The Lost Will; OR, LOVE TRIUMPHS AT LAST!

CHAPTER XVII.

Fleming was continuing to struggle furiously, trying to get his arms free, that he might strike a blow; and Jack was compelled to throw him on his back.

Fleming got up, his face white, the veins on his forehead standing out like cords, his eyes absolutely murderous as he advanced again. Jack began to take off his coat.

"If you want to fight, I suppose I've got to oblige you," he said, resignedly. "Take off your coat, and let's fight fair, Fleming. I tell you frankly, I'm going to give you a hiding; and, 'pon my soul, I believe it'll do you good."

Fleming tore off his coat, and the two men faced each other and began to fight. Fleming was a strong man, heavier than Jack, and country-bred; he had been a good fighter in his time, but frequent visits to the "Blue Dragon" rendered him unfit; on the other hand, Jack had been a good boxer from his Eton days and was in the pink of condition.

He managed without much difficulty to ward off Fleming's furious onslaughts, without punishing him very much; but the fight was sobering Fleming, and presently he became calm, and threw some science into his work, and it behaved Jack to go more cautiously. For some time Fleming did not succeed in touching his opponent; but after awhile he managed to get a blow on Jack's forehead; it broke the flesh, and drew first blood.

"That's not so bad, Fleming," said Jack, with a smile, as he feinted and got in a blow on his own account.

The two men fought fairly equally for a minute or two; Jack was struck once or twice, but always managed to return the blow soon afterwards. Fleming began to grow hot, and to pant a little; he drew back, then came on with so ugly a rush, with such murder in his eyes, that Jack decided that the moment had come for the decisive blow.

He delivered it, with a dexterity and a quickness which would have gained the approval of his old trainer, and Fleming went down like a felled ox. Jack wiped the perspiration and blood from his face, and, with a laugh—for he had enjoyed the fight immensely—he went forward to help his antagonist to his feet; but Fleming, as he rose, waved Jack off. With his head thrust forward and his eyes fixed on the ground, his lips, swollen by a cut, writhing viciously, he picked up his coat and, in silence, put it on.

"Not hurt, I hope, Fleming?" said Jack cheerily. "It wasn't half a bad set-to. You box well, but you're a little out of training. You go on the water-diet for a bit and give ten minutes to your dumb-bells every morning, and in a month's time, say, we'll have another bout, if you like. That left-hand counter of yours was not half bad. Shake hands!"

Laughingly, he held out his hand; but Fleming did not raise his eyes, and refused to take the proffered hand. As he turned away, he looked over his shoulder at Jack, his lips moved, and, as if every word were a labour, he said:

"You've beat me this time, Mr. Chalfonte, but I'll be even with you some day. Yes, by Heaven! I'll be even with you."

Jack shrugged his shoulders, dusted himself down as well as he could, put on his coat, and walked towards the Hall. As he did so, he mopped his face with his handkerchief; but the cut still persisted in bleeding; so he entered the Hall by the back way, hoping to reach his room without being seen. But, as luck would have it, he met Nora coming down the stairs.

"Oh, good-afternoon—" she began, with a touch of colour in her face, and a sudden lightning in her eyes which always came there when she met Jack unexpectedly. But she caught sight of his ensanguined brow, and broke off, with a quick, anxious:

"Oh, what is the matter? Have you hurt yourself?"

"Oh, it's all right," replied Jack carelessly. "Knocked my head against something in the wood, a mere nothing. Just a scratch. Going to wash my face."

"Well, it needs it," said Nora, laughing, and reassured. "I thought you'd really hurt yourself very badly; you're sure you're not hurt?"

"Quite sure," he responded, with a smile. "I'm as right as rain; a little blood makes no end of a mess, you know. Down directly; I've got those plans to show you."

Nora was crossing the hall to the library when she met Mrs. Feltham, who seemed somewhat excited and agitated.

"Where is Jack? Have you seen him?" she asked quickly.

"Yes; he's just gone upstairs to his room," replied Nora. "To wash his face," she added, smilingly; "he met with a slight accident in the wood."

"Slight accident!" cried Mrs. Feltham. "Why, he has been fighting—"

"Fighting!" echoed Nora, with amazement, her face growing pale.

"With whom; what about?"

"With that hulking fellow, Stephen Fleming, of the Upper Farm."

"With Stephen Fleming? Why should he fight with him?" asked Nora, her colour coming and going. "What were they fighting about?"

Mrs. Feltham shook her head. By this time she had realized that a fight is a private matter; that she had been somewhat indiscreet in her display of agitation, and that Jack most probably would not like the affair talked about.

"I don't know," she said. "Didn't he say anything—tell you?"

Nora shook her head. "He said, or implied, that it was an accident. Oh, do you think he is hurt?"—her voice grew almost inaudible—"and that he was trying to hide it?"

"No," said Mrs. Feltham, who was now extremely anxious that nothing more should be said of the affair; "but we shall soon see. And, Nora, don't speak to him about it, don't ask him any questions. One of the servants told me that he was passing through the wood just when Fleming and Jack were parting; when it was finished; and that Fleming looked half-dazed. I imagine that the man must have been impertinent, and that Jack—well, punished him. Of course, Jack won; he can box very well—Hush, dear! Here he comes!"

She broke off as Jack came down the stairs, humming cheerfully.

"What about tea?" he demanded. "I'm as thirsty as a limekiln-burner's

Ends Stubborn Coughs in a Hurry

For real effectiveness, this old home-made remedy has no equal. Easily and cheaply prepared.

You'll never know how quickly a bad cough can be conquered, until you try this famous old home-made remedy. Any one who has coughed all day and all night, will say that the immediate relief given is almost like magic. It takes but a moment to prepare, and really there is nothing better for coughs.

Into a 16-oz. bottle, put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth); then add plain granulated sugar syrup to make 16 ounces. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Either way, this mixture saves about four-fifths of the money usually spent for cough preparations, and gives you a more positive, effective remedy. It keeps perfectly and tastes pleasantly—children like it.

You can feel this take hold instantly, soothing and healing the membranes in all the air passages. It promptly loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon you will notice the phlegm thin out and then disappear altogether. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold, and it is also splendid for bronchitis, croup, whooping cough, and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known as the most reliable remedy for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," in full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

apron. Walking's hot work in this weather.

