Buckingham Palace

Both His Majesty and the Queen Greatly Enjoyed the Singing and Dancing.

London, June 24.—The main feature of a largely attended children's party in Buckingham Palace gardens yesterday afternoon in honor of the ninth birthday of Prince Edward, eldest son of the Prince of Wales, was the appearance of the Williams and Walker troupe of negro performers. The King and Queen, the leading court and diplomatic dignitaries, a throng of royal children, and their playmates, enjoyed selections from "In Dahomey." They applauded Bert Williams' rendering of the song, "The Jonah Man," in which his grimaces were genuinely funny, And Carries On the Opposition while Walker's "Castle on the Rhine," with a dancing chorus, set even the royal feet to pattering. The hit of the entertainment, however, was a cake walk, which their majesties specially demanded. Upon its conclusion, the four contesting couples stepped to the front of the stage, while in true cake-Is Said to Have Sent Mr. Pettypiece walk style, a cake was held in front of each couple, and the couple receiving the most applause was decided to be the winner. No Reduction To Be Made in the Force at Present-Business in the Senate.

Ottawa, June 23. — In the House of Commons today, Mr. Fisher's bill to forbid the manufacture of process butter was given its first reading. A bill was put through all its stages granting to his majesty $1,384,016 51, for the public service of the financia year ending June 30, 1903. The bill to amend the patent ac was given its third reading THE RAILWAY BILL.

The bill to amend and consolidate the law respecting railways was then taken up. Mr. Blair stated his willingness to accept an amendment offered by Mr. Clarke, which reads as follows: "A railway may be carried upon, along or across any existing highway upon leave therefor having been first ob tained as hereinafter provided. But the board shall not grant leave to carry any street railway or termina steam railway or tramway along any highway which is within the limits of any city or incorporated town until has received the consent therefor of such city or incorporated town." The bill was considered in committee until six o'clock, severtl clauses being passed.

THE ESTIMATES.

In the evening the estimates were Sir Wilfrid Laurier stated that he saw no prospect of being able to reduce the number of the Northwest mounted police. The doctor hinted at a weak heart in a strong body upsetting the harmony of a splendid physique, and Brinley watched with growing compassion bethel's ever-changing looks, and marveled at her evident disquiet. Brinley, too, at this time, was considerably mystified by the hints thrown out to him in unwelcome confidence by the page, Puck, whom he had amused himself with by teasing at odd half-hours, and who had always a great partiality to him for the condescension. Puck was a very monkey for mischief ing the temper of the household generally by his saucy tongue, petty thefts and love of practical joking. Like most who have risen from the ranks. Bethel loved pomp and parade, and to keep up the dignity and old custom in the house she headed, the menservants were resplendent in powdered heads, showy livery and silk stockkept up with much care and labor. Now it happened at this time that

So he was forbidden to indulge his pet vanity, and spend half his time household. The men-servants were now strong brush, and so forth.

One day there was to be a grand dining themselves in their best livery. The men's apartment presented a strange spectacle as the portly butler seated himself in a chair, while a foppish footman stood on another behind him to powder his head with a flour-dredger, a service the men rendered each other in turn. Then followed a shout of laughter, a yell of rage, for the dredger was filled, not with the dignified purity of white powder, but the deep azure dye of Prussian blue. The foppish footman had been admiring himself in a glass opposite as he commenced operations, and then as he looked at the silver head of the burly butler, it was a vivid cornflower blue. A young footman in a further corner, who had begun to deck himself in the war paint of full flunkeyism, presented a still more frightful plight, for his dredger had been filled with mustard and he looked like a cockatoo.

What was to be done? The hour for the guests to arrive was fast approaching, and the men were in a plight, not easily remedied. All shouted in rage exceedingly high and strong for Puck, who was at last found innocently washing a favorite poodle and piously sing-The uproar brought Brinley and Bethel to inquire its cause. Bethel laughed at the strange spectacle, and Brinley took Puck from the room for fear of lynch law. Then Bethel's mirth gave place to vexation; her guests could not be received by servants in such a Brockville, Ont. plight. She stormed, stamped, and finally sent for the village barber to remedy the evil, which he found no easy matter with either of the cleverlycolored heads. Washing but brightened the blue and made painful the evil of the mustard, but it was done at last. Then Bethel said she had another comssion for him, which was to shave Puck's head, and it was done.
