ANOTHER OUTBREAK.

Mgr. Cleary is Loose Again.

NEWSPAPER MEN WHO DON'T AGREE WITH HIM HE CALLS
A VILE GANG OF OUTLAWS.

Kingston, Nov. 28.—It will be remembered that a short time ago Archbishop Cleary officially declared it a mortal sin for any Roman Catholic to attend a Protestant wedding of funeral. This declaration caused a good deal of comment in various newspapers that was not very complimentary to the Archbishop.

Now, as a sort of reply to this, the priests of the archdiocese have presented Mgr. Cleary with an address which winds up as follows:

"We have been all along admiring your Grace's sublime serenity during this small tempest that the anti-Christian scribes have been hounding you from our chief pastor to uphold ourselves in our sacred office and to disregard everything that

SATAN AND HIS AGENTS.

whether through violence or secret stratagem, may on occasional junctures of circumstances think it would befit their policy to wage war against God's holy church under some political disguise or another. We simply and honestly assure your Grace that in this whole matter we and our congregations are entirely one with you. We and our congregations are for God and for Christ and for the Holy Ghost, who lives and abides in God's holy church and directs us in our action, and it shall never be said that the priests of Kingston ever severed themselves from their Archbishop and gave themselves over to the folly of poor little political fools who seek us to profess belief in the new 'theology of a certain Toronto editor, who is hysterically enamored of 'heathen marriages,' and openly declares that any marriage of two heathens is as good and decent and sanctifying as the marriage of any two baptized persons. That poor little ignorant creature has, since the Manitoba school question arose seven years ago, gone stark mad on all Catholic subjects, especially where a Bishop or Archbishop ventured, without consulting him, to deliver any Catholic instructions to his flock. We know that he has a special grudge against your Grace, because it was your duty more than once to chastise him in sight of the public. Meanwhile, we know that the Archbishop of Kingston is the most forgiving man in the world, but all the while he is just the man to deal with this journalistic pig-my."

ARCHBISHOP'S REPLY.

Archbishop Cleary in reply spoke for nearly half an hour, and at times became quite warm regarding the Ontario "scribes." He said that he and his clergy and people had good reason to feel happy in witnessing the preter-natural fury of the agents of Satan, which in every age of the church, from the first Good Friday to the present day has ever been a true indication, always verified in the results, that the spite and malice and stormy anger of the evil one had not been stirred up by any trifling cause, but by some great and grand success of the church in baffling his subtle majesty's policy of ruin to religion and damnation to the souls of men. He illustrated this proposition by historical references from olden and modern times, and hereupon he called attention to the fact that the arch enemy and his associates invariably singled out some one—Bishop or Archbishop or Patriarch—for their most determined malignity, and pursued and persecuted him, and moved imperial forces and judges and lawyers and scribes to hunt him down or drive him into exile or death. Hence he, (the Archbishop) felt himself honored by the recent outbreak of

HELLISH SPITE
and lying, directed primarily against Christ and His holy church, and His doctrines of saving truth and divine worship, but most markedly, although secondarily, against himself, of whom more lies and slanders had been printed and published a few weeks ago than had ever been flung against any prelate at any previous time in any country in the world. Of this he was legitimately proud; in this he rejoiced, and was made more happy day after day as the anti-Christian newspaper breeze grew louder and stronger. He knew it was good for the church, and would exalt our holy religion in the minds of all upright men. One consideration alone detracted from his pleasure. It was the disgrace and shame those worthless scribes of the no-Popery press were bringing on the fair name of our Province. Strangers who came to Ontario at that time could not suppress their indignation and disgust, and often was the question asked:—"How can any decent man live in a country where

SO VILE A PRESS.

is allowed to pollute society in this fashion?" "Is this, after all, the darkest Africa, the land of the Zulus and Ashantees?" Among those two dozen or more anti-Christian scribes, it is safe to say, there is not one truthful or honorable man, not one educated man, not one who could pretend to be a gentleman. Taking them all in all they are the vilest gang of outlaws on this western continent—the shame of Ontario. I stand before you as the best abused Archbishop in Ontario. I rejoice in it. These abominably wicked men of the no-Popery press have no other way of complimenting me and marking me out for honorable distinction than by vilifying and slandering me and the holy church whose doctrine
I officially propound. They well know their adulation would be scornfully rejected. They know equally well that their praise would be the greatest insult that could be offered to any prelate of God's church. Holding the crozier in his left hand, his Grace stretched forth his right arm to the clergy and congregation and said:—"May this right arm become withered and may my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, if I ever fail to deserve the hated, the lying, the slander and the hellish malignity of the no-Popery scribes of Ontario."

Death Calls for Grain Buyer—
Daniel McIntyre

He was at Work on Friday Evening and a Corpse on Sunday Morning.

Daniel McIntyre, grain buyer for the Stevens-Campbell company, is dead. The news of his sudden taking off came as a shock to his many friends in Chatham and the entire surrounding country where he was widely known, and held in highest esteem by all. Gentle, open-hearted, than will be sorely missed by many whose warmest sympathy goes out to the bereaved wife and child.
On Friday last he was at work as usual; before the Sabbath sun-rise he had slept his life away. He had been indisposed for some days, and on Friday evening mentioned to his employers that he was ill and might not be back on Saturday. And he was not.
During the day a physician was called,
who pronounced his complaint inflammation of the lungs; but no serious consequences were anticipated.
During the night he grew worse and,
happily his keenest sufferings were lost in unconsciousness. But as the end drew near he was quiet and at rest, and at about five o'clock yesterday morning death came to him as he slept.
Mrs. McIntyre, widow of the deceased, was a resident of Glenora, where some years of their life together
were spent.

