The Chicago Great Western Railway is arranging to run its suburban trains around St. Paul (Minn.) electric power.

HANDSOME BRIDGE Theodore C. Bates, of Worcester,

Garthorne's property, south part of east half of lot No. 45, in first concession, Westminster, containing 32 acres, more or any other structure that spans the Mississippi River, will be built across the Mississippi River for Kansas City. In connection with the bridge a magnificent union passenger station will be erected."

RAILROAD GROSS EARNINGS. Gross earnings of 52 railroads for the first week in August were $9,251,-782, against $8,390,243 for the first week in August, 1900, an increase of $861,539. Since Jan. 1 the referred to above earned $280,-881,301, an increase of $22,691,281 over the $258,191,020 reported for the corresponding period of 1900. For the longer period 43 show increases and 9 decreases.-United States Investor.

EXTENSION TO BLACK HILS. It is announced that final arrangements had practically been concluded in New York whereby Minneapolis and St. Paul were to be given direct railroad connection with the Black Hills. The company is to be called the Twin City, Pierre and Black Hills deen to Rapid City in the hills, crossing the Missouri River at Pierre. The eventually become part of one of the great systems and be part of a short line from the northwest to Denver and California. It will cost $20,000 a mile to build the road, and negotiations are so far advanced that the money will be furnished within two weeks and the road built to Pierre this year. While a legal fight regarding the stock of this road was in progress, Mr. Campbell stepped in and bought for $300,000 the controlling interest in it. Then the former president resigned, and was succeeded by Arthur L. Meyer, vice-president of the St. Lawrence and Adirondack Railway and of the Dominion Securities Company of New York and director of the Cape Breton Railway, while Mr. Campbell has become vice-president. Already, under. the New York Central possesses the absolute control of a road of which the St. Lawrence and Adirondack forms part, running from New York to Caughnawaga, whence it obtains an entrance into Montreal over the Lachine bridge of the Canadian Pacific, and some ten miles of the latter company's road. Now it proposes to run its line to Longueuil and there to bridge the St. Lawrence under an existing charter, and so to become independent of the Canadian road. The bridge at this part of the river will be between two and three miles long.

The Vessel's Boilers Blew Up as She Sank in the Icy Waters.

Passengers Abandoned Their Piles of Gold Dust in the Rush to Save Their Lives-Names of Survivors-She Had Nearly 200 People On Board.

States Consul Smith, of Victoria, who was a passenger on the Queen, from from among 40 survivors who were passengers on the Queen. "The Islander left Skaguay for Victoria on Wednesday evening on the 12th, at 6 o'clock, with 125 passengers and a crew of 61 men on board, and 10 or 13 stowaways.

All went well, the steamer making its usual record of 16 knots an hour until at 3 o'clock Thursday morning, when the south end of Douglas Island was reached. Then suddenly the steamer encountered an obstruction, said to have been an iceberg, and stopped with a jerk, which aroused the sleeping passengers. BEACH WAS ONLY HALF A MILE AWAY.

Capt. Foote was having breakfast, and the pilot notified him of the trou-Road, and is to be built from Aber- ble. When the vessel struck water road will be 295 miles long and will and the pilot advised that the vessel be run on the beach, not over half a mile distant, at once,

The officer reported that there was great danger, and urged that the vessel be beached at once. The first officer ordered the boats let down, but the order was countermanded by the captain who, however, finally realized the seriousness of the situation, and allowed the first officer to get down of the courage and assistance given by Chief Engineer Brownlee and First Officer Neutotsos, who saved several lives. WATER WAS DEADLY COLD.

The intense cold of the water caused severe cramps among many who were on rafts, and resulted in death from exposure. The bodies of those dying n this manner turned black. GOLD DIDN'T COUNT. M. M. Brumbauer, of Portland, Ore.

Another Klondiker, whose name is not given, is reported to have taken his portmanteau, containing $40,000 in gold dust, from the purser, and jumped from the sinking steamer to a boat which he failed to reach. Both man and treasure sank. At Juneau, Consul Smith saw Phillips, of Seattle, who escaped, but who lost his wife and child. The doctor insisted no one called at his state room to warn him of the disaster impending. Phillips remained at Juneau, endeavoring to recover the body of his

The fatal berg was no doubt even with the water. After the boat struck I stopped the engines. Then Capt. Foote appeared with the night watchman, who reported the ship leaking forward.

The Islander was the largest passesger vessel of the Canadian Pacific Navigation Company. Since then it has been engaged in the Vancouver trade, occasionally going to Alaska and the went down in their staterooms. Some of the survivors arrived here Sunday evening by the steamer which passed over the scene of the appalling disaster on the following evening, and picked them up at Juneau, to which city they had been taken.

TERRIBLE BLOW TO VICTORIA The news came as a terrible blow to the citizens of Victoria, many of the lost being well known and having families in this city. It is impossible at present to obtain a complete list of the dead, as Purser Bishop remained in Juneau to attend to the forwarding of passengers and take the ship's papers with him. He sent a letter to Vincent, secretary of the company, but gave only a few names of those who had been lost, and no details of the wreck.
All estimate the loss of life at about 65, and give the greatest praise to the officers for the manner in which they acted under the most trying circumsteamers Flossie and Lucy responding and taking them to Juneau. A small amount of the gold on board was saved, but $100,000 was left in the purser's safe. The city council of Juneau promptly secured Decker's hall, which was hastily converted into a lunch room and resting place, where the survivors could warm up with hot coffee and suitable foods. All other assistance possible was also extended to the survivors.

WALKED 25 MILES FOR HELP. Word of the disaster reached Treadwell at 8:30 a.m. by a party of passengers headed by the chief engineer, who walked up the beach, a distance of 25 miles, to appeal to the city for help. The Treadwell steamers Lucy and Jenniker and the Juneau steamer Flossie promptly responded.

The Flossie arrived in from the scene of wreck at 12 o'clock with its flag at half-mast and with six dead bodies on board and the surviving passengers. The description of the disaster by the survivors is heartrending. They say that the Islander struck on an iceberg, and so severe was the shock that every door was jammed fast in the state rooms, and the ill-fated passengers, numbering 107, and the crew of 71, were forced to break through the windows to reach the deck.

Steward Simpson lost ten in his department and his description of the wreck is clearly given.

STEWARD SIMPSON'S HEROISM. He was awakened by the shock and could not get out of his stateroom until he broke out the window. THE CAPTAIN'S LAST ORDER.

