

CHEAP.

STERNS

the assortment of the
CHEAPEST GOODS FOUND.

Flannels, Winceys, best Styles, and Very Cheap.

eleveens,
in all the new shades of color.

Gloves and Mitts, &c., &c.,
Socks, Unders and Shawls,
Cotton Warp, &c.

FINE KNIT WOOL GOODS,
ROOM PAPER, &c., &c.

NS & STERNS.

FRUIT, & C.

New Tea,

10 lb. Caddies very choice.

Raisins,
figs,
Winter Apples,
confectionery,
Candles, Kerosene

Wholesale & Retail.

BEER & GOFF.

ROUSE

CHEAPEST
CLOTHING

CAPS

ISLAND.

E. PROWSE,

Sign of the Great Hat, 74 Queen Street.

PURGATIVE PILLS

the entire system in three months. Any in 1 to 12 weeks, may be returned to the original price. These pills have no equal, and KIDNEY disease. Sold everywhere,
see Spec. L. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

Croup, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Whooping Cough, and all the ailments of the Throat, Chest, and Lungs. These pills have no equal,
and KIDNEY disease. Sold everywhere,
see Spec. L. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

WILKENS LAY

Having imported a large stock of Upholstering Goods

W. & Mercantile

FRANCE COMPANY

Established in 1809.
$9,733,332
1,216,666

DESCRIPTION OF BUSINESS

Losses settled with and liberality.

aid up Capital over $5,000,000.00
at lowest current rates.

divided among Policy Holders, $600.00.

of the Life Branch belong to the
of the Dominion of Canada.

Prospectus, and every information,
Edward Island Branch, No. 25 Water

W. DeBLOIS,

General Agent.

The Charlottetown Herald.

NEW SERIES.

CHARLOTTETOWN, PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 12, 1884.

VOL. XIII—NO. 19

THE HERALD.

PUBLISHED EVERY WEDNESDAY

ONE DOLLAR PER YEAR

IN ADVANCE.

OFFICES:

Macdonald's Building, West Side

Queen Street, Charlottetown,

Prince Edward Island.

THE HERALD

HAS NOW THE

Largest Circulation of any paper on this Island,

AND IS INCREASING AT THE RATE

OF TWO HUNDRED COPIES A MONTH

Advertisements inserted at reasonable rates.

Advertisements, without instructions to the contrary, will be continued until forbidden.

Items and general news of interest, in a conditioned form, solicited.

Remittances can be made by registered letter.

Address all letters and correspondence to the HERALD OFFICE, Queen Street, Charlottetown.

RICHARD WALSH, Publisher.

CALENDAR FOR MARCH, 1884.

MOON'S CHANGES.

First Quarter 4th day, 8h. 36m., a. m., N. E.

Full Moon 11th day, 10. 27. m., p. m., N. E.

Last Quarter 19th day, 7h. 6. m., p. m., N. E.

New Moon 27th day, 1h. 25. m., a. m., N. E.

DAY OF WEEK	MOON'S RISE	MOON'S SET	MORNING	AFTERNOON	EVENING
1st	4:45	10:37	5:42	5:42	5:42
2nd	5:42	11:36	6:37	6:37	6:37
3rd	6:37	12:34	7:30	7:30	7:30
4th	7:30	1:31	8:20	8:20	8:20
5th	8:20	2:27	9:07	9:07	9:07
6th	9:07	3:21	9:90	9:30	9:30
7th	9:30	4:12	10:00	10:00	10:00
8th	10:00	5:00	10:45	10:45	10:45
9th	10:45	5:45	11:15	11:15	11:15
10th	11:15	6:27	11:30	11:30	11:30
11th	11:30	7:00	11:30	11:30	11:30
12th	11:30	7:12	11:15	11:15	11:15
13th	11:15	7:12	10:45	10:45	10:45
14th	10:45	7:00	10:00	10:00	10:00
15th	10:00	6:27	9:07	9:07	9:07
16th	9:07	5:45	8:20	8:20	8:20
17th	8:20	5:00	7:30	7:30	7:30
18th	7:30	4:12	6:37	6:37	6:37
19th	6:37	3:21	5:42	5:42	5:42
20th	5:42	2:27	4:45	4:45	4:45
21st	4:45	1:31	3:45	3:45	3:45
22nd	3:45	1:00	2:42	2:42	2:42
23rd	2:42	1:00	1:36	1:36	1:36
24th	1:36	1:00	1:00	1:00	1:00
25th	1:00	1:00	1:00	1:00	1:00
26th	1:00	1:00	1:00	1:00	1:00
27th	1:00	1:00	1:00	1:00	1:00
28th	1:00	1:00	1:00	1:00	1:00
29th	1:00	1:00	1:00	1:00	1:00
30th	1:00	1:00	1:00	1:00	1:00

SULLIVAN & MACNEILL,

ATTORNEYS - AT - LAW,

Solicitors in Chancery,

NOTARIES PUBLIC, &c.

OFFICE—O'Halloran's Building, Great

Queen Street, Charlottetown.

W. W. SULLIVAN, Q. C. | CHESTER B. MACNEILL,

Jan 17

GROCERY LONDON & LIVERPOOL.

Tea House,

MONAGHAN'S BRICK BUILDING,

West Side Queen Street.

Subscriber begs leave to inform the public that he is prepared to supply them with

FLOUR,

MEAL,

TEA,

COFFEE,

SUGAR,

MOLASSES,

and all other articles to be found in a first-class Grocery Store, at lowest possible prices.

Also, 10,000 CIGARS, choice brands, which will be sold cheap.

P. MONAGHAN.

Charlottetown, June 6, 1883

MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

THE SON.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

My father is a doctor.

My mother is a doctor.

REGULAR TRADERS.

THE CLIPPER BARK

MOSELLE,

300 Tons Register, Classed 10 years A1 in English Lloyd's.

ALEXANDER McLEOD, Commander,

WILL SAIL

From Liverpool to Charlottetown

About the 25th March.

FOLLOWED BY THE WELL-KNOWN

FAST-SAILING BARKENTINE

Ethel Blanche,

400 Tons Register, Classed by A1 at Lloyd's.

JOHN GRAHAM, Commander.

(See on the Berth).

Sailing about the 1st April.

ALSO, THE CLIPPER BARKENTINE

EREMIA,

300 Tons Register, Classed Bymars A1 at Lloyd's.

R. RENDLE, Commander.

(See on the Berth).

WILL SAIL FROM LONDON FOR CHARLOTTETOWN

About the 1st April.

The above vessels will carry Freight at Through

Rates to Paris, Copenhagen, St. Petersburg, and other ports.

For Freight or Passage apply to John

Peters & Sons, 16 Street, Winchester Street, in Liverpool or to Messrs. G. & J. South,

John Street, or to the agents.

PEAKE BROS. & CO.

Charlottetown, Feb. 6, 1884.—7c

JAMES PHILLIPS'

Marble Works,

KENT STREET,

Charlottetown, P. E. Island.

I HAVE ON HAND A CHOICE LOT OF

MONUMENTS,

HEADSTONES,

TABLETS, &c.

—OF—

Italian & American

MARBLE,

From New and Beautiful Designs, which are superior to anything I have ever seen, and I am confident that you will be glad to give satisfaction to all who favor me with their orders.

JAMES PHILLIPS.

June 6, 1883—1y

HALL'S

Vegetable Sicilian

HAIR RENOWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to the treatment of the hair and scalp.

It has had many imitations, but none have fully met all the requirements for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp.

HALL'S HAIR RENOWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and merit to every quarter of the globe. Its unequalled success can be attributed to its being purely vegetable, and its being adapted to the nature of the hair and scalp.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort at its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR

RENOWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all pruritis, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes it a matter of economy.

Prepared by

R. P. HALL & CO., Nashua, N. H.

Sold by all Dealers in Medicines.

Roman Intelligence.

Rome, Feb. 15, 1884.

The decision of the Court of Cassation in reference to the Propaganda, which is not yet officially published, though it is known, has caused a most painful sensation. For several years past such severe blows have been inflicted on the Church. It is regarded as an attempt to strike directly at the spiritual power of the Sovereign Pontiff. The delusive Law of the Guarantees is, by its decision, rendered more ridiculous than before, as it fails to guarantee even the clearest of spiritual liberty left to the Sovereign

Pontiff. The foreign Press, as well as that of Rome, displays indignation at such a sentence. The Giornale concludes a vigorous and well-reasoned article in these terms: "The attempt against the Propaganda will create in the Catholic world the impression of a crying injustice. But complaints will not suffice.

It is incumbent on Catholic princes and sovereigns. The sentence of the Court of Cassation should be neutralized

LOCAL AND OTHER MATTERS.

