Rules of Etiquette.

FROM "A GENTLEMAN."

If our young man is invited to luncheon, he will find it much the same as a dinner, except that it will take place some time between twelve and two o'clock; while a dinner in a city is generally given at six o'clock, but sometimes not till eight. The very fashionable hour is nine. In Washington the time is from six to eight. If the dinner is to be formal—not merely a family dinner—our young stranger will get an invitation worded in this way:

Mr. and Mrs. John Robinson request the pleasure of Mr. James Brown's company at dinner,

On Thursday, June the Twentieth, At seven o'clock.

Our young man should send an answer at once to this, and he must say Yes or No; and if Mr. James Brown "regrets that he can not have the pleasure of accepting Mr. and Mrs. John Robinson's invitation to dinner on June the Twentieth, at seven o'clock," let him give a good reason. If he has a previous engagement, that is a good reason; if he will be out of town, that is a good reason, but he must answer the invitation at once, and say whether he will go or not. To invite to dinner is the highest social compliment one man can pay another, and it should be considered that light. Of course if a young man considers himself so brilliant that people must invite him to their homes, he may do as he pleases, but he will soon find himself alone in that opinion. It is not good looks or brilliancy of conversation that gains a man the right kind of friends; it is good manners. Conceit in young people is an appalling obstacle to their advancement. You remember the story of the New York college man who was rescued from drowning by a ferry-hand. The latter expressed his disgust with the reward he received, and one of the college man's friends asked him why he had not done more for his rescuer. "Done more!" he exclaimed, "he considered himself the handsomest man of his class." Done more! What could I do? Did I not give him my photograph, cabinet sizz?

If the young man is shy, now will come his time of trials. But if he keeps in mind the few rules that regulate the etiquette of the dinner-table, he will have no reason to fear that he will make any important mistakes. If his hostess should ask him to take a lady in to dinner, he will offer his left arm, so that his right may be free to adjust her chair, and he will wait until his place is pointed out by the hostess. He will find it awkward if he should drop into the first seat he comes to—for the laws of the dinner table are regularity and beauty. We can not all be beautiful, but we can move in obedience to given rules. It is important that the man received in society should not cover too much space with his feet; he ought to try to keep them together.

Will Naples Share the Fate of Pompeii?

(New York Freeman's Journal.)

The sudden eruption of Vesuvius, which is belching forth lava that is engulfing towns and villages, is the latest reminder of how powerless is man in the presence of the forces of nature. In our own country we have had this lesson many a time brought home to us when cyclones, blizzards and tidal waves have shown how puny is human strength when matched against the all-conquering elements that ordinarily seem so docile and so harmless. So it is with the volcano of Vesuvius, which for years has been so quiet, on exhibition for sightseers from every quarter of the globe for whose use a railroad was built up the mountain-side. Towns and villages sprang up within sight of the dark pall of smoke that constantly hangs over the sleeping monster. In these communities generation after generation lived and died without bestowing any thought upon the mortal danger they would be exposed to if Vesuvius would awake from its centuries slumber and begin bestirring itself.

The younger Pliny has left on record his own personal experience, when the volcano overflowed, baring beneath its ashes the fashionable Roman summer resorts of Pompeii and Herculaneum, which were so completely obliterated that their very existence was forgotten until they were rediscovered by accident in the eighteenth century. Pliny was fleeing with his mother just as many a son and many a mother are now fleeing from the grasp of fiery rivers of lava. The Roman matron urged her son to leave her and save his own life. "But," adds Pliny, "I absolutely refused to leave her, and talking her by the hand compelled her to go with me." He then gives a description of the fall of ashes, of the mad rush of crowds that he feared at any moment might trample himself and mother to death. Here is a striking picture of the terror that prevailed throughout that night of the year of our Lord, 79:

"You might hear the shrieks of women, the screams of children, and the shouts of men; some calling for their children, others for their husbands, and seeking to recognize each other by the voices that replied; one lamenting his own fate, another that of his family; some wishing to die, from the very fear of dying; some lifting their hands to the gods, but the greater part convinced that there were now no gods at all, and that the final endless night of which we have heard had come upon the world. Among these there were some who suggested the real terror by others imaginary or wilfully invented."