By this time the ship's boats were loaded and had got away and while the officers were getting out the last life raft Capt. Foote called to all hands to clear the ship as it was about to go down. This was the captain's last order, as at that moment the ship sank and the captain, leaping clear of the wreck, was picked up by a lifeboat which in some manner was overturned.

The night was very misty and all hands were forced to shift for themselves. A SURVIVOR'S STORY-WHOLE

RAFT LOAD SANK, F. G. Hinde-Bowker, late manager of the British-American corporation of London, who was a passenger on the Islander, said: "My first intimation of an accident was the rushing of passengers on the deck which woke me up. I was in a cabin with Mr. Maghlen. I got up, went out of the cabin and saw the steamer sinking at the bow. I woke my partner up and we dressed. this time the boat was still lower in the water. By the time I got out of the cabin the water was about the smoking room floor.

"I went on the upper deck, followed by my partner. I saw the boats were gone. By this time only the stern was out of the water. I saw a raft in the water with eight or ten on it. I started down the rope on to the raft. When the steamer sank the raft with all on board were carried under water by the suction. I held on, and when the raft came up only two of us were left. "We hailed two men and a Chinaman sunk entirely out of sight. Many people hung on to the raft at different clinging on, but generally managed to

WHAT A MAN CARRIES.

Carry All the Time.

Man carries a pretty good weight in these modern times, when you come to think of it," said a gentleman whose mind has an analytical turn, "and. really it makes a man a trifle tired when he begins to enumerate the number of things he has to carry around with him. He is a beast of burden and is heavily laden. We will take him from the skin out, and analyze the superficialities which hang about him, and which are necessary at this time in the history of civilization in order to give him a polite standing in the community in which he lives. One is almost inclined to shrink away from the fearful responsibility of carrying such a load, and yet one must do it if he is happy. Here are the two articles which sticketh closer than a brother, and then we find pulled up around his shins and his ankles two can buy most advantageously. You socks. He carries two cuff buttons around with him, two collar buttons, three shirt buttons, two sleeve buttons and various other buttons on his undergarments. There is one buckle on his trousers, and two on his suspenders. He generally wears suspenders. He wears two garters. He wears one necktie, or sometimes one cravat with one clamper to hold it in place. "He carries one handkerchief in his pocket. He wears one hat. In the winter he must have two gloves and one overcoat, and maybe two overshoes. He has a watch and chain to carry around with him, and a bundle of letters, a package of cards, a plug or sack of tobacco, or maybe a few cigars, a pipe perhaps, a knife, pencil and a few other things which usually make up the pocket outfit, such as matches, buckeyes and other good luck symbols. There is leather in his shoes, with hair in the soles and steel pegs in the heels thereof. There is silk or satin in his cravat or necktie. There is woll and cotton and linen and other things in the clothes he wears. There is straw in his hat. There is starch in his shirt. There is gold, silver and pewter or other metals in the watch and chain he wears; there is brass and bone in some of his buttons. There is tin in his garter clampers and in the clamper which holds his cravat in place. glass over the face of his watch. Dye is used in staining his clothes, and one may find here all the colors-red, white, blue, black, purple, yellow, brown, and almost every other tint. So, after all, when he begins to count up the 100 superficialities he carries around with him and the vast number of factories he represents, if the season is warm, with the thermometer ranging above the 100 mark, he will probably swelter a bit more on account of the vast he is carrying.-New Orleans Times-Democrat.

DEPARTMENT STORES

End of the Fight Against These Institutions in Chicago.

[New York Sun.] For three or four years some of the Chicago retail merchants have making a tremendous pother about the department stores. They have agitated. They have made ineffectual boycotts. They have gone to Springfield and with the aid of some of the demagogues prepared preposterous bills, classifying merchandise and laying exhorbitant taxes on the different classes of it for the purpose of injuring the department stores where a great variety of articles are kept. These bills would never have held water in the courts, for they were not general and uniform in their provisions. The country store, which is a department store in miniature, was not attacked. The big Chicago stores were to be fined and ruined, if possible, for the sake of benefiting some of their smaller competitors.

The movement never had any real chance of success and for some time it has dropped out of sight. The very people who would sign petitions to the legislature for laws in restraint of department stores would sneak off and trade at them. The wives of the small dealers who are so hot against the big shops could not be kept from buying goods at them. The agitators admit After all the froth and fury, plain business sense won the day. People will buy where they think they street corners against crushing mon-

Regulates Posters.

[New York Tribune.1 Belgium has been called the home of artistic posters and street advertise-

Perhaps the strict laws in Belgian cities regulating billboards, posters, and street signs will account for the growth of good taste in this respect. Brussels, whose ordinances on this point are typical of those in most Belgian cities, permits the affix-ing of posters or advertising signs only at such places on the public highways as are designated by the mayor and board of aldermen. An exception to this rule is made in the case of buildings for sale or to rent. In such case an announcement may be affixed to the front of the building, but it must not be more than eight inches wide. The only other excepton is made in favor of theaters and concert halls. These are allowed to have billboards at the entrances or on the walls upon which the posters may be pasted, but the boards must not project more than an inch beyond the wall. Before any person can post bills anywhere in the city he must have a permit from the council and must carry it on his person and show it whenever so requested by the police. A copy of every poster must also be deposited at the police bureau before the advertisement can be pasted up in public places. All and advertising sign-boards are subject to a tax varying with the size of the sign. The minimum tax is one cent for every poster or sign of thirteen by twenty inches or under, and one-fifth of a cent is added for each increase of two inches square. These regulations add something to the city's income and at the same time keep the billboard nuisance within reasonable bounds. If Chicago had an ordinance similar to that of Brussels there would be no more complaints about the unsightly and obtrusive

Meloncholic.

Three melons went sailing out in the West, West,
Nutmeg, water and musk—
Three little boys at evening dusk,
While nature brooded in damp suspense,
Climbed over a ten-rail, eight-foot fence,
And stowed a melon beneath each vest.

Three little colics appeared that night
And tackled the cherubs three—
O, the groan, the pain, the misery,
The cramp, the gripe and the inward ache,
Till the doctors made each cherub take
A teaspoon of bitters to set them right.

