lit the gas. "But it's the last time, thank God!"

The room was not really bad—a bed in the corner, a washstand, a wardrobe, here and there pictures on the walls, and a table by the window, rather rickety, on which lay a heap of manuscript—a half-finished story.

"I will burn that before I go to bed to-night," said Eva, as she caught sight of it.

Then she looked at her hat and cloak, drew the only easy chair under the gas jet and sat down. Fingering the letter, she did not open it at once. Now that happiness stretched in front of her it was pleasant to linger on the confines of misery, to look back on the life she was to leave.

"It is not every one," said Eva reflectively, "who can make experiments in life—without expense."

Eva Norrington had been the pride of the provincial town which gave her birth. At the high school no girl could stand against her. Her former governess, who now and then asked her favorite pupils to tea, even said she might be a head mistress one day. Ty

Eva, this seemed absurd. But when at the age of twenty she gained a guinea prize for a story in a weekly paper, she began to think that at least she might be a great novelist. At any rate she felt sure that somewhere ahead of her stretched a career, and as her twenty-first birthday approached she announced to her startled parents her intention of going to London in search of it. Thereupon ensued a series of domestic scenes, such as have been common of late in the homes of England, wherein the parents play the part of the apprehensive hen, the daughter that of the adventurous duckling. The duckling invariably gains its point, and so it was with Eva Norrington. Having refused argument and resisted persuasion, she at last secured her mother's consent to her departure. The townspeople knew not whether to admire or disapprove. But they had read in novels of young ladies who took their lives and latchkeys into their own hands, became famous and married respectively after all. So during the weeks of preparation for her campaign Eva became something of a figure in local society, and more than one dinner party was given in her honor as well as plentiful advice as to the necessary precautions against London gulls, and many receipts for guarding against the colds induced by the fogs that infest the metropolis.

Eva was almost happy, for she had the hopefulness of youth and beauty and all the exhilaration of taking her life into her hands and fashioning it as she would, with none to raise objection to the process. She would have been quite happy but for Allan Craig, who when he heard that Eva was bent on going to London to make a name for herself, promptly offered her his own as a substitute. It was a good enough name, and at the foot of a check it was generally respected, as Allan Craig had lately stepped into his father's business of estate agent and was prospering. Eva was disturbed, but she turned not aside from her project. She had mapped out her life and Allan Craig was not included in the scheme.

As she sat fingering the letter in her bed sitting room she went over the parting scene in her mind. The details of it would only increase the delight of the letter, for Eva had learned during the last year that happiness is so rare that it deserves to be rolled on the tongue and not swallowed in haste. It was at a dance on the night before her departure—her last dance, so she thought, before she started life in earnest. They were sitting out a dance together, for Eva was not disposed to think unkindly of Allan, though she might resent his intrusion into her scheme of life. She remembered how there had been silence between them for some moments, how Allan had leaned his elbows on his knees, and dug the heel of his dancing shoe into the carpet.

"And are you quite determined to—leave us?" said Allan.

"Of course," said Eva. "My boxes are all packed."

"Full of manuscript novels and things?"

"One novel and several stories."

"I cannot understand why you want to go when—"

"I want to—well—to live a larger life."

"You mean you want to live in a bigger place?"

"Well—not exactly. I don't think you quite understand."

"I quite understand that there is not scope enough for you here and that I am a selfish brute for trying to keep you from your ambition. Look here, Eva, can you honestly say that you don't love me a little bit?"

Allan had risen and was standing over her. Eva looked up at him. She could see him standing there now—big, comely, with something in his eyes that thrilled her, half with fear and half with pleasure. She rose and faced him.

"I shall be very sorry to leave you—very sorry."

"Then why—?"

"Can't you see, Allan? I know I have it in me to do good work, and I must be where good work is wanted. Here I am hampered. In London—"

"You may fail," said Allan, with a note of hope in his voice.

"I shall succeed. I know I shall."

"Will you write to me?"

Eva hesitated. She was half inclined to give in to that extent. Allan had mistaken her hesitation.

"No," he said. "There shall be no selfishness in my love for you. I will wait a year from to-night, and then if London is—no go, you know, there will always be me. You can't expect me to pray for your success, can you?"

Eva, placed on her motto, looked him in the face.

"I am bound to succeed," she said, and turned to go. The walls had ceased in the room beyond and a rustle of skirts and a ripple of tongues had taken its place.

"Eva—once—the last time perhaps."

She turned again, laughing.

"Quick!" she said. "Some one will come."

