CHAPTER XXIII
ON THE HEIGHTS.

"I don't know whether Lady Heatherdene hunts," said the earl, in his quiet way, "but in case she should, Thompson, you had better look out for a hunter. Get the best in the market, and be careful about everything concerning the animal, excepting the price."

The castle ballroom was famous throughout the county, although it had not been used for the last twenty years.

When Olive first entered it, she was startled and surprised by its dimensions.

"What a theater it would make!" she exclaimed involuntarily.

"Theater!" said the earl, who was hobbling by her side. "Theater, do you say, my dear? Would you like to have it made into a theater? Can easily be done, you know," he said.

But Olive had laughingly put the question aside; she was almost afraid to express an opinion on any subject, for the earl was always on the watch for some expression of a desire on her part, that he might gratify it.

She was half in terror lest he should take her careless remark in earnest, and have an army of carpenters down to transform the noble salon into a theater.

"It wants redecorating," said the earl. "Call Foster."

Foster was called, and carte blanche given.

"Have it done well, Foster," said the earl. "Style? Ask Lady Heatherdene. Tell him what you would like, child!" and he hobbled away.

Everything was referred to Olive. As Charlie laughingly declared, if she had existed in the old times, and demanded all their heads, the earl would have brought them to the block to please her.

When the invitations were being issued, Olive was bewildered and aghast.

"We shall have all the world here," she exclaimed.

"All the better," said the earl. "The more the merrier. Don't leave anybody out."

Then he looked up suddenly. "Is there anybody whom you would specially like to ask? Don't hesitate, child."

For Olive had looked at Charlie—Charlie lounging in an easy-chair with his Saturday Review in hand.

"There is one whom I should like to have," she said. "One who has been more than sister to me."

"Then ask her," said the earl. "Who is it?"

"Kathrine Haldine," said Olive.

The earl nodded. "Haldine—Haldine. Don't remember the name. A friend of yours?"

"More than a friend, my lord."

"Then ask her, of course—of course," said the earl.

When it was known that a grand gathering was to take place at the castle, the interest that arose was intense. Those who had not received invitations waxed desperate, and all sorts of intrigues were prosecuted to obtain a card.

Forty rooms had been prepared within the castle; but there was many hundreds of persons who would have been glad to sleep in an attic or at the village inn, if they could only obtain an entree to what promised to be the most important gathering the country had known for years.

"It is a pity Florence is not in England," said the earl one morning. "You have never seen Florence Rivers, have you?" he asked, turning to Olive.

Olive was caressing a favorite greyhound that had stolen in at the window, and she bent low over the dog as she answered, with a fast-beating heart:

"Yes, I have seen her."

"You'll like her, I think," said the earl, with a rather curious smile. "But you seem to take to every one. Why don't you write and ask them to come over? What do they want wandering over the Continent—England is the place for people who have a stake in it. It is time Ellinton was back."

"I don't think they would care to cross the channel yet," said Charlie, and the subject dropped.

Mr. Fisher executed the earl's commands in a liberal spirit. Huge marquee rose like mushrooms on the lawn; an army of decorators fell upon the ballroom as if they meant to tear it to pieces, and transformed its gloomy and faded aspect into a fairy palace.

Strings of horses filled into the stable, and rows of carriages fresh from Long Acre filled the coach houses.

The earl's bankers must have stared at the checks they were called upon to cash; but the earl had given carte blanche, and Mr. Fisher, though of a niggardly nature, dared not hold his hand.

So vast were the preparations that Olive grew quite alarmed.

"Suppose," she suggested, with a little blush, "that I should break down, my lord, before all this crowd of people?"

The earl looked at her with a haughty and proud smile.

"You will not break down," he said, and Charlie laughed confidently.

He was thinking how she had stood, a slim girl before a roaring crowd, worked to a pitch of excitement by her beauty and genius.

Lord Heatherdene's belief in his beautiful young wife's power of intellect and genius was illimitable. His love seemed to grow more intense with every day; and the earl and he strove amply which should minister to her little whims and fancies.

They had now been at the castle a month—a month which all three of them looked upon as perhaps the happiest in their lives. They lived at the castle, surrounded by their people, like a king, and prince, and princess.

Already the tenants and servants had grown attached to Olive's beautiful face and gentle, unassuming ways, and her appearance among them was always the signal for an outburst of smiling and affectionate, respectful greeting.

"It's a happy day for Livermore that ever the young countess came! God bless her!" said the tenants.

"She have changed everything, and brightened up the old earl himself w' the rest o' us!"

The old farmers would look out for her as she rode down the lanes on the grey which the earl had purchased for her, with her husband by her side, and raise their hats, and nod, smile, and chuckle with glowing satisfaction at the pleasant, friendly smile which they were sure to get from her in return.

