ABOUT STATIONERY!

You are paying just about twice as much for your Stationery now as you did a few years ago, and prices are still soaring. There are certain grades of paper which will not be procurable at any price if things continue on as they are going, and this applies especially to the better kinds. We have just opened a shipment of Stationery in boxes, packages, etc., and are selling it at prices for which it would be impossible for us to offer it again after this lot has been sold out. We have

A Child of Sorrow.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

"He expects us," said Robert. "He is waiting within call. Give your consent; say that you will marry me, and I will fetch him. You will be my lawful wife; we will go to Melbourne, to England; you shall do what you like; there shall be money enough to satisfy every whim. I'm proud of you. I shall be proud of you as my wife. No lady here or in England shall queen it higher than you. Say the words, and I'll bring him."

"No, no!" panted Maida. "I will not; I cannot! You don't know what you say, what it is you have dared to do. I could not marry you. I—oh, God, help me!—I love another man! Let me go, let me go!"

"You cannot," he said. "If I were the best man that ever breathed, I couldn't let this chance slip. It's as dear to me as salvation itself. I want you more than life; I'd rather die than lose you. Tell me to call the man and we will be married. If you do not, I keep you here the night—you'll wish then that we'd been married, and perhaps you'll wish it in vain."

It may be said that Maida did not realise the full significance of the threat. Indeed, cropping up through her a cry of fear and indignation, there came every now and then a sense of unreality in the situation itself. It was as if she were taking part in some melo-drama, too highly coloured to be anything more than play-acting. But, as she looked round the hut and at the man standing before her, with his white, set face, his brooding eyes, the consciousness of her peril grew upon her.

She half-suspected that she had to deal with a madman, a man whose ungovernable passion had destroyed in him the sense of right and wrong. "I am frightened," she said, striving for calm. "Give me time—time to think!"

He waved his hand consentingly. "Take your time, by all means," he said. "The more you think, the plainer you will see that you'll have to do what I wish. It's not my fault that I'm forcing you. I asked you to marry me in the regular way; you've driven me to this. And even now I don't want to be hard on you. If you'll marry me now, I'll promise to take you back to Milda Wolda on the instant; I'll promise not to claim you as my wife until you've had time to think it over. I'm not afraid of the result; a woman's more likely to care for a man who knows his own mind and is ready to get her at any cost."

As he was speaking, there was a slight noise outside the window of the hut, the shutter of which Robert had closed and barred from the outside; but the noise was so slight that neither he nor Maida noticed it.

Maida sank on to the sheep-skins and covered her face with her hands. No escape seemed possible. She could not doubt for a moment that the man would carry out his threat and keep her there all night; she would be compromised, ruined. What should she do? Her trembling lips murmured a prayer; her heart ached with misery as she thought of her future, yoked to this man, so hard and cruel, a man whom she was beginning to hate with the hatred of a great loathing.

Robert Brosley watched her closely. "You might think of others besides yourself," he said. "I don't mean myself; put me out of the question. But give a thought to your sister. I believe you are poor and alone in the world. What would happen to you if you left Milda Wolda, you two helpless girls?"

She replied, as much to gain time than from any desire to argue with him. "We are not helpless. I can work, as I worked in England," she said, in a low voice.

He laughed contemptuously. "Pretty kind of work; and it all depends on your health; and you're not very strong. What would happen to you if you fell ill? What would happen to Carrie? You are very fond of your sister, but you seem to forget what an advantage it would be to her if you married me. There would always be a home for her, she could have as much money as she wanted, there would be a prospect of her settling well. Why don't you think of her future, as well as of yourself? She and I are good friends, and I will continue to be a good friend to her. I'd settle a sum of money on her when she married—I'll settle it on you. What's the matter with me? I am neither a cripple nor a hunchback. Other women—But I won't speak of them; there's only one woman in the world for me, and you are she; and I mean to have you. But there! I don't want to threaten you. I don't want to frighten you; think of Carrie—think it all out."

He seated himself upon an upturned box as far from her as possible and took out his pipe; but he glanced at her and returned the pipe to his pocket. As far as was compatible with his forceful proceedings he wished to show her every respect. Maida sat gazing vacantly at the fire, her hands writhing together, her head bent. She had taken off her hat and one strand of hair had come loose and fell down beside her face. Alas! she looked ravishly beautiful, and he sure her beauty was not lost upon the man who loved her so madly.

She turned her eyes upon him presently. "You said—you said that there was a clergyman here. It cannot be true."

His heart rose with sudden hope. "It's true enough," he said. "I came upon the fellow, tramping, a little while ago and I sent him on here. It was just a sheer piece of luck, one of those things which people call providential. It gave me the idea of carry-

Piles

PILES, or hemorrhoids, are the cause of keen distress to thousands who do not yet know Dr. Chase's Ointment.

There are three kinds of piles—itching, bleeding and protruding. The itching, burning sensations usually increase at night, and the misery which many people endure is beyond description. The bleeding is sometimes so profuse as to cause death. Protruding piles are most dreaded because it is commonly believed that a surgical operation is the only means of cure.

If you will read the letters quoted in the daily press there will be little chance for scepticism as to the certainty of Dr. Chase's Ointment as a cure for every form of piles. Or, better still, ask your friends about it, for Dr. Chase's Ointment is recognised among doctors and druggists as well as by the public generally as the only real cure for this wretched disease.

ing you off—yes, I've carried you off, but many a better man than I has done the same thing. I'm only doing what they used to do in England, what's been done here often enough; and I'd bet my life that the women have thought all the more of the men for running some risk to get them. It proves their love, anyway."

Maida shuddered. "I should like to see him," she said.

A vague hope sprang up in her bosom that, if the man were really there, she could appeal to him for protection against Robert.

"I'll call him in a moment," he said; "but you must make up your mind before I do so, that you will marry me. There must be no coming; you must tell him when he comes that you are quite willing for him to perform the ceremony."

"How can I trust you?" cried Maida, her voice quavering. "He may be no clergyman, you may be deceiving me—"

"I swear I am not!" he responded, eagerly. "Why should I? You are here and cannot escape. Besides, I want you to be my wife too badly to play any trick of that kind. I tell you I love you, and I want to have you forever. I am content to wait after we are married till you come to me of your own accord; but I want a real marriage so that you can't give me the slip. I know you: you won't go from your marriage vow. The man's all right—why should he say he was a parson if he wasn't? Besides, he looks like one, he's got their lingo—oh, he's all right! Shall I call him?"

Maida rose and stood trembling. She was like a bird caught in the snare of the fowler; the net was closing round her, she could feel its meshes. An overmastering desire for the presence of some third person, even though he were a confederate of Robert's and an enemy of hers, took possession of her. If he were there, he might, would, see that she was being forced into the ceremony, he might have pity upon her; after all, he was a clergyman and could not be altogether bad and insensible to her distress. She made a movement with her hand, and in a voice scarcely audible, said:

"Yes, if you have no pity on me, if you are lost to all sense of the wrong you are doing, call him."

If cooking utensils are filled with water as soon as they are emptied there will be much less time required for cleaning them.

An Appeal to Motherhood

Hall Caine Pictorial English Child Says Outrageous Reprisals

TO THE MOTHERS OF GERMANY, all you know how dearly you love your children. Some of us (now speaking for the war) (Ah, God, can it be?) sleep and eat and laugh and play, and homes, as you stopped and laughed in our English homes, memories of little domestic scenes in Germany which were sufficient to prove it. Two or three such scenes come back to me now, and the fiery passions that have in the sweetness of the years, can quite blacken the tenderest remembrance.

The first is of a Christmas spent in the house of a young German woman with four sweet young children. Her face of the Christmas morning in mysterious part the village shops, and strange looking parcels, and in certain solitary cup the drawing-room. But how early dusk of the winter, blinds were pulled down, the doors were thrown open, and little people, dressed in tinkling with excitement, each other's hands, were all going in as to some magic folk following in the rear.

There in the middle stood the Christmas tree, with red and blue candles glistening with crackling toys, and crowned with the face of the Christmas tree, there, too, was the young mother, waiting and watching eager eyes for the wonder of the eyes of her children, the first moments of breath over and "Stille Nacht," had been sung, she called earnest to play something. Then there was a romp, the young mother taking her youngest on either side, laughing and shrieking. I stood in the open doorway, and if there were more moving for me in the scene, than the happiness of the children, it was the mother's mother-heart throbbing through it.

