Parcels for Newfoundland Forces Overseas!

(1) Parcels must not exceed 11 lbs. in weight.

(2) Parcels addressed to members of the Newfoundland Forces Overseas should bear the name and address of a second addressee to whom the parcels may be delivered or forwarded if it should prove impossible to deliver the first. The original address should be written on the FRONT of the parcel where the postage stamps and Customs declaration are fixed, and the second or alternative address should be written on the BACK of the parcel. If not deliverable to first addressee, send to . . . . . (2nd addressee).

(3) If a second address is not furnished at the time of posting and delivery cannot be effected, the contents of the parcel, unless of exceptional value or of a personal nature, will be turned over to the Military Authorities for distribution.

(4) Parcels containing articles of a personal nature or of special value will be returned if a request for their return in case of non-delivery is made by the sender, such request to be written on the parcel at the time of posting.

(5) This plan is being adopted at the suggestion of the British Post Office, which states that the present procedure of holding undelivered parcels at the Dead Letter Office until instructions are received as to their disposal is resulting in the waste of a large quantity of perishable food-stuffs, which form the contents of 80 per cent. of parcels addressed to soldiers.

IN THE TOILS; But Happiness Comes at Last.

CHAPTER I.
A CHANCE TO ESCAPE.

In her excitement she has drawn closer and closer to the motionless figure, and now she is so close that she could, if she does not restrain herself, actually touch it. But she seems to remember herself in time. She pulls up short, and brings her hand down upon the window sill.

"Girl!" she says, with a short breath, "you are enough to drive a woman mad. There! I—I can't bear your white face any longer. Take—take the work home, and think—think—as you go, of the chance that lies before you—the chance of escaping from the life you are so sick and tired of, and from me—oh, I know," she adds bitterly, "there is no love lost between us, though I am your father's sister. There, go over with the cross, and think! Not that it matters, for sooner or later you will marry Jacob Burney."

Olive waits to hear the last threat, for it is nothing less; then, having put on her hat and cloak, leaves the room.

As she goes into the open air, she pauses a moment, and looks up with a long sigh, as if for breath; then, with the light box in her hand, hurries on.

Looking at her, one would have said: "There goes a princess in disguise—there's a girl who will cause many a heartache."
But the princess in disguise was only a poor hard-worked girl, and the only heart that ached—unless the other was Jacob Burney's—was her own.

CHAPTER II.
ANOTHER OFFER.

IT was dusk by the time she had reached the end of the long street, and when she turned to the right, there rose up before her the tall elms that surrounded her destination, the Court.

She was about to enter the avenue, when a footstep caused her to turn her head, and there came out from among the trees and stood before her a young man.

Olive was not given to starting or blushing, and was not by any means timid, but she paused irresolutely, and a faint color stole over her pale face, and gave the finishing touch to her beauty. The man raised his hat with an eager, deferential air, and revealed a face that just escaped being handsome, a face full of a certain caring, defiant recklessness, and had just a suspicion of selfishness about it. At that moment it was at its pleasantest, full of an eager wistfulness and eager humility.

Olive had seen this face twice—three times before. She could scarcely pass on; indeed, the stranger almost stood in her path.

"Miss Estcourt—Olive!" he said, and anxiously putting out his hand with a gesture of entreaty, "one mo-

Too Nervous to Sleep.

Nerves Wrecked by Accident—Was Afraid to Go in a Crowd or to Stay Alone—Tells of His Case.

When sympathy was felt in this city for Mr. Dorsey, who met with a distressing accident when his foot was smashed in an elevator.

The shock to the nervous system was so great that Mr. Dorsey was in a pitiable condition for a long time. He was like a child in that he required his mother's care nearly all the time. He feared a crowd, could not stay alone and could not sleep because of the weakness and excited condition of his nerves.

Detroit doctors did what they could for him, but he could not get back his strength and vigor until he fortunately heard of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is no mere accident that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food proves to be exactly what is needed in so many cases of exhausted nerves. It is composed of the ingredients which nature requires to form new blood and create new nerve force.

For this reason it cannot fail and for this reason it succeeds where ordinary medicines fail.

Mr. Laurence B. Dorsey, 23 Stanley street, London, Ont., writes: "About three years ago I got my foot smashed in an elevator in Detroit, which completely wrecked my nerves. I doctor with the doctors there, but they did not seem to be able to help me. My nerves were in such a state that I could not go down town alone, or go any place where there was a crowd. Sometimes my mother would have to sit and watch over me at night, and sometimes I could not get any sleep at all. But one day last winter I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had completely used the first box I could see a difference in my condition. I continued using these pills for some time. The result was splendid. I feel so much better, can sleep well at night, can go out on the street and attend gatherings like the rest of people. I am so pleased to be able to tell you what Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has done for me, and to recommend it to other people."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all Dealers, or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

ment—only a moment. Listen to me for a moment only, I beg of you. At least, wait until I have asked you to forgive me."

Olive hesitated, looked irresolutely to the right and left, then stopped and looked at him with a slightly troubled gleam in her dark eyes.

A sudden flash lit up his face, evidently he had not expected his prayer to be answered.

"Thank you—how can I thank you?" he said, in a low voice. "I don't deserve that you should stop or speak to me, I know that; but—but I could not leave the place until I had obtained your forgiveness."

Olive looked at him, with a faint flush.

"I have nothing to forgive," she said.