Here was the secret of Olive's popularity. Many a young woman who had risen from such obscurity as hers to such a dazzling height as that in which she now stood would have deemed it wise to assume a proud and haughty demeanor, and would have been always condescending, if gracious.

But there was nothing of that hateful mannerism about Olive.

To young and old she had the same pleasant, friendly smile, the same naturally musical voice, unrestrained by pride or hauteur. She spent a great deal of her time among the people on the estate, not worrying and harrassing them with the impertinent tract and alms-giving blanket; she would drive about in her little basket chaise and stop for half an hour at some outlying farm to be made much of by all the family, to be surrounded by the children and also by the dogs, her natural allies; from thence she would look in at the cottages clustering about the homestead, and with a word from one and a word with the other, the morning would slip away.

It was wonderful how quickly she won the confidence of the people; they were afraid of her at first—awed by the dark splendor of her beauty; but no one of them could resist the charm of the smile that broke almost sadly over the lovely face, the witchery of the soft, musical voice, and the gentle gleam of the dark eyes.

"It seems to me," said Charlie, "that you know all the secrets of the whole place, Ad. Do you really like going about among 'em as you do, or is it because you think it your duty?"

He put this question as they were riding through the village a few mornings before the great gathering. Olive had kept him waiting a few minutes while she had gone in to see a sick girl at one of the cottages on

Girls! Thicken and Beautify Your Hair And Stop Dandruff

Try this! Your hair gets wavy, glossy and abundant at once.

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine. It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now for a few cents—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance, freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after about two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower, destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries it.

their road, and Charlie had, no doubt, been pondering the matter over his cigar. He was not a genius, as we know, and the many-sidedness of Olive's character puzzled him. Here was a woman who had been the idol, not of a dike, but of a whole town; one whose every word and look had been valued and made much of; and here she was transplanted suddenly in an out-of-the-way village, and yet as happy as a queen, spending her mornings, among the simple, laboring people about her.

"She's an angel," he concluded, puffing at his cigar, and pulling at his tawny mustache. "That's what she is. People seem to know it, too; high and low fall in love with her. There isn't one person in the place that isn't glad to see her and have her near 'em, from the earl to the poor, sick girl she is comforting now. God bless my darling!"

Charlie was not a religious man as the term is understood; but that benediction came straight from his simple, many heart, and there was a suspicious moisture in his blue eyes. He helped Olive into the saddle, and trotted off by her side again. "Is it because you like it, Ad, or because it is your duty?"

And Olive looked thoughtful for a moment, then answered, with that little wistful smile of hers:

"A little of both, Charlie, I think. I am so happy myself, so much happier than I deserve to be, that I have a hankering, restless wish—don't smile, Charlie!—to show my gratitude. Then I like the people; they are all so humble and contented and grateful for a kind word. Oh, Charlie, I know something of their lives from experience—"

He looked at her with surprise, but Olive did not notice it, and in her warmth was absorbed by her own thoughts.

"I know how hard and sad a life they lead, and how cruel the difference seems and really is between them and those above them—all scarcity and labor on one side, all wealth and luxury, and, too often, coldness, on the other! It is not right, Charlie; and if we cannot alter it altogether we can do something to lessen the evil."

Charlie stared with admiring gravity.

"What an intellect yours is, Ad!" he said; "you'd make an excellent member of the Lower House. And it's because you are so happy that you like gadding about among them. I like to hear you say that, my darling. Happy, eh?"

"I am happy," said Olive, stretching out her little gannetted hand, and laying it on his—"perfectly happy, too happy," she murmured looking up into his face with swimming eyes; then as if a sudden fear had startled her, her face changed, and a shamed look came into her eyes, while her hand grew tightly on his.

"Oh, Charlie," she breathed, "you are happy, too—you do not regret what you have done—you are not sorry that you have trusted me?"

"My darling," he remonstrated anxiously; "what are you talking about? Happy! why, a blind man can see how happy I am. Trusted you!—I would trust you with my life."

"Your life, yes," she breathed; "but your honor, Charlie—your honor?"

"And my honor, Adrienne," he said, gravely and confidently.

She drew a long breath, and let her hand slide from his.

He looked at her suddenly for a moment, then drawing his horse closer, put his hand around her waist.

"Addy," he said, "I thought we were to let the past alone—that was the understanding. I am not curious, or suspicious, or anxious. Let the past bury the past."

"Yes," murmured Olive, "that is what Kathrine said; but," her face paled, "bury it deeply as one may, the ghost of it will rise to haunt and terrify one. Oh, Charlie, love me still—love me and trust me, whatever happens!"