The second of the scenes come back to me is of a home of happiness a few days after various carols, such child voices at the back room door, the house with noiseless footsteps creeping upstairs behind the mother to the darkness where her golden-heads

Popular, and the hearts of English mothers are aflutter as with burning coal.

I will not attempt to answer the arguments with which, when your mother's heart has been troubled by reports of the hideous calamities that have fallen on our children as from the kingdom of death and hell, your military leaders have put you off—that they were accidents, military necessities, that London is a fortress which it is imperative to subdue, that what Germany has done in London is less than what Frenchmen did at Freiburg, that war is war and the only mercy is to make it terrible, so that it may be the sooner ended and the peace of the world restored. You are mothers, and I will ask you some simple questions out of the soul of your motherhood—they will be easier answered.

Have you considered what a crime against childhood is involved in these unnecessary atrocities? We come into the world through pain; most of us leave it in pain. Birth is a great agony; death may be an agony also. But between these two there is nearly always one golden strip of life, full of joy and peace and sunshine—childhood. To blacken out that sweet period altogether, to snatch the little, happy soul from the light of the sun—what an iniquity!

Have you thought of the sin against motherhood? When a woman bears a child she is a creature God creates for the right, highest and proudest of His creatures, to repeat the miracle of creation. In becoming a mother she enters into the greatest of all empires, the holy empire of motherhood, whereof the only King, the only Kaiser, is God, and therefore her fealty is first to Him. When, out of the valley of the shadow of childbirth, she comes back with the new life, the light of a great joy is upon her, and neither the fear of poverty nor yet the dread of shame can quench it. To put out that light by putting out the life of her child—what a crime against motherhood!

The Duties of a Mother.

Have you thought, too, of the right which nature gives to a mother to protect her child? That is the greater right than has ever yet been written in any lawbook. Deep down in every mother's heart it lies, and it is sacred and everlasting. The first of a mother's duties is to protect the little body she brings into the world and the living soul it shelters. The mother who would let harm befall her child, even to save herself, would be more guilty than the most savage of the lower animals. The animal mother will fight the felon sire for her young, and because of her motherhood the male partner gives place to her. An eternal law seems to grant to the mother of all species the right to kill, if need be, that her offspring may not be killed. By the measuring of that right we may judge of the wickedness of taking it away from her. To outrage the sanctuary of the mother's breast is the crime of crimes. It is a crime that shames both the world and God.

And have you thought, also, that if our Christian faith counts for any thing, these helpless little ones who have been so cruelly done to death are mightier far than the whole of the German Empire now? Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven. If it is to God only that they can look for justice, their victory is sure. He who is too weak to fight for himself has God to fight for him. Is it only an idle thought, a foolish superstition, that until the trump of doom they will be waiting at the bar of God, at the feet of the Mother of all Mothers—these slaughtered innocents, with eyes that are as the eyes of your own children?

Mothers May Demand Reprisals.

I will not speak of reprisals except to say that, logically or illogically, nearly all that is best in our country is against them. But it is a fearful thing to play with the human soul, and of all souls the mother-soul is at once the sweetest and the most terrible. Therefore, not as a threat, nor even as a warning, but only as a light to light up the heart of the British mother, I tell you, mothers of Germany, that if further air raids over England should kill still more English children, no church, or press, or parliament, or government, or backwater, or thought of Freiburg will be able to withstand the demand of British motherhood (bleeding for the loss of its dead and trembling for the safety of its living) for justice and retribution, and that the only result will be that thousands of your German children, just as sweet and innocent as our own, and living now in the fullness of their childish joy, will soon (God knows how soon) be carried to their graves.

Mothers of Germany, let us stop the madness and delirium of such an unnatural conflict, and so make reprisals on either side unnecessary. Is it not horror enough that through starless nights and hopeless dawns all Europe is in sorrow for the daily sacrifice of the flower of its young manhood? Must the world weep for the slaughter of its children also?

ness of the skies, and dropped bombs on their humble home. All three were killed.

In the Spring of the present year a laboring man who lived in a cottage on the edge of a little holiday town on our southeast coast, was smoking his last pipe late at night before going to bed, when a shell from a German destroyer on the dark sea outside struck the upper storey where his wife and children lay asleep. Amid the crash of falling timbers he reached the foot of the broken stairway and called up to his wife. There was at first no answer, and then out of the darkness came a frightened cry from his little daughter, five years of age.

"Come down, dearie," he called. "I can't daddie, I'm hurt," cried the child. The distracted man clambered up to the child, carried her to the outer door of his house, told her to find her way, if she could, to her grandmother's down the street, and then returned to look for her mother and baby brother in the bedroom above. When he found them they were dead.

A fortnight ago, toward noon of a heavenly Summer day, in an infant school in East London, a hundred children, ranging in ages from 3 yrs. to 6, were singing their last lesson before the time came to scamper home in childish glee to their midday meal, when out of the sunshine of the sky, two bombs fell from a German air machine and killed ten of them and wounded fifty. The scene was a frightful shambles. Some of the children were destroyed beyond all recognition, their sweet limbs being splashed like a bloody avalanche against the broken walls. And a moment later, their mothers, coming breathless, bareheaded, and with wild eyes to the school door, saw the mangled bodies of their babies brought out in a stream of blood.

Is Murder Worth While?

Mothers of Germany, if I have not spared you the pain of these descriptions it is because I want you to realize for yourselves what English mothers feel about the murder of their innocent children, who knew nothing of the war and who had done no harm to any one. Who manned the legion of devilish engines that dropped death on them from the sky? Your sons, and some of them are still so young that it must seem to you only as yesterday since you nursed them on your knees. Who directed them? Your fathers and husbands, and some of these are the rulers of your nation, and therefore responsible for the cowardly outrages. But motherhood is the supreme power in a State, always has been, always will be, always must be, and if you, mothers of Germany, had set your faces against the doing of such things they would never have been done.

Were they worth while? Has the military advantage gained to the arms of Germany by all her air raids put together been worth the golden head of one darling child? It has not. You could walk for a week through thousands of miles of the streets of London without seeing a trace of Zeppelin damage. Only one real result has come of these barbaric raids from the first to the last—a hundred and fifty little coffins have been carried to the cemeteries of South London and

TO THE MOTHERS OF GERMANY: Mothers of Germany, all the world knows how dearly you love your children. Some of us (now your enemies) who, in the unbelievable days before the war (Ah, God, can it be?) used to sleep and eat and laugh in your German homes, as you slept and ate and laughed in our English homes, have memories of little domestic scenes in Germany which were sufficient to prove it. Two or three such memories come back to me now, and not all the fiery passions that have burnt up the sweetness of the years between can quite blacken the tender grace of them.

The first is of a Christmas Eve spent in the house of a beautiful young German woman with three or four sweet young children. Like Dickens' little mother, she had spent the morning in mysterious journeys to the village shops, in smuggling strange looking parcels into the house and in certain solitary occupations in the drawing-room. But toward the early dusk of the winter day the blinds were pulled down, the folding doors were thrown open, and then the little people, dressed up in white, tingling with excitement and holding each other's hands, were allowed to go in as to some magic cave, with our black-coated contingent of older folk following in the rear.

There in the middle of the floor stood the Christmas tree, glittering with red and blue candles all alight, glistening with crackers, laden with toys, and crowned with the welcoming face of the Christmas Man. And there, too, was the young mother herself, waiting and watching with eager eyes for the wonder and joy in the eyes of her children. After the first moments of breathless awe were over and "Stille Nacht, heilige Nacht," had been sung, she called on the youngsters to play something on the piano. Then there was a romp round the tree the young mother taking the hands of her youngest on either side, and all laughing and shrieking with delight. I stood in the open doorway. I remember, and if there was anything more moving for me in the fairy-like scene than the happiness of the children, it was the searching sense of the mother-heart throbbing through and through it.

The second of the memories that come back to me is of the same home of happiness a few hours later. After various carols, sung in silvery child voices at the back of the dining room door, the house was silent, and with noiseless footsteps we were creeping upstairs behind the young mother to the darkened chamber where her golden-headed treasures

The Contrast in England.

And now, with a hot and quivering heart, I think of other scenes in England which seem to say, rightly or wrongly, that the German mother who loves her own so tenderly can be more cruel to the children of the English mother than the wolf to the whelps of the fox dam.