"Yes, yes!" he responds eagerly, "you have a great deal to forgive, I know that. I had no right to speak to you, I have no right to speak to you now; but—but how could I help myself? You told me when I saw you the first time—it was at the post office, you remember—ah! I remember it!—that there was one belonging to you to whom I could speak, to whom I could go. They told me—I mean the people in the village—how cruelly you were shut up, how hard you worked—you! who ought not to know what the word means, who ought to live a life of joyful, pleasant ease! You see, Miss Estcourt, I have learned all about you—please, do not go! Wait a moment until I have finished!"

Olive had made a movement as if to leave him, but at this pleading tone she stopped, again, and listened, with her eyes cast down.

"I have only seen you three times," he continued. "If you send me away now—if you tell me to go, I shall never see you again. Let it be so, if you so decide; but I will not go—I say I will not go," he said, with a passionate kind of defiance—"until I have told you that I shall never forget you—that I love you!"

Olive started, and raised her pale face, and looked at him.

"Yes," he went on with a gesture, "I have said it. I meant to say it plainly the next time I met you. I have waited here in the village to see you, and to tell you, and then, if you would have it so, to leave you forever! Miss Estcourt, am I to go?"

Olive trembled, and was silent for a moment.

"Why do you speak to me like—like this?" she said. "Why do you tell me this? I have only seen you three times. You do not know me; you know my name—"

"I asked the people at the post office," he broke in quickly. "Was that wrong?"

Olive was silent.

"When I saw you the second time, it was one evening in the churchyard. You were sitting under the trees, and I remember the very look of the sky, and the sun upon the church tower. When I saw you the second time, I asked you to let me come and see Mrs. Dennett—your aunt, the only person belonging to you whom I could see."

Olive shook her head.

"Yes," he assented eagerly. "You told me that I could not come—that I was never to speak to you again, and I promised that I would not do so. I meant to keep that promise, and to go away from this place, that will be the happiest or the most miserable spot on God's earth for me. Just as you decide. Well, it was too hard a thing to promise; I could not do it. I am here, you see, almost against my will; I cannot go! Since that evening when I first saw you, I have had no peace or rest—I think I am bewitched, Miss Estcourt; do not send me away!"

It was so strange, so startling, so unlike anything that the girl, in her innocence, had ever read or dreamed of, that she stood silent and trembling, not knowing whether to go on without a reply, or to move away with a cold rebuff.

But the man at her side did not give her much time for thought.

"I know what you are thinking—I can read your face," he said hurriedly. "You are thinking that you do not know me, that I am an utter stranger, that I am everything that is bad—that, although I know your name, you are ignorant of mine."

Unconsciously, Olive's face gave assent.

"You see," he exclaimed, with eager triumph, "I can read your thoughts! Well, let me tell you who I am. My name is Rawdon—Stephen Rawdon. I am an artist; I came down here to sketch and to take a holiday. I am like yourself—I have no father, mother, sister, or brother. I am quite alone in the world; and—and that is all; there is nothing else. I live in London, alone, always alone; and I shall go back to-night, miserable, unsettled, unhappy, unless you tell me that I may stay, in the hope that I may see you now and again, if only for a minute at a time."

Olive shook her head; she had had time to realize the position, and common sense was battling hard against the charm of the glib tongue, the novelty of the situation, and the dim, faint chance, of which she was scarcely conscious, of escape from the fate that awaited her at her aunt's hands.

"You will send me away!" he said bitterly. "You are offended because I have stopped and spoken to you like this. Be just! What other course was open to me? I knew that I loved you, that I could not be happy unless I won you, and yet I was not to have the opportunity of seeing you. They told me that your aunt, the only person belonging to you, meant to sell you—"

Olive started.

"To sell you," he repeated, with a passionate intensity, "to some old money grubber in the village. That decided me; I should have gone but for that piece of news. I swore that I would stay and see you, and tell you the truth. Miss Estcourt—Olive—you see I know your name; it is the sweetest name that was ever spoken—will you let me stay here so the chance of helping you? I do not insult you by supposing that you consent to your aunt's scheme, it is not possible, it is too shameful. One word! Tell me that it is not so—that I may hope to see you again."

Olive shook her head.

"I cannot see you—you must not speak to me again," she said, in her low, soft voice—yet it was a troubled voice, too, for his words told, every one of them, and she was just in the state when such words were likely to tell.

"Then you do not believe me?" he said despairfully; "you mistrust me, you think that I am lying, perhaps!"

"No, no!" said Olive, flushing, for there was a reproach in his voice, almost fierce in its intensity.

"Then," he exclaimed eagerly, "grant my prayer; let me see you once—only once more, to-morrow evening, I will wait for you in the churchyard, you always walk there. Oh, I have watched you when you did not think that I was near. Give me one word—only one word, say 'go' or 'stay.' That is all I ask. You will come? No! At least, you will come to tell me that I must go?"

In his eagerness, he was terribly excitable and passionate, he laid his hand reverentially and respectfully enough on her arm. Olive felt it tremble and quiver, and her heart seemed to quiver and palpitate in sympathy. Her lips formed the word "no," but before she could utter it there was a clatter of horses' hoofs, and the flash of carriage lamps.

Her companion seemed straited, and drew back with a quick movement. Olive turned as quickly.

"Oh, go!" she said.

"Yes, yes!" he responded. "But to-morrow—to-morrow! You will come!"

