THE NEGLECTED WIFE

BY M. AGNES WHITE

O'Donnell was awed, and looked in helplessness upon the scene. He was powerless to help Leonora. God had made it powerless now, but how often and often had it been an easy task to help her when there was in her own pure heart a tempest raging! He went out on the piazza. Great rain drops were dashing down with such impetuous fury that he had to retreat to the passage.

'Tie an awful storm, my son,' said Mrs O'Donnell, coming to where he stood and placing a hand upon his shoulders; and for a moment both started into the fear. ful darkness without.

'The bay is quite dangerous in a storm ike this,' said O'Donnell, partly to him self, while a brilliant flash of lightning followed by a threatening sound of thund er, almost staggered him

His mother said nothing to his remark but she, too, was thinking of the young wife. Perhaps every moment of Leonora's married life rose like a panorama before her. She too, had helped to make that blighted life still more unhappy. Did she remember for a moment, since she had been beneath her roof, shielding her from the attacks that every one was constantly making on the poor, young, unoffending to her apartment, and was soon lollowed being? She knew now, as she stood look. ing at the raging elements, that it should have been her hand that should have shielded her son's wife : but pride, like a hateful monster had mastered the better feelings of the woman's nature, and she had permitted it to prevent her being kind to the poor girl, who had never been anything to her out attentive, gent le, and respectful. The good in her nature now asserted its right to reign, and she would have given anything to know that Lenora was safe at home.

'How dreadful it is, mother !' exclaimed O'Donneil, shuddering. think. Leonora is in it. I wish to heavens that she were here.'

'So do I, my son,' putting her arms around his neck; 'but we will trust for the best.'

'I don't think that I can trust to anything; I don't deserve it,' he said, in a dreary tone.

'Never mind, darling,' reassuringly; 'no doubt she is safe.'

'Safe! Would to heaven I could think so. If I could only go to her! I think I must go to the beach to see if the boat has come in.

'Oh, do not, my son,' cried the mother You are unneceasily annoying yourself. For God's sake do not go in this storm wait until it abates.'

Seeing that he could accomplish no good by going, the sonsat wearily down on the nearest chair in gloomy silence. The servants now began to light the lamps, and shortly after supper was announced. O'Donnell ate nothing, but sat toying with his knife and fork in an abstracted

'Russel what is the matter with you to would suppose that you were uneasy about Leonora.

'Have I not every reason to be?' he returned in an altered, changed voice which caused his sister to look in amaze, ment at him.

But you forget that they did not exis not nine yet. For my part, I never meet trouble half way, and then beside aughing-it does look funny to see Rus sel uneasy about Leonora.'

O'Donnell did not dare to speak; the arm.

storm within him was too terrible. He felt, for the first time in his life, an in tense dislike for his sister, and for himself he had the most perfect contempt. He knew that he had no right to expect anything else but remarks of this kind; for what consideration had he ever shown to the one that he had vowed to love and cherish in the Holy Sacrament of Matrimony? It is true that he had always been faithful to her, but that was more respect to his manhood and religion thau for any love he possessed for Leonora. He excused himself from remaining at table, and walked out on the balcony. The storm was abating, but it was so black that it was impossible to see an object in front ofone. The darkness was impenetrable, though O'Donnell peered into it and listened to catch a sound that would assure him of his wife's approach. But the silence was so painful and the blackness of the night so oppressive that he returned to the lighted parlor.

'We are going to have a game of whist; can't you join us, Russel? We need an other to make up the party.'

I declare, Mabel, I do not feel at all like playing, and, even if I prevent your playing, you must excuse me.

They sat in silence, each one busy with his or her own thoughts, when the clock struck ten. O'Donnell arose and went to the window. Still there was no sign of the absent party. He returned to his seat, with suspense he was su ffering from plainly depicted upon his countenance. In a little while his restlessness was so great that he said :

'I shall go to the bay,' Turning to his sister, he added : Did you not say that they expected to be here by ten?

Before one word could be said he was gone. For the first time they all felt alarmed, and also felt for the first time how little they had ever done for Leono ra. Each one could easily remember the kind, loving, thoughtful attention that she had paid them. It was nearing mid night. Weary of soltimide, Mabel retired by the younger sister. The elder went uneasily through the hall, and looked out upon the night. The terrible darkness awed her; so she also went to her chamber, but not to sleep. She lowered her lamp and sat by the window. With all ner heart she wished that Leonora was safe at home. If she were, she would surely take her to her heart and humbly beg her forgiveness for all the harshness and unkindness she had shown her. After a while the girl rose trembling from her seat, and stole tip-toe across hall to her mother's chamber, which Mrs. O'Donnell was slowly pacing up and down, her face very pale and troubled.

Why are you not asleep, my daughter? she inquired.

I cannot sleep, mother. Don't you think it strange that Leonora has not

Mrs. Donnell sighed.

There is some delay, I suppose, occasioned by the storm.

'Yes; but, mother, I feel very uneasy Could it be that any thing has happened? And ch ! we have all been so, so cruel to poor Leonora.

Her face was as white as the gown she wore, and her mother stared half wildly into her face.

For God's sake my dearest, go to bed and try to compose yourself 'Twill do no good for you to be up. Go now dear

'But I could not sleep; indeed, I could not. I am so uneasy. Do you think that Russel would be much grieved i anything were to happen to Leonora? Mother, I am so sorry that we have treat ed her as we have, and if anything should

"My poor bov?" was all Mrs O'Donnell night?' asked one of his sisters. One said as she walked to the casement to see if there was anything to be heard or seen of the absent party.

And in a short time pect to be back until ten o'clock, and it all my heart the child were here with the eye could distinguishe it, but, grac. me. I feel as if we all had sent her from jous heavens! It was a capsized vessel. us, perhaps to perish."

She hid her face in her hands, while her daughter laid hers gently upon her

They both sank upon their knees, and we shall leave them to their devotions to tunate vessel. There, clinging to the follow O'Donnell.

There was not one single star to be seen as O'Donnell, without lantern or companion, started for the bay. He al. most felt the darkness, it seemed so thick and heavy. He had a hope that the boat would be in, and he could see Leonora. He would run to her, and would take her in his arms, and she should never go from him again as long as helived. His thoughts should always be of her. Yes; in a few moments he could fold her to his heart, and he would tell her, with a thousand kisses, how sorry he was for the past, and how dear she was to him now. Strange! He could see no light at the landing: but the night was so dark that he was not much surprised at that. He could not bring himself to believe but that they had returned. So as he came nearer the bay. his spirits instead of sinking, seemed to rise, in the hope of soon seeing her. But alas! no boat had come in-had not even been heard from. Several men were standing near the end of the platform that extended over the water. They recognized O Donnell as he approached, and said:

They have not returned yet, Mr. O Donne'l, and God knows where they are Russel knew from the speakers voice that it was Col. Sands who addressed him. What must we do? he asked, going to the gentleman's side.