These scenes of wild unreasoning terror have been duplicated in the same neighborhood within the last few days. One cable dispatch tells how:

"After midnight terrific rumblings were heard, followed by a violent earthquake, which shattered the windows in Basso, Treccase. Then lava began flowing from the Ciaramella crater, and a wild panic seized the people rushing through the streets, shrieking with terror. The Ciaramella crater was hurling masses of incandescent rock into the air and a torrent of fire was sweeping down the side of the mountain at terrific speed. It was flowing in two streams. One of them was 200 yards wide and was headed for the centre of the town. The population fled terror-stricken to Torre del Annunziata."

We have here a repetition of what Pliny saw, and so graphically described in 79. A. D. The fugitives from Basso Treccase last Sunday were driven on by the same terror that possessed the maddened crowd that rushed by Pliny threatening to trample the life out of him and his mother.

During the whole of this week the stream of humanity has been flowing toward the coast, leaving behind them their homes and their belongings, only too glad to escape with their lives from the red fiend pursuing them. The Italian fleet is already mobilizing and will proceed to Naples to provide shelter on board for these homeless ones. Naples itself is not without fear lest the work of destruction at the base of Vesuvius may extend to the metropolis of Southern Italy. The following dispatch in reference to the King and Queen of England, who are visiting Italy, is indicative of the danger threatening Naples: "King Edward of England and Queen Alexandra have arrived at Taormina, having been dissuaded from stopping at Naples."

The latest from Vesuvius is that the eruptions have visibly increased in violence. Terrific explosions can be heard as far away as Naples. A partial clearing away of the smoke has disclosed that the whole cone of Vesuvius has been blown away. There is no forecasting the extent of the awful calamity that may befall Southern Italy before Vesuvius ceases its work of destruction.

Items of Interest.

The theme of the pastoral letter of Archbishop Harty of Manila is the necessity of a Christian education. "The natural results of a school without God," says the pastoral, "are atheism, crime, misery and uncleanliness in the social order. It can not be otherwise." The heads of families are instructed by the archbishop that the duty of educating their children devolves first upon them, and that no human pedagogue, not even the most learned, has any right to interfere with the task without the expressed consent of the parents. "To conclude," says the archbishop, "we are going to make an appeal to your Catholicity, our most beloved children in the Lord. You are well aware of the fact that the Government has granted three hours every week during which Catholic priests may go to the public schools and teach your children the rudiments of the Catholic religion. This proves the justice and fairness that moves the Government of these islands. But it is quite evident that neither the time granted is sufficient, nor supposing that is should be, is the number of priests we can dispose of adequate to carry out that work with efficacy."—Sacred Heart Review.

Count Kinjiro Hiroawa, a member of the Japanese House of Peers, has been on a visit to England after an absence of eleven years. His impressions, as given in the London Standard are by no means flattering to England or to America, either, for he mentions, as a contributing cause of England's decadence, the influence of the United States. "In the eleven years since I was here," he says, "I notice a distinct decay in religion. The influence of Christianity seems to be waning, and in its place a new gaiety and search for enjoyment have come into being. . . . I think that this new worship of material things is partly due to American influence on English character. You have become excited and materialistic, and the intermarriage of many of your peers with the daughters of rich Americans has helped to de-throne the old English spirit of simple faith in noble ideals."

A recently issued report of the work of Benedictines in the Standing Rock Reservation, where there is a Catholic Indian population of 1,561, including 109 communicants at the school, records 32 baptisms of infants, 10 of adults, 13 Christian marriages, 79 funerals, 4,012 Holy Communion, and a total membership of 793 in pious societies. The report speaks well for the Sioux and the zeal of the Benedictine monks.