The Mount Howard Debating and Literary Institute are arranging for an entertainment on St. Patrick's night...

We are indebted to Mr. Robert A. Anderson, late of Belfast, but now in Maple Bay, B. C., for a fine copy of British Columbia papers.

The spring advertisements of Messrs McDonald and McPhoe will appear in next week's Herald. They were reviewed too late for insertion this week.

St. John contends that, under an old charter, the Dominion Government has no power to interfere with its license regulations, and now Halifax declares the Act ultra vires, so far as it is concerned.

A lottery in aid of the new Church at Carleton Place will take place in July next. The people of this district, while working energetically themselves, adopt this method of raising the co-operation of the public in their laudable object.

The Convention of the Prince Edward branch of the Dominion Alliance was held in this city on Thursday last. Several resolutions in reference to the organization, and for the better enforcement of the Canada Temperance Act were adopted.

The receipts of the Montreal Carnival Committee are not so large as was anticipated. They are $10,124 against an expenditure of $10,142,50, showing a deficit of $18,000. This, however, is accounted as nothing when weighed against the vast benefit conferred on the city at large.

JOURNALISTIC ITEMS are so plenty this week that we are loath to intrude so many of them on the public. And yet it would not do to refrain from mentioning the river lately on a pair of skating floats around as airily and gracefully as a fairy.

We have received the first copy of the Evening News, which came out on Thursday evening. It has a bright appearance, and though considerably smaller than the Patriot, it may grow. It is published by a company, of which we understand, Mr. Donald C. Martin, M. P., Mr. A. B. Warburton, and Hon. D. Davison are the originators and principal stockholders.

On Friday evening, the 7th inst., Rev. D. J. G. McDonald delivered a lecture in Black Bush School on "Roman Reminiscences." He gave a beautiful description of the cells now occupied by the inmates Lynda, St. Vincent, St. Francis, St. Gregory and others. The lecture occupied two hours in delivery, and was listened to throughout with marked attention.

The "Sibley" fire engine, having undergone considerable repair, was out on trial on Monday and Tuesday. A large number of citizens were present to look on, for some time a great interest has been manifested in fire department matters lately. The engine worked well, and entirely to the satisfaction of Chief Engineer Large and the Fire Department. The supply of water in the Pump was tested and found to be satisfactory.

The Patriot has sprung from its ashes, not in splendor like the well-known bird familiar to most of us, but in reduced form. It will appear weekly, and perhaps weekly, until the spring commeth, when new material will be procured, and arrangements made to send it flying along in its old groove, one of the leading daily papers in the Maritime Provinces.

In the meantime what the editor lacks in frequency he makes up in vigor. But the Patriot is nothing without its news. Here, David Laird is manager and editor, but we understand the new concern will be owned by a company.

Owing to the late storm there was no crossing between the Capes from Wednesday last till yesterday. Over twenty passengers and one hundred and eight mail bags arrived in Charlottetown at five o'clock this morning. It was labor enough in the morning to sort and distribute the mail matter, but under the present circumstances, "cribbed, cabined and confined" as are the Post Office officials in the temporary building they occupy, we may imagine under what disadvantages they had to work. Still they distributed the mail in good time. The re-building of the Post Office cannot be commenced too soon.

The Legislative Council—it is to say the majority in it, and a small one it is, and that without rhyme or reason. The sooner the day comes when the Council itself will have to step down and out the better the world for anything but dismissing doorkeepers. It is, on the contrary, a source of mischief and expense. The Summerside Pioneer says Mr. Chaisson was dismissed because he was incompetent. This should satisfy everyone. Perhaps he is unfit for the high position owing to the lack of a classic education. The Lords are awfully particular in these matters.

The annual meeting of the Benevolent Irish Society was held in St. Patrick's Hall on Monday evening, the 10th inst. After the receipt and adoption of the different official reports, and the transaction of other routine business, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Patron—James Reidin. President—John Kelly. 1st. Vice-President—Thos. E. Flynn. 2nd Vice-President—W. C. McBride. Treasurer—Richard Walsh. Secretary—Michael J. Moran. Sergeant-at-Arms—P. J. Kelly. Committee of Charities—James Ledegan, Chairman; Richard Costy, Michael Egan, James Egan, Bernard Callaghan, James Burns; Ward 2, Simon Bolger and Patrick McCarry; Ward 3, Andrew Sullivan and James Pilsnon; Ward 4, J. Hennessey and Anthony Duggan; Ward 5, Timothy Carroll and Bartholomew James.

Marshals—James Daley, Chief; James Mullins, S. Toole, John Trainor, John McArthur. Standard Bearer—Stephen McDonald, Jas. McCarthy, Patrick Burke, Thomas Gillan, James Boyne, Charles McKinnon.

This really excellent Society was never on a better footing. During the past year a large number of new names have been added to the roll of membership, and its constitution so amended that its field for usefulness has been enlarged.

CONDENSED TELEGRAMS.

General Gordon believes the slavery question will settle itself within a year by a rising of the slaves.

A letter from Shanghai reports a great financial panic at Peking, in which many native merchants and banks failed. The populace throughout the country was greatly excited.

The clause mentioned in the London Standard's Paris despatches, which leads the Paris police to believe an assault is contemplated against prominent officers in London on St. Patrick's day, is afforded by a letter from America which has fallen into the hands of the police.

Montenegro is making preparations for a campaign in Albania, and 4000 men have been concentrated on the frontier. Prince Nicholas, of Montenegro, designs to settle the frontier question this spring by a coup de main, setting the territory which Montenegro claims.

A Philadelphia despatch states that Mrs. Dalia Parrell, mother of the Irish patriot, also been systematically persecuted for a long while by persons living near her in Boston town. A bill of divorce has been drawn against her, and she is now in a state of great distress, and is to be taken to the workhouse.

A London despatch says: Two members of the firm of Messrs. Parker, solicitors, have died, leaving an aggregate of £1,000,000 and £2,000,000. They had borrowed £300,000 for various speculations.

In deference to the memorial of the Irish members of all shades of politics, the Government will introduce a motion to amend the purchase clause of the Land Act. Mr. Parrell is actively promoting a company to further migration from the congested districts of Ireland.

It is stated in Montreal that the Provincial Government will not recognize the Dominion Liquor License Act and will go on issuing licenses to the contrary.

A petition to His Holiness the Pope, signed by the clergy and laity of Quebec, asking to have the See of Montreal made into an archdiocese will be transmitted to Rome shortly.

William Mackenzie, Liberal M. P. for Hantsport, has been elected by a majority of 1,378. He voted against Gladstone on the Irish and Egyptian questions, resigned, and appealed for election to the Cabinet, to be called the Secretary for Scotland.

It is thought the dynamic outrages in England are only beginning, and will enable the Lords to press on the franchise bill.

The annual meeting of the St. Vincent de Paul Society of Summerside was held in the vestry of St. Paul's church, at that place on Friday evening, the 7th inst. The Rev. J. G. McDonald, Secretary, presided. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Rev. P. Doyle, Spiritual Director; Chas. Murphy, President, re-elected; 1st Vice President, James Higgins; 2nd Vice President, John Harrington; re-elected; Secretary, M. R. Trainor; Assistant Secy., A. P. McLennan.

MERCHANTS' BANK OF P. E. ISLAND. The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Merchants' Bank of P. E. Island, was held on last Saturday. The following report was read by W. A. Weeks, President: Owen Connolly, Hon. W. W. Sullivan, L. H. Davies, M. P., D. Farguharson, Benj. Hoertz, and L. L. Beer. The following report was adopted:

Table with columns: LIABILITIES, ASSETS, PROFIT AND LOSS ACCOUNT. Includes items like Capital, Reserve, and Profit and Loss.

By balance on hand from last year, 2003.34. By profits for the year, after deducting current expenses, 6,861.17. $ 7,064.51.

MARRIED. On Tuesday, the 20th Feb., in the Church of the Assumption, Captain N. B. by the Rev. Father Levey, Mr. James Condy, formerly of the late Daniel Looney, eldest daughter of the late Daniel Looney.

DEED. At his residence, Dorchester street, on the 8th inst., of inflammation of the stomach, Thos. J. G. McDonald, aged 70 years, died. He was buried on the 10th inst. At Ferryport, Lot 10, on the 10th inst., after a short but painful illness, of consumption, died, at the age of 60 years, of the late Mrs. McDonald, widow of the late Daniel Looney, eldest daughter of the late Daniel Looney.

At the residence of the late Mrs. McDonald, on the 8th inst., of inflammation of the stomach, Thos. J. G. McDonald, aged 70 years, died. He was buried on the 10th inst. At Ferryport, Lot 10, on the 10th inst., after a short but painful illness, of consumption, died, at the age of 60 years, of the late Mrs. McDonald, widow of the late Daniel Looney, eldest daughter of the late Daniel Looney.