ALAS, POOR PARDO!

Dr. Hall's fate is fixed; his doom is sealed. There can be no doubt about it, for the Tilbury News man has said so. Hear him, ye people, hear him!

"The interest that our Conservative friends are just now manifesting in the Patron aspect of Mr. Pardo's candidature is but the passport of their foreboding hope and impending fate."

Too true! Too true! Who, oh, who shall be on our side with the Tilbury News man "agin us!"

"The Patrons as well as the public generally know too well the record of Mr. Pardo and the integrity of the man to find in analysis that he betrayed any trust."

Ye shades of Ananias and Sapphira, can you hear this man from where you're at? And so he rambles on until the thought comes (how strangely thoughts do come!) "Oh, where is Heaven?" This question is prettily dismissed with a T. Dewitt Talmage quotation and the admission that the discovery or theory of the reverend doctor "may not materially affect many of us." So far as the editor's prospects are concerned we have no fault to find with his plain publication of his "forlorn hope and impending fate," but we submit he should not, in common fairness, deny on behalf of his readers all interest in the everlasting hereafter.

Then he meanders on, paying a fitting tribute to Nat, of the Mail and Empire, the first woman journalist of North America, and telling how sensitive chords in the human heart are touched by the shocking "finis" of the Sternman trial.

Thanksgiving is next touched upon. Twenty-one lines are devoted to Thanksgiving, and the writer has best shown his thankfulness—or concealed a rank ingratitude—by not making it twenty-five.

"Thanksgiving has rolled round again at its appointed time and the hen-coops are being depleted, to grace the festive boards."

He fails to state that its time was "appointed" by the American eagle which dictates the policy of the present party in power in Canada. Will police court proceedings follow the depletion of those hen-coops? And would it be permissible to ask, where was the Tilbury News man when the fowl deed was perpetrated? Can he prove an alibi? We pause for a reply.

"The ostensible reason for setting apart a day of Thanksgiving was to give humanity twenty-four hours in which to thank the Creator for material prosperity during the year; particularly for the harvest garnered in the season."

But he found the time too long, and this is how he sets about his thanksgiving:

"If this be still to be the significance of Thanksgiving, the day comes a little late in the calendar. By the time King Winter appears in its robes of white, the glamour of harvest blessing has pretty well worn off. The only remaining feature of the present arrangement is that each one will have plenty of time in the interval to decide on the amount of thanks he or she is obliged to offer."

This man writes like a Sunday school superintendent, who has missed his calling, and should be at the head of some great religious weekly, or decorating fences with corn-cure literature. "I decide on the amount of thanks he or she is obliged to offer." Obligated forsooth! One would think that the Creator counted the highways of Tilbury with a bill in one hand and a shotgun in the other forcing from the Tilbury News man whatever "amount" of thanks he, she (or it) is obliged to offer.

A trifle late! "The glamour of harvest" has indeed fled at the advent of King Winter; but the owners of the fertile farms about Tilbury are probably not wasting away with sorrow at having to exchange that glamour for the more entrancing beauties of a balance in the bank.

Where it most succeeds in being offensive, and where the offense is aimed at a body of men who will make their presence felt in the coming campaign as they have never done before, is in the statement that:

"There are doubtless numbers of honest Patrons in West Kent."

Think of that! This same parcel of modern journalism, actually admits that perhaps there are some honest Patrons in West Kent. Were it not that the Tilbury News man has said Pardo will win, we would be tempted to believe that such reflections upon the Patrons as this last sentence contains would make his calling and election far from sure.

THAT IMAGINARY SURPLUS.
 A surplus of impudence and not of money the Ontario government has when it claims not to have dissipated the $4,000,000 in hard cash left by John Sandfield Macdonald. Any old wrecked concerned could figure up a surplus if assets and debts good, bad and indifferent were counted. It is the excess of receipts over expenditure out of which a surplus is formed. The province's assets cannot be counted as such. If they could the timber and mining lands would all go to swell Hardy & Co.'s imaginary surplus.

John Sandfield Macdonald left cash; the present government can only show some doubtful I. O. U's. John Sandfield Macdonald left the pine lands of northern Ontario almost wholly timbered. The best of that timber which was an asset of the province has been sold and the money applied to running expenses instead of being credited to capital account. And in spite of that revenue which was being wrongfully diverted John Sandfield Macdonald's cash surplus has long since disappeared.

And in spite of both the revenue from timber and the surplus left by John Sandfield Macdonald the province has been running half a million a year behind.

And yet there are fool newspapers and mouthy orators who will continue to speak of this mythical surplus with an assurance that leads one to the belief that they wouldn't know a surplus if they met one.

The Conservative organ of West Kent has a heartfelt desire to further the cause of the Patrons at present, but its sympathy did not go far enough to advocate selecting a farmer candidate. The same old cry of "Anything to win" is the battle cry as in the days of yore—Tilbury News.

That's just where you are wrong. The Planet did advocate the selection of a farmer candidate in the person of Dr. Hall. Because Dr. Hall, added to his other qualifications, a knowledge of medicine, that did not interfere with his knowledge of farming. And we're still prepared to back Farmer Hall against Lumberman Pardo, at the stiffest kind of a plowing match.