"Tea's just going in, dear," said Mrs. Feltham.

Nora walked on in advance, and said nothing. But she was thinking—a man would have to be very "impertinent" to Jack before Jack would feel it necessary to thrash him. No, that explanation of the quarrel was not satisfactory. Why had these two men fought?

CHAPTER XIX.

ALL through tea-time, Nora continued thinking, as hard as the parrot in the story. Now and again, when he was not looking at her, her eyes sought Jack's with that expression which a woman's eyes wear when she is in love with a man, and is trying to conceal the fact. During her life, spent in the wilds, and amongst some of the roughest specimens of humanity, Nora had seen a fight or two; and therefore she was not so shocked and horrified as most women—say, Lady Blanche—would have been by the fact that Jack had been engaged in a set-to. Indeed, the cut on his forehead, the bruise on his left cheek, moved her strangely, with that feeling of pity and admiration which means so much to a woman; and—she had been brought up in the wilds, remember—she almost wished that she could have been present to have seen Jack thrash the man who, doubtless, had been guilty of some baseness or cruelty which well deserved the hiding Jack had given him; and she knew how great a joy it would have been to her to have bathed that wound, to have kissed that bruised cheek, if only she had had the right to do so.

She was very quiet. Mrs. Feltham talked, with that well-assumed air of perfect ease which the well-bred woman can effect so easily when she is behaving as if nothing unusual had occurred; and Jack was quite in his best form, for he was enjoying the reaction after the fight, the unwonted exercise, the satisfaction of the victor. Every now and then he stole a glance at Nora; and then he would be silent for a moment or two, while he was busy wishing that, after all, poor Chalfonte had left him the fortune, and so enabled him to tell Nora that he loved her.

When he started for the town, Nora, who happened to be on the lawn, strolled down the avenue with him. Her heart was full of tenderness for him, and Jack, if he had not been in that condition of humility and self-depreciation which is the normal condition of the unfortunate lover before he has declared his love, would have divined that tenderness in the soft music of her voice, the still softer glow in her beautiful eyes. Alas! how few of us are conscious of the sweet skirts of happy Chance, and are lucky enough to seize that skirt before it is whisked away from us. It is true Jack held her hand a moment longer than was necessary, that he looked into her eyes when they parted; but he said nothing, and he masked his feelings with an air of levity, or mere comradeship.

The Coal Situation!

The imports of coal are 7,000 tons short of last year.
During the next few weeks we shall be allowed to sell coal in lots of 1 to 10 tons. After next month no schooners will be available to bring coal and the demand for coal will certainly exceed the supply.

THERE YOU HAVE IT PLAIN AND FLAT.

We are now booking coal for delivery ex schooner on arrival.
If you have cellar room you will do well to let us have your order now for delivery from ship's side while cargo is being landed.

OUR TERMS ARE STRICTLY CASH.

A supply of coal will no doubt be reserved for people who have not the means of putting in a stock for the winter, but people who have cellar room should engage a supply without delay.

Magnificent Feat

BY BRITISH DESTROYER CAPTAIN.

Belfast, Oct. 12.—A grave collision in the North Channel between the Irish and Scottish coasts has involved the loss of the American transport Otranto and many lives of soldiers, officers and crew. The vessel with which the Otranto collided was the Kashmir of the Pacific and Orient Line. So far as could be gleaned at the time of writing, the Kashmir's wireless and other gear had broken down and, becoming unmanageable, she crashed in to the Otranto with appalling effect.

Splendid discipline was maintained, but in the terribly wild weather that prevailed, with very high seas, the task of rescue was attended with the utmost difficulty and danger, and a number of small boats were immediately swamped and their occupants drowned.

One of the troopers gave the following picture of the scene when the transport was sunk: Soldiers lined up as if on parade and, at the word of command, stood to attention like statues. They never wavered. They remained there in military formation, exemplifying during the crisis the noblest traditions of the army for heroism and discipline.

The same thing applied to the seamen. While the greater number stood by their respective boat stations awaiting final orders, others went about their duties as if nothing had happened, mending gear and attending to one detail or another. All the while the gale was shrieking out its angriest and most menacing warnings and the sea was washing over the listing ship as if to hasten its doom.

TREMENDOUS HOLE MADE.

The following graphic account of the collision is given by one of the crew of the Otranto:

"The convoy was somewhere north-west of Ireland when the mishap occurred. It was very stormy at the time and the mist obscured everything. I got only one glimpse of the land on the starboard end and could see the breakers washing over the cliffs.

"The Kashmir was abreast of us on the port side. She suddenly veered, as if her steering gear had jammed in the wrong direction. We manoeuvred to get clear, but could not do so in time and we were rammed. There was a tremendous hole made in our ship's side and many thought at first, she had been struck with a torpedo. The damaged vessel heaved over, but righted herself again. The steam was shut off and the engines stopped. I saw one of the engineers making his escape through a ventilator. All the seamen lined up at their stations and the soldiers were on board waiting orders. There was neither panic nor even excitement, though the ship took several heavy lists and it looked as if every moment was our last.

"All this time the fog was almost impenetrable and a heavy sea was rolling. The other ships of the convoy, in accordance with instructions, continued their journey, but after a while a destroyer came to our aid. The way the destroyer was manipulated was splendid.

"The bugle then sounded 'abandon ship' and it was every man for himself. If there was loss of life or accident it was the result of jumping at the wrong time or in the wrong direction. I was carried into the destroyer on the crest of one wave and dashed back on to my own ship with the back wash of another, but I got safe at last on the rescuing war vessel."

"MY GOD, TORPEDOED AGAIN!"

"My God, torpedoed again!" this was the exclamation of a deckhand of the Otranto when the concussion of the Kashmir's impact shook his steamer from stem to stern. He had had the experience of submarine courtesies just twelve months ago. "October is my lucky month at sea," he interpolated, taking it for granted that the Otranto had been torpedoed. In less time than it took to tell it, he joined groups of sailors and soldiers on deck. The steamer had an ugly dent on the port side and the stokeholds had rapidly become flooded. Tremendous seas were running and the Otranto was pitching violently. Notwithstanding her great intake of water, the Kashmir had veered off again immediately and her quick disappearance was one of the mysteries of the tragedy.