One is of a murky night in the first months of the war. On the top floor of a tenement house in North London three little children (just as white and soft and sweet as yours) lay asleep in each other's arms. A Zeppelin came riding through the black-

After the War. Won't the old world seem just splendid when this weary war is ended, when we hang our swords and shotguns up behind the kitchen door? And I hope, when done with saying, we'll devote our time to having, that the thunder of the captains may be heard on earth no more. All the kings should turn view again appears; for we've had enough of slaughter, and of blood that flows like water—what we've had should satisfy us for at least a million years. But the war must drag on further, with its endless useless horrors till the kaiser has been canned; till the kronprinz, smashed and gory, says he's had enough of glory, and the sword of wrath has fallen from the royal madman's hand. Then, when there's no longer tidings of the captain and his riders, and the pawing, neighing war-horse has to haul the farmer's plow, this old world will be alluring, with a peace that is enduring, this old world that is so weary and so horror ridden now.

The Gas Range! The Gas Range means comfort for the housewife; shorter kitchen hours for her, and a cleaner kitchen. It is a great mistake to think that cooking with gas is expensive. Whenever a woman becomes used to gas for cooking, thoughts of a coal or wood stove fill her with gloom. A Gas range is so much easier to operate, so efficient for all kinds of cooking, and so much cleaner, that the idea of going back to the old style methods is decidedly unpleasant. Yet in winter many housewives think they must use a coal or wood stove, because there is no other way of heating the kitchen. THERE IS ANOTHER WAY AND IT IS FAR BETTER THAN THE OLD. THE GLOW GAS STEAM RADIATOR WAY. may23,17

Household Notes. In these days of paper economy it is a good idea to let the children save the wrapping paper and make pads of it. A flannel dipped in a little ammonia and rubbed on a white spot on polished furniture will remove the spot. This is the time of year to clean up outside premises and sprinkle lime where it is most needed in damp places. Every now and then shoes should be given a sun-and-air bath. A good idea is to have two pairs and wear them on alternate days. "Griddle," to use on the oil stove, can be "home-made" of wire screening, and take less time to heat than the regulation solid iron griddle. When lard is so expensive, oysters can be fried in just-enough lard to safely keep them from sticking. They are just as nice as when fried in deep fat. A mushy mixture of ammonia and salt will take white marks off the inside of dark coat collars, but it should be remembered that it is a dangerous mixture. Little pigs-in-blankets are made of selected oysters, dried and rolled in thin blankets of bacon, pinned with wooden toothpicks and fried a delicate brown in deep fat. Pimento cheese can be rolled into balls, just as you make butter balls, and if placed on the side of the salad they add color, and it is a convenient way of serving cheese. Old, discolored cauliflower need never be thrown away. Break them into small pieces and leave in salt water for twelve hours. Then pop them into a pickle-jar. A shoulder of veal will make a delicious roast. It will then slice cold and the odds and ends that are left will make a very nice salad. If the quantity is not quite enough for a salad add celery and hard-boiled eggs.

The Councillors' Reply.

Elsewhere on this page we print a reply from the majority of the Legislative Councillors to the attack made upon them by the Premier last Wednesday. Apart from the concrete arguments contained in it, the dignified and moderate tone of their statement contrasts strongly with the personal and vindictive nature of the accusations evoked. Every paragraph carries weight. If any reader can remain unconvinced by it of the complete justice and propriety of the Councillors' action, he is either hopelessly biased or hopelessly stupid.

We will let their explanation speak for itself and content ourselves here with pointing out two most important deductions that are easily drawn from it. The first we have already stated on a former occasion, but we will quote from the Councillors' reply: "Various speakers, with the acquiescence of the whole House, repeatedly expressed their readiness to make the contribution larger than the Government proposed, if the Government thought it either necessary or wise to increase it."

The Government, as everyone knows, absolutely and uncompromisingly refused this offer. They refused even to discuss the inference is obvious. They did not want the money. The necessity for it, the hypothetical pretence that it was to support the nature and effect of the Bill that has fortunately been defeated, but the disgraceful and dishonourable motives that lie behind it.

WINARD'S LINIMENT CURES DIPHTHERIA.

The Legislative Councillors Answer the Premier.

In view of the statements made by the Premier before the prorogation of the House on Wednesday as reported in the Press, the undersigned members of the Legislative Council feel that in fairness to themselves, and in the interests of public right, some reply is necessary.

The Premier's statement is briefly—that the Council has refused to permit a law taxing business profits to take effect, because the personal interests of its members were affected.

The statement is untrue. "Nothing," says the Premier, "could be fairer or more just than the principles of the BILL." On the contrary, nothing in our opinion could be more unfair or unjust.

The actual fact is that a large majority of the Council were not only willing to pass the type of Bill which the Government asked for, provided it was a fair Bill, but various speakers, with the acquiescence of the whole House, repeatedly expressed their entire readiness to make the contribution larger than the Government proposed, if the Government thought it either necessary or wise to increase it. Some of the members did what they conceived to be their duty in stating individual views and in drawing attention to certain effects that seemed to them likely to follow the enactment, effects which in the absence of discussion in the other House had probably not previously received the attention they deserved. The members of the Council conceive that they occupy their positions for this very purpose.

In the present instance they had no desire to block the passing of any equitable tax upon commercial business. Nevertheless it was impossible to avoid their obligation to see that the Bill was based upon simple right and justice.

It is impossible to believe that the Premier himself or those members of the Government who were prepared to give the reasonable request of the Council even cursory attention, have not appreciated the utter injustice of the Bill as it came before the Upper House. While there are a considerable number of minor provisions in it which involve the negation of fairness, and which could easily have been set right in a few minutes without affecting the measure which it was designed to provide, the Council,

In view of the unyielding attitude of the Government upon these points, abandoned any effort to obtain reasonable consideration of them.

But upon one point a point which would have forced upon the Council, individually and collectively, the responsibility of endorsing and placing upon the Statute Book a law providing taxation at a totally different rate upon businesses which were absolutely identical in every essential—a law involving a glaring injustice against the very principle of fair play—the Council simply declined to yield. They were given no choice, for its enactment meant the legalizing of a deliberate wrong, and the Government absolutely refused to recognize their difficulties.

It has been suggested by the Premier that this affair has been a temporary satisfaction to us. Again, and on the contrary, the extraordinary and unexplained attitude of the Government in refusing to consider any suggestions, and the consequent responsibility that was forced upon us of having to vote against a measure, the principle of which the House was willing to support, constituted to all of us a problem of grave difficulty and anxious concern.

We are told by the Premier that the safety of Constitutional principles is involved in our action. We reply that the safety of the Constitution depends rather upon justice and honour—principles which this act ignores and for no visible reason.

The Act was had enough, the refusal to consider its rectification was had enough, but the speech of the Premier deliberately misrepresenting the attitude of the Council and endeavoring to fasten upon certain of its members the responsibility for the loss of the measure, which alone attached to the Government, forcibly us to an explanation which otherwise would not have been made.

LONG AND SHORT LOANS.

LONDON, To-Day.—Bonar Law told the Commons on a second reading of the War Loan Bill that the British Government did not intend to issue a war loan during the Parliamentary loan recess, unless something unexpected happened. He said that advances in the United States heretofore had been on short term notes. It was possible, he added, that that country might prefer a long dated loan; hence it was necessary that the Government should have power to issue such a loan.

BRITISH AIRMEN'S DARING.

LONDON, To-Day.—During the past two weeks of rainy and misty weather it is not too much to say that the activities of millions of men were greatly hampered in their efforts to get on with the war. Reports from our own front yesterday attacked the enemy's observation balloons, which were directing his gunfire from well behind his front. One balloon was brought down in flames and three were smothered as the result of machine gun fire from our aeroplanes. Another fighting machine flew along the enemy's front line trench at an average height of only thirty feet and engaged the occupants with a machine gun; at one point it dipped within six feet of the ground and on its return some German telephone wire was discovered wound around the machinery. Another plane pursued and opened fire on parties of Germans behind the enemy front and a cyclist despatch rider. These operations in addition to the regular programs of bombing trains, railway stations, and supply depots many miles behind the German lines are carried out every night on which the machines can take to the air and indicate the wide range of the aeroplane's usefulness.

TAFT ILL.

