HOW THE STEAMER SANK

WHAT ONE OF THE SURVIVORS SAID ABOUT IT.

The Continued Progress of the Vessel After the Collision Was the Cause of the Great Loss of Life.

MONTREAL, May 9.—Mr. Leary, New York agent of the State line, says he does not know exactly how or when the ship wrecked people will be returned to their homes. The probabilities, however, are that they will be sent direct to Glasgow from Montreal by either the Donaldson or Allan lines. Dr. Steele, the surgeon of the State of Florida, says that the main cause of the great loss of life was the continued progress of the vessel after the collision. It was owing to this that more boats were not safely launched and that the passengers were afraid to leave their boats.

The chief engineer appeared to be possessed of the same remarkable coolness or lethargy which distinguished the captain, and it was his coolness which saved the ship. He was the only one who kept his head in water, he met the chief engineer coolly walking up an down with a life preserver on his head, and he was the only one who was not blown away by the wind.

The steamer went down with her whistle blowing, which he supposed was intended by the captain or whoever opened the valves, as last night, the whistle and all in it. In the boat which he was in he got the men to promise to hold together, and he was the only one who was not blown away by the wind.

He was seen at the residence of Mrs. Brown, one of the firm's clerks, since made affidavit that he believes the reverend gentleman had been defrauded. TORONTO REFORM ASSOCIATION.

The Leaders of the Party Confronting Themselves on Late Successes.

A numerously attended meeting of the Toronto reform association was held last evening in Philharmonic hall. The president, Peter Ryan, occupied the chair, and on the platform were Hon. Alex. Mackenzie, Hon. A. S. Hardy, Hon. T. W. Anglin, Wm. Mulock, M.P., and G. W. J. Higgins, M.P.P. The following officers were elected: President, Capt. M. A. Master; vice-presidents, Peter Ryan, N. Jeffrey, Wm. Christie; treasurer, Metcalfe; secretary, Major Allan.

After the routine business, the president called upon Alex. Mackenzie for an address, and in coming forward he was greeted with loud cheers. He said the reformers had no doubt that they would soon be a feeling throughout the country which would surprise the government of the day. C.P.R.'S. NEW QUARTERS.

ITS MAGNIFICENT OFFICES FITTED UP IN THE U. E. CLUB BUILDING.

A Sketch of the Interior—The Various Offices and Where They are Quarters—The Employees at Work.

After a lapse of two years, the U. E. club building is once more a hive of business and industry. Notwithstanding its favorable site, and the convenience of the handsome, spacious rooms inside, the size of the structure was such as to preclude its full occupation by any ordinary tenant. None but a large and wealthy corporation, employing numerous hands and willing to incur big expenses, could have utilized the building with profit. But for the purposes of such a corporation the U. E. club building was admirably adapted. This the Canadian Pacific railway company was not slow to see, and nobody was particularly astonished when it was announced that the old conservative headquarters had passed into the hands of this great railroad. The price paid for the building is reported to have been $22,000, an exceedingly low figure, even for what might otherwise have turned out a white elephant in the hands of the holder.

In the beginning of March last a corps of workmen entered the vacant rooms, and after the rubbish which had been accumulated there for years past had been cleared away, they set to work at thoroughly renovating the inside of the structure. The walls and ceilings were re-plastered and painted, and the woodwork tastefully polished up. To-day this portion of the work is finished. The walls of the different offices are painted in light colors, such as pale green and buff, which adds materially to their natural brightness and cheerful aspect. The carpeting is new, and the furniture has not been fully completed. It is expected that everything will be in place by June 1. Nearly the whole of the working staff are already in their places.

The east store on the ground floor, facing King street, is allotted to Mr. E. Tiffin, general freight clerk. The next is the office of the express company. The other departments of the company are situated on the second floor. The room at the end of the express company is occupied by Mr. J. C. McNeill, purchasing agent, with his clerks. The two offices to the south of this are tenanted by Mr. Richard Jones, auditor of the Credit Valley railway, along with two clerks. To the west of the auditor's office is a large room, which is to be utilized for holding stationary. The office of the general manager is at the north-west corner of the entrance hall is occupied by Mr. J. McNabb, purchasing agent, with his clerks. The two offices to the south of this are tenanted by Mr. Richard Jones, auditor of the Credit Valley railway, along with two clerks. THE UNIVERSITY SENATE.