'I cannot decide, my friend, it is all so dreadful!' repeated the young man in a dreary tone,

He walked away to the extreme end of the platform and leaned over a railing that ran partly across, and looked down into the black, sobbing waters. If Leonora was beneath them, he wanted to go down, too, horrible as they looked He wondered what could be done. It was perfect torture to stand there wait. ing for the vessel to come, and hoping and praying that it would, and bring safely to him his wife, who was now the one object of his heart. Oh, how cruel it was in fate to keep him standing there with his hands tied; for what could be done? Col. Sands had told him that the one boat which could brave the angry billows was undergoing repairs, Many men were at work on it now; for tar and near, all had dear ones in the apsent vessel. Would the time until it was ready, never expire? The very moments seemed ages. He tried to pray but it seemed impossible. Between him and his Divine Lord arose the face of Leonora in a thousand different appear ances. At one time it looked full of life sweet and pure, as he had been accustomed to see it; then again it seemed terrified at the raging tempest, and he was too far off to say one comforting word. Again that face, which had grown so inexpressibly dear, was pale in death, with the stormy waters dashing madly over it. This last thought almost crazed him, and he felt a frantic desire to throw himself into the boiling flood and go to

One of the men on the platform whis pered to a comrade:

'Dont let Mr. O' Donnell out of your sight; he looks as if he had lost his mind The night at last went out and a gray streak in the east announced the ap. proaching morn. The boat was now ready, and twenty or thirty gentlemen, besides the crew, started in search of the missing ones. There was a brisk breeze still blowing—the last echoes of the nights furious storm O'Donnell stood on the deak straining his eyes to catch sight of the vessel that had taken his wife away. At length, after hours of ex pectancy, hoping and fearing, it was an. nounced that there was some object in the distance. There was a breathless silence. None dared to ask a question. The men locked at each other in a sort tlemen around. There was such a sil. cried with joy. O'Donnell is by the bed ence that the seemed spirits from the Russel O'Donnell felt almost will as he was rowed towards the unfor spars and beams, were human beings there, in the arms of death, were men clutching the ribbons or dress of some; creature they were trying to save; there were delicate girls on to some one that was dear, or trying to preserve there own poer lives. Some were forever gone The rough, merciless waters had swept them away to the bosom of the sea, or buried them in their cruel embrace. but where was Leonora? O'Donnell was distracted. Had she, too, been carried away by the strong arms of the waves! Oh? it must not be. He could not give her up! The men looked at him in silent pity. Those who had none to mourn for helped him in his search, and there at last, almost wrapped in a wet sail. was his wife. Darcy, the brave boy had the ribbon of her such tightly tied to his own body, and then to the mast, while he himself clung to a beam.

When the men with O'Donnell reached him, he still showed signs of life.

'Save Leonora first,' he feebly mutter-

'We will save you both,' said one of the crew, lifting him up. There was no sign of life in Lenora as her husband clasped her in his arms and kissed her rigid face. Her long fair hair that had been washed by the waves was falling in a heavy mass over her should.

'My darling? My love! why don't you speak! I am your husband coming to save you, Leonora.

No sound came from the still, pale lips O'Donnell reeled, and would have failen with his precious burden had not some of the men caught him.

·You must take her to the boat,' cried one of them; 'the dear lady must have some warmth before lite can come back. May I help you!'

As he offered to take the form of the insensible woman from her husband's arms, O'Donnell refused, and only held her closer to his warm but aching heart The scene in the boat was heartrending in the extreme. Fathers were moan. ing over lost children; brothers weeping over dead sisters: husband wringing their cold hands over, lifeless form of wives who, but twenty four hours since had bade them adieu with the breath of life warm upon their cheek, In Darcy's young limbs a warm current was soon flowing, and it was not long before he was at O'Donnell's side, who was still clasping Leonora to his breast.

'Oh, heavens! Mr. O'Donnell cried the boy 'you are going to do nothing to save her?'

The husband looked up in a stupified

'Come here, doctor, and, for God's sake, cure my sister; she can't be drowned. I spoke to her a little while betore you all came, and I know she answered me, Now save her, save her.'

Tower her head, Mr. O'Donnell. Let me see her face,' said the doctor, with his hand on her pulse.

For a few moments he stood silent and grave, while the boy and husband gazed into his solemn face.

'She lives!' at last cried the brother, unable to stand the suspense any lon-

'Oh; that is everything.' replied O Don nell. 'If there is life she shall get well.

The scene changes—the last scene in this little story. Three weeks have slip ped away slowly and wearily at the O Donnells' Leonora has been so ill, her consciousness has not yet returned since that night of the awful storm. She has not been able to recognize a familiar face though every one in the household now tries to supersede the others in attention and kindness. DIED OF CHOLER 4.

Father De Smet the missionary famous for his work among the Indians of the Far West, used to relate this anecdote "In the year 1851-in the May or June of that year. I left St. Louis for the Indian mission. I was accompanied by Father Hoecken. When we were far up the Missouri River, the cholera broke out on the boat on which we were travel ling I was myself among the first to take the disease. Indeed, I was so bad with it that, thinking my last hour was soon to come, I asked Father Hoecken to administer to me the Last Sacraments. He was just getting ready to do so when a messenger came, in all haste, to our state room to imform us that a man down on the deck was dying of the chol. and attend the poor man, as I could ed; it was three full hours before Fath | remain healthy. Hoecken returned; and when he did return, he was sick to death. It seems that, instead of one he had several cases of cholers to attend to. I saw at once that, sick as I was myself, he was worse, and that I had not a moment to spare before administering to him the Last Sacraments. When I had performed this sad duty and prepared my poor dying brother as well as I could for his last end, 'Now, Father,' said I, 'prepare me.' And taking his hand in mine I knelt down by his bedside and made my confession. When I was through, I waited for him to say something; but as he was silent, I looked up into his face and saw that his eyes were becoming fixed in death. And thus he passed away, and without giving me absolution. I tell you I felt bad enough; but what could I do, save, hope in God? With proper treatment however. I was soon well again,"

DAYS WITHOUT NIGHTS.

Nothing strikes a stanger more forcibly, if he visits Sweden at the season of the year when the days are the longest, than the absence of night, Dr. Baird once related some interesting facts: He arrived at Stockholm from Guttenburg, 400 miles distance, in the morning, and in the atternoon went to see some friends. He returned about midnight, when it was as light as it is in England half an hour before sundown. You could see distinctly, but all was quiet in the street; it seemed as if the inhabitants were gone away, or were dead.

The sun in June goes down at Stock holm a little before 10 o'clock. There 18 a great illumination all night, as the sun passes round the earth towards the north pole, and the refraction of its rays is such that you can see to read at midnight without any artificial light. The first morning Dr. Baird awoke in Stockholm he was surprised to see the sun shining in his room. He looked at his watch and found it was only 3 o'clock. The next time he awoke it was 5 o'clock, but there were no persons in the street.

The Swedes in the cities are not very in lustrious. There is a mountain at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia where, on the 21st of June, the sun does not appear to go down at all. A steamboat goes up from Stockholm for the purpose of carrying those who are curious to witness the phenomenon. It occurs only one night. The sun reaches the horizon, you can see the whole face of it, and in five minutes more it begins to rise At the North Cape, latitude 72 degrees, the sun does not go down for several weeks.

In June it would be about 25 degrees above the norizon at midnight. In the winter time the sun dissappears and is not seen for weeks, then it comes and re mains for ten, fifteen or twenty minntes after which it descends and finally does not set at all but makes almost a circle around the heavens. Dr. Baird was asked how they managed in these latitudes with regard to hired persons and what they considered a day. He replied they worked by the hour and twelve hours would be considered a day's work. Birds and animals take their accustomed rest at the usual course whether the sun goes down or not.

A NEW FRENCH POSSESSION.