At the residence of the late Mrs. McDonald, on the 8th inst., of inflammation of the stomach, Thos. J. G. McDonald, aged 70 years, died. He was buried on the 10th inst. At Ferryport, Lot 10, on the 10th inst., after a short but painful illness, of consumption, died, at the age of 60 years, of the late Mrs. McDonald, widow of the late Daniel Looney, eldest daughter of the late Daniel Looney.

At the residence of the late Mrs. McDonald, on the 8th inst., of inflammation of the stomach, Thos. J. G. McDonald, aged 70 years, died. He was buried on the 10th inst. At Ferryport, Lot 10, on the 10th inst., after a short but painful illness, of consumption, died, at the age of 60 years, of the late Mrs. McDonald, widow of the late Daniel Looney, eldest daughter of the late Daniel Looney.

At the residence of the late Mrs. McDonald, on the 8th inst., of inflammation of the stomach, Thos. J. G. McDonald, aged 70 years, died. He was buried on the 10th inst. At Ferryport, Lot 10, on the 10th inst., after a short but painful illness, of consumption, died, at the age of 60 years, of the late Mrs. McDonald, widow of the late Daniel Looney, eldest daughter of the late Daniel Looney.

At the residence of the late Mrs. McDonald, on the 8th inst., of inflammation of the stomach, Thos. J. G. McDonald, aged 70 years, died. He was buried on the 10th inst. At Ferryport, Lot 10, on the 10th inst., after a short but painful illness, of consumption, died, at the age of 60 years, of the late Mrs. McDonald, widow of the late Daniel Looney, eldest daughter of the late Daniel Looney.

At the residence of the late Mrs. McDonald, on the 8th inst., of inflammation of the stomach, Thos. J. G. McDonald, aged 70 years, died. He was buried on the 10th inst. At Ferryport, Lot 10, on the 10th inst., after a short but painful illness, of consumption, died, at the age of 60 years, of the late Mrs. McDonald, widow of the late Daniel Looney, eldest daughter of the late Daniel Looney.

At the residence of the late Mrs. McDonald, on the 8th inst., of inflammation of the stomach, Thos. J. G. McDonald, aged 70 years, died. He was buried on the 10th inst. At Ferryport, Lot 10, on the 10th inst., after a short but painful illness, of consumption, died, at the age of 60 years, of the late Mrs. McDonald, widow of the late Daniel Looney, eldest daughter of the late Daniel Looney.

At the residence of the late Mrs. McDonald, on the 8th inst., of inflammation of the stomach, Thos. J. G. McDonald, aged 70 years, died. He was buried on the 10th inst. At Ferryport, Lot 10, on the 10th inst., after a short but painful illness, of consumption, died, at the age of 60 years, of the late Mrs. McDonald, widow of the late Daniel Looney, eldest daughter of the late Daniel Looney.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

Men's and Boys' Felt Hats in great variety, very cheap at J. R. McDonald's. A great stock of Prints and Grey Cotton at J. R. McDonald's. Pronounced the cheapest in town.

When you want a new Carpet, in Scotch, Brussels or Tapestry, cheap, go to J. R. McDonald's. A lot of Builders' Dressing (both colors), half price at J. R. McDonald's.

The City Hat Store has the place for cheap hats. Sign of the Big Hat. L. E. Prowse has just opened his spring hats. They are very good quality cheap. Every man, young or old, who wants a hat that becomes him, should call at L. E. Prowse's. Sign of the Big Hat.

We are offering special inducements to cash buyers in town and country for six weeks, in order to meet some spring importations, which our Mr. Harris has just left to purchase in the English Markets. Gno. DAVIES, 102 2 1/2.

Great rush for Tea at P. Monaghan's Grocery and Tea House, an extensive stock and supply. The annual production of Kerosene Oil in the United States, is about 60,000,000 gallons. The Standard Water Works, is highly refined, colorless, odorless and safe. It is sold in 5 gall. and 10 gall. cans, at George Carter's, 12 1/2 1/2 George Street.

GRAND CONCERT.

TO BE HELD UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE BENEVOLENT IRISH SOCIETY, WILL BE GIVEN ST. PATRICK'S NIGHT, IN THE MARKET HALL, PROGRAMME.

- PART 1. 1. Overture—Queen of the Valley. 2. Chorus—Let Erin Remember the Days of Old. 3. Solo Vocal—When the Tide comes in. 4. Cornet Solo—The Green Little Shamrock. 5. Solo Vocal—An Irish Emigrant. 6. Chorus—The Minstrel Boy. 7. Solo Vocal—The Waiting Heart. 8. Solo Vocal—The Lament of the Irish Emigrant. 9. Selections from Pops and Pavan. 10. The Minstrel Boy.

- PART 2. 11. Piano Duet—Duet in D. 12. Chorus—The Last Rose of Summer. 13. Solo Vocal—Monarch of the Woods. 14. Violin Solo and string quartet—Ave Maria. 15. Solo Vocal—The Star of Erin. 16. Solo Vocal—The Last Gilgiblue of Erin. 17. Waltzes—Breeze of the Night. 18. Chorus—Isometric Exercises. 19. The Minstrel Boy.

Admission: Reserved Seats 30 cents; Unreserved 20 cents. Concert at 8 p.m. March 12, 1884.

Postponed Sale.

WE will sell by Public Auction on the 11th inst., at the residence of Mr. William Lannan on Monday, the 24th MARCH, at eleven o'clock a.m., the whole of the stock, crop, implements, etc., of the late Mr. J. H. Prowse, deceased, and all other contents of the premises, as previously advertised to be sold on the 11th inst.

TERMS—all sums under $50 cash; over that amount nine months credit on approved joint notes. MACDONALD & AITKEN. Montague, March 12, 1884.

Sheriff's Sale.

BY Virtue of a Writ of Statute Execution D. no. 416, issued out of Her Majesty's Supreme Court of Judicature, at the suit of Owen Connolly, Patrick Kelly and Joseph Doyle, against Archibald McLeilan, John R. McLeilan and the lands, tenements and hereditaments which were of Donald McLeilan, deceased, I have taken and seized as the property of the said Archibald McLeilan, John R. McLeilan and Donald McLeilan, deceased, in and to all that tract, piece and parcel of land, situate, lying and being on Lot or Township number forty-six, in King's County, Prince Edward Island, bounded and described as follows, that is to say—Commencing at the bank or shore of the Little Harbor at the Southeast angle of a farm of land now or lately in possession of Donald McDonald, thence North-westerly along the Eastern boundary of said Donald McDonald's farm, and the Eastern boundary of a farm now or formerly in the possession of John McDonald, until it meets the Greenvale Road, thence Eastward along the said Road to the West boundary of fifty D to and covered by Archibald and Donald McLeilan to Joseph McLeilan, thence following the Western boundary of said fifty acres to the shore aforesaid, and thence along the shore of said Little Harbor to the place of commencement, containing by estimation 102 acres of land, a little more or less, and I do hereby give Public Notice that I will, on MONDAY, the 22nd day of SEPTEMBER, 1884, at two o'clock in the afternoon, at the Court House in George town, in King's County, set up and sell by Public Auction, the above mentioned property, as and as much thereof as will satisfy the Levy made on the said Writ, being four hundred and ninety dollars and ninety-six cents, with interest on $300 from the third day of March, 1884, at the rate of seven and a half per cent per annum, besides Sheriff's fees and all incidental expenses. MICHAEL MCCORMACK, Sheriff.

She-ff's Office, King's County, 12 1/2 1/2 March, 1884. C. B. MACBETH, Plaintiff's Attorney.

Tenders.

TENDERS will be received by this Department, at Ottawa, up to the 25th inst., for the Maintenance of Bays at Charlottetown, P. E. Island. Full particulars of the service can be obtained upon application to the agent of this Department at Charlottetown.

WM. SMITH, Deputy Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Ottawa, 4th March, 1884.

The Great Sale of Cotton Goods at the London House.

will be continued for 30 days, for cash, at a still further reduction in prices.

MICHAEL MCCORMACK, Sheriff. She-ff's Office, King's County, 12 1/2 1/2 March, 1884. C. B. MACBETH, Plaintiff's Attorney.

Land for Sale.

FOR SALE on the Montreal Road, Lot 55. A piece of Land containing 79 Acres, with the exception of a few acres cleared. The entire piece is covered with a fine and valuable growth of Hard and Softwood. Title is good, and possession can be given immediately. Price $450. Apply to A. A. MACDONALD & BROS., Georgetown, March 12, 1884—3m.

Tenders.

