ABOUT THE SEED DRILL

What is Considered to be the Most Efficient Type.

The Feeding Device is the Heart of the Drill—Seed Should Be Dropped Directly Under the Axle of the Disc—Give the Bearings Careful Inspection.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

As the drill sows, so shall the farmer reap, is no fallacy. It is as true in its content as the maxim "As a man sows so shall he reap." Given the right kind of a grain drill, the seed is all planted at a uniform depth, evenly covered; the earth compacted just enough to retain the moisture around it. These conditions mean that the young plants will all come up at the same time, that the roots will be well protected, and that the grain will ripen uniformly. As the grain is planted, so will it grow and ripen. If some of the seed is planted too shallow, and some too deep, the seed that comes up first, ripens first. Thus it is that some of the grain is ready to harvest while other patches are still in the milk stage.

The feeding device is the heart of the grain drill. Upon its reliability depends the accuracy of sowing the seed. The drill scale is constructed for the average sized seeds, and therefore cannot always be depended upon when the size of them varies from the normal. If the grain is oversized or undersized the required amount per acre may be sown by setting the feed lever at a point slightly greater or slightly less than shown on the indicator. There are, in common use, two different forms of feeding devices. The fluted-cylinder-force feed, and the double-run-force feed. The amount of seed sown by the fluted-cylinder-force feed may be regulated by a lever which changes the size of the outlet, but it does not always handle all classes of seed without breaking them, as can be done with the double-run-force feed, which necessarily requires for driving it a disc wheel, or a cog wheel with from nine to fifteen sets of cogs that make as many seeds or feeds.

In the most efficient type of grain drills the seed should be deposited as nearly directly under the axle of the disc as possible, as this is the only place where the seed can be dropped directly on to the bottom of the trench without hindrance. By this method the disc is not run deeper than the seed is deposited, thus the draft is reduced to a minimum. If the seed is deposited in the rear of the centre of the axle, the rotation of the disc tends to carry earth and seed up with it, causing the seed to be unevenly deposited. In operation, a properly angled disc opens a trench about two inches wide. The falling seed strikes the concave side of the shield and the convex side of the disc, and is thus scattered evenly over the entire width of the trench.

Grain seed drills are divided into four kinds, according to the type of furrow-opener — the open delivery single disc and the closed delivery single disc, the double disc, the shoe, and the hoe drills. The open delivery single disc furrow opener deposits the seed between the shield and the convex side of the disc. The space is open from the end of the boot between the disc and shield to the bottom or lower end of the shield. The shield prevents the falling seed from becoming mixed with the loose earth and surface trash and insures its free passage to the bottom of the trench made by the disc. It will also do excellent work in highly cultivated soil that is free from trash.

The closed delivery single disc furrow opener has a closed boot, similar to a hoe furrow opener, which comes down at the rear edge of the disc and deposits the seed about two inches back of the disc. It does not plant the seed at as even a depth as either the open delivery single disc or the double disc, but deposits it at least eight inches in rear of the disc hub, and wherever it meets with an obstruction, rock or hard frozen soil the disc rises up and carries the boot with it, broadcasting the seed on the surface.

There are many styles of double discs, but the one that plants the seed under or slightly back of the disc axle, or hub, is the one to use, for that point is the deepest part of the furrow. The furrow opener that shoots the grain forward of this centre is to be avoided, for the reason that the seed reaches the ground before the furrow is fully formed, and it is, therefore, mixed with the soil as the seed trench is being made, causing what is termed "wavy" sowing.

The double disc type of opener tends to spread out the seed more than other kinds, so that each seed has a somewhat greater area from which to draw moisture. The hoe furrow opener or shovel opener does not penetrate the ground readily and clogs easier than any of the other types. The shoe opener does no better work, and rather than clog will run over trash and thus plant the seed at varying depths. In selecting a drill the bearings should be given careful inspection. They should be dust proof. The hard oiler must be considered superior to all others for this kind of work, as the oil can be forced into the bearing from the centre, and as it works out it carries all the dirt with it. It should have a well-braced seed box with steel hopper bottom to allow the seed to pass freely into the cups; strong frame and substantial wheels are important features. The distance between the furrow opener varies to some extent but six inches is the usual spacing. The seed tubes may be of rubber or of steel ribbon. The rubber tubes give good satisfaction, but are not durable if exposed to the weather. The steel ribbon tubes serve the purpose well, and if painted will last as long as the drill. —Jno. Evans, O. A. College, Guelph.

STORING VEGETABLES.

How Farmers Living Near Towns Can Make Money.

If properly stored after harvest, vegetables can be made a source of considerable income to the farmer who is located near good-sized towns or cities. In such places a constantly increasing number of people are living in apartments and flats, where they have storage facilities for only small quantities of vegetables, or in houses heated by furnaces in the basement, making that part of the house too warm for the storage of vegetables. The automobile or motor truck has made it possible for the grower to get his vegetables to the dealer or consumer even in cold weather, especially if his machine is enclosed or is fitted with a heater.

Proper storage of the vegetables from harvest time until they are brought out for sale is a subject to which the grower must give particular attention, for on it the entire success of a winter-marketing program depends.