DESERVED A DOUBLE V.C.

Describing the advent of the destroyer, the Otranto man said her commander deserved a double V.C.

"I have spent my life at sea, but I never saw such a magnificent piece of manoeuvring and ship-handling in all my life. With the seas heaving so turbulently it was a miracle how he was not smashed alongside and how the small boats were lowered to act as fenders.

"The most tragic moment of the tragic morning was when the order came that the men might jump for themselves. The destroyer looked a very small boat beside the former Orient liner, and many of the inexperienced American landmen thought they would be safer on board the larger vessel than on the smaller naval craft. This was their undoing, and it explained why so many were lost. It was a dizzy jump from the deck of the Otranto to the destroyer, but hundreds made it and owed their lives to it. Many suffered in the experience, but fractured limbs was preferable to death. Some missed their jump and met a terrible fate in the raging sea, or worse still, were crushed between the vessels.

The last impression on the mind of the engineer, when leaving the Otranto, was that of her brave captain, standing on the bridge and waving to them as they moved off. It was a signal of farewell, for the gallant skipper, true to the British tradition of the sea, stayed by his charge to the very end.

A War Time Temptation.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

A reader friend takes exception to my rebuke to the people who go about criticizing others for not doing their share in this war. He says that the mass of people are by nature lethargic, and unless aroused in some way, would be inclined to let the other fellow do all the conserving and the money raising and the volunteering. All of which is perfectly true. Are They Really Fired By Patriotic Motives?

But don't most of these critics make their criticisms behind the back of the persons criticised rather than frankly to their faces? And isn't their motive more apt to be self justification for any inaction on their own part, or the simple joy of chewing people over (which we always feel, war or no war) rather than an honest passion to arouse the world to greater patriotism?

I am glad this subject has come up again because it gives me a chance to speak of something which lies close to my heart. And that is our duty in the cases where our advice is asked in regard to matters of this sort.

When People Ask for Justification People are forever asking ones advice, or more likely appealing to one for self justification in the course they have already determined to pursue.

Ruth says I ought not to make myself another sweater when I've got three and the wool is so scarce, but it only takes a little wool and I think with all the work I've done for the Red Cross I might have that for myself, don't you? says the woman to whom cutting down on clothes luxuries is an unendurable hardship.

"Don't you think I'm perfectly justified under the circumstances in persuading John not to go," says the wife, and then proceeds to relate the peculiar circumstances which set her case apart from all others.

And so on.

Is It Right To Do the Easiest Way? And it is always so temptingly easy to agree, no matter what you really think in your heart.

But is it right? I don't think so. I think one should either say truthfully what one thinks or refuse to give any opinion at all. One can simply say, "That is a matter for every man to decide for himself."

But to condone and be complaisant just because that is pleasanter and easier,—well is not that a sort of treachery to ones country?

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Dear Sirs.—I can recommend MINARD'S LINIMENT for Rheumatism and Sprains, as I have used it for both with excellent results.

Yours truly, T. B. LAVERS, St. John.

Kaiser's Hand.

(From the Boston Herald.)

The German Emperor should have kept in the background when he pushed the Baden Prince to the front. Maximilian stands at the footlights, speaking his part with studied courtesy, but behind him struts the Kaiser, vociferating with his natural arrogance. The poor chancellor does not get a chance to make a good impression. His exhibition of art is undone by the obtrusion of his master's nature. While the new minister makes a courteous "request" that the President of the United States will "take in hand the restoration of peace," the old imperial antic strikes an attitude and shouts to his soldiers: "I have resolved once more to offer peace to the enemy, but I will only extend my hand for an honorable peace." Has he ever obtained an inkling of what "honorable" means? Does he suppose that any decent person will grasp his extended hand? It is a hand imbued with the blood of millions of unoffending men, women and children—the hand of the inhuman human who is responsible for the fouling of the earth with the worst and greatest crimes against humanity. The extension of that hand for friendship while lands are soaked and water incriminated with its doings is convincing evidence of eccentric mentality and warped morality. And in the ordinary course the Kaiser caps it with the declaration that he trusts in "God's gracious help." Who is to be deceived by the mouthing of "Gott" and "Kamerad"? The game has been played too often. Wilhelm's measure is known. Senator Lodge recently described "speeches from the Kaiser which contained that mixture of truculence, turgidity and whimpering of which he is a master," and added the opinion: "Of all his unattractive qualities, I think his religious hypocrisy is perhaps the most odious and revolting." The estimate is fair. Our late ambassador at Berlin was told by the Kaiser that he would "stand no nonsense from America after the war." America will stand no nonsense from the Kaiser now. He condescends to "offer" peace, but we go on with the war until he shall sue for peace. He knows the terms. They are not for negotiation, but for acceptance.

A Victory of Generalship.

(From the London Chronicle.)

Every succeeding bulletin increases the extent of General Allenby's victory. The two Turkish armies west of the Jordan have, we are told, "virtually ceased to exist." The last force by which their fugitives could cross the Jordan was seized by us on Sunday morning. General Limon Von Sanders, who commanded the three Turkish armies in Palestine, only escaped capture by a few hours during the first sweep of our cavalry, and it would seem that most of the German troops serving under him there were less fortunate. There remains the Turkish army east of the Jordan, whose function it is to safeguard the Hedjaz railway. With the help of the Arabs, General Allenby has put this army into great peril, and he may possibly extend his success at its expense. What he has already achieved, however, constitutes a magnificent example of generalship, and its moral effect throughout the East will be not the less important, because in this instance the German generalissimo in Turkey was directly pitted against him. The prestige of British leadership and also, let us add, that of Indian troops, has been very strikingly affirmed before the Asiatic world.

Let It End Where It Began.

(From the Springfield Union.)

George Ade's theory that, inasmuch as Germany had the privilege of setting the date for the beginning of the war, the Allies should have the privilege of fixing a date for its ending, seems fair. We are not quite ready yet to fix it definitely, but if the Germans are in a hurry, they can help matters along by allowing the Allied armies to jog along easily to Berlin. They have a feeling that the war, having been begun there, should properly end there.

The Odor of Scantcity.

(From the Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.)

