Builds Up Strength,
Improves Complexion

As a result of debility, sickness or improper diet, the blood often becomes weak and unable to free itself of poisons. Morbid, unhealthy matter accumulates and breaks out in sores that discharge and will not heal. Washes, salves and ointments are useless because they have no action on the poisoned blood. But Dr. Hamilton's Pills cleanse and enrich the diseased blood, drive out impurities and fill it with nutritious and strong building material. Ulcers, boils and sores heal up. Likewise all weakness due to impoverished blood is cured by these famous pills, and anaemia, erysipelas and rheumatism go before it as chaff before fire. The skin grows smooth, complexion clears, health, vigor and strength are evident on all sides. A blood remedy for blood diseases, the formula of a famous physician—no improvement can be made on Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Their use extends to the people of many nations and thousands have proved that they do cure when all else fails. No matter what your ailment may be, if it has its origin in the blood it is curable with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Sold everywhere, 25c a box.

Life Span of Industrial Workers.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Sanitary Institute, reported in the Westminster Gazette, Dr. Edgar L. Collis, Director of Welfare and Health, Ministry of Munitions, said that to-day the average age of death among industrial workers was 50, which compared sadly with that of about 67, the average for underpaid and badly housed agricultural workers. Describing the methods adopted by the Ministry of Munitions for improving the conditions in factories, Dr. Collis said the introduction of welfare workers has been a great success. This would always be the case wherever their duties were not strangled by routine and red tape. Four thousand women welfare workers had been appointed to care for women and girls, and four hundred for boys. An important part of the new industrial development would be the light work depots, which would also be day nurseries and centres of mother-craft for mothers of young children.

OVID IN BULGARIA.

Stolen Statue Will Be Returned to Roumania. It was a bitter blow to Publius Ovidius Naso, the best selling poet of Augustan Rome, when the Emperor exiled him to a desolate town on the barren shores of the Black Sea as a punishment for too faithfully reflecting the manners of his time. There he lived his last years and there he died; nor did a gentleman used to the luxurious life of the capital of the world ever quite reconcile himself to the society of barbarous Scythians. Two thousand years later Ovid would have liked it better. By that time the town of Tomi had become

I had the best doctors in Eau Claire and they wanted me to have an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me so I did not need the operation, and I am telling all my friends about it."—Mrs. A. W. BINZER, Black River Falls, Wis.

Constantza, one of the principal ports of Roumania and the summer resort of the wealthy and ease-loving society of Bucharest. And every day gentlemen very much like Ovid, and ladies whom Ovid would have liked very much, passed through the Plaza Ovidiu, where a statue of the poet commemorated the first incursion, if an unwilling one, of the leisure class. In due course of time, however, Constantza fell into the hands of Scythians more ungracious than those among whom Ovid had lived. When the Bulgarian army overran the Dobruja in 1916 it was followed by the expropriators whom all the Central Powers sent into occupied territory. The Bulgars, like the Germans, were acquisitive; they would take anything from factory machinery to first editions and Japanese prints. Among the plunder shipped back into Bulgaria from Constantza was the statue of Ovid, once more an exile. Malignant Roumanians have said that the Bulgarians did not know who Ovid was, that they thought the statue was that of the Mayor of Constantza. Whether this be true or not, the Bulgars have been considerably more careless about the preservation of classical remains than the Roumanians. Some years ago a great heap of stones with Roman inscriptions lay in a museum yard in Sofia with grass growing among them; nobody had cared to take the trouble to carry them indoors. Perhaps Ovid was thrown in among them to await such time as the Bulgar had leisure from his forays into other lands and could arrange culture to suit himself; at any rate, Ovid escaped the ignominy of being melted and burned into shell cases, for after vigorous protests from Roumania and the Allies the Bulgarian Government finally shipped him back to Constantza. One could wish that all the wrongs suffered by Roumania could be so easily redressed.

GUARD THE CHILDREN FROM AUTUMN COLDS

The fall is the most severe season of the year for colds—one day is warm, the next is wet and cold and unless the mother is on her guard the little ones are seized with colds that may hang on all winter. Baby's Own Tablets are mothers' best friend in preventing or banishing colds. They act as a gentle laxative, keeping the bowels and stomach free and sweet. An occasional dose will prevent colds or if it does come on suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will quickly relieve it. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Blue Moons and Suns.

Astronomers of different countries have more than once recorded a blue moon. This remarkable phenomenon has been twice observed, both in Italy and Austria, but only once in England. A blue sun has appeared once only, and will probably never be seen again, even to the end of existence. This occurred in August, 1883, at the Sunda States. The cause was the eruption of a large volcano. In the terrible shock that followed, a great range of mountains was blown completely into the air. The cavity left on the Sunda States after this explosion was one thousand feet deep. Billions of tons of rock, dust and mud were blown heavenwards for no less than seven-teen miles. The reader will see what the explosion was like, when it is said that at Batavia, exactly one hundred miles away, the street lamps had to be lit, although the time was not yet noon. The sun up to this time was completely obscured; but towards sunset—the sunset that only the tropics know—came the magnificent phenomenon known to astronomers as the Blue Sun. This was seen by everyone within thirty or forty degrees of the Equator.—Answers.

Primitive Ferryboats.

In a country where rivers are subject to sudden and heavy floods, bridges are in many cases so insecure that ferries must always be maintained in addition. Such is the case in India, and the methods of crossing streams to-day are what they have been from the earliest times. An American consular officer tells how he was taken across an Indian river at the time of a freshet. The contrivance was simple, and has been used in the Orient as long as history shows any record. A cord having been fastened to a large, elongated gourd, and a smaller gourd being also tied to it, the native gets astride, and laying his breast upon the larger gourd paddles himself across with his hands and feet. Women, too, avail themselves of this singular contrivance, under the escort of a ferryman, who, similarly mounted, takes his charge in tow, carries her basket, with perhaps a child in it, on his head, and conveys them safely across. Herds of cattle swim these flooded rivers like water rats, and the herd boy, as a matter of course, takes the tail of the hindmost bullock in his hand, and thus gains a very comfortable lift across. These methods of crossing rivers, however, are hardly in accordance with our ideas of comfort. So the American thought one day as he stood, after a long ride, on the bank of a form a combination which save you much extra labor. Indurated Fibreware tubs are much easier to lift and to move about. They keep the water hot for a much longer space of time, because they do not conduct heat as metal does. They are easier to keep clean, because they are made in one piece without joint or seam, and the hard, glazed surface is impervious to liquids or odors. And they cost no more. Last longer, too. Eddy's Twin Beaver Washboard has a double rubbing surface of indurated Fibreware which loosens the dirt quickly and saves many tiresome motions.

wide and rapid stream which separated him from his halting place. He did not relish the idea of buffeting the muddy current on a horse of gourds, but as there was no boat within twenty miles it seemed as if he must either do this or bivouac on the bank without his dinner.

While he was in this dilemma a native signified that he would soon set the foreigner right. From a neighboring hut he brought a native bedstead—no a four poster such as Westerners use, but a small, light frame of wood having four little legs and held together by the interlacing of a piece of cord, which thus forms a sort of netted bottom to this simple piece of furniture. The native next brought out four round earthen pots, and after protecting the bottom of each with a few inches of sand he put the legs of the cot into the pots and signified that the vessel was ready to be launched.

As the American sat doubled up on the extemporized raft in company with his saddle he found himself raised an inch or so above the level of the water, the earthen pots forming admirable floats. A couple of lusty swimmers then took him in tow and soon landed him on the opposite bank.