A woman may forget many things, but no woman ever forgets the first time a lover's arm was around her waist and a lover's lips upon her own. And as Eva sat in the corner of a third class carriage in the London train next morning, looking forward to the career before her, the remembrance of the support of Allan's arm persisted in obtruding itself. Having got what she had wanted, she already began to doubt if she wanted what she had got, for a career, after all, is rather a lonesome sort of thing.

Such small success as may come to the inexperienced girl upon her first excursion into literature came to Eva. She lived sparingly, worked hard and never made the mistake of refusing invitations on the ground of work. She staid up a little later or got up a little earlier instead. A weekly column on "Health and Beauty," placed at her disposal by the youthful editor of a new woman's paper, who had met her at the Writers' Club and thought her pretty, paid her weekly bill at the boarding house. Her stories found frequent acceptance and occasional welcome in the minor periodicals, and a happy meeting with an editor at a dinner party paved the way to her appearance in a widely read magazine. By the end of the year Eva Norrington had got so far toward the realization of her ambition that when people heard her name mentioned they wrinkled their brows and tried to remember where they had heard it before. At home, of course, her fame was great. The papers in which she wrote circulated freely in the town, her stories were discussed at afternoon teas, and townsfolk were glad to think that they participated to some extent in the literary movement of the century.

All this time Eva was horribly lonely. She knew plenty of people and liked them. They were kind to her, some of them because they liked her for herself, other because they saw that she was marked for ultimate success. Having advanced a certain distance along the road she had longed to travel she could judge better whether it would lead her. It would lead her to a place in the newspaper paragraphs, to a place on the bookstalls, to a place in the photographers' windows, and to a place at Baywater or South Kensington. This then, must be the end of the struggle and the turmoil of the fight. And how she hated the fight! A fight wherein victory would bring her no nearer the actualities of life, for she had come to learn in the year's struggle that our social system by no means places women on an equality with men, and that whereas men can buy the fruit of the tree of knowledge of good and evil by the bottle, women must buy the tree outright, and pay cash. It was terribly unfair. And the most unfair thing about the whole business was that, while success was almost within her grasp, success was not what she wanted. There is no fun in living your own life when that is precisely the life you do not want to lead.

It was not as though Allan Craig had never kissed Eva Norrington.

She opened the letter, cutting the envelope with her nail scissors, for some distinction must be made between your first love letter and your boot maker's bill. She felt as one who has held in his breath to feel what suffices. The letter was long. Eva read quickly at first, then slowly, knitting her brows as she turned the pages and came at last to the signature, "Ever your friend, Allan Craig."

The letter lay for some minutes in Eva's lap, while she looked vaguely round her room.

"He is afraid of spoiling my career—my success has put an insuperable barrier between us," she murmured. The phrases of the letter had burned themselves into her brain. "Oh, Allan! I wish I could tell you—or do you want to hear?"

When the dinner bell rang an hour afterward, Eva rose wearily from her writing table, where she had been toiling over her half-finished manuscript. She had not burned it.

Five years passed before she saw Allan Craig again, and then the meeting was unexpected at the exit of the theatre whither Eva had gone to see the hundredth performance of her play. Allan was obviously proud of knowing her, and introduced his wife, to whom she gave graceful recognition. It was raining, and Allan offered to see Eva to a cab. They stood for a moment on the steps to the entrance.

"Yes," said Allan in answer to Eva's polite question, "all is going well. We have a little daughter—Eva—my wife's name, curiously enough. Her stock by the hansom as she entered, guarding her dress from the wheel. As she turned to give the address he said:

"I ought to congratulate you on your success. It is very sweet to me. You know—you owe it all to me. Are you grateful?"

"Yes. I owe it to you," she said, leaning forward as the apron closed upon her, and the attendant constabulary grew impatient. "Come and see me—Tuesdays."

"I can't think why I should be so silly," said Eva to herself as she stuffed her handkerchief back into her pocket and felt for her latchkey, when the cab drew up before the hall door of her flat in Kensington—London Black and White.

FAVORITES FOR LONG YEARS.

For long years Diamond Dyes have been the favorite family dyes in the Dominion of Canada; and although imitation package dyes have been plentifully offered for sale, their great inferiority to the "Diamond" in strength, fastness, beauty of color and brilliancy was known to the great majority of women, and they were contented and avoided by all who valued good and bright colors. No sensible woman can afford to risk her goods with poor dyes when the "Diamond" are admittedly the world's best.

A most important point to remember is that the Diamond Dyes cost no more than the crude and common dyes sold by some dealers for the sake of large profits. Ask your dealer for the "Diamond"; if he values your trade he will be in a position to supply you.

On Keeping Your Own Counsel.