"I could do no other than love and trust you, my darling—it is impossible," he answered.

THE WAR.

It is still the prelude. The last tremendous act of the great drama has not yet opened in earnest. Those who know in their hearts what it will contain, how terrible, because it must be final, it will be, each day of waiting is a dreadful suspense. The hosts—I can hardly call them armies—facing one another in a great line, unbroken, from the Atlantic to the Adriatic, seem to hesitate, conscious each of the other's strength before coming to grips in the last deadly encounter, from which one will emerge the victor, the other vanquished beyond hope of recovery. But any day may see the end of the waiting. Either side is trying out the other's strength in raids which are frequently of considerable magnitude, carried out at widely separated parts of the front. Nothing has yet occurred to indicate which side will take the initiative, or offensive, or whether the Allies may attack at one point and Germany at another, a possibility which the evenly balanced forces make by no means remote. It shall be surprised, however, if Verdun does not become the scene of another German effort, where the desire to restore lost prestige is likely to be added to strategic advantages which a big victory in that part of the line would give the enemy. If the surmise is correct, it is likely that our new Allies will not have to wait long to prove their mettle, for the Americans seem definitely to have been posted at the eastern wing of the Allies' line in France. In the eastern theatre the situation in Russia is for the moment less interesting and probably less important than that in Siberia. If Japan once takes a hand in, earnestly, at Vladivostok—and it seems now inevitable—the consequences are not likely to stop there, and the German press already betrays apprehension. One thing seems certain—the rule of the Bolsheviks will not last much longer, and though Germany reaps so great a present advantage from the seeds of anarchy which she has sown in Russia, she may have to reckon before the end with a harvest from the same sowing not so much to her liking.

THE FLORIZEL INQUIRY.

While the general public are being well served by the very full and, on the whole, accurate reports of the evidence given on this inquiry, as indeed they are entitled to be by its great importance, it is as well to bear in mind the necessary reservations with which these reports must be accepted. Everyone will, consciously or unconsciously, form his own theories from reading them, and it is not all who have the wisdom to keep them to themselves until judgment has been delivered by the very competent court which is hearing the evidence. While many of the explanations and ideas that are being circulated on the foundation of the published reports are natural enough and none of them can do any positive harm, it should be remembered that the reports themselves are of necessity incomplete, and so misleading. Such a consequence is inevitable when, as in this case, the answers of witnesses are alone reported, and the questions

The Outlook.

While the situation at present looks serious enough, we would ask our readers not to be too hasty in forming an opinion from the daily despatches, especially those relating to the Russian debate. So many conflicting and contradictory statements are contained in the foreign news that any casual student might be pardoned for coming to the conclusion that the future looks dark for the Allies. But Russia is a land of surprises and like Africa, something always new is coming out of that country. Unhappy and torn by internal strife; harassed and ravaged by the German hordes; rent asunder by the quarrels of irresponsible demagogues, and discredited in the eyes of the world by the mountebank actions of irreconcilable factions, she may yet produce the man who will be equal to the occasion, and who may lead her out of the pit of anarchy and chaos into that which she has now more deeply fallen than at any time in her illustrious and fateful history. Already the indications are that the Russian peoples do not regard the German invasion and spoliation of their territories with the stifled hope and with nameless torments with which they have been afflicted. Your country might have rung with your fame and deeds. Your loved ones might have held their heads proudly when your name was mentioned. Your friends might have been honored in saying "I knew him." But you have descended from your high estate. Your name has been expunged from the roster of your regiment and you have now plumbed the lowest depths of life. People of Newfoundland! Is there no way or means by which the broken and maimed returning soldiers can be taken care of? This man may be one of many. We cannot tell, but it will be to our everlasting disgrace if in the days near, and the days after the war, we read in our newspapers similar items to that which has been quoted.

It will be a striking commentary on our vaunted care of the men who are fighting our battles, if we lose them to become the sport of misfortune and the prey of disease. Let us begin to-day to make provision for the future care of those who will come back broken in body and stricken in spirit. Their care is our first and most manifest duty.

The Pity of it.