To-morrow Center Toronto will express its opinion on the government's recent boodling railway deals. It looks very much as if principle would triumph over patronage, and howland be sent to Ottawa as a rebuke to the schemers who are enriching themselves by working jobs on the government.

CARING FOR HOUSE PLANTS.
 A Few Suggestions as to How They Can Be Made to Do Well.

In order to have the best success in growing house plants for the windows in winter the first thing is good, healthy plants, free from insects. People often fail to revive a sickly plant. The aim should be to get good soil from the florist or from a pasture. It matters not whether it is a geranium or a palm, the best of care is necessary for success. Nothing is more beautiful than a window filled with fine flowering plants in midwinter, but to have a lot of plants 3 feet high, not a leaf on them, is not inviting, and they require as much care as the healthy plants.

The practice of most plant buyers is to get them of the florist in the spring; plant them in the garden and let them grow all summer. When the first frost comes, they will lift the large plants, full of bud and bloom, out of the ground and pot them.

In a few days the plants begin to lose their foliage and wither. The best way to do is to cut away about two-thirds of the plant and make them start new roots and new growth, though it puts off flowering for some time. The best way to have good house plants is to buy what are wanted in May, put in good sized pots, and plunge the pots in the earth. See that good drainage is obtained, put a small board on the bottom to keep out the worms, and about every two weeks turn around to keep the roots from going through the bottom of the pot. Keep them well through the summer, and by fall you will have fine plants that will produce more flowers than half a dozen poor ones. The best plants for flowering in winter are geraniums, Chinese primroses, cacti, cyclamens, cinerarias, carnations, Easter lilies, lilium, freesias, begonias and many others.

Insects should never be seen on plants. Regular use of nicotine smoke at least twice each week will drive them away. The red spider often does much mischief before he is discovered. A dry, hot atmosphere favors his production. To prevent him keep the plants moist and syringe them. Bulbs, ferns, palms, etc., make good plants for home culture. Most house plants will thrive in average temperature of not more than 50 degrees at night, with 20 or 25 degrees higher in the daytime. Plants are often put in the cellar for the winter. They will live, but not make as good a plant as a cutting rooted in March. We have to watch them closely in the greenhouses. If men in the florist business could raise plants by putting them under a bench in the winter they would get rich in a few years. Flowering plants need the best sunlight, while foliage plants will thrive without the bright sun. Plants should not be put up too high in a room, for the air is too hot and dry there.—Utica Press.

A Boatswain.
 "I was on the gunboat Harriet, down Wilmington way," said the old mariner. "She was a light draft boat, an one day orders came from the flag ship to take the Harriet on a gun up a river there an see if there were any pirates about. We went an we found the rats too."

"The river was shallow, an we had to take soundings all the time. I was sent forward in the chaos with the lead line an was callin off the depths an marks all nice an easy when the dad blamed rebels opened fire on us. A lot of sharpshooters was up on a hill, an they got our range first rats, an the first thing I knew I an the man at the wheel was the only ones left on deck. All the rest of the crew had business below. Well, the steersman managed to shelter himself all right, but that I was way out on her bow an no way to get under cover except I expose myself more doin it."

"Well, the rats got on to me quick enough an begun firin in my direction. I heard the first bullets fly by me, an, thinks I, it's about time to get under cover. I didn't know what else to do so I begins whirrin the lead line around my head. Well, I whirled that lead so fast that there wasn't no chance for a bullet to hit me. It was just like a shield an solid shield in front of me, an when we got out of range there was at least a pound of rebel lead stuck in the ship's lead where the bullets hit."

"Why didn't you keep that lead for a souvenir?"

"Well, I s'pose I ought to. But, say, them rebels made me so darn mad firin at me that way that I had no time to think of range I just gave that ole lead line an extra whirl an let her go, an dad blame me if she didn't fly clean back an kill three of the Johnnies. Yes, sir, that's a fact!"—Buffalo Express.

Great Winning on Thirteen at Monte Carlo.
 A private letter from Monte Carlo recounts an extraordinary run of luck made by one of the players, an American girl, at a roulette table. She went there merely to see the gambling of which she had heard so much, and, becoming excited, obtained permission from her escort to venture one goldpiece and one only. If she lost it, she would play no more. If she won, she would play with her winnings until she was gone.

She placed the coin on No. 13, and the turn of the wheel was in her favor. Her escort entered into an animated argument with her to take what she had gained and to be content with her experience. She reminded him of the terms of the agreement and while the controversy was going on the croupier gave another turn to the wheel, which, when it stopped, showed the same number as winner. As her money had remained on the table, it was increased thirtyfold. Again urged to remove her gains and to come playing, she became angry, and left the money on the same number, with the intention of losing it. Once more the ball stopped in 13, and her single goldpiece had increased to a little fortune, which she was at length prevailed upon to pocket.

Oddly enough, the next turn of the wheel stopped at the same number, but as it had already come up three times nobody played it.—Boston Herald.

The Smuggler and the Peen.
 The only instance I have ever heard of smuggling by any one on a big scale was the case of a traveler who had brought from Cuba a large quantity of cigars for his own smoking. He was honest up to a certain point, for, on being asked by the customs officer if he had anything to declare, he pointed to his portmanteau, saying, "That is full of cigars." "Oh, I dare say," said the laughing and smiling customs officer, "but I have nothing to declare but your portmanteau, which I let him go free. I regret to say that the traveler's honesty was not proof against such a temptation to create the proper duties.—Nineteenth Century.