SOME NEW SAUCES

In these wearisome days of high prices we housewives must serve bread, rice and poor man's puddings for dessert over and over again until our long-suffering families cry out in protest. Until eggs and sugar and cream go down, we cannot give them the charlottes, custards and souffles that we used to love to make, but we can vary them by making sauces that are different.

TRY A MOLASSES ONE.

A molasses sauce is especially good on an Indian cup. Boil a cup of molasses with a heaping tablespoonful of butter for about five minutes, remove from the fire and stir in slowly one tablespoonful of lemon juice or vinegar.

Nothing is better for a cornstarch pudding than a cup of left-over fruit juice. It can be watered if it is strong enough and thickened slightly with cornstarch, boiled and then cooled.

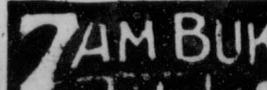

If you have a cup of stewed apricots, rub them through a sieve and mix with the beaten white of an egg. Serve it over plain boiled rice.

A veritable pudding sauce de luxe for a dark steamed pudding is made by creaming together one-half a cup of butter and one cup of brown sugar. Then add a few drops at a time, beating after each addition four tablespoonfuls of milk and a teaspoonful of vanilla.

puddings, especially on cottage puddings. Mix half a cup of sugar with a tablespoonful of corn starch and a pinch of salt, and pour over it gradually a cup of boiling hot water. Boil five minutes, stirring all the time, then take from the stove and add two tablespoonfuls of butter, one and a half tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and a few gratings of nutmeg.

A DESSERT MAKER.

A half a cup of heavy cream will make a sauce that will make any dessert popular. Beat the white of one egg, then add the yolk beaten until it is thick. Add a cup of powdered sugar gradually, then half a cup of milk, and flavor with vanilla.

QUEEN OF SAUCES.

Heat a pint of milk and add four tablespoonfuls of sugar. Moisten a tablespoonful of cornstarch with a little cold milk and stir into it and cook until it thickens. Remove from the stove and add the whites of two eggs beaten stiff, a few drops of almond flavoring and a little grated nutmeg. Serve at once. The yolks can be used in the pudding.

FOR CHILD SAFETY.

Hydro Commission Plan to Avoid Fatalities.

This letter was recently sent to school teachers throughout the Province with a request that it be read to the pupils. It is part of the Hydro Commission's "Safety First" campaign. Some days ago a schoolboy, while playing on the street, picked up an electric light wire. It seemed quite harmless, but he was instantly killed. During the last few years many lads have been killed by climbing poles and trees and touching wires.

The wires that you see support the poles along the streets and roads all carry electricity, very often at great pressure (or, as it is called, "voltage") when it is very deadly. These wires are always dangerous, and should never be touched under any circumstances.

Be careful to remember the following things:

1. Do not touch fallen or hanging wires.
2. Do not climb poles or towers.
3. Do not climb trees through which the wires pass.
4. Do not touch or shake any wires.
5. Do not throw stones at the insulators.
6. Do not fly kites across the wires.
7. Do not stand below men working overhead.
8. If you see a wire down, report it.
9. Keep away from switching towers, sub-stations and power houses.

There are but three mats of ivory in existence. The largest one measures 8 by 4 feet; and although made in the north of India, has a Greek design for a border. Only the finest and most flexible strips of the material could be used and the mat is like the finest woven fabric.

HOW CARDINAL FOOLED HUNS

Mercier Sent Out Letters by Shrewd Ruse.

Germans Thought Them
Cheese Wrappers.

New York despatch—In the course of a speech to the Merchants' Association at the Hotel Astor to-night Cardinal Mercier told them a story of a round Dutch cheese that, as an instance of top-grade business acumen and efficiency set every practical man of them rubbing his hands with a relish that none tried to conceal.

"At the frontier between Holland and Belgium we have a seminary with seven or eight hundred students in it, and for their living their receive very frequently a number of Dutch cheeses in boxes. I had there a very good friend, a priest. Many of the boxes come to Belgium from Holland for commerce. And as the Germans liked the cheese, they allowed it to pass into our country.

"Well, I thought I could send my letters in a very sure way this way. When the cheeses came to our Belgium seminary from Holland they arrived wrapped in papers which were afterward carefully sent back. By then, of course, they were old and stained. So I wrote my letter on paper which I had carefully made old and filthy and soiled looking, and my friend in due time received it. He took it and published it, and had it sent to France and England, and you in America got it from England, and it was published here on the same morning that German officers were upbraiding me for it at home."

Their fine qualities as a corrector of stomach troubles are known to thousands, and they are in constant demand everywhere by those who know what a safe and simple remedy they are. ## NEAR BANKRUPTCY

a Bad Way.

London Cable—Reports reaching this city from Germany relative to the Leipzig fair throw light on Germany's economic position. According to the secretary of the exhibition, there were 7,000 foreign buyers present.

Conversations with exhibitors gave observers the impression that many German industries were near bankruptcy, owing to the shortage of coal and the loss of export trade, their only hope being to trade with neutrals and America. Fear was expressed that the continued hostility of the British would prevent trade with England.

If Miller's Worm Powders needed the support of testimonials they could be got by the thousands from mothers who know the great virtue of this excellent medicine. But the powders will speak for themselves and in such a way that there can be no question of them. They act speedily and thoroughly, and the child to whom they are administered will show improvement from the first dose.

BRITISH UNREST.

Not All Labor Troubles
Ended as Yet.

London, Cable.—(Reuter Despatch)—Leading labor men with whom the settlement of the railway strike was discussed yesterday issued warnings against the ending of the dispute now being regarded as final and as ending all the labor troubles. It is pointed out that the protracted strike of iron moulders, which is seriously affecting the engineering industry of the north, is still unsettled. There were other disquieting incidents, showing that the temper of labor was still on edge. It is particularly complained of that the Government delayed putting into operation the Joint Industrial Council established at the beginning of the year to secure a universal living wage and a 48-hour week.

Thousands of mothers can testify to the virtue of Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator, because they know from experience how useful it is.

In the treatment of either there is no better preparation than Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, as it counteracts the inflammation and relieves the pain. The action of the oil is instantaneous, and its application is extremely simple.

ONE MORE HUN LIE EXPLODED

Origin of German Pretext for Declaring War.

Flew Over Nuremberg,
Dropped No Bombs.

Paris Cable—The origin of the German story that French airmen flew over the city of Nuremberg and dropped bombs on Aug. 2, 1914, which was made one of the pretexts for declaring war on France was brought out yesterday at a hearing by a court-martial in an army airplane case. The man who settled the historical point was M. Unne, former administrator of the Salmson Motor Corporation, one of the witnesses.

Toward the end of July, 1914, testified M. Unne, the Salmson Company had put a machine in the hands of Aviator Laporte for a flight from Paris to Constantinople. Engine trouble compelled Laporte to land in Bavaria. He informed M. Unne of the mishap and the latter, he said, took a train and went to the place where Laporte had come down. The machine was repaired, and Laporte was about to start off again when he was prohibited from doing so by the German authorities. On Aug. 1, however, he was released and told he might return to France by way of Nuremberg. Laporte, in making his way home, flew over Nuremberg, added M. Unne, and was fired at several times while so doing.

The Knuckles as a Calendar.

Most persons remember the number of days in any particular month by recalling the rymes they learned in childhood. Another method is practiced in Iceland, and it is so simple and ingenious as to be worth knowing.

Shut the fist and let the knuckle of the forefinger represent January with its thirty-one days, and the next knuckle will represent February with its smaller number of days. And thus every month that corresponds to a knuckle will be found to contain thirty-one days, and every month that corresponds to a depression a smaller number of days.

The little finger knuckle will represent July; begin again with the forefinger knuckle, which stands for August, and from this on continue to count through the months of the year.

