

IMAGE EVALUATION TEST TARGET (MT-3)

Photographic Sciences

23 WEST MAIN STREET WEBSTER, N.Y. 14580 CIHM/ICMH Microfiche Series. CIHM/ICMH Collection de microfiches.

Canadian institute for Historical Microreproductions / Institut canadian de microreproductions historiques

Technical and Bibliographic Notes/Notes techniques et bibliographiques

The to 1

The post of the film

Ori beg the sion oth firs sion or i

The sha TIN whi

Ma diff ent beg right req me

The Institute has attempted to obtain the best original copy available for filming. Features of this copy which may be bibliographically unique, which may after any of the images in the reproduction, or which may significantly change the usual method of filming, are checked below.				qu'il de c poin une mod	L'institut a microfilmé le meilleur exemplaire qu'il lui a été possible de se procurér. Les détails de cet exemplaire qui sont peut-être uniques du point de vue bibliographique, qui peuvent modifier une image reproduite, ou qui peuvent exiger une modification dans la méthode normale de filmage sont indiqués ci-dessous.
·	Coloured cove Couverture de		~	~		Coloured Pages de Covers damag Couverture en				.5.	Pages da Pages en	maged/ dommagé	es .	•
		ed and/or lami staurée et/ou p				Pages res	tored and taurées e	/or lami t/ou pell	nated/ iculées
	Cover title mis Le titre de cou	iaing/ iverture manqu	. ,	,	- 🗸	Pages dis Pages dé	coloured, colorées,	stained tachetée	or foxed/ s ou piqué	es ,
	Coloured maps Cartes géogras		ileur .	9*		Pages des Pages dés
	Coloured ink (i Encre de coule	i.e. other than our (i.e. autre q	blue or black lue bleup ou	k)/ noire)		Showthro Transpare
	Coloured plate Planches et/ou					Quality of Qualité in	print vár égale de i	ies/ 'impress	ion
	Bound with oth Relié avec d'au		ts			Includes a	upplemer I du maté	itary ma riel supp	terial/ · lémentaire
.	Tight binding r along interior r Lare liure serré distorsion le lo	margin/ e peut causer	de l'ombre d			Only editi Seule édit Pages wh	tion dispo : olly or par	nible rtially ob	scured by	errată °
	Blank leaves a appear within have been omi il se peut que lors d'une resti mais, lorsque t pas été filmées	the text. Wher itted from film certaines page suration apper cela était possi	never possibl Ing/ s blanches a alssent dans	o, these joutées le texte,		ensure the Les pages obscurcies	best pos totalement per un fo té filméen	sible ima nt ou per nuillet d'e la nouve	rtiellement errata, und au de faci	pelure.
	Additional com Commentaires		res:					•
. 1	nel Table						- •	•	C
This i	item is filmed a	t the reduction	ratio check	ed below/	laoue.			.9
10X		14X	18X	andre ci-dea	22X		26X		30X '
-			a Company	1		14	5=	12 T		P - 17 - 1
	12X	16X		20X	4	24X		28X		32X

The copy filmed here has been reproduced thanks to the generosity of:

Metropolitan Toronto Library Canadian History Department

The images appearing here are the best quality possible considering the condition and legibility of the original copy and in keeping with the filming contract specifications.

Original copies in printed paper covers are filmed beginning with the front cover and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression, or the back cover when appropriate. All other original copies are filmed beginning on the first page with a printed or illustrated impression, and ending on the last page with a printed or illustrated impression.

The last recorded frame on each microfiche shall contain the symbol → (meaning "CONTINUED"), or the symbol ▼ (meaning "END"), whichever applies.

Maps, plates, charts, etc., may be filmed at different reduction ratios. Those too large to be entirely included in one exposure are filmed beginning in the upper left hand corner, left to right and top to bottom, as many frames as required. The following diagrams illustrate the mathod:

L'exemplaire filmé fut reproduit grâce à la générosité de:

Metropolitan, Toronto Library Canadian History Department

Les images suivantes ont été reproduites avec le plus grand soin, compte tenu de la condition et de la netteté de l'exemplaire filmé, et en conformité avec les conditions du contret de filmage.

Les exemplaires originaux dont la couverture en papier est imprimée sont filmés en commençant par le premier plat et en terminant soit par la dernière page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration, soit par le second plat, seion le cas. Tous les autres exemplaires originaux sont filmés en commençant par la première page qui comporte une empreinte d'impression ou d'illustration et en terminant par la dernière page qui comporte une telle empreinte.

Un des symboles suivants apparaîtra sur la dernière image de chaque microfiche, selon le cas: le symbole → signifie "A SUIVRE", le symbole ▼ signifie "FIN".

Les cartes, planches, tableaux, etc., peuvent être filmés à des taux de réduction différents. Lorsque le document est trop grand pour être reproduit en un seui cliché, il est filmé à partir de l'angie supérieur gauche, de gauche à droite, et de haut en bas, en prenant le nombre d'images nécessaire. Les diagrammes suivants illustrent la méthode.

`1	2	3	1		1
s			-		2
•		٠,	,	•	3

1	2	3
4	5 ,	6

to es du nodifier

er,une

ilmage

pelure, on å

32X

THE

SUBSTANCE

All Marine

GENERAL BURGOYNE'S SPEECHES.

PRICE ONE SHILLING.

The State of the

Speedily will be Published,

Genuine Copy of the PROCEED-INGS of the COURT MARTIAL, held upon Colonel HENLEY of the American Troops, at Cambridge, in the Month of February, 177, upon the Profecution of General PLRGOYNE, for Ill-treatment of the British Troops.

Printed for J. Almon, opposite Burlington-House in Piccadilly. S

EN

MR

N.T.B

A

PRINT

SUBSTANCE

O F

GENERAL BURGOYNE'S SPEECHES,

O N

MR. VYNER'S MOTION,
On the 26th of May;

AND UPON

MR. HARTLEY'S MOTION,

WITH AN

APPENDIX,

CONTAINING,

General Washington's Letter

General Burgoyne.

&c.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR J. ALMON, OPPOSITE BURLINGTON-HOUSE, PICCADILLY. MDCCLXXVIII, EED=

the

pon

ops.

ng-

124182

Ĝ

**

Dal die

:11,0

AVIQUIANT STATE

SPEECH

O F

GENERAL BURGOYNE.

MOTION by Mr. VYNER,

Martis 26° die Maii, 1778.

THAT this house will now resolve itfelf into a committee of the whole house to consider of the state and condition of the army which surrendered themselves on convention at Saratoga, in America;
and also by what means Lieutenant General Burgoyne, who commanded that army, and was included in that convention, was released, and is now returned to England?
Mr. Vyner, in opening the motion, stated some questions to General Burgoyne, which he proposed to ask in the committee.

The motion was seconded by Mr. Wilkes, who also stated further questions in respect to

B

pap ftat

me I r

am

exp

wh

VOI

ord

me

of

fec

fpe

ou

up

pla

an

up

be

fer

fic

an

ju

ar

m

the treaty with the Indians, their conduct during the campaign, and the burning the country.

An amendment was proposed by Mr. Fox to insert, after the word consider, these words of the transactions of the northern army under Lieutenant General Burgoyne, and of "

The motion thus amended, would have run as follows: "That this house will now "resolve itself into a committee of the whole house to consider of the transactions of the northern army under Lieutenant General Burgoyne, and of the state and condition of the said army, &c."