Two new members of the senate of Toronto university took their seats last night for the first time, Mr. E. E. Kingsford representing convocation, and Mr. D. A. O'Sullivan representing the Ontario government. We predict for both of these gentlemen useful careers in their new sphere. Mr. Kingsford has for some time past been the moving spirit in the way of organizing convocation, and has fairly earned the honor of representing his fellow-graduates in the senate, where he will no doubt prove just as active and as useful as he has been in the broader, if lower arena. The Ontario government could not have made a better choice than was made in the selection of Mr. O'Sullivan. He belongs to a class of professional men of whom we have far too few in this country—men who never slack their student in the practitioner. He is already favorably known as an author of legal works and of one work that comes within the domain of political science. The latter is a description of the federal constitution of Canada, and is one of the best of the kind that has ever been published in relation to this country. It only brings to the discharge of his senatorial functions breadth of view, ripening scholarship, judicial temperament, and a courteous manner—qualities which will always command influence in any deliberative assembly. We sincerely hope that the provincial university may never do worse in the way of new members of senate than it has done this year, for we need hardly say that Messrs. Coyne and Miller of St. Thomas, who have not yet taken their seats, are worthy of the positions they have been elected to fill.

Happiness consists in being miserable without knowing it. Go and see the Hanlons at the Grand opera house and you will know it.

Yesterday Justice Rose delivered judgment in the case of Brown v. Nelson. There will be articles in all the papers this morning on the newspaper war. The Globe and Mail has brought out the fact that these papers are no longer the autocrats that they once were; that cheaper and better conducted journals are making them share the business, and making them give place in the matter of influence.

THE BRIDE ROOM.

Flora Gage was tall and slender, and shaped like a Juno, with dark, wistful eyes, and black, silk-soft tresses, and a skin where the rosy blood glowed through at every passing emotion of her mind—too beautiful, perhaps, for her beauty had brought to her shrine the frosty-haired old lover whose gold had at last purchased her.

"Such good luck!" said Mrs. Gage. "Why, he's worth a quarter of a million!" "And he keeps such horses!" echoed Mr. Gage, rubbing his hands. "In a very glad now that I needn't encourage Fred Templeton. He's a nice young fellow enough for aught I know, but I don't believe he's got a hundred dollars about in the world."

"But, papa, poor Flora had faltered, 'I love him!'" "Flora," said her mother, solemnly, "you're talking in a very improper manner. No well-regulated young woman ever loves a man until after she's married to him."

"I know I shouldn't love old Peckley if I was married forty times over to him!" and suddenly related to Flora, who was her papa and mamma cried out, "Hush-hush," and Flora was "put down" at once.

Up to the last moment, when the bridegroom and the bride were about to be joined, Flora had entertained a vague, unspoken fear that Flora might elope with Fred Templeton, or boldly register her ancient love, declaring that she would 100 times rather die than marry him; but no such catastrophe had transpired.

"Really," said Mr. Gage, "Flora has behaved very well. I didn't think the child had so much sense."

"Fred Templeton was here this morning," said Mrs. Gage, gloomily. "Well, let him come! He'll be safely married to Peckley by this time to-morrow."

"But they made an appointment to go out to visit the haunted house by moonlight this evening!"

"I know it! but Peckley has gone with them. Sly dog, that—sly old dog!" and Mrs. Gage chuckled complacently.

"Well, I only hope it will be all right," said Mrs. Gage, who was one of those estimable women who have the faculty of looking at everything in the most cheerful light.

While this conjugal tete-a-tete was transpiring at the Gage mansion the bridegroom was wandering over the deserted rooms of the old "haunted house" in the valley below, with Fred Templeton at his side and Philo Peckley trailing behind.

"It is really haunted!" said Mr. Peckley, stopping to wipe his dusty brow, for he had been walking briskly; although it was a December night.

"Oh, there can be no doubt about it," said Mrs. Gage. "Nobody has occupied the premises in twenty years. It's a ghost all in white that fits through the upper room and rings the bells."

"What haunted garet?" demanded Peckley.

