MIRACLE MOTOR-GAS TABLETS

Solve Your Problems
Do you realize that you are spending too much money on your motive power—and did you ever know there was a way of cutting down your Gasoline bill?

Despite the increased cost of the present grades of Gasoline, you are receiving a low test of Gas, which contains many impurities, such as tar, asphaltum, iron and sulphur, causing a quick accumulation of carbon in your cylinders.

MIRACLE MOTOR-GAS is a powerful, harmless chemical in tablet form, convenient, easy to use. The tablets are placed in the tank, one to each gallon of fuel. Being soluble, they immediately dissolve and cannot in any way stop or clear the feed pipe. Eliminates 90 per cent of engine trouble and cleans out all carbon.

"Gentlemen: Enclosed please find analysis of sample of MIRACLE MOTOR-GAS."
"The material is completely soluble in gasoline. It leaves absolutely no sediment."
"It is neutral in reaction—that is, it contains neither acids nor alkalies, and will therefore have no harmful effect on the various parts of the engine with which it may come in contact."
"It does not contain any oxygen bearing materials, such as camphor, alcohol or ether and its products of combustion will, therefore, be similar in character to those produced by the combustion of high grade gasoline."
Yours truly,

CHAPTER IX.
SIR JOSEPH MEETS WITH A CHECK

"The wife is dead," said Trunton. "We should have to deal with the girl."

Sir Joseph swore under his breath. "That complicates matters," he said. "She's under age."

"Yes," said Mr. Trunton. "But under the will, this property comes into her possession when she reaches the age of eighteen; in these parts we consider girls have reached legal womanhood at that age. This piece of land will be hers in a few weeks. She is a sharp girl. She would want managings. Anyway, we can't do anything without her. It's a pity."

Sir Joseph turned on him with an impatient snarl. "A pity! I should think it was! This is a big thing, a tremendous thing! And we are at the mercy of a girl! But something will have to be done; we shall have to take it over. Better come up to the house now."

To Nora's immense relief they moved away. She had listened mechanically, without taking any interest in what they were saying, and the moment they were gone the subject of their conversation slipped from her mind. If it had never occurred to her, and if it had done, she was not in the state of mind to attach any importance to it, much less to act upon it. Her one great desire was to get away from the granite, to place herself beyond capture.

She was stealing along the plantation when she saw two or three people coming through the lodge gate. They were people from the Hall, who had walked down the road, with its recently planted trees. A little ahead of the group was the girl, Florence. They passed Nora, and she thought that they had not seen her; but Florence lingered behind the others to pick some flowers, and Nora was watching her impatiently when suddenly Florence passed, over the narrow path and came straight towards her. The faint of not having seen her, the sudden approach, took Nora by surprise, and she stood gazing at the beautiful girl in speechless amazement.

"Oh, it's you," said Florence in a low tone, and with a little movement of the hand, as if to suppress a cry from Nora. "I thought I caught sight of a bit of a woman's dress. What are you doing here, may she ask? Of course!"—she smiled, and her lips curled with a kind of amused contempt.—"You have come to meet your sweetheart."

The attack was so sudden as the speaker's approach, and Nora met it with silence, her bosom heaving, her face suddenly pale, so pale that the marks stood out plainly in red bars.

"Or you have met already?" said Florence. "What's that on your face? You have had a blow, haven't you? Ah, I see—a lover's quarrel—Wait!"

But Nora turned and fled. This fresh indignity almost stupefied her. Once or twice since she had left the house she had thought of Eliot Graham, a vague desire to see him once more, to wish him good-bye, had come to her, but she had thrust it aside, for she could not have borne his eyes upon her face. And now the other girl, this fair-haired, dressed lady, had taunted her, accused her.

Half-mad with humiliation she reached the fence, got over it, and gained the road. At first she thought of turning towards the station; but the last train had gone. Besides, it would be easy to track her along the line, so she turned aside in the direction of the seaport town. The night had no terrors for her; the restless fever in her veins urged her on to flight, and she walked along the by-ways, avoiding the small hamlets where she might have been seen and recognized. For hours she kept on her way, unable to think, though she tried hard to do so. Her life seemed to have been caught up into a phantasmagoria, in which only one thing was real and palpable, the burning bars across her cheek.

The dawn arose, and gave place to the fresh glory of a Spring morning. A feeling of faintness was beginning to creep over her and she knew that she must have food; but yet she dared not go to one of the farmhouses and ask for a glass of milk, for if there were any and she cried, any description of her published, she would be easily identified in a country where strangers are rare, and any incident out of the common attracted attention. She got a drink of water from a brook, and bathed her face, and, after resting a while, went on her way. Somewhere about six o'clock she climbed a hill, and looked down upon the little seaport town of Porlish, lying in the hollow of the bay. She thought that she could buy food there, and perhaps find some means of proceeding by coach or carrier to one of the larger towns, and she was going down the hill, encouraged by a definite purpose, when she saw a boy seated by the wayside.

He was a boy about her own size and age, dressed like a farm hand, and a bundle lay beside him. With surprise Nora saw, as he got near to him, that he was playing with a dirty, much-used pack of cards, and he was so absorbed in his occupation, that he did not hear her until she was almost close upon him. Then he looked up with an awful squint, gathered up the cards with a rustic deftness, and scowling at her, said—

"You might be a cat for the way you walk! What do 'ee come sneaking on people for?"

Nora stopped and looked down at him absently.

"Can you tell me how far it is to Porlish?" she asked.

"Ees 'e m'n," said the youth. "What do 'ee want to know for?"

"Because I am going there," said Nora wearily.

"What be you going there for? Situation?" he asked. "Ee looks as if you'm come a long way." He nodded in the direction of right angles to that from which Nora had come. "I am out of a situation, and he going to try my luck at sea—Talking of luck, try 'ee ever play with these'm?" He jerked his head at the cards, and eyed Nora with a cunningly suppressed eagerness. The question was so irrelevant to the subject of Nora's thoughts that she stared silently at him.

"Fast-rate things," he said, "no-thing like 'em for passing the time! 'ee 'squat 'ee down and rest," he suggested. "That's what I be doing. I have come a long way, too." He nodded in the direction of right angles to that from which Nora had come. "I am out of a situation, and he going to try my luck at sea—Talking of luck, try 'ee ever play with these'm?" He jerked his head at the cards, and eyed Nora with a cunningly suppressed eagerness. The question was so irrelevant to the subject of Nora's thoughts that she stared silently at him.

"I don't want to play cards with you," she said. "Besides, I haven't any money to lose." "Ee added, to soothe the disappointment with which his face was overcast. "But 'ee might 'e lose," he said, "and if you be afraid of your money, play me for some else. I do love cards so, and I'd rather play for love than not at all. It's because of them that I lost my situation. Tell 'ee what," his eyes had been roaming over her. "I'll play 'ee for that little brooch on your dress. It beant gold, I reckon, and I can match it."

He took out a few shillings and some coppers from his pocket, and stooped them alluringly.

"It is gold," said Nora. "You are very young to be so fond of cards. They will lead you into trouble."

"Now, do 'ee stop that!" he broke in impatiently and reproachfully. "Don't 'ee begin to preach to me; I've had enough of 'it; 'twas preaching from morning to night where I've come from. You see it's gold, and I'll take your word for it, 'cos 'ee looks a truthful young oman. Well, I can match it; there's a new suit of clothes in that bundle, and I'll set them agen your brooch. I reckon they do cost as much or more than 't did. Oh, 'ee needn't be afraid of deprivin' me of clothing, I don't want 'em. I shall get another suit when I get aboard a ship."

Nora shook her head and passed on. But she had not gone many yards when she stopped, her back turned towards the boy, who was calling after her in angry contempt and derision.

A thought, an idea, had struck her, which sent the blood to her face, and made her heart leap. She was going to match it! She was going to fight for existence; disadvantages to fight for existence; she was thick in her path. All her life she had wished to be a boy; now the desire was intensified by cruel circumstance. In that bundle were the means of not only concealing her identity, but her sex. It would be easy to face the world, to obtain employment, to reach safety, if that bundle were in her possession.

At another time the temptation however great, would have assailed her in vain; the wildness of the idea would have occurred to her and deterred her; but she was overwrought, dominated by one purpose, that of flight, of escape—was ready to catch at any straw blown by any eccentric wind.

Stilling the fierce beating of her heart, and assuming a careless manner, she went back to the grotesque boy, and taking the brooch from her bosom, held it out to him.

"Do 'ee mean as 'ee'll play?" he exclaimed, with keen satisfaction.

"No," she said. "I won't play cards with you, but I will give you the brooch—for that bundle."

His face fell.

"Well, do 'ee let's cut for it anyhow," he said.

"No," she said decisively. "I don't want to play cards. I will buy it with this brooch, or not at all."

"You'm a contrary and cantankerous female. You'm afraid of losing your brooch, that's what you be. You'm as poor-spirited as a mouse.—Hill here!" he cried. "You see, already half-ashamed of her purpose, had turned away. "I'll swap with 'ee, though I'd much sooner have played for 'in. Here you be!" He pushed the bundle towards her, and almost snatched the brooch from her hand. Sell 'em at Porlish, or give 'em to your little brother!"

Nora took up the bundle, turning her crimson face away from him.

"Yes—I don't know. Good-morning."

"Hi! I'll toss 'ee for a penny agen this tick to carry it w'l," he gapped after her; but Nora went on her way with swift but unsteady steps.

A little further down the road she saw a half-ruined shed standing at the end of a long field. She looked round quickly. The boy had fallen to his rights again; there was no one in sight. She went through the gate into the field, keeping out of sight behind the hedge, and entered the shed.

CHAPTER X.
AMELIA MAKES A SUCCESS.

Ryall had gone back to the house in response to his wife's call. She was standing in the passage, her fury not yet burnt out, her face flushed, her thin lips working.