In the course of the debate General Burgopne spoke nearly as follows:

Mr. Speaker, not imagining there would be any motion by the honourable gentleman who spoke first, but that merely a desire of information would be expressed upon certain subjects, I had myself prepared a motion for an address to the king, to have such papers laid before the house, as are now in possession of the secretary of state, and contain an account in detail, much too long for me to give in my place, of every circumstance expressed in the questions of the honourable gentleman. Those

onduct ng the

r. Fox words army ne, and have ll now whole of the deneral

Bur-

would leman fire of certain on for

of the int in my in the

Those papers

papers are of the utmost importance to the state, to parliament, and to the public.

The turn the business has taken precludes me at present from my intended motion; but I rise to give my warmest support to the amendment proposed; and as reasons for the expediency of instituting a full enquiry, to which the amendment points, I shall endeavour, as far as I can do it without breach of order in debate, to give to *both the gentle- *Mr. Vyner men satisfaction upon the particular subjects Wilhes. of their enquiries.

I agree with the honourable gentleman who feconded the motion, that all the conduct refpecting the Indian nations is a matter that ought to be thoroughly canvassed; and I look upon his calling upon me openly, and in my place, as some reparation for the very free, and not very generous comments he made upon my conduct in my absence.

Sir, I ever esteemed the Indian alliances, at best, a necessary evil. I ever believed their services to be over-valued; sometimes insignificant, often barbarous, always capricious; and that the employment of them was only justifiable, when by being united to a regular army, they could bekept under controul, and made subservient to a general system.

Bz

Upon

Upon this principle I heartily concurred with that gallant and humane general, Sir Guy Carleton, in the year 1776, to decline the offers and folicitations of the Indians to be then employed feparately: the impossibility of compleating the preparations for paffing the regular troops over the lakes made it impossible to employ them conjunctively.

In that year, Sir, it was my lot, by delegation from Sir Guy Carleton, who was then at Quebec, to prefide at one of the greatest councils with the Indians that had been held at Montreal. Many gentlemen here know, that the ceremony preceding the taking up the hatchet, is, to offer to the representative of the power they mean to serve, the pipe of war. It was pressed upon me by the chiefs prefent; and it was in my power, by a fingle whif of tobacco, to have given flame and explosion to a dozen nations. I never felt greater satisfaction than in being able to fulfil the instructions I was charged with, for restraining the impetuous passions of these people: it-was a secondary satisfaction, at my return to England in the winter, to justify the conduct of Sir Guy Carleton in this respect, though the justification was very unpopular, among those-I mean not to particularize ministers, minister mong the the colo partial vided finishing principle for carr Canada

ceeded t

foldier,
I four neral C humanisto office from the their tent of number before, a favour ver the chiefs pur upo

man's

campaig

article i

ncurred al, Sir

decline

ians to

possibi-

or paf-

made

hen at

reatest n held

know,

up the

ive of f war.

s pre-

fingle

nd ex-

r felt.

, for these

t my

y the

spect, ular,

arize sters,

vely: lelegaministers, or ministers of ministers—but among those men, who, in their zeal against the colonists, had adopted the reasoning, that partial severity was general mercy," provided by carrying terrors it conduced to sinishing the war. How just so ever this principle may be, my mind is not of a texture for carrying it into effect; and I returned to Canada the following spring, when I succeeded to the command, determined to be the soldier, not the executioner of the state.

I found care had been already taken by General Carleton, upon the same principles of humanity which always direct his conducts to officer the Indians with gentlemen selected from the British troops, upon a distinction of their temper and judgment, as well as upon that of their valour; and in much greater * number than ever was destined to that service before. To these precautions I added that of a favourite priest, who had more controul over the passions of the Indians than all their chiefs put together; and I trust the expence put upon government to engage that gentleman's affiftance through the course of the campaign, will not be esteemed an improper article in my accounts.

Bir

Sir, with these assistances I was able to enforce obedience to the injunctions of my speech at the great council, upon assembling the army, which has been made public. Barbarity was prevented—So much so, that in one instance, two wounded provincial officers were brought off in the midst of sire upon the backs of Indians; and a captain, and his whole detachment, placed in ambuscade, were brought prisoners to my camp by Indians, without a man hurt, though it was evident they were placed for the special purpose of destroying me upon a reconnoitring party, and I was at that time very popular with the Indians.

I could produce many more instances to shew, that every possible exertion of humanity was used; and that the case of Miss Mecree excepted, which was accident, not premeditated cruelty, the stories upon which the honourable gentleman founded his accusation of me, were merely those fabricated by committees, and propagated in news-papers, for temporary purposes. The proclamation, which the honourable gentleman, in my absence treated with so harsh terms, I avow, was penned by myself. The design was to excite obedience, first by encouragement, and next by the dread, not the commission of severity

erpretation of the count of the o far we

fom pu

wish it His nam artifan low in ndians.aving b hany.; h round v atitude, y natu mbitiou e owed he hatch o his ch nisterial : o cast

was ofter

nd, wit

able to enmy speech ng the ar-Barbarity in one infficers were n the backs whole de-

without a they were destroying d I was at dians.

prought

filis Mecree of premedicion of cufation of commits, for temporal absence avow, was as to excite

_ " to

and next

f feverity

o far were the Americans, in their hearts, from putting upon that proclamation the inerpretation that gentleman has done, that it erved to procure me respect and acknowledgment wherever I afterwards travelled through he country.

Sir, a gentleman has been in London great part of the winter, who I wish had been called, o your bar.—It is for the fake of truth only wish it; for he is certainly not my friend. His name is St. Luc le Corne, a distinguished partisan of the French in the last war, and now in the British service as a leader of the ndians.—He owes us indeed fome fervice. aving been formerly instrumental in scalping nany hundred British soldiers upon the very round where, though with a different fort of atitude, he was this year employed. He is v nature, education, and practice, artful, mbitious, and a courtier. To the grudge he owed me for controlling him in the use of the hatchet and scalping knife, it was natural o his character to recommend himself to ministerial favour, by any censure in his power o cast upon an unfashionable general. was often closeted by a noble Lord in my eye", Lord G. ind, with all these disadvantages, as he has not been examined here, I wish the noble lord to inform the house, what this man has prefumed to fay of my conduct with the Indians. I know, in private companies, his language has been, that the Indians might have done great fervices, but they were discharged, Sir, if to restrain them from murder was to discharge them, I take with pride the blame --- They were discharged. That circumstance apart, I should fay that the Indians, and Mr. St. Luc at the head of them, deferted.

not

[*Sir, in regard to the call made upon me by the fame honourable gentleman, for explanation respecting the burning of the country during the progress of the army under my command, I am ignorant of any fuch circumstance; I do not recollect more than one accident by fire; I positively affert there was no fire by order or countenance of myfelf, or any other officer, except at Saratoga. That district is the property of Major General Scuyler of the American troops; there were large barracks built by him, which took fire the day after the army arrived upon the

ground

groun not ft merel made and w likew ing la other perha before the e a larg pass t action fire o I ave fire; perty. to sh cerne Arud hono form fons

was

my I

ed, a

^{*} This part of the speech included between crotchets, was omitted at the time of the preceding and following parts, and delivered feparately upon a fecond call of Mr. Wilkes; but now is inferred in its proper place, as better connecting the whole matter spoke to by General Burgoyac.