A Large Offering.
 Down on his knees he fell and begged that she would accept his hand. When she looked upon that hand and saw the size of it, no wonder that she exclaimed, "Really this is more than I expected."—Boston Transcript.

MUNYON

Has a Cure for Each Disease.

With Munyon's Improved Homoeopathic Remedies in the House, Mothers can Become the Family Physician.

Professor Munyon is honored to-day as the leading authority in the medical world. His new and humane methods of treatment have swept away all the old-fashioned ideas of doctoring with poisonous drugs that create a dozen diseases in the effort to get rid of one. He does not claim that he has one remedy that will cure all complaints, and that he has prepared a specific cure for nearly every disease. He does not claim that Munyon's Rheumatism cure will cure consumption, dyspepsia or any other complaint, but he does assert that it will cure rheumatism. Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure is prepared expressly to cure dyspepsia; Munyon's Cough Cure to cure coughs; Munyon's Catarrh Remedies to cure catarrh; Munyon's Kidney Cure to cure kidney troubles. The same may be said of all Munyon's different health cures. They may be obtained at all drug stores, mostly 25c. a bottle. Personal letters to Prof. Munyon, 11 and 13 Albert street, Toronto, will be answered with free medical advice for any disease.

If Anything Were Wanting

To Confirm the genuineness and bona-fides of our Vacation Sale, Saturday's Superlatively Kind and flattering editorial send-off in the city papers supplied it fully. We bow blushing acknowledgements.

This Sale means a big sacrifice to us—a proportional advantage to the public. You get suit, overcoat or trousers at sell-we-must price; we get the goods off our hands. And, remember, you can buy the cloth in the web, by the yard, if you wish!

Now You Have it All

There was never before so tempting an offer in the tailoring line. Maybe there will never again be the like! Come in, see the goods, and have early pick. You can take them by the yard, or we make them up for you. Everything goes by private sale at auction figures.

THORN'S SIDE OF IT

How Mrs. Nack Murdered Wm. Guldensuppe.

He Describes in Detail the Carving up and Disposal of the Body.

New York, Nov. 29.—In his evidence this is how Thorn says Guldensuppe was murdered:

"Augusta Nack planned and accomplished the murder. When I got to the Woodside cottage that Saturday morning she met me at the door and said: 'I have got Guldensuppe up stairs. He is dead. She had shot him in the face and stabbed him in the breast, she said. I was not even in the house at the time. I knew nothing of her purpose that day. She asked me to come to Woodside.'

"You have got to help me get rid of it," she said, "or both of us will get in trouble." At last I helped her to carry the body to the bath tub. Guldensuppe was not breathing when we put him in the bath tub. She knew something about surgery, or else it would be impossible to get rid of the body properly.

"Before she cut the body up, the clothes were taken off. Afterwards the body was rolled up in the oilcloth and cloth that Mrs. Nack bought at Mrs. Kluge's. Then we talked over the plan to get rid of the body. She arranged for the surrey drive and the throwing away of the pieces. She gave me the money to hire the surrey. She gave me the money to hire the Woodside cottage, where she said she was to start a place to treat women who were in trouble, and who wanted to keep quiet.

"She wanted to run a baby farm, too, so as to make lots of money. After we threw the head into the river and disposed of pieces of the body, as the papers have stated, she took Guldensuppe's clothes and burned them in a stove. It was nothing but my love for Mrs. Nack that got me into all this trouble. I helped her get rid of the dead body to shield her and to save her from being arrested.

LATEST NEWS

THE TUNNEL A DEATH TRAP.

Sarnia, Nov. 29.—An inquest will be held on the bodies of the men suffocated in the tunnel.

In a year seven persons have lost their lives in this way. Only a week ago it is said 13 were rescued when unconscious.

GREAT BRITAIN'S AWFUL STORM.

London, Nov. 29.—The greatest gale ever known on the English coast has been raging here for two days. Wrecks have occurred everywhere and the shores are strewn with bodies. The sea wall at Scarborough has been washed away; the quays and esplanades at Lowestoft, Yarmouth and other places have been destroyed. The loss to life and property everywhere is simply enormous.

THE MARKETS.

(Via L. J. Atwater's Private Wire.) Chicago, Nov. 29.—There was a weak wheat market to-day, and this occurred in the face of a pretty general opinion at the close on Saturday that the chances were in favor of an appreciation in prices. General dullness of the trade was, perhaps, the most potent factor in the decline to-day, because, as exports were fairly large, and receipts at primary points, not as great as some had figured they would be, the natural effect should have been a steady market. Friday's sharp bulge has scared a good many people who had been selling, and the drop on Saturday puzzled the bullish ones so that a good many trades that under ordinary circumstances would have been carried over Sunday were closed out, and not taken on again to-day. First Liverpool cable showed a shade of 3-4d, and the closing 1-3d lower than that, making the total drop for the day 11-16d. Visible supply showed an increase of 949,000 bushels, which was twice as large as had been looked for. We shall need something very soon to cause more buying or the market will sag to a lower level.

Corn.—Liquidation in the December options assisted by weakness in wheat, caused corn to rule lower. There was a decrease of 1,283,000 in the visible supply. The demand from abroad shows strong indications of being strong. After the December liquidation is over prices will advance.

There was very little change in oats, the close being a shade lower. Weakness in the other markets caused what little decline there was. The position of oats is very strong and we advise purchase.

Provisions ruled steady. What little trade there was consisted of changing over December contracts.

CROSSING THE EQUATOR.