Where the grower plans to draw on his stock from time to time during the cold weather he must so store his produce that portions of it can be removed without disturbing the remainder. Instead of putting all of one kind of vegetables in one pile it is advisable to make several smaller piles or to use various containers, such as boxes, barrels or baskets, each of which is adequately protected and can be removed with its contents without disturbing other stores. Where outdoor pits are used it may be desirable to introduce intervening walls or layers of earth at more frequent intervals than would be necessary in storing supplies merely for one family.

Beets, late cabbage, carrots, celery, onions, parsnips, potatoes, sweet potatoes, salsify, and turnips may be stored in their natural condition. Beans of various kinds, including the limas, may be stored dry. Good storage facilities exist in most farm houses, it being only necessary to make use of the cellar, the attic, or other parts of the dwelling, depending upon the character and amount of produce to be stored. Barrels, crates, boxes or bins may be used as containers for various vegetables, but movable containers are preferable to built-in bins because they are more easily cleaned. Outdoor storage cellars or caves are particularly desirable, for large quantities can be taken care of in convenient and inexpensive fashion.

In sections where low temperatures prevail it is necessary to insulate the storage cellar or house so that the vegetables will not freeze. The above-ground type of house much used in many sections of the north, has thick walls filled with sawdust or shavings. It is necessary that pains be taken to provide for proper ventilation. In many northern sections large storage cellars are built partly underground. Concrete storage cellars are coming into quite general use. Outdoor banks and pits are also familiar means employed to protect vegetables in cold weather. The conical pit is used commonly for such vegetables as potatoes, carrots, beets, turnips, salsify, parsnips, and heads of cabbage.

All vegetables which the farmer or truck raiser may desire to keep in stock for selling through the winter months do not require the same type of storage.

Millions of Acres Awaiting.

One hundred and twenty-eight million acres of surveyed farm land are awaiting settlers in Western Canada; 25,000,000 of these are still open for homestead entry. Of the 179,000,000 acres fit to farm in the 454,000,000 acres in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta 26,000,000 are under crop and 25,000,000 under live stock.

Unkind Suggestion.

The swan sings but one song—or so on good authority we've heard. Oh, how we wish some folks we know would imitate that gentle bird.

What Was Her Nationality?

It was at the sale of sugar and cornmeal which had been confiscated by revenue officers. An old lady (nationality unknown) was cautiously bidding upon a small sack of meal, and was meeting with opposition from a second lady equally cautious. The bids were raised five cents at a time until the sum of 50 cents had been reached. Then a lull occurred. Twice the auctioneer called the sum. Then as the old lady was reaching for her purchase a small boy beside her called "75 cents." Fiercely the old lady turned on him. "You're no Scot," she declared.

"Poison Ivy."

William Ivens, the former Methodist preacher, and one of the strike leaders on trial in Winnipeg, has acquired a nickname as a result of his "poisoned jury, poisoned judge and poisoned sentence" speech. "Poison Ivy" is the name by which the strike leader is now known to those who are following the trial. Ivens was charged with contempt of court as a result of his "poison" speech.

Women and Asthma.—Women are numbered among the sufferers from asthma by the countless thousands. In every climate they will be found, helpless in the grip of this relentless disease unless they have availed themselves of the proper remedy. Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Asthma Remedy, despite its assurance of benefit, costs so little that it is within reach of all. It is the national remedy for asthma, far removed from the class of doubtful and experimental preparations. Your dealer can supply it.

Move After Usain in Family.

Of the inherited rover spirit of the wild people of Davao and their belief that the death of a member of the family is indicative of the will of Allah for them to change their homes, the bureau of forestry says:

"When someone dies in the house built on the land or homestead given to the head of a family, the entire family will move to some other place and in most cases the house is either burned or torn down and the land on which it was built is abandoned for some years. A wild bird of the pigeon family, locally known as alimukon, is the common god or fortune teller of the wild people of Davao. Unless this bird answers favorably to their supplications to go back to the old place, their old abode or abodes are either forever abandoned or left untouched for many years."

Children at Play.

You have but to go abroad for half an hour in pleasant weather, or to throw open your doors and windows on a Saturday afternoon, if you live anywhere in the neighborhood of a school house, or a vacant lot with here and there a patch of green or a dry place on it, and steal behind the curtains, or draw the blinds and let the fresh winds blow through and through the chambers of your heart for a few minutes, winnowing the dust and scattering the cobwebs that have gathered there while you were asleep, and lo, you will find it ringing with the voices of children at play, and all alive with the glimmering phantasmagoria of leap frog, prison base, or knock-up-and-catch.—John Neal.

No one need endure the agony of corns with Holloway's Corn Cure at hand to remove them.

New Business Methods.

Some new methods are being introduced into the northern fur trade, the most important, perhaps, being the substitution of a cash system for the time-honored bartering that has always been picturesque, but not always satisfactory. Much business will continue to be transacted at the northern posts in the old way, to which the Indian and half-breed trappers have become accustomed, but some of the traders have now adopted the plan of paying money for the furs, which puts the north more clearly on a par with the rest of the world. The trappers, it has been found, like to handle money, and in the end it comes back over the traders' counters for store goods. Incidentally, the wilderness folk are learning to talk in terms of dollars instead of beaver skins, which used to be the money standard of the north.

His Difficulty.