The Comoro Isles, which have just been formally ceded to France, will stregth may have more control of the destiny of en her hold in Madagascar waters, as they lie between the great island and Africa, in Mozambique channel. Those of importance are four in number, and contain perhaps 70,000 people, with some manufactures; and a very considerable cultivation of sugar, now an export. French influence has long been dominent in the group the island of Mayotta having been ceded to France more than forty years ago, under an aggreement reaffirmed in 1845. IS CONSUMPTION CONTAGIOUS?

After a study of nearly 12,000 cases Dr. Hermann Brehmer, an able German physician, rejects the theory of the contagiousness of pulmonary cosumption. He finds the disease to be due to deficient nutrition of the lungs, which may result from various antecedent causes, such as inherent defects of constitution, and vital organs impaired by disease, injury or mode of living. He beleives that the operation of all the causes may produce such changes that it may be possible era, and I told Father Hoecken to go years, great probability which members of a given family will be afflicted with wait, I had to wait longer than I expect- pulmonary consumption and which will

THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

The pastoral letter of the bishops of the Milwaukee province contains the the Catholic press: "These (Catholic) societies will supply also another factor in popular education—good reading. Books are teachers that are continually active among al! classes of people, in hundreds of places, companions that accompany us wherever we choose, We can hardly overestimate the influence which good books are having in our midst, and no efforts we can make to procure an abundant supply of them can be deemed too great. The same is true in our day of newspapers; their power is all the more felt, because they treat the questions of the day, in which all are actually concerned. They form public opinion, which in a republic assumes the sovereign direction of society and of public affairs. We can hardly bestow a great. er benefit on the Church or on the country than one will by giving the so much needed support to those who write and publish good literature. It has been to a great extent our own fault that Catholic books and newspapers have been rare and high priced. As soon as our parochial and society liberaries shall be establish ed everywhere, creating a taste for solid information and literary enjoyments; as soon as every Catholic tamily shall understand the duty and benifit of patronizing the papers of the diocese and province, Catholic writers and publishers will be able to suit our wants and desires, and the time will come nearer when divine truth shall be properly represented in the popular literature and the daily press of the country.

TOKEEP THE BOY AT HOME.

Women who have sons to rear, and dread the demoralizing influences of bad associates, ought to understand the nature of young manhood. It is excessively restless. It is disturbed by vain ambitions, by thirst for action, by longings for excitement, by irrepressible desires to touch life in manifold ways. If you, moth ers, rear your sons so that their homes are associates with the repression of their | The indulgence, however, can be gained love for activity and excitement, you will only once in the day. be sure to throw them in society that in some measure can supply the need of their hearts. They will not go to the public houses at first for love of liquor ; very few people like the taste of liquor; they go for the animated and hilarious companionship they find there, which they find does so much to repress the disturbing restlessness in their Breasts. See to it, then, that their homes compete with public places in their attractiveness. Open your blinds by day, and light bright fires at night. Illuminate your rooms. Hang pictures upon the wall. Put books and newspapers upon your tables. Have music and entertaining games, Banish demons of dullness and apathy that have so long ruled in your household and bring in mirth and good cheer. Invent occupation for your sons. Stimulate their ambition in worthy directions. While you make home their delight fill them with higher purposes than mere pleasure. Whether they shall pass happy boyhood, and enter upon manhood with refined tastes and noble ambitional depends on you. Do not blame some outsider if your sons miscarry. THE VOTIVE LIGHT.

A touching custom prevails in many of the parishes in Normandy where the an accepted Canadian bank chebue of an adult male population are for the most amount equal to per cent, of the total part engaged in the vocation of fishing. When, as at certain sessons of the year, those poor fishermen run far away from their homes, and unable to assist at Mass on Sundays, each one's family has a can, dle burning in the church before the statue of Our Lady Star of the Sea. These candles represent the husbands, sons, and fathers, who at that moment are braving the terrors of the deep, and treaty has just been signed, has long the flame at each buring offering is the been a port of call at which ships obtain hymn and prayer to heaven on the part

AMERICA'S GREATEST ORATOB. CATHOLIC

Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, who is universally conceded to be the most eloquent speaker in the American Catholic Church, is known as the golden toungued orator, and the Bossuet of the Missouri.' He is fully six feet six inches in height, stout in proportion, has a large head, covered with very red, coarse hair and a broad rosy face, whose every linea men is that of a son of the Emerald Isle. Any one who has heard Archbishop Ryan speak will understand why he is called 'the golden tongued orator." As he en ters the puipit his commanding figures centres attentention at once. He reads the text in a voice, low sweet and mellow Then he folds his arms and looks earn estly at the congregation for fully halt a minute. The exordium of his sermon is delivered in a calm conversational tone, and if a listener departed at this juncture he would wonder how the Arch bishop got a reputation for eloquence. Just wait however, until the prelate passes into the argument and the apfollowing instruction on the question of peal to the feelings and the peroration, and you will hear such eloquence as sel. dom proceeds from the pulpit. The voice is something wonderful. It is per fect in intonation all the way up from the mellow toleing or the text to the passionate ring of the peroration. Forgetting all about the substance of his sermons—and that is the point on which hangs his 'Bossuet' reputation-any one who loves sweet sounds would gladly spend an occasional hour merely listen ing to his voice. This may sound like the language of exaggeration, but all Philadelphians and St, Louisians will tes tify to its accuracy. The Archbishop gain. ed a great reputation for eloquence, even while he was studying at the seminary. On several occasion Archbish op Kenrick called him to the pulpit in the St. Louis Cathedral while young Ryan was only in deacon's orders - a very un. usual honor, indeed, After ordination the reputation of the young priest spread and he was soon made coadjutor. He has been for twenty years the popular orator at all great church events.

LITANY OF THE HOLYNAME OF A

On June 8th, 1862, the late Soverign Pontiff, Pope Pius IX,, through the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences, issued an authorized version of the Litany of the Most Holy Name of Jesus, and signified his intention of granting to the faith ful an indulgence of 300 days, when eyer bishops should apply for this favor for their dioceses. Recently this last ONLY FRENCH-CANADIAN HOTEL IN WINNIPEG. condition has been removed. Pope Leo XIII. has extended the Injult of thelate Pope to the whole world; and a de cree of the same Sacred Congregation, dated January 16th, 1886, grants the indulgence to all the faithful of both sexand makes it applicable to the souls in purgatorp; the only conditions being that it should be the authorized version which is used, and that it should be said devoutly and with contrite heart.

THE STEADY . FUSILADE OF INFAN-

TRI To vetean soldiers the fire of artillery whether exploding sharpnel or rattling canister' had no such terrors as the fusil lade of a steady line of infantry. There scarcely an old soldier who saw much of the battle service who has net been hit more or less frequently, without being harmed with conister, sharpnel balls, or splinters of shell. But how few in proportion were struck by muskets balls, and not seriously hurt! Even new troops, though appelled and bending down as they went oni as though moving against a driving rainl would advance in face of a cannonade, if they were properly commanded, but a severe musketry only the very best of soldiers could endure without some sort of shelter.

"I have tested a package of Royal Baking Powder, which I purchased in the open market, and find it composed of pure and wholesome ingredients. It is a cream of tartar powder of a high degree of merit, and does not contain either alum or phosphates, or other injurious substances.

"It is a scientific fact that the Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure.
"H. A. Morr, Ph.D."

"I have examined a package of Royal Baking Powder, purchased by myself in market. I find it entirely free from alum, terra alba, or any other injurious sub-ace. Henry Morton, Ph.D., President of Stevens Institute of Technology." the market.