"I've just been out to find Nora," he stammered. "You—you were rather hard on her, Amelia. You see Nora is rather—rather a high-spirited girl, and she hasn't been used—"

"No; that's just it!" broke in Mrs. Ryall. "She's 'ad no one to look after 'er and keep 'er in order. She's been mistress here too long; but I'm mistress now, and I'll let 'er know it. I'm not the woman to 'ave the life given to her. I've put up with 'er impudence quite long enough. She showed it the first night I come, and she's turned up'er hose at me ever since—though goodness knows why," she exclaimed with a scornful snort. "I'm as good as she is, at any rate. My father was—"

Ryall looked over his shoulder to the dark square of the open door, and shuffled uneasily.

"I don't like her to be out all alone there. She must be swiftly cut up. She's never been struck before, and—er—er—I wish you had not done it, Amelia."

"Oh, you'd have 'ad me stand 'er impudence and said nothing? Not me! Not from a bit of a girl like that. I wouldn't stand it if she was my own child. It's done 'er good, and it'll do 'er good to stop out there and think it over a bit. She'll realize who's mistress 'ere; and the sooner she does so the better. It's had enough for me to find I've married a poor man, and that I've sentenced myself for life to the most Gawd-forsaken place I ever dreamt of. A pretty market I've brought by pig-to, and me standing so high in 'the profession,' and so much sought after! Me that might have married a title! You just let her stop out there and come to 'er senses. She'll be all right in the morning. You come in, I'm going to bed, and you'd better do the same; we don't want any more scenes to-night."

United States Will Not Enter League.

Ambassador Harvey's Speech Makes That Clear -- France to Raise Huge Loan at 8 per cent-- Archbishop Mannix May Have to Take Oath.

COLD-BLOODED INFAMY.
DUBLIN, May 22. An unknown man entered Jarvis Street Hospital to-day and dragging away a former soldier, who was recovering from a bullet wound from the side of his wife and children, shot in the hospital grounds. Sinn Féiners commandeered a motor car to-day and raided optical establishments for telescopes and flashlights.

HIGH PRICED FRENCH LOAN.
NEW YORK, May 22. J. P. Morgan & Co. announced to-day that the French Government had authorized them to issue in the United States one hundred millions of French twenty year external loan, ten and half per cent. bonds, the bids to be sold at ninety-five, and yielding over eight per cent. The proceeds will be used to retire obligations of the French Government in the United States, and for the purchase of foodstuffs and raw material.

MUST CUT EXPENSES.
WASHINGTON, D.C., May 22. Railroad must make sharp reductions in their operating expenses if their financial stability are to be re-established, the Committee of Chambers of Commerce of the graph comment, which was largely personal appreciation of Ambassador Harvey, cordially agreed it was high time to give the quietus to the idea that the United States may yet be gullible into the League of Nations. The Daily News, continuing its championship of the League, made the point that the whole of America was not ignoring the League, saying that Canada was taking a valuable part in its operations, as was virtually all Latin-America except Mexico. "So long as the nations now members of the League stand loyally by it," the newspaper continued, "we can afford to wait until the United States is of another mind."

ARGENTINE STRIKE.
BUENOS AIRES, May 22. Failure of the Argentine Government to accede to the demands of Union leaders to "officialize" work in the Port Zone here may result in a general strike.

AUSTRALIA AND ARCHBISHOP.
VANCOUVER, May 22. The newspaper "Province" carried the following from Sydney, Australia, "Protestant and loyal associations are demanding Archbishop Mannix to take the oath of allegiance, previous to re-entering Australia. It is said he is returning on a Japanese liner to avoid travelling under the British flag. The Government has not announced its intentions."

Moderate Prohibition.
Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir.—With your permission, I again crave the indulgence of your columns to make a few further remarks in regard to the Moderate Prohibition Act, of which my last letter formed the subject. Having heard nothing from the Government or Commission on the matter, I am writing the Committee of which I myself am a member to get busy and call a public meeting in the city and get what outport men are at present in town, and let us as a committee demand that the Government give us our rights; a right that belongs to the vast number of voters who signed these petitions asking that something be done in the matter. Twenty thousand voters of this island, most of whom were supporters of the present Government, called for the Act to be changed, but so far nothing has been done. I would suggest to the Prime Minister to awake to the fact and carry out his promise as set forth in his Manifesto with regard to a modification of the present Act. Both the Government and Opposition have to answer that call of 20,000 people of this island, if not they will want to know the reason why at the next election or probably before that time why such a body of intelligent men have been so ignored. I would ask the promoters of the Act, of which I am a member, to get a hustle on and see that those in authority do their duty either for or against the measure. Letters are coming in from the outports demanding that something be done, and why this Committee who were instrumental in bringing about this matter, is not doing something. It will be a crying shame if these people are so ignored. Any further action would be of no avail, if the present time is not made use of. Referring to my last letter I say its the burden duty of both sides of politics in the House of Assembly to give an answer to these 20,000 voters who are asking daily what they intend doing. I would respectfully ask the Committee, Messrs. Warwick Smith, J. St. John, Jr., John Davey and others, who are the prime movers in this matter to get the Committee together, hold a public meeting as soon as possible, and see that an answer is given these men who signed the petitions, and not fool them any longer, as I can assure the committee that these people are awaiting an answer.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor for your valuable space, and hoping that something will be done immediately before the present session of the House terminates, I remain,
Yours respectfully,
WILLIAM FRENCH,
24, Bannerman Street, City.

Fighting Fish of Siam.

There is a keen interest in Western athletics in Siam, but there is a greater interest in gambling, writes Florence Burgess Meehan. The most popular gambling game is the game of the fighting fish. Phya Gadadhare, the head of the palace household, whom I had come to know well through the dances and the 6 o'clock bridge games of the Royal Sports Club, why the streets of Bangkok were not oiled. With the exception of the broad highway that connects the palace with the throne hall, every thoroughfare was choking with dust. Oil was plenty; so was labor, but "the oil would run into the canals and kill the fighting fish," Phya Gadadhare explained.

The fighting fish was about the size of a goldfish. You catch one and put it into a bottle. Your neighbor does likewise. You put your bottle close to your neighbor's. Your fish becomes enraged. So does your neighbor's fish. They both flash all colors of the rainbow. They swell up. You bet on your fish. Your friends back you. After a time one fish or the other, hurling itself against the glass in a vain effort to reach its adversary, becomes so angry that it literally bursts. If it is your neighbor's fish that bursts, you win. If it is yours, you lose.

TO WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

This Woman's Letter Tells You How To Pass The Crisis Safely.

Lascelles, P.Q.—"During the Change of Life I felt so weak and run down I could hardly do my work. The perspiration would pour over my face so that I couldn't see what I was doing. We live on a farm, so there is lots to do, but many who felt as I did would have been in bed. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it did me a world of good. I tried other remedies but I put Vegetable Compound ahead of them all, and I tell every one I know how much good it has done me."—Mrs. DUNCAN BROWN, Lascelles, Prov. Quebec.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dizziness, palpitation of the heart, spots before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and dizziness should be heeded by middle-aged women, and let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound carry them safely through this crisis as it did Mrs. Brown.

You are invited to write for free advice. No other medicine has been so successful in relieving women's suffering as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Women may receive free and helpful advice by writing the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

The General Strike Always Fails.

"The idea of the general strike was first formulated by a French Socialist, Tortelier, but its real popularizer is the French Syndicalist, M. Georges Sorel. With no little humor he described it as a 'myth' which must not be subjected to detailed criticism or actually employed. It was, in fact, to be a weapon which was to terrify but which lost its virtue when unheeded," says the Daily Mail.

"Sorel, indeed, saw very clearly that, if the general strike by any chance should succeed, it must ruin the country and leave the strikers nothing but misery—which happened in 1917-18 in Russia; while, if it failed, the strikers gained nothing."

"His prediction has since been verified by the practical test of experience. There have been several general strikes, all of which have failed."

"Sweden was one of the first countries to have practical experience of a general strike—in 1909. The actual cause of the struggle was a dispute in the wood-pulp trade. But that was merely a pretext for a trial of strength which had been threatening for some time."

"The industry and business of the country were brought to a standstill. The internal traffic of the towns was stopped. Scavengers refused to clean the streets and gravediggers and undertakers declined to bury the dead. There was no electric light or gas; no telephone service, and the water supply was cut off. These conditions prevailed for about a month."

"Public indignation was intense. The citizens in all the towns held meetings and banded themselves together in a Voluntary Civilian Watch and Vigilance Corps, branches of which were established all over the country. The members undertook to carry on all public services, such as street cleaning, gas and electric works."

"South Africa's experience of the general strike was a notable one. Unrest began in the Witwatersrand with the great miners' strike in 1913, when there was much rioting, arson, and bloodshed in Johannesburg and along the Reef. In January, 1914, the men employed on the State Railways struck and enlisted the sympathy of the other unions."

"The general strike was timed to take place at midnight. But General Botha, then Prime Minister of the Union, resolved upon a bold stroke. People going to their business the next morning were astounded to find the whole of the big towns patrolled by mounted burghers, who had been mobilized with incredible rapidity, many of them riding vast distances. "No congregations of people were allowed in the streets. Every group of more than five persons was immediately broken up by the Union forces."

"Simultaneously the ten organizers of the strike were arrested, lodged in gaol, and removed 'secretly in the dead of night to the coast, where they were placed on board a steamer which sailed immediately for England."

"Australia had its general strike in August, 1917. It began with a strike of the railwaymen and tramwaymen in Sydney. The Government declared that the strike would be fought with all the resources at hand, and the response of the public was remarkable. Students volunteered to restart the tramway service and schoolboys collected the fares. A great many farmers came in from the country and put themselves at the disposal of the Government, doing useful work in unloading cargo at the docks. After five weeks the strike collapsed."