SEALED TENDERS will be received until the 10th Day of April next, at the office of Reddin & Macdonald, Charlottetown, for the building of a Cottage at Mill Cove. Specifications to be sent at the office aforesaid. Contractor to find all material and complete work previous to length of July next. Two and sufficient securities to be given for completion of work specified.

The undersigned will not be bound to accept the lowest or any tender. P. BEARNEY, Mill Cove, Lot 35, March 12, 1884—5.

W. R. WATSON'S City Drug Store.

THE LARGEST STOCK IN P. E. ISLAND OF Purest Drugs, Druggists' Sundries, Fine Groceries, Perfumes, Soaps, Sponges, Brushes, Toilet Powders, and all Toilet Articles and Preparations.

Pipes, Tobacco, Cigars, and Smokers' Requisites. Razors, and all Shaving Materials. Dyes of all Kinds a Specialty. English Pickles, Sauces, Olives, Ess. Coffee.

Purest Wines and Liquors for Medicinal and Sacramental use. Scrupulous care given to dispensing prescriptions. Charlottetown, March 5, 1884—1yr.

CARROLL & McALEER, Carriage Builders.

FORMERLY occupying the premises of Messrs J. & R. Scott, lately destroyed by fire, beg leave to inform their patrons that they have engaged the premises of Mr. H. G. F. HARRIS.

OPPOSITE THE ROCKLIN HOUSE, KENT STREET, where they are prepared to attend to all work in their line. Repairing and Painting done with neatness and Dispatch. Charlottetown, March 5, 1884—3m.

DR. P. CONROY, PHYSICIAN & SURGEON.

GREAT GEORGE STREET, CHARLOTTETOWN. Feb. 13, 1884—1yr.

SEEDS.

Forwarded to all parts of the Dominion by Mail. Safe arrival guaranteed, Postage prepaid. We will send you the most illustrated and complete CATALOGUE in Canada. FREE OF CHARGE. FLOWER AND GARDEN SEEDS, Mixed Grains, Clover, Timothy, Etc. Don't fail to send your name and post office address for copy before ordering your supply. STEELE BROS. & CO., Seed Merchants, TORONTO, ONT. Jan. 16, 1884—2m.

THE KENSINGTON DRUG STORE.

OFFERS A FULL LINE OF Pure Drugs, Chemicals, and Medicinal Preparations. Family Medicines, Spices, Essences, Perfumery, Soaps, Sponges, Chest Protectors, &c. Diamond, Handy Package & Star Dyes, Hore and Cattle Medicines, Thorley's Improved H. and C. Food, all the leading Patent Medicines. Stationery and Choice Tobacco. Prescriptions accurately prepared. D. DARRACH, Kensington, Feb. 20, 1884—1yr.

WANTED.

Men and Women to start a new business at their homes, easily learned in an hour. No peddling. 10 cts to 50 cts, an hour made daytime or evening. Send 10 cents for 20 samples to come by mail or express. Address H. G. FAY, Rutland, Vermont. Feb. 4, 1884—2m.

SPRING GOODS.

PERKINS & STERNS

550 PIECES GREY COTTONS, 280 Pieces White Cottons, 800 PIECES PRINT COTTONS.

English, Canadian and American Knitting Cotton, A GOOD STOCK OF CANADIAN & AMERICAN CORSETS.

Black French, Merinoes, Nun's Black Veiling, Black Cashmeres, Black Persian Cord.

A FULL LINE OF MOURNING GOODS.

Table Linens, Towels, Sheetings, Pillow Cottons, Room Paper, Rugs, Mats, Carpets, Oil Cloths, etc., all standard Goods, and prices low.

W. & A. BROWN & CO. Resumed Business.

FOR THE PRESENT, IN THE Store formerly occupied by H. A. Harvie, QUEEN STREET, NEARLY OPPOSITE WATSON'S DRUG STORE. Charlottetown, March 12, 1884.

CITY HAT STORE. NEW HATS.

Hard Felt Hats, Soft Felt Hats, Low Crown Hats, High Crown Hats, Medium Crown Hats, Narrow and Wide Rim Hats.

Hats of all kinds, styles and prices.

All are respectfully requested to call and see my Stock of Hats, as I can suit both in style and price.

L. E. PROWSE, Sign of the Great Hat, next door to Mrs. Stamper's.

Great Sale!

New Spring Prints, ENGLISH AND AMERICAN, JUST OPENED.

LONDON HOUSE

These Prints having been bought previous to the advance of 7 1/2 per cent duty, will be offered to our customers with that advantage.

WE HAVE AN IMMENSE STOCK OF GREY AND WHITE COTTONS, bought when the depression in the cotton market was at its lowest point. Fleecy Cottons, Sheeting Cottons, Pillow Cottons, Table Linen and Napkins, Towels, Towelling, Tapestry, Scotch & Brussels Carpets, and Other House Furnishing Goods.

CHOICE TEAS! VERY CHEAP,

By the Chest, Half-Chest, and Quarter Chest. Also, in packages of 5, 10, 15 and 20 pounds. Charlottetown, Feb. 27, 1884.

Notice to Contractors.

TENDERS will be received by the undersigned, until Saturday, the 15th inst., from parties willing to contract for the building of a New Convent in Summerside, according to plans and specifications to be seen at the Herald Office, Charlottetown, and at the residence of Mr. Matthew Dempsey, Summerside.

The undersigned will not be bound to accept the lowest or any tender. PATRICK DOYLE, Summerside, March 5, 1884.

BURKE & EDMONDS, HOUSE, SIGN AND ORNAMENTAL PAINTERS.

Paper Hangers, &c. A few doors north of W. E. Dawson's Hardware Store. GREAT GEORGE ST., CHARLOTTETOWN.

Tinting, Whitewashing, Graining, Gilding, Glazing, &c. done with neatness and dispatch, and at moderate rates. Charlottetown, Feb. 27, 1884—3m.

Farm for Sale!

THE Subscribers offer for sale, on 30 terms, a Farm containing 50 Acres, SITUATE on the LAUNCHING ROAD, about 2 miles from Carleton Place.

with good Dwelling House and Barn. Possession given immediately. Price five hundred dollars. A. A. MACDONALD & BROS., Georgetown, Feb. 27, 1884—3m.

McLEOD, MORSON & McQUARRIE, BARRISTERS & ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW.

Office in Old Bank, UP STAIRS. Charlottetown, February 27, 1884.

NOTICE.

THE SUBSCRIBER IS FITTING UP HIS MILL WITH Smallwood's Improved Rotary Mill, which will be ready about the first of April, and ALL KINDS OF SAWING. He solicits a share of public patronage. All kinds of Grain Manufactured with dispatch and work guaranteed. JAMES J. WINNER, Winner's Mills, Feb. 27, 1884—3m.

Teacher Wanted.

A SECOND or Third-Class Teacher required for Little Harbor School, Lot 66, King's County. Supplement, $30. Apply to ANGUS A. CAMPBELL, JOHN H. MACDONALD, Trustees. L. E. PROWSE, February 27, 1884—3m.

The Liquor License Act, 1883.

NOTICE is hereby given that a meeting of the Board of License Commissioners for the License District of Queen's County, will be held in the Court Room, in the Law Courts Building, in Charlottetown, on Saturday, the Twenty-ninth day of March next, at the hour of eleven o'clock, forenoon, for the purpose of taking into consideration all applications for certificates for such Licenses as by the Liquor License Act, 1883, are authorized to be granted in this License District.

By Order of the Board, ROBERT H. CRAWFORD, Chief Inspector of Licenses for Queen's County, Feb. 29, 1884—3m.

The Liquor License Act, 1883.

NOTICE is hereby given that a meeting of the Board of License Commissioners for the License District of King's County, will be held in the Supreme Court House, in Georgetown, on Monday, the Thirty-first day of March next, at the hour of seven o'clock in the afternoon, for the purpose of taking into consideration all applications for certificates for such Licenses as by the Liquor License Act, 1883, are authorized to be granted in this License District.

By Order of the Board, JOHN MCKINNON, Chief Inspector of Licenses for King's County, Feb. 29, 1884—3m.

SELLING OFF

Imperial Grocery Store, RICHMOND STREET, GROCERIES, CROCKERY, GLASS WARE, COPPISH, HERRING, &c. Must be cleared off before the 1st of May. F. N. FATE, February 20, 1884—41 may 1.

FERRY'S SEED ANNUAL FOR 1884.

Will be mailed FREE to all applicants and to members of the Law Society without cost. It contains illustrations, prices, descriptions and directions for planting all varieties of Flower Seeds, Ferns, &c. It is available to all. D. M. FERRY & CO., Ont. for 16 cts now.

PALMER & MULLALLY, Attorneys-at-Law, NOTARIES PUBLIC, &c.