"An ex-soldier charged with vagrancy, who appeared in Court yesterday, was sent to the Penitentiary for ten days." (News item.) The pathos of the above, touching the subject matter, is striking and must surely appeal to our inmost sympathies. Not being thoroughly conversant with the causes for which this unfortunate was committed to the Penitentiary, an opinion cannot be offered. That there were good and sufficient reasons to warrant incarceration for ten days, no one doubts. But—and here we come to the crux of the thing—what circumstances led up to the condition in which this—now—poor wail (with one time wife the uniform of the King, and stepped out as proudly on parade, as the best man in his company), was charged with, and suffered for, the offence of vagrancy. The bitterness of it. An ex-soldier! One who perhaps went through all the engagements of the war, up to the time of his discharge, who, perhaps, fearlessly faced death on the battlefield, who, perhaps, went over the top with his comrades, filled with the spirit to do or die. And now, after fighting for King and Country to be an inmate of a prison. An ex-soldier! At one time in the full flush of manhood, proud of his regiment, his company, his platoon; a soldier of Newfoundland ready to shed his blood for the Empire. Now a derelict, stranded on the shoals of misfortune, wrecked on the breakers of temptation. From the status of freedom to the degradation of the prison cell. An ex-soldier! With the spirit of a hero at his calling at heart. Filled with that patriotism which makes the hero and which is the face of danger laughs and is unshrinking. Now a vagrant. Shunned by all who knew him; repudiated by his former comrades; a disgrace to his regiment; perhaps discharged for untidiness; everything assisting to make his downward course more rapid, until at length he brings up in the common goal. Nameless ex-soldier! Nameless vagrant! What justice might you not have shed on your regimental annals but for a something of which we do not know. To you might have been awarded the little cross which is the coveted distinction of all ranks in the service. To you might have come other honors and distinctions. You might have been chosen to lead the forlorn hope and to have died on the stricken field with name unsullied. Your country might have rung with your fame and deeds. Funeral at Curling.

The funeral of the late James H. Baggis, whose body was recovered from the lost Florist, at Curling, on Saturday, March 9th, was one of the largest ever witnessed in that town. All the business places were closed for the solemn occasion, and as the remains were being conveyed from the Methodist Church to the Cemetery, the bell of the Church of the Sacred Heart was tolled. At the grave side the office for the burial of the dead was held by the Rev. W. J. Morris.

At Rest.

All that was mortal of the Rt. Rev. Mons. St. John, Torbay, was interred yesterday in the presence of His Grace, after High Mass of Requiem was sung at the Cathedral. The celebrant was Rt. Rev. Mons. McDermott, V.G., assisted by Rev. Dr. Carter as Deacon, Rev. Father Devereaux as Sub-Deacon, and Rev. Dr. Greene as Master of Ceremonies. His Grace the Archbishop occupied the throne and was attended by Rev. Father Renouf, of St. Patrick's, Rev. Father McCarthy of Tor's Cove, and Rev. Father Ashley of Argentea.

Judging by the advance sale of tickets the B. I. S. Dramatic Company has not lost its popularity. The tickets were placed on sale at 12 o'clock on Thursday, and at 1 o'clock the house was completely sold out. Several people who could not obtain seats for the night performance had to be satisfied with Matinee tickets. The Company has been steadily rehearsing for some time past, and we feel sure the patrons will not be disappointed in the performance. A few tickets remain for the Matinee and these may be procured at the Casino box-office to-night or Monday morning.

The Cynic's Revenge.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

"Do you know what kind of a machine I'm going to buy when I make my pile?" said the Want-to-be-Cynic. (It is an old jest that men always say "If I marry" and women, "When I marry.") But to offset this men almost always say "When I make my pile."

"I wouldn't say that," said another "I'd just look at the different gowns and then I'd say, 'Send me that or this' without even asking the price."

A More Dignified Attitude.

Surely that is the more dignified attitude toward money. When I meet people who live rather quietly, who never talk about their money, who dress well and becomingly, but not with any distinct effort to look expensive, and am told afterwards that they are millionaires, I feel far more impressed than when I meet people who are obviously wealthy. Aren't you?

We have been using MINARD'S LINIMENT in our home for a number of years and use no other Liniment but MINARD'S, and we can recommend it highly for sprains, bruises, pains or tightness of the chest, soreness of the throat, headache or anything of that sort. We will not be without it one single day, for we get a new bottle before the other is all used. I can recommend it highly to anyone. JOHN WALKFIELD, LaHave Islands, Lunenburg Co., N.S.

EYE GLASSES AND ROUND SHOULDERS.

Instead of glasses adding age to one's face, as is the general belief, they often erase years. Bags and circular puffing under the eyes are frequently caused by the lack of glasses. Rounded shoulders and accompanying fatigue are, also, often produced by constant bending over work when glasses should be worn.

Frequently when eye glasses are prescribed, the eyes have only received a slight strain, and one should observe the physicians orders immediately, as a more serious strain may result if the directions are not obeyed. Eye glasses are now made in so many attractive styles, that no one should object to wearing them and, besides, good common sense should prompt you to preserve your eyes as long as possible.

A good exercise to correct round shoulders is to stand erect in some sort of loose costume, without corsets. Raise the arms from their limp position at the sides, breathing in as you do so and counting up to eighty.

