A Child's Gratitude

Speaking of hospital children, a New York physician, in an account of his work among them, says: "One little fellow, whom I knew very well, had to have some dead bones removed from his arm. He got over it and perhaps thought I had taken a good deal of interest in him, although I was not conscious of showing him extra attention. The morning he was to leave he sent for me. When I reached his bed I bent over him. 'Well, Willie, I said, 'we will miss you when you are gone,' and afterwards, 'did you want to see me specially?' The little fellow reached his hand up and laid it on my shoulder as I bent over him and whispered, 'My mamma will never love me the last about you.' Could any one express gratitude more beautifully?"

ROOSEVELT AND THE TRUSTS.

How to deal with great industrial, commercial and transportation trusts is a question that is commanding widespread attention on both sides of the Atlantic. Far-sighted statesmen are beginning to realize the danger that lurks in unrestricted combinations of capital and are directing much of their best effort toward a satisfactory adjustment of the difficulties involved.

President Roosevelt has taken an advanced position in opposition to the trust evil although his utterances have nothing of a radical flavor. He does not favor anything in the nature of summary action, nor will he countenance any theory which involves the immediate revolutionizing of existing industrial conditions.

Viewed in the abstract, the trust represents a threat against the constitutional liberties of the people and a possible menace to government itself. When one man by virtue of property control holds within the hollow of his hand the destinies of a million or more people—and that is the position occupied at the present time by Morgan, the king of trust builders—it certainly is time to consider the desirability of establishing limitations.

The tremendous industrial and commercial development that has taken place in the United States during the past quarter of a century, by which Morgan has been made a possibility, may be attributed to three primary causes. First, the existence of unlimited and invaluable natural resources. Second, the application of the amount of labor required for their development. And third, the investment of capital—the initial force necessary to set the engine of labor in motion.

It is obvious, therefore, that labor and capital alike have been necessary each as the complement of the other and had either one been lacking, the marvellous growth of the country would have been a practical impossibility. The question, therefore, arises and it may be said will never be downed until satisfactorily answered, "In what manner is a satisfactory distribution of the products of capital and labor's combined efforts to be made?"

It may be accepted that the adjustment of the trust evil has become a part and parcel of Roosevelt's policy, and before the expiration of his term substantial progress in that direction may reasonably be anticipated.

People who are permanently settled in the Koyukuk country are satisfied with the outlook for that district and feel the utmost confidence in its future. The sections of the country thus far prospected have given abundant evidence of gold-bearing veins, and there are immense stretches where a pick and shovel as yet have never been used.

The determination of the government to send an expert to other mining communities for the purpose of investigating methods of conducting hydraulic operations on a large scale is to be heartily commended. There is no disagreement in this territory upon the fact that abundant room for successful hydraulic operations is offered just as soon as the proper methods have been devised.

Clarke is lacking in every essential desirable in the man who is to be charged with the important duty of representing this territory on the floor of the house of commons. He is long on abuse when surrounded by a clique of his immediate admirers but outside of that particular sphere he possesses none of the required qualifications.

Clarke's star has been on the wane ever since the convention which nominated him adjourned. There was not a man in the whole list of delegates who did not know when the thing was over that it had been jobbed from start to finish.

The Yukon territory now ranks with other provinces of the Dominion of Canada in that it possesses an appellate court, from whose decisions appeals will be taken direct to the supreme court of Canada. Thus another advance has been made along the line of progress.

The News' support of Clarke has become so extremely wishy-washy that a very grave suspicion has arisen in the Clarke camp that the evening dopper is liable to flop again at any moment. Should that very probable event take place it will merely be in keeping with the News' long established record.

Clarke will not poll one vote out of ten east south of Indian river and if he gets two out of ten votes on this side he will do better than some of his warmest supporters now believe will be the case.

A man who would abuse decent, respectable citizens in the way that Clarke has abused Messrs. Roediger and Beddoe ought not to be elected dog catcher, let alone being sent to parliament.

MUCH LIKE OTHER MEN

The Shah Upsets Popular Notions

Does Not Bedeck Himself With Diamonds and Has a Good Time.

London, Sept. 6.—It was worth getting the shah over from the continent to put right the general idea of him in this country. There was a popular notion that the "Well of Science" and "Shadow of God," to give Muzaffar-ed-Din two of the modest little titles to which he lays claim, made a practice of going around with a goodly portion of his famous collection of diamonds and other precious stones bespangling his person, that he disdained "civilized" food in favor of the dishes got up by his own cook, and then was in such a rampant fear of being poisoned that he insisted on the chef's tasting every dish.