Then he vanished, so to speak, among the trees.

Olive stood, too confused for the moment to go on. A dogcart, drawn by a couple of spirited horses, driven tandem fashion, dashed close beside her—so close, that the leader, a nervous, fidgety animal, was startled by the motionless figure, and sprang aside. The road was none too wide, and but for the skill of the driver, there would have been a decided upset. But, with a flick of the long whip, the leader was brought to order, and the thing dashed on, but not before Olive, her senses strained to the utmost, caught the sound of a cheery, musical laugh, and the words, thrown carelessly out on the evening air:

"Very near a spill that time, George. What was it—a witch?"

"Dunno, my lord," was the reply, in a servant's voice. "A young lady going up to the Court, I think, my lord."

Olive hurried on, too agitated to think, walking fast, as if trying to get away from the necessity of realizing that strange scene which had—though she did not know it—opened the great drama of her life.

Pale, but calm, for it would not do to be anything but calm at the Court, she rang the great bell which hung at the entrance, and was admitted to the hall. A footman, resplendent in the Rivers' dark-purple livery, motioned her, superciliously, to a seat, and then leisurely ascended the vast staircase to acquaint her young ladyship that Olive was waiting.

He may have stopped on his way to read the paper, or hold a conversation with one of his fellow servants, or else my lady was engaged, for Olive waited for what seemed half an hour before he came as leisurely down the stairs, and, with a polished bow, requested her to step up to Lady Rivers' boudoir.

THEY KNOW THE BISHOP.

Who is the Londoner who, if he walks along the Embankment in civilian attire is recognized and saluted by every Colonial soldier strolling there? The Bishop of London. I happened to walk from the Temple to Charing Cross behind him this afternoon and can certify that every Colonial soldier knew him and saluted—still rather a special favor for the big fighting men from the Colonies to say. Yet I have seen others in Whitehall walk blankly past Lloyd George.

THE LATE DR. GARRETT ANDERSON.

The memorial service at Christ Church, Endell Street (in the West-end district of London) to the late Mrs. Garrett Anderson, the first English woman doctor, was a moving tribute to her work for the world. Two significant features marked off the service. First, women took a considerable part in it. In place of the ordinary choir a number of women medical students led the singing, others acted as sideswomen, while a woman played the organ. Then, again, the note of the service was not one of grief, but of thanksgiving and joy in the memory of a noble career. Instead of the customary funeral march the service ended with "Hark! the herald angels sing," followed by a carol. One felt that all this was fitting, and the Bishop of Stepney in a glowing tribute emphasized the lesson to be drawn by the "spiritual daughters" (as he called them) of the deceased pioneer. In her earliest struggles she was cheered by Sir James Paget, the great doctor, and now his son the Bishop seemed to revive the enthusiasm of the father expressed by the son's affection in a moving and noble eulogium.

LONDON GOSSIP.

LONDON, Dec. 31st, 1917. THEY KNOW THE BISHOP. Who is the Londoner who, if he walks along the Embankment in civilian attire is recognized and saluted by every Colonial soldier strolling there? The Bishop of London. It happened to walk from the Temple to Charing Cross behind him this afternoon and can certify that every Colonial soldier knew him and saluted—still rather a special favor for the big fighting men from the Colonies to say. Yet I have seen others in Whitehall walk blankly past Lloyd George.

THE LATE DR. GARRETT ANDERSON.

The memorial service at Christ Church, Endell Street (in the West-central district of London) to the late Mrs. Garrett Anderson, the first English woman doctor, was a moving tribute to her work for the world. Two significant features marked off the service. First, women took a considerable part in it. In place of the ordinary choir a number of women medical students led the singing, others acted as sideswomen, while a woman played the organ. Then, again, the note of the service was not one of grief, but of thanksgiving and joy in the memory of a noble career. Instead of the customary funeral march the service ended with "Hark! the herald angels sing," followed by the "Agnus Dei," and the "Te Deum." The Bishop of Stepney in glowing tribute emphasized the lesson to be drawn by the "spiritual daughters" (as he called them) of the deceased pioneer. In her earliest struggles she was cheered by Sir James Paget, the great doctor, and now his son the Bishop seemed to re-echo the enthusiasm of the father en-tertained by the son's affection in a moving and noble eulogium.

HISTORY FROM THE SHOP WINDOWS.

The rewriting of history from the point of view of a single institution or a single form of enterprise is no new thing, but from one or two venturesome and not unsuccessful experiments lately we seem to be threatened with a rather notable development of it. The time may yet come when every tradesman will think it necessary to supply his customers with a history of his own town as seen from his shop window. It will be a researchful and entertaining his-what they wanted indirectly through my, but they might have obtained neutrals in a way that would have been difficult of proof as a transaction bringing both the vendor and the purchaser within the penal clauses of the existing statute. According to information which reached the authorities it would appear that a real danger existed which could adequately be met only by legislation, and this has now been overcome by confining the transfer of immovable property to British subjects. For a time the country will be in military occupation. Indian and native troops will chiefly be used, and this will release a large number of men, British and South African, for service elsewhere. It is intended to open all the towns on the Central Railway, from Dar-es-Salaam to Tabora, a distance of 630 miles, to trade from January 1st.

ADMIRAL WEMYSS.