It is an old saying among schoolboys and college men that the fellow who keeps his mouth shut is always the big man; that he who deliberately says little quickly wins for himself the name for wisdom. Such statements are quite as true in the outer world to a certain degree as they are in college and school. The pith of the matter is that if in any way you arrive at a position of importance, the less you talk to every one the more credit you receive for care, for thoughtfulness, for sound well-considered opinions. There is nothing which urges a boy to have no opinions or to never express them; and in fact this "wise silence" at school and college as often, perhaps, covers up an empty mind as it does the wisdom of Solomon. There is, however, a good rule to follow, which may be given briefly, to the effect that it is well to say little until you have thoroughly made up your mind, and then not hesitate in your statements. The temptation of the average man is to express some opinion at once; but if that is changed later, the full force of the final opinion is lost.—Harper's Round Table.

She Was Prepared.

A certain minister always felt it his duty to give to each young couple a little serious advice before he performed the marriage ceremony, and for this purpose he usually took them aside, one at a time, and talked very soberly to each of them regarding the great importance of the step they were to take, and the new responsibilities they were to assume. One day he talked in his most earnest manner for several minutes to a young woman who had come to be married to a bright looking young man.

"And now," he said, in closing, "I hope you will fully realize the extreme importance of the step you are taking and that you are prepared for it."

"Prepared," she said, innocently. "Well, if I ain't prepared I don't know who is. I've got four common quilts and two nice ones, and four brandnew feather beds, ten sheets and twelve pairs of pillow slips, four all linen table cloths, a dozen spoons and a good six-quart tea kettle. If I ain't prepared no girl in this country ever was."

It is a fortunate day for a man when he first discovers the value of Ayer's Sarsaparilla as a blood-purifier. With this medicine, he knows he has found a remedy upon which he may rely, and that his life long malady is at last conquered. Has cured others, will cure you.

Fifty Years Ago.

President Polk in the White House chair; Willie in Lowell was Doctor Ayer; both were busy for human weal. One to govern and one to heal. And, as a president's power of will sometimes depends on a liver-pill; Mr. Polk took Ayer's Pills I trow For his liver, 50 years ago.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills

were designed to supply a model purgative to people who had so long injured themselves with griping medicines. Being carefully prepared and their ingredients adjusted to the exact necessities of the bowels and liver, their popularity was instantaneous. That this popularity has been maintained is well marked in the medal awarded these pills at the World's Fair 1893.

A number of the lay evangelists of the Baptist church have instituted a mission in town. The old shop opposite Mr. R. E. Harris' residence, is utilized as the place of meeting. Religious services are held there on Sunday, and on several evenings of the week night school is held, at which rudimentary knowledge is imparted to those who attend, by capable teachers. This is a grand work, and we feel sure that much good will result from the painstaking efforts of those having the mission in charge.

Anniversary visitors should buy their Shirts, Collars, Cuffs, Ties and everything in the line of men's wearing apparel at Borden's Outfitting Store. Newest assortment in town.

It was not a large audience that greeted Miss Sabourin on the occasion of her organ recital last Friday evening—not nearly so large as the high quality of the entertainment deserved. It was a most delightful concert, and all present were much pleased. Miss Sabourin's selection were all rendered in fine style, she receiving a most enthusiastic encore to two of the numbers. Her Siebel's exquisite renderings on the violin delighted all. He is one of the most finished violinists we have ever heard. Miss Barker sang "Ave Maria" very sweetly and was encored. Miss Patrician read James Whitcomb Riley's "Where is Mary Alice Smith?" with fine effect. Miss O'Key's faultlessly rendered piano solo was encored. Mr. Arthur Margeson and Mr. H. B. Gillmore, played the violin, cello and clarinet respectively with taste and expression.

A. W. STEWART, Prop. Wolfville, May 22th.

The People's Forum.

DEAR ACADIAN.—Two remarkable publications have recently been issued from the Canadian press: Dr. Rand's poems and the Acadia Atheneum for May of the present year. The Atheneum is the literary representative of Acadia University and has an editorial staff of seven young ladies and gentlemen. The number under review contains several good contributed articles. The poetical genius, refined taste and the unquestionable intelligence of its editors in manufacturing news, etc., may be illustrated by quoting the following gems: First, poetry: "The melancholy days have come With the Senior and his theses; But we care not if the Senior's dumb So long as we get the six."

