WHAT OUR CITY DADDIES HAD TO SAY AND DO.

A Batch of Petitions and Communications Laid Before Them—Miscellaneous Matters—More or Less Interest—The Grangers' Meeting

The city council met yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Mayor Bowell in the chair. Petitions were read from J. McDowell and others, for a reduction in the number of saloon and shop licenses; from C. H. Roy and others, for use of the exhibition grounds on Aug. 1; from J. P. Sullivan, permission to erect a forge; from the ratepayers on Wolsey street, to appoint David Earls inspector of block pavement on saki street; Lionel York, permission to erect a steam engine at the foot of Jarvis street; Col. Otter, requesting $10 for the Ontario Rifle Association; Thos. Delaney, permission to build a steam engine at No. 2 Berkeley street; S. R. Leggett, requesting damages for cellars flooded on Bathurst street; John Hatt and others, referring to proposed block pavement on King street, east of Parliament; Dr. J. A. DeLahouie, J. P. Taylor and Gen. J. H. H. Smith, referring to the position of health officer; Bethune, Moss & Co., solicitors of W. B. Park, rebate on Yonge street avenue removed; Toronto Silver Plate company, for crossing opposite their works; property owners on Yonge street, south of King, opposing construction of street railway on that section.

Communications were read from the manager of the Wholesale Grange Supply company asking the council to extend a public reception to the meeting of the Ontario and provincial granges in Toronto on February next. From the manager of the Northern railroad company acknowledging the appointment of Ald. Piper to their board of directors. From H. Montgomery respecting the condition of the city water.

The following notices of motion were presented: By Ald. Hallam that the property committee be instructed to consider the advisability of erecting a fire hall in St. Lawrence and west of the Don brewery. By Ald. DeVine, that the committee into consideration repairs on Sherbourne into consideration between Queen and King. By Ald. Turner, for improvements on culverts crossing Garrison creek.

The following bill was submitted entitled "An act respecting the city of Toronto," for an act respecting the city of Toronto, for the improvement in drainage and sewerage and the appropriation of certain lands for municipal purposes.

Ald. Baxter raised an objection against sec. 5 of the bill and moved that it be struck out. After considerable discussion in which Ald. Baxter and Turner waxed warm for and against the striking out of the section, the motion was put, and in the exception of one vote, unanimously lost. The bill was read section by section and adopted in toto with one slight amendment.

A bill empowering the city of Toronto to issue corporation bonds was adopted. Also a bill respecting the union of the municipalities of Toronto and Parkdale in the construction of certain roadways.

Moved by Ald. Evans and Mangham, that the commissioner on works and health report to the council at its next regular meeting by whose authority a large quantity of sand has been deposited on St. Andrew's market and by whom deposited. Carried.

Moved by Ald. Hallam and Clarke, that this council accept with pleasure the invitation in the public reception in the parliament buildings in February next. Carried.

Ald. Turner presented a motion that the municipal law should be so amended as to assess those parties who avail themselves of the municipal sewerage system and construct sewers and sidewalks at their own cost, for the repairs thereto whenever such may be necessary.

It is said to be a remedy for all liver, bowels and kidney diseases. All druggists keep and recommend it.

Emeralds at the Grand.
Last evening's extreme cold did not prevent a good audience from assembling at the Grand opera house to witness the Madison Square theatre company's first presentation of the new and charming American play by the popular authors, Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett and Mr. W. H. Gillette. The Emeralds, like much of its authors' excellent literary work, chafes commendably to Canadian taste and interest from the fact that its plot includes both American and French scenes and characters. It is, however, to a great extent a story of domestic infidelity, arising from the impetuous ambition on the part of the mother which is offset by the corresponding weakness on the paternal side of the house. Fair Emeralds, the only child, has fallen in love with a worthy young North Carolinian, but the mother notwithstanding refuses to consent to their union notwithstanding that it is through the shrewdness and timely intervention of her, would-be son-in-law that she is saved from selling out for a nominal sum the old farm with its newly found mine.

A better bargain is made and the Rogers family emigrate to the American paradise where foreign scenes and society fade to erase the memory of a lost love or cure the grief of a breaking heart. Nor had a favored French marquis any better success. Meantime a turn of fortune reverses the financial position of the Rogers and their lately despised young countryman. True to his first love he follows her to Paris, and becomes again the benefactor of the family, and at length the accepted suitor for the hand of the old-time farmer's daughter, Miss Annie Russell, who played the part of the heroine, merits all possible praise. Her acting was simple and natural, and the same may be appropriately said of our old friend, Mr. John E. Owens. His Carolina farmer, like all his impersonations, was realistic to a degree. Mrs. Wilson's Mrs. Rogers was perhaps equally good. Mr. Buckley's Dave Hardy was sympathetic and strong. Indeed where all are so good it is invidious to particularize, but Mr. and Mrs. Charles Walcott (formerly of the Walnut street theatre, Philadelphia) in the characters of the Rogers family emigrate to the American paradise where foreign scenes and society fade to erase the memory of a lost love or cure the grief of a breaking heart. Her acting was simple and natural, and the same may be appropriately said of our old friend, Mr. John E. Owens. His Carolina farmer, like all his impersonations, was realistic to a degree. Mrs. Wilson's Mrs. Rogers was perhaps equally good. Mr. Buckley's Dave Hardy was sympathetic and strong. Indeed where all are so good it is invidious to particularize, but Mr. and Mrs. Charles Walcott (formerly of the Walnut street theatre, Philadelphia) in the characters of the Rogers family emigrate to the American paradise where foreign scenes and society fade to erase the memory of a lost love or cure the grief of a breaking heart. Nor had a favored French marquis any better success. Meantime a turn of fortune reverses the financial position of the Rogers and their lately despised young countryman. True to his first love he follows her to Paris, and becomes again the benefactor of the family, and at length the accepted suitor for the hand of the old-time farmer's daughter, Miss Annie Russell, who played the part of the heroine, merits all possible praise.