By the count of eight the arms should be above the head, so you can lock the thumbs together. Bend backward, keeping the thumbs still together, as far as you can. Straighten and breathe out, letting the arms with the thumbs unlocked, come directly in the front on a level with the shoulders. Now fling the arms back as far as possible. This is in reality a double exercise and may be divided into two and practised separately.

The raising of the arms above the head, lowering them and then flinging them back, is one designed especially to correct round shoulders. The upward motion and deep breathing is another that applies more to developing the chest than to the shoulders.

Little Benny's Note Book.

By LEE PAPE.

Kumpinny B was having a perrade yesterday, and a coal waggin full of coal started to come down the street, the people on the pavements all turning around to look at it as if they wished it was theirs, the coalman yelling, Hay, you kids, get out of the street or you'll get run over. Meaning Kumpinny B, and General Skinny Martin sed, Halt, attendin, you coal man wants a military escorts for you coal. And Kumpinny B started to walk in back of the coal waggin like a military escort, and it stopped in front of Miss Kinkles house and the coal man started to umpdump the coal down the cellar, and people started to stop and watch him do it and ask him if they thawt they cood get eny, and Kumpinny B marched up and down in front of the waggin about 5 times and then Kernel Pudis Stinkins went up to General Martin and salotted, saying, General wat do you say wat ring the bell and tell Miss Winkel we are garding her coal for her, maybe she will give us sumthing for doing it.

Being a good ideer, and Kumpinny B all went and stood in a line on the top step, salotted, and General Martin hang the bell and Miss Winkel came to the door, saying, My gray-shies, look at all the boys, and the steps jest cleaned, my grayshies, its Kumpinny B garding your coal, we report for further orders.

I dont know what your tawking about, but if you touch eny of that coal Ill send for the poleco, sed Miss Winkel. And she slammed the door and Kumpinny B stopped salotted, Genel Martin saying, Let her gard her own coal, thats all I care, forward march. Wich we did.

THE THIRD LOAN.

Now once again you'll have a chance to buy yourself a bond, and help the allies out in France, in Belgium and beyond. In February Uncle Sam will start another loan; and are you ready, as I am, to put up plunk and bone? It's little we old gents can do to help our armies win, but we can certainly come through with packages of tin. When everything is said and done, 'tis wealth will win the scrap; and there should be a flow of mon from every loyal chap. You are not asked to give away or sacrifice your dust; you lend to Uncle sam—and, say, he's surely safe to trust! You are not asked to lend for fun; good interest you receive; if you've no bonds, when war is done, you'll rend your robe and grieve. Ah, then you'll hang your head in shame and sound a doleful note; you did not help to win the game and get the Prussian goat. But there is none with soul so dead he has to cut out bread, and see his cook-stove pawned. Let's march up cheerful, blithe and quick, and buy, and buy, and buy; for thus we'll make the Teuton sick, and soak him in the eye.

The room chosen for the children's nursery should have as much sun as possible and provisions for ample ventilation. One window should be arranged with the familiar board at the bottom, at any rate, so that the sash may be raised to admit the passage of fresh air between the upper and lower panes, even when the window is, to all intents and purposes, closed completely.

A washable varnished paper or washable paint should be provided. This is really of very great importance. The walls should be frequently wiped over with a sponge wrung out in hot water to which a little ammonia has been added, the children being turned out of the room at the time and plenty of time being allowed for drying to prevent any dampness when the small occupants are present.

The floor should be covered with something washable and warm, and for this a cork carpet immediately suggests itself. Curtains should be dispensed with although pretty ones