Tears of silence often flow,
For memory keeps him ever near us
Though he died one year ago.

Not dead to us we loved him dear,
Not lost but gone before,
He lives with us in memory still,
And will for ever more.
God knows how much we miss him,
He counts the tears we shed,
And whispers, "Hush, he only sleeps,
Your loved one is not dead".

To the Electors of North Wentworth

West Flamboro, October 14th, 1919.

Dear Sir or Madam:

As the time now set for the Election makes it a short campaign, and practically impossible for me to meet the Electors personally, I take this opportunity of placing before you the aims and objects of the United Farmers policy, for whom I am the standard bearer and on an absolutely independent political platform, and if elected will put forth every effort to advance the welfare of the whole electorate.

What the United Farmers Stand For.

It is the policy of the United Farmers of Ontario to build up a country with a staple, sane and economical Government.

A country in which all producers of wealth shall receive a fair and proper share of the results of their labor.

A country in which the accumulation of vast fortunes is at least difficult, if not impossible.

A country which puts a premium on effort and thrift, and discourages idleness.

A country in the government of which all classes of the people shall have a voice in proportion to their numbers and economic importance.

A country in which the government is not subservient to the Big Interests but truly represents the ideals and aspirations of the Great Masses of the population.

Yours very truly,

F. C. BIGGS.

Intolerance or Compromise?

A Challenge to Common Sense!

DON'T let anyone tell you that the issue on October 20th is "The Beer or the Boy"—"Is Alcohol a Poison or not"—"Economy or Extravagance"—any such an abstraction.

The plain situation is—three sections of the people of this Province are absolutely dissatisfied with the Ontario Temperance Act and want new legislation that will permit the sale of light beer and wine generally, and the sale of pure, spirituous liquors only through Government agencies.

These three sections of the population are—ninety per cent. of organized labor, by actual vote; a large number of returned soldier organizations, by actual vote; thousands of the rank and file of the electorate who have joined the Citizen's Liberty League.

The plain issue then is—Are you going to vote for the safe, sane, fair compromise that these men and women want; or, are you going to insist on the retention of the unsatisfactory Ontario Temperance Act—insist on the retention of legislation that is breeding and will continue to breed dissatisfaction and discontent among our workers, returned men and a large section of the citizens generally?

Which are YOU for—COMPROMISE and HARMONY, or INTOLERANCE and Widespread Resentment?

Study the Ballot and analyze the situation conscientiously. This is one of the most vital concerns you have just now—a settlement of Ontario's vexed temperance problem that will be in the best interests of all the people.

Vote "Yes" to all Four Questions

Mark your ballot with an X. Any other marking will spoil it. Remember also—Every voter must vote on every question or his ballot will be spoiled.

The Optimistic Chickadee.

A walk through the woods on a nice winter day reveals many wonderful things to the person who believes that Dame Nature closes up her shop during cold weather. You probably will hear the chickadees before you see 'em, because they sing and are merry even though cold winds blow and food is scarce. "Chick-a-dee-dee" or "fee-bee" they sing as they scratch in the leaves of yesteryear in the fence corners. The chickadee, or black capped titmouse, is optimism's trademark.

The chickadee is too well known to warrant a description for those who have lived in the country; ultra-civilized folks will recognize chickadees as a flock of sparrowlike birds, each with a black sealskin cap and a black patch on the throat and chin. If you will listen they will sing, not merely when the spirit moves, but all of the time: "Chick-a-dee-dee; fee-bee; she-day-day-day." Translated into English this means:

"Look at that poor frozen turnip with his mackinaw coat and earlaps and red nose; wonder what he'll do when it gets cold." Some times, too, they have a scolding chuckle, but fear not; it soon blows over, like the sputtering of a busy housewife, and in a moment they are singing again. The song of a flock of chickadees requires no "claque."

These birds do little traveling, being content to pass unnoticed among our summer birds, knowing that they will again take the centre of the stage when cold days drive the tender ones to the Southland. Winter would be drearier than ever without these little citizens of fence corners, hedge room and woodlot singing and scratching and making the best of bad days and biting winds.

Moral: Consider the chickadee and worry not.

Munitions Versus Hairdressing.

A Sheffield, England, hairdresser who volunteered for munition work in one week of fifty-three hours earned more than $85.

Charwomen Form Union.

Nearly one thousand charwomen employed in the Dominion Government offices at Ottawa have formed a union with a view of obtaining an increase in wages.

Milk In Brick Form.

In some parts of Siberia milk is frozen and sold in brick form, and soup frozen into balls is sold to travellers to take on sledge journeys.

A combination storm and glare shield that can be clamped on an automobile windshield in front of a driver's seat has been invented.

Crop Rotation.

During the war, owing to labor scarcity and the high prices ruling for grain, there has been a tendency to get away from the short rotation in crop production. The necessity is, therefore, all the greater for getting back to it now.

A three-year rotation recommended by the Dominion Experimental Farm is:

First year.—Hoed crop. For corn apply manure in winter or spring, at rate of 15 tons per acre and shallow plough shortly before planting time turning under both clover and manure. For roots plough land previous autumn.

Second year.—Grain. Seed down with 10 pounds of red clover, two pounds alsike, six pounds alfalfa and six pounds timothy per acre.

Third year.—Clover hay or pasture. Second crop of hay may be used for seed.

This rotation is well suited for intensive dairy farming where soiling crops are used. It would be a most excellent rotation to put into practice where sufficient rough land was available to serve as pasturage. It is the rotation that would supply the greatest amount of forage of the best description for dairying or beef production.

For a four-year's rotation this is recommended:

First year.—Hoed crop. Apply manure at rate of 20 tons per acre previous autumn, winter or spring.

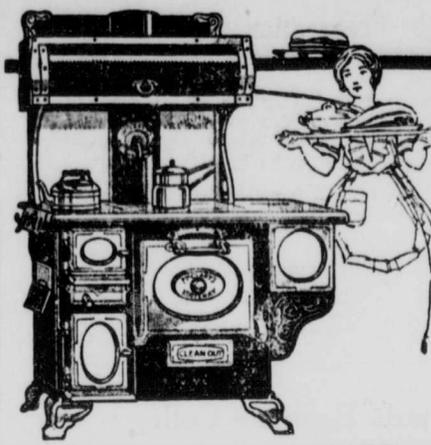

Second year.—Grain. Seed down with 10 pounds of red clover and eight or 10 pounds timothy per acre.

Third year.—Timothy hay or pasture. Plough field shallow in August, top work at intervals and ridge up in autumn in preparation for hoed crop.

This rotation is most satisfactory from all standpoints, except that it supplies a rather smaller proportion of grain than is often desired. Where live stock is the mainstay of the farm this is, however, a very minor fault.

Pine Needles as Playthings.

In the beautiful and cleanly needles of the pine, the children had an unlimited supply for the manufacture of toys, writes Alice Morse Earle, in her "Child Life in Colonial Days." Pretty necklaces could be made for personal adornment, resembling in miniature the fringed bark garments of the South Sea Islanders, and tiny brooms for dolls' houses. A thickly-growing cluster of needles was called "a lady." When her petticoats were carefully trimmed she could be placed upright on a sheet of paper, and by softly blowing upon it could be made to dance. A winter's amusement was furnished by gathering and storing the pitch-pine cones and hearing them snap open in the house.

To the Voter

DO YOU KNOW— that the beer sold in Ontario previous to prohibition ranged up to over 7% alcoholic content by weight measure, whilst the "Beer of the Ballot"—the beer for which you are asked to vote October 20th—has a strength of but 2.51%?