At a training camp during the war the officer of the day was making the rounds of the post. It was during challenging time. He seated himself on the corner post of a fence and waited for the sentry. The sentry, a raw recruit from the woods, came slowly up and stopped only a few feet from the O. D. After waiting in silence for a few moments the officer asked: "Well, what are you going to say?" "Durned if I know what to say," drawled the recruit. "If you were walking I'd say 'Halt!'"

Small but Potent.—Parnelle's Vegetable Pills are small, but they are effective in action. Their fine qualities as a corrector of stomach troubles are known to thousands and they are in constant demand everywhere by those who know what a safe and simple remedy they are. They need no introduction to those acquainted with them, but to those who may not know them they are presented as the best preparation on the market for disorders of the stomach.

THE BRITISH WAY

It is said that the Prince of Wales was granted $125,000 by the British treasury for expenses on his trip to Canada and the United States, and upon arriving home he returned as used $90,000. Commenting on this, the Buffalo News says: "This is entirely contrary to precedent. He would be ostracised in Washington for that. It simply isn't done in the best political circles. To do a thing like that is to turn one's back on opportunity. The proper caper is to go to the limit. To stop short of that is to be denounced as a political heretic—to be proclaimed a piker."

The Port Rowan News says:—Balick, the fish buyer, is authority for the statement that all kinds of fish will be cheap this season, with the exception of carp. This hitherto despised fish is used by the great fish houses for fancy smoked and spiced fish, and the demand for them is so great that a stiff market price will be established.

A Toronto evening paper quotes a railway official as stating that 39 cars of potatoes—a total of 14,049 bags—have been standing on the Esplanade since March 15, despite efforts on the part of the railway to get them unloaded. HEIR TO SCOTTISH RELIC OF ROBERT BRUCE DEAD

John Dewar, Son of Last Keeper of Crozier of St. Fillan

Sarnia, April 25.—John Dewar of Plympton township, who died Thursday and was buried Saturday, was the direct heir of the "Quigric" or Crozier of St. Fillan, had it not been deduced to the Historical Society of Scotland by his father, the last official holder of it. The crozier has been in the possession of the Dewar family since the days of Robert Bruce, and was deduced to the Historical Society of Scotland in 1876 in consideration of a sizable consideration; "there to remain in trust for all time to come for the use, benefit and enjoyment of the Scottish nation." The heirloom, which is the head of a pastoral staff, consisting of an external casing of silver enclosing an earlier crozier of bronze or copper, has descended from father to eldest son, the original having been given to one Finlay Jore (Dewar) of the parish of Clendochart. The keeper of the crozier was known as "Jore Cogerach," and by virtue of it was vested with great authority within the bounds of Scotland.

The original name of Jore has been corrupted in Dewar, in the matter of spelling, for the Scottish pronunciation of the present form is "Jewar." Mr. Dewar's funeral from the family home was largely attended by those who knew him during his many years of active church, municipal and political life. He was an elder in the Presbyterian Church, and a prominent Liberal. He was born seventy-eight years ago in Beckwith township, Larnark county, and with his parents settled upon the London Road Farm while still a boy. He is survived by his wife, two daughters, a sister, a brother and a niece who is also his foster daughter.

Amendments to the Tax and Sheep Production Act, passed by the Agricultural Committee of the Legislature will give counties the power to pool all dog taxes collected in the various townships into a central fund from which payment will be made for sheep killed. Adoption of the scheme will be optional, and counties adopting it will be given power to tag all dogs whether they are running at large or not. This was a recommendation made by the Essex county Council last year.

Five airplanes, up-to-date in every respect, have been secured to carry passengers wherever they may want to go on the air line. Stations will be established at various points in the territory.

Arkona Teacher Weds Warwick Farmer

A happy event took place Wednesday, April 21st, when Miss Clara Marie Davidson of Arkona and George Hanson Holbrook of Warwick were united in holy wedlock. Rev. Charles W. King of the Baptist church tied the nuptial knot. Miss Ruth M. Eastman, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid; Arthur Davidson, the bride's brother, was groomsmen. The bride was given away by her mother, Mrs. W. Bartram (nee Mrs. W. S. Davidson.) Mrs. King played the wedding march and other selections during the salutations. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's mother. The bridegroom is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Holbrook. The happy couple will reside near Warwick where Mr. Holbrook owns a farm. After the wedding dinner and a social time Mr. and Mrs. Holbrook motored to their Warwick home. Both these young people are well and favorably known in their respective communities. Only immediate friends witnessed the ceremony. Monday evening a surprise party of the Young Ladies' Philathea Club and their friends "happened around" at the parsonage where Miss Davidson was in for tea with Mr. and Mrs. King, and presented her with a silver token of their esteem. Not a few other wedding gifts attest the popularity of the bride and groom.

DEATH OF WM. McPHERSON

Wm. McPherson, probably the oldest pioneer resident in that section, died at his home in Arkona, on Thursday, April 15th, in his 96th year. In recent years he had been partially blind, and his death was hastened by a fall a while ago. Mr. McPherson was born in Perthshire, Scotland, in 1824, and came to this country with his parents, when he was 12 years of age. The family settled in Warwick, near Arkona, and during the 84 years which have elapsed since that time he bore his share of the days of toil which changed the unbroken forest to fertile and prosperous farms. Mr. McPherson married Janet Maxwell, who died in 1893. Two daughters survive him, viz., Mrs. John Anderson and Miss Margaret McPherson, both of Arkona. One sister, Mrs. Duncan Munro, 8th line, Bosanquet, is also living. The funeral took place on Saturday to the Arkona cemetery, with a very large attendance of relative and friends. The service was conducted by Rev. G. C. Ratcliffe, and the bearers were Wm. Butler, Wm. Cable, Henry Curtis, Reuben Dowden, Alex. Thomas and H. Zavitz.