The public may be prejudiced at will begin with paleolithic man and first against the new First Lord because of his reputation as a courtier. He is a great-grandson of William IV. He served on the Royal yacht, and commanded the Ophir when the present King visited the colonies in 1901, and he has held many Court honors. These facts, of course, do not bear on the matter, except that it will be harder with Admiral Wemyss than with a soldier of a harder record to get the public enthusiasm at the start. But Admiral Beatty, it must be remembered, has also a name for popularity at Court and social distinction. Admiral Wemyss's service in the present war included the command of a cruiser squadron in the Atlantic and service in the Mediterranean. He was Lord Kitchener's naval adviser in the conference which decided the Gallipoli withdrawal, and he assisted in the evacuation. Just before his appointment, in August, to be Second Sea Lord, it was understood that he would command the British naval forces in the Mediterranean. As Second Sea Lord he was also deputy to Admiral Jellicoe at the Admiralty. It is worth noting that the new First Lord, like the Commander-in-Chief on the Western front, comes from Fifeshire, Scotland. The link is even closer, for the Haig property at Cameron Bridge marches alongside the Wemyss property.

TEACHERS' SALARIES IN ENGLAND.

Prizes within the grasp of teachers in public elementary schools in England and Wales are not very numerous as far as salary is concerned. According to a return dealing with the position as at March 31, 1917, only 247 certificated men teachers and three certificated women teachers receive £350 a year or more, and 204 of the men and all the women are in London. Yet there are 36,827 certificated men and 77,827 certificated women teachers employed in England and Wales. The vast majority of salaries in the case of the men range from £100 to £200 a year, and of the women from £80 to £160. The level of salaries for the uncertificated is much lower, and amongst the women 12,635 receive from £50 to £65 per annum. The uncertificated teacher in London is now almost a negligible quantity, but in rural England the circumstances are quite the reverse. Whilst the number of certificated women teachers employed by county councils outside London is 23,226, the uncertificated number 20,234, and those described as supplementary, who are in receipt of still lower scales of salary, 11,063. These statistics give ground for Mr. Fisher's (the Minister of Education) lamentation that a career in the public elementary schools of England offers too few attractions to teachers of ability and ambition. Elementary education in rural England has been fearfully backward compared with that in Scotland, and the policy of improving the condition of the teachers by raising the level of salaries ought to assist in adding to their self-respect and thereby to their efficiency.

EAST AFRICAN COMMERCIAL PRECAUTIONS.

A measure intended to prevent as far as possible the acquisition of fixed interests in the protectorate by alien enemies during the remaining period of the war has been passed by the Legislative Council of British East Africa, at the request of the Imperial Government. Before the Bill went through persons of this kind could not have acquired such interests without an obvious breach of the law relating to trading with the ene-

Simple Wash Cures Eczema. A great skin specialist who has compounded for his patients a marvellously effective cure for Eczema, Bad Leg and all other forms of itchy, has recently given his valuable preparation to the world. It is known as D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema, a simple external wash, easy to apply, a reliable home remedy. D. D. D. gives instant relief from skin distress the moment it is applied. It penetrates the pores and kills the germs which are the root of skin disease. Nauseating, stomachic drugs are worthless, for the disease is in the skin, not in the blood. Greasy salves are dangerous for they clog the pores and aid the growth of germs. D. D. D. washes out disease, cleanses the pores, then soothes and heals the skin. Test this simple cure; get a bottle of D. D. D. Prescription to-day. Sold Everywhere. Recommended by T. McMurdo & Co., A. W. Kennedy, M. Connors, Peter O'Mara.

CHANGE OF SUBJECT.

I talked of war and dead men's bones till all around me were tired, and something else than grief and groans my weary aunts desired. So then I talked about the crops, the barley and the wheat, till people heard my soulful yawns the whole length of the street. I said, "I'll give them divers tunes, from this, my willing lyre," and so discussed the price of prunes, the cost of baled hay wire. I spied a while at art and song of flowers that bloomed in spring, and thus I chirped the whole day long, of this and 'o'erthing. And, every time I paused to draw a deep, refreshing breath, the other fellow plied his jaw, and talked of war and death, and blood and sicknesses, there's no attention for the chap who speaks of buds and bees. I'd like to hand out cheery words of wisdom to the push. I'd like to talk about the birds that carol in the bush. I'd sing of sunsets in the west, that gild the crag and tor, but when I pause to take a rest, some chap brings in the war.

Mother! Don't Take Chances If Child's Tongue Is Coated. If cross, feverish, sick, bilious, clean little liver and bowels.

A laxative to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Children simply will not eat, and their parents don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftentimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Letter From One of "Ours."