"In France this sort of trouble was experienced so recently as last year. On a previous occasion the Government had quelled a widespread strike on the railways by calling up the strikers as Army reservists. On this occasion also the Government acted with vigor. The General Confederation of Labour, which had organized the stoppage, was prosecuted and speedily lost its control of the strikers; more and more men returned to work, and the strike became a definite failure."—Ex.

Why Grandpa is So Popular

GOOD health and good humor usually go hand-in-hand. The sufferer from torpid liver, indigestion or irritated nerves cannot easily maintain a happy countenance and a cheerful disposition, whether young or old.

The grandpa represented in this picture has succeeded in maintaining his good health and good spirits by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to keep his blood rich and his vitality at high water mark.

Men and women of advancing years are learning more and more the benefits to be obtained by the use of this great restorative. It seems to supply exactly what elderly people require in order to keep feeling well and happy.

Mr. D. F. Armstrong, R.R. No. 3, Mallorytown, Ont., writes:

"Through overwork and an extra amount of mental strain, I became very nervous and run-down. I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and they certainly seemed to touch the right spot. It almost seemed for a time as though I fairly lived on them, and I can recommend this treatment to anyone requiring a medicine of this kind. I am now over 61 years old."

Monday, May 23, 1921.

Labrador Supplies.

The season of the year has now come round again when those who intend prosecuting the Labrador fishery must begin to outfit for the voyage. Other years at this time St. John's and the Outports were hives of industry. Vessels were being repaired and made ready after the winter's lying up; sails were being overhauled; bordage and rigging set up, lines and twines mended and newly barked; boats being caulked and painted, and the thousand and one things necessary for a Labrador trip gotten in readiness. Is there any visible sign of all these preparations in this spring of the year of grace One thousand nine hundred and twenty-one? And if not why is it? The answer is not far to seek.

Few of the big mercantile concerns which formerly issued supplies for this branch of Newfoundland's codfishery, are willing to engage in the outfitting business on as large a scale as heretofore, on credit. For the past eighteen months they have been hampered and inconvenienced and made to suffer heavy losses on Fish Export account, because of the attempt of the Government to regulate and control prices of fish in foreign markets, and the prohibition of shipments, excepting under certain conditions; a state of things never before existing in this country, not even in war time. Large parcels of fish remain in the stores of exporters unsold. The outlay on the purchase of these has yet to be realized, consequently the money that should have long ago been turned over is not available, and for this reason merchants do not feel like putting out any new credits.

There has been much talk recently of the Government guaranteeing a certain portion of fishery supplies for a Western District. Some people even go so far as to say that the Government intend to advance a sum of money on account of purchase of outfits for the fishermen of the district in question. Should such be the plan, it must not be forgotten that those who ply their avocations on the Labrador Coast during the months of June, July, August and September, and sometimes October, must not be left out of the calculations. If Government assistance is to be given one section of the Colony, it must be given to all sections. And the Labrador fishery is too valuable to be abandoned. Last year it was estimated that the total catch of our dependency was about 380,000 quintals. The number of people required to catch that complement can easily be reckoned. Allowing one hundred quintals per man, it would require the services of 3,800 men to engage in fishing alone. Beside these there is a numerous army of helpers, comprising men, women, girls and boys. Figures for the whole number of people attending the Labrador last year are not available at the moment, but it will readily be seen that on no account can such a fluent source of revenue be closed. A sum of half a million dollars is needed to equip the Labrador shoremen and floaters, and if the Government cannot see its way clear to advance or guarantee such an amount, then it must go cautiously to work in other directions. As well as Labrador, supplies for the Shore fishery all round the island have also to be given consideration. The motto of "equal rights to all, special privileges to none" is peculiarly appropriate in the present instance.

Empire Day.

To-morrow (Tuesday) being Empire Day and a general holiday, the Telegram will not be published.

An Excellent Publication

From the office of the High Commissioner of Newfoundland in London, comes a most interesting publication which contains a volume of condensed information concerning "the resources of the Ancient Colony," and its dependency of Labrador. The book contains 125 pages and is most artistically printed on excellent paper. It contains most valuable information concerning the colony's history, physical features, social conditions, fisheries, forest lands, agricultural and mineral resources, and is most profusely illustrated from photographs. The volume is one which does credit to the colony and its printers who are Messrs. Whitehead, Morris & Co., of London. It is being distributed through the office of the High Commissioner, who has our best thanks for an advance copy.

"The Mystery of the Daily Mail."

A publication of more than usual interest to newspapermen and not without its attraction for the general public is "The Mystery of the Daily Mail." This book, which is published by the Northcliffe Associated Press was written by F. A. McKenzie, the noted War Correspondent, who, it will be remembered, lectured here some time ago. It is told in a most straightforward manner, the story of the "Daily Mail" newspaper which has made itself famous throughout the world, and which, in April of the present year, celebrated its 25th birthday. The book makes most interesting reading, alike to the man who reads a word of fiction, and whilst no pains are taken to hide any of the great feats of the "Daily Mail," nevertheless there is an entire absence of exaggeration, as those who have read the paper will easily recognize. The preface states that whilst an attempt is made to elucidate the mystery of the "Daily Mail's" popularity, would be made in the book, that probably one of the strongest reasons was its independence. It is stated that the book is the result of the various editions daily is 1,350,000, or more than that of any other newspaper in any part of the world. The "Daily Mail" was founded by Lord Northcliffe in 1896 on a capital of only £25,000. It early began to show signs of breaking away from the ordinary conduct of the ordinary morning papers of the time and spared no expense in making big journalistic "scops." Its outspoken criticism of the conduct of the War brought it for the first, and by no means the last time, in conflict with the authorities, but throughout the years, in spite of all opposition, it has maintained its independence and gradually increased its sphere of influence, until to-day, it is a powerful agent throughout the Empire. The "Daily Mail" has always been a most progressive paper and it is impossible to estimate the amount of good it has accomplished in forwarding chiefly by means of competitions—the science of aviation, gardening, ideal homes and "other things." Probably the greatest of these was the huge prize of £10,000 offered to the first airmen to cross the Atlantic, Newfoundland was more than usually interested in the last mentioned competition. A chapter of the book is devoted to an account of the "Daily Mail" pulp and paper plant in this colony and Grand Falls, which supplies the paper on which the Daily Mail is printed is most appropriately termed the "power behind the Daily Mail." The book is a most interesting and useful time expended in a perusal of it and will shortly be for sale in the local bookstores at a nominal price.

French Trawlers Coming

This season there will be a fleet of about thirty French trawlers from France operating on the banks, with North Sydney as their headquarters, says the North Sydney Herald. The first of the fleet is expected here at any moment, as the advance guard left the shores of France several days ago, and are due at any time. The coming of these ships to the port of North Sydney means much to the local merchants as well as the coal dealers and ship brokers generally.

G.W.V.A. Favor June 24

The G.W.V.A., through the Secretary of that organization, has communicated with Mr. Geo. W. B. Ayre, completely endorsing his position that June 24, St. John the Baptist's Day, the anniversary of the discovery of Newfoundland by Cabot, is the proper day to be celebrated as the birthday of the Empire.

Damage at Petty Harbor

Caused by Last Night's Storm. The city was in darkness from 2.45 a.m. to 3.35 a.m. to-day as a consequence of the insulators leading to the Petty H.R. Power House being split to pieces and the fuses being blown out. Owing to the lightning arrestors not being sufficiently heavy to withstand the mighty force of the storm, the main switch connecting the transformer to the transmission wires, was blown to atoms. Mr. J. W. Morris, Superintendent of the Electrical Department, was soon made aware of the accident and immediately got in touch with Mr. Halley, the superintendent at Petty H.R., who got to work at once and within forty minutes had a one line connection with the city.

Newfoundlanders Picked Up Big Jap Steamer.

North Sydney, May 19.—Capt. James Guy and crew of the abandoned Nfld. schooner Ronald B. Moulton, Moulton's, Ltd., owners, arrived this morning from Ottawa, en route to their homes in Newfoundland. The crew includes Matthew Rose, mate; Nathan Foote, cook; Robert Harris, seaman, all of Burgeo, and Gilbert Park and Frederick Sheppard, seamen, of Bay of Islands. The men were rescued at latitude 46 degrees 3 minutes north, longitude 46 degrees 37 minutes west, by the Japanese steamer Gisei Maru, and landed at Bremen, Germany, from which place they shipped to England on a British steamer and thence to Canada on the s.s. Victoria.

The Ronald B. Moulton left Burgeo for Oporto, Portugal, with a cargo of fish. She made the trip across successfully, and left Santa Fols on the return trip when she encountered the storm. She was blown down, and the crew was scattered. She was picked up when she lost her fore-sail, and it was nine days before another could be placed. The rough weather continued and she was finally forced to return to the port where the vessel was fitted with sails. Starting out again on the 4th March she weathered the storms until about the middle of April, when she lost her rudder. Later it was found she was sinking, and when the Japanese steamer took off the captain and crew the schooner was going down. The men were unable to save anything but a few personal belongings.

Saturday's Rugby.

"BARBARIANS" DEFEAT SCHOOL. The "Barbarians," a team mainly composed of old boys of Bishop Feild College defeated the School last XV, by 21 points to 14 in a hotly contested game of Rugby in the Tannery field on Saturday afternoon. The game was rather a scrappy one but was quite close and some very good play was to be seen at times. The "Barbarians" obtained one goal and a try, in all 8 points, in the first half and in the second half they added 13 points through a dropped goal and three tries. The school team did all its scoring in the second half, obtaining a goal and three tries. Mr. R. R. Wood was referee. It is probable that a return game will be played next week.

Sports Big Demonstration.