e noble lord an has prethe Indians, inguage has done great ed. Sir, if to discharge They were irt, I should Luc at the

the country under my uch circumhan one actithere was of myfelf, atoga. That or General there were ch took fire I upon the n crotchets, was wing parts, and Ir. Wilkes; but connecting the ground in their retreat; and I believe I heed not state any other proof of that matter being merely accident, than that the barracks were then made use of as my hospital, and full of sick and wounded foldiers. General Scuyler had likewife a very good dwelling-house, exceeding large storehouses, great saw-mills, and other out-buildings, to the value altogether perhaps of ten thousand pounds; a few days before the negotiation with General Gates. the enemy had formed a plan to attack me; a large column of troops were approaching to pass the small river, preparatory to a general action, and were entirely covered from the fire of my artillery by those buildings. I avow that I gave the order to fet them on. fire; and in a very short time that whole property, I have described, was confumed. But, to shew that the person most deeply concerned in that calamity, did not put the construction upon it, which it has pleased the honourable gentleman to do, I must inform the house, that one of the first perfons I saw, after the convention was signed, was General Scuyler. I expressed to him my regret at the event which had happened, and the reasons which had occasioned it. He defired me to think no more of it; faid faid that the occasion justified it, according to the principles and rules of war, and he should have done the same upon the same occasion, or words to that effect. He did more---He fent an aid-de-camp to conduct me to Albany, in order, as he expressed, to procure me better quarters than a stranger might be able to find. This gentleman conducted me to a very elegant house, and to my great surprise, presented me to Mrs. Scuyler and her family; and in this general's house I remained during my whole stay at Albany, with a table of more than twenty covers for me and my friends, and every other possible demonstration of hospitality: a situation, painful it is true in point of fensibility at the time, but which I now contemplate with some satisfaction, as carrying undeniable testimony how little I deserved the charges of the honourable gentleman; and I leave it to his feelings, whether after this explanation, fome farther apology is not due to me.

ground

In regard to the first and most material question asked me by the honourable gentleman who proposed the motion, viz. In what situation is the army at Cambridge? It is with some surprize I find that any part of this country is ignorant of the extraordinary cir, cumstances cumf gove of th port niste it pu the with laft han the nob blie und pol WO fpi tio tho pa th de th in

tr

pa

as

rding to e should alion, or -He fent bany, in ne better to find. very elerife, prefamily; d during of more friends. n of hotrue in which I ction, as little I able genwhether. apology

material
e gentlein what
It is
rt of this
mary cir,
mary cir, cumstances that have attended it, as I conceive government must have received intelligence of them some time ago. In regard to the report made by myself, I acquit the king's ministers of any blame in not yet having made it public, because it was so voluminous that the papers could not be digested and copied, with the constant labour of three clerks, before last Saturday, when they were put into the hands of the noble lord fecretary of state for the American department. But I trust that noble lord will now lose no time to make public, matters of fuch importance. Let them undergo the scrutiny of the committee as proposed by the amended motion, and let the world judge, upon their report, whether the spirit of the troops and the honour of the nation have been fustained and vindicated during those transactions. In confidence that these papers cannot possibly be withheld, I refer the honourable gentleman to them for a full delineation and explanation of the state of things at Cambridge, and will rest my present information upon a few material facts. The troops have undergone hardships and trials of patience as severe, though of a different nature, as any they experienced in the conflicts of the campaign. They have acquitted themselves with with equal resolution, temper, and honour. They are at present detained by a resolve of the congress, expressing that there are causes of suspicion that the convention was designed to be broke on our part, and therefore they are justifiable, without breach of public saith, to suspend the embarkation of the troops till the convention is ratified by the court of Great Britain.

In common with various pretences which involved other names in high departments to justify this measure, the congress grounded many suppositions that I knew to be unjust, upon my conduct. I thought it a duty to the state, to the army, and to myself, to refute those suppositions, and still, if possible, to give immediate effect to the convention. It will rest upon the house to judge, when they see the papers, whether I made good that refutation. And that brings me to another question asked by the honourable gentleman: "By what means and upon what condition I am in person here?" Sir, I charged my aid de camp, who carried my dispatch to the congress in answer to their. vote of suspension, which the president had. officially fent me, with a fecond letter to be delivered in case the suspension, after consideration had of my first letter, was continued:

The

The p

for my

of my

for the

accour

a parol

tion be

Lwoul

congre

person

the ref

Sir, Ih

per to

upon a

vate ex

home:

truths,

means,

an affid

the mis

perform

nied my

ral Wa

his char

applicat

public d

shall be my spec honour.

refolve
are cauwas detherefore
f public
te troops
court of

s which ients to ounded unjust, to the te those ve imill reft. ee the tation. alked means nere?" arried their. t had. to be nfideued: The

The purport of this letter was to alk passports for my personal return for the re-establishment of my health, (which was then much affected) for the purpose of settling large and complicated accounts, and other reasons; and I offered to give a parole that should the suspension of embarkation be prolonged beyond the time apprehended, Lwould return to America upon demand of the congress, and due notice given, re-deliver my person into their hands, and abide the fate of the rest of the army with whom I had served. Sir, I had many reasons, not necessary nor proper to be alleged to the congress, founded upon a nearer interest than health or any private expediency, to make me defirous to return home: to lay before government important truths, not to be communicated by other means, and to supply, as far as in me lay, by an affiduous and honest exertion in this house, the misfortune that had disenabled me from performing my duty in the field. I accompanied my letter to the congress by one to General Washington, wherein upon an opinion of his character, I asked him for his support to an application that could not interfere with the public duties of our respective situations. I shall beg leave to read his answer as part of my speech; and I do it, Sir, not only lest in thefe these times of doubt and aspersion, I should incur censure for holding private correspondence with an enemy, but likewise because I think this letter, though from an enemy, does honour to the human heart.

(3)

See the Appendix.]

Sir, the congress readily consented to my application; and by this candid treatment of my enemies, I am here to vindicate my conduct against the false and barbarous interpretations that have arisen and have been suffered to prevail, by those who could have contradicted them, at home.

The honourable gentleman wishes to know what is the difference of numbers of the army between the time of figning the convention, and the present time; and I find the idea of great desertion very much prevails. That some men have deserted, in the worst sense of the word, is true. They are sew, the scum of the regiments, and no loss of real strength. The greater part who have absconded, have had no intention to abandon the service, and if an epithet of honour could at any time be applied to a fault, theirs might be called an honourable desertion.* Some of these

these officer want inabilitrades they law hich their though efforts to joi or Sir some absent

Sir. the h matte their

hundi

been meant of concept outly the upon a chively honour justifying fain fue be an in the concept.

mand o

^{*} General Burgoyne took occasion in two subsequent debates to explain his meaning in this phrase, which he found had been

, I should corresponbecause I nemy, does eatment of dicate my rous intere been sufd have con-

of the army convention, and the idea prevails. The worst y are few, and no loss twho have to abandon could theirs might lequent debates he found had been these men left letters or sent messages to their officers, informing them that in their present want of necessaries and comforts, and their inability to serve in arms, they had taken to trades and day labour in the country, but that they held themselves under an obligation from which they would never depart, to return to their regiments whenever the time of embarkation was afcertained; others, upon a highthough a mistaken suggestion of spirit, made effortsto effectuates passage through the woods, to join the armies under Sir William Howe or Sir Henry Clinton, and it is believed that some of them succeeded. The whole of the absentees may amount to between five and fix hundred men.