NOTICE TO FARMERS

Information has been received by the Salvation Army Immigration Department at Montreal that a number of married men who desire to secure positions on farms will arrive in Canada from Great Britain with the opening of the St. Lawrence river to navigation this season. These people are of a splendid type, men who have served their country during the great war and who are now coming to Canada to find a home on the land with a view of learning Canadian methods and eventually securing farms for themselves and their children. Farmers who desire married help and have accommodation for a man with family should communicate with the Salvation Army at Montreal with a view of securing this very desirable class of help. We also understand that there will be a few single men in the party. During the month of June or July the Salvation Army will probably bring a number of orphan children of school age to Ontario for adoption.

The Late Mrs. Donald McAlpine

The death took place on Monday morning, April 19th, of one of the oldest residents of Forest, in the person of Susan Quinlan, relict of the late Donald McAlpine, in the 87th year of her age. She had been in ill health for some years and since the death of her granddaughter Mrs. Lena Gallagher, two months ago, she sank very rapidly. She was born in Ireland, and came to this country 76 years ago. After her marriage she lived in Warwick, near Forest, where her husband died in 1873. Shortly afterwards she moved to Forest and has since resided there. She is survived by two sons and one daughter, viz., Andrew McAlpine, of Chicago, now in South America on business; James McAlpine, of Chicago, and Mrs. Susan Pierce, of Forest. The funeral took place Wednesday morning to the R.C. church, thence to Beechwood cemetery. The services were conducted by Rev. Labelle, and the bearers were Wm. Addison, C. Anderson, Alex. Jamieson, Jas. Leonard, J. D. Livingston and Wm. Malley.

SEVENTY-FIVE AND BOARD

By M. P. MERRYMAN

(©, 1919, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Yellow October sunlight poured through the west windows of the library. Myriad dust particles floated along the slanting sun paths that slid abruptly into shadow at the table's edge. The assistant professor of biology sat humped over a book that lay upon the table before him, but he was not concentrating, at least not upon the text. With a thump of his fist that set the book jumping he raised his head and looked about the big, quiet room.

The assistant professor took off his glasses and rubbed his eyes and stretched. Then he shoved his hands into his pockets, tilted back in his chair and surveyed the shelves of dog-eared volumes opposite him. It gave him an immense satisfaction, this bare, low-vaulted room with its brown walls and solid, brown tables and its rows and rows of books.

The assistant professor pulled out a crumpled bit of paper from his pocket and smoothed it out upon the book, after which he continued to regard it with an expression of ironical amusement. It was a check made out to him for the amount of twelve dollars and fifty cents; a sum he had received in payment of a scientific article which it had taken him two months to write. It was a good article, too, but according to more than one editor "not sufficiently popular in tone."

He had been trying to make a decision. This last contemplation of the scrap of paper in his hand had served to topple the scales. He closed the book with a bang, uncrossed his long legs, rose from the table and ambled down the aisle to the door. Outside he stood for an instant, blinking in the strong light. When he closed his eyes they still registered printed book pages. With something of the feeling of a stranger he turned and scuffed along the leaf-strewn path to the lake. Now that there was no longer any doubt about his departure the intimate landscape seemed all at once unfamiliar and different. He felt already detached from it—all sorry.

The moment the tip of her canoe veered round a bend in the shore line he recognized it and whistled. The assistant professor of English whistled her answer and waved an undignified paddle in greeting as her small craft slipped into sight.

"Want to come?" she called, invitingly.
"Sure!"
"All right! Climb in!"
The canoe nosed landward and slushed into the sand. With a lunge which shot the boat into deeper water and himself miraculously, into the boat, the new passenger embarked and took charge of the paddle.

"Where to?" he asked.
"Oh, anywhere," she replied and smiled at him.
He selected the most distant spot on the lake, laid the paddle across the canoe and rested his elbows on it.
"Takes longer this way," he explained.
She laughed and leaned sideways to watch a swirl of red and yellow leaves that went scudding along the surface of the water like a fleet of toy sailboats. The red of her tam-o'-shanter, however, held more fascination for him. At length the leaves whirled out of sight and she settled back in her seat to feast her eyes upon lake and trees and sky.

"I'm so sorry for all the folks who live in cities," she said.

"Why?"
She looked up inquiringly at the question. He had snapped it out so abruptly it puzzled her a little. He had begun paddling, too, furiously.
"Why?" she repeated. "Why, because they miss all this!" She waved a brown arm toward the rustling woods that shadowed them. "Wouldn't you hate to miss it?" she queried. The blade in his hand cut a long swath before he answered.

"I—I expect to miss it—after next Sunday," he said.
"You—you mean—?" Her question hung unfinished.

"Yes, I'm going away—to the city," he said dryly with a pucker of his mouth as if even the taste of the words was bitter to him.