On Friday night the members of the Football, Baseball and Hockey League will hold a meeting to discuss the possibility of amalgamating the three leagues as the Newfoundland Amateur Athletic Association for the purpose of taking over the Parade Ground and using it as a headquarters for sport. Mr. Kieley of the Nickel Theatre has generously offered the use of the Casino. Mr. Arthur Bulley has promised to have the C.C.G. Band in attendance. There will also be a smoking concert, when will be heard some of the city's most popular entertainers. It is an excellent way to bring together the members of the various teams for a social evening at the beginning of the season. If the trophies to be competed for were ordered right away, they would be available for exhibition before the matches were completed and at the end of the season there could be a similar gathering of all those who took part, their friends and supporters when the trophies won could be presented to the successful competitors. A big gathering of sporting enthusiasts is assured for Friday night.

Bishop White's Able Sermon.

He says the Church holds its Ground Notwithstanding the Hostile Spirits Which stalk abroad.

"All power is given unto me in Heaven and in earth—Go ye therefore into the world and teach all Nations."—From the 28th chapter, 18th verse of the Gospel according to St. Matthew, was the text on which an illuminating sermon was preached by Bishop White of Newfoundland in the Cathedral of All Saints to a congregation of several hundred people including the members of the Church of England Synod, last night. "We stand to-day in front of great edifices," he said, "feeling that they are meant to stand for what is best of human aspirations. The Church cries against the blindness that excludes Christ, and the times we live in, demand the urgency of the claim of Christ and a true perspective of spiritual society should be outstanding in our lives."

He pointed out that the Church has definite responsibilities to the world of men and said that the builder passes on, but the building remains. A Church must have faith in itself and its mission, and we shall not be disheartened by numericals that other bodies quote or use to weigh their strength, for we may well have faith in the potential strength enshrined in our lineage. Our faith came by revelation through Jesus Christ.

The Church holds its ground, he said, notwithstanding the hostile spirits which stalk abroad, and a Synod should make some definite step forward. The present antagonism to Churches is caused partly by the war, and partly by Democracy realizing its power. The reader of Church history is not surprised at the existing antagonism towards the Church, as the Church has passed through just such periods before, and there is really no new unknown force at work.

He spoke of our responsibilities to the teeming millions of the East and other far countries, and said that if we would meet and say, we will go, we will see the promise of better things to come. If Christian principles were given a chance, they would supply the answer to perplexities of this or any other time, for it is not an open question, where we will look for the cure for social, economical, religious and moral diseases, the solution lies in faith in Christ and the following of His laws, and the lesson of His power is at work despite seeming contradictions. The Church that has best learned to serve in every department of life is the Church that will win, for "we will hear our messengers and say, we will go, for we see that the Lord is with you."

A special anthem was sung during the service, together with three hymns and the National Anthem and the music rendered by the Choir and pipe organ was exceptionally fine.—Morning Chronicle, May 18.

Sons of England Annual Service.

Since Victorian times it has been the custom of the Sons of England to attend Divine Service the Sunday nearest to May 24th. Accordingly yesterday afternoon a large gathering assembled in Victoria Hall and at 8.30 was called to order by D.D.S.P. A. G. Williams, who announced the purpose of the meeting. Before proceeding to the Cathedral of John, the Baptist he was pleased to present Past D.D.S.P. Bro. T. P. Thompson with a Jewel indicating the high rank to which he had attained and in recognition of the valuable services he had rendered the Society. The sermon of "The Rev. Canon Jeeves was a very eloquent and timely one from the words of St. Paul to the Ephesians, "Put away lying, for we are members one of another." Its apostle of his serious consequences and very often irreparable damage done by lying, in both social, business and political life, usually more far reaching than the Anastases thought of, and showed how families and communities suffered as a result. Speaking without notes, entirely extempore, the preacher urged speaking the truth under all circumstances; and with a most telling illustration showed that in a trial for murder, the volunteer for King and Country. According to the request the Prime Minister delivered a very eloquent address on Loyalty and Sacrifice in which he eulogized the bravery of our noble men who went out at the King's call. It was fitting that in this way we should show our regard for the honoured dead, and our pride in those who came back after the magnificent service they had rendered the Empire. Space will not permit a more extended report of a splendid address, more than to say it is regarded as one of Mr. Squires' best efforts. After singing the National Anthem the members separated.

Services at St. Thomas's.

Both services at St. Thomas's yesterday were largely attended. In the morning the preacher was Rev. A. Clayton and in the evening Rev. C. A. Moulton. It being Trinity Sunday, the subjects of the sermons were appropriate to the day, and an anthem was rendered during the offertory at the evening service, the soloists being Miss Jones and Mr. C. Hammond.

LONDON, May 22. The first real operation of the war against the Polish insurrection in Upper Silesia, occurred Saturday evening when Germans attacked Poles in Grosteler Forest, according to a despatch to the London Times from Ratisbon. The correspondent following the Poles and says they attacked in two columns, one from Lavietska and other from Krappitz and Gogolin. The Poles left their position hurriedly, but Gogolin four field guns, 8 machine guns and 150 rifles were captured. The correspondent said Germans were reinforcing their positions, and intended to continue attacks on Sunday evening. A despatch to the London Times from Oppeln says incessant fighting, with numerous casualties, continues between Polish insurgents and Germans in Rosenberg, Krenzburg and Krappitz areas. This despatch was dated Saturday. The correspondent noted through the Polish lines, where he saw new troops and artillery and other equipment. He says that Albert Koranyi's proclamation to the Polish chiefs, about disarmament and withdrawal, is considered either as a joke or a clever diplomatic move. Germans, says correspondent, have been reinforced. They have artillery and a large quantity of revolvers, and about one rifle to each two men.

They are reported to have succeeded in starting work again in mines, foundries and factories, and are now squeezing Allied authorities out of the town. Ex-Kaiserin Dies in Exile.

STORY OF HER LIFE. The ex-Kaiserin of Germany died at Doorn, Holland, on Monday morning, April 11. Since her arrival in Holland over two years ago the ex-Empress had been confined within doors. She suffered from heart affection.

Born 62 years ago, the Empress was the daughter of the hereditary Prince Frederick Christian of Schleswig-Holstein Sonderburg-Augustenburg. She was a favourite granddaughter of Queen Victoria, and was simply brought up at her father's Court. At the time of her marriage she was very handsome and splendidly healthy. She had masses of fair brown hair, which she wore in two long plaits down her back until shortly before her marriage. Her personal tastes were of an artistic nature. She sketched, and was an enthusiastic amateur photographer and a good musician.

As a horsewoman she showed to great advantage, and frequently accompanied her husband into Silesia for his hunting and shooting expeditions. Social questions interested her in the days of power, and she was a constant visitor at some of the Berlin hospitals. She left politics severely alone. The ex-Kaiser is reported to have said on one occasion—"I could wish no better for the man of my nation than that they should find among the girls of Germany wives who would follow the example of their Empress and devote their lives, as she has done, to the study of the three K's—Kings, kinder, and knuel (Church, children, and cuisine)."

Throughout the Fatherland the ex-Empress was known as "Die Deutsche Frau," and undoubtedly she prided herself as being a model wife and mother. In the days before the war the Kaiser was an early riser, and the Kaiserin made it her business to provide him with his coffee before he began his work for the day. She watched over her six sons and one daughter with devoted care and nursed Prince Eitel Frederick to recover from a severe attack of inflammation of the lungs. When the storm burst in 1914 the Empress worked hard for the wounded suffering of her nation. It was recalled that in April, 1915, while visiting a hospital ward she saw the words painted—"Gott Strafe England!" She said—"Children, that is the one motto, 'Gott Strafe England!'"

An American visitor in 1918 described her as "a hag and a nervous old woman."—Glasgow Weekly Herald.

Carpentier in the Pink FOR BATTLE WITH DEMPSEY. Carpentier who is matched to box Jack Dempsey, the world champion, in Tex Rickard's Jersey City Stadium on July 2, will go to meet his training quarters at Mahaness L.L., where his American adviser, Jack Curley, will proceed to map out a programme of daily exercise. The Frenchman is bringing over a couple of sparring partners, who will be required to stand plenty of manning in practice bouts. Joe Jeannette, colored, who once was considered the equal of such dusky sluggers as Langford and McVea, will be Carpentier's leading mentor, for the reason that Jeannette can show the challenger the best way to conduct himself when he gets into the ring with Dempsey. As Carpentier, according to Sparrow Robertson, sporting editor of the Paris edition of the New York Herald, left France in splendid physical condition, it is safe to say that he will not begin really hard work at Mahaness until next month. But he will indulge in light sparring and a limited amount of easy road work as soon as he gets accustomed to his camp. With the date for the big fight nearly seven weeks off, Carpentier has plenty of time in which to fit himself and will not be in a hurry. He carries the name of superbly weight and simply needs the kind of exercise that increases his speed and strengthens his lungs. The fact that the battle is limited to twelve rounds means that speed and stamina will be of vital importance.

Must Reduce With Care.

Dempsey started exercise in moderate form ten days ago, but, like his European antagonist, he must proceed cautiously with his work at Atlantic City. The world champion weighs about 200 pounds stripped, and will take off at least fifteen pounds, it is thought, before the day of the scrap. But Dempsey must reduce his weight with great care. If the title holder should begin strenuous training now he would run the risk of going stale at the last moment. Not more than three weeks of the kind of work that conditioned him for the battle with Jess Willard, two years ago, will be needed to put Dempsey in perfect shape.

Evidently the world champion and his manager new believe that they know enough about training methods without re-engaging James De Forest, the veteran boxing instructor, who prepared Dempsey for his victorious performance at Toledo. Dempsey says that he was again when he boxed Bill Brennan in the Garden last winter, but he can't afford to be in a similar condition when he crosses arms with the crafty Frenchman.

Who Will Referee.

Over in New Jersey sporting men say that a native son will be the referee of the Dempsey-Carpentier bout, and they seem to think that Danny Sullivan will be mutually agreed upon by the principals and Promoter Rickard. Sullivan has refereed for all of the American ring champions but Dempsey. He presided over the Leonard-Dundee Kid Lewis-Britton, O'Dowd-Ratner, Kilbane-Chancy and Herman-Angelo bouts, all decided on Jersey soil.