DO YOU KNOW— that such well-known beers manufactured in the United States as Blue Ribbon, Budweiser and Schiltz—always spoken of as "very light non-intoxicating beers"—ranged up to 4.19%—sixty per cent. stronger than the "Beer of the Ballot"—the beer for which you are asked to vote October 20th?

DO YOU KNOW— that in Maine, where prohibition has been in force over sixty years, the courts have held that beer of 3% alcoholic strength, was non-intoxicating—and any beer of under 3% strength was permitted to be sold as freely as ginger ale?

DO YOU KNOW— that in Sweden, Norway and Denmark—as a result of the findings of Government commissions appointed to determine what was an intoxicating liquor—beer of practically the same strength as asked for in the coming Referendum is regarded as non-intoxicating and is sold everywhere, by anybody, without license, and without paying a Government tax?

Toronto Officer Led Way Into Sea of Marmora.

The first unit of the British navy to pass up to ports on the Sea of Marmora after the declaration of the armistice was a motor patrol launch, which was in command of a Canadian officer—Lieut. Lawrence Goad, of the Royal Motor Boat Patrol, who comes from Toronto.

As the launch landed its crew, the Greek women of the district strewed the way with flowers, and an old Greek priest came and paid homage. Evidences of the Turkish abominations were to be seen on the passage through the Dardanelles, the bodies of Anzacs and Imperial troops, who had fallen in the glorious attempt at Gallipoli, having been dug up merely for the clothing which was upon them.

At the time the armistice was signed Lieut. Goad was patrolling the Bulgarian coast. A great attack had been planned, and preliminary preparations were being made, but the cessation of hostilities frustrated this. For over three years Lieut. Goad had been on this patrol work in the Aegean Sea. At Mudros he frequently came in contact with the Canadian hospital, one of which came from Toronto. In addition to keeping a constant vigilance for mines and submarines, he carried British spies, landed them, and then picked them up again when they had spent a week or two on shore. He was busy on mine sweeping after peace was declared, and said there were probably about ten thousand mines strewn in these seas.

This record is more interesting when the circumstances surrounding his joining the navy are known. A Toronto friend in London, Mr. Lachlan Gibb—approached the Admiralty and enquired whether Mr. Goad could enter the Royal Motorboat Patrol. The latter had had considerable yachting experience. A verbal assurance was given, and Mr. Goad reached London, and went with confidence, to the Admiralty. But there was a rebuff; there was no room, it was said, and he could not be accepted.

The sympathy of the late Earl Grey was enlisted, and through the medium of his nephew, Capt. Rex Benson, Whitehall red tape was finally vanquished. Lieut. Goad was put in charge of a patrol. It was only a converted collier. At Malta they were told three U-boats were waiting. These "got" two of the colliers, but Lieut. Goad's was the lucky third, though he had that trying experience of seeing his companions hit while, acting under Admiralty orders, they were obliged to get themselves out of danger.

With him was also A. C. Turner, of Toronto, but although they were both accepted, their ways parted after the initial stages. After three years of such active service without a leave, Lieut. Goad has returned to be demobilized.

Canada's Credit.

Canada's credit stands high. A reputation for sound financial methods during the war has been of inestimable benefit to the Dominion. Behind this stands also the realization of her immense natural resources and the fact that on the North American continent she is almost the sole remaining outlet for new settlement on a large scale. Within the new decade or two she will probably receive millions of the best class of immigrants, and these will make her per capita burdens light. The net public debt of Canada stands to-day at 1,500 million dollars. Seventy-five per cent. of it is due to Canadians. Weighed against her natural resources it is not heavy. It must also be taken into account that among her other assets Canada now owns and operates 14,000 miles of railway.

Speed of Car.

A new automobile attachment makes a permanent record of the speed of the car during the entire trip for the purpose of preventing speed disputes with authorities.

POWER OF PREJUDICE.

The Reason Why People "Don't Like" and "Can't Eat."

To a far greater extent than we admit, or possibly are aware of, man is governed by his prejudices. They cost him more than he knows, for a prejudice is an expensive proposition. In no other respect is this weakness so apparent as in the matter of food. During the reign of the food administration many people were persuaded or beguiled into eating things they had never eaten before and thought they "didn't like." "I'll try anything—once!" was regarded as a liberal-minded concession to the unfamiliar. Yet our likings are almost universally a matter of habit established by repetition. Few of us have taken kindly to caviare, avocado pears, or even olives, on first acquaintance.

When the use of whale meat was first urged upon the public, people laughed and quoted:

He baited his hook with tiger's tails,
And sat on a rock and fished for whales.

Whale meat is purchasable in many parts of Canada, but where is the steward or chef brave enough to place it on a hotel menu? As a matter of fact, there is nothing in the slightest degree objectionable to eye, nose or palate in whale steak, as those unprejudiced may quickly learn. It resembles corned beef—possibly a little less so, and broiled and served with a sauce, either drawn butter or a lemon sauce, is tasty enough for a second helping, once we have overcome our dread of the untried. That this meat will eventually be recognized as a food adjunct is indicated by two large canneries doing a good business on the Pacific Coast and the concessions granted to the syndicate supplying them.

The flesh of the shark is said to resemble that of the sturgeon—the fish that "goes to the Caesar's dish," but its cannibalistic reputation, firmly fixed in the popular mind, is against it. Man's dread of the gastronomically untried is only equalled by his curiosity, which after all gets the better of his fears. Truly, he was a brave man who first swallowed a raw oyster.

Prejudice plays a large part in our food purchases. Take the case of Butter versus Oleomargarine. Experts in the former have been known to fail in ability to distinguish the two, yet we are willing to pay 20 per cent. more for butter than for the substitute. The prejudice against goods from storage helps bolster the cost of living. Were it not for storage facilities butter and eggs to-day would be luxuries for the very rich only. The public was recently reliably informed that storage eggs had proved fresher than fresh eggs. The rabbit would furnish food as well as fur if our "don't like" did not stand in the way. As a matter of fact, our "don't eat" and "don't like" are mainly psychological states fixed in habit and prejudice.

Time Lost In Disputes.

The time lost on account of industrial disputes in Canada during April was much greater than during either March, 1919, or April, 1918. There were in existence during the month 37 strikes, involving 12,415 workpeople and resulting in a time loss of 111,083. Twenty-seven strikes were reported as having commenced during April. At the end of the month 14 strikes affecting approximately 1812 workpeople remained unterminated.

New One-cent Coin.

The Minister of Finance is considering the design for a new one-cent copper coin. The present one-cent piece while of excellent design is of so large size as to make it inconvenient to carry more than two or three in the pocket. The new coin will be slightly larger and slightly thicker than a ten-cent piece so as to be readily distinguishable to the touch. It will take some time to have the die made and the coins issued for circulation.

GOAT AS A MASCOT.

Billy Got "Cigarette Habit" From the Tommies.

Billy, a goat, mascot of the 83rd Flying Squadron in France, is a wonderful animal, if he is alive. Should Billy be dead, an "ally" has been lost. But he will always live in the minds of many men who fought in France, particularly those of the 83rd Squadron. An interesting tale of the animal's life and experiences is told by Lieut. Noel S. Jones, of the Royal Air Force, recently arrived home.

When Billy was a kid, probably about three or four weeks old, he was bought for 10 francs by flying men from a peasant at Franqueville, and was turned loose among men of the 83rd Squadron for branding up. In every sense of the statement Billy was a "high flyer." He didn't think anything of "stunts" at an altitude of 10,000 feet, he was horribly addicted to cigarettes, and ate chocolate in as great quantities as a girl, and the story has it that he had a fondness for liquor. But Billy, so the story goes, could "always keep on his feet."