CLAY CENTRE, Kansas, To-day. William H. Taft is much better today, according to a statement of the attending physician given out tonight. Mr. Taft asked for food to-day, the first time since Monday, when he was stricken with an intestinal disorder. The attending physician said it was impossible to state when Mr. Taft would be able to resume his speaking tour. He said it would take some time for Mr. Taft to regain his health.

BRITISH MAKE GAINS.

LONDON, To-day.—The official communication issued last night from British headquarters announced that the British troops made further gains on the battle front east of the Belgian town of Ypres. It says that heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy during fierce fighting for possession of advanced working positions. The text follows: Our attack this morning east of Ypres was delivered on a front of nearly two miles south of the Ypres-Roulers railway; on the right wing of the attack heavy fighting occurred for high ground. Some progress was made by our troops in this area. The fighting continues. In the centre and on the left our attack after overcoming the enemy's resistance resulted in our gaining the whole of our objectives. In addition to Westhoek and Westhoek Ridge, which are now completely in our hands, our troops established themselves in Glencorse Wood. In the fierce fighting that occurred heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy. We took 240 prisoners. In addition to the foregoing number of prisoners we captured in successful raids last night east of Monchy-le-Preux eighty-six. The enemy raided one of our posts south-west of Guenappe and two of our men are missing. Another hostile raiding party was repulsed northwest of Gouvaucourt. There was great activity in the air yesterday, but strong westerly winds and thick clouds made it difficult for our machines to engage the enemy's machines. We successfully carried out bombing and artillery observation work during the day. In the air fighting five German machines were brought down and five others driven down out of control, in addition two German observation balloons were

VOTE TO SEND LABOR DELEGATES.

LONDON, To-day.—A conference of the British labor party held at Westminster to-day voted to send delegates to the Stockholm Consultative Conference by 1,046,000 to 55,000. The conference was in an uproar which ended only when the result of the vote was announced. The resolution was carried after an amendment by dockworkers opposing it, had been defeated by a vote of 391,000 to 1,651,000. When the vote on the resolution was announced, a delegate shouted that no matter what the convention did the Firemen's and Seamen's Union would see to it that delegates would never reach Stockholm. G. N. Barnes, Minister of Pensions, spoke in favour of the dockworkers' attitude against attending a conference at which delegates from the enemy country would be present, saying that the United States, Belgium, France and Italy were not sending delegates and that if delegates from Britain were sent they would be negotiating with Russians, Germans, Dutch, and Scandinavians. He added that the difference between a mandatory and a consultative conference was small and that the British delegates would be in the same position whatever the final character. He asked if the conference at the present time was for peace, and was answered by a thunderous cry of "Yes" and "No." George Henry Roberts, Labor Member of Parliament for Norwich, made a strong fighting speech against the delegates going to Stockholm. He said he declined to meet Germans during the war. He thought that the BAD DAY FOR GERMAN AIRMEN.

British Front in France and Belgium.—Yesterday was a disastrous day for the German air service, which again was active after a long spell of bad weather. Seven enemy machines crashed to the earth and another was driven down. The German sausage observation balloons also had a bad time; two were destroyed and four emitting smoke were forced to descend. Three others were hit by British airmen, and still more were forced down by long range fire from British guns. German artillery continues to pound the British positions before Lens. Points east of Vinny Ridge and west of Lens were heavily

COPENHAGEN, To-day.—Nine hundred and thirty-three Scandinavian ships have been destroyed by torpedoes or mines since the beginning of the war, according to the Aftenbladet. Of this number Norway lost six hundred, Denmark 187 and Sweden 140. The number of Scandinavian seamen lost in these disasters was about five hundred.

Patriotic Association.

LAST NIGHT'S MEETING.

The meeting of the Patriotic Association held last night was well attended. His Excellency the Governor presided and began by announcing the distinctions won by L. Corp. Lidstone, of the Regiment, and L. Corp. Thos. J. Murphy, of the Rifle Brigade, both of whom had been awarded the Military Cross. The Governor then tabled the following communication relating to prisoners of war.

Downing Street, 12th July, 1917.

Dear Sir Walter,—Sir Joseph Outerbridge has shown me his letter to you of June the 27th with reference to the supplies to prisoners of war of the Newfoundland Battalion. We have had some more information since the date at which he wrote and it is now possible to put the situation to you more clearly.

1. Military.—There are now 61 military prisoners of war from the Newfoundland Battalion. This is not a final number because at any moment Major Timewell may hear of a few more being prisoners of war who are at present classed among the "missing." I am afraid, however, that these are not likely to be large. I would venture to suggest

(a) that the expenses in connection with supplies to them should be borne by the Colony, but that

(b) either the Association should act for the Government and keep a separate account, which they should render periodically, or, of course, if the Government prefer it Major Timewell could do the work. The reason why we suggest this is, firstly, that the funds of the Association cannot stand the additional expense, and, secondly, that it is much more of a regular charge which can be treated as a military expense than the discretionary treatment of individuals in hospital or the supply of comforts to troops on service.

The system under which prisoners receive parcels is as follows. There are two stages, first, the provisional stage lasting for about a month from the time that we first hear that they are prisoners up to the date when regular parcels from this country may be expected to reach them. Then there is the subsequent stage during which they get their supplies on the permanent system.

During the provisional stage arrangements are made whereby certain articles of immediate need are sent direct from Copenhagen and two parcels of food with an interval between the two.

The permanent arrangements are unavoidably a little more complicated. Wounded prisoners are dealt with on our behalf by a branch of the Canadian Red Cross which exists for the purpose and which through its goodwill has undertaken the work for us. Three parcels a fortnight are sent by them to each prisoner, and each parcel costs 10/-, i.e. a total cost of about £3 in every four weeks. To these must be added the additional small parcels of tobacco. Unwounded prisoners are sent parcels by another Association under Lady Beattie by arrangement with us. These parcels cost 8/- each and in this case also there is tobacco in addition. You will however, recognize that it is difficult to send bread from this country so as to reach prisoners in eatable condition. Therefore in the case of both wounded and unwounded the parcels sent from England are supplemented by bread sent from Copenhagen. The cost of this bread is about 7/6 a person per four weeks. The total cost per person is therefore likely to run to something like £3 10s. for four weeks, in other words 61 prisoners would cost £231 10s. for every four weeks. As you will realize it is impossible to give a quite accurate sum at the present moment though this would be a fair estimate. As the men's pay is being accumulated for them Major Timewell made the suggestion that perhaps part of it might properly be applied to meeting some of the expense involved, conceivably that on tobacco. No doubt, however, this will be taken into consideration. I am not quite sure whether I am most correct in writing to you about this or to Sir Edward Morris, but I am quite sure that both you and he will realize that in no case do I mean any discourtesy. I am, therefore, sending him a copy of my letter and I should be very glad to know what he is wished that we should do. We are meanwhile seeing that the parcels are sent, a note being kept of the expense in this connection.

2. Naval and Marine Prisoners.—There is at present one naval prisoner and 12 merchant marine prisoners. Parcels are sent to the Naval prisoners through the Royal Naval Division Comforts' Fund and to the Marine prisoners through the British and Foreign Sailors Society. These are standard parcels similar to those previously described costing 8/- and are sent three times a fortnight.

3. Naval and Marine Prisoners.—There is at present one naval prisoner and 12 merchant marine prisoners. Parcels are sent to the Naval prisoners through the Royal Naval Division Comforts' Fund and to the Marine prisoners through the British and Foreign Sailors Society. These are standard parcels similar to those previously described costing 8/- and are sent three times a fortnight.

The Governor also read the following telegram from the British Secretary of State. (No. 1395).

tee dealt with improvements to the Southside range. Dr. Burke, for Mr. Justice Kent, tabled the report of the Employment Committee. Since last report 48 discharged sailors and soldiers had been found employment. Secretary A. Parsons has resigned from the Committee, having been accepted for service again, this time with the Royal Flying Corps.

Mr. W. B. Griev presented the report of the Forestry Committee, which showed that about 900 men are now enrolled. The first batch of Foresters, 94 strong, under Capt. Baird, left on May 19th and arrived at Newton-on-Ayre, being met by Captain Beaton, though they are doing good work, there is an imperative need for at least 800 men more, and it is hoped that they may be obtainable at the close of the fishery. The question of sending a mining company will also be considered later.