Dear Mother—Christmas and New Year have both passed away, and here we are, still on the go. Christmas was spent most enjoyably. The Battalion was billeted in a nice little village, miles away from the firing line, and where bullets and shells seemed a thing of the past. Xmas Day was observed as a holiday. At 1.30 p.m. dinners were served and for one day in the year each Company dined together in their respective messes, where they were supplied with plates, and the old Army mess tin dispensed with. The menu was of the Christmas standard—turkey, cabbage, carrots, pomme-de-terre and "black-jack," after which some splendid pudding was served. For tea another up-to-date menu was served, and the day was spent most enjoyably. At night, dinners were held in the Officers' and Sergeants' messes, all in the form of a good old Nid. Soiree. At the Sergeants' dinner there were about 20 present, amongst whom were several French messes, two of whom were young cadets studying for commerce after the war, and who were home for the Christmas holidays. Both were fine chaps and could speak English very good. The dinner was exceptionally good, in fact war economy was omitted for the time being. After dinner, speeches and songs were given, and by midnight all present were feeling in the best of spirits. About 2 a.m. the band was respected, which I presume was much to the discomfort of the civvies. All through the following week, Christmas was kept up, and until New Year's Day, when prior to our departure from the village, the last big night was held. While resting here we found the people very hospitable, and I am afraid that in many cases, homes and Scotland were forgotten. Personally, I had the misfortune to fall in love with a fair mademoiselle, and instead of expecting a Scotch wife, you must now anticipate meeting my French fiancée, who, by the way, can speak good English. Well, really, the village was almost too good to rest in during war time, as it seemed so much like home and we spent such a good time that that was entirely forgotten. On the 3rd January we left the village, much to our regret, in fact I believe there were tears shed, which is a clear proof that very good friends were parting. However, we promised to return, and I trust that before long we shall have the pleasure. On the first day of the march we covered 15 miles, with full marching order and a snow covered road. That night we rested in a village and our billet was in a half demolished barn, very unlike the comfortable bed of the previous night. Next day we resumed the march and covered 12 miles, so here we are for a few days. Our billet is very good; a nice little room with two beds and occupied by four of us. Yesterday the gifts of the W.P.A. arrived for which we are more than grateful. The pork ribs and bread are a great treat. We get brewer's minus fish—every morning, and with the Army ration of bacon makes a lovely meal. Will is out now with Madam trying a few caplin, and everything looks as homely as can be. Mair's chocolates were also given out last night, and some of the "true" friends of the late village have parcelled them and are mailing them to day to the fair sex. I had my box devoured before the thought occurred to me. Good chocolates are such a rare thing nowadays that I don't feel like parting with them. All the chaps are more than grateful to the W.P.A. for their wonderful kindness and for their noble work, which inspires us on this side to play our part. With lots of love, from JACK.

How Kidney Trouble Struck Uxbridge Man.

MR. R. J. THOMPSON WAS SEIZED WITH CONVULSIONS. His Life Has Despaired of, But After Using Dodd's Kidney Pills He Feels Himself Again. Uxbridge, Ont., Feb. 5th. (Special)—Mr. R. J. Thompson, who lives on R.R. No. 2 near here, is loud in his praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills. "I am delighted with Dodd's Kidney Pills," he says. "The doctors said I could not live, and if I did I would never be able to do anything again, as I had chronic Bright's Disease. But, thank God, I am doing my own work again. "My trouble came on very suddenly. I had just finished my dinner, and was taking a man home when I was taken with a convulsion fit. I had fourteen that afternoon, and the third day I had nine more. "I have taken only eleven boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I feel like myself again." Mr. Thompson is only one of many in this neighborhood who look on Dodd's Kidney Pills as the standard remedy for kidney ills. They are purely a kidney remedy, and are used for all kidney troubles from backache to Bright's disease.

Takes Over Seal.

Capt. Randall took over the steamer Seal yesterday on behalf of her new owners, Bains, Johnston & Co., of St. John's, Nfld., and moved the boat from Farquhar's wharf up to Pier 4, where a large shipment of flour is being put aboard direct from the cars. A complete new complement of officers and crew, sixteen besides the captain, all from the Ancient Colony, have signed on. The Seal was purchased principally for prosecuting the seal fishery but when not thus engaged will be used as a freighter for which she is well fitted in every way besides suitably adapted for sealing.—Halifax Herald, Jan. 26th, 1918.

Fire Sufferers Grateful.

Word has been received in the city to the effect that the families of Random Island who lost their homes and effects last year in the forest fire, are all comfortably housed for the winter through the kindness of friends in that vicinity. Most of the families have started to rebuild and very material assistance has been given them by the generous response of the public in contributing, receipts of which have already been acknowledged in this paper. The fire sufferers are most grateful for this assistance, and in a short while the devastated sections will again take on their former appearance.

Some Thoughts on Hospitals.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON

How few people there are nowadays who have never been in a hospital! (Especially women.) We fell to talking about hospitals the other day and of a group of six, five had had some hospital experience. Fifteen or twenty years ago the ratio would probably have been reversed.

Of Course Operations Are Sometimes A Fad.

Of course there is such a thing as making sickness and operations and hospitals a fad to fill up an otherwise empty life. Mrs. Norris has a character in one of her books who retires to a hospital whenever she feels slighted at home and wants to be the centre of the stage. But in its proper place the hospital is one of the most wonderful examples of our modern specialisation.

The violent prejudice against being taken to a hospital that used to be so common is now mostly confined to the ignorant and the aged. Of course we don't go to hospitals for minor illnesses but I sometimes wish there could be some sort of moderate priced hospital home, where one could go for that purpose. Not only would such a place be a boon to the invalid but also to those who have to add the business of nursing to already crowded lives. How often one illness follows another in such families, simply because one member has gotten dragged down by taking care of another!

Hard Both On The Patient And The Amateur Nurse.

It is so hard to be sick at home when one knows that one is making it hard for others. I shall never forget the exquisite sense of relief I felt when after trying very hard not to be a burden to one delicate and one very busy housemate, I had myself removed to a hospital. "Is there anything at all you would like?" the night nurse asked me at two o'clock. "Could I, I said, hardly daring to ask for anything so wonderful, "have some orange juice?" "Certainly," she said promptly and in a few minutes the orange juice appeared, with cracked ice to boot.