"I have analyzed a package of Royal Baking Powder. The materials of which it is composed are pure and wholesome. S. Dana HAYES, State Assayer, Mass."

The Royal Baking Powder received the highest award over all competitors at the Vienna World's Exposition, 1873; at the Centennial, Philadelphia, 1876; at the American Institute, New York, and at State Fairs throughout the country. No other article of human food has ever received such high, emphatic, and universal endorsement from eminent chemists, physicians, scientists, and Boards of Health all over the world.

Note-The above Diagram illustrates the comparative worth of various Baking Powders, as shown by Chemical Analysis and experiments made by Prof. Schedler. A pound can of each powder was taken, the total leavening power or volume in each can calculated, the result being as indicated. This practical test for worth by Prof. Schedler only proves what every observant consumer of the Royal Baking Powder knows by practical experience, that, while it costs a few cents per pound more than ordinary kinds, it is far more economical, and, besides, affords the advantage of better work. A single trial of the Royal Baking Powder will convince any fair-minded person of these facts.

While the diagram shows some of the alum powders to be of a higher degree of strength than other powders ranked below them, it is not to be taken as indicating that they have any value. All alum powders, no matter how high their strength, are to be avoided as dangerous.

AN ANCIENT BRITISH BOAT

A curious ancient British boat has been exhumed at Brigg in Lincolnshire while some workmen were excavating in a field near the gas works. It is indeed imbedded in cay three or four feet beneath the surface. As a .elic of prehistoric times in Britain; the famous Wiking boat, which is so carefully preserved at Christiana, is modern in comparsion. It is a kind of dugout made from a splendid oak, which is now unrivaled, found in England. It is forty eight feet long: four feet four inches wide, two feet nine inches in depth. The prow seems to have been used as a ram, and the sides project. The remains of a deck or seat are in the stern. There is no sign of a mast, but there is a hole for a bowsprit. Close by lay a crooked piece of oak like an elephant's trunk This and several bits of Scotch fir and unidentified bones were the only objects found near, It lies close to the River Anchohone, which falls into the River Humber at Ferriby Sluice. It was evidently stranded and sank in the ooze. It is to be raised and placed in a field, and will require a strong shelter. If not dried and coated with oil it will infallibly crumble away shortly.

A SINGULAR CONVERSION

In a neighboring city-says the Pits burg Catholic two iadies of wealth and high position in society, have recently joined the Catholic Church- One of them returned from a visit to Europe some time since, with decided proclivities towards the church, but owing to the opposition of friends was induced to com promise by making a trial of Ritualism. She accordingly commenced attending the Ritualtstic Church, and finally was prevailed upon to go to confession to the 'Father' of the 'Anglo American Cat, holic' Church. She frankly gave him an experience, stating her decided inclina. tions to the Catholic Church. He at once informed her that he could not give her absolution unless she would sol emnly pledge herself never again to read a Catholic book or attend a Cathol, ic church. She immebiately rose from the confessor's' feet; and with spirit declared that she could not and would not make any such pledge, and she left him never to return. She was introduced to a Catholic priest by whom she was introduced and finally received into the church. As a slight testemonial of her gratitude for the unspeakable mercy of God in thus giving, her the peace and comfort and reasonable liberty of His Holy Church, the lady presented the handsome sum of one thousand dollars, to an important Catholic institution.

THE SANITARY VALUE OF TREES

Dr. Stephen Smith recently read a paper before the New York Academy of Sciences on the sanitary value of trees in the city. It is a wellknown fact that during the intense heat of summer there is more suffering and death from sunstroke and temperature in the North ern cities than in the South, a result which must certainly be attributed to the absence of suitable protection. From than these fates because more physically three to five thousand people die every summer in the metropolis from the effect of heat. In the arid, treeless streets and avenues the temperature of. ten runs from one hundred and thirty to one hundred and fifty Fah, when under the branches of a thirty shade tree it would not exceed seventy or eighty. In the absence of sheltering trees, the stone and brick walls act on the painefple of the regenerative furnace, and absorb the heat of the sun to yield it up again during the night. If trees were planted in the streets, the pavements and surrounding walls would be much cooler, and at the same time the trees would absorb the deleterious gases thrown of from the lungs and from decomposing matter, yielding, iu return, a supply of pure oxygen. The value of a systematic culture of tress in all our large cities can hardly be estimated. from both a sanitary and artistic stand. point they are a very desirable addition

AN AMERICIN'S BRAVE ACT

This is a fitting place to tell a sugges tive aud characteristic anecdote of jthe late Marquis D, I, Oliver; of San Francisco.') When in Italy, some years ago, he visited the ancient city of Bologna. Passing accidentally by a bookseller's store he saw in the window a most shock ing caricature, asked the price of it, and that ascertained, next inquired how many copies of the offensive picture the storekeeper possessed. He had barely half a dozen, Mr. Oliver quietly pur-chased the lot. He then indignantly tore them to pieces, flung some of the fragments on the floor, danced on them, and dashing the remainder into the face of the Bolognese booksellor, walked trium, phally away. The man who did and dared that, under the very peculiar circumstances of the case-he being ut, terly alone in a strange and hostile city and a poor proficient in the language of the place-would have gladly gone to the cannon's mouth to protect a friend or to chastise an enemy,-Archbishop

GEMS OF THOUGHT

Teach self, denial and make its prac. ce pleasurable, and you can create for world a destiny more sublime than ever issued from the brain of the wild est dreamer; Walter Scott,

There are two words that should take up most of our thoughts and caresnamely, time and eternity. Time, be cause it will soon come to an end; and eternity, because it will never come to an end.

What is it to thee whether that man be such or such, or whether this man do or speak this or that? Thou shalt not need to answer for others, but thou shalt give account of thyself, wherefore dost thou entangl thyself!

An intrusive friend is sometimes more unwelcome than a respectful toe Cer: tainly no intimacy, however close can be permanently and mutually a happy one, unless each party respects the oth, er's individually and abstains from med, dlesome interference with his thoughts and views.

No book is worth anything which is not worth much: nor is it serviceable until it has been read and reread, and loved, and loved again, so that you can refer to the passages you want in it, as a as a soldier can seize the weapon he needs in an armory, or a housewife brings the things she needs from her store,—Ruskin.

Death is on the trail of every man; but we have grown used to him, and heed him not. Crime and s in are following us-will surely find us out, and some day will open the cowl and show us the deaths head. But more terrible real, is the knowledge ever present that a reientie track-John Boyle O'Reilly.

Our enjoyments are threefold, the anticipation, the reality and the reminiscence of all three, the later is the most perfect, as the future is vague, shadowy and uncertain, and the present rapidly fleeting, but the past remains with us for ever, with all of its lights and shades: no one can rob us of it, noth ing can obliterate it. Like a wreath of beautiful. unfading immortelles, the memory of the past will gratefully en twine all coming years; rendering the ture lovely with its reflected glory. Morris.

HOW TO MANAGE A HUSBAND

It is not in human nature for a man who has been hard at work all day, to return to his home, soiled and weary: or with his mind agitated after being filled with many little things, and to regard with complacency little matters that got away, but which at another time would not trouble him. The hard working man is so apt to regard as lazy those who work less than himself, and he, therefore, looks upon the slightest unreadiness or want of preparation on the part of his wife as neglect. Hence, a woman, if she be wise, will be constantly prepared for the return of her husband. He, after all, is the breadwin ner; and all that he requires is an atten-Doria and Odescalchi, but when the ner; and all that he requires is an atten-Baltimore grocer's boy of 1850, James tion less by far than we should pay to a guest.