For the first time in the history of the institution, the Macchaburrae address to students of the Ohio University this year will be delivered by a Catholic clergyman—the Rev. Dr. D. J. Stafford of Washington.

WEAK TIRED WOMEN

How many women there are that get no refreshment from sleep. They wake in the morning and feel tired than when they went to bed. They have a dizzy sensation in the head, the heart palpitates; they are irritable and nervous, weak and worn out, and the lightest household duties during the day seem to be a drag and a burden.

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

are the very remedy that weak, nervous, tired out, sickly women need to restore them the blessings of good health. They give sound, restful sleep, tone up the nerves, strengthen the heart, and make rich blood. Mrs. G. McDonald, Toronto is British, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart and weak spells. I got four boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking them I was completely cured." Price 50 cents per box or three boxes for $1.25, all dealers or the The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Pedlar.—I have here a soap for removing stains from paint, carpets, furniture, and—but, really, I don't think you need it, for there isn't a stain on your paint or hall carpet, and if your furniture within is as spick and span—which no doubt it is—as everything appears here, I have come to the wrong house. Housewife (pleasantly).—Never mind. You may let me have half-a-dozen cakes. I dare say they will come in handy some day.

A Terrible Cough.

Mrs. Thos. Carter, Northport, Ont., says: "I caught a severe cold which settled on my throat and lungs and my friends thought it would send me to my grave, when other remedies failed, Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup completely cured me."

A merry party being gathered in a city flat made such a racket that the occupant of a neighboring house sent his servant over with a polite message asking if it would be possible for the party to make less noise, since, as the servant announced, "Mr. Smith says that he can not read."

"I am very sorry for Mr. Smith," replied the host. "Please present my compliments to your master, say that I am sorry he can not read and tell him I could when I was four years old."

If a child eats ravenously, grinds the teeth at night and picks its nose, you may almost be certain it has worms and should administer without delay Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup, this remedy contains its own cathartic.

Minard's Liniment cures Burns, etc.

The following rather good story is told of the Right Hon. . . . Recently the politician, in showing a friend through his apartments, remarked as he entered his study: "This is a nice, cosy room—not very large. Here I entertain my political friends."

"Ah," the visitor is alleged to have replied; "it will be large enough for that."

A Druggist's Opinion.

Mr. W. J. Stinson, Austin, Man., writes: "Our customers speak so highly of Milburn's Sterling Headache Powders that it is a pleasure to recommend them to others. They never disappoint but always cure." Price 10c, and 25c.

LIVER COMPLAINT.

The liver is the largest gland in the body; its office is to take from the blood the properties which form bile. When the liver is torpid and inflamed it cannot furnish bile to the bowels, causing them to become bound and inactive. The symptoms are a feeling of fullness or weight in the right side, and shooting pains in the same region, pains between the shoulders, yellowness of the skin and eyes, bowels irregular, coated tongue, but taste in the morning, etc.

MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

are pleasant and easy to take, do not grip, weaken or sicken, never fall in their effects, and are by far the safest and quickest remedy for all diseases of the liver. Price 25 cents, or 5 bottles for $1.00, all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Sessional Notes.

The Government's estimated expenditure for the nine months ending September 30th, is set down at $273,299.75.

In our report of Mr. Mathieson's speech on the budget, in our last issue, we inadvertently made him say that it cost $1,465 for handling and distributing the Government hay.

Despite the reticence and testiness of the Leader of the Government, during Committee of supply on Friday evening Mr. Mathieson succeeded in clearly showing that the Government are out $4,000 on the hay transaction, and that there are three car loads of hay short and unaccounted for.

After matters of routine and the advancement of a stage in several bills, the budget debate was resumed on Tuesday evening the 17th. After some remarks by the Commissioner of Public Works, Mr. A. P. Prowse spoke on the opposition side.

The Leader of the Opposition pressed the Government very hard about information concerning the hay and other matters. The Premier was very cross and said he would give no more information.