Acting as the third man in the ring when Marcel Thomas, French welter-weight champion, met Mickey Walker in Newark Sullivan demonstrated his fairness in a way that won the support of Gus Wilson, one of Carpentier's trainers. Wilson was in Thomas's corner and protested to Sullivan after the eleventh had "broken" a glove, on that the Frenchman might be knocked out. Sullivan promptly stopped the bout while a new glove was sent for, thereby preventing a shabby trick. Dempsey it is reported, favors the appointment of Sullivan, who also is highly regarded by the New Jersey State Boxing Commission.

Dwellers in Strange Places.

The more one wanders in the tropics, the stronger grows the call of the wanderlust, writes Harry L. Foster.

It makes tropical tramps I have met many of them. Some were bums, some were railroad superintendents or managers of mining camps. Their one common failing was the foot itch. When two missionaries passed through Lima on their way across the jungles to the Amazon to see whether the cannibals would take kindly to conversion, I left the embassy and joined them. We travelled by mule over the Andes and down to the headwaters of the big rivers. Then we paddled down in a dugout canoe, sleeping at night on mosquito infested sandbars, eating turtle eggs and monkey-meat.

I had met one class of T. Ts in the mining camps—the kind that travel from camp to camp, making enough at one mine to carry them on to the next. Down in the jungles I met another type.

The first of them was Lloyd. He owned a coffee plantation down at the beginning of the trail. A graduate of Oxford University, he had retired into the woods with his book, and had not been out for twenty years.

"How do you manage to live?" I asked him.

"Do you see that grove of orange trees? Well, the oranges I can't eat fall off the tree and the hogs eat them, and I eat the hogs."

"But don't you get tired of the place?"

No idea of going back. He merrily laughed. For hours he talked to me of the Indians and their customs—savage Indians, down here, in the forest he knew the habits of every animal, and the name of every vine or tree or shrub.

"Do you think I'd go back home and break my neck riding in subways, trying to get to sit in an office at a certain hour? No, sir!"

Farther in the interior, on the Pichis River, I met Crawford, an Irishman, once a rubber baron, with three hundred Indians working for him. He had lost his fortune when rubber fell in value, and was living on a small farm in the wilderness. He has been in the interior twenty-six years, miles from the habitation of another white man.

"Is it lonesome to you?" he repeated. "Sure as hell with all these mosquitoes here, I am not."

Still farther in the interior I met a third type—Palmer. While pursuing adventure through the jungle he had found an old Indian squaw who owned a handful of gold nuggets. No amount of coaxing would persuade her to reveal the source of the mineral. Palmer, however, settled there, opened a small farm, employed the squaw as his housekeeper, and patiently sought to win her confidence. When I met him he had been there for five years.

"I ain't learned it yet," he told me, "but she's gettin' more 'n' more confidential every day."

His remark sounds like "sour grapes" to most of us, but I believe it.

"BOVRIL" "OXO"

Beard of Charles I.

The main part of the historic St. George's Chapel, Windsor, Eng., has been closed, and will remain so for three years, for necessary repairs. In the time of George IV, the coffin containing the body of Charles I. (who was beheaded in 1649) which lies in the centre of the choir was opened and the body was found to have fallen into decay, but the beard and the severed bone of the neck remained and were removed. King Edward, when Prince of Wales, was anxious that these relics, which were then at Sandringham, should be put back with the other remains. After dinner, one evening, the Prince of Wales, the dean, the surveyor and one or two other people came to the choir, the relics being carried in a box. The vault had been opened. Several pocket-handkerchiefs were knotted together, and the Prince of Wales, lying face downward on the floor, lowered the box by this improvised rope into the vault. As to the condition of the chapel, it is said: "The danger is so pressing that the architects would not guarantee that the building would stand for another year without the collapse of the roof." Members of the Order of the Garter have so far subscribed £20,000, and with 25,000 other subscriptions the first year's work is secured.

Gazing at "Representative Democracy"

President Harding's experience as a small town editor and faithful pillar of the "meeting house" has evidently afforded him an exceptional training in the art of platitude. There is a friendly, "walk-right-in-brother" quality in his utterances which is best acquired in such a school. In the present state of the world's affairs it is, on the whole, rather cheering to find the dominating head of one hundred and ten millions of people able to maintain a consistent attitude of complacency.

For the first time since his elevation, Mr. Harding makes an allusion to Canada at a recent Oddfellows' convention in Washington. He made it clear that his attitude toward us was rootedly friendly. At the same time he was careful not to interfere with the conviction of many of his fellow citizens that the United States is "God's country." He advised Canada, "always to look to the south and to fix its gaze on the most representative democracy on earth." This sounds very well, but it is doubtful whether even Americans themselves would regard it as wise counsel. If we may judge by their own utterances, few Americans of the thinking class are proud of, or satisfied with, the achievements of "representative democracy."

Democracy, as expressed in the American nation, has reached a point where its people are living under laws more oppressive than can be found in any other country on the face of the earth—save Russia. The practices of that democracy have reached a point where every man or woman is willing to use the weight of numbers to enforce his own private views on his neighbor. "Representative democracy" on the American model has extended the fraternal idea that a man should be his brother's keeper to the legal principle that a man should be his brother's censor, and his brother's jailer. It has largely tended to make materialism the religion of mankind. Every restrictive measure is held to be just and right on the plea that it may help to swell the bank account. And what has been the consequences? A wild reaction of extravagance, lawlessness and discontent. To balance these evils we have the still more deplorable spectacle of legal oppression, which extends into every home, nay, into every cupboard of the United States.—Saturday Night.

Had Kidney Trouble For Thirty Years.

WHY W. J. HAMPTON RECOMMENDS DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

Manitoba Man Says the Pain is Nearly All Gone and That Dodd's Kidney Pills Worked Wonders for Him.

Newdale, Man., May 23rd.—(Special) "That when the most chronic case of kidney disease and rheumatism can be benefited by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills is the belief of Mr. W. J. Hampton, a well-known resident here. "Dodd's Kidney Pills certainly worked wonders for me," Mr. Hampton states. "I always was so bad at times that I could not work and I was also a sufferer from rheumatism. Mine was a chronic case of thirty years' standing. Now the pain is nearly all gone and I recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all sufferers from kidney trouble."

Rheumatism is one of the effects of kidney trouble. The weakened kidneys fail to strain the acid out of the blood and rheumatism follows. Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills are not the best remedy for weak or diseased kidneys.

Actress Shoots Herself.

The crowded dining room of the Hotel Imperial in Vienna was the scene of a lightning drama, when a smartly-dressed woman, who was dining with two men, suddenly pointed a revolver to her right temple and fell bleeding from her chair. Her companions tried in vain to restore her to consciousness, but she died while being conveyed to the hospital. It has since transpired that the actress was a film actress, Mina Almas, who had been shot by her husband, Twardowska, aged 22. Her companions were Marzell Silberstein, a former interpreter of the Polish Embassy in Prague, and his cousin, Waldimir Przewalski, aged 24, a student. The latter was about to journey for a day in order to be present at this farewell dinner. The friends appeared to be chatting together amicably when suddenly she shot rang out. Silberstein, who was seated next to her, was the first to notice that Twardowska took the revolver out of his pocket without his noticing it. When, however, he pointed out that this was impossible owing to the fact that he was sitting opposite to the girl, the two men gave the following explanation: "The girl they said, declared that she would shoot herself if her friend went away and left her, whereupon Silberstein handed her his revolver under the table, and said laughing, 'All right, do!'" Both the Poles have been arrested. Subsequent investigation brought to light the fact that the actress had more than once stated that she was tired of life, and on one occasion when a student, to whom she was passionately attached, shot himself in her room she was quite unaccountable, and said she had lost her friend and had no desire to go on living. She even tried to throw herself out of the window.

Produce and Provisions.

Wheat.—The exports for this week amounted to 19,555 quintals as follows:—5,615 qtls. from the S. S. "Forster" in the schooner "Forster"; 2,660 qtls. by the "Forster" to Barbados from St. John's; 5,588 qtls. by schooner "Forster" from Union Trading Co. to St. John's; and 2,493 qtls. from Messrs. Barr, Harvey, Hickman and others.

Barley.—Prices are again easier in New York and Chicago, and there is confidence that the bottom has yet to be reached. Heavy receipts of foreign and reduced consumption, both export and domestic, continue, as well as holding the market dull and inactive. There are 7,000 barrels of barley in St. John's, and it is feared that there will not be enough for fishery supplying. Ham Butts is $39.90, Pork and Fat Back $30.00, and Cut $29.50, and Morris' $30.00.

Beans.—Beans are now down to 20¢ per ton as low as it was before the war. Family is $31.00 and Boston $32.00. Libby's Special Family Beans are $33.00. These are certainly favorable prices and about half of the war-time rates. Our imports to St. John's are about 2,000 barrels, and we are in the height of the supplying season. If supplies are issued the market will be even in a restricted way. There will no doubt be a shortage of beans.

Flour.—The price of flour in St. John's advanced $1.00 this week to meet with recent Canadian quotations. It is believed, however, that this advance may not be permanent. The price of flour will follow the other commodities in gradual decline. The price of flour for leading brands is $10.00 wholesale for such grades as Star and Royal Household. The imports are ahead of last year to date. The price of flour in St. John's is $10.00 and total up to 60,000 bushels, as against 54,000 last year.

Sugar.—The entire stock of F. C. B. sugar held in the city was handed over to Messrs. Rosenthal & Co. this week for disposal. The price will depend on the decision of this firm. Upon the arrival of the S.S. Rosenthal early next week competitive prices will be offered. It is rumored that the Government intend to advance the duty on refined sugar, but it, of course, is expected that this will be imposed on the stocks of controlled sugar.