Won't Some Of My Doctor Friends Take A Stand Against This?

However I have one criticism which I have long wanted to voice. Incidentally I find that many ex-patients are with me in this grievance. And this is the almost universal habit of waking the patients up early in the morning to wash their faces and hands.

This has to be done, I am told, so that the night nurse may perform this function before going off duty. Is that more important than that a patient who has perhaps lain awake until two or three o'clock should have all the sleep he can possibly get? How can doctors who must know the healing power of this sovereign remedy, permit routine which takes it away from those who sorely need it.

The publisher of the best Farmer's paper in the Maritime Provinces in writing to us states:

"I would say that I do not know of a medicine that has stood the test of time like MINARD'S LINIMENT. It has been an unfailing remedy in our household ever since I can remember, and has outlived dozens of would-be competitors and imitators."

Both for the sake of safety and appearances, get rid of waste paper promptly.

THE LAW SUIT.

The law suit is a modern substitute for brass knuckles and the stuffed club, and when resorted to in a methodical and systematic manner does not disgrace anybody but the client who expects to win in the supreme court. A vindictive client with a stern purpose and ample security can be knocked cold by a decision of the lower court, only to rise with his checkbook in one hand, fully recovered and thirsting for more of the same. As a painless method of punishing people who do not own anything in their own name except a single harness, the law suit is a pronounced success.

Law suits are conceived in hope, born of confidence and kept alive by an expensive stimulant known as the appeal bond. This is a mild form of death warrant which enables a cocksure client to talk turkey to the supreme court. We are selling this iron at $3.00, and recommend it as a useful Xmas gift.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

In planning your meals for the day to meet the requirements of the Food Control Board, use Cleveland's Health Cocoa; it is appetizing, economical, nutritious and health giving.

Every man, woman and child can do something to help our country in this crisis by using Cleveland's Health Cocoa. To help conserve food, insist upon having Cleveland's. Do not take any substitute. jan5,s,w,31

EARLY MESS

THE TOLL OF THE U-BOAT. Methods of brigades in the House of Commons to-day, have to death 14,120 non-combatant British men, women and children.

MAIN ASKS RELEASE OF AIR MEN.

LONDON, Feb. 5. A Reuter despatch confirms that through Holland, has informed Germany that unless the captured British airmen, Capt. Scholtz and Capt. Woakey, who were sentenced long imprisonment for distributing leaflets and treated as ordinary prisoners of war, British will be compelled to take reprisals, and a month's notice will be given in accordance with the arrangement reached by Lord Newton's recent mission to the League.

ON THE WEST FRONT.

British Headquarters in France, Feb. 5. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency) raids and patrol encounters and snatches of the present operations on the Western front. Last night one of our Western raiders got into the enemy positions near Poelcapelle. After killing twenty-nine of the enemy, they brought back three prisoners. Our casualties were very slight, but these are only in the transit. Canadian soldiers continue to arrive from the West, but the Allied forces in the West continue to increase in an overwhelming current. The clash, when it comes, will be the most stupendous in point of numbers ever known.

TARTAR FORCES OPERATING.

LONDON, Feb. 5. Tartar forces in operation against the Bolsheviks. They already have captured the town of Galt, in Crimea, and are now fighting with the Red Army to press onward and take Sebastopol, Russia's big fort and naval base on the Black Sea.

HANDLING THE SUBS.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5. Representative Miller, who recently visited the battle front in France, told the House to-day he believed the German subs are being destroyed about as rapidly as Germany can build them. He praised Vice-Admiral Sims for the methods he has adopted with American destroyers and the American shipping should be believed by naval officers and not by the Shipping Board. There were no American ships in the crews of the two transports on which he crossed the Atlantic, he said.

IMPERIAL WAR CONFERENCES.

LONDON, Feb. 5. Reuter's Ottawa Agency. The Imperial war cabinets and Imperial war conferences will be held in London this year in continuation of those held last year. It is understood that representatives of the Dominions will attend to confer with British ministers on war problems. The Imperial Council is now trying to arrange a date which will suit as far as possible the convenience of all, but nothing definite has yet been settled either regarding the date or regarding the statesman who will come to England.

NEW ZEALAND WILL BE REPRESENTED.

U. S. WILL DO HER SHARE.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5. The United States will furnish more men and money for war in a shorter time than has been the fondest hope of our own people or the nations with which we are associated. Chairman Flood of the Foreign Affairs Committee declared in the House to-day in presenting the Diplomatic and Consular Appropriation Bill. The chairman's assertion was in connection with his discussion of Colonel House's mission to Great Britain and France and was made in the course of an outline given the House of the State Department's war activities. As a result of a complete understanding existed of precisely what the Allies need from us and exactly what we can furnish and when and how, under the Secretaries of State for War and Navy. He declared the country will furnish more in men and means than was expected of us.

EARLY MESSAGES

THE TOLL OF THE U-BOAT.
LONDON, Feb. 5.
German U-boats, according to a report given by Andrew Bonar Law in the House of Commons to-day, have caused the death of 14,129 non-combatant British men, women and children.

REUTER ASKS RELEASE OF AIR MEN.
LONDON, Feb. 5.
A Reuter despatch confirms that Germany has offered to release British airmen, Capt. Scholtz and Lieut. Wooley, who were sentenced to long imprisonment for distributing leaflets from the air, be immediately released and treated as ordinary prisoners of war, provided that a month's notice will be given in accordance with the arrangement reached by the late Reuter's recent mission to the Hague.