"Turn back! nonsense!" cried Mr. Peckley. "Why, I'd as soon go over the whole house by myself as not."

"Not into the haunted garet?"

"What haunted garet?" demanded Peckley.

"The garet," said Templeton, with great solemnity, "where the ghost lurks among the ruinous beams, and where strange sounds appear the chance passer."

"I wouldn't be the man to risk it," said Templeton, shrugging his shoulders.

Mr. Peckley's eyes sparkled. He was quite aware that he was rather lacking in the romantic element—there was an opportunity for him to outshine that dashing young scoundrel of a Templeton.

"Come on!" he cried, "you shall see for yourselves!" "I'll go three times around the garet, all alone; you shall hear the sound of my footsteps!" (Ghosts, indeed! What nonsense!)

"Well, if you really have the courage," began Templeton.

"Why, Fred?" laughed Flora, "what has come to you? I never knew you allied with the quail of terror before!"

"Ah," said Fred, coughing, "I don't know what never saw me placed in such a terrible—strange—circumstances before. Here's the ladder leading up to the garet, Mr. Peckley—be a little careful, I beg of you."

Mr. Peckley's only reply was an upward scramble, which made the ruinous rooms of the ladder squeak violently. But his blood chilled a little nevertheless, as he heard the rattling footsteps of Mr. Templeton descending the ladder. Heaving the beams of the garet, draped with the huge festoons of cobwebs, the vague, shimmering reflections of the moonlight on the floor, the mournful whistling of the winter wind through the chimney stacks, which sounded like a monster manœuvring in the very centre of the place, were none of them the most thrillingly inspiring order.

Philo stood with chattering teeth in the middle of the floor, his huge black skirt rustled across, like an imp of darkness, close to his very feet.

"Pooh!" said Mr. Peckley, feeling himself alive all over. "No afraid of a rat! It's only going three times round this place, and Templeton doesn't do it for his life!"

As ever breathed! No one shall say my daughter was left to wear the willow. If Peckley don't make his appearance in short order, he'll find himself too late, that's all I've got to tell you.

He was as good as his word! Five minutes after the guests were all electrified by the entrance of the wedding cortege. But instead of Philo Peckley, the bridegroom was Mrs. Frederick Templeton.

Scarcely were the mystic words pronounced which tie the knot which only death's chill fingers can unloose—scarcely had the lovely and blushing bride begun to receive the hearty congratulations of her friends, then there was a bustle in the hall and a stout, short elderly man rushed in, his hair powdered with dust and cobwebs hanging about him. It was Philo Peckley.

"I've come to be married!" he said. "There's my bride!"

"You are too late, sir!" roared papa Gage, furiously.

"Allow me to introduce my wife, sir, Mrs. Templeton," said Fred, with mischievous twinkle in his eyes. "I hope you were not inconvenienced by the ghosts! In love and war, you know, Mr. Peckley, all the devils are on your side."

Philo Peckley stood against. He had no heart to tell of the dismal night he had passed in the garet of the haunted house, in the company of rats and spiders—no words to describe his relief when a passing neighbor in his original dress released him from his solitary post. He had been outwitted, outtraced, outgeneralled! With-out a word more he turned and quitted the house, never to enter it more.

"Really," said Mr. Gage, "Flora has behaved very well. I didn't think the child had so much sense."

"Fred Templeton was here this morning," said Mrs. Gage, gloomily.

"Well, let him come! He'll be safely married to Peckley by this time to-morrow."

To Dyspeptics.

The most common signs of Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, are an oppression at the stomach, nausea, flatulence, water-brash, heart-burn, vomiting, loss of appetite, and constipation. Dyspeptic patients suffer untold miseries, bodily and mental. They should stimulate the digestion, and secure regular daily action of the bowels, by the use of moderate doses of Ayer's Pills.

After the bowels are regulated, one of these Pills, taken each day after dinner, is usually all that is required to complete the cure. Ayer's Pills are sugar-coated and purely vegetable—a pleasant, entire safe, and reliable medicine for the cure of all disorders of the stomach and bowels. They are the best of all purgatives for family use.

WHAT IS CATARRH?