But now Londoners know that the present occupant of the throne of Cyrus, Darius and Xerxes is a quiet old gentleman who does not care especially about being called King of Kings, of Footpath of Heaven, and the chief feature of whose everyday garb is a gray frockcoat with a red rose in the buttonhole. While here he hasn't even worn the big diamond that was supposedly never absent from the front of his equally renowned Aetna-coking cap.

Clarke is lacking in every essential desirable in the man who is to be charged with the important duty of representing this territory on the floor of the house of commons. He is long on abuse when surrounded by a clique of his immediate admirers but outside of that particular sphere he possesses none of the required qualifications.

Clarke's star has been on the wane ever since the convention which nominated him adjourned. There was not a man in the whole list of delegates who did not know when the thing was over that it had been jobbed from start to finish. The methods pursued were distinctively of a Tammany nature and savored of bossism in every stage of the proceedings.

The Yukon territory now ranks with other provinces of the Dominion of Canada in that it possesses an appellate court, from whose decisions appeals will be taken direct to the supreme court of Canada. Thus another advance has been made along the line of progress.

The shah has an eye for girls, though not as hypnotic an optician as that which his frisky father possessed. The present ruler of Persia drags out a lonely existence with only six wives to keep him company, whereas his sire, Nasr-ed-Din, gathered a little family circle of 1,720 blushing beauties around him.

The shah had a great time posing for amateur photographers while on the continent. At Lucerne he stood still in order that a pretty American girl might "take" him successfully, but in London he had the greater liberty of being biographed while at the reception given in his honor at the Persian embassy.

that of shopping. The word had been passed around among tradesmen that his majesty would be prepared to look at samples while at the embassy, and the crowd of them that had gathered was a sight to see. The shah went from start to finish, however, and when anything tickled his fancy it was "Send it round to Marlborough house," and that settled it.

IN KING'S OLD HOME. Marlborough house is the royal dwelling at which the shah and his suite are being put up while in London. It was King Edward's home, as Prince of Wales, and was almost completely redecorated for the reception of its late illustrious inhabitant.

As yet no instance has come to light of the shah's having bestowed a precious stone on a London street urchin. One day, however, while walking in the public gardens at Contreville, a bright little girl timidly came up and offered him a flower, whereupon Muzaffar-ed-Din took a handsome diamond from a pouch in his pocket and tendered it in return. Once he gave a continental dentist $5,000 because he had so skillfully pulled a tooth which caused his patient much pain.

MACHINERY HAS ARRIVED

Williams' Concession to be Operated

Next Season on Extensive Scale. Ponderous Boilers and Miles of Pipe.

A quantity of the machinery that is intended for use on the A. D. Williams concession on Hunker creek has arrived and the balance will be here within the next week or ten days. Steam for the plant will be furnished by two mammoth boilers, one of 50 horsepower and the other 60 horsepower. Of hydraulic pipe there will be over 5000 feet employed, some of it 8-inch and the balance 8-inch.

One of the shah's characteristics, however, was truthfully described. He does love to see things and do things, and the court officials who have been planning his London excursions have been kept on the jump to provide entertainment for him. They haven't been able to pin the ruler of Persia down to the ordinary royal visitors' rather stupid round of historical buildings, museums and hospitals.

The company which has been formed to work the Williams concession has as yet not been incorporated but probably will be this winter and will doubtless be known as the Detroit Mining Company or a title somewhat similar as there are a number of Detroit capitalists interested in the venture. The concession has long been known to be of considerable value but not until the present time have steps been taken to prove its worth upon such an extensive scale.

Compulsory Arbitration.

London, Sept. 1.—The 35th Trades Union Congress commenced a week's session in London today. Upwards of 500 delegates, representing a million and a quarter workers, were present. They include many women delegates. One of the principal resolutions which will be submitted demands legislation creating a supreme court of arbitration, with compulsory power to settle disputes between employers and employees.

IMPERIAL CAPITAL

Experiences Feeling of Uneasiness

Affairs in South Africa Now Are Not Altogether Satisfactory.

London, Sept. 1.—Generals Botha, Dewet and Delarey returned to London yesterday morning from the continent. The fact that they were accompanied by Mr. Fischer is regarded as proof that the famous generals hold the same views as the delegates with regard to the situation in South Africa.

CAPE POLITICS.