Billy wouldn't accept a cigarette from the hand. That goat demanded he be allowed to accept a fag from a silver and initialed case, or from a box. He was a positive "fiend," having been known to eat as many as 50 cigarettes at one time. When the squadron moved Billy was strapped in a plane and taken along. Arriving at the destination the goat was lifted from the plane and would commence eating grass or wandering about in a matter of fact manner. The shelling of the squadron by enemy craft had no terrors for him.

"Dowdy" or "Doughty."

The danger of using a word that sounds very much like another word that has a less flattering meaning was amazingly illustrated in Toronto recently, when an eminent judge who loves to make speeches was widely misquoted. Then it turned out that he had said something entirely different from what people thought. Towards the close of his speech at the Ontario Bar Association, Mr. Justice Riddell spoke appreciatively of the King and Queen, but in doing so applied an epithet to Queen Mary which was widely commended on. The phrase, as understood by practically everyone present, was as follows:

"Dear King George V—a plain man, a plain sailor, with a dowdy wife, who minds her business, looks after her children and her household, and sees that the smaller children succeed to the old clothes of the older as they grow up; a man and a woman like other men and women, who know their duties, and devote themselves to their duties, and work hard in the position in life to which it has pleased God to call them."

One man who was in an excellent place to hear, and was very attentive to what was being said, declared that Mr. Justice Riddell did not say "dowdy," but that he used the word "doughty." It proved that this man was right. The word used in the speech was "doughty."

The word "dowdy" is an unfortunate one in that it has meanings which are complimentary, and other meanings which are the reverse. Here is what several dictionaries say:

Murray: "Shabbily dull in color or appearance; without brightness, smartness or freshness."

Wright's English Dialect Dictionary: "Slovenly, untidy in dress; dark, dull in color, faded; of quiet, homely habits, old-fashioned; stunted in growth."

Worcester's Dictionary: "Awkward, ill-dressed."—Applied to women.

Webster's New International Dictionary: "Dressed in a manner neither neat nor becoming; untidily shabby; wearing dingy or cheap finery; awkward and slovenly in dress; slatternly."

Aims of the

To emphasize Canada's

To raise funds for the relief of our merchant in mind the tremendous importance of Can-which can only be assured by the building ned with Canadian Seamen!

We may build ships by the thousand, but if we cannot man them ourselves our position is still economically unsound. If we do not train Canadian lads to man our merchant export markets—we shall have missed the greatest opportunity for trade expansion in

What will YOU do to help some Canadian so be of the greatest service to his country?

Let your contribution to the fund be a worthy answer. Help them by giving!

RHEUMATIC PEOPLE

Can Only Find Relief By Enriching the Blood.

Rheumatism is a disorder of the blood. It attacks people when the blood is overcharged with acid and impurities, thus setting up inflammation in the muscles and joints. Wet weather or cold weather of autumn may start the tortures of rheumatism, but it is not the cause. The cause is in the blood and the blood only. Victims of this malady have every reason to fear the first dull ache in the limbs and joints, followed by sharp pains through the flesh and muscles; these are the symptoms of poison in the blood which may shortly leave the victim racked and helpless.

There is only one way to cure rheumatism, and that is through the blood. Liniments, hot applications, and rubbing may give temporary ease, but cannot possibly root the trouble out of the system. That can only be done by the rich, red blood, which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make. This new blood drives out the poisonous acids and impurities, and the rheumatism disappears. If you are a sufferer from this painful malady begin curing yourself to-day by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and see how soon the pains and stiffness of the joints fade away, leaving behind new energy and new health.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Lesson III. Oct. 19th, 1919. Jesus in Peter's home. Mark 1: 29-39.

COMMENTARY.—I. Healing in a home (vs. 32-31). 29. Forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue—it was on the Sabbath and Jesus had been teaching and exercising divine power of the synagogue of Capernaum. Immediately after the casting out of the demon Jesus with the four disciples whom he had recently called went from the synagogue service to Peter's home (Matt. 8:14), where Andrew also dwelt. 30. Sick of a fever—She was prostrated. Fevers were prevalent about Capernaum, on account of the marshy region near. According to the physician Luke it was a "great" fever. Intermittent fever and dysentery, the latter often fatal, are ordinary Arabian diseases.—Maclear. Anon—"Straightway."—R. V. Tell him of her—The mighty cures which Jesus had already wrought prepared the minds of those interested to believe that He could cure this woman. 31. Took her by the hand and lifted her up—Matthew says, "He touched her hand." This was a token of the application of power. The fever left her—"He willed and it was done. The curative virtue is in Christ's will, not in instrumentalities." Ministered unto them—Such fevers naturally leave the patient weak and liable to dangerous relapses, and much time and care are required to cover the usual strength. In this case strength was given immediately, and they cured woman went about the household tasks that awaited her. Through the coming of Jesus into the home health came instantly to one who was seriously ill. Blessings ever attend the presence of Jesus, and happy are they who give him welcome. Cures were sometimes wrought by our Lord, which were not instantaneous, as in the case of the blind man whose sight was restored gradually (Mark 8: 22-26); but usually he healed completely and instantly.

II. Multitudes healed (vs. 32-34). 32. Even—Evening. Jesus had attended the Sabbath service in the synagogue. The sun had set and the Sabbath was over. They brought unto him—Since the Pharisees considered it unlawful to carry a bed on the Sabbath, the friends of the sick refrained from bringing them before the close of the Sabbath. Then also it would be cooler than in the heat of the day. Possessed of demons, (R. V.)—A condition in which demons or evil spirits took control of the person to such an extent that he was unable to restrain himself from acts of violence or wickedness. 33. All the city was gathered—Two notable miracles had been wrought that day. The cure of the demoniac in the synagogue had astonished the people beyond measure and the healing of Peter's wife's mother had occasioned great wonderment, reports of these cures spread rapidly throughout the city, so that by evening the crowds had assembled, bringing those who were afflicted. At the door of Peter's home. They were convinced of Jesus' power and willing to relieve those who were in distress. 34. He healed many—Matthew says, "And healed all that were sick" (8:16), and, connected his work with Isa. 53: 4, as being the fulfillment of the prophecy there recorded, and said, "That it may be fulfilled, which was spoken by Isaiah, the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses" (Matt. 8:17). Divers diseases—Many different diseases. No disease was in existence that could baffle the skill of the great Physician, and he could bring relief from every sort of trouble. Suffered not the devil to speak, because they knew him—Jesus was not willing to have testimony born to his Messiahship by demons. The voice from heaven which always spoke the truth had declared him to be the Son of God, and he would not permit lips, given to lying, to testify to his divinity. The works that Jesus performed, the spiritual sublimity and simplicity of his teachings and his own declarations concerning his nature and mission, joined with the testimony from heaven, made clear his deity.

III. Jesus at prayer (v. 35). 35. In the morning—The day following the Sabbath. A great while before day—the fact that Jesus rose thus early in the morning shows how important and necessary He understood it was for Him to pray. It indicates how great was the burden upon His heart for a lost world. A solitary place—A remarkable feature of the Lake of Gennesaret was that it was closely surrounded with desert solitudes. These desert places, thus close at hand on the table-lands or in the ravines of the eastern and western ranges, gave opportunities of retirement for rest or prayer.—Stanley. And these prayed—His soul craved communion with the Father that He might carry forward the great work committed to Him. He prayed for the world that He came to redeem. His praying, however, was not wholly on His own account and for His own need, and on behalf of others, but it was an example for us. Prayer is indispensable to the Christian's life. He can not maintain his knowledge of saving grace and of heart cleansing without this exercise. He cannot grow in knowledge and love of God without prayer, nor can he be a successful fisher of men unless he is much in prayer. Peter and John and the other disciples were learning of Jesus, being prepared for the great work they were to do for Him, and this example He gave them of frequent and earnest prayer would be of inestimable value to them throughout their ministry.