Than melons and fruit there is nothing surer
To rob a cherub of sleep,
And give him a pain that will make him weep;
But there is a Bitters will cure his woes
In a minute or two, and everyone knows It's Siegert's Imported Angostura.

nose, and the cough and difficulty of breathing are much more pronounced This is a warning that prompt treatment is essential. Catarrhozone is the best remedy; it cures the disease by removing its cause, which are germs that invade the air passages and breathing organs of the body. Catarrhozone is sure death to all germ life. It reaches the hay fever microbes wherever located, and is the proper treatment to employ. No remedy affords such prompt relief, and a case has yet to be found in which Catarrhozone was used that it did not permanently cure. Dr. Johnson, in the Medical Journal, on Hay Fever, says: "I prescribe Catarrhozone because I find it relieves quicker than anything else with which I have met. I can rely on Catarrhozone curing radically and last-

No remedy receives such praise from eminent physicians and prominent medical journals as Catarrhozone. It is so pleasant to use, so safe, so speedily effective that it at once commends itself to people in all walks of life. A trial will convince you of its unusual merit. THE CULTIVATION OF INDIA-RUBBER.

Projects For Discovering New Plants and For Cultivating Them Promises Much.

The enormous consumption of India ber due to its use for tires, and in any new ways incident to mechaniprogress, has caused some people fear that we might have a caoutouc famine. So far, however, it ns only to have stimulated projects discovering new rubber-yielding ats and for cultivating them in tations instead of relying wholly ild growths. As yet, these plans come to little, but they promise for the future, and there is in more than one suggestion for our tropical colonies. A writer in the ew Generale des Sciences (Paris) rtes as follows regarding them:

'Until recent years caoutchouc was considered purely as a forest product and could not be classed among agri-cultural productions. Even at present, notwithstanding an annual production exceeding 42,000.000 kilograms (46,000 ns) for the entire world, caoutchouc ost wholly furnished by plants row wild in the woods; but, in ence of a consumption that continually, we must solve the ion necessary to industry, but lessen as much as possible the preparation and to obtain a

How Cities, Towns and Villages Have Been Getting Along.

Why Ontario's Population Has Not Increased Faster—The Gain In Quebec.

The Globe's Ottawa correspondent telegraphs:

A reference to the returns for Ontario, and for other provinces, too, discloses in the case of many districts that, while the dwellings and families have substantially increased, the population has apparently fallen off. Obviously there cannot have been more dwellings and more families without additions to the population. Seemingly the inference must be that liberties were taken with the lists of 1891, or, to be more specific, the lists were stuffed. But it is, perhaps, at the expense of Ontario more than any other province that the west has gained. The sturdy sons of Ontario have gone in their hundreds to settle on the fertile plains of Manitoba and the Territories or to seek their fortunes in the mining camps of British Columbia or the Yukon. This migration affords another explanation of the apparently small growth of population in On-

THE GAIN IN QUEBEC. As to Quebec, one has not far to seek for the larger gain in population. Two reasons are primarily responsible. At Montreal, at Quebec, along the St. Maurice River, and at other points there has been industrial development He Stole Thirty Teachers From Uncle Sam on a large scale, while the repatriation of thousands of Quebec's sons, who formerly found employment in the Eastern States, has turned the tide of colonization to the unoccupied lands of the province. Montreal and its suburbs alone account for 80,050 of the increase in the Province of Quebec, and in that city, as is well known, manufacturing has been going ahead at a most satisfactory rate. Manufacturing enterprises have also largely augmented the population in Beauharnois, which contains Valleyfield and nois, which contains Valleyfield and its cotton mills; in Champlain, on active from a Carbondale man who was count of the electrical works and pulp mills at Grandmere and Shawingan Falls; in Quebec Center and Quebec Sherbrooke and St. Maurice. Many of the electoral districts on the border have gained in population through colonization or lumbering, and elsewhere new settlements have been opened up. Among those which advantages from this cause are Beauce, Berthier, Bonaventure, Compton, Dorchester, Pontiac, Portneuf, Richmond and Temiscouata and Terrebonne. But it has not been all gains in Quebec. Many districts have experienced losses. For example, there is Bagot, 3,309; Brome, 1,312; Two Mountains, 1,031; Huntington, 1,182; Joliet, 666; Kamouraska, 1,-353; Laprairie, 828; Maskinonge, 2,056; Lotbiniere, 649; Montmagny, 829; Rouville, 3,364; Richelieu, 1,907; St. John and Iberville, 4,454, and Vaudreuil, 346.

Prof. Goldwin Smith quietly celebrated his 78th birthday on Tuesday, at his beautiful home on Grange road. A World reporter dropped in to wish him many happy returns last evening, and was smilingly received in the library. The professor referred him to the 90th Psalm, which asserted that after the age of seventy a man's life was but labor and sorrow. He pleaded guilty of the former, but denied the latter allegation.

In appearance, Prof. Smith looks as bright and active as he did ten years He does not, like Spencer, ascribe his longevity to any system of diatetics or exercise, but rather to a consistent and continual temperateness observed throughout his life. Though the professor is not adverse to a glass of wine at dinner, he does not, to quote his own words, "think of emptying the whole decanter." He Prof. Goldwin Smith was born in 1823, at Reading, Eng., where his father was a practising physician. He received his education at Eton and Oxford, and in 1847 was called to the bar at Lincoln's Inn, but he has never practised. In 1864 he visited the United States, where he met with an enthusiastic reception, owing to his great, but only in isolated cases is active championship of the North during the Civil War.

In 1871 he came to Toronto, where he has since resided, taking a prominent position in literary and educational circles. His contributions The Weekly Sun are widely read, and, if his arguments are not always acceptable to the whole community, the masterly style in which they are couched cannot but be a source of pleasure and profit to all who read

The Census and Marriage.

It is a pertinent question, in connection with Ontario's rather disappointing census showing, why there have not been more marriages of Ontario young people during the past decade. Perhaps one reason may be suggested, if one looks back twenty or thirty years, and contrasts the simplicity of life then prevalent with the more complex and expensive style of living of the present day. Yet people are no happier today than were the people of 30 years ago, perhaps, on the whole, not so happy. There is today more fuss, more restlessness, but no more "solid comfort."

We have no doubt if people could get back to a simpler and less expensive life, there would be more marriages, to the great benefit of the State, and equally to the advantage of the rising generation; for it goes without saying that the founding and enjoyment of happy homes is the ideal to which the young men and women of Ontario should look forward.

It has been said that too many young housekeepers expect to begin life at the top instead of at the foot of the ladder. Instead of starting with a house too large, with an expensive wedding, an extensive trousseau, and going in for "receiving days," and generally imitating people in wealthy circumstances, common sense would suggest to the voung couple to begin quietly and inexpensively, content with their possession of each other. It is always easy enough, later on, to branch out-too easy, perhaps.