There is an increasing feeling of uneasiness in Britain over the course of events in Cape Colony, where Sir John Gordon Sprigg has become a puppet, managed by Messrs. Merriman and Sauer, and dependent upon the caprices and prejudices of the Bond ministry, which has deserted its own loyalist followers and flung itself into the arms of the Dutch malcontents, after making a bargain with them by which the general-indeed bill will be carried at the high cost of the appointment of a colonial commission for investigating the finances, and sentences imposed by the military courts.

It is predicted that Mr. Chamberlain will reverse his policy in October and suspend constitutional government in Cape Colony when there is clear evidence that the leaders of the Bond are reviving racial passion and undermining British interests. There is also a theory that he is allowing affairs to take their course in Cape Colony in order to have free scope for enlarging the territories in Natal at the expense of the Transvaal, and handing over to it a portion of the Portuguese possessions in East Africa, which are to be purchased and divided with Germany.

TRADE UNION DEMONSTRATION

The trade union demonstration in Hyde Park yesterday, to protest against the Taff Vale Railway decision, was marred to some extent by rainy weather. The almost invariable theme of the speakers on the several platforms was the necessity for direct representation of labor in parliament. It was confidently predicted that with an adequate number of labor members in the house of commons not only would an act be passed freeing trade unions from the trammels of the Taff Vale Railway decision, but other legislation of real effect in elevating and improving the condition of the English working classes would be enacted.

LABOR CONGRESS THIS WEEK.

The Trades Union Congress, which meets in London this week for the first time in 21 years, promises to be a political rather than a labor parliament. There will be a fight at the outset between Woods and Tillett over the secretaryship, and been discussions of compulsory arbitration, the education bill, the payment of salaries to members of parliament and old age pensions. The latest official statistics are not favorable as to the conditions of labor in the United Kingdom. A decline all around in wages is revealed in the figures for 1901 and for the last six months, and there has been a large increase in the number of the unemployed.

MR. MOSLEY'S COMMISSION.

These facts lend importance to the commission of inquiry organized by Mr. Alfred Mosley, the rich South African diamond merchant, for a non-political examination of the interests and methods of labor in the United States. The services of 21 of the most practical and experienced representatives of British trade unionism will be secured for this unique inquiry, and each will make up an individual report upon his observations and reflections while in America. This commission outranks in importance the Trades Union Congress itself, at which Messrs. Blackmore and Delan will represent the American Federation of Labor.

phase. The Weardale Steel Company has stopped and the South Durham Steel & Iron Company, which controls about half the output of ship plates in the north of England, is obliged to close one of its works.

During the present week the old town of Preston in Lancashire celebrates its guild merchant, which is an unique survival of the middle ages. Ever since 1329 there have been guild celebrations in Preston, and since 1542 they have been held at regular intervals of twenty years. The guild merchant has obviously to do with admission to the freedom of the town, guild being merely a corrupt spelling of gold, which means money payment. It is curious that these celebrations were carried on even when the English civil war was breaking out, for in 1842 a proclamation, exhorting the burghesses to repair to the town for the guild, was read in the presence of royalists and parliamentarians.

George Washington had barely fallen into a dose when his trusty aid awakened him. "Pardon, excellency," said the brave and watchful soldier, "but you have already slept here three and one-fourth minutes."

Fortwith they trooked down the road, for the great man was determined to leave to his countrymen the largest possible number of roofs under which he had slept—New York Sun.

To Visit America

London, Sept. 6.—Having been in London now for over three years, having made a considerable English reputation and scored one big success Gertrude Elliott is planning to revisit her own country to show her old friends how much she has improved, and convince them that she has weightier claims to esteem than that of being Maxine Elliott's younger sister.

"Next year," Miss Elliott writes me, "I hope to go to America." The "I" refers to Forbes Robertson, the conscientious and brilliant English actor, who now has the honor of being Gertrude Elliott's husband, and whose leading woman she is.

Rumor, however, says that the new piece is another by the author of "An American Citizen," written in a similar vein, and it is to be wished that the last is true, for Mrs. Ryley's recent French farce, "The Grass Widow," was a bad business.

At the present time there are no less than nine gentlemen mentioned who have as much as admitted their willingness to lay aside the pick and shovel for a portion of the time in a year in order to assist in legislating for the benefit of the territory at large.

Tempest in a Teacup

London, Sept. 6.—A tempest in a teacup has been raised at Hastings by a report that M. P. Grace, brother of former Mayor Grace of New York, who recently leased Battle Abbey, near the site of the battle of historic edifice. It was said that admission would be granted only one day each week, and upon the payment of 12 cents, the money to be devoted to the aid of local charities, instead of allowing people to visit the Abbey every day as formerly.

