COMMUNITY HELPS TO CELEBRATE CENTENARY EVENT

Aged Colored Man Is One of Those Who Escaped From Slavery By the Underground Railway.
(From the London Free Press)

Mount Salem, Feb. 22—Born in a plantation cabin in Boone County, Kentucky, just 100 years ago to-day, but a valued member of this community ever since he escaped to Canada by the "Underground" system, Lloyd Graves is to-day celebrating his centenary with the good wishes and good-fellowship of all the local residents, among whom he is known as a "colored man with a white soul." Mr. Graves bears his years lightly and is actively engaged as caretaker of the local school. Daily he may be seen, almost before it is daylight, wending his way to the schoolhouse, so that it may be clean and warm before the first scholar arrives.

On the Kentucky plantation Graves as a boy lived the life of a slave, doing tasks faithfully under a severe master, but daily wishing to be free. When he became a young man he began to notice that many of the colored folks of his community were succeeding in making their way to Canada. First two of his men friends made the break successfully, then a man and his wife. The latter pair were forced to leave their child behind, and Graves pledged his word that he would make an effort to get away himself later and that he would bring the child with him to Canada. The parents of the little one left on their perilous journey in full confidence that they would later be re-united with their child.

The day of decision came when Graves overheard his master, in conversation with a buyer, arranging for the transfer of himself and a number of other slaves to new fields of labor. Seeing that he must get away at once if he was to redeem his promise about the child, Graves made his plans. He succeeded in escaping with the child, and made his way in safety to the "underground" railway, then being used extensively by colored folk to reach Canada. The two crossed Lake Erie on a sailing vessel under the captaincy of a man named Barr. They landed without incident at Port Stanley.

At St. Thomas Graves found employment for a number of years and later moved to Malahide Township, where he has resided ever since.

Mr. Graves soon found his place in the community. He has made an honest living and owns his own home. Last summer, though on the eve of his centenary, he worked two and a half acres of land, all in hoe crop, and a weed could not be found on his land. In addition to working his little farm, Mr. Graves is caretaker of the school, and the work done by him there is as near perfect as may be. His chief thought is for the pupils, some of whom have a long walk to school, and he is always anxious to have things comfortable for them.

His birthday was an occasion of rejoicing for everyone. A party was held in the hall and baskets were brought by many. The good wishes extended to the centenarian and grand old man were many and sincere.

FRIENDS HONOR LEON JOSEPH

Toronto—Despite the inclement weather a large crowd packed U.N.I. A. Hall last Thursday night to do honor to Leon Joseph of this city.

Mr. E. L. Cross, LL.B., who was the speaker of the evening, in an interesting address gave a brief outline of the life and activities of Mr. Joseph and charged the young men to be of actual service to the race, and in turn adjured those of the assembly to encourage the young people to enter into useful fields of activity.

At the close of the programme, refreshments were served, and Harris' Orchestra proceeded to serve fox-trots, waltzes, slow-drags, etc., for those who delight to trip the light fantastic; and an early hour found the happy friends of Leon Joseph wending their weary footsteps homeward.

The committee, Messrs. J. W. Carter, R. P. Edwards, V. Gonzales, J. L. Sullivan, Shirley S. Jackson, R. C. Lynch, Leroy Williams, and MacPherson were highly complimented for their fine arrangements on this unique occasion.

The presentation was made by Mrs. Dev. Allen and Mrs. J. C. Holland. After an evening of music and games all partook of a dainty buffet luncheon.

Mr. R. A. Hammond acted as Toastmaster, Rev. Dr. Allen replying with a toast to our church; Mr. R. Toliver, one to our country; Mrs. (Rev.) Allen, one to Mrs. Brown.

LINCOLN AND EMANCIPATION

We get some very interesting side-lights upon Abraham Lincoln and his attitude towards emancipation from an article of Rene Bach in the Kitchener Daily Record. The writer doubts Lincoln's motive for freeing the slaves from a humanitarian standpoint. "Abraham Lincoln's father would doubtless not have owned slaves even if he had been fairly well-off," states the writer. Further he quotes Lincoln as saying: "Falks like us, who had no slaves were called 'Scrubs.'"