Office—O'Halloran's Building, OPPOSITE ST. PATRICK'S HALL, GREAT GEORGE STREET, CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I. Money to Lend at Low Interest. H. V. PALMER & J. W. MULLALLY, Feb. 12, 1884—1m.

NO MARGIN—AS IT WERE.

Well, Fred, old boy, 'tis settled, we were married Thursday last, and I'm a happy wife, and the thing is done and past. What with footing bills for dry goods and borrowing here and there, I was worried in my mind as to how I was to get on. And then her ma would have us take our honeymoon abroad. Now, I tell you, Fred, this honeymoon's the thinnest kind of fraud. Talk of Europe—why, the tailor for the wedding toga, I swear, holds a kind of chattel mortgage on my body—as it were. What tempted me to marry? Well, I hardly know myself. I met her at a party, and the wretched little old man, who was a wonderful amount of the softest gold on earth. That my heart got somehow tangled in the mesh—as it were. What tempted her to have me? 'Twas the mother, bless her heart. She thinks she's a very cunning woman, and she is always smart. But she, too, had her mark completely, as, no doubt, you are aware. When she took "your humble servant" for a Miss—as it were. Now there's nothing made by growing, but I'll tell you something that I've learned since. Last evening, feeling tired, I went early to bed. And when I saw those "tresses over the arm of a chair. Well, I felt the stock I purchased had been watered—as it were. 'Twas a happy chance, however, for I told her then and there. That her much mistaken husband was no knight of millonaires. And dry goods clerk. We quarrelled, then we kissed and called it square. When the books were balanced, neither had a margin—as it were.

THE WRONG MAN.

BY THE HON. MRS. A. MONTGOMERY.
Author of "The Wrong Man."

CHAPTER XIII.—(CONTINUED.)

Camille's labors began from the first hour of her arrival. There was no time to lose in that terrible ocean of anguish and suffering. Madeline had been gently initiated into the horrors of hospital work, and in no instance had seen more horrid groaning and shrieking with their life blood oozing from ghastly wounds, straight from the field of battle; but there was no time to think now whether or not you could bear it. Be it yours, and act on that, or throw up the work altogether. No one had time to inquire whether Camille felt faint at the sight of blood—whether she could assist in dressing a wound, or in holding a bandage properly. If she could not do anything and everything that came before her, there would be nothing for it but to return to Brussels as best she might. She was not a woman to make any mistake at such a juncture. It was all very new to her, and totally unlike any former experience in her luxurious life. But she said to herself, "It was for this I came, and whether it be more or less, can make no difference in that."

Consequently, with quiet dignity and presence of mind, she immediately set to work with quick eye and ready hand, doing everything that came before her, to do, scarcely ever troubling anyone by asking a question, but silently watching to see where she was most wanted. The sleeping arrangements in connection with the ambulance were of a very primitive description. In most cases a few wooden benches had been put together for the accommodation of the ladies, close to the large shed which formed part of the buildings originally connected with a manufactory outside the city. They were thus close to their work, and at the same time removed from the sad sounds and distressing scenes in the immediate neighborhood of the wounded soldiers.

The small construction where Camille was located contained two beds—for in no instance was a girl, under conditions like her own, exposed to the possible contingency of being left alone at night. Camille had been working hard for some weeks, deeply interested in her labors, and so fully absorbed by them that everything connected with her home-life seemed removed to an inconceivable distance. She had no leisure for regrets, still less for anxious forebodings. At that time it happened that the lady who shared the same bed with Camille had broken down in nerves and health, from over-fatigue, or other causes, and had been sent home. The ambulance was very full, the labor incessant, and nothing had yet been done to procure for Camille another companion. It made no difference to her; she was accustomed to all subjects, and under all circumstances; and, on the whole she rather preferred the feeling of solitude and loneliness for the few moments when she sat by her lamp before laying her weary limbs on her narrow couch.

One day, long before daybreak, Camille's rest had been disturbed by the unmistakable sounds of fighting not very far from where the ambulance was established. A sortie had just been made by the beleaguered army, and never before had the point of attack been so near. More than one shell fell on the very building consecrated to the shelter of the wounded, and though no one, happily, was seriously injured, there was continued alarm and anxiety for several hours. Then followed the terrible consequences of the battle—the wounded carried in by the Knights of the Red Cross, and every hand engaged in attending to the suffering and the dying. The Abbé Sire was passing, with calm, sweet face, from one bed to another—here receiving the broken accents of a brief last confession, there speaking a few words of encouragement and hope.

It was in the morning, Camille had been attending to the wants of a poor French soldier who was wounded in the leg, but who, with the usual heroic colloquial tendencies of his countrymen, in spite of pain and suffering, was anxious to enter into all the details of the fight that had laid him low. "Ah! Mademoiselle," he said, "I should not mind if it had been in my arm or my shoulder that the ball had hit me. But my leg! It was too bad, for it made it impossible for me to go to the help of my comrade, who fell at my side mortally wounded. Ah! my poor comrade, if I could have walked but half-a-dozen paces, I might at least have received his last wishes; and I had pledged myself to him, and he to me, that very morning, as we left the city, that if he fell near me, I should take a paper he always carried about with him, and have it sent to where it was addressed; and on the other hand, he was to write to my poor mother, and tell her I had fallen bravely, and died in the service of my country," continued the poor soldier, with enthusiasm, as if the event had really occurred.

"And was your comrade killed?" asked Camille, as she adjusted the pillow, and placed a cup of water within his reach. "Alas! yes. I still hoped he was living, for I heard him groan several times, and I heard him praying. But when they came towards me with a stretcher, they turned him over and looked at him. 'He is quite dead,' they said, 'but here is a man we can do something for,' they added, as they came up to me. I begged them to look again at my poor comrade. I could not believe he was dead, and it went to my heart to leave him there. But they said it was no use—they had no time to stand examining corpses, and that if I did not want to stop there all night, I must go with them at once. And so there he is, not five hundred yards from here, and I can't see him. The doctors, however, where it lies, over his poor silent head. Ah! Mademoiselle, they say it is a fine thing to fight for one's country, and I suppose it is true; but here am I, lamed for life, and there is that young gentleman—for he was a nobleman, Mademoiselle, and handsome as a man as ever you saw—lying dead on the field, and who knows but what he has left a sweethearth behind him who will never know how gloriously he died."

"And what was your comrade's name, my good friend?" said Camille, not more interested in this tale than in so many others she had heard of the same kind. "He was from Brittany, Mademoiselle—the Count Henri Le Maître."

Camille's labors began from the first hour of her arrival. There was no time to lose in that terrible ocean of anguish and suffering. Madeline had been gently initiated into the horrors of hospital work, and in no instance had seen more horrid groaning and shrieking with their life blood oozing from ghastly wounds, straight from the field of battle; but there was no time to think now whether or not you could bear it. Be it yours, and act on that, or throw up the work altogether. No one had time to inquire whether Camille felt faint at the sight of blood—whether she could assist in dressing a wound, or in holding a bandage properly. If she could not do anything and everything that came before her, there would be nothing for it but to return to Brussels as best she might. She was not a woman to make any mistake at such a juncture. It was all very new to her, and totally unlike any former experience in her luxurious life. But she said to herself, "It was for this I came, and whether it be more or less, can make no difference in that."

Consequently, with quiet dignity and presence of mind, she immediately set to work with quick eye and ready hand, doing everything that came before her, to do, scarcely ever troubling anyone by asking a question, but silently watching to see where she was most wanted. The sleeping arrangements in connection with the ambulance were of a very primitive description. In most cases a few wooden benches had been put together for the accommodation of the ladies, close to the large shed which formed part of the buildings originally connected with a manufactory outside the city. They were thus close to their work, and at the same time removed from the sad sounds and distressing scenes in the immediate neighborhood of the wounded soldiers.

The small construction where Camille was located contained two beds—for in no instance was a girl, under conditions like her own, exposed to the possible contingency of being left alone at night. Camille had been working hard for some weeks, deeply interested in her labors, and so fully absorbed by them that everything connected with her home-life seemed removed to an inconceivable distance. She had no leisure for regrets, still less for anxious forebodings. At that time it happened that the lady who shared the same bed with Camille had broken down in nerves and health, from over-fatigue, or other causes, and had been sent home. The ambulance was very full, the labor incessant, and nothing had yet been done to procure for Camille another companion. It made no difference to her; she was accustomed to all subjects, and under all circumstances; and, on the whole she rather preferred the feeling of solitude and loneliness for the few moments when she sat by her lamp before laying her weary limbs on her narrow couch.