Sir, I have thus far endeavoured to give the honourable gentlemen fatisfaction in the matters that feem most immediately to engage their attention, and that I could consistently been misunderstood both within and without the house. 'He meant to apply the word benearable only to the common soldier's conception, who unused to consider and discriminate punctiliously the obligations of conventions with an enemy, acted only upon the principles of zeal to serve his king, and again to be actively employed in arms; that therefore their conduct was honourably intended, though misconceived. That so far from justifying that conception himself, he was persuaded that to retain such deserters when demanded, or indeed discovered, would be an infringement of the convention, and he was persuaded Sir William Howe or Sir Henry Cliaton would, upon such demand or discovery, return them.

with

with order adduce in argument to support my vote for a more general enquiry.

I shall now proceed, (as yet stronger reasons for agreeing with the amendment,) to take notice of what has hitherto passed in the house, and upon very impersect information, respecting other parts of the late campaign.

But, Sir, accustomed as I have been to be indulged by the house upon every occasion; and confident, as I ought to be, upon one where their indulgence is justice, I find cause in my own mind, in entering upon so complicated a subject, to implore anew, the sullest scope to their patience and candour, for a man, whose faculties, far too weak for such shocks, are almost unhinged by a succession of difficulties abroad; that fall to the lot of sew, and whose disappointments and anxieties have been consummated, by the unexpected reception he has met at home.

And this address, Sir, is the more necessary, because I stand here unconnected and massisted. I am ignorant who would have supported my own motion, had I made it, though consident from a prepossession of its propriety it would have found affistance somewhere. Neither courting nor searing power, neither courting nor searing party, I stand here upon the sole basis in pr

tuted volve retur have to ob collec occasi that tion duties my ments tion a have proce fition but i fifted there the ac

Sir the H others which

tion o

o support

eftronger dment,) to led in the fullest our, for a weak for by a fucall to the

nents and by the un-

necessary, unassisted, ported my consident

v it would Neither

n the fole

basis

basis of truth and honour, and only ask support in proportion to the justice of my cause.

During my ablence an enquiry was inftituted, in which my name was very much involved. In the short space of time since my return, and in the agitated state of mind I have mentioned, it has been impossible for me to obtain from the mere conversation and recollection of friends, all that passed upon that occasion: but I have collected enough to know that I have been treated with great attention in general, and it is among my first duties to return to every quarter of the house my very fincere and grateful acknowledg-I also know, that with all that attention and favour, much implied centure must have fallen upon me, from the nature of the proceedings, and more especially from the pofition, which I cannot admit to be a true one, but which I understand has been much infifted upon, "That where there is miscarriage there must be blame; and consequently, that the acquittal of one man infers the condemnation of another."

Sir, the papers which have been laid before the House are in some respects desicient and in others superfluous. The first superfluity to which I allude is a private letter from me to

th

the noble Lord, acquainting him with my intention of going to Bath; of my audience with the King; of my folicitation to his Majesty for active employment the next campaign; expressing my hopes of his Lordship's patronage in that purfuit, and concluding with fuch acknowledgments and professions as were natural to flow from a warm and unfuspicious heart impressed with a sense of another's favour.

Not conceiving for what possible public purpose this letter was produced, I can only attend to the effects it has had to prejudice me Suspicions have been excited, personally. that at the time I wrote that letter I was courting command, and by adulatory means, in preference and in prejudice to Sir Guy Carleton under whom I had had the honour to ferve, a confidential fecond, the preceding campaign. Every person in government might have pronounced my acquittal of fo base a proceeding, because they knew, though the public did not, that it was decided * in the Autumn of 1776,

* This decision was made, not only upon the expediency of the governor attending the civil duties of the province, which were thought at that time to require particular attention, but alfo upon doubts whether the general's commission authorised him to act beyond the boundaries: and this whole transaction passed long before the return of General Burgoyne to England, and entirely without his knowledge. and

and n

that h

boun

not o

becau

dices

but l

mine every

to m

friend

have

corre

that pedit

expr

ity,

ton

in n

paig 1 7

wer

In t

und

wer

dire

tion

(po

[19]

and notified to Sir Guy Carleton accordingly, that his military command was confined to the boundaries of the province of Quebec. It did not occur to the noble Lord to state that fact, because doubtless he did not foresee the prejudices the letter would occasion; but I cannot but lament he did not produce her letters of mine, which would have rem ed effectually every possible suspicion of a de n so foreign to my heart as that of supplanting a gallant friend. Such letters would at e same time have rendered unnecessary the long train of correspondence laid upon your table, to shew that the preparations in Canada were duly expedited; because I should have been found to express the fullest sense of the zeal, the assiduity, and the honour with which Sir Guy Carleton acted, notwithstanding his disappointment in not being employed to conduct the camat the execution of a far anging

Will it be faid, that the letters I allude to were withheld because they were private?—
In the first place they do not properly come under that description, though it is true they were not office letters.—They could not be directed as such, because acting in subordination to Sir Guy Carleton, the official correspondence could only with decorum pass D 2

and

h my in-

ience with

s Majesty

ampaign;

ip's patro-

with fuch

were natu-

fuspicious

other's fa-

ble public

can only

ejudice me

n excited.

was court-

means, in

y Carleton

to ferve, a

campaign.

t have pro-

proceeding.

olic did not.

n of 1776.

e expediency of

province, which

ar attention, but

iffion authorised

whole transaction

through him; but they were not private as applied to fecrefy, nor improper as they related to the distinct and separate object of the command I was entering upon. But, Sir, had any parts of these letters (or of any others necessary to my justification, of which I say there are many) been private in any fense of the word, will that excuse be alleged for detaining them, when there has appeared before you a paper of the most secret nature, I mean my thoughts upon conducting the war from the What officer will venture fide of Canada. hereafter to give his opinion upon measures or men, when called upon by a minister, if his confidence, his reasonings, and his preferences are thus to be invidiously exposed; to create iealousies and differences among his fellowofficers, and at last to put an imposition upon the world, and make him responsible for the plan as well as the execution of a hazardous. campaign? The plan, as originally drawn, I have no reason to be ashamed of, because it underwent the inspection, and had the sanction of some of the first and ablest officers of this country; but the plan, as it stood when my orders were framed, can with no more propriety be called mine, than any others formed by the cabinet for the distant parts of America,

Lord the fee act ag power feen in the for -Wi was m change nister been c unpre propor one or bany, be no perem has bee credite at the called tated b pose m Surely

der it;

him,--

or any

had no

e as aprelated e comir, had hers ne-I fay se of the etaining e you a lean my rom the venture fures or , if his ferences o create fellowon upon for the zardous rawn, I cause it fanction of this hen my re proformed merica, or any other quarter of the globe where I had no participation or concern.—The noble Lord well knows, that the idea expressed in the secret paper laid before you of a latitude to act against New-England, was erased; that a power to embark the troops in case of unforefeen impediments, and make the junction with the fouthern army by sea, was not admitted. -Will it then be infinuated, that the plan was mine?-Why was it not produced in that changed and garbled state, by which the minister made it his own? Because it would have been one proof, if one had been wanting to unprejudiced minds, that by cutting off every proposed latitude, and confining the plan to one only object, the forcing a passage to Albany, the orders framed upon that plan could be no otherwise understood, than as positive, peremptory, and indispensible. But, Sir, it has been boldly infinuated, and perhaps even credited by some in this house, that the words at the latter end of the orders, which are called the faving clause, were specially dictated by me .- Sir, to suppose that, is to suppose me an ideot !--- Saving clause--- to whom ? Surely, not to the General who was to act under it ; --- for see the situation in which it puts him,---Under the words " you are to act as " exigencies

" exigencies may require," let us suppose him to takethe cautious part. He makes no attempt upon the enemy, because his enigency was fuch, that in doing so he must abandon his communications and risk his retreat. What would the government, the army, and the country have faid to him . What ought every man to have faid to him who read the prior part of this order? " Is this vigorous exertion? Is this to forte your way to Albany. The enemy " were panic struck before British troops; " there numbers therefore were but as sha-The loyalists awaited your advance to join by thousands-Sir H. Clinton was " ready to move upon the lower part of Hudfon's river Your interpretation of orders was nonfense; your inactivity was cowardice You have ignominiously lost the campaign."