In the good old Scotch song, which and divinity of love, the wife's greatest pleasure is that of looking forward to the pishop of Baltimore, thirty five years ago return of her husband. She puts on her best clothes and her sweetest smiles: she clothes her face with that fondness

And the love which thus colors with its radiant tints the common things of this life, which makes poverty beautiful, and the cottage richer than the palace. will be sure to teach the heart which possess es it how to manage the husband.

A CONVINCING RETORT.

Young lawyers as a rule are inclined to be agnostics, and have a tendency that way. As a general rule, too young practioners have high opinions of their men. tal powers. Recently four of them were in a Catholic lawyer's office in Chicago, and were loud and unanimous in their dec, laration of belief that each person should read the Bible and personally interpret it. They ask our Catholic friend how could allow presets to interpret it for him. He evaded the question by asking one of them a law question concerning a clause in the statutes. The four adveates soon got into a wrangle as to what the statute meant, which resulted in them asking the decision of the Supreme Court, as to the question in dispute.

Our Catholic friend then quietly in. formed them that they had also found his answer to the Bible question. He said. When you read the plain letter of the law in the statutes, you did not know what it means until you find the decision of the Supreme Court, We Catholics look upon the Popes and the great counci of our ancient Church as authority on these questions of religion, and abide by their decisions, even as you rely upon the law laid down by the Supreme Court.' The contived silence of his confreres on personal interpretation leads him to believe that they appriciated his illustra-

The 'Times' has preferred grand char. ges against the English War Office, some months ago an action at law arose over the estate of the inventor of machine guns. Among his papers were found av. idence showing that in order to secure a hearing at the proper department he had been compelled to bribe three offi, cials and then learned from one of the leading dignitaries that it was useless, for him to look for the adoption of his iuvention unless he was prepared to pay in bribes, more than wrs being paid by some rival inventor 'whose weapon was' un der favorable consideration,

On the 21 inst was the fiftieth anniversary of the opening of the first Canadian railway, the Champ, lain and St, Lawrence from Laprairie to St. Johns, fifteen miles. The rails were of wood, with flat bars of iron spiked to them. The company to build the road was chartered on 25 Feb 1832, eleven years after the locomotive made its first trip between Stockton and Darlington, and two years after the completion of the first railway in the United States. Five years elapsed between the charter and the rolling stock; and the first train, with the Earl of Gosford and suite on board, made its journey from Laprairie to St. Johns and back, the return trip occupy, ing fifty minutes.

If there is one man more than another in England who assumes an air of wisdom dealing with the Irish question it is that old fossil John Bright, But his logic is very often lame footed. For in stance, in his speech in Birmingham last week, he argued that only three millions of the Irish population demanded Home Rule, and that it would be a dreadful peril to consent to 'what would really be a revolution in Ireland' at the bidding of one-twelfth of the population of the United Kingdom.If we grant the assump. tion that it would be a revolution to allow the majority of a nation the right to manage their own domestic affairs, is it not absurd to contend that such a concession would involve danger to the interests of the people as a whole! Thirty-three millions, wealthy and well armed, afraid lest three millions, with the most meagre resources, should carry out a scheme of separation? If Mr. Gladstone had employed in favor of his policy an argument so utterly foolish there would be some ground for asserting that he had taken farewell of of common

THE LATE ARCHBISHOP GOOLD.

Dr. James Alpius Goold, Archbishop of Melbourne, Australia, died somewhat suddenly on the 12th ult. of suffusion of blood to the heart, at the age of 75. His remains were laid at rest in St. Patrick's Cathedral on the following Tuesday, The deceased prelate was born in the city of Cork. Ireland, and at an early age he devoted himself to the service of God in the priesthood, and entered the order of St. Augustine: to be trained by the discipline of that illustrious body for the work to which he was dedicated. Soon after his ordination he went to New South Wales, where he labored for years under Archbishop Polding- He was consecrated Bishop of Melbourne, at Sydney, August 6th, 1848, by His Grace Archflishop Polding, assisted by the late Bushop Murphy of Adelaide, South Australia. His first visit to his See at Melbourne, a distance of over 500 miles, was made on horseback. He found the new diocese almost destitute of al the outward appliances of the ecclesias! tical system. There was a very small band of priests the churches were few in number and of humble character. there was neither convent nor college in the whole diocese. But he met the difficulties of his position with great spirit and perseverance. The erection deaths known to this world, and has tak into an independent colony of the territory included in his diocese, the rapid tains her earthly form; that she is not introduction of a numerous population which followed that event, and the dis. covery of Gold in Victoria, afforded most unusual scope to the efforts of the zealous bishop, As the result of. the labors which be organized and di- ber of the Methodist Church, she recei. rected magnificent churches, large con. vents and numerous educational estab. lishments are springing up in all parts of the diocese. He was appointed Arch, bishop of Melbourne in 1876,

THE DILKE CASE. One of those mephitic cases that so of-

and a more loathsome expose of the depths to which immorality has reached among the higher classes in that country, could not well be made, Much stress has been laid upon the laxness that is said to characterize the morals of the Indians of the Northwest, but so far nothing has been said thet will ap. proximate in brazen turpitude the basecess of those who figured in the Dilke -Crawford scandal. The guilt of the accused parties was established at the first trial, but owing to some technical informalities the court did not then go through the form of dissolving the mar. riage tie between Mrs. Crawford and her husband, but it has done so now, and they are at liberty to contract other marriages and live in legalized adultery during the remainder of their lives. We say 'legalized' because marriage being a sacrament, and indissoluble except by the death of one of the parties to it, a decree of divorce giving the parted principals permission to marry again, is nothing more or less than legalizing what cannot be designated properly by any other term than that which we have ap. plied to it, About Seventeen years ago a similiar case was before the same Di. vorce court in which some of the high: est notables in the land were implicated and the defendant stated in the witness box that she did not that there was any narm in such conduct as all were guilty of it-showing a most deplorable con dition of soc ety among the aristocracy of England. The Divorce court affords a safe avenue for them to break up fami ly ties and gratify their sordid passions and we need not wonder that advantage is so often taken of it by those who are guided only by their own elastic con sciences, acting upon the laws made by man and setting the laws of God at de. fiance. We do not say, or mean to in. sinuate, that all who go into the divorce Court are of that character, far from it., but we may safely say that are all have recourse to it with a view to forming other matrimonial alliances-And if that prospect were not before them they would not seek refuge under its wing. The Catholic Church allowes divorce in some cases; that is a complete separtion, but she does not permit eith. er the husband or wife to marry anoth. er while one of the parties is living. The history of Christianity prove that. With out the aid of the Divorce court mem bers of a certain class of the human fami ly can put away their wives and marry others. As for example, the husband of of one of our Queen's daughters who discarded his morganatic wife with her (and his) six or seven children in order to marry the young princess, who was about half his own age. Although the marriage was a morganatic one She was nevertheless his lawful wife in the ight of God who is no resp

It is devoutly to be wished that it will be a long time before this fair land of ours is tarnished with a law that makes lechery lawful, and the habitues of the divorce court respectable.

