

PUBLIC FINDING IT OUT REAL RAILWAY SITUATION

Clever Scheme, Deliberately Gone About, But It Will Not Work Out.

Hamilton, Sept. 4.—(Special)—The public are just getting on to the real situation in regard to the street railway. What is happening is a clever scheme deliberately gone about. Under pretence of issuing workmen's tickets, the Hon. J. M. Gibson and his fellow-directors are trying to get a modification of the terms of a bill reduction in the annual percentage paid to the city, and in return are willing to make a petty concession in the way of workmen's tickets. The whole of the scheme has been planned for some weeks. Aldermen have been sounded, city officials approached and some newspapers got into line. But the general impression is that the public are not to be caught by any such craft as this.

Everything Ready.

The members of the Trades and Labor Council have everything ready for the biggest Labor Day demonstration that was ever held in Hamilton. The features will be the procession, games at the Jockey Club in the afternoon and a band concert, and drawing for prizes at the drill hall in the evening. The procession will start at 12.30, and Merrickstreet to Bay, to Main, to Walnut, to King, to James, to Barton, to Wellington, where street cars will take the procession to the Jockey Club. The games will start at 2.30, and there are over 50 events. There will be eight bands in the procession.

Charge for Storing.

The railways have notified the shippers of the city that after Sept. 15, a charge of 2 cents a hundred a week will be made on freight allowed to remain in the railway freight sheds after 72 hours on everything up and

BLACK HAND IN MONTREAL

But Italians Call It Nonsense, Tho' There Are Signs.

Montreal, Sept. 4.—(Special)—Montreal is exercised over the so-called Black Hand of the Italian Mafia. Yes, some one pasted a picture of a coffin and skull bones in Signor Cordesca's window, St. James-street, hence all the commotion. The idea that there are now building up secret societies for promoting crime on this continent among Italians? J. M. Vigliani, the interpreter of the criminal courts, was asked.

ITALIANS ARE INDIGNANT

And Will Hold Meeting to Protest "Black Hand" Allegations.

So concerned are the Italians living in Toronto over certain statements reflecting on the Italian Mafia, Yes, respectability of the colony, on account of the "Black Hand" yarns circulated about them that to-morrow evening the Umberto Primo Benevolent Society purpose having a meeting in St. George's Hall.

Water in Your Blood?

Lots of people have thin, watery blood. They eat plenty but don't digest it. When digestion is poor the food isn't converted into nourishment, and the body rapidly loses strength.

POWER WAS WEAK.

In preparing for a big traffic-day, the Toronto Street Railway yesterday had a large staff of men at work on the generators, re-arranging a curtailment of power for yesterday's service, and as a result only a limited service was given on all the routes.

EXHIBITION NOTICES.

The Chapman Double Ball Bearing Company of Canada, Limited.

This progressive company will exhibit an extensive exhibit in the machinery hall that appeals especially to manufacturers and users of power. It will be remembered that last year they had all of the shafting in the machinery hall equipped with their own bearings. Tests made by two engineers showed a saving of 50 per cent. of the power necessary to drive the shafting with self-oiling journal bearings. These results were so satisfactory to the management of the Exhibition that they made a similar arrangement this year. The exhibitors arranged to examine the bearings operating under the ordinary conditions that are found in their own plants, and attention is especially drawn to the bearings because the usual load of a 100 horse-power engine and a 100 K.W. generator.

When It Rains, Go to East's.

It is a satisfaction to exhibition visitors to know that when it rains they have only to go to the East & Co. exhibit to procure the best and cheapest umbrellas in the market. The law of the exhibition is usually strictly enforced by exhibitors selling their wares on the grounds, but realizing the necessity of having a good umbrella depot for the convenience of storm-stayed visitors it has granted the firm of East & Co. the right to sell.

The T. Eaton Co. Display.

One cannot fairly say he has inspected the exhibit of the Eaton Co. Indeed, he can scarcely pass through the grounds without seeing the handsome display which occupies to largely a part of the eastern end of the main building. The exhibit is a model home, fitted with the latest in modern appliances, showing the making of Eatonian shoes in the process of building.

Natural Food Exhibits.

The general public usually has a good idea of what it sees it, and a product that has been on the market for several years has gained a popularity every day. That goes for many of the products that are on display in the Natural Food exhibit. The exhibit is a model home, fitted with the latest in modern appliances, showing the making of Eatonian shoes in the process of building.