In regard to skin diseases, medical authorities are now agreed on this. Don't imprison the disease germs in your skin by the use of greasy salves, and thus encourage them to multiply. A true cure of all eczematous diseases can be brought about only by using the healing agents in the form of a liquid. WASH THE GERMS OUT. The D. D. D. Prescription is a new skin discovery which is becoming famous throughout Newfoundland and Canada. It is a simple wash, compounded as a scientific antiseptic remedy for Eczema, Bad Leg, Ulcers, Sores, Pimples and all skin eruptions. This wash penetrates to the disease germs and destroys them, then soothes and heals the skin as nothing else has ever done. Don't delay—this wash will cure. Get a bottle of D. D. D. I started my time at St. John's; I served three years here and two in Glasgow. My apprenticeship was on shore. I came out as 3rd engineer on the Fortia in 1904. I spent one and a half years on the Portia. I then went across to get my second's certificate. I was for 5 years in the Allan Line as 3rd and 4th engineer. I left them and came out as chief of the 'Bellaventure' and remained in charge of her till she was sold to the Russian Government in 1916. I took her across to Russia. I joined the Floriz in April, 1916 as second engineer. I was on watch on leaving port. I got my certificate as first engineer in 1910 at Glasgow. It is No. 4861. Generally one of the officers is on watch with me. All the engineers generally come down when she is leaving port. The engine worked all right during the voyage. I experienced no difficulty. I did not have to slow down for any reason. The engines were overhauled every trip. The last general overhauling was done in April or May last year at New York. The engines were working well on the last voyage. We used American coal sufficient in number and worked well. The normal pressure is 175 lbs. As the full speed the winter propeller makes 15 revolutions a minute and the summer propeller 30 revolutions. The blades were shifted the last voyage at New York. They were firmly fixed. None of them were loose the last voyage. The chief always looked out for that. If they were loose the jar of the shaft would let us know. It is not possible to loosen a blade without the engineers knowing it. About three springs running to the icefields have been known blades to come off. All holders show the same indication. A loss of pressure would be easily noticed. We have a dial for reading the revolutions, a record of which is taken every four hours. This is entered on a blackboard and from that entered into a log book every 24 hours. The dial shows the revolutions made every minute also the average. I left the engine room at 9 o'clock. There was then 170 lbs. pressure on the engines. There was no great reduction between 7.30 and 9 o'clock, the lowest was 165 lbs. pressure. The stoke hole was blowing the ashes out then. She was about 1/2 opened out then."

I spent one and a half years on the Portia. I then went across to get my second's certificate. I was for 5 years in the engine room. I was 3rd and 4th engineer. Allan Linn as 3rd and 4th engineer. I left them and came out as chief of the Bellaventure and remained in charge of her till she was sold to the Russian Government in 1916. I took her across to Russia. I joined the Florizel in April, 1916 as second engineer. I was on watch on leaving port. I got my certificate as first engineer in 1910 at Glasgow. It is No. 4881. Generally one of the oilers is on watch with me. All the engines are generally come down when she is leaving port. The engine worked all right during the voyage. I experienced a difficulty. I did not have to slow down for any reason. The engines were overhauled every trip. The last general overhauling was done in April or May last year at New York. The engines were working well on the last voyage. We used American coal on the last voyage. The firemen were sufficient in number and worked well. The normal pressure is 175 lbs. At full speed the winter propeller makes 15 revolutions a minute and the summer propeller 90 revolutions. The blades were shifted the last voyage at New York. They were firmly fixed. None of them were loose the last voyage. The chief always looked out for that. If they were loose the jar of the shaft would let us know. It is not possible to loosen a blade without the engineers knowing it. About three weeks running to the icefields I have known blades to come off. All blades show the same indication. A loss of pressure would be easily noticed. We have a dial for reading the revolutions, a record of which is taken every four hours. This is entered on a blackboard and from that entered into a log book every 24 hours. The dial shows the revolutions made every minute also the average. I left the engine room at 9 o'clock. There was then 170 lbs. pressure on the engines. There was no great reduction between 7.30 and 9 o'clock, the lowest was 155 lbs. pressure. The stoke hole was blowing the ashes out then. She was about 1/2 opened out then. No speed was ordered after full ahead was given, up till 9 o'clock. When we were blowing the ashes the engines were only 1/2 opened out. We got the order for full speed about 8 o'clock. We continued blowing ashes till 9.30. I cannot say what revolutions the engines were making between 8 and 9, possibly between 55 and 60. You cannot cut the steam down but you can cut the revolutions down by applying a stop valve to the engines. I was not in the engine room after 9 o'clock. The 4th engineer, Mr. Taylor, came on then. I came on about 3.55 the next morning. Alteration in the steam pressure is recorded on the blackboard. Also alterations in the revolutions. When coming on watch it is not necessary to notice this board. I did not notice the board when I came on duty. I asked Mr. Taylor how she was going, he said, "everything was all right." She was doing 63 revolutions; I noticed that on the board. "The dial recorded 170 lbs. That was the average revolution per minute for the last watch. At the end of my watch I would use the indicator and work from the other man's figures to get my average. The total number of revolutions for the watch is shown on the indicator. If the last man on watch made a mistake my figures would be also wrong. The coal burned all right. There is different grades of coal; that was grade No. 1. It was quite satisfactory. The speed was full ahead when I came on. I was in charge till the ship went ashore. The pressure was then 170 lbs. She went ashore about 4.50. I cannot say what revolutions the engines were making between 4 and 4.50 o'clock. They were turning over as usual between 4 and 4.50. The sea or wind might account for the difference of 63 to 75 revolutions which was the average on the watch before I came on. I cannot give any definite reason. I did not think it altogether unusual. The summer propeller has a fine pitch and the winter propeller a coarser pitch. I do not know if the ship was gathering speed between 4 and 4.50. I heard the ship strike on the bottom. I went to the reversing gear and got her full speed astern. I stood by for further orders. I did not get any further orders. That would be a couple of minutes after she struck. The engines were going astern for less than five minutes. I remained in the engine room till the water drove me out. I stopped the engines as there was no use of her running. There is an engine on purpose for the dynamo. That was running for about ten minutes. The lights are coupled with the dynamo. When she struck the water burst the side of the engine room in.

