province.

China.

(From the "Field Afar.")

[Father William Fraser was born in Inverness, Scotland, April 2, 1897. He received his early education in Toronto, Canada, and completed a five-years theological course at the Collegio Brignole Sale, Genoa, Italy. He was ordained in the Cathedral of Genoa, June 17, 1905.]

Wen Chow, China, August 28th, 1906.—The evening of August 1 we left Wen Chow for the town of Tchu-tobu, about 75 miles up the river. Father Tisserand, who has charge of the Tchu-tobu parish, 100 miles square, and the only missionary there, accompanied me.

We crawled into our boat at nine o'clock, but there was no move to it until three in the morning. The boatmen on these rivers move only with the tide. How the missionary longs to hear the puffing of a little steam engine on these vast bodies of water; to see the infernal steam launch scud the waves, ride the flood, and face the wind and tide! How pleasant to his ear would sound the whistle of the iron horse when it traverses these immense rice fields, winds through these exuberant valleys, and skirts the lofty mountain's flank! With the introduction of the railway and steam navigation, we hope for great results here for Holy Mother China. It is consoling to see that the Chinese are waking up to the new order of things, and preparing for the swifter means of bringing to them the joyful things of the redemption.

Last week a steam launch sailed out from this city on her maiden trip, and ploughed through the numerous time-honored canals that intersect the district. "She was the first that ever burst" upon these ancient waterways. She now makes regular trips to a point 25 miles off, where we have a chapel, and what formerly took a whole night to make in the sampan can now be made in a couple of hours. More enterprises are sure to follow, and the propagation of the faith shall thus be greatly facilitated in this harvest field of souls.

In our trip up the Wen Chow river, we were two days and three nights sweltering in the low-roofed sampans. The boatman coos in his weird way for the demon of the wind to blow and fill the flapping sail. He coos and snails in vain. We drag along at a snail's pace to the splashing of the ponderous oars. Tired of the fellow's cooing. I take out my Rosary and commune with our Virgin Mother, the Star of the Sea. The boatman utters a desperate yell to the demon, and I direct a thought to the Queen of Heaven. Instantly a brisk fresh wind springs up, blowing, the sails fill out, and the boatman hauls in his oar, a look of satisfaction on his face as if assured the demon heard his prayer. I thank our Blessed Mother as we proceed blithely on our way.

The scenery on this river is exceedingly delightful. This is an earthly paradise. The beauty of our Creator is manifest on all sides. In the gorgeous sunset, in the green and rugged hills, limpid waters, shady nooks and cooves that strew the river's winding banks.

But the mystery of evil has cast its fatal spell over men, the masterpieces of God's hand, in these regions, Satan holds over this people undisturbed sway. These poor creatures, made to the image and likeness of God, are sunk in the most foolish and absurd superstitions.

To note a few of these: While in the city of Tchu-tobu at our journey's end, where we have a large chapel, and about a hundred Christians, we witnessed a total eclipse of the moon. This threw the whole town into consternation. They believe that a great dog of the heavens tries to devour the moon. Confusion reigns, volleys of musketry are fired, rockets shoot up towards the mellow orb of night, the crackers and gunpowder rattle the sky. The devout prostrate and adore the moon, calling piteously to her not to refuse her light. Shrieks and yells fill the air. They imagine the dog not to eat the moon. Old men with old hoarse voices that cannot rise, urge the boys to pierce the heavens with their shrill screams. The panic continues unabated till the dog has vanished far into the deep night; and the moon, saved from the peril of jaws of the canine, looks smilingly down once more on her kind benefactors. The people in their distress turns to the bonzas, on whose prayers they firmly rely. They call on the monasteries for succor, and were to the bonzo who dares to refuse his aid. In a village near by Wen Chow, during this eclipse, a bonzo refused to pray and adore the moon, whereupon the villagers rushed upon him and put him to death.

Their notion of thunder and lightning is very fantastic. A man and his wife stalk the heavens. The husband is very ugly, having a hooked beak for a mouth, with hands and feet like eagle's talons. His skin is of no particular hue, and he has vampire wings beneath his arms. In his right hand he holds an enormous sledge, and a spike in his left. He carries a drum before him, which he whips around with hands and feet. Hitting the spike on the head causes the thunderclap, and whirling the drum makes the rolling.

Get the Most Out of Your Food

You don't eat it if your stomach is weak. A weak stomach does not digest all that is ordinarily taken into it. It gets tired easily, and what it fails to digest is wasted.

Among the signs of a weak stomach are uneasiness after eating, fits of nervous headache, and disagreeable belching. "I have been troubled with dyspepsia for years, and tried every remedy I heard of, but never got anything that gave me relief until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. I cannot praise this medicine too highly for the good it has done me. I always take it in the spring and fall and would not be without it." W. A. ROSS, Belleville, Ont.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Strengthens and tones the stomach and the whole digestive system.

Heaven sends him to strike devils lurking in holes and caverns, and men given up to vice. His wife is a beautiful woman; she holds a mirror with both hands, in which are reflected the victims laid low by her husband.

To the objection that there are many wicked men in prison who escape their death blow to the thunder man, they readily reply: "These men's sins are known, and being now in good hands, justice will surely be meted out to them, while the office of the thunder man is to strike down those whose sins are hidden, and cannot otherwise be brought to justice."

To the objection that thunder is without life, they reply: "No, for its freaks denote intelligence. We often see men and objects thrust aside by it unharmed, in its pursuit of some particular person whom it strikes dead, which proves the innocence of the former and guilt of the latter."