The Unusual Experience of Mark Twain Upon That Occasion.

Speaking of Mark Twain's work, "Following the Equator," a reviewer says: "Here is a bit from Mark Twain's diary which may prove interesting: 'Sept. 2.—Crossed the equator. In the distance it looked like a blue ribbon stretched across the ocean. Several passengers looked at it. We had no fool ceremonies, no fanfares, no hoarse yells. All that sort of thing has gone out. In old times a sailor dressed as Neptune used to come in over the bows with his suit and latrine and shave everybody who was crossing the equator for the first time, and then cleanse them from the parasites and drosses of the sea by the sea.'

"Sept. 3.—Sunday.—We are moving so nearly south that we cross only about two meridians of longitude a day. This morning we were in longitude 178 west from Greenwich and 57 degrees west from San Francisco. Tomorrow we shall be close to the center of the globe—the one hundred and eightieth degree west longitude and the one hundred and eightieth degree of east longitude.

"And then we must drop out a day—lose a day out of our lives, a day never to be found again. We shall all die one day earlier than from the beginning of time we were foredoomed to die. We shall be a day behindhand all through eternity. We shall always be saying to the other angels, 'Fine day today,' and they will always answering: 'But it isn't today; it's tomorrow.' We shall be in a state of confusion all the time and shall never know what true happiness is."

"Next Day.—Sure enough, it has happened. Yesterday it was Sept. 3, Sunday. Today, per the bulletin boards at the head of the companion way, it is Sept. 10, Tuesday. There is something uncanny about it. We were foredoomed to die. We shall be a day behindhand all through eternity. We shall always be saying to the other angels, 'Fine day today,' and they will always answering: 'But it isn't today; it's tomorrow.' We shall be in a state of confusion all the time and shall never know what true happiness is."

GETTING BETTER.

If the World is not Christianity is a Failure.

So Said Rev. H. W. Crews in the Victoria Avenue Church.

If it be true that the world is not growing better, then Christianity is a failure. So said Rev. H. W. Crews in the Victoria Avenue Church last evening in the course of an eloquent sermon. "Watchman, what of the night?" were the words of the text, and the question was one which concerned the world of to-day no less than in the days of old. We knew something of the signs of the sky; we can know something of the signs of the heavens, but it behooves us to know whether we are tending.

The speaker briefly outlined the advancement, along purely material lines, that has marked the centuries that have passed under the Christian dispensation, in none of which had the progress of science and invention been more marked than in the century now drawing to a close. The telegraph, the telephone and the modern means of locomotion were dwelt upon particularly and their relation to the moral status of mankind was briefly pointed out. These advances had made increased good possible; but it was also true that they had opened up new and improved avenues to crime.

There were those who said that the world was growing worse, others who declared that it was growing better; but Rev. Mr. Crews' opinion was that it was growing both better and worse. Good and evil had marched forward on parallel lines; but the increase of good was in far greater ratio than the increase of evil. Two men visit the same city. One comes back and tells of the wickedness of that city and is sure that the world is growing worse. The other speaks of it as a place of magnificent churches filled with devout and pious congregations; he feels convinced that the world is growing better. And so it is: men who look for the good will find on every hand reason for rejoicing, while those who seek the slums and visit the haunts and dens of iniquity may well lament over the things he sees and hears. The speaker looked at the world from his standpoint and was happy in the conviction that, while good and bad are increasing, the progress and growth of good far exceeds that of evil.

Sutherland 66; Peter Garrett, Maidstone, 7; John Holden, Signeham, West, 4; Dr. J. A. Smith 2; James Anderson 2. The second vote stood McKee 87, Sutherland 66. The latter did not make the nomination unanimous and trouble followed.

PROF. ALEXANDER'S LECTURE.

Professor Alexander, who will lecture at Northwood's hall this week, is a great favorite with Canadians. His accurate character delineations in public of some of the most prominent men in the Dominion have attracted a great deal of notice from the press. When in Montreal, Mr. Henry Dalby, managing editor of the Star, of that city, was on the stage as a subject for a reading, having been selected by the audience after the professor was blindfolded. Professor Alexander set only a portrait of Mr. Dalby's character closely and accurately, but described his personal appearance, color of hair, eyes, etc., and told him from which ancestor he had inherited his leading characteristics.

The Star illustrated the lecture and with the illustrations published a lengthy article from which is clipped the following: "Sparkling with wit and chequered with merriment, yet withal, full of sound advice and practical hints, Professor Alexander's lecture on 'How to Read Character' last night, at Association hall, was well calculated to display the versatility of the lecturer and the wide resources of his knowledge of human nature."

Professor Alexander gives his opening lecture here on Wednesday evening next.

LAW'S IRON HAND

The P. M. Says He Notices an Improvement Already—Police Court Cases.

There was another Monday police court docket this morning, and Judge Houston was, as usual, considerably busy.

George Summers, Alfred Alexander, John Perry and James Hollings, the quartette of lads convicted of disorderly conduct on the streets on Sunday week, told the judge that they had been at church yesterday and had started out to steadily reform.

The judge expressed his pleasure with the improved condition of affairs. "Yesterday," he said, "was one of the most quiet and orderly Sabbaths I have yet seen in Chatham. Why, one could actually pass the C. P. R. corner yesterday, without being under the impression they were dodging through a gymnasium."

The judge assessed Summers, Alexander and Hollings $1 and costs, while Perry was allowed to go with a warning. He, however, stated emphatically that the next offenders would be much more severely dealt with. Vice President Coyne with malicious injury to property to the extent of $1. Thos. Scullard defended the accused.