To Com. MacDermott—Seventy-five revolutions would drive the ship 13 miles per hour. I would report a difference in pressure of say from 170 to 140 lbs. The engineer makes no report to the bridge whatever. Several times those on the bridge have asked for the number of revolutions. They did not ask for any that night. I do not know if the chief makes any report to the bridge about the same. When I was a chief I used to report to the bridge. Every day at noon I used to tell the captain of the Bellaventure the number of revolutions. The engines would give fewer revolutions in rough sea than they would in calm weather.

To Mr. Dunfield—In a period of three watches there would be little or no difference in the speed providing the weather is fine. We would lose about from 5 to 10 lbs. in changing watch.

To Com. MacDermott—The revolutions did not, to my knowledge, drop down to 63 on our previous voyage from New York. For a clear average for my watch she would be making 70 revolutions.

To Mr. Dunfield—Oiler Davis and four Spaniards were in my watch. I was not economizing on coal. There was no instructions to economize on coal.

To Com. MacDermott—All the firemen were Spaniards; they did their work well; were satisfactory and were sober. I did not at any time have any trouble with them. There was no orders given the captain or engineer to reduce the speed not to my knowledge. I always kept on the same pressure within the past two years. I cannot say if the engines were racing that night. She was rolling.

To Mr. Dunfield—When I came on deck the lights were out. I went to the smoking room and then to the fiddle casing. There was people in and outside the smoking room. A couple of ladies Miss Dentef and Miss Cantwell were outside the smoking room. There were people there when I left. There was no panic. I went to the fiddle; I found there two or three firemen. I went to the Marconi room after 4 or 5 minutes and stayed there till I was rescued. There was no person refused admission to the Marconi room. Mallowney died in the Marconi room. I reached the Marconi room about half an hour after the ship struck. There were about 16 there then. I saw William Moore just before the lights went out; he was putting a life belt on.

To Mr. Blackwood—A good few of the passengers had life belts on.

To Mr. Dunfield—The captain said he was going to swim ashore; he undressed and together with seaman Dooley went forward. The men who took us off deserve great credit. Pope, the chief officer of the Prospero was the only one I knew and he was in one of the rescue dories. I can distinguish the difference between slob ice and heavy ice. I did not hear any slob against the side of the ship after leaving port. The engine room floor would be between 12 and fourteen feet from the water line.

At 5.30 adjournment was taken till 8 o'clock this afternoon.

She is Always Ready to Tell the Reason Why

SHE IS RECOMMENDING DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Miss E. Demers States They Cured Her of Sick Headache and Rheumatism From Which She Suffered for Six Months.

Hull, Que., March 15th.—(Special.)—Cured of chronic indigestion, sick headache and rheumatism, from which she had suffered for six months, Miss E. Demers, of 190, Malsonneuve St., here, gives all the credit for her cure to Dodd's Kidney Pills. She is recommending them to all her friends who suffer from kidney troubles of any kind.

"I am always ready to tell what Dodd's Kidney Pills did for me," says Miss Demers. "I am never without them in the house. My case was one of the worst."

"I had tried several medicines from the doctor and was getting no better when I decided to try Dodd's Kidney Pills. I took seven boxes and all my rheumatism, sick headache and indigestion was gone."

"When my father saw how much good Dodd's Kidney Pills had done me he began to take them for kidney trouble. He is better now."

Dodd's Kidney Pills make healthy kidneys. Healthy kidneys strain all the impurities, all the poison, out of the blood. They are the greatest of all tonics.

Six Man Hockey.

IN AID OF JENSEN CAMP.

The inclemency of the weather last night prevented many hockey fans and supporters of the W. P. A. from attending the hockey game played under the disinterested patronage of His Excellency the Governor and Miss Harris in aid of the Jensen Camp.

Referee W. J. Higgins called the contesting teams to action about 8 o'clock, and the game opened with a rush by Jerrett, but Tobin stopped and Ewing sent in a hard one to "Doc" and drew the first blood for All-Comers. Fachgoff Wilson and Jerrett got in a neat bit of combination, the latter equalizing the score.

All-Comers, 1; All-Stars, 1.

"Doc" was called on to save several hard shots which he did in his usual good way, but Ewing, who played an A.1 game, sent in two sizlers, "Doc" letting one get by.