Whether Lincoln or his father would have owned slaves had they not been "Scrubs" we know not. Neither can we say that because he had a special mission for Lincoln to fulfil that the Creator saw to it that Abe should be poor and should be one of the "poor white trash". But we do know from recorded history that from the first sight of the institution of slavery he hated it with a perfect hatred and that he resolved if ever he got the opportunity, "To hit that institution a hell of a blow." More than this, we know from the tone of his campaign speeches before the election to the presidency, from his private correspondence, and from his conversation that Lincoln's ultimate object was to free the slaves. "This country can not exist half free and half slaves." Again we know he was too loveable, too human and yet too near the divine not to yearn for and work for the deliverance of the oppressed.

In his article Bach states: "Nobody nowadays indorses slavery or denies that it was wrong. But, for even the devil deserves his due, the system did undeniably have its advantages for the Negroes. They were cared for and protected. As a race they are not able to care for themselves satisfactorily to civilization. Tuberculosis and other diseases rage among them, particularly among the children, is it frightful."

Evidently, Rene Bach, from whom we have just quoted, is a disciple of Vardeman, Tillman and such friends of the colored race. Such statements are contradictory to facts which are known to even the average American school boy. When slavery ended there were not five million Negroes in the United States. Today there are nearly fifteen million. Such figures do not support the statement that they become an easy prey for the dreaded diseases nor that the death rate among them is too much out of proportion with their birth rate. The statement that the race is not able to take care of itself is really too ridiculous to be seen in print. Either the writer is very uninformed or he is biased to such an extent that he wishes to distort and to misrepresent facts. Fifty years ago more than four million Negroes were turned into the world without a shelter to cover their defenseless heads. Today they own nearly half the wealth of five Southern States. In the acquisition of wealth and of education, in the building of businesses, large and small, in the acquisition of homes, we challenge Rene Bach to show us a race that has done in a century what we have done in half that time.

What-Not Column

Who was Jonathan Walker?

Captain Jonathan Walker contracted to build a railroad in Florida, and for this purpose employed a number of Negroes. Captain Walker procured a boat and attempted to smuggle the Negroes to freedom but was taken violently ill; he was captured, tried and sentenced to be branded with a double S (Slave Stealer) and to pay as many fines as there were slaves. His friends succeeded in raising money to pay his fines and he was released in 1845. The poet Whittier immortalized the double S as meaning Self-Sacrifice.

Who was William Still?

One of the most active workers in freeing slaves was William Still. He was chairman and secretary of the eastern branch of the Underground Railway. His many ingenious schemes such as placing the fugitives in boxes and cases, disguising men in female attire, secreting in odd corners in steamers, teaching them to ape white-folks actions, etc., proved of exceptional value in aiding the slaves to freedom. Mr. Still in after years wrote a book "The Underground Railroad."

What objections did the New York Times make in regard to enlisting colored soldiers for service in 1863?

The New York Times of February 16th, 1863 in an editorial summed up the objections to enlisting Colored soldiers as follows: "First, that the Negroes will not fight. Second, that the whites will not fight with them, and prejudice will be so strong that we shall lose two white soldiers for one black one that we gain. Third, in the free states very few Negroes will volunteer, and in the slave states we can get few because the rebels will push them southward as fast as we can advance upon them. Fourth, the use of Negroes will exasperate the South. We presume it will", comments the Times but so will any other scheme we may adopt which is warlike and effective in its character and results; and the best thing we can do is to possess ourselves in patience while the experiment is being tried."

Who organized the first Southern Colored Regiment during the Civil War?

To General David Hunter, commanding the army in the south, is given the honor of organizing the first southern colored regiment. He could not get white recruits and was surrounded by a multitude of able-bodied Negroes who were idle, but anxious to serve as soldiers. In advance of public opinion he organized a regiment and was called to account for it by the Secretary of War. He replied that he had instructions to employ all loyal persons in defense of the Union and the suppression of the rebellion; and declared that the loyalty of the Negro was beyond question.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Dorothy Harris, who died Jan 23rd, 1923, and William Hunt who died Feb. 17, 1923.

Two precious to our hearts have gone,
And Voices we loved are stilled;
The places made vacant in our home
Can never more be filled.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Harris.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear brother, Edwin Moxley, who died 4 years ago March 4th, 1924.

Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Tears of sorrow often flow;
Memory keeps our loved one near us,
Whom God claimed 4 years ago.
Never will he be forgotten
No, nor shall his memory fade.
Precious thoughts shall ever linger
To the spot where he is laid.

Lovingly,
Sisters and Brother Jack