A NEW SECT_"THE PERFECT ONES"

It might have been supposed that the sect.producing power evolved from the great religious upheaval that took place in the sixteenth century, miscalled the Reformation, had reached its limits be. fore now, and that the ingenuity of man for inventing new forms of religion had been exhausted, but such is not the case. Still another "road to heaven has been discovered by a Mrs. Hannah Martin of Cincinnati, Ohio, who has gathered a band of followers around her who worship her as the Deity. She the tells the 'Perfect ones,' as she calls her diciples that she has passed through all the en on the gladliness but ret. the Hannah Martin they see, but a be, ing infinitely higher; the temple of God in fact, and that in her they behold his glory. As a proof of her statements she says that eight years ago while a mem. ved a promise from God, that at the expiration of bertain time he would send his spirit into her body; about two months ago the time elapsed, and she felt herself lifted up from the world. She began by taking on this godly spir. it at her birth, it came to her gradually, til she has reached perfection. It is sad to see so much mental aberration, but dance of the true Church is not followed.

TIM HEALY ON HIS DEFEAT.

Mr. Healey, speaking of his defeat, said, "The wonder is I am not beaten by more, The Catholics are 900 behind in was only 180. It was the 'no Popery' cry that defeated me. The Presbyterian ministers took alarm lest the Belfast Queen's College, which is in the hands of Presbyterians, should be taken from under Home Rule. They also feared for their pockets, as they deprived their sustenance from a fund arising out of nvestments in land, lt was a natural though unfounded alarm. They moved heaven and earth to arouse sectarian apprehensions, and succeeded in exacting more implicit political obedience than I have ever seen yielded to the much abused Catholic priests. It would make your heart bleed to see poor tatterdemalions of tenants who stood as much in need of protection against land lordism as the peasants of Mayo, mark ing their ballot papers for the landlord candidates becausethey had a notion that I was the Pope in disguise. Sextonvictory hurt me for the reason that when they saw Belfast fall to us they thought the heather was on fire. Besides, the election was taken on an expiring regis ter and most of the deaths and changes of residences occured among our friends. On a new register and at another time of the year I will win at a canter.'

GOOD NEWS

By this time sir John McDonald is at Port Moody, the jumping off place for, the present of the Pacific railway, where a warm welcome awaits him. The cable this morning brings news which, if known to the British Columbians, will doubtless tend to augument the enthus iaem. Lord Salisbury naving announced his intention of 'giving his favorable con: sideration to the scheme for establish, ing a steamship line between the Gulf of Georgia, China, Japan and Australia, it will be remembered that just before Lord Salisbury went out of office, he had all but decided to grant a postal subsidy to such a line. The matter was discussed in the House of Lords shortly after the change of government and Lord Granville premise i to obtain the views of the permanent officials of the Post office and War Departments, but weightier subjects probably prevent, ed him from doing so, Lord Salisbury is now apparently determined to take the question up in earnest, He is said to take a lively interest in the railway, re, garding it as a work of Imperial Char. acter, and he certainly could not show his appreciation of our enterprise in a more striking or satisfactory manner than by asking Parliament to assist the company in an indirect way in establish ing a steamship line on the Pacific

TITANY OF THE HOLY NAME OF JESUS

NAPOLEON'S OPINION OF CHBIST

I know men said Napoleon, and I tell you that Jesus was not a man! Alex. ander, Caesar, Charlemagne, and myseli founded empires; but upon what did we reat the creation of our genius? Upon force. Jesus Christ alone founded His empire upon love, and at this hour mill. ions of men would die for Him. In this war all the Kings and potentate of earth were on one side; on the other I see no armybut a mysterious force—some men scat. tered here and there in all parts of the world, and who have no other rallying point than a common faith in the mys. teries of the cross. > > ST. BASIL'S

The Basilian Fathers have labored zealously and unremitingly in Toronto for thirty four years, The value of the services rendered during all these years to the Catholic body and to society is in calculable. Year after year they have sent out bright; well, educated youths, to take their part in the world's work and maintain before all men the honor and credit of the Catholic Church and of old Ireland. During all those years they made no appeal to the public for aid in any shape, But now they find it necess ary to enlarge their church and make other improvements; and as these far exceed their means they intend to hold bazar in October, at which five hun red valuable prizes will be distributed They say in a circular which they have issued;

For thirty four years the Community of St; Basi i at Toronto, has devoted his life and energies to the cause of in, termediate and Higher Catholic educat, ation, Thus far we have asked help from no one, Now, however, new de. mands have been made upon us-and we feel ourselves unable to meet them, For the first time, therefore, we appeal to the public for assistance' Some year agc when the State withdrew its subsidy from colleges the other denominations at once took act ve masures to repair the loss, and today all their colleges draw supplies from a generous endow ment fund, Catholics alone did nothing, for their colleges. His Lordship Bishop Carbery said to our of Hamilton, said to our boys some time since in our study hall; 'In Ireiand we have plenty of preparatory schools and colleges, but we have no institution where young men who; having finished their college course and taken up law, medicine or arts at a Universary, enjoy the protection extended to you in St, Michael's College by the Basilian Fath, ers,' To enable us to continue and per, fect the system of protection and to fin. ish St. Basil's Church, we now invite the co'operation of our people who nave at heart the cause of Catholic Education. Our appeal is made by way of a Bazar and no project has come before the pub lic with stronger claims and more distinguished patronage. The whole hierarc. hy of Ontario have given no paizes and kind words of encouragement. His Em inence Cardina, Newman, Archbishop Walsh; of Dublin, and Croke, of Cashel, the Very Rev. and Rev. Cfergy of Can, ada and the United States: Charles, Stewart Parnell, M. P., of wike world fame; and a host of long tried friends, have heard of our efforts and come to our aid. DON'T UNDERVALUE THE BOY

The following sound reasoning we find in the American Agriculturist. It would be a benefit to both fathers and their an authorized version of the Litany of sons it its precepts were often regard,

Too many men make boys feel that they are of little or no account while they are boys, Lay a responsibility on position to investigate, Help them to understand things. Encourage them to know what they are about. We are too apt to treat a boy seeking after know. ledge as mere idle curiosity. 'Don', ask questions' is poor advice to boys. If you do not explain puzzling things to them you oblidge them to make many experiments before the find out; and though experimental knowledge is best in one sense, in another it is not, for that which can be explained clearly does not need experimenting with. If the principle involved if understood, is no further trouble, and the boy can go ahead intelligently,

Do not wait for the boy to grow up be fore you begin to treat him as an equal A proper amount of confidence, and words of encouragement and advice, and giving him to understand that you trust him in many ways, helps to make a man of him long before he is a man in either stature or years, The Boston Journal of Commerce also makes a good suggestion to parents ap, ropos to the above. Give him tools says the writer, and let him find out for him, self whether he has got any mechanical it is no use for you to try to do anything with tools. I never had any taste that way, and of course you have not.' If a boy find he can make a few articles with his hand, it tends to make him rely on himself. And the planning that is nec; essary for the execution of the work is a discipline and an education of great value to him, The future welfare and hap piness of the boy depends on the sur. roundings of his youth. When he arriv, es at that period in his life when he ob: iged to choose what profession or what line of business to follow, it is highly important that he should take no false step. A STRANGE PRAYER.