Potatoes.—The potato market continues weak, and in Canada the desire of large holders of 1920 stocks to get rid of their product before the new crop comes from the Southern States has brought the price below a barrel. The Canadian Sapper brought in 253 barrels and 1,454 half bags from Charlottetown last trip. The latter are selling here for $1.70 and $1.80. Home-grown are selling for $1.50 to $1.60 per barrel in St. John's and $1.00 to $1.20 in outports.

Hay.—The market shows no change this week. There is a scarcity of hay in the arrival of the Canadian Sapper, owing to the fact that dealers have refrained from importing the past month owing to a falling market. In addition to other influencing circumstances, the grazing time is at hand. The quotation to-day is $45.00 to $46.00 per ton for imported hay. We do not look for lower prices while the freight rates keep up as high as they are at present. The Canadian Sapper brought in 2,243 bales of hay from Montreal and Charlottetown.

Oats.—The market is weak and there was a decline of 20 cents more per bag this week. Oats are now down to pre-war prices, and local dealers who bought heavily last winter are taking their losses cheerfully. The local quotations are: Mixed $2.40 to $2.50; White $3.00 to $3.70 per sack; Black not procurable in quantity. Only 550 sacks were imported this week and these were for the Agricultural Department for seed. The imports since New Year are roundly $8,000 bushels, as against $2,000 at this date last year.

Feeds.—The feed market continues favorable to the purchasers, and shows pre-war quotations in all products. Table Meal is $10.30 per barrel and $4.60 a sack; Bran $2.65; Corn $2.20; Feed Meal $3.00. These are wholesale prices and the single sacks will be ten to twenty cents dearer. There is a fair supply in the St. John's market, considering the season.

Butter.—Butter is now down to 20¢ per ton as low as it was before the war. Family is $31.00 and Boston $32.00. Libby's Special Family Beans are $33.00. These are certainly favorable prices and about half of the war-time rates. Our imports to St. John's are about 2,000 barrels, and we are in the height of the supplying season. ### Motor Car Man Now a Baron.

Francis B. Courtney, for years head of the foundry planning department of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, in Detroit, has sailed for England to assume the title of Baron Courtney, take a seat in the House of Lords, and receive money and estates valued, at the present rate of exchange, at more than a million and a quarter dollars. Mr. Courtney was so reticent in regard to his personal affairs that, though he lived in Detroit a dozen years, even his closest friends did not know until a week ago that for some time a title and vast estates were waiting for him in England when he chose to claim them. The inheritance comes through the death of an uncle, Baron Courtney, whose two sons lost their lives in the world war. The death of Baron Courtney occurred some time ago, but Mr. Courtney made no move to claim the estates, and this brought about a search in which a Detroit trust company was successful. The estates are at Chislehurst, and consist largely of lands.

Cuticura Soap Cures the Skin and Keeps it Clear

THE INDEPENDENT MAN.
He could have winked his eye at shame and kept the friendship of a few.
He could have flattered fools for gain, as many pleasant men will do;
But he would neither wink at shame nor flatter folly to his face,
So promptly got rid of him and put another in his place.

They said of him he talked too much, he would not learn to hold his tongue.
He boldly called a spade a spade, which does not suit the man who's wrong.

The easy "yes, sir," would have paid; instead he boldly answered "No."
Which so annoyed the man in charge, he felt obliged to let him go.

He could have followed with the throng—instead he chose to walk alone.
When allies would have served him well, he loudly made his judgment known.

Had he but played the friend to one in power, he would have forged ahead.
But knowing he must wear his bonds, he turned his back on him instead.

Oh, we who battle with the world and know how lies we die and fall,
Who flatter fools and wink at shame, because we know it pays us well,
Must know that honest, solitary admirer who braves a man as he
Who spurned advantage at the cost of bartering his integrity.

GREAT CHANCES.

The mails with documents are loaded, describing snags I ought to nail by glib-tongued salesmen I am goaded and asked to dig my hard-earned kale. For wealth untold I always hanker, and I'd be buying gold by the village banker who tells me when I'm headed wrong. He deals in coin, and coin's his study, he's wise to all investment tricks, and he explains, in language ruddy, how games are played on easy hicks. When I approach the paying teller, to draw out all the coin in view, the banker leads me to the cellar, and asks me what I plan to do. And when I say I am intending to buy an oil well down in Maine, he lectures me, much wisdom lending, until again I'm safe and sane. He knows I have distorted vision where money matters are concerned; I'm always having dreams of a system of roubles gained that were not earned. And so on he's keeping cases, he shuffles me from the get-rich fake, when he beholds some hectic traces of punk investments I would make. Before the cold-eyed village banker the glib and oily fakery squirms; he is my helm, my jib, and spanker, if you'll forgive these sailor terms. He is my binnacle and anchor; my harbor watch and star-board clock; I owe it to the village banker that all my goods are not in hock.

German Philatelists Plan Ghastly Issue.

London.—A German philatelic journal has suggested some ghastly designs for a special issue of stamps to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the German empire. The series, it is declared, might fittingly "take its place side by side with the so-called Victory stamps of the Entente."
One suggestion is a reproduction of Durer's etching, "The Knight Death and the Devil." The Knight is to represent Germany disarmed by force; Death is John Bull, and the Devil is France. The background would show views of Strasburg cathedral and the town hall of Posen. Another design represents a Pole knocking a German with the aid of a Czech-Slovak, and a third shows a German mother with her famished children; a disabled soldier wearing the Iron Cross; and a neglected soldier's grave.
When the Germans were at the height of their successes in 1918 the Bavarian postal authorities were actually entrusted with procuring designs to celebrate the impending triumph of their arms. Several were submitted by various artists, but in the light of subsequent events they were naturally abandoned.

Dog Won.

(From the Los Angeles Times.)
In Texas they still tell the story of the Englishman who imported a famous wolfhound from Europe in order to gain wealth by catching wolves, for which the State paid a bounty of $10 a head.
When the dog came he invited some dyed-in-the-wool Texans to see the first chase. Before long a wolf was sighted. And the dog was freed from his leash. The chase was on, but although the party wandered mile after mile they found no trace of either the dog or the wolf.
At last they reached a clearing where a native was chopping wood, and the Britisher cried: "I say, old chap, did you see a wolf and hound pass by here?"
"Sure did," they passed.
"And how was the race?"
"Pretty hot, stranger, but the dog was a little bit ahead."

Not Built for Two.

(From the Boston Transcript.)
Mike had saved up a little money, and when Pat came over a few years later the two brothers went into the coal business. One day Mike bought a roll-top desk, and when it arrived he said to Pat: "The one desk will do for the two of us. And here are two keys, one for you, Pat, and one for me."
Pat accepted the key, but seemed to be studying the desk.
"That's all right, Mike," he said, "but where is my keyhole?"

Boat Theatre.

France has a playhouse, built on a barge, which travels from Tours to Strasbourg. It is a gorgeous affair painted in white and silver and called the "boat-theatre." It wanders along the canals and wherever it stops the French, who have few entertainments, crowd into the playhouse to see a dramatic representation. It is an agreeable life to move lazily by canal and river, to stop where one pleases, to play to a crowded house in a hall, which is always ready, to give pleasure to a whole community and profit to oneself. The room where the performances take place is spacious enough. It holds five hundred persons, and every one of the fauteuils covered in red velvet in this blue and gold decorated hall is occupied whenever the floating theatre casts anchor in an out-of-the-way town. The actors are their own mariners. There is much work to be done on board any kind of boat, as all who have ever helped to sail a yacht will agree. They all lend a hand. They scrub the decks and they make the preparations which are constantly called for. What do they not do? They go out shopping—and is there anything so delightful as to shop always in strange towns? They prepare their play bills and announce their advent. The mere business of acting is only an incident in this varied life.

MY WORD! LOOK WHO'S IN PARIS.

—By Bud Fisher.

Stories From
"Royal Romances and Tragedies."

Under the title of "Royal Romances and Tragedies," Mr. Charles Kingston has written a volume (Stanley Paul and Co.) containing facts about the domestic lives of European Royalties some of which read like records in the Newgate Calendar. According to the story told by Mr. Kingston, the most depraved and brutal of hooligans could not have behaved worse to his wife and children than did ex-King Ferdinand of Bulgaria who, Mr. Kingston relates, "practically murdered" his wife, Marie Louise of Bourbon.

A Dutch King.

Of Royal scoundrels, King William III of Holland, it is said, was a particularly unpleasant type. His Ministers had to intervene to prevent him assaulting his first wife. When he was old and a widower he married a girl of twenty, whom he vilified and ill-treated. When he heard that the husband of his sister-in-law had died after only four months of marriage, and had made a will bequeathing all he had to his wife, this is what King William said:

"Although he already had more than he could possibly spend, he resolved to steal his brother's millions too. Of course, immediately following the death of the prince there was considerable confusion, and the widow, prostrated with grief, was unable to see anyone on business. This was the scoundrel's chance, and he took it. The will disappeared whilst William was in the castle, but the precise manner of the theft was never discovered. The fact remained, however, that although four persons had seen Prince Henry's will, not a trace of it could be found from the day of the King's departure. He sent a message to his sister-in-law saying that unless she was out of the castle within a week he would have her forcibly removed, and that he would not give her a penny.

"When he died his widow restored to his sister-in-law a considerable portion of the wealth."

The Queen's Sausage and Mash.
Elizabeth, Empress of Austria and wife of the Emperor Francis Joseph, had a terrible mother-in-law; but she was a high-spirited girl, and now and then tried to bring a little change into the monotony of Court life:

"One day, when she sat down to the usual luxurious lunch, she pushed her plate from her.

"I'm tired of all this!" she cried, petulantly. "Bring me a glass of lager beer and some sausage and mashed potatoes."