IV. Spreading the Gospel (vs. 36-39). 36. Simon and they that were with him—With Simon Peter and John. Followed after him—Jesus had probably tarried long in prayer, and because the people were desirous of coming to Him, His disciples went in search of Him. 37. Had followed Him—They doubtless knew where they would be the most likely to find Him from their acquaintance with His ways in the past. It is well if the followers of Jesus are so given to prayer that those who know them have the knowledge that they are often to be found in that exercise. Jesus was just entering upon His great Galilean ministry and a season of communion with the Father would be a most helpful preparation for it. All men seek for thee—The knowledge of his remarkable power in healing the sick and casting out evil spirits had reached the people throughout Galilee (Mark 1: 28), and the demands upon him were great. It was for the temporal good that Jesus could bestow, rather than for the spiritual good that he desired to impart, that the people were seeking Him. 38. Into the next towns—The word "towns" here means "places larger than villages."—Whedon. Preach there also—His labors must not all be expended upon one community, but He must carry the gospel and its blessings into the regions beyond. This was the first Face Was Badly Disfigured. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Healed.

"Small red pimples and black-heads began on my face, and my face was badly disfigured. Some of the pimples festered while others scaled over and there were places where the pimples were in blotches. They used to itch and burn terribly. I saw an advertisement for Cuticura and I tried them. They stopped the itching and burning and I used four cakes of Soap and three boxes of Ointment which healed me." (Signed) Miss V. A. Hayne, Stormont, N. S., Dec. 26, '18.

Christ's mission? Through what means did Jesus reach the people? PRACTICAL SURVEY.

Topic—Christ in the Home.

I. The home.

II. Its bulwark. Jesus exercised both a public and a private ministry, and the events of the lesson include both. Alike in the synagogue and in the domestic circle, his love and power were beneficently manifested. He regarded the individual as well as the multitude, as worthy of attention. He came into personal contact with the sinful and suffering. Spiritual ailments and bodily diseases were embraced in the sphere of his purpose and ministry (Psa. 103: 3; Matt. 8: 17).

I. The home. The home was the first divinely-ordained institution among men. It involves the family which was the first relation established in primeval conditions and innocence. It antedates the church and nation and is the foundation of both. Domestic relations precede, and in our present existence are worth more than all other social ties. Both Jesus and the apostles placed special honor upon, and rigidly safeguarded, the sacred relation in which it originates. He graced with his presence and blessed with his benediction the marriage in Cana, and solititude for its unmarried sweetness called forth the first exercise of his miraculous power and "glory" (John 2: 1-11). Upon the integrity of the home depends the well-being of the race. The perpetuation of the latter under the most favorable conditions of heredity and environment is its first design. The development of character under equal advantages is second. It is the chief school of human virtue. Upon it depends the perpetuity of any nation. Joseph Cook said, "Only the home can found a state. The moral tone of any people is shaped by the home life, and can never rise above its average. Its virtue or virus permeates the entire body politic. It is the safeguard of private virtue and of public liberty. The best place to make men of boys and women of girls is here. We should jealously beware of any influence or agency which tends to lower its sacredness or intrude upon its inviolate domain, under whatever insidious guise or disguise it may present itself."

II. Its bulwark. The Christian system recognizes and regulates all human interests. Apart from its teachings and moral force none can attain their best or remain secure. All other restraints prove but feeble barriers in the presence of unleashed passion. Christianity inculcates those principles of authority, obedience, affection and orderliness which are inseparable from an elevated domestic life. It is at once the source and security of all human progress. The sweetest type of heaven is a home where Christ reigns. His dominion bars its portals against the ingress of illicit desire or purpose, which Jesus says is equivalent in its effect upon character to overt violation of its obligations. Unlike his forerunner, he was not ascetic. He sanctified all the relations of human life into which it was possible for him to enter, by fulfilling them. In Cana, Capernaum, Bethany and Jerusalem he entered into the domestic and innocent social life of those among whom he went, and he moved as a living benediction among them. Christianity is the bulwark of the home. W. H. C.

VISION OF AN EMPRESS.

Has anyone taken time to think of Empress Eugenie, widow of Napoleon III. Just at this time? Nearly half a century ago she saw her France overthrown in her own beautiful palace at Versailles by booted and spurred German insolence. She saw her husband dethroned to die in exile. Later she mourned the death in battle under an alien flag of her only son, disinherited.

The dim eyes of the old woman, who has known so much of pomp and pride and humiliation and exile, will now see the authors of her undoing stripped and bending with bowed head and without an extenuating circumstance to plead.

Surely a fitting and dramatic close to a historic life.

FROM CHERRY-BLOSSOM LAND

The Japanese Give Good Example

It is a proverb of Cherry Blossom Land that beauty of face and figure depends on womanly health.

What is it that makes our Canadian women often pale, narrow-faced, with dark circles under the eyes, and very often old at forty-five when they should be in their prime?

Women suffer in girlhood from backache, spine-ache and headaches, followed by irregularities and as a result diseases of the womanly organs are more common than any one but a physician in active practice could suppose.

After long experience in the treatment of women's diseases, Dr. Pierce evolved a vegetable tonic and corrective which he called Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is a purely vegetable preparation, without a particle of alcohol contained in it.

When a woman complains of backache, dizziness or pain—when every thing looks black before her eyes—a dragging feeling, with nervousness, she should turn to this "temperance" herbal tonic. It can be obtained in almost every drug store in the land and the ingredients are printed in plain English on the wrapper. Put up in tablets or liquid.

Dr. Pierce, of Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., will send a trial size of the tablets for ten cents.

Curious Coincidence.

The news of Germany's surrender came midway between Sunday night and Monday morning. It was on a Sunday morning that the world heard of Germany's declaration of war against Russia. Serbia's answer to Austria's ultimatum came the previous Sunday. It was on Sunday morning that we got the news of the firing of the first gun of our civil war, and it was on Sunday that Lee surrendered at Appomattox. Later on, the first tidings of the sinking of Cervera's fleet at Santiago came on Sunday morning, as did that of the signing of the peace treaty between the United States and Spain.—U. S. exchange.

COPPER AND BRONZE

One of the most interesting discoveries by Egyptologists throws new light on the relative origin of copper and bronze in the Mediterranean countries. At Ortu Comidue, alongside some ancient copper mines of prehistoric age, a foundry has been uncovered with all the furnaces for smelting and molds for casting, just as it was abandoned thousands of years ago.

Homing Instinct Supreme.

Science cannot explain the wonderful instinct which brings the pigeon to its home, but it is stronger than fear or any other obstacle. Liberated in the face of the heaviest barrage, it circles in the air to get its bearings, rises swiftly to a height of half a mile, then is off with the speed of a bullet. For a distance of 30 miles they are capable of making two miles a minute, and have flown 800 miles on a single flight.

Winter Reading.

Books of natural history make the most cheerful winter reading. I read in Audubon with a thrill of delight, when the snow covers the ground, of the magnolia, and the Florida key, and their warm sea breezes; of the fence rail, and the cotton tree, and the migrations of the rice bird; of the breaking up of winter in Labrador and the melting of the snow on the forks of the Missouri.—Thoreau.

Amid the wilds of southwestern Oregon, almost unknown to the world at large, is situated a series of underground chambers and passages remarkable for their size and for the beauty and unusual character of their decorations, says F. GILLETT'S LYE EATS DIRT

SIR WILLIAM'S WILL

She suspected nothing. It remained with him to decide what he should do.