One day, long before daybreak, Camille's rest had been disturbed by the unmistakable sounds of fighting not very far from where the ambulance was established. A sortie had just been made by the beleaguered army, and never before had the point of attack been so near. More than one shell fell on the very building consecrated to the shelter of the wounded, and though no one, happily, was seriously injured, there was continued alarm and anxiety for several hours. Then followed the terrible consequences of the battle—the wounded carried in by the Knights of the Red Cross, and every hand engaged in attending to the suffering and the dying. The Abbé Sire was passing, with calm, sweet face, from one bed to another—here receiving the broken accents of a brief last confession, there speaking a few words of encouragement and hope.

It was in the morning, Camille had been attending to the wants of a poor French soldier who was wounded in the leg, but who, with the usual heroic colloquial tendencies of his countrymen, in spite of pain and suffering, was anxious to enter into all the details of the fight that had laid him low. "Ah! Mademoiselle," he said, "I should not mind if it had been in my arm or my shoulder that the ball had hit me. But my leg! It was too bad, for it made it impossible for me to go to the help of my comrade, who fell at my side mortally wounded. Ah! my poor comrade, if I could have walked but half-a-dozen paces, I might at least have received his last wishes; and I had pledged myself to him, and he to me, that very morning, as we left the city, that if he fell near me, I should take a paper he always carried about with him, and have it sent to where it was addressed; and on the other hand, he was to write to my poor mother, and tell her I had fallen bravely, and died in the service of my country," continued the poor soldier, with enthusiasm, as if the event had really occurred.

"And was your comrade killed?" asked Camille, as she adjusted the pillow, and placed a cup of water within his reach. "Alas! yes. I still hoped he was living, for I heard him groan several times, and I heard him praying. But when they came towards me with a stretcher, they turned him over and looked at him. 'He is quite dead,' they said, 'but here is a man we can do something for,' they added, as they came up to me. I begged them to look again at my poor comrade. I could not believe he was dead, and it went to my heart to leave him there. But they said it was no use—they had no time to stand examining corpses, and that if I did not want to stop there all night, I must go with them at once. And so there he is, not five hundred yards from here, and I can't see him. The doctors, however, where it lies, over his poor silent head. Ah! Mademoiselle, they say it is a fine thing to fight for one's country, and I suppose it is true; but here am I, lamed for life, and there is that young gentleman—for he was a nobleman, Mademoiselle, and handsome as a man as ever you saw—lying dead on the field, and who knows but what he has left a sweethearth behind him who will never know how gloriously he died."

rade, who fell at my side mortally wounded. Ah! my poor comrade, if I could have walked but half-a-dozen paces, I might at least have received his last wishes; and I had pledged myself to him, and he to me, that very morning, as we left the city, that if he fell near me, I should take a paper he always carried about with him, and have it sent to where it was addressed; and on the other hand, he was to write to my poor mother, and tell her I had fallen bravely, and died in the service of my country," continued the poor soldier, with enthusiasm, as if the event had really occurred.

"And was your comrade killed?" asked Camille, as she adjusted the pillow, and placed a cup of water within his reach. "Alas! yes. I still hoped he was living, for I heard him groan several times, and I heard him praying. But when they came towards me with a stretcher, they turned him over and looked at him. 'He is quite dead,' they said, 'but here is a man we can do something for,' they added, as they came up to me. I begged them to look again at my poor comrade. I could not believe he was dead, and it went to my heart to leave him there. But they said it was no use—they had no time to stand examining corpses, and that if I did not want to stop there all night, I must go with them at once. And so there he is, not five hundred yards from here, and I can't see him. The doctors, however, where it lies, over his poor silent head. Ah! Mademoiselle, they say it is a fine thing to fight for one's country, and I suppose it is true; but here am I, lamed for life, and there is that young gentleman—for he was a nobleman, Mademoiselle, and handsome as a man as ever you saw—lying dead on the field, and who knows but what he has left a sweethearth behind him who will never know how gloriously he died."

"And what was your comrade's name, my good friend?" said Camille, not more interested in this tale than in so many others she had heard of the same kind. "He was from Brittany, Mademoiselle—the Count Henri Le Maître."

Camille's labors began from the first hour of her arrival. There was no time to lose in that terrible ocean of anguish and suffering. Madeline had been gently initiated into the horrors of hospital work, and in no instance had seen more horrid groaning and shrieking with their life blood oozing from ghastly wounds, straight from the field of battle; but there was no time to think now whether or not you could bear it. Be it yours, and act on that, or throw up the work altogether. No one had time to inquire whether Camille felt faint at the sight of blood—whether she could assist in dressing a wound, or in holding a bandage properly. If she could not do anything and everything that came before her, there would be nothing for it but to return to Brussels as best she might. She was not a woman to make any mistake at such a juncture. It was all very new to her, and totally unlike any former experience in her luxurious life. But she said to herself, "It was for this I came, and whether it be more or less, can make no difference in that."

Consequently, with quiet dignity and presence of mind, she immediately set to work with quick eye and ready hand, doing everything that came before her, to do, scarcely ever troubling anyone by asking a question, but silently watching to see where she was most wanted. The sleeping arrangements in connection with the ambulance were of a very primitive description. In most cases a few wooden benches had been put together for the accommodation of the ladies, close to the large shed which formed part of the buildings originally connected with a manufactory outside the city. They were thus close to their work, and at the same time removed from the sad sounds and distressing scenes in the immediate neighborhood of the wounded soldiers.

The small construction where Camille was located contained two beds—for in no instance was a girl, under conditions like her own, exposed to the possible contingency of being left alone at night. Camille had been working hard for some weeks, deeply interested in her labors, and so fully absorbed by them that everything connected with her home-life seemed removed to an inconceivable distance. She had no leisure for regrets, still less for anxious forebodings. At that time it happened that the lady who shared the same bed with Camille had broken down in nerves and health, from over-fatigue, or other causes, and had been sent home. The ambulance was very full, the labor incessant, and nothing had yet been done to procure for Camille another companion. It made no difference to her; she was accustomed to all subjects, and under all circumstances; and, on the whole she rather preferred the feeling of solitude and loneliness for the few moments when she sat by her lamp before laying her weary limbs on her narrow couch.

One day, long before daybreak, Camille's rest had been disturbed by the unmistakable sounds of fighting not very far from where the ambulance was established. A sortie had just been made by the beleaguered army, and never before had the point of attack been so near. More than one shell fell on the very building consecrated to the shelter of the wounded, and though no one, happily, was seriously injured, there was continued alarm and anxiety for several hours. Then followed the terrible consequences of the battle—the wounded carried in by the Knights of the Red Cross, and every hand engaged in attending to the suffering and the dying. The Abbé Sire was passing, with calm, sweet face, from one bed to another—here receiving the broken accents of a brief last confession, there speaking a few words of encouragement and hope.

It was in the morning, Camille had been attending to the wants of a poor French soldier who was wounded in the leg, but who, with the usual heroic colloquial tendencies of his countrymen, in spite of pain and suffering, was anxious to enter into all the details of the fight that had laid him low. "Ah! Mademoiselle," he said, "I should not mind if it had been in my arm or my shoulder that the ball had hit me. But my leg! It was too bad, for it made it impossible for me to go to the help of my comrade, who fell at my side mortally wounded. Ah! my poor comrade, if I could have walked but half-a-dozen paces, I might at least have received his last wishes; and I had pledged myself to him, and he to me, that very morning, as we left the city, that if he fell near me, I should take a paper he always carried about with him, and have it sent to where it was addressed; and on the other hand, he was to write to my poor mother, and tell her I had fallen bravely, and died in the service of my country," continued the poor soldier, with enthusiasm, as if the event had really occurred.

"And was your comrade killed?" asked Camille, as she adjusted the pillow, and placed a cup of water within his reach. "Alas! yes. I still hoped he was living, for I heard him groan several times, and I heard him praying. But when they came towards me with a stretcher, they turned him over and looked at him. 'He is quite dead,' they said, 'but here is a man we can do something for,' they added, as they came up to me. I begged them to look again at my poor comrade. I could not believe he was dead, and it went to my heart to leave him there. But they said it was no use—they had no time to stand examining corpses, and that if I did not want to stop there all night, I must go with them at once. And so there he is, not five hundred yards from here, and I can't see him. The doctors, however, where it lies, over his poor silent head. Ah! Mademoiselle, they say it is a fine thing to fight for one's country, and I suppose it is true; but here am I, lamed for life, and there is that young gentleman—for he was a nobleman, Mademoiselle, and handsome as a man as ever you saw—lying dead on the field, and who knows but what he has left a sweethearth behind him who will never know how gloriously he died."

rade, who fell at my side mortally wounded. Ah! my poor comrade, if I could have walked but half-a-dozen paces, I might at least have received his last wishes; and I had pledged myself to him, and he to me, that very morning, as we left the city, that if he fell near me, I should take a paper he always carried about with him, and have it sent to where it was addressed; and on the other hand, he was to write to my poor mother, and tell her I had fallen bravely, and died in the service of my country," continued the poor soldier, with enthusiasm, as if the event had really occurred.