Mr. F. Steer tabled the report of the Red Cross Committee. The collection on Empire Day amounted to £5,000. For the French Red Cross $5,165.13 had been handed to the French Consul.

For the Aeroplane Committee Mr. C. Steer reported that the proposition of establishing an aeroplane base here could not yet be entertained. Sir Edgar Bowring spoke warmly in appreciation of the splendid and untiring work of the Newfoundland War Contingent Association in London, which he had himself been able to observe while in England. He spoke particularly of the unselfish and invaluable services given by the Chairman, Sir Arthur Steel Maitland, by Mr. E. R. Bennett, in his capacity of M. G., and by Miss Knox. In conclusion he proposed the following resolution:

"On the occasion of the appointment by the Newfoundland Government of the Hon. J. R. Bennett to the post of Minister of Militia, in his capacity of an official Department to discharge the duties which have been carried out by Mr. R. A. Squires, in spirit, generosity, and devotion to the interest of the Newfoundland forces on active service, the resolution was unanimously adopted.

The most important business of the night was transacted when Mr. Cliff moved the following resolution:—RESOLVED that, in view of the appointment by the Government of the Hon. J. R. Bennett to the new office of Minister of Militia, the Officers and Committee of the Association authorize the Chairman of the Association to place their resignations of the specific duties allotted to them by the Association at the disposal of the Minister of Militia, assuring him of their willingness to support and co-operate with him in every way, and adding that pending the decision of the Minister, the Officers and Committees of the Association are prepared to continue in the discharge of their duties which they are at present performing.

Mr. Justice Johnson gave notice of a motion to be made at the next meeting of the Hon. R. A. Squires, Secretary of the Committee. His Excellency also praised the manner in which the Association's funds had been administered. Mr. Cliff expressed the thanks of the Standing Committee for the vote of appreciation. The meeting then adjourned.

Fisherman Ran Amuck "Treated by a Friend" Again the Reply. A fisherman of the South Shore was landed in the tolls last night for kicking up a row in a restaurant on Water Street. Yesterday morning he brought a couple of newly cured fish to market and then, not feeling well after his arduous journey to the capital, decided to get a "cure" for himself. The "medicine" prescribed for him—or what he prescribed for himself—was such as to render him incapable and aroused the ire of a food dispenser and eventually ran counter to the advice of two peace-makers. When arrested he had in his possession a substantial sum of money. He was charged with being drunk and disorderly in court to-day and fined $2 or 7 days. When asked where he got the liquor, the fisherman gave a stereotyped reply which the police are tired listening to, namely, "that he was treated by a friend."

The regular quarterly meeting of the St. John's Mechanics' Society will be held in their hall on Monday evening next at 8 o'clock. By order of Secretary, J. A. LEAHEY.—aug11,11

We Must Do Something.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

Nothing makes me more impatient than to hear middle class (I refer to incomes) people complain their heads off about the high cost of living.

The cost of living has become almost as much a commonplace as the weather nowadays. Wherever people meet it comes to the surface as naturally as "Well, is this hot enough for you?" or "Isn't this a fine morning?"

Of course it is exasperating (to put it mildly) to see the purchasing powers of one's dollars steadily lowered. It is very trying to have to get along with last year's motor car instead of buying a new one. Or to have to stay in a big comfortable airy suburban house with every convenience instead of going away to the shore.

How Can They Be So Smug.

But what gets me is the smug way these people are aroused to no feeling but pity for themselves by these conditions. How can they be so utterly indifferent to the fact that what to them means fewer luxuries means underfeeding if not actual starvation to many?

How can they forget what it must mean to the man bringing up a family on fifteen or twenty dollars a week (to say nothing of those who receive less)? He just got by before by buying only the cheapest cuts and living in a tenement. But what in Heaven's name is he going to do now?

Will He Watch His Children Starve.

You'll cut down. But he can't. Well, I suppose he'll watch his children starve.

The cost of living has meant some deprivations to me. But when I catch myself complaining about it in that self pitying way I hate myself. I shan't suffer (in all human likelihood). No one who belongs to me or whom I know intimately will really suffer.

I Want Them To Complain More.

I said it made me impatient to hear middle class people complaining about the high cost of living. What I meant was that I objected to the self pitying, utterly selfish way in which they complain. I want them to complain more not less. I want them to do more than complain. I want them to be filled with a burning indignation which will make them read and study and talk and try to understand this thing so that they can put their influence and their suffrage behind some force that will better things. The public opinion of the big steady middle class is the greatest force in this country.

Let us not be content to groan about the high cost of living as we do about the hot weather. Let's go without food a day if necessary to make ourselves understand what some people are suffering and to fill us with righteous indignation instead of fretful grumbling.

Imbecile Babies.

A Chicago doctor has raised a difficult question by his refusal to perform an operation which he admits would probably save the life of a baby. His reason is that, although the child's life might be saved, its reason could not be, and that the child would remain an imbecile all of its life. Under these conditions he holds that "its parents and humanity would be better served by its death than by prolonging its life."

This is the second decision of this kind which the doctor has made. Two years ago, when he let another baby die, his action started a nation-wide discussion and the doctor was severely criticised. This time the attending physician agreed with the doctor, while forty physicians who saw the child many signed a paper expressing approval of his decision. This inspection of the child by many other physicians disposes of the most serious objection to the doctor's attitude, that of a possible mistake of diagnosis. There are sympathetic people who will believe that if the child's life were prolonged now nature or medical skill might in the future permit the growth of its brain and thus guard it against the fate from which the doctor sought to save it. That belief will not be based upon knowledge, but on an optimistic faith in the powers of nature and on revolt from the seeming cruelty of the doctor's attitude. The Brooklyn, N. Y., "Eagle" says:

But this is a question which ought not to be decided upon faith or feeling, but upon the fullest knowledge which science can bring to bear. That knowledge seems to have been applied in this case. If this large group of physicians was right in its conclusions, then the cruelty would really be involved in the operation, which the doctor refused to perform. Nature is kind and she consigns such hapless children to an early death, unless science steps in to interfere with her processes. Such interference is commendable where the end is beneficent. But a life of imbecility is not a blessing, and the doctor refuses to interfere with nature to produce such a sorry result. He expects criticism, of course, but he adds: "But I shall have friends, too. And some day they will wonder how there could be any criticism." It is through men brave enough to stand by their beliefs that all human progress comes, and it may be that the doctor alluded to is the forerunner of a more scientific and more really humane attitude toward those rare children who are born literally without hope.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Washington, D.C., is a large handsome city which is bounded on the north by the goat family, on the east by the shrapnel stock certificate, on the west by the Japanese menace and on the south by the two-pronged saddle. It is a city of broad streets and fine hotels which by virtue of long practice are able to placate the tourist in the most artistic and humane manner possible.

Washington is chiefly notable as the place where congress meets and adjourns. It is the only place in this country where the congressman from the rural districts with a mission and ball-bearing tongue can consume $9,000 worth of government time in telling what he thinks about the Stars and Stripes. People who go to Washington and listen to a debate on the rivers and harbours bill are almost always persuaded to return home and vote the prohibition ticket.

Owing to the extreme heat which prevails in Washington during the summer months, few people remain there the year around except members of congress who are reluctant to go back home and meet their constituents en masse. One of the saddest sights in Washington is the underfed and overworked government clerk, who goes to work at nine o'clock and doesn't get off until three in the afternoon, so that by the time he gets back from the golf links he is all tired out. Yet we say that republics are grateful.

Washington attracts thousands of tourists every year, who come to present postoffice petitions and sample the justly famed mule saloons. There will not be so many tourists or so much sampling in the future, however, as congress has arisen and kicked the open saloon into the next county. Hereafter the tourist will have to take his samples with him and divide with his congressman.

Washington has no smoke, cinders, soot or slime, the pollutant street car conductors in the world and the finest library in existence. Something is lacking in the make-up of the American who can visit it without a feeling of pride.

Silk underwear is made especially for travelling. Tunic is a feature of the autumn models.

Lieut. Grace.

Second Lieut. Wm. Grace, who was wounded and taken prisoner of war in the Battle of Monchy-le-Preux, has been removed from Karlsruhe to Strohen Kreis, Sulligen, a little town about thirty-three miles from Bremen, in the province of Hanover, Germany, according to an advice received yesterday from the Pay and Record Office. Lieut. Grace, we are glad to say, has recovered from his wounds and is feeling fit again.