Treasure Ranges and Heaters.

With characteristic enterprise, the Adams Furniture Company are presenting in the store building with a handsome display of "Treasure" ranges, coal heaters and gas heaters. These stoves are manufactured by the D. Moore Company of Hamilton, and are handled exclusively in Toronto by the Adams Company.

The Smallest Lady on Earth.

Cortia, the Doll Lady, and the smallest and most perfect in popularity, is steadily increasing in popularity. Cortia is a handsome little lady, intelligent, affable and of her mother's size. She weighs 39 pounds, is 30 inches high and has a bust of 24 inches. She is a perfect little lady, and her mother is a perfect little lady.

Zarrow's Palace of Mystery.

There are very few people who do not delight in being mystified. Although they are perfectly aware of the fact that what seems so wonderful to them is simply a clever illusion, they are always willing to see something new in the line of magical entertainments. It is perhaps this peculiarity of human nature that accounts for the popularity of Zarrow's Palace of Mystery on the Midway. There they may see not a magician or prestidigitator, but a series of elaborate and expensive illusions, each one a masterpiece of art.

John's Glass Blowers.

The visitor at the Exhibition who wishes to combine an hour of amusement with a lesson in the art of glass blowing, should drop in on John's Glass Blowers on the Midway. The exhibition is a masterpiece of art, and the whole show is direct from success in the big American summer parks.

THE RESULTS IN BRITAIN

Conclusions of Expert Dagger of Toronto Wholly Favorable to Civic Ownership.

In the current number of The Canadian Engineer, F. Dagger, telephone engineer of Toronto, has an exhaustive and highly interesting article on "Municipal Telephone in Great Britain." The conclusions at which he arrives are wholly favorable to municipal ownership and certainly the figures which he gives are convincing proof of the advantages accruing from public ownership.

At the present time, says Mr. Dagger, municipal exchanges are in operation in or in course of construction at Glasgow, Portsmouth, Brighton, Swansea and Hull. Of these Glasgow was the first to be established, its service having been opened in August, 1893. There are now 11,000 telephones in operation, the average revenue per line being £21, from which 10 per cent is deducted the postoffice royalty, making the net average receipts £18.50. The quality of the service rendered, Mr. Dagger quotes the statement of Frederick Upham Adams in the Brooklyn Engineer, that the municipal telephone service was the best he had ever inspected, and that the arrangement was a most desirable and an improvement over the clumsy and antiquated system which yet prevails in most exchanges in the United States.

Mr. Dagger furnishes a tabulated statement taken from the report of the telephone department for the year ending May 31 last, which shows the yearly progress of the enterprise, and the striking fact that the undertaking is growing financially stronger every year, so much so, in fact, that the average low rates may in the near future be reduced. The chief figures for the year to May 31, 1904, are: Capital expenditure, $1,855,205; gross revenue, $389,450; net revenue, $241,742; working expenses, $112,760; interest paid, $43,235; sinking fund paid, $40,630; depreciation fund, $17,778. The municipality out of the small charge to subscribers has thus met the operating and maintenance expenses, provided for interest and for the sinking fund, and has also been able to set aside $17,778 for depreciation. Mr. Dagger, in an exceptional case, alludes to the fact that the Glasgow municipal system has been able to set aside $17,778 for depreciation, which is an exceptional case, alluding to the fact that the Glasgow municipal system has been able to set aside $17,778 for depreciation, which is an exceptional case.

ALASKA SEAL JACKEYS ARE BETTER AND CHEAPER IN CANADA THAN IN ANY OTHER COUNTRY OF THE GLOBE.

THE ALASKA SEAL

SEALS ARE FOUND TO A LARGE EXTENT IN THE ARCTIC AND ARCTIC SEAS AND OFF THE COAST OF NEWFOUNDLAND AND SOME SOUTH AMERICAN COASTS, BUT THE ONLY HIDES SUITABLE FOR Fur JACKETS ARE THOSE OF THE ALASKA SEALS.

These inhabit what is known as the Prybyloff group of islands off the coast of Alaska. By reason of the immense slaughter of these animals yearly, the governments of United States and Canada have had to pass vigorous laws to prevent their extermination. The Prybyloff islands yield nearly 200,000 skins annually under even rigid protection. The cost of these, as the demand grows with the population of the world, is gradually increasing.