It is hard to say who is more to blame for this exaggerated expectation and demand on the part of young men and women eligible for marriage. The fathers and mothers are no doubt much at fault. They might do a good deal to promote right views by right precept, and more by right example. Young women, who are the real bome-makers. should be shown the beauty, the expediency and necessity of simplicity.

Our young men, too, need to reconsider many of their prevalent opinions and practices. Most young men are too inordinately fond of amusement: and many of them, through clubs and otherwise, get into ways that generate both selfishness and extravagance. There are scores of young men in London alone, and all over Canada. who could afford to marry, and who would have a better chance to amount to something if they were married, but who are frittering away not merely their means, but the best part of their lives.

If men, and especially women, of light and leading, would inculcate and exemplify simplicity of life, it would do a vast amount of good. Be it ever so humble there's no place like a home of your own. Those who are afraid to start married life simply, for fear of Mrs. Grundy, might well take for their own the old motto:

They have said.
What say they?
Do ye well-let them say.

The King's Titles.

Truth says: "Of course, as it was the boast of Lord Beaconsfield that he bestowed a title on Queen Victoria, that ex-republican, Mr. Chamberlain, cannot rest before bestowing one on the King. 'This,' observes the Daily Telegraph, 'will be one of those great historic acts by which the mind and temper of a people are greatly moved, and to great issues. It will make a profound impression upon the world, and will dispel some inveterate delusions upon the continent.' Provided that the King be known here as King of Great Britain and Ireland, it is a matter of the most absolute indifference to most people what additional title he may bear elsewhere. If it pleases our colonies that he should be sultan of one, shah of another, and czar of another, I see no reason why they should not be gratified. But I take the liberty to doubt whether all this heaping of title on title, is an historic act that will move nations to great issues, nor have I the remotest notion what delusions it will dispel on the continent." After referring to one "jingo" writer, Truth says he "is under the impression that the colonies are as much enamored of titular distinctions as some wealthy parvenu who subscribes to charities patronized by royalty on the hope of knighthood. I regret that they are only a portion of our imperial taxation King, we should be considerable gain-

Wealth and Speculation.

thern Railway, contributes a very thoughtful and readable article to Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia, on "Young Men and Speculation." James J. Hill is a millionaire also, and his views on this subject are also well worth consider-

These men, under the existing state of affairs, accumulated millions. The one should know how to reach these millions by taxation, the other should know what to seek and what to shun in speculation. The cases are parallel with the old saying, "It takes a thief to catch a thief." We do not mean that either Hill or Johnson is a thief. It is the fact of the knowledge of the subject that is common to both.

The points that Hill makes are that hard work means success only; no man can make money out of nothing. There must be an equivalent given; a few speculators win, the great bulk lose and end in ruin.

Hill points out that the public are frequently imposed on, and a large number of investors do not discriminate. He favors legislation to prevent frauds by companies. He favors inspection and the making of stockholders personallly liable long after they have sold out.

Hill discusses combinations, and draws distinctions between combinations of producers and manufacturers to throttle competition, and combinations on a sound basis to save expense and let the public obtain the article at less cost.

Hill urges that combinations on a ands are interested as capitalists now into the open market and get it. He gestion. asserts that many men are taking advantage of the new order of things, and companies, realizing the fact that the worker who is a stockholder is more likely to be faithful than he who is not one, are encouraging it. It helps to bring out the talent.

Hill further discusses the millions given for educational purposes, and asserts that the good done is an unknown quantity. He favors a college education where it does not produce priggishness and a contempt for labor. Work is the true road to success: the world has no use for idlers. Nearly all the men at the head of the big enterprises are self-made men, and what they are because of work-because they used their brains with good

On the whole his comments are on sound lines. The principles he lays down are likely to lead to success.

"The Vain Appeal."

The St. Marys Argus contributes its quota to "The Problem of Men" for the ministry, and asks some pertinent questions, of which this is a specimen "Is not the danger that the young student is led to think that grammar and dictionary are all he needs to understand the Scriptures?"

Frankly, we do not think that this is specially the danger of Canadian students. There is always in the life of the individual man and of the church conflict between the "intellectual" and "practical" interests. There are no doubt times and cases when the church must send out a large number of men with little academic prepara-The Methodist Church did that in the early days in Ontario, and reaped a rich reward, but for life in the long run the churches must make a strenuous effort to keep up the ideal of scholarship. It is always a difficult problem to balance these two sides of life. As a growing country, our practical needs are great, varied and pressing, but the scholarly life also has its claims. Within the last four or five years six professors born and bred in the old country have received appointments to chairs in connection with the Presbyterian colleges of Canada. We believe that notwithstanding some cries of "Canada for the Canadians," these are all regarded as fairly good appointments. It may always be necessary, or at least expedient, to bring in good men from abroad to some of these positions, for the sake of healthful stimulus and variety, but surely not in this proportion. We need to grow some of our own teachers; and if we are to do more practical, for if we could shift that, some of our men must have a specially good course when they are on the colonies by adding titles to the young, and while a large proportion of busy pastors cannot be scholars in the technical sense, a good ideal of scholarship must be maintained. In Labouchere's usual style; but there some colleges in the old lands, stuare two remarks that may be appropri- dents get too much study, and too litately made. There is a corresponding increase of the duties on other forms of agricultural produce. The import duty on horses will be approximately 10 per cent of their value, ranging from $7 14 to $71 40 on each animal. The duty on horned cattle is nearly trebled. Potatoes and fresh apples, so long as they are unpacked, or are imported in sacks, are free, Such a discrimination in favor of the German farmer will prove detrimental to the other industrial classes, and will prove a strong impetus to the Socialist movement, which thrives during hard times and periods of popular discon-

Insurance Suggestion.