"Oh!" She bit her lips and tried to go on speaking naturally, but her brain appeared to be turning a somersault—and no words came.

"Yes," he went on dully. "I'm going away. Decker has a fellow here now who can take my place. They've given me these last two days till college opens to decide. Well, I've made up my mind. I'm going to the city to live in a hail bedroom and work in an office—and sell rubber. I'll loathe selling rubber, but I've got to make to it till I can make a decent enough living to ask a decent girl to marry me. I'd rather stay here and go on with my work than anything else on earth, but I'll be hanged if I'll ask my wife to wear second-hand clothes all her life or wear 'em myself. This digging along forever on seventy-five a month and board is getting my goat. Today this came. It was the last straw." He drew his offending check from his pocket and flipped it into her lap. She read it and met his eyes when she had finished. "I—I don't know that I blame you much," she said.

They skimmed along for a time, each waiting for the other to speak. When she had made up her mind that he never expected to open his mouth again, she gave in. "And—and how does—the girl—feel about it?" she inquired. "That would make—some difference—of course." Hours passed for her before he replied.

"I—I haven't—asked her—yet," he said hesitatingly.

With a little shiver of relief she sank back in her seat and caught back the smile in her eyes so that he might not see. He went on blustering, man-fashion:

"It isn't unreasonable, is it, to want enough to live on decently? I'm not aspiring to plumbers' wages, you know, or anything like that; but hang it, even a teacher's got to live."

She began speaking then and her voice grew softer and fuller as she went on. "I know," she replied. "It's unfair and it probably will be for a long time to come, but you can't have everything, you know, Bob. You have the work you like best in all the world. Not many men can say that."

"I know all that," he said, shaking his head in reply. "I've talked that to myself, too, but all the same steam-heated apartments in town rent for $50 a month."

"So you have been house hunting?"
He had not even the grace to blush.
"Sure!" he exclaimed. "Why shouldn't I? Even a poor devil of a pedagogue can look, can't he?"

She leaned forward, her eyes dancing, but for the moment she felt a little like his mother, nevertheless.

"Boy," she explained slowly and emphatically, "when you're a school-teacher you don't rent a steam-heated apartment in town; you get a cottage in the country and buy a good second-hand stove. For that matter, all the furniture is second-hand but you needn't look like that—it's nice! You buy a few pieces at a time and put on three coats of paint and then you enamel it and if you want to you paint little flow—"

He could not wait for her to finish. "And for an engagement ring," he jeered, "you buy some pretty little tin thing at the five and ten."

She shook her head defiantly till the red tassel bobbed. "No, you don't! You hunt up that lovely old amethyst ring of your mother's that you once showed to—me."

He was still stubborn and unconvinced. "And then," he demanded, "when the house is rented and furnished and—and everything—who pays the bills?"

Her patience reached its limit. "Can't you figure out anything for yourself?" she demanded angrily. "Some land goes with the cottage, of course; enough to raise garden truck for the family, and besides that you do whatever you can. Raise chickens or rabbits or bees or thoroughbred dogs or mushrooms or anything that sells—how can I tell exactly? Personally, I've made several hundred dollars writing 'deteketif' stories. Maybe your wife could do something like that—after the dishes."

The assistant professor of biology began to believe he had died and gone to heaven. He felt as if he were treading on balloons that bore him higher and higher, yet strangely did not break. The prospect of remaining at his work made him giddy enough, but so added to that the idea of wife and home was still beyond his rapidly expanding imagination.

"Do you—do you suppose—it could be done?" he demanded, and tried to swallow. The red mouth beneath the red tam-o'-shanter was quivering, but the round little chin was firm. "Of course it could!" she said.

"God!" murmured the assistant professor of biology fervently. "I—I almost believe it could, too! And you don't believe I'd be a low-down cad for asking the best little girl in the world to marry me and live like that?" His hands moved forward, eagerly awaiting the touch of the two steady ones that slipped into his own, while the paddle, unnoticed, slid into the water and floated away.

"I—I'm sure you wouldn't," she answered, "if—if you mean—me!"

SUIT OR A DRESS?

Question Is a Puzzling One for Majority of Women.

Tight-Fitting, Severely Tailored Outfit Not So Much Shown as More Youthful Looking Models.

Whether to buy a tailored suit, or a dress and separate coat, that is the problem which confronts the woman who goes forth at this time to spend her dress allowance, and this spring the question is a puzzling one. Some years are what the garment makers call "suit years," when the problem is settled, before we even begin to shop, by the manufacturers; other years the shops show nothing, comparatively speaking, but one-piece dresses and coats. But this year both suits and dresses are shown in amazing variety, and wise indeed is the woman who has looked over her wardrobe and reached a decision as to what she needs, before she goes to the stores.

The new suits are distinctive in several ways. Coats are just finger-tip length, as a rule, and many of them have the loose outside pocket effect, achieved by turning up the bottom of the coat at the sides and in front. The skirts are narrow, as rumor predicted that they would be. The more extreme models have made allowance for the wearer's need, either by slitting the skirt at the back seam for a few inches up the hem, or, as in one case, by making the skirt with the front and back widths absolutely separate as far up as the hips; these two sections were then caught together at intervals down the sides by short threads, heavily buttonholed, which held the two sections together except when the wearer was walking. When such skirts as these are worn, there is worn also a heavy satin slip, matching the skirt in color.