Take the confideration the other way—
The general follows the principle, the spirit, and the letter of his order—fights his ground by inches, and miscarries. "You shall be disgraced for your rashness," says the minister—"You had a reserve and should have made use of it. Exigencies required that you should have remained on the east side the Hudson's river." Sir, to imagine a general gener felf i fters them the ed of the what not f clauf has b How read

> myse by a it w find viz. strat Rive of n men agai gent soev

> > and

Wei

the a

general could dictate fuch a dilemma for himfelf is prepofterous. To believe that minifters could mean it, is levere credulity against them; it would be to believe them capable of the equivocation of a fiend, to infure the ruin . of those who acted under their direction whatever part they should take. I charge them not fo heavily. I am perfuaded that faving clause was meant when it was penned, as it has been understood by me, by Sir William Howe, and by every other person who has read it, as referring folely to exigencies after the arrival of my army at Albany.

But, Sir, this ideal blame in not availing myself of the faving clause, has been supported by a flory, that I should hardly have believed it within malevolence to invent, but which I find has been propagated with great industry, viz. that Generals Philips and Frazer remonstrated against the passage of the Hudson's River; and that finding their remonstrances of no avail, they took the parts of brave men in despair, and persevered in their duty against their reason. Upon the honor of a gentleman, without any faving or refervation foever, I pronounce that report to be a direct and abominable falsehood. Sir, those officers were the eyes and the hands by which I conducted

y loft the waythe spirit, his ground I shall be s the miould have juired that e east side imagine a general

fuppose

e makes

ause his

fo he

and risk

ernment,

faid to

to have

t of this

Is this

he enemy

troops;

as sha-

r advance

nton was

t of Hud-

of orders

was co-

ducted all material operations: more able advisers, or more faithful friends, never existed: that they faw I was placed in an arduous fituation, and felt for my difficulties, it is true; but that they ever dropt a fyllable that implied an idea that I had an alternative, I flatly deny. The indefatigable alacrity of General Philips to bring forward the transports preparatory to the passage of the river, was uncommon even in support of a favourite object; it would have been uncommon indeed, had he afted with fecret reluctancy! As to General Frazer, our communications were those of the most unreserved friendship; and it is my pride to affirm, that the consonancy of his fentiments with mine were almost invariable. Upon the passage of the Hudson's River, in particular, he thought it of uncontrovertible expediency; he thought it glorious danger; he was consulted upon all measures at the time and subsequent to it; he bore an active part in many; he approved of all; and the laft sentence he uttered, was a message of affection and good wishes to me.

The other fallehoods that have been difperfed respecting the same period of time, can hardly be urged as reasons for enquiry, for they are below resultation; such as the delays occasioned occafi lery, a te was nisteri was v was fe remai the e pected That Philip tion; fidera powe. new posts the a of th drew were we h indiff provi

by he empl

to th

occasioned by carrying forward all the artillery, and a cumberous train of baggage-" It was a merit of Eastern pomp," fays a ministerial news-writer. That all the artillery was with the army is falle, for the heavy train was fent back to Canada: the field-train which remained was that which had been deflined for the expedition, when Sir Guy Carleton expected to have the conduct of it in person. That intelligent and judicious officer, General Philips, had been confulted upon the proportion; and it had been regulated upon the confideration of the nature of the war; the power of that arm in forcing posts, and against new troops; and the probability of having posts ourselves to fortify. Neither, Sir, was the artillery, in the proportion carried, cause of the least delay; because the horses that drew it were supernumerary to those which were sufficient for all the carts and waggons we had; and confequently within the time indispensibly given for the transport of the provision, the artillery was brought forward by horses that could have been no otherways employed.

The supposed quantity of baggage is equally erroneous. I cannot suffer an idea so unjust, to the spirit of the army, to remain upon the minds

 ${f E}$

ole adcifted: is fitus true; mplied deny.

Philips tory to n even would e acted of the of the y pride s fenti-

Upon particuible exger; he

he time ive part the last affection me, can uiry, for ne delays ccafioned minds of the public. All baggage of bulk, to the abridgment of many material comforts, had been chearfully left behind by the officers; some of them had not beds; many lay in foldier's tents; and I know of none that had more then the common necessaries for active fervice.

It must be total want of knowledge of the country and the war, to suppose that, with all these precautions, the train of carriages did not still remain great. It is to be confidered, there was a train of fix hundred carriages; and those too few for the indispensible purpose of transporting provision, where there was no water carriage; there was another train of very cumberous carriages, equally neceffary for the transport of the boats, where the rapids prevented their passage in the stream : a transport, in some places, of many miles in in length. Sir, it would be trifling with the house to dwell longer upon these censures, the offspring of malice and ignorance; the prevalence of such reports tends to one use---It will perfuade the world, at least, that material faults could not abound, when detraction itself is reduced to have recourse to such accusation.

Sir, reverting therefore to the more groß injuries my reputation has sustained, I think I rior of marcais & high have

hav

ract

bro

that

upo

wh hin

WO

un

del

of

the

fti

in

tr

be

th

lia

fu

0

C

bulk,

mforts,

fficers;

lay in

nat had

active

of the

t, with

arriages

be con-

red car-

[penfible

ere there

another

ially ne-

where

fream .

miles in

with the

fures, the

he preva-

--- It will

material

tion itself

ceusation.

iore gross

I think I

have

have stated enough to shew, that the character of a member has been unavoidably brought into question, and upon his affertion that the information the House has proceeded upon, is incomplete and fallacious, I know not what description of men could justly refuse to him personally a new and full enquiry.

