Berlin.—At the butter market here, there was about $400 given in prizes. It was largely attended, notwithstanding that a similar market was held at the same time in our neighboring village, at which the prizes were considerably higher and more numerous than here. There were about 300 entries in keg and roll butter. The quality of the butter shown was excellent, and could hardly be beaten, showing that our excellent Saturday markets are rapidly foreing improvement in butter making hereabouts. The Reason Why.

The reason why the magnificent Retail Grocery Establishments in the Alma Block and on Lower Wyndham Street, belonging to John A. Wood, are so very popular with the intelligent public:—

Because the Goeds are all of the best quality. Because the Prices are invariably the

Because the Clerks are corteous and obliging.

Because the Weights and Measures are always correct.

Because, in fact, the proprietor understands his business, desires to please his customers, makes good use of his capital, and buys for oash in the best markets, and always deals liberally with those who honor his stores with their custom.—These and many other weighty reasons have contributed very largely to make the name of John A. Wood, as connected with the Greecry trade of Guelph, so well known, and his stores so very popular.

The probable presence of Riel as a member of the Commons imparts a bitter element to the present crisis, on which Sir John is said to count as a means for escape from his difficult ties, by arraying Ontario against Quebec. The Rival Clansmen:

A Scottish Vendetta. CHAPTER III.

CHAPTER III.

THE M'KENZES BAFFLED—AN UNFORTUNATE GIRL—LOCH MARE—DANGER AGAIN THERATENS THE LOVERS.

Hector M'Leod was at present seen to better advantage than on the occasion of his introduction to the reader. He was a handsome youth of apparently between twenty-four and twenty-five years. There was a soft, mellow tenderness in his voice which bespoke culture and refinement. His keen blue eyes, soft cyc-lashes, and regular features were such as would-easily captivate a woman's heart, while his decided air and firm mouth botokened that he was not a man who would allow men to trifle with him.

Independently of Flora's express avowalt to lan M'Kenzie of the relationship existing between Hector and herself, it was very obvious—the tendor, loving glances, the anxious care marifested by the one or the other, at once proclaimed them to be fond and trustful lovers.

The chief characteristic of Ned Gorden appeared to be genuine honesty—box: esty was stamped on every feature of his face and on every lineament. But there was more than mere honesty apparent. He had about him the stamp of a decided throroughness; an expression of generosity and kindness beamed from his eye; and the merry twinkle which blended with it and the lines about the mouth told unmistakably of a rare fund of Sectitish humour. And, jndgrang from his large museular frame, his agility and decision, he must, have, in many of those ercounters in which he had been ergaged, given his opponent many proofs of his mettle, and of his general ability as an individual to sustain the Sectitish character for bravery and pugnacity.

Brekfast having been concluded, Ned sustain the Scottish character for bravery and pugmenty.

Breakfast having been concluded, Ned rose, saying that they must now part company for the present. He was going eastward as far as Dingwall, and down to the Muir' of Ord, if not to Inverness, but expected to return to Kinloch-Ewe in about a week, and from thence proceed down by the vest coast to Glasgow.

Flora and Hector again thanked him varmly for the valuable service he had rendered them. They both accompanied him for some distance on his way, and as the former shook hands with him, again expressing her gratitude, Gordon said—as the former shock hands with him, again expressing her gratitude, Gordon said—

"Yo're awin' naething tae me. I nover grudge daein a gnid turn tae a woman, even although I suld hae to sacrifice a little. The only relative I hae en earth—if she's aye to the fore—is a sweet sister; an' she, I dootna, has aften haen tae be befreened by strangers. She gae awa' her heart tae a cruel villain wha deceived and ruined the simple bit lassie, an' then deserted her. She took it sair tae heart, an' ae night field her parents' roof. Baith father an' mither mourned sair for her; but their mourning didna bring her back, an' baith sank in sorrow to the grave. It's three years sin' she left hame an' I've culy ance heard o' her wharaboots. She was then in Edinburgh, wi' a wean in her sirms, gun aboot tryin' tae discover whar her betrayer had gaen. Whether she succeeded in findin' that oot I kenna, but I doot it greatly; at onyrate, whan I gaed to Edinburgh the see if I could fa'in wi' her, she wasna tae be found. Excuse me for mentionin' thae things; but aye when I pass wirds wi' a damsel like yersel' I mind on my bonnie sister Jean, in' my heart yearns for the sympathy o' thers towards the puir sorrow-stricken thing."

A tear stood in brave Ned's eye as he thers towards the puir sorrow-stricken thing."

A tear stood in brave Ned's eye as he uttered these last words, and a reciprocal drop dimmed the eye of Flora.

"Poor girl," she murmured, "her young and confi ling heart had early discovered the hypocrisy and stern cruelty which so often lurk behind smiles and fair promises—but, alas! too late."

"Ay," replied Gordon, "sorrow's rile in the warld. There's twa things I wad like, though—tae alleviste sorrow an' pain in ae instance an' cause some o't in aniher. I wad earnestly like tae meet again an' tak' my sister hame wi' me an' treat her kindly; buf I wad as weel like tae meet her betrayer. The cruel, decitfu' villain, he suld that day learn a lesson that he suld never forget. I'm no one o' thus folk wha like tae foster an' nurse a speciri o' reverge aboot trifies; but there's misdeeds dune in time—an' his is ane o' them—that suld be punished in time as weel'sin eternity. I've aye the houp that I'll meet him yet; then will he feel an honest man's vengeance. But, gude day; I needna stand haverin' a' day aboot my ain troubles to you, wha for o.ht I ken, may hae troubles encuch o' yer ain."