The tight-fitting, severely tailored suit is not so much shown as are the looser-coated, more youthful-looking models. Narrow belts are on nearly all of these jackets, fastening at the side; the skirts of the coats are rather full, and are quite apt to be inconspicuously trimmed. Embroidered silk arrow heads make one such coat interesting; another is bound with narrow, flat, black silk braid; still another harks back to the woven ribbon work in which our grandmothers delighted, the skirt of the coat being made of black ribbon, woven in a squared pattern with the wide tricotine of which the suit was made. Tucks, running crosswise, relieve these short jackets of plainness, and sometimes, on suits meant for formal wear, an embroidered band around the bottom edge of the coat gives it distinction. One delightful simple suit of dark blue serge had rather wide, rolled seams, which made a decidedly interesting finish. The wide, scarf collar, one end of which is thrown over the wearer's shoulder, is nearly always becoming, but is, of course, impractical on a suit which must be worn on all occasions and in all weathers, since its effect is more becoming than trim.

Suit of Gray English Tissue.

"Gosh! How my back aches!"
After Grip, "flu" or colds, the kidneys and bladder are often affected—called nephritis, or inflammation of kidneys. This is the red flag of danger—betime, be wise and check the further inroads of kidney disease by obtaining that wonderful discovery of Dr. Pierce's, known as Anuric (anti-uric-acid), because it expels the uric acid poison from the body and removes those pains, such as backache, rheumatism in muscles and joints.
Naturally when the kidneys are deranged the blood is filled with poisonous waste matter, which settles in the feet, ankles and wrists; or under the eyes in bag-like formations.

Send 10c. for trial pkg. of Anuric to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., or branch Laboratory, Bridgeburg, Ont.
PATERSON, ONT. —I was troubled with rheumatism in the right limb and hand for several years, and lately in the left shoulder. The only way I could lie was on my back. I had great difficulty to sit down and more to get up. Recently I had a very severe pain in my back. I have taken Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery several times with the most satisfactory results, so I concluded to give his Anuric Tablets a trial. The pain in limb and shoulder has stopped entirely and in right hand it is very slight and getting less all the time. I can now sit or lie in any position I wish without discomfort or pain. I certainly will recommend Anuric; there is nothing nearly so good; I have tried them all.—GEO. BOOS, cor. Duke and Waterloo.

DRAINAGE IS IMPORTANT

Some Benefits of a Well Devised Drainage Plan.

Guesswork is the Poorest Method to Adopt—Get the Land Levels and Then Arrange for Tiling—How to Protect Drainage Outlets.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

WHEN a man is about to erect a building, be it ever so small, the first thing he does is to make a plan. That plan may be on paper or it may exist only in the mind of the builder, yet it is a plan. Without a plan to follow, a builder cannot do good work. The same is true of tile drainage. The man who places a "string" or "line" of tile in a watercourse, which traverses his fields, should not do so without asking himself such questions as: "Am I putting this tile in the lowest part?" "Will I be able to get a satisfactory outlet? How many acres will this tile drain, and is it large enough to drain it satisfactorily? Have I sufficient grade to drain the holes in the rear fifty?" If he does not ask himself these questions he is like a builder without a plan; he is working in the dark; his work cannot be efficient. All these questions the drainage plan answers, and more.

No matter how small the means for immediate construction of drains, or how few the drains which one is about to install, he should not do so without having first laid out a plan of which these drains will be a part. On rolling land such a plan is not hard to decide upon, because the differences in elevation are very pronounced, and any one who is familiar with such lands is able to intelligently plan a system of drains for them. But where the area is large and the topography irregular, or very flat, guesswork is out of the question. It is then that we must resort to the tape and the levelling instrument for reliable information. A drainage plan shows first of all the differences in height or elevation between all parts of the farm over which the survey extended. This allows the owner of the land to plan his own system of drainage. The possession of the levels for all parts of the farm lays bare the most advantageous routes for tile drains, from a study of the levels and contours of a plan it is possible to calculate the acreage which each main tile must drain. This information together with the fall or grade procedure is the only true guide to help us decide upon the size of tile needed in any given drain. It is only when the planer has a picture of the whole project before him that he can draft an efficient yet economical plan of drains for any piece of land.

Future Benefits.—The benefits of a plan do not end with the completion of the drainage system. Only those of us who have tried long and hard to find a drain, the location of which was nowhere recorded, know the value of guidance such as is offered by plan. When a tile-drained farm is offered for sale the existence of a plan of drains adds greatly to the value of the farm. The plan is of equal value to both the seller and buyer. With proper care well-constructed tile drains will give good service for several generations; therefore for the convenience of our children and grandchildren it is necessary to have a plan of our underground drainage work.

There is another way in which a drainage plan is very helpful to a farm owner; it is a splendid guide toward ascertaining the acreage of any field or part of the farm. Fences are located on the plan, and the whole plan drawn to scale, so that with the aid of a rule it is possible to measure the area of any part of the land surveyed. This is of great assistance in planning a season's crops as well as in calculating yields per acre.

The drainage pays; but, before you start even a small system, by all means secure a plan—G. Heimpel, O. A. College, Guelph.