I would ask of ministers themselves, what would be their feelings, if, after an unfuccessful undertaking of high trust and importance, and debarred, by an interdiction, from the presence of their Sovereign, the means of submitting their conduct to that royal breast, where justice, and benevolence, and protection to the innocent are ever to be expected, except when truth is perverted or concealed-what would be their feelings if refused also an appeal to their country? To my brother-officers in parliament I would more particularly apply for support to this amendment, as a common cause of the profession: they will consider the discouragement that must ensue, and the injury the service must suffer, if an officer, who is conscious to have done his best, whose greatest enemies pretend not to impute to him any other charges than excess of zeal and erroneous judgment, and even these charges founded upon a mutilated state of facts-What. E 2 1

What is the state of officers, if upon such grounds, and by the aftful management of other circumstances, they are diffraced at court, put by, if not inevitably precluded the judgment of a military tribunal, and at last denied the only possible means of justification that remains—a parliamentary investigation of a measure of state with which the rectitude or criminality of their conduct is inseparably blended? To my honourable friends who made the original motion early in the winter, and all who took part in it, I may yet more strenuously address myself, to repair, by the passing this question and amendment, the injury that unintentionally they brought upon me by the then confined mode of proceeding. To all these considerations, Sir, I could join, were it expedient, many more perfualive calls upon the human heart, to take up this proceeding for the fake of an injured individual: but I wave an appeal to private fentiments, and defire the motion to be confidered as a call upon the public duty of the house; and, divesting myself, as far as possible, of every perfonal motive; scorning the pitiful contention, for such comparatively it would be, whether the minister should exonerate himself from this error in his instruction, or the general from

from the place a and de the ca army

It is the time iftence exertion addition that for action and most the truth if the

if

Manl

rifed (for l neral and difcit

were

fuch other

judg-

denied

of a ide or

arably

who

vinter,

more

by the

he in-

upon

eding.

i join,

e calls

is pro-

idual:

ts, and

a call

d, di-

ry per-

ention,

hether

general

from

from that in his execution; I here in my place as a representative of the nation, require and demand a full and impartial enquiry into the causes of the miscarriage of the northern army in an expedition from Canada.

It is a great national object. The crisis of the time emphatically requires it. The existence of the British empire depends upon the exertions of the military, and the best soundation for public spirit, is public justice. In addition to the natural animation which as Britons the army possess, place before their eyes that secondary spring and controller of human actions, reward and punishment. Let the first and most glorious reward, the honest applause of the country be obtained by a scrutiny into truth for those who deserveit; on the contrary, if there has been delinquency, let the spirit of Manlius preside in the punishment.

"The hand of fate is over us, and heaven

" Exacts severity from all our thoughts."

If there has been disobedience; if unauthorised by circumstances, if uncompelled by orders (for I will never shrink from that plea) a general has rashly advanced upon the enemy, and engaged against insurmountable odds, the discipline of the state should strike, though it were a favourite son,

I, Listor

. I, Lictor, deliga ad palum."

These, Sir, are the means to excite true ambition in your leaders, these are the means to keep them in due restraint; this was the system of the glorious patriot, whose obsequies you now celebrate, and could his ashes awaken, they would burst their cearments to support it.

As for myself, if I am guilty, I fear I am deeply guilty: an army lost! the fanguine expectation of the kingdom disappointed! a foreign war caused, or the commencement of it accelerated! an effusion of as brave blood as ever run in British veins shed, and the severest family diffresses combined with public calamity.-If this mass of miseries be indeed the consequence of my misconduct, vain will be the extenuation I can plead of my personal sufferings, fatigue and hardship, laborious days and fleepless nights, ill health and trying situations; poor and insufficient will be such atonement in the judgment of my country, or perhaps in the eyes of God-yet with this dreadful alternative in view, I provoke a trial-Give me inquiry-I put the interests that hang most emphatically by the heart-strings of manmy fortune-my honour-my head-I had almost said my salvation, upon the test.

But, Sir, it is confolation to me to think that culpritral who viour a to the calamic honour answer refusal > fignat reach; every drop ftand

ignom

count

Sin I me the t of the have

furre

ftor ftan men

only

Ith

cite true

ie means

was the

obsequies

awaken,

ipport it.

fear I am

guine ex-

d! a fo-

ement of

blood as

e severest

ic calami-

d the con-

ill be the nal fuffer-

days and

lituations;

atonement

perhaps in

dful alter-

-Give me

hang most

of man-

ad-I had

e to think

that

teft.

that I shall be, even in surmise, the only culprit-Whatever fate may attend the general who led the army to Saratoga, their behaviour at that memorable fpot must entitle them to the thanks of their country—Sir, it was a calamitous, it was an awful, but it was an honourable hour - During the suspence of the answer from the general of the enemy, to the refusal made by me of complying with the ignominious conditions he had proposed, the countenance of the troops beggars description -a patient fortitude; a fort of stern refignation, that no pencil or language can reach, fat on every brow. I am confident every breast was prepared to devote its last drop of blood rather than fuffer a precedent to stand upon the British annals of an ignoble furrender.

Sir, an important subject of enquiry, as I mentioned at my out-set, still remainsthe transactions at Cambridge, and the cause of the detention of the troops. If I there have been guilty, let me there also be the only sufferer.

Sir, there is a famous story in antient hiftory, that bears some analogy to my circumfrances; and when allusions tend to excite men's minds to exertions of virtue or policy, I shall never think them pedantic or misplaced.* The event I mean happened in an age when Roman virtue was at its height. was that wherein Manlius devoted his fon and the first Decius devoted himself. A Roman army, thut up by the Samnites at Candium, were obliged to furrender their arms, and to fubmit to the more ignominious condition of paffing under the yoke of the enemy. The conful who had commanded them, proposed in the fenate, to break the treaty whereby the army was lost to the state, and to make him in person the expiation, by sending him bound to the enemy to fuffer death at their In one point of view the prefent case extremely differs from the example, because by the treaty at Saratoga the army was faved to the state. It is the non-compliance with public faith that alone can lofe it and here the parallel will hold; if I have been instrumental to the loss of those brave troops fince the treaty, I am as culpable as if I had lost them by the treaty, and ought to be the facrifice to redeem them. Sir, this reference may appear vain-glorious. It may be doubted whether there exists in these times public spirit

fpirit perh

othe

muf

ftati

of

least

than

whi

upo

curr

fpol

Dri

-13

10

It had been mentioned in a former debate, that references to ancient history carried fometimes an air of pedantry and were feldom of use.

fpirit seriously to emulate such examples., I perhaps should find myself unequal; but others, who are most ready to judge me so, must at least give credit to one motive for stating the parallel—that I am too conscious of innocence to apprehend there is the least risk of being exposed to the trial.

Sir, I have only to return my fincerest thanks to the house for the patience with which they have endured to long a trespass upon their time, and to join my hearty concurrence with the other gentlemen who have spoken in favour of the amendment.

ways not ability and the

-inear the entire to F good than and the foris-author out the form the first out In a second of the first behind the authorized that

TILL

fpirit

in an

ht. It

on and

Roman

ndium,

and to

tion of

The

roposed

hereby

make

ng him

prefent

ny was

apliance
and ocen introops

f I had

be the

eference

doubt-

public

references lantry, and Jovis, 28°. die Maii, 1778.

VR. Hartley moved, "That an humble address be presented to his majesty to entreat his majesty, that he will be graciously pleased not to prorogue the parliament; but that he will suffer them to continue sitting, for the purpose of affifting and forwarding the measures already taken for the restoration of peace in America; and that they may be in readiness, in the present critical situation and prospect of public affairs, to provide for every important event at the earliest notice."