We still object: "Why does not heaven accuse the culprit of his sin?" and the reply is: "Heaven does accuse. Do we not see red and blue marks on the stricken bodies. These are the observers of heaven, but which we are not supposed to read or understand." The lightning strikes trees and animals, which certainly cannot sin, is easily explained by these people who claim that devils work in the trunks of trees and in the bodies of animals. They hide even in the udder of pigs.

It is consoling to see that these superstitions are on the wane in China, the rising generation ignores them, and we have every reason to believe that in the near future they will be consigned to the long list of fallen man's strange ravings.

But a more serious situation confronts us. Will China, on discarding her idols turn to the true God, or like her sister nation, Japan, go to the other extreme and sink into rank materialism? The situation at present is critical. These pagans have a keen sense of religion which the church alone can evolve and render fruitful for eternal life. She alone can appease these multitudes hungry and eager for the truth. No doubt God will soon march his forces upon this shifting scene, and save these lost tribes so long bound fast in the demon's fetters, and now ready to shake them off. The Church alone can substitute sublime ideals worthy of the soul of man, in place of the foolish inventions of Satan, to the absurdities of which this people is at last awakening.

And without delay the Church must play her role, for there are already formidable agencies on the scene working the destruction of souls. The devil, seeing that his old fallacies must inevitably give way to modern science, is carrying on a more cunning and deadly campaign. The foul press is vigorously pushing forward its disastrous propaganda. European works on sound morals are not translated, there being no call for them, while the filthiest trash from abroad finds a ready market everywhere, and is greedily devoured by this unthinking and unlearned people. The modern Chinese schools are preparing the way for materialism and rationalism.

Confucius is still adored in these schools, and our Christian young men who attend them are put to severe trials in their faith by unscrupulous pedagogues. They are not obliged to adore, but if they refuse, they receive no merit for their labors, and they finish their course without diplomas, to their great detriment in after life.

They often come to us complaining of the indignities imposed upon them, but we can do nothing. In our poverty we cannot erect a suitable building nor engage competent professors. Several young men have left schools and are coming to me for English; but as I am obliged to be away most of my time, giving missions through the district, these eager scholars lose courage and make little progress in the language.

With a little aid from our generous benefactors in America, we can greatly ameliorate the condition of the Chinese Catholic youth, and keep abreast with these modern schools, which are the only means of acquiring at present a superior education in China.

These seats of learning are springing up everywhere. The bonzes in their monasteries are trembling at the approach of their near dissolution; for the government is intent on converting the monasteries into schools. Only a few days ago some bonzes came to our residence in Wen Chow offering to sign over to us six of their monasteries, evidently with the hope that in the name of the Catholic Church their monasteries might be spared; or at least that some money might be secured by their transaction so that they would not be left penniless after being turned out by the government.

Five of the monks feigningly promised to become Catholics. It is needless to say that we did not fall into their trap and their proposal was rejected; as they have no right to dispose of these monasteries which belong to the people as a body. Failing to catch us, they resolved to join the Japanese bonzes who enjoy many privileges at present in China.

It must be said that we also have considerable liberty at present here. These poor pagans are kindly disposed towards us. The Church has a mysterious attraction for those who come to learn of her mission. They are aware of her sublime maxims but fear her sweet yoke. If they offend our Christians even in trivial secular matters they are prompt to make amends in their own peculiar way, setting off fire-crackers in front of the church or chapel or presenting us with two candles. The mandarins are just and equitable towards us. They throw open to us the gates of their walled cities, and no scorn or reflection is cast upon us as we pass through their thronged streets. The custom officers stationed at points along the river need only to hear the word zang-wei—the missionary is on the boat—and we pass without inspection.

Never was there a more favorable moment in China for Holy Mother Church. The harvest is indeed ripe; unfortunately, the reapers, are few. In this district of Wen Chow, alone, which measures 100 miles from north to south, by 180 from east to west, there are about 6,000,000 souls, but we have at present only five missionaries.

When shall we see apostles from the New World, valiant soldiers of the Cross turn to these fields of hidden treasure? In this district there are towns and villages in which a missionary's foot has never yet trod. We need undaunted souls to explore these vast regions teeming with immortal souls. To tell this simple but deluded people of our kind and provident Father who rules the winds and the waves, who guides the sun and moon and stars in their unerring course, who feeds the birds of the air and the fishes of the sea, and clothes the flowers of the field with bloom who guards his intelligent creatures with a special care; to tell them of our Virgin Mother who has crushed the head of the dragon they adore; to point out to them the true celestial kingdom, not one inhabited by monsters, but a land of eternal peace and joy, the glorious abode of angels and saints.

When noble generous souls from the New World shall come, Holy Mother Church will then have secured her last great triumph and our heavenly Fatherland a royal people to crown our labors throughout the long eternal years.

Yours in the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Mary.

WILLIAM FRASER.

A Remarkable Career.

Rev. Ignatius Koob, S. J., who died the other day at San Remo, Italy, had a remarkable career. Born in British Guiana, of Protestant parents, he took to the sea and became captain of a merchantman. It was at this time that he began to entertain serious misgivings as to the validity of the creed he professed. When on a voyage Captain Koob got shipwrecked and saved his life by holding on to a piece of wood. During these trying hours he vowed that if his life were spared he would lose no time in embracing the Catholic faith. Saved almost by a miracle, the captain was received into the Catholic Church and soon followed up his conversion by joining the Society of Jesus. He was sent to India and held various appointments in the Bengal mission. Among other things he was the architect of St. Mary's Seminary, Karacong, and the Patal Seminary at Kandy. Possessed of marvellous eloquence, the words he preached went straight to the hearts of his hearers, so that the mere rumor that Father Koob would occupy the pulpit on a certain day was enough to attract vast crowds.