Information Wanted

I. G. Sullivan is in receipt of a letter from the police officials at Glasgow, asking him to seek information from the relatives of Miss Irene Margaretta Manuel, a Newfoundlander, who suicided by drowning herself in the River Clyde, following an entertainment given to wounded soldiers by a section of Singer's Works where she was engaged working at munitions. The Inspector General is anxious to communicate with the relatives of the deceased young woman.

THE TEETH AND GENERAL HEALTH.

So many people are apt to forget that the teeth and the condition of the teeth is just as important a part of the body as any other members and should receive as much care.

Not only is it necessary for the sake of the teeth themselves to have them properly and regularly cared for, but physicians are becoming more and more conscious of the fact that the teeth are largely responsible for the mental, moral and physical condition of the individual.

A few of the better known illnesses which have been traced to bad teeth, include several forms of rheumatism, carbuncles, and boils, anemia, adenoids, tonsillitis, and glandular swellings, neuritis, and toxic neuritis, gastritis, appendicitis, pleurisy, nephritis, diphtheria, laryngitis and heart trouble.

Brush the teeth night and morning and, if possible after each meal. It is especially important however to remove all decaying particles before going to sleep lest they cause poisonous gases in the night when there is not enough saliva in the mouth to prevent harm.

Another effect from bad teeth aside from spreading germs, is that food insufficiently chewed is not properly prepared to enter the stomach and is not so mixed with saliva to insure digestion before being swallowed.

TURKISH BATTERIES BOMBARD-ED.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The Entente Allied warships since yesterday have been bombarding the Turkish batteries along the coast of Asia Minor, according to a despatch from Athens to the Exchange Telegraph Co. British monitors successfully reduced to silence one of the Turkish batteries, and have destroyed an airplane installed near another.

GERMAN OFFICIAL.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—In the Oltus Valley sector of the Roumanian front, the Austro-Hungarian forces took prisoners in the past two days 1,500 men and captured 30 machine guns from the Russo-Roumanian forces, according to the official statement issued to-day by the German headquarters.

Berlin, Aug. 10.—Deep masses of British troops last night attacked the German positions on the Arras front, between Monchy Pelves Road and the Arras-Cambrai Road. Storming waves according to the official German statement, suffered severe losses, and were repulsed after hand-to-hand fighting. North of St. Quentin the Germans captured some lines of trenches over a front of 1,200 yards and took 150 men prisoners. Between the Yser and Lys Rivers in Belgium, the German statement says, artillery activity increased.

FOOD CONTROL BILL.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The Administration Food Control and Food Survey Bill was signed by President Wilson to-day, and becomes law.

HAIK'S REPORT.

British Headquarters in France and Belgium, Aug. 10.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig's forces at daybreak this morning attacked and captured virtually all the German forward positions east of the Belgian town of Hooge. On the battlefield between Frezenburg and the Ypres-Menin road the assaulting force gained virtually all their objective to the depth of several hundred yards in the first rush. This section of the front was the scene of some of the hardest fighting on the first day of the battle of Flanders. South of Westhoek it is marshy in places, and in the wooded section the Germans had strengthened their positions by constructing deep dugouts. These obstacles did not deter the onward rush of the British troops this morning. Details of the fighting are not yet available, but it is known that the British forced forward in the wake of a protecting barrage from their artillery and achieved most of their objectives in a remarkably short space of time.

WEEK END NOTES.

(I. C. M.)

Continuing the subject of Education as implied in last week's notes in reference to the Summer School, the question presents itself, as to which subject of all that were discussed, was the most important. Amid such an array of topics it may seem difficult and even presumptuous to decide on one in particular, especially when every subject possessed its own importance.

Besides this there will undoubtedly exist a wide difference of opinion as to which subject was really the most important and thus the one upon which I have decided may not be at all accepted by the reader. The programme consisted of the usual branches of moral and mental training, and it also included problems, methods, and rules, hitherto unknown to the majority of the teachers; and it likewise included hygiene and physical culture. To the last of these I attach the utmost importance and give it the preference in this article. Not that for one moment the importance of the other subjects should be discounted, but because I believe that there is too little attention paid to the care of the body, and therefore too much ignorance as to its influence upon the moral and mental character of the people. We are well instructed in morals and our intellectual training is not being overlooked, but this cannot be said in a general sense of our physical training, for the majority of us ignore the common laws of nature and thereby injure ourselves.

Who that walks in the crowd and does not notice the impress of wrong hygienic laws? Who that looks into the sunken eyes of his fellow and at his gaunt cheeks, and does not see that nature is being thwarted in its work? Who that sees his fellow stooped and bowed and does not know that nature has been trifled with. Who that beholds the weakened form of some emaciated woman and does not detect the lack of proper physical culture? Who that meets daily, weakly, palpitating short-breathed children and does not know that wrong conditions are being endured. Who that beholds the loss of vigour and beauty and of agility and buoyancy by so many men and women and does not ask the reason why? Surely not any who take an interest in the well-being of society, nor any who wishes to see the community at its best.

Why, then, is there so much physical weakness? Among different answers one of the first and one of the essential is because the people are not sufficiently instructed in the matter of Physical Culture or Hygiene. This is why the subject of Physical Culture is of such importance and why we look upon it as being the most important of the many that engaged the time, and occupied the attention of the Summer School. Our day-school scholars require more attention along these lines than has hitherto been given them. This statement applies to our city schools, but it especially applies to our smaller outport schools; and now that so many of our outport teachers have taken the course of physical drill, and general hygienic instruction, it may not be too much to hope that beneficent results will follow.

Sometimes ago the question of a medical practitioner attached to our City Board of Health for this purpose specially was under consideration, but so far nothing has come of it, but the appointment must come sooner or later, and when it does come there will be lots to do in this direction. It is one of the easiest things in life to sit and stand at ease, and indulge in habits which, while for the present they seem harmless, are in the end injurious. Against these things the young should be safe-guarded, and the exercises of drill and physical culture in our schools has a tendency to hinder physical weakness or deformity. Our city brigades have done a good work along these lines in the past, and the effect of their discipline and drill has given a firm step to many a weakly lad, and a broader chest to many a stripling youth.

The body is worth more care than many give it, for is it not the masterpiece of creation? Hence we claim that the question of physical culture was one of the most important of the many discussed at the sessions of the Summer School. Whether the reader agrees with this position, I do not know, but from my knowledge of men and things, and from my acquaintance with the conditions of trade and society, and from my ramblings around our Island Home and from close observation I hold the opinions herein set forth, and knowing the good that must follow as a result of so many of our teachers having attended the Summer School, I think that the question herein dealt with is one of the most important that could occupy their attention and one of the best of the series of the Summer School.

Wilson to Impose Strict Rationing

Advocates of Ban Think it is Equivalent to Sending of Half a Million Men.

Washington, July 27.—All of the facts in connection with the exports problem, including arguments for and against a strict system for placing the northern neutral nations on rations, which would make it impossible for them to send any considerable quantity of foodstuffs and other war-time commodities into Germany, are now before President Wilson, and a decision of far-reaching consequence is expected soon from the White House. The policy of the Exports Council has been to withhold from the public so far as possible specific information in regard to the steps which it has taken, and this may be followed out in the future. It can be stated, however, that great pressure has been brought to bear in some quarters to shut off the flow of supplies from the United States to the neutrals, and that unless he receives convincing evidence to show that such a plan is fallacious President Wilson probably will remain firm in the position he is said to have taken in favor of it.

The President has the whole-hearted backing of Herbert Hoover, head of the Food Administration; Secretary Redfield of the Department of Commerce, both of whom are members of the Exports Council, and Vance McCormick, Chairman of the Advisory Board. The State Department, it is said, has viewed with some alarm the likelihood of a policy that would treat harshly with neutral countries which have been accused of feeling a keen sympathy for Germany.

Up to the present time the attitude of the Government has been pleasing to the men who favor a strict rationing system, and they are urging that there shall be no let up, despite the many protests which have been voiced by certain neutral diplomats. That is the point which the President must decide finally.

There have been prepared, it is said, notes to the various neutral countries outlining the attitude of the United States, and the policy which it intends to carry out, and the despatch of these, which would mean the adoption of a permanent policy for rationing the neutrals, awaits only the approval of the President.