ON THE WEST FRONT.
British Headquarters in France, Feb. 5. (Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—The British and French forces are engaged in operations on the Western front. Last night one of our raiders got into the enemy positions near Poelcapelle. After killing twenty-five of the enemy, they brought back three prisoners. Our casualties were very slight, but these are the only ones in the front line. Meanwhile enemy reinforcements continue to arrive from the east, but the Allied forces in the west also continue to increase in an overwhelming current. The clash, when it does come, will be the most stupendous in point of numbers ever known.

TARTAR FORCES OPERATING.
LONDON, Feb. 5.
Tartar forces in Southern Russia are now in operation against the Bolsheviks. They already have captured the town of Galt, in Crimea, and are now fighting with the Red Guards' soldiers and sailors in an endeavor to press onward and take Sebastopol, Russia's big fort and naval base on the Black Sea.

HANDLING THE SUBS.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.
Representative Miller, who recently visited the battle front in France, said the House to-day he believed the German subs. are being destroyed about as rapidly as Germany can build them. He praised Vice-Admiral Sims for the methods he has adopted with American destroyers and the cruiser convoy to combat the submarine menace, and argued that American shipping should be handled by naval officers and not by the Shipping Board. There were no Americans in the crews of the two transports on which he crossed the Atlantic, he said.

IMPERIAL WAR CONFERENCES.
LONDON, Feb. 5.
(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—Reuter's Ottawa Agency states that the general war conference held last year, and as the convenience of Dominion statesmen and their Parliaments will permit, a series of Imperial war cabinets and war conferences will be held in London this year in continuation of those held last year. It is understood that representatives of the Dominions will attend to confer with British ministers on war problems. The Imperial Council is now trying to arrange a date which will suit as far as possible the convenience of all, but nothing definite has yet been settled other than the date or regarding the statesmen who will come to England.

NEW ZEALAND WILL BE REPRESENTED.
LONDON, Feb. 5.
(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—A despatch from Wellington states that the Cabinet has decided that New Zealand will be represented at the forthcoming Imperial war cabinet and conference. Subject to the approval of Parliament, Messrs. Massey and Ward will be the Dominion representatives. A short session of Parliament will be opened about the 9th of April to make the necessary arrangements.

POLES DEFEAT BOLSHIEVICK.
AMSTERDAM, Feb. 5.
A wireless despatch received at Berlin from Kiev says Poles have occupied Mohilev, the Russian main headquarters, and have arrested Evgien Krylenko, the commander of the Russian Bolshieviki forces and his entire staff. The message adds that the Bolshieviki uprising at Kiev has been suppressed by the Ukrainians.

U.S. WILL DO HER SHARE.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.
The United States will furnish more men and money for war in a shorter time than has been the fondest hope of our own people or the nations with which we are associated. Chairman Flood of the Foreign Affairs Committee declared in the House to-day in presenting the Diplomatic and Consular Appropriation Bill. The chairman's assertion was in connection with his discussion of Colonel House's mission to Great Britain and France and was made in the course of an outburst given the House of the State Department's war activities. As a result of the work of the mission, Flood said, a complete understanding exists of precisely what the Allies need from us and exactly what we can furnish in the way of men and money. He declared that the country will furnish more men and means than was expected of us.

GERMAN AGENTS FOUND GUILTY.
NEW YORK, Feb. 5.
and ten co-defendants, all Germans, all jury to-day found guilty by a federal jury of conspiracy to destroy munitions and food ships of the Entente Allies.

TROUBLE ENOUGH ALREADY.
LONDON, Feb. 5.
(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—A despatch from Cape Town, South Africa, stated that the House of Representatives, acting Minister of Defence.

Methods of maintaining South African brigades and dealing with returned soldiers were discussed. General Botha in the opening speech urged the conference not to allow the shame of the South African unit being incorporated with other units. Referring to the suggestion of conscription, Botha earnestly asked how the Government could embark on such a step, and added: "Haven't we enough trouble in the country, that people want to create more?" Premier Botha said that what had happened in Australia had been a shock to men like himself who wanted to assist in winning the war. What an argument it had been in the mouths of opponents of the Empire: "No, I can't, I won't do this." They would not have men to send to Flanders and to put down trouble in South Africa. In regard to the proposal to conscript British-born, Premier Botha declared that such class legislation could not be introduced. He promised to make representations to the British Government if the allegation were established that men were fleeing to South Africa to escape conscription.

HEXHAM ABBEY HUT OPENED.
LONDON, Feb. 5.
(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—A despatch from the Hague says that Lady Tawley, wife of the British minister to the Netherlands, opened Hexham Abbey hut for interned British soldiers which was built by subscriptions of the inhabitants of Hexham, Canadian members of the British colonies and many of the Dutch residents were present. Sir Walter Tawley in his speech said that they must be prepared to face the fact that soldiers would be stationed in the hut for a very short time because England could not yet accept the hand of peace which had been offered several times, as confidence could not be placed in peace offers and because sufficient preparation had not been made for the violation of the nation.

CO-OPERATION IN LABOR MATTERS.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.
Complete co-operation between the United States and Canada in effective administration of labor with war purposes was inaugurated to-day. The Department of Labor announced that by mutual agreement Canada will not import labor from this country without consent of the States and American employers will not import Canadian labor without consent of Canada.