Protecting Drainage Outlets.

Tile, particularly clay tile, should not run out to the mouth of the drain. If a piece of old gas pipe, eight or ten feet long, can be secured, this should be placed in the drain in place of the last few feet. Filling this a piece of corrugated steel, or even a plank trough is much better than running the tile right to the end, where they will be broken, washed into the outlet, or otherwise destroyed, allowing the earth to roll in and stop the flow of water.

Under any condition the bank is liable to wear away. Animals pasturing in the field may tramp it down, and block the tile, so in the second place, an abutment should be built through which the outlet discharges its water and the bank will be kept in a state of preservation. This may be made of concrete, stone or plank, and should be a permanent structure. In some cases where the flow is heavy and the water would have a tendency to undermine the wall, it is well to build an apron on which the force of the falling water is broken.

There is still another precaution which should be given due consideration.

tion. Frequently small muskrats, muskrats, coons, ground hogs and others, seek refuge in the tile. Here they are entrapped, and form a dam to the flowing water. To overcome such, the outlet should have bars across the end. These may be quite small, and close together so that nothing can get through. A screen may be fitted over the end, but unless the mesh is quite large the water is retarded in its flow. Sometimes the first tile is threaded with wire. This forms a good protection.

When all these devices are given attention, the outlet should remain in a state of efficiency for years, and the system, if properly installed, should give satisfaction.—F. L. Ferguson, O. A. College, Guelph.

Brown Bear and Grizzlies.

The law protects the great brown bear of the Alaskan peninsula and nearby islands, which is the largest existing carnivorous land animal; likewise the grizzlies of the Arctic territory.

Nevertheless they are shot whenever the natives or white settlers get a chance at them, and if anybody is arrested for such an offence a conviction cannot be obtained. This is because public sentiment in Alaska is dead against the beasts in question, which are not only destroyers of livestock but dangerous to human beings.

The popular notion that a grizzly will not attack a man if unmolested is without basis in fact. Most formidable of living creatures, it is very intelligent, recognizes human beings as its enemies and will assail them whenever a good opportunity offers. A grizzly has been known to follow a man's trail, steal up behind him and tear off the whole top of his head with a blow of its tremendous paw.

Alaskan settlers declare that the great brown and grizzly bears are protected for the sole benefit of non-resident sportsmen. But they add that they are entitled to protect themselves, and they do it with a gun.

A Source of Riches.

C. C. Jones, chairman of the Fur Industry and Wild Life Conference, stated recently that Canada will soon become one of the leading fur markets of the world, and Montreal may once more become the great centre of the fur trade. Mr. James White, chairman of the Commission of Conservation, pointed out the valuable influence of the fur trade on the development of Canada, without which British colonization would probably have never gone further west than Lak's Superior. Canada's exports of furs to the United States had increased from $1,800,000 in 1915, to $12,800,000 in 1919.

Value of Furs.

The value of the skins of our fur-bearing animals has increased enormously in recent years. A mink, once worth only 40 cents, is now valued at between $13 to $28, and a muskrat, which was once bought for 12 cents, is now bought for $5.50.

If Miller's Worm Powders needed the support of testimonials they could be got by the thousands from mothers who know the great virtue of this excellent medicine. But the powders will speak for themselves and in such a way that there can be no question of them. They act speedily and thoroughly, and the child to whom they are administered will show improvement from the first dose.

Good Luck to Infants.

Almost every nation has some particular superstition or belief about babies, and these result in actions which vary all the way from the utterly absurd to the terribly tragic. The peasantry of Greece firmly believe that the future of every child is determined by three fates, known as the Moirai. In the popular mind these fates are three old women, whose habitation is a mountain cave and they come together to a house where there is a new-born child. In preparation for them, all furniture is set aside, their tottering footsteps may not be impeded, and refreshments in the shape of honey, bread, cakes and wine are set out for these important though invisible guests. Money, too, is placed on the table, as a bribe, for it is believed that in the gift of these fates are all good things as well as bad. Under no circumstances must a child's beauty be alluded to while the Moirai may be in the house, or they will certainly make its good looks disappear.

Many peoples believe that ill luck will be the portion of a child who cuts its upper teeth first, and there are one or two African tribes who so firmly believe this that, in order to spare the child a life of misery, they promptly kill any child whose upper teeth appear first. Another tribe sees bad fortune for everyone in twins, and avoid it by slaying them all.

Should a child grow up bad in China the parents are said to have forgotten to bind its wrists—alluding thereby to a superstition that if a red cord is tied around an infant's wrists it cannot fail to grow up quiet and obedient.

There are various methods of assuring good luck to an infant. In rural England, if its right hand is bound up for a short period soon after birth it will surely become wealthy. The Spaniards sweep their children's face with pine boughs, to assure good fortune, while to keep the Irish baby from harm a belt of woman's hair is placed about it, and to achieve a similar object Roumanian mothers tie red ribbons around the ankles of their offspring. In Holland garlic, salt, bread and steak are put in the cradle of the new arrival, while to protect their babies the mothers of Wales put in the cradle a pair of tongs or a knife. In Iceland, when the first tooth makes its appearance, a lamb is presented to the child, to be its "very own."

Waterway from Switzerland to Sea.