The verger of a suburban church has many stories to tell of the comments made by visitors. On one occasion, when the church was decorated with evergreens and flowers, an old lady walked up the aisle to the chancel and stood sniffing the air after everyone else had left the church. "Don't it smell solemn?" she said at last, as she turned away with evident reluctance. "I don't know as I ever realized just what the 'odor of scantcity' meant before to-day. We don't have any such trimmings in the church I attend up in the North."

The Day of Reckoning.

(From the New York Globe.)

The burning fields and forests of France may be consoling to the subjects of the Kaiser to-day, but when the last gun is fired the bill for damages will not be so consoling. Nothing that Germany can do ever will adequately pay for the suffering she has inflicted on this world, but for the material damage she must pay. The man who would lift his voice in favor of anything else must be bereft of all sense of justice and decency.

Hip-length blouses are very fashionable. Lately ermine has shown itself unspotted.

Milady's Boudoir

OVER EATING AND THE RESULTS.

To eat too often and too heartily, spells eventual devastation to beauty and health. Woman, in general, eat too much and take too little exercise, especially the 'home' woman. A business woman usually swallows a cup of coffee and rushes for her train, but milady of leisure calmly whiles the hours away over her chop or eggs, and at noon she eats another substantial meal, this adding to her obesity and bad complexion.

A good rule is never to take anything to eat when very much fatigued, not even the everlasting cup of tea, which seems to be the main dependant for so many women when they feel the need of food. Tea is a stimulant without the least particle of nourishment, except when it has cream and sugar in it, then the cream and sugar would be far better alone.

A glass of cool water with two or three lumps of sugar is both a stimulant and nourishment and about the wisest thing a woman could take when exhausted. It is far better than wine or beer and has the merit of leaving no bad effects.

Good meat once a day, every sort of fresh vegetables to be obtained, very few rich desserts, plenty of good bread and butter, less in hot weather and fruit all the time according to the season.

When women realize that undigested food is the cause of spotted, sallow and unhealthy complexions, loss of hair, bad eyesight, too much flesh or too little, they will have learned the larger part of the lesson of how to be beautiful in the sense of purity of skin, bright, clear eyes, soft, luxuriant hair and fine figures. Even if the features are not perfect the impression of good health carries with it the impression of beauty in its best sense.

To eat when hungry, to eat slowly, to eat moderately and never to eat anything that has been found to disagree or distress—these are the simplest possible rules that any woman may follow with the result entirely satisfactory as far as her personal appearance is concerned.

Victory Through Sacrifice.

"Civilization is the eternal sacrifice of one generation to the next," wrote a great author, and for civilization today, Newfoundlanders are making the greatest sacrifices—that of life. Her young men, with others from the sister dominions, and those of the home land, are offering themselves to the Moloch of war immolating themselves on the altar of patriotism that succeeding generations may benefit by their sacrificial act. In many homes to-day the sound of mourning is heard as "In Ramah lamentation and bitter weeping, Rachel mourning for her children." Young men who left their parents in the prime of strength and physical fitness, and in the pride of youth, offering themselves in response to the call of King and Country in the great conflict for Right, have failed to return. Their bodies rest in "Flanders' fields where the poppies grow," marked perhaps by a rude cross of wood, or maybe under an unknown and unkept mound on the battle field, but their souls have gone into rest "in the sure and certain hope of a resurrection to the life eternal," and their memory are part of our cherished honor. They died—and in their dying made the oblation for civilization, which is the more enriched because of the manner and heroism of their passing. Consolation is afforded the bereaved fathers and heart-broken mothers, in the knowledge that their sons withstood the enemies of peace, the protagonists of force, and conquered them. Their deaths have not been in vain. In the Sacred Cause of Freedom they freely and manfully laid down their lives, and the places in which they rest, are holy ground, consecrated by the life blood of those gallant boys, who failed to answer the roll call at the end of the action, but who will be assembled in serried ranks to say "present" when the last great roll call takes place, on that day when "the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ."

In the cause of the crusade which the Allies have made into a sacred and solemn duty to save the world from blasphemy, arrogance and cruelty, the boys of the "Ancient Colony" have done their part. For some of them the paths of glory led to a grave, but their spirits are contented and they themselves would not have it otherwise. Through their sacrifice victory will come, the Victory of Right over Might, the victory of civilization over barbarism, the victory of the true over the false. The Montreal Daily Star strikes a note which will attune itself to all who suffer and have suffered in this great struggle, in these words:

"The Allied peoples have not come through these years of exalted sacrifice prepared to make the closing spectacle of the war a vain and discordant carousal, vaunting themselves and wallowing in the booty of conquest. Indeed, it has been to save the world from just such scenes of revelry that they have sustained the struggle. In warfare they have tried to meet bestial lawlessness with intelligent understanding, and devilish cruelty with human feeling; in the first dawn of Victory they find no release of wanton passions but a call to adoration of that Higher Power with whose mysterious ways of shaping human destiny they have felt their course associated from the first.

"To that undiscovered and silent West in which torn and harassed fighting men have found release from pain and labor, our thoughts turn constantly and particularly. We picture there, row upon row of smiling faces, glad with the light of Victory that is becoming more and more distinct in the Eastern sky. The greatest burden, they have borne; the greatest price has been paid by them. We can have no triumph in which they do not share.

"And so it is that the Allied peoples greet the assurance of Victory most becomingly in reverent and thoughtful communion, inspired by that Imperial prayer of Kipling,

"Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
Last we forget, last we forget."
And with that Victory, will come through the sacrifices that have been

There are but three kisses mentioned in the Gospels—that of betrayal by Judas; of adoration, by Mary Magdalene, and the one of reconciliation by the father of the Prodigal Son.

The peace proposal of Germany seems to have met the same reception as is unusually accorded the musical feline who lifts up its voice in the stilly night along the back fence.

Mopis Commercial Appeal.—They understand color schemes down in Florida, where a party of patriots caught a "gasless Sunday" joy rider, and painted his car yellow.