A peculiar item in our own skin is the seal skin. This is credited to the English island, the seal skins used in our famous jackets are those of healthy young animals, specially selected by our northern agents, and are London dyed. Every garment we sell is made in our own factory. Our prices for 24 inch jackets start with $200, and go upwards, being guided by quality and the dimensions required.

Miss Ada Jackson played the beautiful bride, wearing a gown of cream-colored tulle and carrying a huge bouquet of cream roses up the aisle, preceded by the ushers, Arthur Marsh and John Heald. Then came the bridesmaids, staff with Miss Jessie Hindley, who wore a pale green crepe de chine gown and white carriage, and then came Master Harold Langstaff with Miss Ella Crosby, wearing a gown of white silk lawn, carrying pink carnations. While on his way from Trieste to Vienna he mistook his ticket and he was unable to make the collector understand, that official forced him to get out of the train. Thinking he could put the matter right in a moment with the station master, he then returned to the train. Kiker left a hand-bag containing 500 uncut diamonds, weighing 150 carats, in the compartment. He did not know, however, the train began to move off, and when Kiker attempted to jump into the carriage to recover his bag, it was prevented by a porter. When the officials understood what had happened they sent telegraphic messages for the bag, but it could not be found, and Kiker has now commenced an action against the Southern Railway for £400, on the ground that the loss was due to their negligence.

Archbishop of Canterbury Voices a Sympathetic Regard and Encouragement for St. Alban's of the Future.

St. Alban's Cathedral is still but a fragment, the chancel alone having reached any degree of completion. It must have occurred to many present last night who had the ability to add in such an effort that the full realization of the plans was little less than a necessity in a community like Toronto. Whether such a necessity will be yielded to remains to be seen, but the Rev. W. Ellison, the Vicar of Windsor, who preached, touched upon the project. Nothing served to keep a diocese strong like a cathedral, he said, and the church was a necessary structure served to indicate the spirit in which we lived to-day.

Ellison's text was the miraculous feeding of the five thousand. No doubt, he said, the miracle was a difficult problem, and the only way to understand it was to take it as a plain account of what happened, written by one who was not a prophet, but an object lesson of what had a right to expect from the Lord, and what He had a right to expect from men. How the church was to make provision for the masses pouring in from all quarters of the globe, and how they were to be fed by the bread of life, the Lord could still work miracles to feed his flock.

J. Pierpont Morgan was an interested auditor. He is a man of affairs, and fully conversant with the details of the present edifice is about four hundred and twenty feet long, and is designed to fill the seats. Sixteen of the clergy took part in the service. Canon MacNair, the vicar, presided, and reading the first, and Canon Sweeney, the vicar, read the second. The walls were hung with banners, displaying the rose, thistle, shamrock and maple leaf, and the crosses of St. George, St. Andrew, St. Patrick, and the cross of gold less familiar. The altar, blue and Canada flags were also hung above the stalls on either side.

The music was exquisitely sung, the sweet fresh voices ringing clear to the high rafters, and in Handel's Largo, sung for the offertory, with special inspiration. At the close of the service the archbishop ascended the steps of the altar, and turning, stood, a dignified and memorable figure. "I want to say one word before parting," he began in measured and impressive tones. "The occasion is one which must live in the memory of us all, and certainly not least with those whose work is away in central spots, far afield. It may be my happy fortune in some of my journeys to stand here again when your cathedral has reached larger proportions, or it may be that I shall meet face to face no more. "To-night I wish to say with all my heart, and with a full conviction of what you are doing and what you may do. The hearts of all at home are united with you in that wish, and in the providence of God we may yet see greater things than these. May the church of the future be a church of the Father, the guidance of the personal presence of God the Son, and the power of the Holy Spirit, and may that guidance be with you right onward from this day until the consummation of the age, and the benediction. "The benediction. His grace then said the concluding prayers of the service, and turning once more to the congregation, he summed the great cross of gold symbol of his office with raised right hand, he bestowed the benediction of the peace that passeth all understanding.