But flight seemed to him mean, cowardly. He had undertaken to oversee the building of this jetty at Pethwick; he had thrown himself heart and soul into the work.

Clytie had not heard his passionate avowal, was still ignorant of his identity with Wilfred Carton; he could surely keep a watch and guard upon his lips for the future.

She turned to and fro, and strove to forget him, to blame him; but the memory of his strength, of his manly tenderness, prevailed over her.

"You will stay in bed, my dear," Mollie said decisively. "Girls who go skydiving in an open boat through a record storm must pay the penalty.

"It was not his fault," murmured Clytie, in muffled accents, as she drew the clothes about her.

"Oh? Then whose was it?" demanded Mollie. "If he doesn't know when a storm is impending, he's not much of a fisherman, and ought not to be trusted with a delicate girl."

"I'm not delicate!" declared Clytie indignantly.

"Yes, you are," retorted Mollie.

"I'm glad," was all Jack said; and he said it with eyes fixed on the boat. She stood for a moment or two looking out at the sea, then she went up the beach, and Jack felt as if she had taken the sunlight with her.

Here was he, Sir Wilfred Carton, masquerading as Jack Douglas, not permitted to exchange a word more than his assumed position allowed, and others—Lord Stanton, for instance—were free to look at her, talk with her, unrestrainedly.

But he did his duty; and the workmen that day had more than ever good reason and excuse for calling him a "masterpiece;" and though he was sterner, shorter, than usual, they obeyed him cheerfully; for they acknowledged that power, that spell, which had made itself felt by Mr. and Mrs. Jarrow and all at Parraluna.

For that day, and many after, Jack worked with the men with what seemed a whole-souled absorption in the task at hand; and seemed so occupied that even Lord Stanton could scarcely get a word from him that did not apply to the building of the jetty.

The two girls came down to the beach every day; but Douglas seemed to avoid them; and once, when Mollie proposed that they should row to Pethwick, Jack declared that he must stay to see the unloading of a cargo of stone, left them to the care of one of the Withycombe boatmen; but he watched the boat awhile with jealous eyes, and turned away with a sigh, as If he begrudged the man his precious charge.

Strangely enough, as Jack grew more watchful and grave each day, Clytie seemed to regain her strength and her old light-hearted spirit.

She thought—and Mollie said openly—that it was the wonderful sea-air of Withycombe, and the relief of getting away from the cares of Bramley; but Clytie felt that these two causes were not wholly accountable for the improvement.

To a woman there is no elixir like that of love, and, though Clytie would not have admitted it, the knowledge that she was loved by Jack Douglas was a precious, but secret, anodyne which soothed her worried mind; and, though it did not solve the problem of her life, indeed, rather complicated it, was like balm to her restless spirit.

She knew he avoided her; but she found a subtle pleasure in watching him from a distance, in listening to his voice, as he gave orders to the men, or called to his horse.

The day arrived for their return to Bramley; and it seemed as if she would leave Withycombe without speaking to him, without saying "good-bye," but, the morning of their departure, Mollie met him just outside the cottage as she was going down to the beach in search of a book which Clytie had left in the boat.

"Oh, good morning, Mr. Douglas," she said. "I've come down for a book of my sister's."

"I have found it," he broke in. "I found it last night; I'll fetch it."

He went into the cottage, and returned with the book, followed by Polly.

"Oh, thanks," said Mollie. "Would you mind taking it up to the farm? My sister is just packing."

"Polly shall go with it," he said; but Mollie shook her head.

"Polly's coming down to the shop to buy chocolates for the journey," she said. "You take it, if you don't mind."

He looked round for another messenger; but there was no one about, and, half-gladly, half-fearfully, he went up to the farm. Clytie was packing, as Mollie had said, and she was running down the stairs, singing to herself, as she opened the gate. The door was open, as usual, and she saw him and stopped, a faint color stealing into her face.

"I've brought this," said Jack, his voice sounding almost gruff.

"Oh, thank you," she responded, brightly, and she came out to him.

"How stupid of me to forget it. My favorite Browning, too! It is very good of you to bring it."

"Not at all," he said, his eyes downcast, his manner still reserved. "You— you are going, so Miss Mollie told me."

Jack took the boat to Pethwick, and tried to force his attention to the loading of timber and shaping of stone; but his thoughts were fixed on Clytie and her condition. Low fever is a dangerous thing, you see, and dreadfully dangerous when viewed by the eyes of a lover. He longed for a sight of her.

And the next day his longing was gratified. She came down to the beach with Mollie and Lord Stanton. She was looking pale and thoughtful, and Jack was at once overwhelmed by remorse; but then she laughed at something Lord Stanton had said, and her eyes as they met Jack's were calm, placid, unembarrassed; and, with relief, he thanked Heaven that they were so; it was still more evident that she had not heard the passionate words which had sprung from his lips.

Indeed, she scarcely glanced at him, and did not address him directly; not even when Lord Stanton said: "Miss Bramley's none the worse for the storm, Douglas."

"Yes," she said, checking a sigh. "And I—we are very sorry. We have enjoyed the holiday, the change, so much."

"And you are so much better," he remarked, almost to himself.

She nodded. "It is the air, and the pleasant time we have had. I have to thank you, Mr. Douglas, for— for taking us out in the boat—and taking so much care of us."

"Well, I nearly drowned you," he said, gravely.

"Nearly is far from quite," she retorted, with a bright smile and a heightened color. "I suppose we were in some danger; but I enjoyed myself very much, more than I have done for a very long time."

He looked at her with a grateful sense of what he considered to be her magnanimity, but said nothing; and she went on:

"I suppose you will remain in Withycombe or Pethwick until the jetty is built, Mr. Douglas?" he replied, looking beyond her, as if he feared to meet her eyes. "It all depends."

"Oh, I hope so—I mean," she continued, hurriedly, "that Lord Stanton would be so disappointed, that—that— Oh, you must not leave them in the lurch!"

"He could soon fill my place," he said. "But I'll see." He still lingered, his hand on the gate, as if loath to go, and Clytie stood, a graceful figure in her tailor-made coat and skirt, the book clasped in her hand, the other raised to protect her hair from the attacks of the wind; and presently, with a jerk, he said: "Can I help you? There must be a good deal to do—your packing—"

"No, thanks. Oh, but yes! Would you mind cording a box for me?" she said with a smile. "It is so heavy, and all the men are away."

He followed her into the sitting-room, where a box stood on the floor. "That is it," she said. "Is it rather full, isn't it? It's the last box, and everything one had forgotten, all the adds and ends have been thrown into it. Perhaps the lid won't shut."

Jack knelt beside it, and eyed the disorder, the shoes, gloves, books, and odds and ends doubtfully as he essayed in vain to close the lid.

"Oh, well," she said, resignedly. "Some of the things don't matter; they are most of them of no value."

She swept off the top layer laughingly; but Jack interposed.

"I'm not much of a hand at packing," he said; "but I think I could manage better than that."

"Oh, I give you a free hand," she said; "but please don't trouble about those old gloves and things. I don't know what I put them in."

She turned away as she spoke, and Jack, as he rearranged the muddle, took up one of the old gloves and slipped it into his pocket. Clytie happened to be standing in front of the looking-glass, and she saw the act reflected in the mirror. Her face went crimson, and she stood quite still for a moment or two, her hand resting on the mantelshelf, her eyes fixed on him.

"I think that's better," he remarked reverently, as he laid a tiny pair of shoes on the top and closed the lid.

"Oh, you have everything in! How clever of you!" she said. "But will you be able to cord it by yourself? Shall I ring for some one? Perhaps I can help you?"

"No, no; please keep away!" he adjured her earnestly. "You might get hurt."