Mr. Grace informs the Associated Press that no change whatever will be made. When the Duchess of Cleveland, to whom the Abbey formerly belonged, resided on the estate the public was only admitted on Tuesday, and this rule will be continued.

Referring to other rumors that he was desecrating the interior of the building, Mr. Grace said: "It is all rot. Everything remains as it is. All the ancient features of the building, inside and out, will be preserved. We are only putting in electric lights and baths. There was not a bath in the whole place."

Resignation Asked for.

New York, Sept. 6.—There has been much talk concerning the retirement of the Marquis de Montebello from the position of ambassador to Russia, cables the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Herald.

At a gala performance at the Petrol of the Tsar expressed his sincere regret, but the Marquis de Montebello asked the emperor not to use his influence to prevent the change.

The ambassador, in explanation of his attitude, is quoted as having said: "I was asked to resign by the French government, and I refused, stating that the ties formed here and the promises I had made to remain to certain people precluded my resignation. I have not meddled at any time in my long diplomatic life with international politics."

"It is stated that I am not in accord with my government. That may be, but I am not showing it to the world by my resigning."

The Queen's Indian Dress

Simla, Sept. 1.—Queen Alexandra, in an autograph letter to Lady Curzon, wife of the viceroy of India, says: "The Indian coronation robes which you so kindly designed are perfect, and made the most brilliant effect. I am so proud of wearing the Indian dress on this great occasion. I hope you will make this known in India."

PROBABLE CANDIDATES

Being Groomed for the Election

To Seats on the Yukon Council Names of Those With Political Aspirations.

Not alone in the Dominion election is the interest of the local politicians being engrossed to the total exclusion of all else. There is to be another election besides that of a member of parliament within the next ninety days and while the honor of securing a seat among the five elective members to the Yukon council is not quite as great as that of a berth in the house of commons, still the salary is about the same and one does not have to leave home and travel several thousand miles over a bleak and desolate trail for at least part of the way in order to serve his dear constituents.

At the present time there are no less than nine gentlemen mentioned who have as much as admitted their willingness to lay aside the pick and shovel for a portion of the time in a year in order to assist in legislating for the benefit of the territory at large.

From the Whitehorse district no intimation has been received that would indicate that they know an election is to take place, though the electors in that section will doubtless be awakened to a realization of the fact within the next month or so.

King Visits Carnegie

London, Sept. 6.—King Edward visited Andrew Carnegie and Mrs. Carnegie this afternoon. King Edward rode in a motor car to Dorncock, Sutherlandshire, Scotland, the Marquis of Severs, the Portuguese minister to Great Britain, and Austen Chamberlain, the postmaster general. His majesty proceeded from Golspie by way of Skibo castle, where he visited the Carnegies; and thence rode to Dorncock station. The king looked particularly well. Yesterday the Carnegie house party was invited to tea at Dunrobin castle, to meet King Edward and Queen Alexandra. The party consisted of United States Ambassador Choate and Mrs. Choate, and Mr. and Mrs. James Brice, Sir Walter and Lady Foster and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Whitfield and others.

At today's visit to Skibo castle King Edward's suite took tea with the Carnegies and drove through the grounds, admiring gardens and grounds. "God Save the King" was played on the organ, and the pipes repeated it as his majesty drove off. King Edward expressed surprise and delight at the attractions of Skibo castle.

A STRANGE CASE OF ART AND CRAFT.

By GEO. SMYVILLE FENN.

(Concluded from Wednesday's issue.)

The maids said that Mrs. Dunby was in one of her tantrums next morning, and, in truth, that lady was not in an amiable state of mind. It was quite natural that Mr. Berry, the butler, had not returned from Brighton overnight, for it had been settled that he should pass four-and-twenty hours at the seaside, but that Rimmer and Small, upon whom she looked with favor, should have taken advantage of her kindness and, in the absence of master and fellow-servant, stopped out all night too, was unpardonable, and she said so in the hearing of the maids; and, in addition, uttered threats about reporting their conduct to Mr. Ehrenberg on his return.

"Which she just won't," said one of the housemaids; "but I fear in their ears when they do come back is nothing to it."

"My word, yes!" said another. "There will be a shindy!"

"The said 'shindy' occurred much sooner than the maids anticipated, for they had hardly spoken before there was a violent ringing of a bell. 'What bell's that?' said one.