Regina Leader.—After all, what constitutes a slacker? A man who has no opportunity for pleasure riding on week days, and who therefore insists on his right to such enjoyment on Sunday, is merely insisting that he be called upon to make no sacrifice at all, even of pleasure, at a time when sacrifice is universal throughout the world. If such a man is not a slacker, who is? We term the man who evades the draft and his obligation to render military service with its denial of all pleasure, and the sacrifice of home and business, and possibly life itself, a slacker, and rightly so. What, then, of the man who objects to giving up the one pleasure of motor riding? It might be well to prohibit by law all motor riding for pleasure in Canada during the period of the war as is done in Great Britain and France. But our Government has not considered that necessary as yet. It may come to it if our motorists do not voluntarily acquiesce in the small appeal made to them to forego Sunday motoring for pleasure. The Government, acting on official information, knows what is necessary, and the man or woman who does not respond to the Government's appeal, be it for one gas-less day or seven gas-less days, is a slacker. There is no other term to apply to such persons.

Spanish Influenza

This disease is still spreading and quite a number of cases were reported yesterday, one death occurred last night, Mr. Lawrence Hurley, of Mundy Pond Road, being the victim. Mr. Hurley had been admitted the night before, with his wife and children, to the Grenfell Hall Hospital.

There are at present some fifty patients under treatment at the Grenfell Institution, and more nursing help is urgently required. Miss Joan Rendell volunteered and was accepted yesterday. Two colored seamen were released last evening, and two others, also foreigners, will come out to-day, fully recovered. Three of the cases at the Hall were in a serious condition last night, but the majority were doing well.

Mrs. Chafe, of Patrick Street whose husband is a forester of the Nfld. contingent, now in England, went to the Institute this morning, suffering from the prevailing malady.

A number of families on the Thornburn Road are now afflicted, and the necessary precautions are being taken in their behalf.

The R. C. ecclesiastical students at St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto, where many of our Newfoundland boys are now studying, and who were stricken with the Spanish flu shortly after their arrival, are now well out of danger, and write their relatives here not to worry. Sixty students were affected.

Epidemic Every where.

On the West Coast Spanish Influenza is particularly severe, and it is reported that about Bay of Islands there are several hundred cases under treatment with a few deaths. Unfortunately the assistance which can be given by the doctors is limited, owing to the large area over which the patients are scattered, and the small staff of medical men in the localities. Prompt attention to this should be given by the Government, and extra medical help should be sent, together with whatever supplies and drugs are necessary to assist in getting the disease under control.

Import Prize Heifers.

Messrs. Eric Bowring and Geo. Williams have imported two prize heifers, registered as thoroughbreds, in the Guernsey Herd Book of Canada. Judge W. H. Henry who was here last year judging the Newfoundland Poultry Association's Show, selected the cattle, and they were purchased from John McDonald and Son, breeders of Guernseys, at Shubencadie, N. S. These cows were judged at Steviacke by Prof. Freeman, who awarded them first and second prizes, respectively. Both the purchasers are well pleased with their bovines.

Personal.

Mr. M. T. Jones, who has been in the city on a visit from Hr. Grace, returned home this morning.

Miss Irene Hutchings, daughter of I. G. Hutchings, who is studying nursing at the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, is a passenger on the incoming express.

Rev. W. E. R. Cracknell was in the city yesterday, on a visit from Hr. Grace.

Const. Whelan, who brought in a patient for the Insane Asylum on Thursday, returned to his station yesterday.

Mr. H. F. Baker is registered at the Crosbie, having arrived yesterday from Wabana.

Mr. J. W. Gosse, Spaniard's Bay, arrived in the city yesterday, and is registered at the Crosbie.

Lt. A. J. Easterbrook.

Lt. Archibald J. Easterbrook, wounded October 1, went overseas at the outbreak of war with the Princess Pats as a sergeant, and received his commission on the field early this year. He is 36 years of age and before enlisting was employed in the C. P. R. office at Moose Jaw. His mother resides at 24 Third ave., St. John's. Lt. Easterbrook was one of the members of the first contingent of Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, which was annihilated at St. Eloi, 1914, in early days of the war. He is well known in St. John's, having been a member of old St. Andrew's Football team some years ago.

Laying of Corner Stone.

His Grace, Archbishop Roche, will lay the corner stone of the new Church of St. Francis, at Outer Cove at 4 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. Provided the weather be fine, it is likely that a large number of people will go out to witness the ceremony. Rev. Fr. O'Callaghan is the first pastor of St. Francis.

Died of Bronchitis.

We gladly make the correction that the death of Mrs. Martin Cole, of King's Bridge Road was not due to Spanish Influenza, as stated by us yesterday, but was resultant from bronchitis.

Another Death.

Another death has occurred from Spanish Influenza, the victim this time being Mrs. Butler, age 27, of Pouch Cove, who passed away at 1 o'clock to-day at the Grenfell Hall Hospital. Mrs. Butler had two children, and has been living in the city for some time. To her motherless children and to her friends the Telegram extends sincere sympathy.

Germany!
Belgium's Recon
Along the Whole F Road to Brussels

WAR REVIEW.
The Belgian coast again is Belgium. Germany's dream of an invasion of England across the North Sea from Flanders is ended. Belgian Flanders is being evacuated by the enemy, and his line from the Belgian frontier to the Meuse River gradually is giving away under the attacks of the British and French and American armies which are demanding to be served with victory. A haven of safety is a shorter and more compact line being sought by the Germans in order to escape annihilation by their ships. Everywhere they are being shipped but seemingly they are still from defeat. In Belgium the enemy giving ground hastily in order to bring his armies safely out of the trap which menaces them, but from the French frontier to the Meuse River he is fighting desperately to hold back the lower law of the great Focher from closing in a great crushing movement and entrapping in its entirety, and thus far he has successfully, through the use of picked troops and machine gunners who now defeat only in death, warded off a culminating blow. Zebruggen, Germany's second great submarine base on the North Sea, has gone the way of Ostend. The flag of Belgium more flies ever it. To the south troops has been evacuated and Turling, Roubaix and other towns have been delivered. Out of the great sack between the North Sea and the Leys the enemy is fleeing fast in an endeavor to prevent capture or imprisonment in Holland. His hope is that he will be able to reach Antwerp and there reconstitute his line and the Dutch frontier through Antwerp and Namur to some point in the north probably Sedan or Metz and thence for the moment at least the Swiss frontier. In France east Lille to Cambrai the British are