"And was your comrade killed?" asked Camille, as she adjusted the pillow, and placed a cup of water within his reach. "Alas! yes. I still hoped he was living, for I heard him groan several times, and I heard him praying. But when they came towards me with a stretcher, they turned him over and looked at him. 'He is quite dead,' they said, 'but here is a man we can do something for,' they added, as they came up to me. I begged them to look again at my poor comrade. I could not believe he was dead, and it went to my heart to leave him there. But they said it was no use—they had no time to stand examining corpses, and that if I did not want to stop there all night, I must go with them at once. And so there he is, not five hundred yards from here, and I can't see him. The doctors, however, where it lies, over his poor silent head. Ah! Mademoiselle, they say it is a fine thing to fight for one's country, and I suppose it is true; but here am I, lamed for life, and there is that young gentleman—for he was a nobleman, Mademoiselle, and handsome as a man as ever you saw—lying dead on the field, and who knows but what he has left a sweethearth behind him who will never know how gloriously he died."

"And what was your comrade's name, my good friend?" said Camille, not more interested in this tale than in so many others she had heard of the same kind. "He was from Brittany, Mademoiselle—the Count Henri Le Maître."

Camille's labors began from the first hour of her arrival. There was no time to lose in that terrible ocean of anguish and suffering. Madeline had been gently initiated into the horrors of hospital work, and in no instance had seen more horrid groaning and shrieking with their life blood oozing from ghastly wounds, straight from the field of battle; but there was no time to think now whether or not you could bear it. Be it yours, and act on that, or throw up the work altogether. No one had time to inquire whether Camille felt faint at the sight of blood—whether she could assist in dressing a wound, or in holding a bandage properly. If she could not do anything and everything that came before her, there would be nothing for it but to return to Brussels as best she might. She was not a woman to make any mistake at such a juncture. It was all very new to her, and totally unlike any former experience in her luxurious life. But she said to herself, "It was for this I came, and whether it be more or less, can make no difference in that."

Consequently, with quiet dignity and presence of mind, she immediately set to work with quick eye and ready hand, doing everything that came before her, to do, scarcely ever troubling anyone by asking a question, but silently watching to see where she was most wanted. The sleeping arrangements in connection with the ambulance were of a very primitive description. In most cases a few wooden benches had been put together for the accommodation of the ladies, close to the large shed which formed part of the buildings originally connected with a manufactory outside the city. They were thus close to their work, and at the same time removed from the sad sounds and distressing scenes in the immediate neighborhood of the wounded soldiers.

The small construction where Camille was located contained two beds—for in no instance was a girl, under conditions like her own, exposed to the possible contingency of being left alone at night. Camille had been working hard for some weeks, deeply interested in her labors, and so fully absorbed by them that everything connected with her home-life seemed removed to an inconceivable distance. She had no leisure for regrets, still less for anxious forebodings. At that time it happened that the lady who shared the same bed with Camille had broken down in nerves and health, from over-fatigue, or other causes, and had been sent home. The ambulance was very full, the labor incessant, and nothing had yet been done to procure for Camille another companion. It made no difference to her; she was accustomed to all subjects, and under all circumstances; and, on the whole she rather preferred the feeling of solitude and loneliness for the few moments when she sat by her lamp before laying her weary limbs on her narrow couch.

One day, long before daybreak, Camille's rest had been disturbed by the unmistakable sounds of fighting not very far from where the ambulance was established. A sortie had just been made by the beleaguered army, and never before had the point of attack been so near. More than one shell fell on the very building consecrated to the shelter of the wounded, and though no one, happily, was seriously injured, there was continued alarm and anxiety for several hours. Then followed the terrible consequences of the battle—the wounded carried in by the Knights of the Red Cross, and every hand engaged in attending to the suffering and the dying. The Abbé Sire was passing, with calm, sweet face, from one bed to another—here receiving the broken accents of a brief last confession, there speaking a few words of encouragement and hope.

It was in the morning, Camille had been attending to the wants of a poor French soldier who was wounded in the leg, but who, with the usual heroic colloquial tendencies of his countrymen, in spite of pain and suffering, was anxious to enter into all the details of the fight that had laid him low. "Ah! Mademoiselle," he said, "I should not mind if it had been in my arm or my shoulder that the ball had hit me. But my leg! It was too bad, for it made it impossible for me to go to the help of my comrade, who fell at my side mortally wounded. Ah! my poor comrade, if I could have walked but half-a-dozen paces, I might at least have received his last wishes; and I had pledged myself to him, and he to me, that very morning, as we left the city, that if he fell near me, I should take a paper he always carried about with him, and have it sent to where it was addressed; and on the other hand, he was to write to my poor mother, and tell her I had fallen bravely, and died in the service of my country," continued the poor soldier, with enthusiasm, as if the event had really occurred.

"And was your comrade killed?" asked Camille, as she adjusted the pillow, and placed a cup of water within his reach. "Alas! yes. I still hoped he was living, for I heard him groan several times, and I heard him praying. But when they came towards me with a stretcher, they turned him over and looked at him. 'He is quite dead,' they said, 'but here is a man we can do something for,' they added, as they came up to me. I begged them to look again at my poor comrade. I could not believe he was dead, and it went to my heart to leave him there. But they said it was no use—they had no time to stand examining corpses, and that if I did not want to stop there all night, I must go with them at once. And so there he is, not five hundred yards from here, and I can't see him. The doctors, however, where it lies, over his poor silent head. Ah! Mademoiselle, they say it is a fine thing to fight for one's country, and I suppose it is true; but here am I, lamed for life, and there is that young gentleman—for he was a nobleman, Mademoiselle, and handsome as a man as ever you saw—lying dead on the field, and who knows but what he has left a sweethearth behind him who will never know how gloriously he died."

rade, who fell at my side mortally wounded. Ah! my poor comrade, if I could have walked but half-a-dozen paces, I might at least have received his last wishes; and I had pledged myself to him, and he to me, that very morning, as we left the city, that if he fell near me, I should take a paper he always carried about with him, and have it sent to where it was addressed; and on the other hand, he was to write to my poor mother, and tell her I had fallen bravely, and died in the service of my country," continued the poor soldier, with enthusiasm, as if the event had really occurred.

"And was your comrade killed?" asked Camille, as she adjusted the pillow, and placed a cup of water within his reach. "Alas! yes. I still hoped he was living, for I heard him groan several times, and I heard him praying. But when they came towards me with a stretcher, they turned him over and looked at him. 'He is quite dead,' they said, 'but here is a man we can do something for,' they added, as they came up to me. I begged them to look again at my poor comrade. I could not believe he was dead, and it went to my heart to leave him there. But they said it was no use—they had no time to stand examining corpses, and that if I did not want to stop there all night, I must go with them at once. And so there he is, not five hundred yards from here, and I can't see him. The doctors, however, where it lies, over his poor silent head. Ah! Mademoiselle, they say it is a fine thing to fight for one's country, and I suppose it is true; but here am I, lamed for life, and there is that young gentleman—for he was a nobleman, Mademoiselle, and handsome as a man as ever you saw—lying dead on the field, and who knows but what he has left a sweethearth behind him who will never know how gloriously he died."

"And what was your comrade's name, my good friend?" said Camille, not more interested in this tale than in so many others she had heard of the same kind. "He was from Brittany, Mademoiselle—the Count Henri Le Maître."

Camille's labors began from the first hour of her arrival. There was no time to lose in that terrible ocean of anguish and suffering. Madeline had been gently initiated into the horrors of hospital work, and in no instance had seen more horrid groaning and shrieking with their life blood oozing from ghastly wounds, straight from the field of battle; but there was no time to think now whether or not you could bear it. Be it yours, and act on that, or throw up the work altogether. No one had time to inquire whether Camille felt faint at the sight of blood—whether she could assist in dressing a wound, or in holding a bandage properly. If she could not do anything and everything that came before her, there would be nothing for it but to return to Brussels as best she might. She was not a woman to make any mistake at such a juncture. It was all very new to her, and totally unlike any former experience in her luxurious life. But she said to herself, "It was for this I came, and whether it be more or less, can make no difference in that."

Consequently, with quiet dignity and presence of mind, she immediately set to work with quick eye and ready hand, doing everything that came before her, to do, scarcely ever troubling anyone by asking a question, but silently watching to see where she was most wanted. The sleeping arrangements in connection with the ambulance were of a very primitive description. In most cases a few wooden benches had been put together for the accommodation of the ladies, close to the large shed which formed part of the buildings originally connected with a manufactory outside the city. They were thus close to their work, and at the same time removed from the sad sounds and distressing scenes in the immediate neighborhood of the wounded soldiers.