The Leader of the Opposition pressed the Government very hard about information concerning the hay and other matters. The Premier was very cross and said he would give no more information.

The day sittings on Wednesday were occupied with the consideration of various bills. During the evening sitting the budget debate was resumed.

The Premier admits that expenditure is increasing and revenue decreasing. Why do not the Government make ends meet? That is their duty, and they have been promising to do it for fifteen years.

Various bills were advanced a stage during Thursday, and in the evening the House was in committee of supply till after midnight.

During the question stage on Thursday, Mr. Kichham asked the Commissioner of Public Works to lay on the table of the House a statement of particulars regarding the following amounts paid for rights of way.

When was it opened? (3) Patrick Devco, $60.00. Where is the right of way? Has the road for which it was secured been opened? When was it opened?

During Friday, nearly all the business was cleared from the order paper. Supply was resumed in the afternoon and finished in the evening.

Two great calamities have recently occurred in opposite parts of the Globe, through which a large number of people have lost their lives and hundreds of thousands have been rendered homeless and destitute.

The Leader of the Opposition pressed the Government very hard about information concerning the hay and other matters. The Premier was very cross and said he would give no more information.

During Saturday forenoon, the odds and ends remaining were finished up in the Legislature. At 2 o'clock, in the afternoon, his Honor, the Lieutenant-Governor came to the House and prorogued the Legislature in due form.

The Life Insurance Act. An Act to prevent the spread of noxious weeds. The Fish and Game Protection Act 1906. Acts respecting the following:—Telephones communication. Registration of births, marriages and deaths.

An Act respecting Public Works. The City of Charlottetown Incorporation Act. The Public School Act. The Assessment Act. The Absent Debtors Act. The County Courts Amendment Act.

An Act enabling the Government to receive temporary loans. An Act to impose taxes on companies, corporations and breweries.

An Act relating to marriages. The P. E. Island Dental Act. An Act relating to accidents by fire in Montague. The Common Law Procedure Act.

An Act for the encouragement of Agriculture. Acts to incorporate the following:—R. T. Holman Co. Ltd. The P. E. Island Fish and Game Association.

The Resolution passed by the Legislature relative to an increase of the Provincial Subsidies will be transmitted to his Excellency the Governor General, with the earnest hope that it will be favorably considered by the Federal Government.

Two great calamities have recently occurred in opposite parts of the Globe, through which a large number of people have lost their lives and hundreds of thousands have been rendered homeless and destitute.

I thank you for the liberal appropriations you have made for the maintenance of the Public Service, and I assure you that my Government will exercise the strictest economy in its expenditures.

On Wednesday afternoon last the House of Commons adjourned for the Easter holidays, so that the proceedings of the week occupied only three days.

The rescuers were surprised to find the men living although they had been buried for three days without food or water.

From Hot Springs, Colorado, comes the intelligence that the Bell Springs, which have always a heat of 80 degrees, have increased to 120, and are getting better. Reports from Yellowstone Park, in the same State, say that the Old Faithful and the Grand geysers are vomiting lava and red hot stones, and that there is every indication that they will turn into volcanoes and destroy the surrounding country.

Dreadful Disaster. San Francisco Destroyed by Earthquake and Fire.

A most appalling disaster has overtaken San Francisco, California, by which the greater part of the city has been destroyed, and a great many lives have been lost and hundreds of thousands left homeless. A terrific earthquake occurred there early on Wednesday morning, the 18th inst., which destroyed almost the entire business portion of the city. The shock was first felt in the part of the city nearest the water front. This section of the city was largely reclaimed from the water and built up, and here the earthquake seems to have been most destructive. Shocks were repeated, and extended to other parts of the city until panic destruction and disaster were rife, not only in San Francisco, but in other cities and towns in the State. Oakland, Berkeley, Sacramento, Santa Rosa, Stockton, Los Angeles and other places suffered more or less. San Francisco was a beautiful city of upwards of 400,000 inhabitants, and possessed some of the most magnificent buildings in any city of our time. Its city hall was a most magnificent edifice said to have cost $6,000,000, and it is laid in ruins. The city contained many of the modern skyscraper steel buildings, all the way from ten to twenty stories high. The greater number of these have been demolished. A considerable portion of the residential quarter escaped the earthquake shocks; but afterwards was largely destroyed by fire.

