Watering Place Toilets. The Paris correspondence of the Philadelphia Press thus describes the style in which a Parisian elegante gets herself up at the French watering places this summer: To go to her bath she wears a per-Black Lustres, cale wrapper, trimmed with English em-b. o.dery, over which is thrown another longer and looser wrapper of blue flannel, lined with white cashmere, and she covers her head with a Charlotte Corday the chin with blue ribbons. "Better than a Play." A somewhat original episode turne p in police circles yesterday. Henry Blinco, an Englishman, came to Canada year or zo ago, leaving behind him a fair namorata in the person of Miss Mary Warton. After sojourning here awhile, and getting into the ways of the country, and getting into the ways of the country, he went home and brought the young woman out, intending to make her his wife, but before doing so he went abroad for a ramble and the intended was sheltered under the roof of one Thomas Stephenson, a mutual friend. The roving Blinco on his return found the heart of the lady estranged, and in the orchodox fashion he went and got a pistol and threatened to shoot Thomas Stephenson, whom he regarded as his "hated rival." The latter individual very unromantically took out a warrant against the threatener, but it was not served at once, as nothing could be seen of that party until yesterday evening when he suddenly appeared at No. 2 Police Station, having with him the rejuctant Miss Warton and a marriage libease. He demanded that the officer in charge should compel the lady to say "yos," and go quietly with him to the person's house; but she vehemently refused to do either. The denouement of this indicrous scene was the serving of the warrant on Blinco, and his removal to the cell below, while the curtain fell upon an imposing tableau representing one of "Woman's Rights."—