"Great was the consternation of the Court. Her Imperial Majesty demanding 'sausages and mash,' the food of common people! And lager beer, too! She must be mad. But Elizabeth in-isted, and she had to be obeyed. So whilst her mother-in-law, half-a-dozen archdukes and archduchesses, and a score of officers, were attached to the household and the choice dishes prepared by the Royal chef, Elizabeth, Empress of Austria and Queen of Hungary, enjoyed sausages and mashed potatoes, washed down by Munich beer."

A Mother-in-Law's Hatred.

The mother-in-law—the Archduchess Sophie—went to the length of poisoning the minds of the Queen's own children against their mother. Court custom required the Empress to give twenty-four hours' notice to the Chamberlain whenever she wished to see her own children. Once through the kindness of a Court physician the Crown Prince was brought to her:

"With a fluttering heart she awaited his arrival in the enormous room which was called her boudoir. It seemed too good to be true that she was to have her only son all to herself for a few hours. For seven years she had seen very little of him, and her mother-in-law, the Archduchess Sophie, had apparently created an impassable barrier between them, but now—

"The door opened and the boy entered, and she saw a small face stained with tears and a pair of eyes swollen and defiant."

"The Empress held out her arms."

"Come to me, Nazi," she said, using the pet name she had bestowed upon him. The child stood as if afraid to move, and his mother went up to him to take him in her arms. But when she touched him he gave a loud scream and drew away from her.

"Don't like you," he said, with the terrible candour of childhood. "You are a wicked woman. Grandmamma says you are."

"For a moment or two the sudden pain caused Elizabeth to press her hand against her heart. In a flash she realized that her own son was being brought up to hate her. The tears filled her eyes."

"Don't Love You."

"You have been told lies, Nazi," the Empress said, but she did not attempt to touch him again. "You are too young to understand, but one of these days you will be in trouble, and then you will come to me I am sorry for you. It is a terrible thing to be trained to hate your own mother. Even a future emperor needs his mother's love."

"Don't love you," persisted the child defiant to the last. "I want to go back to grandmamma. She's not a wicked woman." He turned and tugged at the handle of the door. Someone opened it from without, and that someone was the windy doctor.

"Take him away, doctor," said Elizabeth, speaking with an effort. "The child has been told to insult me, and he hasn't failed to carry out his instructions."

An Archduchess's Cigarette.

The young and beautiful Archduchess Elizabeth of Austria became engaged to the popular King Humbert of Italy. She was fond of smoking—a grave breach of Court etiquette which would have incurred the furious enmity of the Emperor Francis Joseph had he discovered her. At a ball given after her engagement, Elizabeth was smoking in an alcove, when the Emperor approached her:

"Elizabeth had the lighted cigarette in her right hand, and, as it was too late to throw it away, she thrust it behind her back, and waited for the imperial procession to pass into the ballroom. When the Emperor was opposite to her she curtised to him, and, with a paternal smile, he went on, and a moment later the hand crashed out the strains of the Austrian National Anthem."

"But simultaneously with the music came a terrible shriek from the young archduchess. She had forgotten that she was wearing the finest of dresses, every bit of which was highly inflammable, and while she had been curtising to His Majesty the cigarette had lighted it."

"The princess was found a lifeless mass, and all that remained of the once lovely face were scarred and disfigured features. Not until it was all over did the Emperor hear of the tragedy, for the noise of the band had drowned the girl's cries.—John O'London's Weekly."

Orangeman's Wife Attacked.

Cherry Valley all through last Monday night and all day Tuesday was the scene of a man-hunt, the villagers and farmers having joined in the search for a ruffin who on Monday evening attacked Mrs. Reid, one of the best known and most highly respected residents of the neighborhood.

Latest reports from Cherry Valley indicate that the miscreant is surrounded, and it is expected he will soon be taken. Mr. Reid, who is Master of Cherry Valley Orange Lodge, had gone to attend a lodge meeting. Mrs. Reid, on the approach of darkness, in lighting the oil lamp, broke the chimney, and went to a neighbor's to borrow one for the evening. Her neighbor loaned her a chimney, and Mrs. Reid started back home. On her way up a lane near her home she was suddenly seized by a man out of the darkness. Mrs. Reid struggled, and screamed for help, and the villain endeavored to choke her, but the faithful farm dog, hearing the noise, was soon on the scene. He attacked his mistress assailant and made him release her, and beat a retreat. Mrs. Reid, when she recovered from the shock, hastened home and gave the alarm. Her husband was telephoned to, and lodge was at once broken up, the brethren hastening to the place of attack. Mrs. Reid was able to give a fair description of the unknown man. The whole neighborhood turned out in response to telephone calls, and formed a cordon about a large section, and beat the woods for any strange characters. The hunt proceeded through the night and all day Tuesday, with the result that the hunters think they have the miscreant surrounded. The authorities are assisting in the chase. A strange man has been in the neighborhood of late begging, and some suspicion is resting on him.—The Sentinel, May 10.

Naval Censor's Indiscretions.

Sir Douglas Brownrigg, who, throughout the world war, was chief Naval Censor for the British Admiralty, under the title of "Indiscretions of the Naval Censor," has given to the world a book containing some interesting facts hitherto withheld from the public.

When Sir Douglas—then a Captain—retired from the British Navy in 1912 to enter the directorate of a shipbuilding firm he signed a paper expressing willingness to serve (afloat) in case of war, but he confessed frankly that he is one of the small minority who did not know long in advance that the war was bound to happen.

When the crisis came he was invited to take over the censorship of wireless messages; a few crowded, helter-skelter days, and he found himself giving communications to the newspapers; and from that moment on his office developed, with the war, of his time, not suppressing information, but trying to get it published—helping correspondents and artists against the resistance of sailors who thought that the navy was the navy's business, and finally, in the last year or two, organizing tourist parties for the Grand Fleet and other naval bodies almost on the scale of a Cook's agency.

Admiral Brownrigg seems to have liked most of those he met—sailors, soldiers or civilians. British and Continental—and he says so frankly, in outright sailor fashion. Those whom he did not like are concealed by anonymity when they are mentioned at all.

The Battle of Jutland.

Real "Indiscretions" in the book are few, and they are usually not those of the censor. One notable indiscretion, however, is discussed at some length—the first British communique on the unfixed commentary that a battle won at sea had been lost in the press announcement.

The German wireless, claiming a victory, was the first news of the battle received at the British Admiralty.

The German fleet was near home and had returned to port, the British squadrons were moving slowly back across the North Sea. Damaged ships with wounded men were coming into port, so "it was known all over the country that there had been a great naval battle, while we at the Admiralty were officially in ignorance of what had occurred."

Obviously some statement had to be made; Admiral Jellicoe sent brief wireless messages telling of losses and giving a little more information, and on this basis the communique was put into shape by Mr. Balfour, with the First Sea Lord and the Chief of Staff.

Admiral Brownrigg declares that it would have been impossible to get more brains on the task; and while the result was undoubtedly unfortunate, at that time neither the Admiralty nor the Commander in Chief himself knew exactly what had happened. At any rate, as Sir Douglas says, "Whatever be the rights or wrongs of the first Admiralty communique, it had this effect all the world over—our reputation for telling the truth was re-established."

Woman's Diary Capable of Trouble.

Rome. (Dominion News Service).—A woman's diary will once again play an important part in a "cause celebre." The confessions of the Countess Katherine Karolyi, wife of Count Michael Karolyi, the Socialist ex-president of Hungary, are the chief incriminating factors in a case that is causing many anxious moments to members of Florentine society.

Count Karolyi and his family were expelled from Italy on account of their Bolshevist propaganda. Karolyi is said to have instigated the recent riots in Florence.

Three women are implicated in the alleged plot. The countess herself, a clever beautiful woman, whose salon in the Villa Primavera was the resort of Florentine nobles, women of fashion, and army officers; Anna Rhind, the countess' friend and maid, who is still in Florence; and the third, a mystery woman. This fascinating friend of the count is said to be an American connected by marriage with the Italian aristocracy.

It was Anna Rhind who was responsible for the revelation. She gave notice to her employers some time before they were requested to leave Italy. She confessed to the authorities that the count had the greater part of his correspondence addressed to her name. Incidentally, he opened her personal letters, and she strongly objected to this, as there were private letters from a young man.

This seems to have been the rift in the lute, but it is the countess' diary,

LONDON, April 11.—The Crown Prince of Romania is being arranged to visit London on May 20th, and will remain until the end of June. The visit is being set aside for Buckingham Palace and the name of official and private guests is being arranged. The Japanese in London—some of the best—attach very much to this visit, the first of the most enthusiastic of the generation of artists, Yoshio, who came to London years ago, and himself to study under the masters, eating the bread of the art in the Art school, and now he is being sought for. The Japanese minister in London has been asked to visit London to see the Emperor's son.

CINEMA UNEMPLOYED

Just now there is a great shortage of cinema artists because of ambitious enterprises which have temporarily suspended or entirely abandoned, owing to the fact that there might be difficulties in getting sufficient electricity for the special studios. One of the most sought after artists, Yoshio, who came to London years ago, and himself to study under the masters, eating the bread of the art in the Art school, and now he is being sought for. The Japanese minister in London has been asked to visit London to see the Emperor's son.

SEEING IS BELIEVING

The natural instinct of the human mind is to believe what it sees. It is for a new venture in the field of cinematography. At the moment the purchaser of a camera is not aware of the entire process of the making of a film. An electrical device, which is a very complicated and costly affair, is used to produce a series of pictures, which are then projected on a screen. The pictures are then seen by the audience. The process is a very simple one, but it is a very interesting one. The pictures are then seen by the audience. The process is a very simple one, but it is a very interesting one.

LONDON GOSSIP.

THE CROWN PRINCE OF JAPAN.