The complainant's story was to the effect that both himself and defendant occupied a building on Fifth street jointly and that defendant forced an entrance through his portion of the building and with an axe injured an obstructing door which complainant had fastened.

The defence maintained that the right of way had been given Coyne at the agreement and that he had used the door without protest for four months.

Judgement was reserved for a week.

On Park avenue east there is a bad mud hole. The Park avenue and Duke street sewers come within about 300 feet of each other, and there stop. Drainage to relieve this spot is being urged upon the board of works.

Raleigh street sidewalk, upon which Mr. Cassidy fell and broke his leg on Thursday night, is said to have been among the walks condemned by Inspector Delahanty in March last.

It is claimed that there is a combine among the pork packers, and that they will only purchase hogs from their own agents who control certain districts. It is alleged that no person else can purchase as they have no market for them and there is no competition in the price paid for the animals.—Dreadnought Times.

Delaware avenue sidewalks are at present agitating the board of works. Owners of property beside which the walk has been condemned are of opinion that it would be better to have the new walk laid on the opposite side of the street. There is a peculiar state of affairs. One side of the avenue has no walk in most of its length and they stand upon the sidewalk as used by all. It would seem that the frontage by-law should provide for payment by all benefited.

William street bridge approaches have long been in bad condition. The connection with the bridge was very poor and was not without danger to loaded wagons. The board of works will be forced to take some action as a large section of the roadway has been covered by the snow, either through the sewer or a leak in the retaining wall. The pavement for about thirty feet should be taken up and relaid higher. The same might with advantage be done at the north approach.

Those who are interested in the study of human nature will be pleased to learn that Prof. W. G. Alexander, representing Fowler and Wells, the leading phrenologists of the world, is booked for a course of lectures here at Northwood's Hall, beginning on Wednesday evening next. Professor Alexander is well and favorably known in this city. His lectures delivered here four years ago attracted a great deal of attention, both from the public and the press, and those who attended them then will be glad of another opportunity of doing so. The success that has attended Professor Alexander has been so remarkable that Fowler and Wells have retained him as their permanent representative in the field.

GUY BROS. MINSTRELS.

Guy Bros. last night gave the first minstrel entertainment that has been held in Bangor for years. It would be impossible to give a cleaner entertainment than that presented by the Guy Bros. There was no vulgarity and an absence of anything that would offend the most refined taste. The singing and specialties were all of the best and the audience was delighted with every part of the bill. Arthur Guy, as a cornet player, won the admiration of local musicians in his solos on that instrument. The trick cabin scene, which closed the performance, sent the people home in good humor, the greatest service they received.—Bangor Daily. At the Grand tomorrow night.

And the Photograph Cost Her Big Money—Used as Evidence in a Damage Suit.

When Carrie Martin—now Mrs. Ruppe—was instituted against the Brooklyn Heights Railroad Co., for damages amounting to $5,000 for injuries to her anatomy resulting from a scuffling to which she was subjected by one of the defendant company's trolley cars, she took no heed of cameras nor of the shrewd gentlemen who are employed by street railway companies to "look after persons who are injured." She fell a victim to the wiles of one of the agents of the trolley company, and the camera made her suit for $5,000 resemble the value of a cancelled postage stamp.

Carrie, in the papers she filed when she entered suit, alleged that she had been knocked down by a trolley car at Myrtle avenue and Harrison street, Brooklyn, in 1895, run over and so seriously "bruised, bruised and otherwise maltreated" that she became from that day forth incapacitated from the enjoyment of the pleasures of life or even the comforts of life, being rendered an invalid of the most pronounced type.

It so happens that there is in the employ of the Brooklyn Heights Railroad Co., a young man of the name of Benjamin Williams, who rejoices in the title of "investigator." This young man was sent to find out whether or not the serious injuries Miss Martin alleged she had sustained were genuine. He learned that Miss Martin was in the habit of paying frequent visits to Coney Island, and he watched Miss Martin and followed her to the water-front resort by the sea. Miss Martin went in bathing; so did Benjamin Williams. He found occasion to become acquainted with Miss Martin in the surf, and being a muscular young man, looking well in a bathing suit, he persuaded her to have her picture taken with one of her arms around his neck, caressingly. He took a picture and she took one. She refused to tell what she did with her picture, but he put his in the record of a case labelled "Carrie Martin vs. Brooklyn Heights Railroad Co."

Carrie Martin—now Mrs. Ruppe—after she had married Mr. Ruppe in the interval between the taking of the picture and the filing of the suit, looked like a most horribly injured woman when her case came up in Brooklyn last week. But the attorneys for the defense made her admit that the photograph showing her with her arm about the neck of muscular Mr. Williams was genuine, and the jury concluded that young woman could not dodge garbage in the surf at Coney Island, was not a subject for damages. What has happened between Carrie and her husband is not a matter of record, but Mr. Ruppe did not howl with grief in the court when the time came for the verdict, his wife, carrying the foxey Mr. Williams. OLD SHOES.
How much a man is like old shoes. For instance, each a sorry case. Both have been tanned, both are made tight. By cobblers, both get left and right. Both need a mate to be complete. And both are made to go on feet. They both need looking after, and both, in time, turn all to gold. With shoes the last is first, with men the first shall be last, and when the shoes wear out they're mended new; When men wear out, they're mended too! They both are tread upon, and both will tread on others, nothing loath. Both have their ties and both incline. Then polished, in the world to shine. And both get out. And would you choose To be a man or be his shoes?