Catarrh is a mucous-purulent discharge caused by the presence and development of the vegetable parasite amoeba in the internal lining membrane of the nose. This parasite is only developed under favorable circumstances, and these are: Morbid state of the blood, as the blighted corpuscle of tubercle, the germ poison of syphilis, mercury, toxemia, from the retention of the effete matter of the skin, suppressed perspiration, badly ventilated sleeping apartments, and other poisons that are germinated in the blood. These poisons keep the internal lining membrane of the nose in a constant state of irritation, ever ready for the deposit of the seeds of these germs, which spread up the nostrils and down the fauces, or back of the throat, causing ulceration of the throat; up the Eustachian tubes, causing deafness; burrowing in the vocal cords, causing hoarseness; usurping the proper structure of the bronchial tubes, ending in pulmonary consumption and death.

A New Treatment FOR THE RAPID AND PERMANENT CURE OF CATARRH.

Some time since a well-known physician of forty years' standing, after much experimenting, succeeded in discovering the necessary combination of ingredients which never fails in absolutely and permanently eradicating this horrible disease, whether standing for one year or forty years. Those who may be suffering from the above disease should, without delay, communicate with the business managers, Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King Street West, Toronto, and get full particulars and treatise free by enclosing stamp.

What the Rev. E. B. Stevenson, B. A., a Clergyman of the London Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada, has to say in regard to A. H. Dixon & Son's New Treatment for Catarrh.

Messrs. A. H. Dixon & Son: Dear Sirs—Yours of the 13th inst. to hand. It seems almost too good to be true that I am cured of Catarrh, but I know that I am. I have had no return of the disease and never felt better in my life. I have tried so many things for catarrh, suffered so much and for so many years, that it is hard for me to realize that I am really better.

I consider that mine was a very bad case. It was aggravated and chronic, involving the throat as well as the nasal passages, and I thought I would require the three treatments, but feel fully cured by the two sent me, and I am thankful that I was ever induced to send to you.

You are at liberty to use this letter, stating that I have been cured at two treatments, and I shall gladly recommend your remedy to some of my friends who are sufferers.

Yours, with many thanks, Rev. E. B. STEVENSON.

A. T. Kerr, stock broker, was yesterday sending out semi-centennial party cards to his clients in the country. Some of them had little bulls attached, others little bears.

The Hanlons' trip to Switzerland was presented at the Grand opera house in the cheeriest, brightest and most joyous comic creation of the present age.

Mr. James D. Bennett, the only Canadian survivor from the wreck of the ill-fated steamer Florida, was in the city yesterday. His conversation with several reporters gave substantially the same story of the disaster that has already been published in these columns.

See Rome and die. See the Hanlons and laugh.

Everybody should see the Hanlons.

Maria Gallagher, whose story was told in Friday's issue, appeared in the Hamilton police court yesterday on a charge of stealing from her paramour, John Brown, from Toronto. The man was not anxious to press the charge, but the prisoner was committed for trial.

The regular meeting of Beaver Lodge No. 1, S.O.G., took place Wednesday evening last, the president, A. J. Graham, in the chair. There were eight new members initiated. The election of the executive committee was held over until next meeting, when all members are expected to be present.

Don't buy your spring mantle until you visit the Bon Marche and see their elegant stock at less than half price. Farley & Co. Open till 10 to-night.

Another Victim of This Very Distressing and Dangerous Disease.

Another bigamy case falls to the ground, the male principal being again found in man. Detective McKenna, a tailor, was arrested in Streetville about a year ago for marrying his honeycomb in Toronto. He was then left for Cobourg, but returned to this city a few days ago, and McKenna found out that he was a bigamist on Yonge street. After his habits became unsteady, and he was frequently called upon by a woman known not to be his wife, he was finally led to his discharge. The woman's name is Minnie Stewart, and she resided on Toronto street. McKenna shipped his wife to the home of a relative in the city, and married the woman Stewart, who assumed the name of Merritt. Fortunately enough, he allowed the marriage to be published in a local paper, and his first wife was not long in discovering his treachery. When she visited her again she charged him with perjury and refused to live with him. His wife No. 2 followed suit. He pleaded so hard for forgiveness, however, that the woman relented, and the two left the city together. The real Mrs. McKenna lodged a complaint with the police, and McKenna was tracked from Georgetown to Northampton and St. Thomas, where he was arrested yesterday. Detective Brown has gone to St. Thomas for the pair.