She took hold of the cord and laughed at his anxiety.

"Why, I could have done it by myself, if I'd been forced to it," she assured him, rather ungratefully.

Jack smiled, but took the cord from her hand, and interposed between her slight figure and the box.

"I'm glad you weren't, then," he said. "It is more than probable that you would have hurt yourself trying to lift it, or, having lifted it, have let it drop on your toes!"

"Now, you want a knife," she remarked, looking round.

"Thanks, I have one," he said, and he pulled out the useful and somewhat formidable weapon which fulfilled so many purposes. In taking it from his pocket he brought the glove with it; but Clytie affected not to see it, and he corded it with his knee quickly, waiting for an opportunity to take it up again. But Clytie leaned against the table, her hands clasping the edges, her whole attitude one of indolent interest in the proceedings.

"You won't want a label?" he suggested, with the object of getting her to move so that he might secure the glove.

"Oh, no," she replied. "A cart is coming for the things."

"Is that it I hear coming down the road?" he asked, hoping she would go to the window; but she did not move, or remove her eyes from him, as she replied sweetly:

"Oh, no; it will not be here yet. Have you quite finished? It is so kind of you. What is that? Oh, one of my gloves," she went on, as, in despair, he rose and revealed the purloined article. "Thanks."

"I—I must have left it out," he said remorsefully.

"Yes; but it does not matter. It is quite an old one," she protested brightly. She swung the glove to and fro, and, at last, as if absentmindedly, tossed it out of the open window. By the exercise of extraordinary self-restraint, Jack refrained from watching it, and, having given a superfluous knot to the cord, rose and reached for his cap.

"I will wish you good-by, Miss Bramley," he said gravely, "unless there is anything else I can do."

"No; nothing, thank you, Mr. Douglas," she returned. "Good-by, and thank you very much—for for all you have done for—us," unconsciously her hand stole out to him, but suddenly she remembered his assumed character, and she let her hand wander to the ribbon at her neck, as if it wanted pulling straight.

"Good-by," said Jack simply. "I'm sorry you are going."

As he left the room she ran lightly up the stairs, but paused at the top and called to him:

"Oh, Mr. Douglas!"

Jack swung round at the door like a soldier obeying the call of his superior officer, a dog that of its master; ah, yes! a lover that of his mistress.

"Oh, if you come up to Bramley—to see the Hall, you know—please let me know."

"I will," he replied, gratefully.

"Good-by."

SPOHN MEDICAL COMPANY, Goshen, Indiana, U.S.A.

"I hope she hasn't caught cold!" he murmured, as he came to a decision. It sounded like a commonplace aspiration; but it was the true lover's anxiety for the beloved's welfare.

He went home, and to bed, at last; but he could not sleep. In the stillness, the darkness, of the room he was back again in the boat, with Clytie's lifeless form in his arms, her head pressed against his breast, her helplessness appealing to his strength his protection.

And Clytie? She, too, lay awake; and, as she turned on the pillow in feverish unrest, her mind and her heart were busy. She had heard every word he had said in the moment of his terrible anxiety on her account; she knew that he was Sir Wilfred Carton—this man who was masquerading as "Jack Douglas"; and she was trying to analyze the feeling which had been avoked by her knowledge. Her face burned, all her body burned, with the remembrance of his passionate words; but she tried to thrust them from her.

This man, who called himself Jack Douglas, who pretended to be a working man, a fisherman, tinker, tailor, what not, what had he been? By his own account, a washer, a never-do-well, a chamberer of the earth, not one an honest, pure-minded girl should permit herself to love. And yet how strong and brave he was! Never for a moment during that awful time, when death hovered over them, and he showed the least sign of fear, and he was doing good, noble work. And how handsome he was, how noble in form and manner! How tenderly, strongly, he had protected her against the storm, against herself.

"Anyway, you are far too delicate to face such a storm as we had yesterday; in an open boat, too! I should think Douglas would be ashamed of himself."

"It was not his fault," she said again. "And—Mollie, I won't have you abuse him," she added, in a low voice.

"Won't you? I shall abuse him all I know; and that's not a little, as you are aware. There! Tuck yourself up, and try and sleep. You won't get up out of this to-day, my gentle sister."

Mollie made her way to the beach, and finding Jack beside his boat, expressed her opinion with absolute and devastating candor.

"My sister is quite ill, Douglas—I beg your pardon, Mr. Douglas," she said. "Quite unable to get up. Severe cold, mental prostration, low fever, and the rest of it."

"I'm very sorry, Miss Mollie," said Jack humbly, penitently. "All my fault. I ought to have seen that the storm was coming."

"Of course, you ought!" declared Mollie resentfully. "But you men, with your brute strength, never think of us women."

"Sometimes," he pleaded.

"Then why didn't you think of my sister?" she demanded aggressively.

"I did think of her. I mean—" he faltered humbly.

"Not you!" retorted Mollie, cutting in upon him. "You thought you'd get another hand in the boat with you, and you didn't care—"

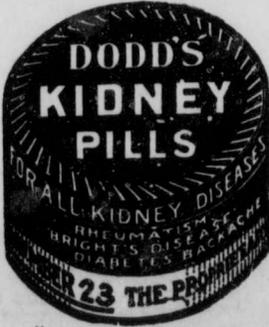

He looked at her with all the heart in his eyes; and Mollie, as she turned away and marched up the beach, hid a smile as she thought of the anguished expression of his very expressive face.

Jack took the boat to Pethwick, and tried to force his attention to the loading of timber and shaping of stone; but his thoughts were fixed on Clytie and her condition. Low fever is a dangerous thing, you see, and dreadfully dangerous when viewed by the eyes of a lover. He longed for a sight of her.

And the next day his longing was gratified. She came down to the beach with Mollie and Lord Stanton. She was looking pale and thoughtful, and Jack was at once overwhelmed by remorse; but then she laughed at something Lord Stanton had said, and her eyes as they met Jack's were calm, placid, unembarrassed; and, with relief, he thanked Heaven that they were so; it was still more evident that she had not heard the passionate words which had sprung from his lips. Indeed, she scarcely glanced at him, and did not address him directly; not even when Lord Stanton said: "Miss Bramley's none the worse for the storm, Douglas."

How to say "No!"

Mark Your Ballot with an X after Each Question under the word "No"

1	Are you in favour of the repeal of the Ontario Temperance Act?	YES	NO
2	Are you in favour of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one-hundredths per cent. alcohol weight measure through Government agencies and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?	YES	NO
3	Are you in favour of the sale of light beer containing not more than two and fifty-one one-hundredths per cent. alcohol weight measure in standard hotels in local municipalities that by a majority vote favour such sale and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?	YES	NO
4	Are you in favour of the sale of spirituous and malt liquors through Government agencies and amendments to The Ontario Temperance Act to permit such sale?	YES	NO

Above is an exact reproduction of the Referendum ballot, showing the correct way to Vote in order to sustain the Ontario Temperance Act as it stands.

Everybody should study the four questions and realize exactly what they mean. Do not be misled by the insidious demand for "light" beer.

The beer of the ballot is 118% stronger than the Ontario Temperance Act now allows, and over five times as strong as the limit allowed for beer defined as non-intoxicating in Great Britain and the United States.

Answer Each Question

1. Unless you vote on every question your ballot is spoiled.
2. You must mark your answer to each question with an "X" only. Anything else would spoil your ballot.
3. Unless a majority vote "No" on question 1 the bars will be restored and the sale of all kinds of intoxicants permitted.
4. Unless a majority vote "No" on questions 2, 3 and 4 the Ontario Temperance Act will become almost worthless.
5. The only SAFE course is to mark your ballot as shown above.