The general belief here is that the President will remain firm in the position taken, which, for the present, has resulted in practically a complete embargo on exports to the Scandinavian countries and an embargo on cattle fodder and some other exports to Holland, one of the countries accused of pouring fats into Germany. Meantime, representatives of the neutral countries affected, who have seen the possibility of their supplies from this country being cut off, have raised violent protest, and have asserted that the charges made against them of aiding Germany in the war are untrue.

It is conceded here that the policy which the United States shall adopt in dealing with these neutral countries is of momentous importance. It has been stated by some who favor imposing a strict embargo on war supplies, foods, and fodder to neutral nations that the powers of the Exports Council, exerted to the full, were equal to an overseas expedition of half a million men. These embargo advocates assert that, despite the lamentations of certain neutral agents, Germany is profiting by their trade with America to an extent that is plainly hurtful to the cause of those who are fighting against German autocracy.

Concert for Belgian Red Cross.

Mayor Gosling has been requested to arrange for a concert in aid of the Belgian Red Cross to be given here by a number of Belgian artists, under the direction of Mr. A. Bouilliez, principal baritone of the Covent Garden Opera of London, and first baritone of the Royal Theatre de la Monnaie, Brussels. The Mayor appointed the following gentlemen as an honorary committee to take charge of all arrangements: Messrs. C. Hutton,

A. Mews, F. J. King, F. W. Bradshaw and J. L. Slattery. The committee, having met, decided to hold two concerts in the College Hall, Sept. 4th and 5th. His Excellency the Governor, who has given his generous cooperation in aid of the brave Belgian soldiers and under whose patronage the concerts will be held, will attend. A number of tickets will be sold by auction and it is said that the person in charge of the hammer will be the Mayoress. Further particulars of this and the general sale of tickets will be given later. The artistes coming are Mademoiselle Dorville, dramatic soprano of the Grand Opera, Brussels; Monsieur Octave Dua, tenor of Chicago Opera; Monsieur Maurice Dambois, the celebrated Belgian violinist; Monsieur Marcel Charlier, pianist, first conductor Chicago Opera, and Monsieur Augustus Bouilliez as before referred to. The Belgian Ambassador at Washington has endorsed the movement.

Our Baseball Column.

PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

"For someone has blundered and gave the Cubs an extra two hundred."

The most astute and ardent baseball fan—Mister Blazer Wall—has called our attention to the fact that the Standing of the Clubs as published in all the papers yesterday is gravely in error. Our profuse apologies are tendered to our good friends the newspaper men, to the players, and to the fans generally; and we feel sure that an extra vote of thanks will be tendered to Mr. Wall by Manager McGrath at the next meeting of the B. I. S. team for the exposure of our error—though why the deuce somebody didn't notice it before beats us. Instead, therefore, of the Cubs totalling along after the B. I. S. with 500 per cent, their real average is 400, thus making the Cubs tie with the Wanderers. Our sincere apologies must also be tendered to the Wanderers for calling them the "lowly lizards" of the League in yesterday's column as they are not in this position yet. The protracted spell of warm weather, and the fact that we are a member of the leading Club, must have affected our think-box. These are the only excuses we can offer, and please don't anybody even whisper "Boneshead." In order that no misunderstanding should exist we herewith publish the scores of the series to date:—

Games.	Scores.
Wanderers vs. Red Lions.	7 to 6
B. I. S. vs. Cubs.	4 to 2
Cubs vs. Wanderers.	5 to 3
B. I. S. vs. Red Lions.	7 to 3
Wanderers vs. B. I. S.	22 to 9
Red Lions vs. Cubs.	9 to 7
Red Lions vs. Wanderers.	12 to 1
B. I. S. vs. Cubs.	5 to 0
Cubs vs. Wanderers.	9 to 3

The correct standing and percentages of the teams are therefore as follows:—

P.	W.	L.	T.P.	P.C.
B. I. S.	4	3	1	2	750
Red Lions	4	2	2	2	500
Cubs	5	2	1	1	400
Wanderers	5	2	2	1	400

TUESDAY NIGHT'S GAME.

On Tuesday night the Red Lions and B. I. S. will clash, and the fans are awaiting the outcome of this game with interest for the reason that a win for the Lions ties them with the Irish, with one game each to play, Mr. Stan Callen is treating Carew's injured back muscles and is hoping to have him in topnotch condition when he faces the Hiltz crew. The Lions have two or three aspirants for mound honours, but THE ONE has not yet been definitely decided upon.

FULL AVERAGE.

Tommy Duggan (otherwise known to the fans as "Demón Dug") gave the best batting exhibition ever seen here in the Cubs-Wanderers game on Thursday evening. A triple, a two-bagger, and two singles out of four times at bat make a record to be proud of.

WHO IS IT?

Mr. T. V. Harnnett asks us to state that some time ago he received a letter from the captain of a local baseball team (not in the league) asking for a catcher's protector, but unfortunately lost the letter so does not know who sent it. In any case, Mr. Harnnett says, the letter applicant can have it by calling at any time at the office of the Imperial Tobacco Co., Ltd.

Industrial Workers Meeting Last Night

Wait All Excess Monies Over Pre-War Profits Taken.

There was a large attendance at last night's meeting of the Industrial Workers' Association. The first three sections of the Constitution were passed in their present form. A section was adopted empowering the Association to establish Co-operative Stores, also one to allow the Association to be represented in Parliament and to pay the expenses of its own candidate in the election, was discussed and deferred for further consideration. This is a matter that should be given the most earnest and unbiased thought of every member of this rapidly growing organization. It is a debatable question whether the Association would be stronger as a political body or as it is at present constituted.

The Coal Committee reported that the 200 tons ordered would arrive about the end of next week and would be sold as already arranged.

The following resolution was then read and adopted:—

Whereas, a Bill taxing certain profits has been defeated in the Legislative Council;

Be It Resolved, that this Association strongly urges upon the authorities the advisability of levying a tax on excess war profits, that is, upon the surplus difference between profits made before and since the beginning of the war, every fair allowance being made for reasonable increase of profits such as would in normal times have accrued to investors;

Be It Further Resolved, that this Association is of opinion that the whole of such excess war profits (less the allowances made as aforesaid) should belong to the Colony;

Be It Further Resolved, that this Association will back the People's Chamber in any action it may take upon the lines above indicated, provided always that the law shall make it impossible for parties so taxed to reimburse themselves out of the pockets of the ultimate consumers.

A number of persons present spoke in favor of the resolution and expressed the opinion that professional men and others should be made contribute their share.

Others spoke favorably in support of the Food Control Board.

Thirty new members were enrolled after which the meeting closed.

W. AND A.

To W. J. E.—All baseball averages are made up on the basis of 1900. Thus, if a batter were at bat 4 times and reached first base safely on 4 hits, his average would be 1000 per cent. If he got only 2 hits out of 4 times at bat his average would then 500. To find the average at any time divide the number of times at bat into the number of hits adding three cyphers. When a batter is "walked" he is not credited with a time at bat and it does not count either for or against him in the averages.

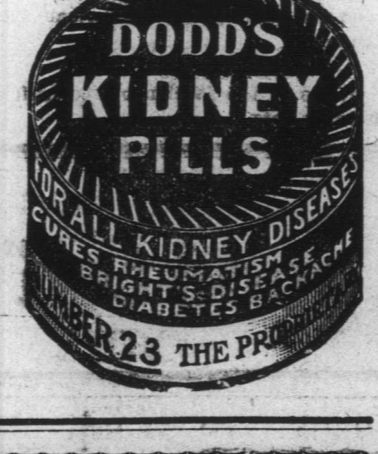

To E. C.—We are unable to state whether Duggan's accidental hit in the Cubs-Wanderers game was a legally hit ball or not. We have endeavoured to find the ruling in Spalding's book but without success. However, Umpire Chesman is searching diligently for it, and as soon as unearthed has promised to give it to us for publication.

GETTING AFTER THE UMPIRE.

Christy Mathewson, the world-famed pitcher, took hold of the Cincinnati team two years ago, and pulled them from the bottom where they had been reeling for years to pennant contenders. He was always noted for his quietness and calmness, as the following goes to show. He recognizes the folly of umpire's snoring, and both himself and his club abide sensibly by the umpire's ruling, and have eliminated all useless and unnecessary crabbing.

