- 366 ——— M.D., A POPULAR ACCOUNT of MISSIONARY TRAVELS and Researches in South Africa, with maps and illustrations, tree calf gilt extra, 1.50, London, 1873.
- First we find Campbell, Moffatt, Livingstone and other learned and devoted missionaries spending their lives in the heart of the country and who, in the midst of unheard of privations and hardships, succeed in gaining the confidence and meet with success in teaching the Natives the elements of Christianity and civilization, and who write books descriptive of the country and its resources. Then follows the freebooting trader and the sportsman with beads and guns, and after provoking a quarrel with those whom he should pity and help, they succeed in killing some natives and perhaps losing some of their own number. They forthwith invoke the aid of the government and its army of adventurers to go and steal the whole country, diamond merchants and money lenders watching the game from safe places.
- 367 James Hannington, D.D., F.L.S., First Bishop of Eastern Equatorial Africa, a history of his life and work, 1847-85, by E. C. Dawson, portrait and other illustrations, crown 8vo, cloth, 75c, London, 1887.