Above Nantes the Loire is little used on account of the swift current and shifting channel. It is proposed to dredge the river for a considerable distance above Nantes or to build lateral canals so as to join the Loire with the canal systems of Central France leading to Paris, and with the Rhone, making a waterway from Switzerland to the sea.

TO THE YOUNG FOLKS

When'er you think to do a thing
Just do it with your might,
Throw all your heart and soul to it,
Be sure that you are right;
And when you are getting ready
To plunge into the fray,
Your speculations just revise
And see if it will pay.
And if you wish to till the soil
And raise the golden grain,
Be not afraid to labor hard
In weariness and pain;
Be not afraid to soil your hands
Nor shirk a long, long day,
Use all the brains that you have got,
Your section's sure to pay.

Or, if you'd rather like to be
An easier-up of pain
Be sure you understand the drugs
Irrespective of the gain;
And be the best that can be got,
Equipped in every way,
And help Dame Nature do her work,
Then it is sure to pay.
We need some folks to understand
And keep the human straight,
We are so twisted in our ways,
So selfish in our gait,
Then shun deceit of every kind,
Be honest! For you can,
There is no need for all this greed
It only will degrade,
'Twould pay as well if we could sell
Out all this stock in trade,
Whatever calling you will choose,
The hammer or the saw,
If we are worth our feed we'll get
Whatever we can draw.

And we have merchants by the score
Legitimate, tho' rife,
Who in retail must sell to us
The necessities of life;
If you would like to be of those
To help your fellow man,
Then shun deceit of every kind,
Be honest! For you can,
There is no need for all this greed
It only will degrade,
'Twould pay as well if we could sell
Out all this stock in trade,
Whatever calling you will choose,
The hammer or the saw,
If we are worth our feed we'll get
Whatever we can draw.

There are so many useless ones,
Professional, likewise,
They like protection over much
And sheltered from the skies.
The Government has much to do
This petting needs to halt.
There is no need to begging go,
If we are worth our salt;
We hate to say, but yet it's true
Concerning certain saints
That they should be protected from
The law of other gent's.
Then choose your trade, use all your
And master all details, [grit,
Your anchor raise; there's breeze enough
To fill up all your sails.
April 24, 1920. --W.B.L.

A DESIRE TO EAT WHAT YOU WANT

How Stomachs Can be Restored to a Vigorous, Healthy Condition

'Not to be limited in diet, but to eat whatever he pleases is the dream of every dyspeptic. No one can honestly promise to restore any stomach to this happy condition, because all people can not eat the same things with equally satisfactory results. It is literally true that "what is one man's food is another man's poison." But it is possible to set one up the digestive organs that a pleasing diet may be selected from articles of food that cause no discomfort.

When the stomach lacks tone there is no quicker way to restore it than to build up the blood. Good digestion without rich, red blood is impossible, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills offer the very best way to build up and enrich the blood. For this reason these pills are especially good in stomach trouble attended by thin blood, and in attacks of nervous dyspepsia. Proof of the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in even the most obstinate cases of stomach trouble is given by Mrs. S. Morrison, Varney, Ont., who says:--"I shall always feel indebted to a friend who advised me to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I had been a sufferer for upwards of twelve years with stomach trouble which resulted in a general weakness of the whole system. My meals always caused me great discomfort, and at times I would go hungry rather than undergo the suffering which followed meals. I was constantly taking something or other recommended for the trouble, but without finding a cure, and often the trouble kept me in bed when I should have been about doing my household work. My friend, who had had a similar attack, came to see me and urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which had cured her. I got a supply at once and began taking them, and soon found relief. By the time I had used eight boxes I was again enjoying the best of health, and with a good appetite and a stomach restored to normal. Had I known of this medicine earlier it would have saved me years of suffering, and I urge any who may be in a similar condition to try these pills at once."

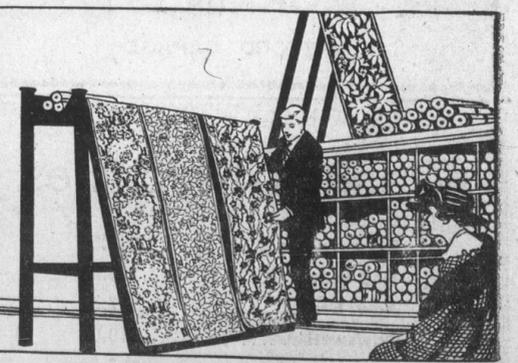

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail postpaid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The death occurred at Strathroy Hospital on Saturday of John Leitch, of Moss township, aged 79, after a short illness. The funeral was held from the residence of his brother, Alex. M. Leitch, Moss, on Monday afternoon, to Kilmartin Cemetery. He is survived by two sisters and one brother: Mrs. Jeanette Munro, of Moss; Mrs. Margaret Munro, of Brooke, and Alex. M., at the old homestead in Moss.

James Kirkpatrick, of East Zorra, had a narrow escape from death when he was buried under a mass of ensilage nearly six feet deep. He was forking in the silo when the frozen ensilage around the sides fell in. His wife happened to be in the barn and heard the noise. She summoned neighbors, and when Mr. Kirkpatrick was finally extricated he was unconscious and his body totally black. A few minutes longer and he would have been fatally suffocated. He is recovering.