In a recent game with the New York Giants, the score was tied with a man on second, when Neale (one of Christy's players) hit a home run. After both men had scored the umpire refused to allow the hit, and sent both men back to their former positions because a stray ball had been returned to the diamond just as Neale walloped out his home run. Matty and his players accepted this costly and unusual ruling without a murmur.

Can you imagine what would have happened to the genial Fred Chesman had such a thing happened in our own little League here.

Best Team Lost—St. Andrew's Aet Sports.

Last evening's football match between the Saints and St. Andrew's resulted in a win for the former by one goal to nil. The score was by no means indicative of the game, as it was generally conceded that the best team lost. During the first half Bartlett, of the Saints, received a kick in the leg and had to retire, a substitute being taken on in his place. The Saints bombarded the Star goal for several minutes, but their luck was against them. During the latter part of the game a peculiar incident occurred. A St. Andrew's man stood in front of an opponent to allow the ball to go "back." Referee Churchill blew the whistle for a penalty kick. This elicited sarcastic plaudits from the spectators and everybody wondered why the Saints were so severely penalized; even their opponents couldn't understand it. However, the St. Andrew's team acted in true sportsmanlike fashion and "carried on." They didn't quit, and their attitude was a revelation to the Star team when it is recalled what happened after a decision by another referee, under similar circumstances at the opening game of the season between the Star and B.I.S.

Three times last evening a Star "back" man was brought up for using violence towards an opponent. This same "high-kicker" was severely reprimanded by the Vice-President of the League at the last game the Star played and was threatened that if he did not discontinue he would be expelled from the field of manly sport. Evidently he forgot the caution last evening and so resumed his tactics that he had to be called to order by another Star player (our friend Billy Duggan). It is a curious coincidence that the "mighty (Capt.) Bill" did not include this in his public epistle yesterday, though, perhaps he will at to-night's meeting of the League when we understand, the withdrawal of the Star team from the League will be strongly recommended.

The players last evening were: Star—Goal, Walsh; backs, Hartley, Kavanaugh; halves, W. Hart, Duggan, Bell; forwards, Sullivan, McGrath, Simms, Williams, B. Hart. Saints—Goal, Mitchell; backs, Heath, Chaney; halves, Elton, Foster, Ewing; forwards, Quick, Bartlett, Gushue, Coutas, Kendrick.

£1,000 Guarantee of Purity on every Bar.

THE "Sunlight" Guarantee of Purity was never more justified than it is to-day, because it enables us to insure the wives of our gallant soldiers and sailors against the drudgery and worry of household cleaning.

Sunlight Soap saves scrubbing—saves scrubbing—saves the clothes. That portion of a wife's allowance which must be devoted to the cleaning of the home is, therefore, absolutely safeguarded when spent on Sunlight Soap.

SUNLIGHT SOAP is made for the housewife's profit for only thereby can the makers hope to profit by Sunlight Soap.

British Bulldog on Top as Third War Year Closes.

With the British Armies in the Field, July 30—To-day Britain is on top. At the close of the third year of the war the British bulldog is no longer on the bottom. The "contemptible little army" which the Kaiser sneered at in 1914 has taken its medicine and, despite the hammering it has received, now has Crown Prince Rupprecht's men rather more than matched.

The first year of the fight the small new army recruited by Lord Kitchener to take the place of the first hundred thousand of the Regular Army, simply caught Hail Columbia. But though their heads were bloodied, they held their own. The second year saw more troops, more guns, more ammunition, but even as late as Loos the Prussian was too strong for the new British army, still lacking as it was in all the machinery of war.

But at the beginning of the third year, England had caught up. For the first time since Armageddon began the British army faced the enemy on fairly equal footing. There were plenty of men and plenty of machinery and with these in hand Sir Douglas Haig, in July, 1916, began the Battle of the Somme.

For two years the Prussians had been preparing the Somme positions and, at the time Sir Douglas began the great adventure, Field Marshal Hindenburg considered the line impregnable. History had never seen anything approaching it. Behind first line trenches, deep and reinforced with concrete and steel, were reserve lines just as deep and just as strong. Machine guns, in betoned emplacements fairly bristled along the first trenches and many more were in hidden pits further back, while every wood and thicket had been turned into impassable entanglements made of special barbed wire as thick as a child's finger with wicked barbs every inch. Concealed turrets of armored plate steel had been sunk in the ground at strategic points, leaving only their revolving tops and gun-muzzles above the level of the earth and in between were redoubts and strong points, labyrinths, tunnels, quadrilaterals and every other device cunning Hindenburg could put into play.

The French and British struck together, the French below the Somme River, the British north of it towards Bapaume, Comblès and Peronne. The British artillery for the first time in the war showed superiority over the German and its continual roll rumbled day and night. Prussian artmen tried to give Prussian gunners the range as they had always done in the past, but now British airmen swooped upon them like enraged hawks and drove them down, or back beyond the lines completely dominating the air. German observation balloons were sent blazing to the earth by British planes, out in sufficient numbers at last. So the enemy's guns were blind.

But the fight was anything but a walk-over for the British and French. The Germans, accustomed to winning, always with every advantage on their side, could not realize that the tide had turned in this, the third year of the war, and from their miraculously strong and well-chosen positions, fought like tigers.

All through August the British drove him back inch by inch up the slopes towards Thiepval, from "Monquet Farm to Pozieres, Devil's Wood, as the South Africans called Delville Wood, was taken literally a foot at a time, and held despite infernal shell-fire. The British would not let go.

In September they got their reward. They had gained to the crest of the deadly ridge and then, with one swoop almost, they captured village after village—Guillemont, Ginchy, Fiers, Martinpuich, Courcellette,

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this. Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid. WASH THE GERMS OUT. The D. D. D. Prescription is a new skin discovery which is becoming famous throughout Newfoundland and Canada. It is a simple wash, compounded as a scientific antiseptic remedy for Eczema, Bad Leg, Ulcers, Sores, Pimples and all skin eruptions. This wash penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done. Don't delay—this wash will cure. Get a bottle of D. D. D. Prescription to-day. Sold everywhere. Recommended by T. McMurdo & Co., A. W. Kennedy, M. Connors, Peter O'Mara

February and March, unable to stick it out under the everlasting hammering, the Kaiser's men fell back, abandoning Bapaume, Peronne and the surrounding country. The German High Command had previously prepared what is known as the Hindenburg Line, Arras to Craonne, via St. Quentin, and counted upon that to hold.

But on April 9th, by a marvellously rapid manoeuvre, Sir Douglas, now Field Marshal Haig, struck at the Arras pivot and broke it, driving in the German line to the "switch" position between Lens and Queant. So was the Spring offensive launched, the first few days netting the British 19,343 prisoners, 257 guns and howitzers, 27 trench mortars and 470 machine guns in addition to many which were destroyed.

Thus the third year of the war has seen the British get the upper hand. They do not claim that Prussia's power is broken, but they do claim to have taken the enemy's measure, won the initiative and made a telling punch for victory.

Your Boys and Girls.

In our training of children we are constantly tempted to contradict ourselves. At one time we appeal to their bravery, we solicit courage for doing this or that, for enduring pain or discomfort. Shortly we have occasion to call upon their fear of injury or disapproval. In the one case we exhort courage and laud it as among the highest of virtues and remind the child of all the heroes we have not yet forgotten. But in a few hours we exhort prudence and remind him of the miserable fate of the fool hardy who did not look twice before they leap. It is not necessary, however, to suppose that courage and caution exclude each other. Fear as a help in training is a double edged weapon. We have learned that obedience based on fear will turn into defiance at the critical point. Parents who rule through a sympathetic understanding and firm hold of the child's needs are far more successful than those who arouse fear.

BOYS and GIRLS!

Did you ever before see so many as are now being shown in our window? They are there by the dozen, the hundred and the gross. They are there in Solid and Hollow, in White and in Colored. They are there at 8c. each, at 10c. each, at 12c. each, at 14c. each, at 20c. each, at 22c. each, at 30c. each, at 35c. each. Beauties, boy, and there are whoppers there at 60c. and 70c. each.

Get yours now, and at the same time see what you think of the Boys' Driving Reins in Black or White Leather, with Nickel Plated Bells. We have Whips too at 6c., and Skipping Ropes at 5c. each.

You girls and boys, see the Toys at

DICKS & CO., Limited.