A correspondent of the Times asks the following: "Can the leading fire insurance companies be induced to add to the business convenience of the general public by inserting a clause in all policies that where the assured contracts during the currency of the policy to sell the property insured the company will hold both vendor and purchaser covered during the currency of the policy until completion of the sale?" The question is a pertinent one, to which due consideration wil no doubt be given by the managers o fire insurance companies.-Monetary

In spite of the exemplar types of manhood that the colored race in the South has produced in the persons of such men as Booker T. Washington and the late Frederick Douglas, it seems impossible for the Southern whites to realize that the negro is really human. Lynching of the negro has become so common that it has lost its horror for the white mob, though not for the victim. The latest means of punishment is the fire and stake. This species of medieval barbarity few of them speculators. They are has always proved shocking, even when merely read as an historic fact. It seems a strange retrogression in our twentieth century civilization that this inhuman treatment should be resorted to. The Washington Star, relating an instance of a negro who had committed an indecent assault, an offense which was punished by burning the miscreant at the stake, goes on to

"Has anything been gained by this change of punishment? Apparently not. The crime for which it is meted out continues, while an increasing callousness and desperation may noted in the brutes who commit it. Last week in Alabama the prisoner begged for his life as he was being led to the stake. In the Georgia case a few days later the prisoner was as unmoved as a red Indian would have and denied to his executioners even the slight satisfaction of a sob. He surveyed the scene with eyes wide open and died without a groan. "Has anything been lost by this change of punishment. Much, we may be very certain. Men of education and responsibility cannot yield to savage instincts without paying a heavy penalty. They cannot profit in any cause, even in the highest, in the attempt to protect womanhood, by brutalizing themselves. How much progress downward has been made can be seen by proposition of this Georgia mol that the unhappy woman, whose fate is worse than death, should light the faggots around her ravisher's body. Wretched beyond the power of language to describe, she was yet true to the greatest feeling which inspires her sex, and she shrank from the appalling suggestion. But those who had gathered to avenge her fate, her neighbors and associates, drunk with pasthought her capable of the act.'

The problem of doing away with such summary treatment of criminals is apart from the processes of law, among the most serious that the United States has to face. It is, in a sense, a national question, and a blot on the escutcheon of a great people.

And now in order to make this world an ideal place of existence for all, it only remains for some surpassing genius to invent the workless job!

The English Gentleman.

[Boston Herald.] Mr. E. L. Godkin's letter to the New York Evening Post on the changes in England within the last forty years has something to say about "the gentleman." The importance of "the gentleman," he says, has decreased, and he thinks this a thing to be regretted. "The best contribution, undoubtedly, which modern England has made to civilization was the gentleman'-a combination, I may explain, of education and cultivation, good manners and good clothes." It will be observed that in this definition there is no specific mention of family or rank or wealth, but they are to be presumed, and they supply motive, opportunity and means for the ac-quisition of the characteristics that are named. One point he makes much of, namely, the English speech of the upper classes, which serves as a model for all England. The English gentleman, he declares, is not in the habit of debasing his form of speech, as many in America do in order to himself understood by, or to curry favor with persons less cultivated than himself. In England in America, too, often it extends upward, the higher in the social scale imitating their inferiors.

A Valuable Testimony. [Kingston Whig.]

Stratford has been like Kingston. It has long had manual training in the public schools, but it hesitated about the introduction of domestic science until recently. The experience has been satisfactory.

The inspector of schools, Mr. Stewart, has been visiting Galt, and giving his impression of the work so far as it has progressed. The point was whether domestic science would interfere with the success of the pupils in the entrance examinations. During the months of May and June, the attention of the teachers was keenly directed to the progress of their pupils, in view of the approaching examinations, he said, and they would certainly have noticed any falling off in the efficiency of the girls. With regard to the popularity of domestic science, he never saw any school work taken up with such enthusiasm, and the domestic science classes were more regularly attended than the or-

This is certainly a most valuable estimony, and of more value than any theorizing from any man or quarter. It is a testimony which should have its weight with the Kingston school board, which has this matter of domestic science under considera tion at the present time.

FOUND THE WRECK OF A LOST SHIP

Sea Mystery Solved by Marshall Island Natives—Remains of the Missing Manchester Recovered.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 20 .- The story of a tragedy of the sea comes from the South Pacific. The wreckage of the missing ship Manchester was found three months ago on a small desert island of the Marshall group, with indications that the captain, his wife and children and crew landed on the island and then had departed in two boats, as there was no water on the island. As no trace has been found of them, it is believed they perished of thirst before they were able to reach inhabited islands of the Marshall group.

The wreckage was found on Bikar Island, one of the most northerly of the Marshall group, which is without occanuts or water and is only visited by natives to secure the feathers of some rare birds that frequent it. The native schooner Marshellon anchored, and the natives told the story to Captain Henry, of the island steamer Archer, at Juluit:

"There were indications of wreckage ashore at Bikar, so we stood on our way to Juluit and found the beach covered with cases of American kerosene. On breaking the cases tins were found to be stamped with Chinese or Japanese lettering, suggesting the idea that a ship from New York, bound to China or Japan, had come to grief On going through the wreckage found there were between 400 and 500 cases, and scattered among these were remnants of spars, yards, and pieces of ships' rail. On further search the body of a man was found, and from the appearance of the body death had not taken place much over 48 hours before we arrived. Mortification had not set in. In the clothing was found a first mate's certificate on parchment. The name was that of a Swede

"During the search over the atoll a spot on a little shingly beach showed distinctly the tracks of two boats' keels, as if they had been hauled up and again launched. The marks were quite fresh, and there were footprints on the sand. Among these footprints were those of a narrow foot, evidently the impression of a woman's foot. and a number of tiny impressions, apparently made by the feet of children. From these marks it was concluded the captain of the ship had with him

"A number of the native birds were found with their bodies punctured and their flesh uneaten, showing that the castaways had, in the absence of fresh water, sucked the blood of the birds. Some turtles were found that had been killed and partly eaten."

Christian Science Denounced by Mrs. Wood bury's Counsel as "Sham and Fraud."

In Tremont Temple, Boston, last week, Frederick K. Peabody, counsel in the libel suit of Mrs. Woodbury against Mrs. Eddy, recently tried here, delivered an address on Christian Science, or Eddyism; Its Absurdities, Its Frauds, Its Crimes, and Its New-Old Witchcraft."

Mr. Peaboby had an audience of 500 people, who listened with great attention and frequently applauded his utterances.

"A SHAM AND A FRAUD." Mr. Peabody began his address by saying that he did not know Mrs Eddy personally and had no personal feeling against her, but that he was led to deliver his talk by a full belief that she was a charatan, a menace to the public. 'Christian Science," he said, "is a sham and a fraud, an imposition from beginning to end, in that it falsely pretends to be a revelation from God, communicated directly to its founder. Mrs. Eddy.' She was now eighty-five years age, and in feeble physical condition, he said, but she had become rich and powerful through the teaching and practice of Christian Science. He declared that after Dr. Eddy's death "many believe that in the course of time Widow Eddy became, and is today the wife of C. A. Frye. Frye is ostensibly Mrs. Eddy's servant, is ostensibly Mrs. Eddy's servant, footman, secretary, man of all work; but he holds the legal title to her residence in Concord, N. Berlin, Aug. 20.-German women have begun a crusade against whisk-ers, and are filling the columns of the Berlin and provincial papers with warlike communications, insisting that beards and mustaches must go unless the men of the nation desire reprisals in the form of hoopskirts and longtrained dresses.