Truly the poetic author must have drunk inspiration from Mind Creek or he never could have given rhythm to such an ethereal and dignified effusion to grace a college journal. Second: Genuine Mother Wit. "When Senior came into my room bearing the banner of 1900 one gentleman exclaimed: 'Well that's the only dog of the Freshman class. A miserable Soph. was heard to remark, 'Yes, the rest are pups.' Mark Twain must take off his hat after that. Third: News manufactured to order, that is little less than a libel. 'D. Livingstone Parker, '84, having studied some little time at Hamilton Theological Seminary, is now completing his first year in theology at Rochester.' Now the truth is, Mr. Parker graduated here in the class of '94 instead of '84. He preferred taking his divinity studies in different schools, selecting the best from each. He spent one year at Chicago University, in theology, before he completed his arts course, one year at Colgate, the oldest and most famous Baptist Theological School in America, that during its first fifty years sent out more than one hundred missionaries to foreign lands, and one term at Rochester. He is now pastor of the First Baptist church in Dell Rapids, South Dakota, one of the largest and most prosperous of more than three hundred churches in that western state. He was ordained in January, 1900. Mr. Parker is honored by having his picture, and also that of the beautiful meeting house in which he ministers, posted in the Annual Baptist Year Book of that state.

It is hoped that the next issue of the Atheneum will report of its wickedness, and "Bring forth fruit meet for repentance."

SENSELESS.

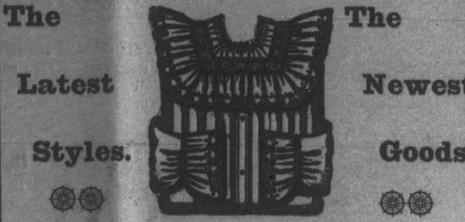

Gaspereau.

EDITOR ACADIAN.—I notice in your paper of last week a communication headed "Gaspereau and Mounts," in which references is made to the small number of Gaspereaus being taken this spring, and attributing their absence to their being "cross about the old officers being allowed to remain in power." The general impression here is that they have been scared away by the new tariff, which appears to me to be much more reasonable. FRED TRADE.

Bishop W. B. Arnett

SWAYS AUDIENCES WITH HIS MASTERLY ELOQUENCE.

He Writes a Letter of More Than Usual Interest to Suffering Humanity.

At Wilberforce, Ohio, three miles north of Xenia and near Dayton and Springfield, is located Wilberforce University and Payne Theological Seminary.

These two institutions of learning have educated many ministers and teachers.

In this somewhat noted educational centre, resides Bishop Benjamin W. Arnett, D. D., a divine who is of especial prominence because of his thrilling eloquence with which he has swayed many audiences.

Among the high officials of the church, no one is more distinguished than he.

BISHOP W. B. ARNETT.

Before being elected bishop he was a leading minister in his church and also a very prominent Republican. He represented his county in the Ohio Legislature for several years.

Having given this sketch of the bishop, the following testimonial from him will be found very interesting reading and fully explains itself.

To whom it may concern:

"In April, 1894, while on my way home from Philadelphia I caught a very severe cold, which soon developed into rheumatism. It was impossible for me to rest by day or sleep by night. About the first of June I was forced to take to my bed, where I remained for some time. When I was able to get up, I could only get about by the use of crutches.

The fall came on and the rheumatism grew worse, lasting all through the winter of '94 and '95. I suffered as I never suffered before. I thought that the spring would bring me relief, but it did not, consequently I was forced to cancel a number of engagements to speak. One day in June, 1895, my wife said, 'Bishop, I read so much about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, suppose you try them and see if they will not help you?'

I said, 'No, there is no use of getting them for we have tried almost everything that has been recommended to us, and none of the remedies suggested seemed to help my case.'

She said no more, but went to Xenia, Ohio, and bought a box of the pills. On her return she gave me a dose at noon and another at night. She was only called one time to attend to me during that night.

For months previous she had been called three to four times during the night. The next day I took three doses of the pills, and the second night I was not disturbed. My wife, for the first time in more than ten months, had a good night's sleep.

I have not lost a night's sleep since that time on account of the rheumatism. I carry a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in my pocket wherever I go.

I cheerfully bear testimony and hope that others may find relief as I did. I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to several people.

Yours for God and Man.

BENJAMIN W. ARNETT.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure by going to the root of the disease. They renew and build up the blood, and strengthen the nerves, thus driving disease from the system. Avoid imitations by insisting that every box you purchase is enclosed in a wrapper bearing the full trade mark, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

Persistent Zola.

When Emile Zola heard that he had got only four votes this time in the election of members for the French Academy instead of eight the last time, he said: 'What! I have really failed! I am surprised, for I never expected it, having taken no part in the poll. The election was arranged beforehand, and therefore it was useless to pay any attention to it. To tell the truth, these academic elections have no effect on me. I confine myself to putting up for every seat vacant, and then I wait to see the result without the slightest emotion. Of course I shall continue a candidate, but I no longer pay the traditional visits. I paid them once, and that is enough. I am again a candidate for the seat of Jules Simon, the customary period of mourning has only just expired, and I shall wait a few days more before coming forward for his seat. And I shall continue to go on in this way. Where it will lead me to goodness only knows.'