THE HOUSE OF QUALITY. THE NEW MEN'S STORE

Search for More Concealed Bodies Continued, But as Yet Without Results. Colchester, Conn., Sept. 4.—A benevolent looking old man, with long flowing hair, bushy grey beard, kindly blue eyes and a patronizing manner is the most talked of man in Connecticut to-day, or in all this section of the country for that matter. He is Gershon B. Marx, formerly a respected Polish farmer near here, now an inmate of the State Prison at Colchester, Conn. Marx's indictment for the murder of Fowl Rodecki, whose body was found cut up and buried in an old cellar near his home last April, the story of his flight, pursuit and capture in New York was about the most exciting affair that this state old New England town has known in years. When the man was taken to jail and his wife was arrested and locked up with him, Connecticut forgot the Marx case for a time. Events of the past week have followed each other so fast that the whole country has been brought up to date on the story of the man who was arrested for the murder of another one of his farm hands—Joe Palm—whose dismembered body was found buried under a rock pile, and holds him responsible for the disappearance of still two other men who have been missing for two years. One of these men is a Polish boy named Henry C. Frick, who was seen while traveling around here, and the other a young boy who worked for the old Marx.

There is no more beautiful country in New England than Eastern Connecticut. This novel state of affairs came about by accident. As the last vestiges of the old St. Paul's Cathedral were being removed from the old St. Paul's Cathedral, the old St. Paul's Cathedral was being removed from the old St. Paul's Cathedral. The old St. Paul's Cathedral was being removed from the old St. Paul's Cathedral.

As the farm prospered there came a new farm hand, and Marx was not to engage help from time to time from among the young men of his own county. He worked on the farm for a year and a semi-annual settlement, but as yet no one has ever learned if he paid a single one. The first to work for Marx was a young Polish boy. He was on the farm for two months. One day he disappeared.

"Where's the boy, Gershon?" inquired Old Lady Polanski, who lives on an adjoining farm. "Oh, he got tired and said he was going to Poland," was Marx's laconic reply. The boy was never seen or heard of again in this region. Then there came another farm hand, who offered his wares to the farmers around here. He usually stopped with Marx, and he usually stayed in the house of the old man's bed. In the evenings he used to go across the road to the house of Louis Grollman, who had a wife and two children. He usually stayed with Grollman's family. He usually stayed with Grollman's family.

"Where's the boy, Gershon?" asked Mrs. Grollman, who went to Marx's house bright and early the next morning. "Where's the boy, Gershon?" asked Mrs. Grollman, who went to Marx's house bright and early the next morning. "Where's the boy, Gershon?" asked Mrs. Grollman, who went to Marx's house bright and early the next morning.

"That's strange. It's a wonder he wouldn't tell his friends good-by," said the old woman. "It is the bodies of the boy and the peddler that Sheriff Jackson believes are buried somewhere on one of the two farms that Marx tilled, and Capt. Jackson's deputies are now digging for them. Joe Palm had a red coat, and Rodecki followed the boy and the peddler. They, too, dropped out of sight in the same mysterious manner. He did not profess any sorcery. Marx's only explanation was that they had got tired and had gone away to Poland. He worked on the farm for six months, and in April last demanded his pay. The old fellow put him on a correspondent. "But, fear that he isn't to-night, Joe's going to leave me to-night."

Joe String was Marx's next employer. He worked on the farm for six months, and in April last demanded his pay. The old fellow put him on a correspondent. "But, fear that he isn't to-night, Joe's going to leave me to-night."

But Joe didn't follow Palm and Rodecki. He is of an inquisitive nature, and he usually stayed in the house of the old man's bed. In the evenings he used to go across the road to the house of Louis Grollman, who had a wife and two children. He usually stayed with Grollman's family. He usually stayed with Grollman's family.

Alphons J. Grant, court interpreter, began a quiet investigation on his own account, and last Sunday recovered a second body, that proved to be that of Palm. After this discovery Sheriff Lucas and Common Pleas Attorney Hadley will be able to complete their investigations. They came here last Tuesday and went over both farms. A number of suspicious looking places were noted. "I am convinced there are other bodies here," said Sheriff Jackson to a correspondent. "But, fear that he isn't to-night, Joe's going to leave me to-night."

"I am confident we have sufficient evidence to convict Marx of Rodecki's murder. From what I have learned of the case by personal investigation, I am convinced that he is the man who did it, and if not two accomplices. Whether we will ever be able to indict them I cannot say."

Marx will be represented at his trial by John C. Cune, a young Harvard graduate, who says that his client has told him a story that will startle the state and result in his acquittal.