Francis Haby, the kaiser's barber and the designer and keeper of the imperial mustache, said today: "This talk is utter nonsense. might as well ask the men of Germany to wear rings in their noses as smooth faces. From time immemorial

Wind Struck the Boat Suddenly and There Was Little Time to Escape.

On the Ohio.

Paducah, Ky., Aug. 20.-The steamer City of Golconda, plying between this city and Elizabethtown, Ill., was struck by a squall during a storm about 7 o'clock last night as she was en route to Paducah. She turned over in ten feet of water, six miles above the city, as she was going to Crow-ell's Landing. Sixteen persons are reported drowned.

The disaster occurred as supper was being served, and many of the 75 passengers were in the cabin. The wind struck the boat without warning, and there was no time for those inside to Capt. Jesse Bauer and Pilot E. E. Peck were the last to leave the boat, and swam to shore. They saved several persons struggling in the water and left the survivors in a house near the bank and came to the city.

Capt. Bauer, who arrived here two hours after the catastrophe, said: "The boat was getting ready to land when the squall struck her and she Several passengers who were listed. jumped overboard and were caught by the boat. The ladies, all of whom were in the cabin, could not be

There is no way to determine the number of dead and their names until the boat's books shall be found. Capt. Peck places the number at six-teen. The Mary N. left soon after the survivors reached the city for the scene, and is expected back tonight. THE LOST.

The total net loss to the roll during the year was 43,586, which includes 38,183 by death, 853 by remarriage, 1,582 by minors reaching the age of 16, 1,538 by failure to claim pension, and 1,460 from other causes. The total amount paid to pensioners

TORONTO FAIR AT BUFFALO. Canadians visiting Buffalo are much impressed with the manner in which the Toronto Exhibition is advertised by posters. On several of the large billboards the Toronto fair posters have been displayed to excellent advantage. The printing catches the eye quickly. The executive of the Toronto fair are indeed attacking the most difficult point, but are to be commended for the manner in which they have billed the city of their big rival exposition.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 19. - Samuel Jameson, one of the passengers, gra-phically described the scene of the disaster after he attempted to get on board a raft. He said: "I slipped down the rope and on to the raft. By this time the bow of the Islander was sinking, and the stern was up in the air with the propeller out of the water. Then the stern began to sink. I was hanging onto the outer edge of the raft, and some of the others may have been struck by the propeller. I was struck on the head by the side of the steamer as it glanced by, but was not bally hurt. The bruise mark is there yet. But I had a good hold and a deep breath and down I went. We were sucked a long way down. Then the air in the cabin was apparently released, for I was tossed to the surface quicker than I went down. The only damage I sustained was from a mouthful or two of salt water and bruises in the ribs and chest. As I was going down I could see the propeller above me. When I came up there were but two of our party left, another man and myself. By this time there were men all around us in the water. Most of them had life belts. Three more men of them had life belts. Three more men came up to get on the raft, and someone told them not to climb on as it would drown us all. We told them to hold on to it, and they did. GIVE FRIEND'S A TRIAL.

"I'll bet it's Vaughan," said Beacon, in unsteady accents, as the horse and its rider came nearer and nearer. "Come along, Juliana; we'll open the little gate, and hasten to meet him."

And, so saying, the speaker and his companion fiew to a small, white gate, epening upon the highway; and in the following moment they were saluted by a merry, musculine voice.

"Hilloa, how are you?" And the speaker, a slender, handsome young man, at once vaulted from his horse, and, with the bridle in his hand, rushed to Deacon, and flung his arms round his shoulders. "I'm glad to see you again; old boy! How is the governor, eh? and our dear mother?"

"They are both well, Vaughan," replied Deacon, warmly shaking his brother's hand. Then he drew Vaughan to the place where Juliana was standing. "This is my brother, Juliana," he continued. "You are talking as if I know nothing about the matter," returned the newcomer, smiling upon the girl, and then offering his hand to her. "We shall become great friends, you and I, Miss Monkshawe." he added. "When is the happy event to take place, Deacon? You did not say in any of your letters."

"Because Juliana cannot be persuaded to fix upon the day; but I hope she soon will."

Meanwhile, Juliana was alone with Mrs. Prynne.

The former was very silent; while the old lady went on talking about her two sons, praising them to the skies.

"Vaughan," said she, "would never have been able to travel about in the princely style he has, had it not been for Deacon's generosity. Deacon has given his brother thousands. Ah! my eldest son is a real blessing to the whole of his family. You ought to consider yourself a most fortunate girl in having won the affections of such a man. I know scores of nice girls who would give their eyes out of their heads to get him. I wish you appreclated him a little more than you do. He loves you dearly."

"Why, Vaughan is not dependent upon his brother, is he?" Juliana asked, without paying any attention to what the other had been saying.

"No; he's not exactly dependent upon Deacon. But as Mr. Prynne is an invalid now, and Deacon is very rich because of the fortune left him by his godmother, the latter has lately acted quite as his brother's guardian and benefactor. Vau-

Vaughan is most extravagant; and, to tell you a secret, he has squandered nearly all his patrimony at those horrible gaming-tables abroad. Still, if he be steady for the future, Deacon will take care he gets upon his feet again."

While the old lady spoke this, Juliana's gaze was directed through the open casement out on the terrace, across which the shadows of evening were already falling. In the distance, she could recognize the figures of the two brothers walking side by side, apparently engaged in close and earnest conversation.

"And so you think Juliana beautiful—th, Vaughan?" said Deacon, with a proud air.

"Beautiful, Deacon!" repeated the other. "Well, if I were not your brother, I should envy your happiness, and, may be, try to rival you.' Deacon smiled, as much as to say, "I'll give you leave to try your best to do so."
Not that Deacon was at all sure of Juliana's fixed love for himself, but he endeavored to think himself so. deavored to think himself so.

CHAPTER IV.