Capt. Hoeborg, one of our old and trusty seamen of St. John's is at present in the city from Burin, and is the son-in-law, Mr. Holland, James Baird, Ltd. The Captain is going in command of a little Danish schr. called "Emanuel." Owing to the amount of business done at Burin he hasn't been to see much of late, except to help out a master or owner. This time it is one of his own countrymen. The Captain of the Emanuel unhappily died a short time ago, and the schr. needing a commander, Capt. Hoeborg took on the command. He seems hale and hearty and his eyes seem to be enemy subs. He is the father of three children, two daughters in the city, one son, who like many other Newfoundlanders went to Uncle Sam's country when the war broke out. He won distinction and medals at the Santiago fight in the Spanish-American War, since then he has been in charge of a torpedo boat. After he was in charge of a military training camp at Newport, rank: Sr. Vice-Commander, and now on active service in command of the U. S. schooner "Newark," not bad for a Newfoundland. It might be added that Capt. Hoeborg, Sr., is holding the first class Master Mariner's Certificate issued at St. John's, Newfoundland. We wish the old fellow a good passage and a safe return. Father Neptune, who is an old acquaintance, will see that smooth water and favourable winds follow Captain Hoeborg and the schooner Emanuel which he Influenza at Lark Harbor.

(Western Star.) A wave of influenza has struck Lark Harbor and is said to have been conveyed there by a woman who recently arrived from Sydney. Dr. Fisher was called there on Saturday. He returned Monday evening. There are at Lark Harbor and Brooms Bottom about ninety cases in all, only about five or six however are of a serious nature, the others being very mild cases. One woman died at Lark Harbor, but she was consumptive and otherwise of a delicate constitution. Quarantine restrictions have been adopted, and all possible precautionary measures taken to prevent the further spread of the epidemic.

Moose on the Lower Humber.

(Western Star.) W. P. Brake, of Humbermouth, tells us that on Friday he saw a cow moose and a calf at Seal Island, 100 or 120 rods from the shore. The moose was seen by Edward Brake. The calf moose was about the size of a two-year old domestic cow. The old moose was very large and had grey patches on the haunches. When seen the moose were feeding.

Dismal Jimmies Read This!

I have no patience (said a well-known political economist) with those prophets of woe who declare that, after the war, Britain will be a bankrupt nation, steeped in misery and distress. It is the sheerest nonsense to talk in this way; for, instead of being poverty-stricken when peace comes again, Britain will be actually better off than ever.

Yes, I dare say it does sound a startling statement; but listen to me and then say if I am not right, and the "Dismal Jimmies" wrong. To begin with, in spite of the ravages of war, our population will be larger after the war than it was four years ago. We shall have more people to earn money, and, of course, more to spend it. Our natural wealth, coal, iron, and so on, will remain practically as it was, available for exploiting under new and vastly improved conditions.

There will be more useful capital in Britain; and even our income from foreign sources will be greater than it was in 1914, for we shall draw large and certain revenues from our loans to our Allies. Thus, you see, we shall have an excellent start from the point of view of material things. But there is an aspect more important still. We have made good all sorts of industrial defects during the war. We are expanding the iron and steel trades which were becoming stagnant. We have built and bought hundreds of thousands of new machines, and have now an engineering equipment immeasurably better than in the past.

New factories by the thousand have sprung into existence, in all parts of the country, all of which are available for commercial purposes in the future. We shall extend all the old industries and embark on many new ones to supply the world's markets. For the individual the prospects are no less good. In our vastly enlarged field of industry there will be work for all, male or female, who will work; and wages will never fall back to their pre-war level. I anticipate a time, not far distant when very few men will draw less than £4 a week.

Channel Notes.

Nothing has appeared in your columns of late from the bright and prosperous settlement of Channel. Every one is busy now gathering their harvest, and everybody is in harness, from the sturdy fisherman who day by day mends his little craft, down to the tiny child who sits writing his or her copy for the teacher, all are doing their little bit for their own welfare and for the good of the country at large.

The fishing season promises to be a good one as when weather is suitable the fisherman adds each day largely to their catch.

About a month ago the C. E. W. A., which is an energetic body, held a Sale of Work and Tea, which was well

On Saturday night last His Excellency the Governor arrived here en route to England. The soldiers who are on special duty here formed a guard of honour and escorted His Excellency to the Court House where Magistrate Squaire introduced him to the people, following which Rev. H. J. Read read the address of welcome to His Excellency. After the address was read the Governor replied, speaking chiefly upon the great topic of the day: "The War."

Nowadays people have the war for an excuse for many things. How often will people say: "Oh, yes, it's all the result of the war."

Quite a few weddings have taken place here recently. Wonder if that's the result of the war? I fear, Mr. Editor, you will say no, it's not the result of war, but of "Love."

Obituary.

Death has again visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Vickers, and taken from them their tenth child, in the person of their beloved daughter, Mary Rose. She was a bright young girl of fifteen, a victim of pneumonia. She was attended by Dr. Chisholm but despite medical skill and fond care of father and mother, she passed away after a few hours illness, having received the rites of Holy Church from Rev. P. J. O'Brien. She leaves to mourn a disconsolate father and mother and two brothers to whom we tender our sincere sympathy.

We rear no marble o'er thy tomb. No sculptured image there shall bloom. Such dwelling to adorn. Fragrance and flowers and dews must be. The only emblems meet for thee. Witley Bay, Oct. 15th, 1918.

Snakes and Fever Make it Hot for the British.

Jerusalem, Oct. 12.—Allied soldiers in the Valley of the Jordan know now how really unkind were persons who, in pre-war days, "wished" them "in Jericho." To these fighting men, Jericho and its dust-covered environs mean heat, flies, mosquitoes and snakes, mildly advertised by the Turks in this message set up opposite the British lines: "Don't fear an over later when you are all dead."

This summer day after day, army thermometers along the Jordan registered from 105 to 125. Yet with scarcely a breeze, and these dust-laden, the Australian and New Zealand horsemen holding these lines, bringing from a temperate climate a reserve of health and vigor lacking in the natives, withstood the ordeal. It is the second or third summer that tells.

The flies and mosquitoes of the valley know no pity. In the early days of the fighting when it was impossible to take the necessary sanitary precautions, they bred in myriads, but now pools of stagnant water have been eliminated and large tracts of scrub burned. As a result, the number of malaria cases has been surprisingly low.