At Atchison, Kansas, the crusaders (temperance) invaded a saloon during crusade time, and tried by praying, to induce the proprietor of the saloon to close his place. The proprietor invited the ladies to seats, and himself offered the following prayer:

'Almighty Creator in Heaven! Thou who has made the heavens and earth, and created man in Thine own image as of the earth! Whilst animals are living on grass and water, Thou didst teach Thy servant Noah to make wine and Thou didst not punish him for making intem perate use of it. At the wedding of Cana, Thine only Son transformed water into wine, when the juice of the grape was exhausted, that the enjoyment of the guests might not be disturbed. The great Reformer, Martin Luther, said :

He who goth not love wine, woman and song,

Remains a fool all his life long. Oh, Lord! we pray Thee, have pity upon these women here who are not grate ful for Thy gifts, who want to make Thy children like beasts of the field and compel them to drink water like an ox, while they dress extravagantly, and lead their husbands by other extravagance not tend ing to our well-being, to bankruptcy; depriving them of all pleasure of this world, yea, even driving them to sucide. Oh Lord! have mercy upon these ladies and look upon them. They wear not even the color of the face which Thou has given them, but are sinning aginst Thee, and are not content with nature, but paint their faces. Oh, Lor 1! Thou canst also perceive that figures are not as Thou has made them, but they wear humps upon their backs, like camels. Thou seest Lord, that their head-dress consists of false hair. Oh Lord! have mercy upon them and take them back into Thy bos-om; take folly out of their hearts; give them common sense, that they may become good and worthy citizens of our be loved town. Lord! we thank Thee for all the blessings bestowed upon us, and ask Thee to deliver us from all evil, especially hypocritical women, and Thine shall be the praise for ever and ever.

THE LOCOMOTIVE IN WINTER A locomotive cab in winter is a dreary It is bad in daytime, to see anything if a snowstorm prevails erable cracks and crevices around the now fast, now slow, according as the drifts cover the track or uncover it for a brief space, and when it strikes a drift it throws the snow in blinding clouds all over itself; just as the vessels shipping a sea. The track is rough for the frost has destroyed it, and the en gine lurches ahead, staggering to and tro like a drunken man.

There are few more impressive spect. acles in this world than a powerful loco it looms up through the gloom, tremen dous and awful. The locomotive seem the embodiment of the Death Angel moving swiftely and moselessly. The snow has muffled the whir of the roll ing friction of the wheels on the rail and the train glides by like the unsul stantial page out of a dream. (From a Discourse by Archbishop Moran Sydney, in the Sydney Freeman's Journal.)

I do not know that the mind of man. has ever devised a more ludicrous scene than that presented by the title pages of Cranmer's English Bible, printed in the year 1530, King Henry VIII. is represented seated on his throne in roy, al state. The Protestant bishops and doctors kneel before him; and receive at sufficed to show that it could not be olthe hands of the bloated monarch the Verbum Dei, which in turn they distrib. ute to the people, while all alike join in the cry of 'Vivat Rex!' This the first authorized English Protestant version was officially declared to be truly trans, lated after the verity of the Hebrew and Greek text.' and the preface con. tains the singular statement that some a Frenchman, who still clung to the traof the sacred books 'were called haging: rapha, because they were read secret and apart.' Notwithstanding, however King Henry's and Edward VI's royal sanction this version in Elizabeth's reign has set aside on the special ground that, 'It swerved too much.' from the original Sacred text. The authorized Anglican version in presnt use dates from James I's reign. It has often been eulogiz ed for the purity of its diction and the elegance of its style; it may be praised for everything in fact except for its one fault, that it does not faithfully convey the meaning of the original text. During the age of 1,4000 years. the past forty years the ablest men in English Church have set forth the many errors of the authorized version and have clamored for a change. Dr. Ellicott Protestant bishop of Gloucester and Bristol, in his Preface of the Pastor. al Epistles, writes 'It is in vain to cheat our own souls with the thought that these errors (in the authorized version) he great Babylon which I have built. are either insignigeant or imaginary, there are inaccuracies, there are misconceptions, there are obscurities and that man, who, after being in any de, gree satisfied of this, permits himself to lean to the counsels of a timid or popu, lar obstructiveness, will have to sustain the tremendous charge of having dealt of brick and leaving it a city of marble deceitfully with the inviolate Word of

Smith's dictionary of the Bible states that the authorized translation of the New Testament was mede from a text confessedly imperfect,' and adds that 'to shrink from noticing any variation, to go on printing as the Inspired Word that which there is a preponderant reason for believing to be an interpolation or a mistake, is neither honest nor reveren. tial.' The new Testament has been in. deed revised during the past few years. and the result of the ablest Protestant divines in England has been to make ture and on his subsequent surrender their version in a great part more conformable to that vulgate text which the Anglicans have so often abused, but which the Catholic Church has not failed for fifteen hundred years to commend to her children. This revised version however, has not been accepted by the Anglican Church, which continues to cling to the old inaccurate text. But there is another aspect of this subject | might justly be styled King of Babylon. which merits our attention. The Biblic. al narrative is the inspired record of Gods dealings with man. At every period of the worlds history we are brought in to contact with peoples and nations whose widespread sway overawed the world, and with the minutest details of their social usuages and peculiar tenets. as well as with the ever varying phases of their political and official life. Now it so happens that at no other time in the annals of the Church has such light been thrown upon the history, and man. ners, and customs, and daily life of the great nation of antiquity as during the past half century . Egypt has brought to light her long for gotten historic trea, sures. The mounds that have been explored which for more than 2,000 years las entombed all the glory of Nin; eveh and babylon, and the other cities of the East. A key was found for the papyrus and the countless hieroglyphic and cuneiform inscriptions which adorn the museums of Europe. and thus, as on a contemporary historic page, we are enabled to trace the hitherto unexplored history of the world almost from the Deluge to the coming of our Lord.

A flood of light has been thrown upon passages of the Sacred Scripture hitherto obscure, and now fountains of knowedge have been placed within the reac h of students of the Sacred Writ. Now, what has been the result of the scientific and historical enquiries which have been so dilligently pursued during the past fifty years? The first result has been that the nowadays-not even of the rationalistic school-can regard otherwise with that derision and contempt the infidel school Voltaire and the encyclopedist of the last century. From science as yet imperfectly devloped these men Plattsmouth Journal.

2HE ANGLICAN VERSION OF THE had endeavored to borrow arguments to deceive the unwary to assail religion. But no sooner are the se sciences developed and matured than they lead us back to the fountains of Revelation, and the facts which they unfold are found to be in perfect harmony with the teaching of Divine truth. A hundred years ago men spoke and wrote of the zodiac of Tentyra, as dating from some 20,000 years before Christ. A little research der than the reign of Ptolemy Philadel. phus. There were others who argued from the formation of the Delta and the mud strata of the Nile that hate river must have pursued its course for some hundreds of thousands of years, a date supposed to be inconsistant with the Mosiac narrative. Not many years ago ditions of the old infidel school, devoted his time and means to explore those mud deposits, the better to establish their venerable antiquity; but after considerable expense, in one of the lowest strata he found, to his shame and confus ion, a well preserved coin of the First Napoleon. The arguments on which those false scientists so recklessly relied was pretty much the same as if it were to say that because a certain given man took ten years to grow half an inch. therefore a youthful stripling who is six feet high must have attained at least Few examples will suffice to illustrate the advantages that have accrued from the researches of the learned in some of the fields of scientific inqury in our own days. We will begin with the Assyrian monuments. In the Book of Daniel (vi 27) are introduced the words of the monarch Nebuchadnazzar. 'Is not this But even from scripture it is manifest that Babylon was founded many centur ies before Nebuchadnezzar. It is repli ed that the words are to be interpreted the same as when Solemn is said to have built Palmyra, or the Emperor Augustus to have built Rome, finding a city and the ruins of Babylon give testimony and bear unmistakable evidence of the justice of the monarch's claim to rebuilt that city, nine tenths at least have impressed upon them the name and the titles of Nebuchadnezzar. The inscription found by the British Consul, Mr. Tay lor, in Lower Babylonia. in the year 1881 explains what hitherto appeared to be a discrepancy between Sacred Scripture and profane history. According to the prophet Daniel (5th chapter), the name of the King who was present and was slain in Babylon at the time of its capwas treated with kind consideration by the conquerer. The inscription of Nab. onnedus, now brought to light, sets at rest this difficulty. It tells us that that monarch raised to royal rank Baltassar, 'his eldest son, the joy of his heart,' and associated him with himself in the gov. ernment of the kingdom. Thus this prince, slain at the capture of the city,