All-Comers, 2; All-Stars, 1.

Munn then made a nice run up the ice and passed to Jerrett who scored No. 2 for the All-Stars. All-Comers, 2; All-Stars, 2.

As soon as the puck was into play again Munn had things his own way, going up the ice and notching up the third for the All-Stars. All-Comers, 2; All-Stars, 3.

Facing off White made a rush for the All-Stars and equalized matters. All-Comers, 3; All-Stars, 3.

White repeated and sent in another. All-Comers, 4; All-Stars, 3.

Play was now confined to the All-Comers territory but Ewing breaking away made a dandy run and when he finished his rush the score read:—All-Comers, 5; All-Stars, 3.

SECOND PERIOD.

The second period opened out in a lively manner and in a short time, after a neat bit of work, Munn scored. All-Comers, 5; All-Stars, 4.

Tobin got a hold of the puck and sent in a good one but "Doc" stopped well. Ewing then made a descent on the All-Stars and sent in a "scorcher" which "Doc" didn't see. All-Comers, 6; All-Stars, 4.

Facing off Trapnell took charge of the puck, making a splendid run up the ice and scored. The disc being sent into play, Jerrett, who played a good game, sent in a hard one which found the net. All-Comers, 6; All-Stars, 5.

Stick, who replaced Joy, played well and got control of the puck and through a neat bit of stick handling went right through to the All-Stars goal and notched up No. 7 for his team. All-Comers, 7; All-Stars, 5.

THIRD PERIOD.

The third period saw some good play and Ewing immediately sent in one to "Doc" which lodged in the net. All-Comers, 8; All-Stars, 6.

Play centred around Quick's goal and in the general mix-up which ensued, while Quick was out of his "net," Ewing sent in one, making the score: All-Comers, 8; All-Stars, 7.

Munn, who played his usual good game, got in a neat bit of stick handling, and evened up the score. All-Comers, 8; All-Stars, 8.

Play now became lively and there were several exhibitions of good stick handling, mid-rink shots and individual rushes but no combination till Munn sent in one to Quick which the latter "let go." All-Comers, 8; All-Stars, 9.

With only a few minutes to play both teams began to get busy, and White, who always plays a good game, scored, making the score read:—All-Comers, 9; All-Stars, 9.

Tobin sent in one from mid-rink which like most mid-rink shots failed to find the net. White again got control of the puck and scored the winning goal for his team.

The game was played under Canadian rules, six men, and three twenty minute periods. It is a decidedly better, faster and more interesting game

SAVE the BABY BARLEY 1-2's Tins. JABIES

FOR INFANTS, NURSING MOTHERS AND INVALIDS.

It has all the strength and vitamins of the whole grain. Vitamins are the life-giving elements which are largely in the bran. A human being cannot live without vitamins. If we bolted Brooks' Barley it would be finer, but the wonderful life-giving elements would be largely lost. In countless comparative tests physicians have found that babies build much better on Brooks' Baby Barley than on any other barley or infant food.

Brooks' Baby Barley used as a thickener for soups and white sauces has none of the pasty taste of ordinary flour. It is delicate in flavor, easily digested and very nourishing. If you would have the best possible results use "Brooks' Baby Barley."

A Revelation in Cereal Beverages

DRINKET

Practically everybody has wished, time and again, for a food-drink that adults and children could partake of, without the usual after-effects of coffee.

DRINKET has solved the problem.

Selected farm grains are the only ingredients of DRINKET—no molasses or artificial flavoring. A skillful blending and roasting of the grains develops the coffee-like taste and satisfaction,—but without coffee's usual results. You may give DRINKET to your children with the knowledge that you are giving them a wholesome, satisfying food-drink.

DRINKET IS ECONOMICAL. A 25c. tin makes 75 cups.

DRINKET IS CONVENIENT. It is prepared in a minute—just add boiling water.

At last night's meeting of the Industrial Workers' Association, a communication was read from Supt. Powell, of the R. N. Co., stating that the proposal as to increases were being considered and an answer would be forwarded the Association as quick as possible. The Executive Committee were empowered to call a strike at any time when found necessary.

The resignation of Financial Secretary F. Thompson, made necessary by his promotion at the Standard Btg. Co's works was accepted and he was heartily thanked for his services. Mr. Warwick Smith reported that matters in connection with the Ropewalk had been satisfactorily arranged. On Wednesday a deputation will meet the representatives of the Consolidated Foundry in connection with the wages paid employees. Owing to the scarcity of pig iron the employees are now working on short time. The report of the deputation who interviewed the Directors of the Shell Co. will be submitted at the next meeting. The Executive will communicate with the R. N. Co. in relation to the laying off of certain men the last few days. Fifty new members were enrolled.