Of the minor evils the snakes are the worst, but due to the precautions taken by officers and men casualties from snake bites have been comparatively insignificant, despite the number of the reptiles and their venomous species.

One captured Turk had been attacked and bitten by a serpent four feet long, and as he lay on his cot in a British hospital, he told how he had strangled the reptile and then fainted. His nerves were shattered by the incident and medical officers said it would be years before they were again normal.

At Last.

Morning by morning, hardly moved, we read The close, long list, and itly set it by. Knowing that each name signifies the dead A man can do but once—fighting, to die. Yet see no strangeness in the daily toll Of sorrow proudly borne, of youth cut down. No mystery in the sacrificial Roll Of Honor—Britain's honor—and renown. And then . . . one name refuses to be passed. . . . We pause, while memory's lamps light one by one. So he is gone. Ah, now come crowding fast The little things—his smile, his frown, his fun. And as his very self comes back to view We find we loved him—better than we know. —Wilfrid L. Randall in London Evening News.

How the Good Word is Passed Along

It is over the teacup that women exchange confidences. Not infrequently "Health" is the subject, and this often leads to the discussion of the merits of Dr. Chase's medicines, and more particularly his Nerve Food. The doctor had a fine appreciation of the needs of the feminine system, and had this in mind when developing this great restorative treatment for the nerve. More food—and always more blood—is required in order to make up the periodic loss and to supply the nourishment required to sustain the delicate and complicated nervous system. Because no treatment ever seemed to meet this need so nicely as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, this food cure has attained wide popularity and enormous sales. There is sure to come times in every woman's life when such restorative, blood-building treatment is required. It is a blessing to know just where to turn for help. Ask your friends about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and then see it a chance to build you up with new energy and vitality.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

BELLEVILLE
Mrs. A. Lott, 49 Grier street, Belleville, Ont., writes: "About nine years ago I was a nervous wreck—so bad that my arms and shoulders had to be bandaged, and sometimes my friends had difficulty keeping me in bed. One time I went to the hospital to see my sister, and while there, I became so nervous that my arms and feet had to be bandaged and I had to be brought home. Through reading of it in the Receipt Book, I was induced to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after taking several boxes I began to recover and get stronger, and now feel perfectly well. I am very grateful to recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to all my friends."

PETERBORO'
Mrs. C. French, 184 Lansdowne street, Peterboro', Ont., writes: "I was troubled with nervousness, sleeplessness, frequent headaches and indigestion. For many years I was troubled with a twitching or edgely feeling about my limbs after retiring, causing me much loss of sleep. If wakened up out of my first sleep, even had I been asleep for only five minutes, I would be awake for hours and could not get to sleep again. Any sudden noise or a door slamming would set my nerves tingling, and I would fear that something dreadful was going to happen. I had tried different remedies for this trouble, but without success. A friend asked me one day why I didn't try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, so I thought I could at least give it a trial. I secured some and commenced using them, and found they benefited me so much that I have taken fully a dozen boxes. My nervousness or edgely feeling in the limbs is entirely cured. I can now eat and sleep well. I can recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food strongly, and would advise anyone suffering from nervous trouble of any kind to use them according to directions."

BRANTFORD
Mrs. L. North, Grand street north, Brantford, Ont., writes: "Both my husband and I can speak very highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It has used with splendid results. My husband suffered from weakness and a rundown system, and was so bad he finally had to give up work. He also had spells of dizziness. He commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after a treatment of this medicine I can now say such a change in anybody. He is now able to attend to his work, and is enjoying splendid health. Before I started taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was troubled

LONDON
Mrs. S. Meathrel, 23 Hyla street, London, Ont., writes: "About a year ago I had a complete collapse from my nerves. I was taken to the hospital for a treatment, but it did not give me much relief. Then I went to the country for a change of air, but after my return home I did not feel much better. I used to have nervous spells, when my limbs would begin to shake, then grow cold, and I would be completely exhausted. I was also troubled with an accumulation of gas on my stomach, which caused palpitation of the heart. At last I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after I had used them for a while I could see that they were helping me, so I continued using them until I got well again. I became real strong and healthy, could sleep well at night, and was able to do my own housework. As I got stronger, the nervous spells disappeared, and I have not had one since."

WOODSTOCK
Mrs. Lydia MacKay, 288 Hunter street, Woodstock, Ont., writes: "I suffered from a weak and rundown condition of the system. I also had severe headaches, and it seemed as if Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, took a good treatment of this medicine, and the results were most satisfactory. I feel much stronger now, have got rid of the headaches, and am able to do my own work without any difficulty. I have recommended the Nerve Food to many of my friends, and would recommend it to anyone suffering from nervousness of any kind."

GALT, ONT.
Miss Alice Howes, 21 Haddington street, Galt, Ont., writes: "I was very ill with anemia, could not sleep at night, and my appetite seemed entirely gone. I suffered in this way for nearly three years, and had treatment from two doctors in Toronto, where I was living at the time, but did not get any relief. I became completely run down, and I did not see any immediate hopes of getting better. I went back to live with my mother in Galt. I thought perhaps the change of air might do me good. My mother saw that I was in a bad state, because my nerves were affected, and everywhere I went I used to take dizzy and fainting spells. My hands and limbs would become numb, I would see black specks before my eyes, and cold perspiration would come out on me. My mother had been taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with excellent results, and she advised me to do the same. But it is hard for me to take pills, so I went to a doctor in Galt instead. However, his treatment did me no good, so I at last decided to follow mother's advice. I began taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and gradually found myself getting better. I soon was able to sleep at night without any difficulty, my appetite came back, and I began to gain back my natural color. After taking about twelve boxes of the medicine I was able to return to my work in Toronto. They there all noticed the improvement in my condition, and I am now stronger and healthier than I have been for a long, long time."

Unielectric Lighting

Question: Why are storage batteries used in connection with small electric lighting systems?
Answer: Because the ordinary incandescent lamp is not steady enough to produce a flickerless electric light.

Question: What power has proven most satisfactory for lighting homes?
Answer: Water power or high voltage steam engines. Because they give a smooth, steady high voltage current which can be carried by ordinary wires a long distance without appreciable loss.