Sir George Savile seconded the motion. No person offering to answer, the Speaker was proceeding to put the question. General Burgoyne applied to the treasury-bench, to know whether the king's servants meant to agree to the motion? In which case he said he should give the house no trouble: that otherwise he thought hemself pledged to deliver his fentiments. The call was, "Go on;" and General Burgoyne proceeded in substance as follows:

me ext

to ma ar

to

an

ba

Mr. Speaker, I shall not pursue the argument of the honourable gentleman, upon the expediency of parliament being ready fitting to deliberate upon the first intelligence that may arrive from your commissioners; that argument has already been too ably enforced to require a second: neither, Sir, after so long. an indulgence as I received in a former debate, shall I again press upon the attention of the house the debt they owe to national juflice and policy, upon the subject of enquiry: though the Generals Howe and Carleton may be expected every day; and it was upon their absence alone, that the greater part of the house seemed disposed to postpone so important and necessary a duty. But, Sir, I shall rest solely upon a view of the present state of this country, as univerfally compulfive upon the understanding, in favour of the measure proposed. While an enemy is prepared upon the neighbouring coast, and perhaps is at this hour embarking, diffidence, despondency, and consternation, are evident among great part of the people. A more fatal symptom prevails among a greater part; a torpid indifference to our impending fate. Men dare not, or will not, look into their desperate circum-God grant that general panic be not 1 2

er was al Buro know
agree
should

mble

ty to

oufly

; but

g, for

g the

ion of

be in

n and

r eve-

n. No

wise he

d Gene-

Mr.

the refult of all these demonstrations! for panic is incident, upon some occasions, to those who have been most distinguished for bravery upon others.

The falvation of the country depends upon the confidence of the people in some part of government. The ministry have it not; the whole nation fee, or think they fee, their infufficiency. I mean not to apply these words grossly or virulently; there are among them many to whole personal qualities and talents I bear respect, and to none more than the noble lord in the blue ribband. But talents are relative to times; and it is no reproach to fay, that men well qualified for negotiation, finance, or the finooth current of government, may be totally unfit for their stations. when the crisis requires instant resource, decifive counsel, animating action. That these are notoriously wanting, the best friends of the ministers shake their heads and confess. Is there a man of common sense and common spirit in the country, that does not stand confounded and aghaft at the late supineness? that does not think the heralds ought to have accompanied your coach, Sir, when you carried up the address of the commons; and that the declaration of war at St. James's gate should have accompanied panied tient. Spain in our mity weakn fliction the habut po vocati

Patier And It

fult th

the m

action garri who in the

ly/in -brou flicts

thui a

for

, to

l for

upon

rt of

the

r in-

vords

them

lents the

lents

ch to

tion.

vern-

ions.

deci-

thefo

ds of

. Is

fpirit

inded

s not

anied

ldress

on of

com-

anied ...

panied the answer from the throne? "Be patient," we are told; "France may repent; Spain yet speaks us fair, "—Sir, to be patient in our situation is to be abject: our pusillanimity gives tenfold encrease to our natural weakness. Patience in private life, under affliction or disease, the strokes of fortune, or the hand of heaven, is a virtue of lovely hue; but political enduring—tamely to suffer provocation and injury,—the most wanton insult that ever was offered to a nation,—I mean the message of the French ambassador:

Patience, thou young and role-lipp'd cherubin,
And there look grim as hell.

It will be difficult to those who are most conversant in history, and accurate in observation, to point out examples, where, after an alarm, the spirits of men have revived by inaction. This nation is put into the state of a garrison, whose out-posts are abandoned, whose sallies are stopt, and who are to combat in the body of the place for their last stake. I do not say, that men have not fought desperately in such situations; but then they have been brought to extremity by a progression of constitutions, and have seen great examples to raise and stimulate stimulate their public passions. I know of no great exertions, where the governing countels have thewn apprehention and terror, and confequent confusion at the outset. The success of vigorous measures to restore an army after a panic, is almost invariable; ancient history abounds with examples; in our own time, they are frequent. When General Romanzoff found the Ruffians impressed with apprehensions of the Turkish cavalry, his first meafure was to lay afide the use of chevaux de frize, and to encamp without entrenchments. The revival of the general spirit of a state depends upon the same principles. We need not look abroad for examples; we have a more striking one at home than foreign annals can produce, in that immortal year, 1756; the commencement of the Earl of Chatham's administration. The most glorious tribute we can pay to his memory, is to follow his ex-Let ministers visit his remains, while yet above ground, and catch wisdom, and vigour, and virtue from the view. Did he keep fleets at Spithead to prevent invalion? Did he fear to trust the internal defence of the nation to her own fons? No, Sir, your navy was employed in offensive operation in every quarter of the globe; and the nation, supported by a just a just co the dif fians the every re

We Spithe vasion His fh on the gratify fecond fave th miral the b comn needs vouri exect ftate fifted to be with may S

min deq

20 '

a just confidence, were ten times stronger after the dismission of the Hanoverians and Hessians than before Every ship became a fleet, every regiment selt itself an host.

v of no

counfels

d confe-

uccess of

after a

vn time,

Roman-

th appre-

first mea-

evaux de

ichments.

state de-

e need not

e a more

nnals can

756, the

ham's ad-

ribute we wishis ex-

ins, while

n, and vi-

hid he keep

the nation

navy was

very quar-

pported by

a just

We have now a brave admiral riding at Spithead, who knows the way to prevent invalion by fleeking the enemy at a distance, His share of glory in the defeat of Conflans is on the minds of his followers; you cannot gratify him or them more than to give them a fecond occasion, and by the same means, to. fave their country. The brother of that admiral, a member of this house, bred also in Repol. the best schools of his profession, is second in command on shore, and second to one who needs no other praise than that he was the favourite; + and the friend, and the confidential + Lord Aexecutor of the arduous plans of the great statesman I alluded to .- Let these men be affifted with national spirit, and England is not to be subdued, while a river or a hill remains; without fuch spirit, another battle of Hastings may make another conquest, whis memoring a Sir, I repeat that the best hope of generat-

Sir, I repeat that the best hope on generaling and diffusing this genuine strength of the mind, to which arms and treasure are but inadequate substitutes, depends upon the presence of parliament, sto provide (according to the words

be

the

tru

ten

pre

for

tha

to-

the

ne

an

no

CO

rel

po

pli

H

CX

I

ſp

of

CC

g

re

m

W

words of the motion) for every important event at the earliest notice," To strengthen. the crown, not by adulatory addresses, but by fuch occasional fanctions, as would give fresh and extra-energy to its power, pending the emergency that might require it: To support public credit, in union with the city of London, not only by common engagements of faith, but by acts of quick and encouraging efficacy towards individuals, who might nobly risk their all in the cause: but above all, in full numbers and by general continuance, to exhibit themselves to the world a true representative of a determined people attacked in their vitals; --- to prove that they are not to be seduced from their duty by the allurements of pleasure or personal interest, but have fortitude to await the approach of the enemy, as the Gauls were awaited by the fenators in Rome; and, if need were, to receive death in these seats, to give example and fire to their furviving countrymen. Sir, a parliament, thus inspired, (the occasion, I believe in my conscience, would give the inspiration) would spread immediate and extensive veneration and influence. Faction in this great city, if faction, there is, would be no more: majorities and minorities here would shrow

200

nportant

engthen .

fles, but

uld give

pend-

uire it:

with the

engage-

and en-

ls, who

use: but

eral con-

world a

cople at-

they are

the al-

intereft.

roach of

aited by

were, to

example

en Jo Sire

on, I be-

he infpi-

extensive

oin this

ld be no

ne would

be lost in unanimity for the public safety;—
the King's name, thus supported would be in truth a tower of strength; and the daring attempts of the enemy would only tend to the present glory and suture stability of the state.