Hot-keepers, you can buy a 10-dezen lot of pure linen table napkins for $6 at the Bon Marche, 7 and 9 King street east. Farley & Co. Open till 10 to-night.

"Always With You."

The Toronto savings bank charitable trust, at the meeting of its board yesterday, voted the following donations: House of Providence, $400; St. Nicholas institute for boys, $200; the monastery of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, $200; Notre Dame, $100; House of Industry, $100. The members of the board are: Father Rowley, Thomas Flynn, Chas. Doherty, Geo. Kelly, M. O'Connor (secretary-treasurer). The trust has existed since the Toronto savings bank went out of business. It is likely that the income of the trust will be increased when the money is put into more productive securities.

Vendor predicts May will be warmer than August. It matters not how warm it is in the public eye to see the Hanlons at the Grand opera house.

Determined on seeing a Fire.

At 10:45 last night the usual fire was started in the lane in rear of the Mail building. A number of empty printer's ink-bottles had been set on fire. The flames were put out without calling on the brigade. Some one evidently wants to see a large conflagration in that locality.

The Theatres.

Callender's minstrels will give a matinee at the Grand opera house this afternoon and they will close their engagement to-night.

There is a good program for both afternoon and evening at the Royal museum.

The Hanlons—a quartet of speaking pan tomimists.

THE LABACHE CONCERTS.

A Magnificent Entertainment and a Delightful Audience.

The Labache opera and concert company opened an operatic festival at the pavilion last night to an audience which, in enthusiasm and appreciation, compensated for its lack in numbers. Every number in the concert program was encored, and the artists graciously responded.

At the overture to William Tell, which was given in capital style and elicited hearty applause, by Claxton's orchestra, Signor Stagi sang Celestial Aids, and as an encore sang the Canzetta set down for him in the program. Spirito (tenor), the latter performance being beautifully colored and artistic. Signor Stagi is one of the finest tenors Toronto has heard for many a day. His voice is full, round, and used with excellent method.

The second number fell to Mlle Louise Labache who sang Concerto in La Pays from Mignon, and as an encore she sang Styrienne, from the same opera.

Signor Del Puente appeared in Non e Ver, and his appearance on the stage was the signal for an hearty outburst of applause as ever greeted a male artist in Toronto. His voice was in excellent trim, as sympathetic as could be wished, and it moved the audience to a pitch which rendered an encore imperative, to which he responded with Ohe Mannan.

Then came Mme. Labache herself in Faust, from the Stabat Mater. To say that she sang it as it has never been sung in Toronto is not saying more than the truth and she gave an encore. Il Segreto which was applauded rather beyond the bounds of good taste.

After a short wait the orchestra played the overture to Rossini's Barber of Seville in a way that opened the eyes of not a few as to the orchestral talent we possess in this city. Their performance was marked by precision of attack, good body of tone from the violins and delicate shading throughout, which prove that we have the material of a capital orchestra. Signor Vianesi, who led, is a man who makes himself felt by every performer and has proved himself as clever with the baton as with the keyboard of the piano, his accompaniments on that instrument having been faultless.

Of the operatic performance nothing need be said but that the audience was more than pleased, every thing promised and performed, and in such superior style as no one expected; and Madame Labache shares her well deserved honors with Signor Del Puente, while Signor Stagi and Mlle. Labache make a handsome support.

To-night a miscellaneous program, with selections from Carmen and Mignon, will be given.

The Bon Marche will offer today a case of handsome black ostrich feathers, very large and fine, worth $10 in the regular way, for $6.50. 7 and 9 King street east. Farley & Co. Open till 10 to-night.

Another New Hat.

The Fedora Knookabout is the name of this new hat. It is made from worn unfinished felt, is very dressy, can be worn in the street, and is unquestionably the best travelling hat yet introduced. They can be procured in black, blue and brown at Dimes's hat store.

The "constantly tired-out" feeling so often experienced is the result of impoverished blood and consequent enfeebled vitality. Ayer's Sarsaparilla feeds and enriches the blood, increases the appetite and promotes digestion of the food and the assimilation of its strengthening qualities. The system, being thus invigorated, the feeling rapidly changes to a grateful sense of strength and energy.