AT THE JAPANESE LEGATION.

There are some peculiarities in the Menu, Though Not Many.
The menu of a dinner at the Japanese legation in Washington differs little from that of a well appointed American table. There is usually a scarcity of beef, which is not especially liked in Japan, and a total absence of mutton. Sheep are unknown in Japan. They cannot live there on account of the peculiarity of the climate and the consequent tendency to foot rot. Poultry and game of all kinds are served in abundance, and fish especially so. But one peculiarity of the banquet, fish soup, not chowder, but a soup simply made of fish—presents a novelty to which American palates find it rather hard to accustom themselves. Chickens, too, are served in a peculiar way. They are cut up into small squares, fried and then dressed with a sauce called "shoyu," which the Japanese say is the origin of the so called Worcestershire sauce.

Vegetables are much the same as in this country, with the exception of potatoes. These are generally avoided because of their connection with the sweet potato, or yam, which forms the food of the poorer classes only in Japan. The table service is European in every respect—no shop-sticks or anything of that kind—but much beautiful china and glassware and porcelain.

The costumes also are those of the eastern nations. Japanese women of the upper classes have followed the French fashion for many years. Even in court ceremonies the national costume was dropped by the reigning empress somewhere back in the eighties after she had held court some time against the emperor, who had for several years previously received in a uniform modeled after European fashion. Miss Ito Hoshi appears on all occasions in the streets winter and summer in a "pinafore" of American make, but of such an altitude as to be almost as conspicuous as the somewhat hazy of state which the Kuroki were at first accustomed to wear, but have lately laid by except for extreme occasions of ceremony. The members of his staff give preference to the modern and more comfortable "dandy," and dress in all other respects as would any well bred American. —New York Tribune.

"TIM AND MRS. TIM."

The Toronto News Company, Limited, Toronto, has just published a new book, "Tim and Mrs. Tim," a story for the "Club" and "Society" man and the "New woman." The story is a satirical account of the trials of a wife who was burdened with a husband who was a "society" fiend. He joined so many societies that he never spent a night at home; in fact he became a member of every society that was only in being to his senses, his wife becomes herself a victim to the mania for joining societies. The sequel shows how the husband and wife were brought to a realization of their duties as members of society. The story will certainly be enjoyed by every wife whose husband is a society or club man to the neglect of his wife and family, and by every husband whose wife is inclined to be, in his opinion, too strong an advocate of "Woman's Rights."

THE CADI'S JUSTICE.

How He Taught His Sovereign a Valuable and Lasting Lesson.

The following story is told of one of the Arabian caliphs of Cordova. El Hachem, the son and successor of Abderrahman III, desiring to see the palace, purchased a purchase from a poor woman a piece of ground that lay contiguous to it, and when she could not be prevailed on to part with the entrance he possession, the caliph's officers took by force what they could not otherwise obtain.

The poor woman applied to Ibn-Bachin, the chief of the notaries of Cordova, for justice. The case was a delicate and dangerous one to meddle with, but the cadi resolved, even at the sacrifice of his life, to reveal to his master's recollection a truth that the best of rulers will sometimes forget. He mounted his ass, and taking a large sack with him, rode to the palace of the caliph. The prince happened to be sitting in a pavilion that had been erected in the poor woman's garden.

"Prince of the faithful," said Bachin, prostrating himself, "I have come to ask permission of thee to fill this sack with the earth upon which thou standest."

Hachem, although considerably surprised at such a request, cheerfully allowed him to fill his sack. When this was done, the cadi brought his sovereign to crown his goodness by aiding him in loading his ass with its burden. This extraordinary request surprised the caliph still more, but he yielded to the cadi's entreaty and attempted to raise the sack. It was so heavy, however, that he could scarcely lift it.

"How thinkest thou that I can lift such a burden?" asked Hachem, laughing. "Prince of believers," replied Bachin, "thou thinkest too heavy to bear contains but a small part of the ground that you took by violence from the rightful owner. How, then, shall you be able, at the day of judgment, to support the weight of the whole?"

The caliph, struck with this address, embraced the cadi, thanked him, acknowledged his fault and immediately restored to the poor woman the field of which she had been despoiled, together with the pavilion and everything it contained.

The praise due to a despotic sovereign capable of such action is inferior only to that which should be accorded to the cadi who induced him to perform it.—Philadelphia Times.

EDUCATION AND TEETH.

The More We Learn The Worse Our Molars Grow.

Education is playing sad havoc with the teeth of modern generations. So an experienced dentist in the west end says, and he ought to know. Formerly decayed teeth were generally attributed to a secret fondness for lozenges, and this idea is still, it appears, quite a mistake. In fact, sugar is rather nourishing than otherwise. The truth is that the ancient, sturdy jaw of the English race is changing through lessons and books into an angular or V shape, which presses the molars one upon the other, does not give them room to grow and will in time prevent some of them from erupting already. In many cases the original teeth are becoming less in number than they ought to be, and often the "wisdom" teeth fail to appear. This in an "educated jaw" is lamentable. The new facial form, according to the dentist, much cultivated by ladies, who find that it is popular among gentlemen. The ladies like women with the "educated" angle of chin, which generally carries with it pearly but very frail teeth. If the specialist is right, this process of selection, aided by further lessons and books, study, will in the course of time produce a race without any teeth at all. Then will the dentists make fortunes, for people will require artificial sets from babyhood onward.—London Telegraph.