With Vaughan, Juliana had entered upon quite a new life. He was gay and light-hearted as his elder brother; but foreign travel had polished his manners considerably, and stored his mind with much useful information. Deacon was frequently absent, as he employed himself actively on his farm, and the younger brother and Juliana were consequently left much in one another's society. Deacon felt rejoiced that his betrothed and Vaughan could entertain each other so con felt rejoiced that his betrothed and Vaughan could entertain each other so well; and their intimacy receiving no check, they were constantly by one another's side. Vaughan accompanied the girl in her daily walks, and helped her to feed her pet birds, and rowed her about upon the lake, which last piece of amusement she much delighted in; while she often entertained him with her Spanish songs, which she had learned in her dead mother's time. At first, Juliana had been somewhat reserved in the presence of Vaughan; but after a time that reserve wore off; and she was led away by his ever-buoyant spirits, and by the fascinating powers of his conversation.

One day, Mrs. Prynne addressed her eldest born as follows:

"Juliana is a changed being of late. I never hear her utter any of her scornful speeches now. She and Vaughan seem to understand each other a great deal better. understand each other a great deal better than you and—"

"Leave them alone, mother!" interrupted Deacon, knitting his brows, and keeping down the sigh that rose unbidden. "She is clever, and so is he. They are fitting companions for each other. I wish, now, mother, that I myself had traveled a bit, and polished up my manners a little. I'm far too countrified in my ways, I am beginning to think."

And Vaughan himself? He soon discovered that he had awakened new thoughts and feelings in his future sister-in-law's heart; but not such thoughts and feelings as his unsuspicious brother had imagined. And he rejoiced as he watched her dark, lustrous eyes wandering after him whenever he left her side. Ah! far differently did she look at him from the manner in which she used to look at his brother. In fact, the attachment that had sprung up in his heart for her, and which was hourly increasing, was being reciprocated by her in full.

An inward voice seemed to warn him to recede, while yet there was sufficient time to do so, and not to abuse his kind brother's confidence. But that warning voice became weaker and weaker, and Juliana's beauty and fascinating manners seemed to have thrown a net around him; and the more he saw of her the more he felt convinced that her presence had become assential to his happiness, and his to hers.

Yet, notwithstanding all this, the couple had never once spoken of their feelings to once another. Vaughan instinctively understood that Juliana was not aware of her own, though he comprehended them. He dared not open her eyes to the fact, and she played as innocently as a child on the brink of a precipice.

One morning, Deacon being absent, from home on particular business, which would detain him till late that evening. The would detain him till late that evening. Sinewy Canadian Must Row Hard to Defeat English Champion.

Sarnia's Labor Day Regatta To Be Great Event---Baseball Games at Carling's Heights---International Cricket.

THE OAR. THE CHAMPIONSHIP BOAT RACE. Rat Portage, Ont., Aug. 20.-Excitement over the coming boat race for the championship of the world is increasing here daily. Gaudaur has got his new boat, which rides beautifully, and seems to have much more life in it than the old one. Towns is beginning to let out now, and his rowing is filling with uneasiness those who bave got their money on the local man. The English champion, who rows like a second edition of Hanlan in his palmy days, is now in splendid trim, and is rowing over the course in a time which seems eminently satisfactory to his trainer, Tom Sullivan. That Towns can beat Gaudaur's record for three miles, made at Austin, Texas, in 1894, is a foregone conclusion, accepted by nearly everybody here, but it is also pretty generally known that Gaudaur can beat it, too. Jake's record is 19:011/2, but if he is pushed, as he will be in all likelihood, with Towns in his present form, there will be a new record.

YACHTING. LABOR DAY RACES AT PORT HURON.

Port Huron, Mich., Aug. 20.-The Port Huron and Sarnia Yachting Association has completed arrangements for the races to be held on Labor Day, Sept. 2. The course will be a triangular one on Lake Huron, each leg five miles, with the starting point just east of the Fort Gratiot lightship. The races will be for class A and class B yachts, class A including all boats measuring 30 feet or over. The prizes offered are: Class A-First, $100; ond, $50; third, $25. Class B—First, $40; second, $20; third, $10. The judges selected for the regatta are Commodore John C. Shaw, Detroit; Captain Frank R. Rice, St. Clair, and C. O. Stillman, of Sarnia. Timers-Mark Hopkins, of St. Clair, and Chas. Mc-Kenzie, of Sarnia. The races will start at 11 a.m.

CALLED OFF FOR THE DAY. Larchmont, Aug. 20.-The third race in the Larchmont series between the Columbia and the Constitution was called off for the day on account of thick weather. There will be no more races at Larchmont, and the next race of the season with the Columbia will be at Oyster Bay next Thursday under the auspices of the Seawanhaka Yacht Club.

INVADOR AT TORONTO. Toronto, Aug. 30 .- The Invador, the 35-footer, which won the Canada cup, arrived in Toronto yesterday Chicago on a flat car, in charge of Capt. Fisher, the professional, who sailed her during the race. Fisher never left his charge from the time she started from Chicago. He slept inside on the journey back to Canada. The "Snake," as the Chicago men call the Invador, will be lifted from the car by the Crane at Bertram's today and dropped into the water again. She will be placed in commission for the

No doubt many cricketers will clip this out and paste 1:011/2. it in their cricket books as a memento of the manly game:

Shape-retaining,

When you step down, your foot sinks into the Resilia Centresole, away from the toe cap.

This makes the shoe a size larger inside, when your foot is widest, so the upper leather is never stretched out of shape over ball.

When you lift your foot, the insole expands from the outsole, thus taking up slack in the leather, preventing wrinkling and over running on sides.

The shoe thus retains shape and wears longer, because it is never over-stretched.

Among the Canadian speakers reported by the San Francisco papers as distinguishing themselves at the recent International League convention, was Rev. G. H. Cobbledick, of Parkhill, who spoke at the "Civic Righteousness" meeting, when the large Alhambra Theater was packed. The address was enthusiastically received and liberally punctuated with applause. Mr. Cobbledick was also invited to preach the re-opening sermons of Mount Pleasant Church, in Vancouver, which he did upon his return journey.