Preparations are well advanced for the reception of the Crown Prince of Japan. He is due to arrive with his entourage on May 29th, and will remain here until the end of June. A special suite is being set aside for him at Buckingham Palace and a big programme of official and private receptions is being arranged. All the Japanese in London—and there are many—attach very much importance to this visit, the first of its kind. Not the least enthusiastic of them is that talented artist, Yoshio Markino, who came to London years ago, and started himself to study under English masters, eating the bread which had been used in the Art school for cleaning drawings. Now he is famous, and much sought for. The Japanese have commissioned him to do a painting of Buckingham Palace for presentation to their Emperor's son.

CINEMA UNEMPLOYMENT.

Just now there is great distress among cinema artists because a number of ambitious enterprises have been temporarily suspended or definitely abandoned, owing to a fear that there might be difficulty in getting sufficient electricity, owing to the coal strike. Cinema producers are the most scared of all men, and will shut up their studios and bury their heads in the country at the slightest suggestion that there may be some delay in producing a film. Only last week a crowd of three hundred was cancelled at the last moment because it was feared that production might have to stop in the middle of the scene. In film work, principal players alone receive contracts and the "small parts" get their salaries only when they actually play in the studio.

SEEMING IS BELIEVING.

The natural instinct in man to know exactly what he is eating is responsible for a new venture in London, which it is proposed to extend to the whole metropolis. At a shop in Baywater the purchaser of bread may see the entire process of the evolution of the loaf from the ingredients to the finished product. An electrically driven oven, contrived and fitted with revolving plates, works eternally in the window. It commences work at 11 in the morning and by baking 80 loaves at a time in the full view of customers, it has a good stock ready for delivery by eight o'clock. But industrial loaves are not beneath its dignity, so that the fastidious customer may at any time of the day select his own ingredients, supervise their amalgamation, see the dough kneaded into shape on one of the oven plates and confidently await the completion of the loaf—done at a nicey. Another special apparatus, equally public, its secret lying in rolling lard, bakes fancy cakes and doughnuts and such delicacies in one minute. The novelty of the bakery is, of course, its main attraction, but greener laurels than novelty are its due, for it entirely abolished night work, and is a sure safeguard against cockroaches, and other normal and undesirable denizens of the bakery.

A BALTIC FEDERATION.

All the Baltic Powers, besides Poland and Finland, having by now concluded Treaties of Peace with the Russian Soviet, but none of them feeling altogether secure against a fresh Bolshevik aggression, it is perhaps not surprising that they should once more be giving attention to the idea for a defensive and economic alliance. Prince Sapieha, M. Melowicew, and Dr. Holst, the respective Foreign Ministers of Poland, Latvia, and Finland, have all along championed this idea for alliance. Estonia and Lithuania being decidedly lukewarm, although Estonia has so many ties, including racial ties, with the Finns. At any rate a fresh conference of the five aforementioned States will certainly be held to discuss the subject at an early date. Poland having recently concluded with Rumania a military and economic convention, there would thus be formed a belt of States stretching from the Black Sea to the sub-Arctic, and separating Soviet Russia from Central Europe.

THE PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBITION.

The Photographic Exhibition, which is always of great interest alike to professional and amateur photographers, was opened to-day at the Royal Horticultural Hall, Westminster. A marked improvement is shown in print papers and lenses. One new lens exhibited enables portraits to be taken with a softly blurred effect that is much more attractive than the ordinary sharp, clear outline. One of the most valuable new inventions for the amateur's equipment is the carbine tank, by which films can be developed by daylight and with much less trouble than the ordinary developing-tray involves. The film is simply placed in the high, narrow tank and left there for a quarter of an hour, when it is ready to be removed and washed. Another delight for amateur or professional, shown by Marion and Co. is the new plate which allows fully exposed negatives to be obtained after a three seconds' exposure with ordinary gas and electric light. An admirable photograph from such a plate shows a family party seated at table in an ordinary room, every figure and detail clear, though the only light required was from the ordinary lights of the room. This is a great improvement on flashlight photography with its hard shadows. The Kodak and other films which cater especially for amateurs speak of the increasing popularity of hand cameras. Thousands of men during the war learned what enjoyment amateur photography could provide. To-day, I am told, 50 per cent of the snapshots developed are of children.

OUR AMERICAN VISITORS.

The general character of this year's American passenger traffic will be very different from that of last year's. The removal of passport restrictions in January, 1920 was followed by a rush for berths by business men who had not been able to go to England for five years. Business calls were so urgent that people who could not get first-class passengers accepted cheaper accommodation, while money was so plentiful that those who would normally travel third class went second or even first. All classes of berths were accordingly booked to their utmost capacity. This year, on the other hand, purely business travel is at a low ebb, for few buyers are going abroad owing to the unfavourable exchange and the poor business outlook. Tourist travel, however, shows a gain over the 1920 figures, though hard times and high fares are having their effect. The school-teacher type of tourist, whose trip to Europe was only possible as a result of years of saving, will be less in evidence this year. This season's tourists will come principally from the relatively wealthy classes, and there is consequently a special demand for berths on the larger liners, which offer the maximum amount of comfort. The smaller vessels of all the large companies plying between American and British ports show comparatively meagre passenger lists.

FLYING BOAT TESTS.

Certain interesting tests, which, if successful, may remove one of the obstacles in the way of the popularising of travel by air, are shortly to be made on the Thames. Flying boats, on "amphibians," as to use the river at Westminster as an aerodrome in an attempt to show that this class of aircraft can depart and arrive with train-like regularity. The demonstrations are to be made at all stages of the tide and without respect to the direction or velocity of the wind. It is hoped that the authorities concerned that flying boats have now reached a stage of development at which their mobility is such that they can use even a busy river as their base without in any way endangering or disturbing traffic. If the tests substantiate these claims it will mean that aircraft will be relieved of the disadvantage of having to land at an aerodrome in the suburbs, seven or eight miles away from the centre of London.

GERMANY, THE ALLIES, AND AMERICA.

Arising out of the Premier's statement about Germany's default, a high American official here discussed in conversation the reported intention of Germany to assume responsibility for as large a proportion of the Allies' debt to the United States as she can liquidate. Asked whether his Government is likely to entertain that offer, he replied with an unqualified "No." Both President Harding and Mr. Secretary Hughes, he said, are opposed to entering into any agreement that would confuse what Germany owes to the Allies and what the Allies owe to the United States. Like its predecessor, the new Administration at Washington is willing to give the Allies time to arrive at a position where they can devise a refunding scheme but this has no bearing on, and no connection with, the payment of reparations by Germany, these being two separate and distinct questions. President Harding's intention is to deal directly with the Allies in regard to their obligations to the United States, and if Germany should make any direct communication to him on the subject, he will refuse to consider it, while he will have no direct communication with Germany on any question until peace has been declared by the American Congress.

An Anti Climax.

(From the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.)
Uncle (telling yarn to young nephew)—We had more than a mile to go to get out of the forest, when we heard the howls of a pack of wolves behind us. I strained every nerve, but all in vain. Now I could hear their panting breath, and at last I felt their muscles touching me, when—
Nephew—You must have felt glad, uncle?
Uncle (amazed)—Glad! Why?
Nephew—When you found they had their muscles on.

Had Made Him Feel Just Like New Man, Declares Gibbons

Winnipeg Citizen Says He's Brimful Of Life and Energy Since Taking Tanlac.

"When it comes to building a man up and making him feel fine, this Tanlac is in a class by itself," said Stanley Gibbons, 386 Tecumseh St., Winnipeg, a pipe-fitter for the Grand Trunk Pacific Railroad. "For the first time since I had the flu I am feeling like my old self. For nearly three years I was in bad shape. Everything I ate soured on my stomach which bloated up so bad at times I would have to let out my belt. Sometimes I would be in misery for hours after a meal, and, in fact, suffered so much I dreaded to eat anything. I was worried and nervous and actually dreaded to see night come as I knew it meant lying awake most of the night with my eyes wide open."

"A good friend told me about Tanlac and I had made up my mind to try it. I have a dandy appetite, now, eat anything and am never bothered with indigestion. I am sleeping like a log, too, and gaining in weight and strength every day. I'm brimful of energy these days and feel good all over, even to my finger tips. Tanlac certainly delivered the goods for me."

An Old London Sea Captain.

(From the Manchester Guardian.)
Memories of an earlier era of shipping are recalled by the death of Captain Alexander Simpson, who was for nearly half a century continuously employed in ships (sail and steam) owned by the Aberdeen White Star Line. It was this company which owned that glorious deep-sea clipper the old Thermopylae, probably the fastest sailer that ever crossed the ocean. As a boy he served his time in the China clipper Queen of Nations. Piracy was not dead then—at least in Eastern seas—and the old packet carried an armament of long brass 12-pounders. Later he commanded another famous ship, the Samuel Plimsoll. With her green-painted hull, towering masts, and huge spread of canvas she was one of the handsomest of the latter-day clippers.

One thrilling story about her is this. Disrupted by a North Atlantic gale soon after leaving England for Australia with emigrants, she was spoken by an American ship which offered assistance. This the skipper of the Samuel Plimsoll declined. He had a big crew and plenty of spare spars on board. Working day and night the ship's company got their vessel rigged, and crowding on all sail she was driven hard to Melbourne, where she arrived after an 82 days' passage. Indeed she was snug at her moorings before the American that spoke her had dropped anchor in Algoa Bay, South Africa.

Captain Simpson in his time had command of five of the Aberdeen White Star Line passenger steamers, the last one being the Pericles. He made some 80 or more voyages to Australia, and hardly ever did it happen that he had a Christmas at home. His greatest hobby was the study of ocean currents, and on this point it may be said that he had more use for an empty bottle than many men have for a full one. Every day at noon, as soon as he had fixed his ship's position, he threw overboard a bottle containing a paper giving the exact position of his ship and asking for the message to be returned to him if found. Many of these drifting bottles did come back to him, thus serving to increase the general knowledge of the trend of ocean currents.