Webster and the Presidency.

Unhappily for himself, Webster was not satisfied with the theater of action on which his abilities fitted him for the greatest service and on which he achieved his highest renown. At a comparatively early period of his career he ardently wished to be sent as minister to England, and he bore a grudge to John Quincy Adams for his failure to gratify that desire. Ever since his reply to Hayne had made his name a household word in the country an ungovernable longing possessed him to be president of the United States. The morbid craving commonly called "the presidential fever" developed in him, as it became chronic, its most distressing forms, disordering his ambition, unsettling his judgment and warping his statesmanship. His imagination always saw the coveted prize within his grasp, while in reality he never was. He lacked the sort of popularity which since the administration of John Quincy Adams seemed to be required for a presidential candidacy. He traveled over the land, south and north and east and west, to manufacture it for himself, but in vain. The people looked at him with awe and hatred and scorn, with respect and wonder, but as to the presidency the fancy and favor of the politicians, as well as of the masses, obstinately ran to other men.—Carl Schurz in Harper's Magazine.

Strengthening Rubber.

One of the most common objections to the use of rubber in its various applications is its quality of crumbling or breaking after it has been in use awhile, this being characteristic of all varieties of the article. A number of ingenious methods for the prevention of this inconvenience have from time to time been proposed; but, according to the San Francisco Science Press, the most reliable of these seems to be the least complicated—namely, the occasional immersion of the rubber article in a 5 per cent solution of carbolic acid. Though a very simple and inexpensive process, rubber tubing treated in such a manner is found to remain in excellent condition even after many years of use. In fact, rubber bands given an occasional carbolic acid bath are practically indestructible instead of being really worthless without such treatment.

The Show.

When Robinson was traveling through the United States upon a concert tour, it chanced that Barnum's circus followed almost exactly the same route chosen by the great musician. On one occasion when the train was filled with snake charmers, acrobats, clowns and the like, the guard noticing perhaps Robinson's remarkable appearance, asked him: "Do you belong to the show?" Turning his lionine head with a savage shake, Robinson fiercely growled out: "Sir, I am the show!"

Not For Him.

"Would you like light rolls for breakfast, sir?"
"No. I'm a heavy tragedian."—Boston Courier.

"Yes," the mermaid sighed dejectedly.

WOODLAND HOUSEKEEPERS.

What They Do In October to Prepare For the Winter.

Have you ever seen the wren carry his winter food to his den? If you meet him in the woods, watch him at work. No one could be more methodical. He brings his food to the entrance of his hole and suddenly pops into the round hole in the ground that serves him as a doorway. Not so alarm him, go quietly to the entrance and stand perfectly still. He will continue to work, with no show of annoyance at your presence. Whatever food he may have brought he will lay it near his door, go in, turn around and then reach out to drag in the dainty after him.

The chipmunk is another busy housekeeper. He works on much the same plan as the wren, and to and fro he will hasten on the still days of October, seeming to understand the advantage of toiling while the winds and sky are favorable. In storing his provisions the chipmunk is far more careful than the red squirrel, and he is also more particular about furnishing his home. He selects the dry maple leaves or those of the plane tree and stuffs them carefully into his cheek pockets to carry them to his den. When he cannot find enough nuts or grain, this provident little housekeeper chooses something else.

We know of two chipmunks that were observed by a student of animals while they were gathering cherries, plus from under a cherry tree near the student's house. As he preferred watching the workers to disturbing them, they grew most friendly and were full of joy at the unusual feast that they were laying up for themselves. They gathered the seeds of the sugar maple also, and as many of the keys were yet on the trees, although the leaves had fallen, the chipmunks bore them to the ground, running swiftly out upon the ends of the small branches, reaching for the maple keys, snipping off the wings and deftly slipping nuts or seeds into their cheek pockets.—Our Animal Friends.

An Author's First Strike.

It is told of Justin McCarthy that in his early days he once submitted a story to a magazine called The Galaxy. One day he said to the editor, "I have come to see if you will take that story I offered The Galaxy."

"Yes," cordially responded the editor, "and 60 more like it."

Time passed, and one day Mr. McCarthy walked into The Galaxy office with an imposing pile of manuscript under his arm. "What is that?" asked Mr. Sheldon.

Mr. McCarthy laid the bundle of manuscript upon the publisher's desk and replied: "Here are the 60 stories you ordered on the occasion of my last visit."

"He got a check covering the whole 60."—London Telegraph.

THE MISAL SENT BY LEO X TO HENRY VIII.

The misal sent by Leo X to Henry VIII with the parchment conferring upon him the title of "defender of the faith," was bought for $500 by the German government. The misal and parchment had been given by Charles II to the ancestor of the famous Duke of Hamilton, and the library of this nobleman was sold by auction in London.

She's Very Dear.

She has such dainty little hands, The kind that Cupid loves.
But, oh, it costs an awful lot To keep those hands in gloves.
She has two little, shell-like ears, With blue veins lightly crossed.
That means five $100 bills— You know what earrings cost.

Her costumes always are superb, Quotable and up-to-date.
The other women envy her— And I—I pay the freight.

And do I love her? Yes, indeed! As every one can see.
She always does, and always will, Be very dear to me.

—Smyerville Journal.

Thinks a good deal of her.—"Does the nobleman seem to think a good deal of Miss Clara?"

"Oh, yes, indeed! He calls her his little Klondike!"