"Picture gallery," said the cook, who never answered bells, but had a very good ear for music. "You gells are leaving your brushes and brooms there after sweeping up yesterday when the men went away."

"I didn't," said one housemaid. "And I'll swear I didn't," said the other.

"Jangle went the bell again, more violently than before. 'Why don't you answer the bell, Mary?' said the first speaker. 'Well, I'm sure, Sarah!' replied the other, tartly. 'It's not my place to answer the picture gallery bells. Where are the footmen?'"

"Jangle went the tinninabulation again, and cook spoke wistfully. 'She's in a regular fustian, my dears, and I'd go up together and share it, if I was you. There, don't stand haggling.'"

"Cook had great influence with her fellow-servants, and her advice prevailed, the two housemaids entering by the open picture gallery door just as Mrs. Dunby had placed her hand upon the bell handle with the intention of keeping it there till the summons was answered.

"Oh, there you are at last!" cried the irate housekeeper. "Now, then, if you please, have the goodness to explain that."

She stood in a tragedy-queen attitude, pointing at a holland covered chiffonier, upon which stood a port wine bottle and a tumbler, the first empty and displaying its patch of whitewash, and beside it, impaled upon a pocket corkscrew, a disintegrated looking, sodden cork, the glass holding still about a tea-spoonful of port-wine crust, showing that the bottle had been drained.

"The maids stared at the bottle and glass and then back at the housekeeper, before turning questioning eyes one upon the other. 'Well, why don't you speak?' cried their questioner.

"I dunno what you mean, ma'am," cried Mary. "And I'm sure I don't neither," said Sarah. "No lies, if you please," cried the housekeeper, angrily. "If you'll take my advice you'll be open and confess."

"Confess!" said Mary. "I've nothing to confess."

shriek of laughter and rushed out of the room, while the housekeeper's face became of the color of fresh putty.

"Anything the matter, Mrs. Dunby?" said the cook. "The matter? Oh!" cried the housekeeper. "Few words, but intense of the intensest, and she stalked into the hall, to find the foreman from Hoffmann Freres waiting, hat in hand, just inside the door.

"Good morning, mattam," he said, with a respectful bow. "I am sorry to trouble you, but there is a great mistake."

"I subpose, mattam, it was de Herr Ehrenberg?"

"My master?"

"Yes, mattam. If you would read dot de telegram."

"He placed the message in her hands, and she read— 'Hoffmann Freres—Despatch London. A mistake. The three cases not to be taken to my London house, but sent by S.W.R. to The Willows, Dalemond-on-Thames.'"

"Ha!" said the housekeeper, coldly. "But the cases are here." "Yes, mattam."

"Then what do you propose to do?" "What dis de telegram say, mattam?" "Take them to Mr. Ehrenberg's country seat."

"No, mattam. I haf brought de van and de case, and we shall dake af de things to Nine Elms."

Mrs. Dunby looked very cold and stern, but her heart seemed to be on fire and burning with the unjust injuries she had received, as she read the telegram over again.

"Very well," she said coldly, "I suppose it is all right. Make haste, please, for I am busy."

"I dank you, mattam," said the foreman; and he went slowly to the door, which was opened for him, to sign to the waiting men with the van, who immediately began to open the back of the great, lumbering vehicle and draw out the empty case.

"I am very sorry to trouble you all over again, mattam," said the foreman, politely. "Never mind," replied the housekeeper coldly, and then she stood guard as in duty bound, while the business of the previous day was reversed. She saw the heavy packages removed and the piano restored to its outer case, and neither of the statues could have been so stony as the aspect of Mrs. Dunby and her distance of manner towards the foreman, while when the two housemaids passed through the long gallery twice over—casually, of course—there was a flash from the housekeeper's usual.

ly dull eyes that was absolutely withering.

The moving took some time, for the men were very deliberate in their motions, and their foreman punctilious in the extreme over the relaying of the rolled-back carpet, and the filling up and signing of a printed form of receipt.

But at last all was done, the cases were in the van, locked up, the men in their seats upon the lowered tail-board, and the foreman by the driver, ready to raise his hat to the housekeeper as the party were driven away.

"Ha!" said Mrs. Dunby just then, with a snort, as she caught sight of two tall, picked footmen out of liveries coming down the side of the square. "There's going to be something said about this."

Prophetic words. Ten minutes later Rimmer's ears tingled, and Small, in despite of his fit, felt worthy of his name.