The small construction where Camille was located contained two beds—for in no instance was a girl, under conditions like her own, exposed to the possible contingency of being left alone at night. Camille had been working hard for some weeks, deeply interested in her labors, and so fully absorbed by them that everything connected with her home-life seemed removed to an inconceivable distance. She had no leisure for regrets, still less for anxious forebodings. At that time it happened that the lady who shared the same bed with Camille had broken down in nerves and health, from over-fatigue, or other causes, and had been sent home. The ambulance was very full, the labor incessant, and nothing had yet been done to procure for Camille another companion. It made no difference to her; she was accustomed to all subjects, and under all circumstances; and, on the whole she rather preferred the feeling of solitude and loneliness for the few moments when she sat by her lamp before laying her weary limbs on her narrow couch.

One day, long before daybreak, Camille's rest had been disturbed by the unmistakable sounds of fighting not very far from where the ambulance was established. A sortie had just been made by the beleaguered army, and never before had the point of attack been so near. More than one shell fell on the very building consecrated to the shelter of the wounded, and though no one, happily, was seriously injured, there was continued alarm and anxiety for several hours. Then followed the terrible consequences of the battle—the wounded carried in by the Knights of the Red Cross, and every hand engaged in attending to the suffering and the dying. The Abbé Sire was passing, with calm, sweet face, from one bed to another—here receiving the broken accents of a brief last confession, there speaking a few words of encouragement and hope.

It was in the morning, Camille had been attending to the wants of a poor French soldier who was wounded in the leg, but who, with the usual heroic colloquial tendencies of his countrymen, in spite of pain and suffering, was anxious to enter into all the details of the fight that had laid him low. "Ah! Mademoiselle," he said, "I should not mind if it had been in my arm or my shoulder that the ball had hit me. But my leg! It was too bad, for it made it impossible for me to go to the help of my comrade, who fell at my side mortally wounded. Ah! my poor comrade, if I could have walked but half-a-dozen paces, I might at least have received his last wishes; and I had pledged myself to him, and he to me, that very morning, as we left the city, that if he fell near me, I should take a paper he always carried about with him, and have it sent to where it was addressed; and on the other hand, he was to write to my poor mother, and tell her I had fallen bravely, and died in the service of my country," continued the poor soldier, with enthusiasm, as if the event had really occurred.

"And was your comrade killed?" asked Camille, as she adjusted the pillow, and placed a cup of water within his reach. "Alas! yes. I still hoped he was living, for I heard him groan several times, and I heard him praying. But when they came towards me with a stretcher, they turned him over and looked at him. 'He is quite dead,' they said, 'but here is a man we can do something for,' they added, as they came up to me. I begged them to look again at my poor comrade. I could not believe he was dead, and it went to my heart to leave him there. But they said it was no use—they had no time to stand examining corpses, and that if I did not want to stop there all night, I must go with them at once. And so there he is, not five hundred yards from here, and I can't see him. The doctors, however, where it lies, over his poor silent head. Ah! Mademoiselle, they say it is a fine thing to fight for one's country, and I suppose it is true; but here am I, lamed for life, and there is that young gentleman—for he was a nobleman, Mademoiselle, and handsome as a man as ever you saw—lying dead on the field, and who knows but what he has left a sweethearth behind him who will never know how gloriously he died."

1884. JANUARY. 1884.

Annual Clearance Sale BEFORE STOCK TAKING, —AT— J. B. MACDONALD'S.

I AM now having my ANNUAL CLEARANCE SALE, and will clear out WOOL GOODS, in Scarfs, Cloths, Wool Squares, Heavy Winter Cloths, Winter Dress Stuffs, Ladies' Fur Caps and Muffs, Ladies' Fur Tippets, Ladies' Fur and Felt Hats, Men's Fur and Cloth Caps, Men's and Boys' Ulsters, Overcoats and Reefing Jackets

Also, Remnants in Cloths, Remnants in Dress Stuffs, Remnants in Prints, Remnants in Flannels.

These Goods must be cleared out, and bargains extraordinary will be given at

J. B. MACDONALD'S,
Queen Street, Charlottetown, Jan. 23, 1884.

RISEN FROM ITS ASHES.

The Subscribers beg leave to notify their Customers that they have taken the Store

NORTH SIDE QUEEN SQUARE

NEXT TO WELLNERS

Wellner's Jewelry Establishment,

WHERE THEY WILL

SELL THE BALANCE OF THEIR STOCK

SAVED FROM THE FIRE

At a little over Cost, to clear for Spring Importations.

FRASER & REDDIN,
Charlottetown, Feb. 27, 1884.

NEW TEA, NEW FRUIT, &C. Try our New Tea, IT IS EXTRA. Half-chests, 5 and 10 lb. Caddies (Tins with screw tops), very choice.

200 boxes Prime Raisins, 200 boxes Choice Figs, 200 barrels No. 1 Winter Apples, 2 tons Choice Confectionery, Flour, Sugar, Molasses, Kerosene Oil, &c., Wholesale & Retail. BEER & GOFF.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS

And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take 1 pill each night from 1 to 15 weeks, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing be possible. For Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them for the cure of LIVER and KIDNEY diseases. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25c. in stamps. Circulars free. J. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

DIPHTHERIA MAKE HENS LAY

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT

It is a well known fact that most of the Diphtheria cases in this country are cured by the use of JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT. It will not only cure the disease, but it will also prevent its return. It is a well known fact that most of the Diphtheria cases in this country are cured by the use of JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT. It will not only cure the disease, but it will also prevent its return. It is a well known fact that most of the Diphtheria cases in this country are cured by the use of JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT. It will not only cure the disease, but it will also prevent its return.

The North British & Mercantile FIRE & LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

Of Edinburgh & London—Established in 1809.

Subscribed Capital.....$9,733,332
Paid up Capital.....1,216,666

TRANSACTS EVERY DESCRIPTION OF FIRE, LIFE & ANNUITY BUSINESS

on the most favorable terms. Losses settled with promptitude and liberality.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.
Reserved Funds (irrespective of paid up Capital) over $5,000,000.00
Insurances effected at the lowest current rates.

LIFE DEPARTMENT.
Accumulated Funds (irrespective of paid up Capital) over $12,000,000.
Nine-tenths of the whole profits of the Life Branch belong to the Assured.

Profits of previous quinquennium divided among Policy Holders, $1,558,500.00.

New and Reduced Premiums for the Dominion of Canada.

Copies of the Annual Report, Prospectus, and every information, may be obtained at the Prince Edward Island Branch, No. 85 Water Street, Charlottetown.

GEO. W. DeBLOIS,
January 3, 1883—yr
General Agent.

PEAKE'S NO. 3 WHARF,

(M. P. Hogan's Old Stand.)

100,000 feet Seasoned Pine, 1, 1 1/2 and 2 inch, &c., &c.
100,000 do Hemlock Boards,
100,000 do Spruce do,
100,000 do Siding, 3x3, 2x5, 2x6, &c.,
300,000 Cedar Shingles, No. 1,
300,000 Spruce do,
20,000 Brick,
10,000 Clapboards, No. 1 and 2.

Dressed Flooring, Scantling, Fencing, Cedar Posts, Refuse Deal, &c., and all kinds of Lumber suitable for Building purposes.

All the above to be sold cheap for cash.

When recognized her voice, she opened the door ajar, and asked whether anyone was dying.

"Oh! no, I hope not. Come and see. It is Henri Le Maître. I went to look for him. A French soldier told me he lay dead near here. I found him and dragged him home, and oh! father! father! he is not dead; make haste! make haste!"

The good Abbé made all the haste he could in getting on some of his clothes and his sash, not with any idea of finding Monsieur Le Maître either alive or dead, but persuaded that Camille had been over-worked, and that her mind had suddenly given away.

When the Abbé, fully dressed, then opened his door, looking very grave and anxious, Camille stopped him, saying: "But my dear father, he must be carried at once into the ambulance and the surgeon sent for. How is it to be done—after all?" she said, with a hush and a smile lighting up her tear-stained face. "It is rather shocking that he should be found in my hut."

The Abbé looked at her as if he could hardly believe his senses, but seeing her so

HICKEY & STEWART, MANUFACTURERS OF
Chewing and Smoking
TOBACCO,
No. 1 Queen St., Charlottetown.
P. E. ISLAND.
Nov. 8, 1882.

WANTED!
SOME long round Hemlock Timber for piles. Also, a lot Flatted Logs.
Apply to
F. W.