Reflections of a Bachelor.

Most married men would admit, if they dared, that they would rather have a rat terrier than a baby.

A girl always has an idea that a man can never tell her a lie and look her straight in the face at the same time.

The first year after a man gets married a man addresses his wife as "darling," after that he generally says "hey!"

You can generally tell how long a woman has been married by watching the way she treats old bachelors. For the first two years she sets sorry for them.

A man will generally find at the basis of his wife's good opinion of the man next door the fact that she once saw him out in the front yard helping his wife water the flowers.

AT THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN TO BE HELD IN HALIFAX NEXT MONTH. GRAND CONCERN IN THE EXHIBITION BUILDING AND RECREATION ON THE MARSH.

The programme of the annual meeting of the National Council of Women to be held in Halifax, June 14th to 19th, has been received from the Countess of Aberdeen by Mrs. Archibald, president of the Local Council of Women.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 16TH.

Council meeting 10 a. m. to 1 p. m.

One hour will be given to receiving reports from local councils and the remainder of the morning will be devoted to the discussion of resolutions.

IV. IMMIGRATION.

"That the National Council of Women of Canada do commend to the consideration of local councils the need which exists for a national and connected system of immigration, such a system as should be regulated from a central point, with complete communications throughout the Dominion; that it would also direct the attention of local councils to the fact that the need of such a system having been recognized at a Sociological Conference on 'Woman's Immigration' held on the occasion of the third annual meeting of the National Council of Women, a scheme has been presented for the approval of the Dominion government, by the Women's Protective Immigration Society of Montreal, which it is earnestly hoped will meet with the active co-operation of all local councils, such scheme embracing the following propositions, viz:—

(a) That there should be a central distributing point for women immigrants to this Dominion, such central point being preferably Montreal, chief port of the Dominion, with subsidiary centres at Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver.

(b) That committees of women should be organized by the local councils of the National Council of the Women of Canada, which should undertake to supervise all women immigrants referred to them by any of these aforesaid distributing centres.

(c) That such system should be made still more comprehensive by the appointment of individual correspondents in outlying villages.

Five councils propose amendments to the resolutions.

V. IMMIGRATION OF PAUPER CHILDREN.

"That the National Council of Women of Canada bring before the notice of the Dominion and Provincial governments the urgent necessity of increasing the inspection and other precautions at present used in connection with the immigration of pauper children into Canada, on the lines of the bill introduced to regulate such immigration into the Ontario legislature in 1897."

VI. SALE OF LIQUOR AT GROCERY STORES.

"Whereas grave evils result from the sale of liquor at grocery stores, therefore the National Council of Women of Canada be asked to use every effort for the separation of the liquor business in connection with the grocery business throughout the Dominion."

VII. COMPULSORY TEACHING OF SCIENTIFIC TEMPERANCE IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

"Whereas it is essential to the welfare of our Dominion that children be trained to become upright, honest, law-abiding citizens, and whereas excessive drinking of spirituous liquors is not conducive to that end, be it therefore resolved: 'That this Local Council of Women request the executive of the National Council of Women to support all petitions having for their object the introduction of compulsory teaching of scientific temperance in our public schools, and further that examinations therein be necessary for promotion to higher grades.'

VIII. DATE AND PLACE OF NEXT ANNUAL MEETING.

SECTIONAL CONFERENCE—2.30 to 3.30.

The Dominion Women's Enfranchisement Association.

CONFERENCE MEETING—3.50 to 5.30.

The following papers will be read and discussed:

1. The duty of Canadian women in regard to the voting privileges already accorded them; by Mrs. G. C. Edwards.

2. Woman's work for women, especially bearing on domestic work.

Public Meeting—8 p. m.

THURSDAY, JUNE 17TH—10 A. M. TO 1 P. M.

Private meeting of council to discuss working of constitution and standing orders, etc., and also the relations of local councils to the national council. (Only presidents and officially appointed delegates will be expected to attend this meeting.)

CONFERENCE MEETING—2.30 to 5.30.

The following papers will be read and discussed:

1. TREATMENT OF AGED AND INFIRM POOR—A paper on the treatment of the aged and infirm poor by municipalities, county councils, etc., in Canada, with a special reference to the opinion of the national council in the matter.

RESOLUTIONS: 'That the National Council of Women of Canada do urge Local Councils to enquire into their treatment of the aged and infirm poor