"Old cat!" he said to his fellow servant, later on. "I thought we'd pretty well got the length of her foot. Think she'll tell the governor when he comes back?"

"You bet!" was the surly reply. "The week which followed was not pleasant for anybody, even Mr. Berry, the butler, did not seem benefited by his run-down to Brighton, and the general consensus of opinion in the servants' hall was that matters would be made warm when 'mattam' returned.

"They were, and much sooner than was anticipated. For three days after there was a surprise—Ehrenberg came home in a cab, no notice having been sent on that the carriage might meet him and his lady; and consequently no preparations had been made. The shutters were still closed, and the furniture remained packed in holland.

"Been awful," whispered Mrs. Ehrenberg's maid hastily to the housekeeper. "Nothing the matter, but she's pretended that she was getting worse, and he was obliged to bring her home."

"There was nothing for it but for all the staff to set to work to make the place presentable for the travellers, and as soon as Ehrenberg finished the scratch dinner and was sitting over his wine alone he sent for the housekeeper.

"Well, Dunby," he said, "is everything right?" "Stop!" cried the great collector, excitedly. "Don't tell me there has been a burglary amongst my gems?"

"Oh, dear! no, sir. Everything in the collection is all right. I was going to allude to the conduct of the servants during your absence."

"Is that all?" said Ehrenberg, calmly.

"Yes, sir, but it's very serious, sir, and I feel it my duty to speak."

"Go on, then, and get it over. You know I don't like to be bothered about these petty domestic troubles."

"Yes, sir, but this is very serious. I came down one morning, sir, to find that two of the women had been having visitors in the night, and there were traces of their carousing in the picture gallery."

"What traces?" said Ehrenberg, glaring. "An empty port wine bottle, sir, and glass."

"In my gallery?"

"Yes, sir."

"Confound their insolence! That port wine? In the night? Where were the men? Were they in it?"

"No, sir, I am grieved to say that they had taken advantage of your absence and were out all night."

"Discharge the lot, a fresh set of domestics, Mrs. Dunby. With such a collection of art treasures as mine I must have servants that I can trust."

"Yes, sir, I am sorry to complain, but the maids were most insolent to me."

"Then speak out when you are applied to for their characters."

"Yes, sir."

"That's all, then?"

"Yes, sir, I don't think that I have anything else to say."

"Then be off and let me finish my wine in peace, for I've had precious little since I've been away."

"I'm very sorry, sir. My mistress then, has been so ill?"

"Rubbish! There, that will do."

"Oh, there is one thing, sir. The three great cases arrived from Vienna."

"Yes, sir, by Hoffmann Freres, and I had them placed in the picture gallery."

"Three great cases!" mused Ehrenberg. "And you had them placed in the gallery?"

"Yes, sir, but the men came with your telegram saying that it was a mistake."

"Ah, of course!" cried Ehrenberg. "I left that there was nothing to come here."

"Exactly, sir, and they took them away next day."

"Took them away next day?" said the collector, changing color. "My telegram? Good heavens, woman! I sent no telegram. Where is it?"

"Here, sir," said the housekeeper, trembling, and she produced the delivery note, the receipt for the packages, and the telegram, all neatly pinned together.

Ehrenberg glanced at them and thumped his fist on the table. "A conspiracy!" he roared. "Woman, do you mean to tell me you received these great cases and had them placed in the picture gallery?"

"Yes, sir."

"And they were fetched next day?"

"Yes, sir."

"What were they?"

"Statues, sir, in two cases, and a piano in the other."

"How do you know?"

"They opened the case and took the piano out."

"A planner, Sammy!" groaned Ehrenberg, involuntarily quoting old Weller's words to his son. "Oh, Oh, woman, woman, you've ruined me!"

"He upset his wine and ran out into the hall, bounded up the short flight of stairs, threw open the gallery door, and switched on the electric lights, to reveal a state of peace within, for the holland draperies met his eyes from end to end, and as the trembling housekeeper tottered in he dropped down upon a covered settee and began to mop his streaming forehead.

"A false alarm, Dunby," he said, huskily. "I was afraid that I thought—I don't understand—yes, I do!" he roared, springing up and rushing to the nearest portion of the wall, to seize and whisk aside the hanging holland covering of a picture.

"I look at it. I know it!" he cried, peering, as an empty massive gilt frame met his eyes. "My Valasquez—worth thousands!"

He went to the next drapery and dragged it aside. "That heavenly Rubens!" he cried, and rushed on. "My Guido!" he groaned. "That glorious Vandvake!"