Sir, these are my sincere sentiments; and for this free delivery of them, I doubt not that I shall read in the morning papers of to-morrow that I have thrown myself into the arms of opposition. I am conscious I never did fo true a service to the king and to the country as I do in the part I now take; and whatever may be the idle comments of the day, I trust that with the respectable part of the public, if the term opposition is to imply blame, it will be applicable only to the rejection of this motion. If the king's ministers take the lead, and exercise their persuasion for that purpose; I hold them to be opposers of national spirit, opposers of public virtue, opposers of the most efficacious means to save their country. Sir, I scorn to take up this language upon so pitiful a motive as personal resentment. Government, whoever are the ministers to conduct it, shall have my voice when my conscience directs it. think myself a persecuted man, I avow. that that I am a marked victim to bear the fins that do not belong to me, I apprehend; but this is not the first time I have stood the frowns of power for parliamentary conduct; and whatever further vengeance may be in ftore for me, I hope I shall endure it as becomes me. I am aware that in far better times officers have been stript of their preferments for relifting the polleflors of that bench.—They cannot take from me an humble competence; they cannot deprive me of a qualification to fit here; they cannot frip me, I trust they cannot, of the confidence of min conflituents to feat me here; they cannot flrap me I am fure they cannot of principle and spirit to do my duty here.

1 never was more excited by these motives, and I never can be more than upon the present occasion to give my vote in support of the motion.

APPEN.

APPENDIX

Copy of a Letter from General Washington to Lieutenant General Burgoyne.

Head-Quarters, Pensylvania, March 11th, 1778.

SIR,

fins

; but I the luct; be in

s be-

better pre-

that

of a

p me,

f me

prin-

mo+

upon

te in

I Was, only two days fince, honoured with your very obliging letter of the 11th of February.

Your indulgent opinion of my character, and the polite terms in which you are pleased to express it, are peculiarly flattering; and I take pleasure in the opportunity you have afforded me of assuring you, that, far from suffering the views of national opposition to be imbittered and debased by personal animosity, I am ever ready to do justice to the merit of the gentleman and the soldier; and to esteem, where esteem is due, however the idea of a public enemy may interpose. You will not think it the language of unmeaning ceremony, if I add, that sentiments of personal respect, in the present instance, are reciprocal.

APPENDIX.

Viewing you in the light of an officer contending against what I conceive to be the rights of my country, the reverse of fortune you experienced in the field cannot be unacceptable to me; but, abstracted from considerations of national advantage, I can sincerely sympathize with your feelings, as a soldier, the unavoidable difficulties of whose situation forbid his success; and as a man, whose lot combines the calamity of ill health, the anxieties of captivity, and the painful sensibility for a reputation, exposed, where he most values it, to the assaults of malice and detraction.

As your aid de camp went directly on to Congress, the business of your letter to me had been decided before it came to hand. I am happy that their chearful acquiescence with your request, prevented the necessity of my intervention. And, withing you a fate and agreeable passage, with a perfect restoration of your health.

I have the honour to be, Very respectfully,

Your most obedient servant, GEO. WASHINGTON.

valencia establica establi

Sin a ted, gress It is any cerne prior with cepting his f the duction tish cont fact

It

by T

the

APPENDIX.

NOTE, respecting the First Debate.

SINGE the substance of the speech has been prepared for the press, it has been observed, in a daily paper, that General Burgoyne stated, that it had been a race between the Conferes and him, to engage the Indian nations. It is a mistake, that General Burgoyne made any mention of himself being any ways concerned in any negotiations with the Indians, prior to giving directions for their junction with the army upon Lake Champlain; excepting in the council of the autumn to 1776, in which they were dismissed for that year.

It is true, General Burgoyne did state, in his speech, that there had been a race between the emissaries of the Congress, and the conductors of India affairs on the part of the British government; to engage not only the contiguous, but also the remote nations. This fact might have been proved by Mr. St. Lue le Corne, had he thought proper, as well as by many others.

This part of the Indian subject accidentally escaped the press, by its being omitted in the notes from which the speech was collected.

NOTE,

er conerights ne you ceptable pathize avoidabid his ombines

eties of ir a relues it, to me and. I iescence flity of fase and ation of

on to

TON.

TE

APPENDIX

NOTE, respecting the Second Debate.

MR. Wedderburne took occasion, after a short argument against the expediency of the motion, to propound doubts relative to General Burgoyne's capacity to vote in parliament; and he argued them, at length, with visible preparation, and much learning. referred, very particularly, to the flory of Regulus; and, to make the cases parallel, flated the General as a common prisoner of war (the convention of Saratoga being broke); that, consequently, he was not fui juris, but the present property of another power. He infifted, with still less expression of doubt, that the General, under his present obligations, was incapacitated from exercifing any office, or bearing arms in this country.

General Burgoyne, in reply, flated the miftake upon which Mr. Wedderburne's argument was in great measure founded, viz. that the convention was broke, and that the General was under the usual restrictions of a prifoner of war. The convention was declared by the congress not intended to be broke, on their part; though the execution of it was suspended. The General therefore infifted, that he was under no other obligation, than STOFF

that

Chat

ferv 66 T

and

he t

and

tho

him

fom

tru

to t

He

fup

had

had

role

froi

the

pro

der

Fra

his

liai

F

thá

ly

the

foc

APPEENDIX.

that specified in the convention, " Not to liament. That noble lord, upon quitting

France, had asked, whether any restraint in that respect was meant? as he should certain.

ly vote for every measure that could distress

the enemy. He was told, that they should as Debate. serve in America;" and that of his parole, "To return at the demand of the congress, fion, after a and due notice given": that in this country iency of the he was free to exercise his rights as a citizen tive to Geand a foldier; that should the enemy land. te in parliathough his present disfavour might preclude length, with him from the command which his rank, and arning. He fome experience, might entitle him to, he the story of trusted the king would not refuse his request, afes parallel, to take a mulquet in defence of his country. n prisoner of He proceeded to argue, that even upon the being broke); supposition that Mr. Wedderburne's position sui juris, but had been true in its full extent, and that he power. He had been, directly, a prisoner of war under paof doubt, that role, he should not have been incapacitated ligations, was from acting in parliament; and in answer to my office, or the precedents brought from remote ages, he produced one of a present member (Lord Frestated the misderick Cavendish) who, when a prisoner to burne's argu-France, after the action at St. Cas, and upon ded, viz. that his parole in England, fat and voted in par-

stated the mifburne's arguided, viz. that that the Genetions of a prim was declared be broke, on ion of it was refore infisted, bligation, than

that

foon think of restraining him from getting a child,

APPENDIX

child, left, when it came to maturity, it thould do them mischief.

The General proceeded to observe, that the cases, in point of explanation, were precisely the same; for that before he left the army, it had been intimated to him, that there were persons, in Boston, who doubted whether he should not be restrained by parole from taking any part in parliament, at least, when America was concerned; that he came to an explanation with those entrusted with the fentiments and powers of the congress; and declared, that if such restraint was intended, he would remain and die in that country, rather than return home. The idea was abolished; nay, more, it was expressed, that the friends of the congress conseived rather advantage than injury from the General's presence in part liament; that they wished for peace upon proper terms; that they were perfunded, the General, as a man of humanity, withed the fame; that they believed he had benout to speak truth; and that truth would conduce to that defirable end.

After this explanation, Mr. Wedderburne acknowledged no doubts remained upon the General's rights; and the house were unanimous in the same opinion.

FINIS