THE MIKAPO

So much is being said about the Mik. ado of the stage that these points that follow concerning the real Mikado may be of interest. A revolution brought the present Mikado into power in Japan, some seventeen years ago, at which time he was a boy of sixteen years. He found a feudal system, wherein 600,000 men were maintained for war. The em. pire was a military encampment. The young Mikado changed all. He made the dependent the freeman and the feudal rulers the subordinates. He made men freeholders in perpetual ten, ure of their lands. He insured a great protection to life and property as may be enjoyed. His code of laws he model. ed after those of England and the Unit. ed States, establishing a sufficient Jud, iciary. He gathered around him broad sound and progressive counselors.

He rules an empire already having 500 miles of railroad, 5,000 miles tele. graph wire, unsurpassed postal facilities with a postal savings bank system wor. thy of imitation in this country, He has built a navy, and can repair ships with the best. As great, if not greater, than what he accomplished, is what he has proclaimed he proposes to do, and that is, in 1890, to convert his empire in, to a constitutional empire, with a parlia ment exercising the delegated authority of the people,—(Philadelphia Press,

On June 2 a man named Maurice Keane, of Dromurin, the father of seven children, made an attempt upon his life by cutting his throat from ear to ear with a razor. The only reason assigned for the horrible occurrance is that Keane was more or less mentally impaired since the death of his wife, which happened a short time since Dr. Cussen visited him and states he entertains very little hope of his recovery.

A pleasure yacht with five young men was lost at sea on the evening of June 24 close to Dunany Point. All the men belonged to the fishing village of Cloger Head except Patrick Moore who lived at Termonfeckin, close at hand. She was lying in the harbor of Port Oriel, at Cloger Head, and her builder, Patrick Moore, who was anxious to test her sail. ing qualities, determined to give her a trial trip. Accordingly he proceeded on board, accompanied by the following five men, Laurence Neacy, a pilot. who was in full charge; Thomas and James Phillips (brother) Michael Doyle and Denis Phillips. The two brothers Phil-lips, were laborers. and Denis Phillips and Michael Doyle carpenters. The only managing the vessel was Laurence Nes. cy, who was a Drogheda pilot. As the vessel was leaving Clogher Head under The Tipperary Lawn Tennis Club hav a full pressure of canvass, it was remark. illfated crew for the last time that she lay very low in the water. She proceed. ed as far as a place known as Gills' quay four miles north east of Dundalkweather was rough, with sudden fierce squalls from the west north-west. They got ashore at Gills' quay and visited some places, and on their return to the vessel the weather had become more severe, so much so, in fact, that two of the Dun dalk pilots who were standing on the beach endeavoured to dissuade the young men from their rash purpose of returning by sea in the then threatening state of the weather one of the pilots Thomas Gallagher, told them at once to give up their purpose. His words had so much effect that Denis Phillips de. termined to leave the vessel, and seiz. ing a rope which hung loosely from s mooring poct, he jumped ashore-an example which another of the men named Thomas Phillips endeavored to imitate, but was too late as the rest shoved the vessel off into to deep water. In the meantime the little, with all her canvass spread before the wind, proceeded over the waves towards Clogher Head, and the two pilots who were standing on the beach at Gills' quay kept her in sight untill within two and a half miles of Dunany Point, where she was suddenly lost to view. All that night and the entire of the next day an anxious lookout was kept at Clogher Head, but no tidings of the little vessel reached, except the

DIET FOR HEART TROUBLE

Perhaps it is the patient's fault; it may be the doctor's but some day the diet for convalescents, after a serious attack of heart trouble, will receive the first care, which is far from being the case now. Persons with weak action of heart should by all means avoid the flatulent foods, as well as any bulk of food that will press upon the already hard labouring organ. For a weak heart does much more work than a strong one, trying to make up in the frequency for the feeble. ness of its beats. Among the dangerous foods for such sufferers are, asparagus, beans' sweet potatoes, hot cakes where butter is oiled upon the cake, and all fresh bread and risen cakes, as all fritters. They also avoid waxy dishes like stewed kidneys. All cabbages, onions and turnips, in short all vegetables that taste afterwards are forbidden. They may eat steamed or baked mealy white potatoes, beets and spinach pulped., Al. so corn that is split up the grain and torn wite a fork (not cut) from the cob, The milk essence of the corn apart from its horny hull is highly digestible. The soft parts of raw oysters digest themselves, at no tax upon the strength. Homemade bread, two days old apple sauce, rare roast beef and well cooked roast lamb, birds, perfectly cooked sweet breads, oatmeal, milk toast, jellied eggs for breaksast, are all recommended. Of course, none of these in vast quantity. It such invalids would learn to take very small bites they will have mastered one secret of successful digestion. The throat s so far in sympathy with the stomach that both of them are stunned, as it were by the demand of huge morsels for forcible entry. So many cases of distress and fatality occur to such patients after dinner, or even after a hearty breakfast, that the food prescription, how and how little to imperative. Something indiges. tible lies very near most heart attacks that are not brought on by violent exertions. In both cases the heart has too much to do, or too little room to do it

To get in debt financially is about the worst thing a man can do. A man had better die than to get into debt- Death has hurt fewer people than debt has, and Spurgeon said a good thing when On June 28, at Clontubrid, parish of he said; 'I have fought three enemies, I Lirdowney, the Rev. John Shortall. C.C. trust successfully, dirt and the devil.and departed this life, in the thirty.fourth beht. and by the grace of God, I hope to conquer all three and make my way to heaven.' And I don't know which is the worst. By soap and water you can run the first off, by prayer and faith you can make the second git,' but this thing of debt is a mighty hard thing to manage A man that will buy a luxury on credit is a fool, and the man that will buy a luxury when he owes money on an honest debt is a rascrl. The same God that said, 'Thou shalt not steal, said: Owe n' man anything, but to love one another. Don't buy a thing if you can't pay for it. But if you must get into debt, the next best thing to do is to settle up the first of every month every dollar you owe. If not once a month, then have a clear receipt in full every Christmas day, and a man who dosen't settle at least once a year is on the road to bankruptcy, Suppress the gophers. A gentleman from the North of Qu, Appelle River in. forms us that his gophers have lots of water as he has wheat growing at the very edge of sloughs but the gophers have cut it down just as much as where there is no surface water. This explodes the theory that they cut down the grain for the moisture of the stalks. The farmer that will not suppress the gophers for another year deserves to loose all his crop Their taste has now become cultivated so that they prefer the growing grain therefore they will cause damage so long as they are allowed to live. Exterminate by all means.—Qu'Appelle Progress.