The earthquake caused the breaking of most of the water mains cutting off the water supply. At the same time the destruction of houses and the tumbling down of innumerable chimneys started fires in all possible directions. Fires raging in the portions that escaped the earthquake and no water to fight them ushered in the second stage of the disaster, equally as serious as the first. For days the fires raged unchecked, and for a time it seemed as if the doomed city might be entirely wiped out. By Saturday, however, the flames had then got under control, but not before the greater part of the once beautiful city lay in ashes.

With the city reduced to debris and smouldering ruins; with almost all the stores of provisions and centres of supplies wiped out, the hundreds of thousands of homeless people who barely escaped with their lives seemed for the time being to be face to face with starvation.

The civic, state and military authorities were fully alive to the seriousness of the situation, and knew that the spectre of famine confronted them. They acted promptly, and were enabled to afford relief in an incredibly brief space. The number of the homeless has been set down at 300,000. These were conducted to golden gate park, and to other available unoccupied squares where temporary homes were provided for them, in the shape of tents and camps of one kind or another. Some found refuge in churches, halls and other unoccupied buildings. Relief committees were promptly formed and all provision and grocery stores remaining were taken charge of, and such supplies as could in this way be procured were carefully distributed among the needy.

All provision trains coming to the city were immediately commandeered, the names of the consignees ascertained and the provisions distributed to the homeless people. For a day or two the question of food was a very serious problem; but by this time all danger on that score is over. Provisions and money are pouring in from all quarters as rapidly as they can be carried. Water supply and sanitation for these immense concentration camps, were for a time matters of considerable anxiety; but all these problems have now been pretty thoroughly solved.

No sooner had the magnitude of the dreadful disaster become known than the whole world stood ready to lend assistance. The United States Congress immediately voted one million dollars for relief of the stricken city. The Dominion Parliament at once voted one hundred thousand dollars. New York city in a few hours subscribed about a million and a half, and Boston and all the other large cities subscribed hundreds of thousands. Up to Monday the amount of money at the disposal of the relief committees was upwards of four million dollars. In addition to this, provisions and supplies of all kinds are on the way to San Francisco as fast as steam can convey them.

From this it will be seen that so far as caring for the living is concerned the work is well in hand, and there is no danger in this direction. Of course, a great many lives were lost; no one can tell how many. Some place the estimate at a thousand; but that is conjecture. Several hundreds of bodies have been recovered, many of them unrecognizable, and many have been recovered and buried without being reported. It will take some time to arrive at even an approximate estimate of the lives lost. The offices and plants of the three great daily papers were completely destroyed and telegraphic connection with San Francisco was cut off, in consequence of the destruction of all stations. At first it was necessary to cross the Bay to Oakland in order to send telegraphic messages. Matters in this connection are now improved and temporary stations have been arranged. In consequence of this breakdown in communication facilities and the extraordinary demands on the service, it has been difficult for anxious people in all parts of the world to obtain any news from friends in the doomed city. Word has been received here by Very Rev. Dr. Morrison from his brother, Rev. Dr. Morrison of Berkeley. Word has also been received from Rev. Dr. McMillan of Cardigan who was at the time with Rev. Dr. Morrison at Berkeley. They escaped injury. Intelligence has also been received from many other Islanders and probably most of them will be heard from before long.

The property loss by fire and earthquake in San Francisco is probably a billion dollars. On this the insurance companies carried approximately $175,000,000 of insurance. The companies say they will pay all the insurance losses.