CANADIAN NEWSPAPER DIREC-

TORY. Messrs. A. McKim & Co., newspaper advertising agency, of Montreal, have just issued the 1901 edition of their Canadian newspaper directory. This is the third issue of such a publication by this well-known firm, and while previous issues were most complete, this one is indeed a more valuable one in every point; it is complete in every detail of typographical appearance. The compactness of the book makes it much more convenient to use. It is printed on toned paper of a very su-perior quality. The McKim agency is one of the most reputable advertheir own original and independent lines, and newspapers all over the country gladly acknowledge the generous support they receive from them. SALE OF CITY PROPERTY.

notices announced that the organiza-tion had been playing all summer at the Buffalo Exposition. This is hardly a matter of congratulation, for it has evidently prevented the members of the company from thinking up anything new since their previous visit. The newest things about the aggregation were their clothes. The management must be given credit for having cut out a couple of irreverent and in-decent jokes, which formerly marred their performance, but there still re-mains enough of the vulgar and suggestive to warrant a vigorous use of the manager's little hatchet. The best things in the show are Probst, the hu-man songbird, in his whistling imitations; the Brothers Bard, in graceful feats of strength and agility, and little Viola Abt, a clever child soubrette.

WON MORE THAN WAS REPORTED

Lieut. Murphy, of the Seventh Regiment, Captured $414 80 in Prizes at Bislev.

The work of London's representative at Bisley, Lieut. T. J. Murphy, of the 7th Regiment, was incorrectly reported by the cable dispatches. Details received by mail show that Lieut. Murphy won in the aggregate £85, or $414 80. As his expenses were only about £35, Lieut. Murphy is ahead of the game. The lieutenant's biggest prize was £15, being second money in the National Rifle Association match, in which he was pitted with the best men in the empire. But for a slight defect in his rifle, noticed when too late, Lieut. Murphy would undoubtedly have won first prize. He was defeated by a Mr. Wallingford, who made for to Murphy's 68, of a possible 70. The firing was at 200 and 600 yards range. Aside from his cash prizes the lieutenant won a valuable bronze cross. His individual prizes amounted to £23, the balance being made up of his share of team prizes.

WITH CANADIANS IN SOUTH AFRICA

News From Former Londoners Now Members of the Baden-Powell Constabulary.

Sergeant - Major Campbell, of the South African Constabulary, formerly a drill instructor at Stanley Barracks, and a member of the Canadian convery su- tingent, first as color-sergeant of C Company and afterwards as acting sertising agencies on this continent; they have a perfect system, conducted by ten to a friend in Toronto the following letter descriptive of the Canadian portion of the constabulary. His letter is from Modderfontein, and is dated June 28. In it he tells of how the Canadians were broken up, add-

"However, 500 were sent to Bloemfontein, 400 to Heidelburg (amongst whom were the Toronto squadron), and the adjutant (formerly of the Royal Canadian Dragoons), and Sergt.-Major Moore, the orderly room clerk (formerly of the R. C. R. I. in London, Ont.), proceeded to Modderfontein, the headquarters of the South African Constabulary, to hand over the books of the continuous of the contingent. I have heard that the draft has been called a model one, and Captains Fall and Reading were complimented upon the exceedingly satisfactory manner everything in connection with the recruiting and organization had been performed. "Of course, on the splitting up of the contingent my own position as regimental sergeant-major and that of Sergt.-Major Moore as orderly room clerk, were needless, and for some time, no other berth being available, were each given a troop of recruits from England to get into shape, and I must say that for physique and gen-

"Sergt.-Major Moore has been approached several times to take charge of the orderly room, B Division, which is now being formed, but as it is his first experience in South Africa, he would rather be out on the veldt looking for brother Boer, who has been most industriously sniping the small outposts in the vicinity fontein. It seems quite like old times to hear the familiar 'pluck-pluck' of the Mauser, and reminds me of the good old days when the first Canadian contingent was out here."

CANADIAN LADY KILLED. Chicago, Ill., Aug. 19 .- A young woman who was killed on Saturday evening by an Illinois Central suburban train in the South Park station, in the presence of a throng of suburbanites, was last night identified as Joanna Eugenia Walsh, a student of the University of Chicago. Miss Walsh was a native of New Brunswick, Canada, where her mother still resides. Eye-witnesses to the tragedy affirm that Miss Walsh deliberately threw herself upon the track in front of the approaching engine, and allowed herself to be ground to death. Her friends say she fell accidentally before the

this subject in your issue of Aug. 15, I would ask the favor to be heard further in the matter. On reading Dr. Osler, I see nothing but confirmation regarding my statements, and in the sentence you clip from his writing, he strikes the keynote to the whole situation, viz.: "There is no limit to the possibility of help from the scientific investigation of the properties and actions of drugs." So argued the immortal Hahmemann, years before Osler was horn, and is it not situation. Osler was born, and is it not singular that it is only now appreciated by some? Hahnemann asserted that "all drugs become specifics in the perfection of science.' We homeopathics are not prepared for any greater acknowledgments of failure than Prof. Osler gives ex-pression to, yet, because medicine is a failure from his standpoint, I am

I willingly accept all the voluntary admissions of weakness in his own school, but object to the license indulged in when referring to homeopathy, for at best it can be interpreted only as faint praise. I am afraid if the doctor were engaged in a "fight to a finish" with some of our people, he would with all his prestige of position suddenly find himself impaled upon the pinnacle of popular judgment; but it seems to me a matter of too vital significance to be viewed in the light of mere sentiment; and the graduate from allopathic schools should lose no time in acquiring a practical knowledge of homeopathy, since he leaves his alma mater with no better notion of the system than the patients he is called upon to treat, and with shame to his train ing, be it said, frequently not half so good. Being a graduate of the old school myself I know how the

"Dr. Hahnemann was a physician of high reputation and of ability; not only as a physician, but as a scientist, was he noted. He was moreover, a man of an extremely conscientious disposition. Becoming dis satisfied with medicine, as he been accustomed to practice it, he ceased prescribing, and commenced a course of original investigation. He discovered through experiment upon himself, and members of his own family, that many poisons and well-known drugs had a different effect upon the human system than had hitherto been ascribed to them. Then he called for volunteers, to undertake the work of proving drugs upon themselves, and many became interested in the work, often risking health and life itself-in an effort to benefit mankind. "From these experiments Hahne mann proved the existence of a great natural law in medicine, now recog-nized as Similia Similibus Curantur like cures like. This does not mean as often erroneously stated, that the same cures the same-that if you poison yourself with arsenic you must take a little more arsenic to cure yourself. The correct interpretation s, that when a drug produces certain symptoms upon a healthy individual that drug will cure when disease produces similar symptoms." This subject would require more space than I could expect, to do justice to its every phase. I will also spare your readers the discussion of many evil consequences resulting from improper drugging. I again thank you for your characteristic fairness accorded me.