Question: Why are not storage batteries used in connection with electric plants on board steamships?
Answer: Because storage batteries are expensive and require constant attention and the use of delicate ingredients. Manufacturers of battery systems claim that their engine need be operated every two or three days. Is this any real advantage?
Answer: No. It merely emphasizes the fact that their engines cannot be depended upon for steady continuous service. Most of the gasoline engines used are ordinary cheap gasoline engines. Many of them are air cooled and cannot possibly give continuous service. However, air cooled engines are much cheaper to manufacture and require less material than water cooled engines.

Question: Why are low voltage systems used?
Answer: Because they cost less. Wires for the use of high voltage are much more expensive than wires used in low voltage systems.

Question: What are some of the advantages in connection with the use of low voltage systems?
Answer: Much of the current is lost when wires are run to other parts even when such buildings are a short distance away.

Question: Ordinary lighting equipment, electric irons, vacuum cleaners, washers and motors for running small machinery cannot be used. Consequently special equipment must be imported. Is this not a disadvantage?
Answer: They are safer than when they are charged wires are used, but the use of the Unielectric plant causes no such disadvantage.

Question: Is any electric current lost in production?
Answer: Yes. Any electric current which is not used in the production of light may cause fire if not properly insulated.

Question: What are the advantages of the Unielectric over all battery systems?
Answer: It is the only gasoline engine we know of that can be depended upon for continuous operation and which will produce a steady current from the machine a smooth steady 110 volt current similar to that produced by water power or high class steam engine.

Question: How does the Unielectric differ from ordinary electric lighting systems which can be obtained from any electrician?
Answer: It uses ordinary gasoline which can be run for 2,000 feet without appreciable loss of power.

3. A self starter can be attached to the Unielectric which will start instantly when any light is turned on and will stop automatically when the last light is turned off.

4. If desired a small battery can be connected with the Unielectric machine which will run a few lights in cases of emergency. None of our customers have yet required it.

The above questions and answers explain some of the advantages of the Unielectric machine. All kinds of arguments are used by dealers who are compelled to use storage batteries with their lighting systems. When any one attempts to talk low voltage battery systems, ask him why batteries are not used in connection with small electric steam plants on steamships.

Ask any automobile man what he thinks of an air cooled gasoline engine. There are a few air cooled engines used on trucks in the city of St. John's. They are used for short hauls, but cannot be used for long hauls or continuous service.

Ask any expert engineer what he thinks of the ordinary gasoline engine where sure, steady, continuous operation is required. He will tell you that the ordinary gasoline engine is liable to "get cranky" at any moment. A speck of dust may come through the carburetor and choke the needle valve; the valves become carbonized and pitted and must be re-ground and re-seated; the lubrication of most gasoline engines need constant attention. If the operator should be careless or if the oil should not flow freely the result is hot bearings and a damaged machine.

The Unielectric is not a common gasoline engine. A number of new inventions have been added to it, so that the Unielectric machine will give the same results as the best high class steam engine. The Unielectric has automatic lubrication consisting of a reservoir in the base of machine from which a steady stream of oil is pumped through the hollow crank shaft and through the piston rod at the rate of one gallon per minute. This oil returns to the reservoir again and is kept in constant circulation. In other words every bearing works in a steady stream of oil.

Every drop of gasoline is strained through a solid stone before it enters the carburetor. There is, therefore, no possibility of the needle valve becoming clogged with dirt. The Unielectric by the use of the revolving sleeve valve does away with poppet valves entirely, there is no possibility of leaking valves, bent valve stems, or weak springs affecting the operation of the machine.

This style of engine is now being adapted for automobiles. You can no more class the Unielectric Machine with the ordinary type of gasoline engine than to class the Rolls-Royce engine with the ordinary cheap motor car. Some persons will try to tell you the cheap machine is "just as good." Before you let some one sell you "something just as good" we suggest that you investigate the performance of the Unielectric Machines now in use in Newfoundland; every one of which is giving perfect satisfaction. If any further evidence is required we suggest that you consult a real expert on electricity and high class gasoline engines.

Announcement.

The authorities of the Methodist Church conceive it to be their bounden duty to give due heed and respect to the instructions received from the properly constituted public health authority, and having been directed that with disease epidemic, the Churches are not to open for public worship, and believing this to be a serious necessity in the judgment of the health of the community: without question or debate do hereby announce to their people that all Methodist Churches in the city will be closed accordingly, until such time as the instruction is revoked, of which due announcement will be made.

They also take occasion to recommend to their people ready and loyal obedience to the commands of the public health officers in every particular, without question, and further advise that, while the churches are closed, family devotions be observed in all Methodist homes at the hours and with the regularity of public services.

The other usual Sunday Services will be discontinued at both churches until further notices.

A Question.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Sir, — I must congratulate the City ministers of the Methodist Church, on the stand taken and the advice given their people as contained in the "News" of to-day's date, to abide by the notice given by the Health Authorities, at the same time I am at a loss to understand how it is that several of the other Churches have announced services for to-morrow. Is there a different law for the different Churches? If the Health Officer has no authority, then the Government should step in and issue their Proclamation.

Yours truly,
PEWHOLDER.

REX vs. WILLIAM J. SNOW.

The enquiry into the charge of manslaughter against William J. Snow who is charged with killing the late John Jones, Est., on the 10th inst., was commenced yesterday afternoon before Judge Morris, in the presence of the accused and of Mr. Howley, K.C., representing the Crown and Mr. Higgins, K.C., representing Snow. The following witnesses were examined by Mr. Howley: James Aylward, Pte. Samuel Snodgrass, James Diamond, Harry Snow, Detective Whelan, Sgt. Furlong. After these examinations had been completed an adjournment was taken until Thursday next at 3.30 o'clock, as all the intervening days are occupied by other matters.

Christmas Parcels

The Christmas rush is great in normal times. With millions of men under arms it is a tremendous strain on all Postal Staffs, and delays are unavoidable.

In the Old Country 75 per cent. of trained Postal Officials are with the Army, and their work is being done by untrained men and women.

For the Home parcels to reach England before Christmas, the sooner they are posted the surer will their timely delivery be.

To reach our gallant lads in France, parcels should be dispatched as early this month as possible.

Please pack securely. Do not use sharp edged boxes. Square boxes should always have their edges padded.