GETTING UNITED STATES ARMY TO THE LINE.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.
In view of the difficulty of finding ships to put American fighting power in France, General Bliss, representative of the United States at the military session of the Supreme War Council, is considering with British officials the advisability of starting a new American battalion through-out the British training system to the front line trench in Flanders. This project, it was learned to-day, has been talked over in various forms. One of the concrete proposals has been that 150 battalions be assigned for such training. The congestion at American embarkation ports in France lies back of the suggestion. By diverting certain units to British ports and passing them through the British system and finally transferring them to General Pershing's army, it has been urged that a considerable body of men could be trained and put on the firing line who otherwise could not be sent forward for months. It is known that professors of British and French ships to carry American troops have accompanied urgent representations from the other side in behalf of the early transport of as many men as possible across the Atlantic. There are intimations in fact that British transports already have been used to carry American troops to a limited extent. The question apparently however, largely is one of maintaining continuous supply lines for all troops sent over, rather than of finding ships to carry them. Secretary Baker refused to-day to discuss any of the questions involved in the shipping situation. Asked specifically as to the proposal to train additional American forces in Flanders, he said, "I can't discuss the movement or projected movement of troops either for training or for combat in France."

BOLSHIEVIKI GOVERNMENT PERMANENT.
PETROGRAD, Feb. 5.
At the close of the sessions of the Congress of Workmen and Soldiers' deputies to-day a law was passed declaring that the Workmen and Soldiers government was to be permanent and not temporary as originally had been announced. Congress declared that the constituent assembly had been eliminated, a law was passed, declaring for immediate nationalization of all land. It was approved by the Central Executive committee consisting of 160 Bolshieviki, 135 social revolutionaries and by 15 delegates of scattered parties which were authorized to pass on all the legislation of the Soviets.

MORE REPRISALS THREATENED.
LONDON, Feb. 5.
(Via Reuter's Ottawa Agency.)—In the House of Commons, James Ian Macpherson, Under-Secretary for War stated that information received showed undoubtedly that the German authorities placed officer war prisoners in localities especially subjected to air raids. Similar action was contemplated in England, he stated, amid loud cheers. Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, stated that information had been received that a German agent in Scandinavia had plotted to murder Sir George Buchanan, British Ambassador to Russia, while the latter was returning from Petrograd.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.
LONDON, Feb. 5.
The British official statement issued to-night says: Last night the enemy raided one of our posts in the neighborhood of the Bapume-Cambrai Road. One of our men is missing. During the latter part of the night and early this morning hostile artillery developed great activity south of Maroing, south of the Bapsume-Cambrai Road. Increased activity also was shown by the enemy north of Lens and northeast of Ypres. HEATLESS DAYS MUST CONTINUE. WASHINGTON, Feb. 5. After conferences to-day between Director General McAdoo and Fuel Administrator Garfield, it was definitely decided that heatless days can't be abandoned, as had been hoped, because storms and colds have so badly crippled the movement of fuel.

Submarine Merchantmen.

One Way in Which to Baffle the Hun Pirates. "Wait a little longer," said Admiral von Schoer, "and you will see our U-boats defeat Great Britain." Do not be disquieted by this boastful prophecy. It was merely intended to "buck up" the Germans, whom their war-lords judged to be in need of a tonic. Other methods of beating U-boats are open to us beside sinking them.

From America now comes a proposal that the Allies should equip themselves with a fleet of submarine merchantmen as the surest way of flogging the Hun's practical attacks upon our shipping. The pros and cons of the matter have been thrashed out by experts, whose conclusions are favorable to the scheme. Shorn of technicalities, the contention of these practical men is that it would be quite easy to build submersible cargo-boats of ten thousand tons displacement, though half that size is the dimension most favored. If a system of standardized construction were adopted these craft could be brought into being very quickly. Eight weeks is the estimated time for completing one.

In their design safety rather than high speed should be aimed at. No surface ship of less than sixteen knots per hour has much chance against a modern U-boat. But the submersible "tramp" need be able to do more than eight knots on the surface and five knots when submerged, the idea being that she should proceed "weak" until an enemy was sighted, and "dip" immediately danger threatened her. Even while the submersible liner was at the surface it would be far more difficult for a "pirate" to sight her than it would be to "pick up" an ordinary ship.

As regards cost, the submersible merchantman could be built as cheaply as the surface ship.—Answers.

REDUCING THE WAISTLINE.

There is nothing better for reducing the waistline than to touch the floor with the tips of the fingers without bending the knees. For this movement the hands are held high above the head and brought down with a sweeping motion while the knees are kept stiff. Should they bend no benefit will be derived. Another good exercise is, to lie flat on the floor and raise one leg to an upright position and then the other. Continue this until you feel fatigued. Many women have the mistaken idea that a tight corset will solve the problem of a shapely waist. From outward appearances they do to a large extent, but it is undeniable that sometimes an ultimate derangement of the internal organs is the price paid. Such constrictions impair the action of the diaphragm, interfere with the process of digestion and the circulation of the blood, and sometimes causes serious injury. Corsets of course are necessary for all women thin or stout, but instead of pushing fat from one place to another—and that is what tight lacing does—you should get rid of the fat. Another exercise that will help is done by the first thing in the morning in a cool room that is filled with fresh air and done with little or loose clothing on. Take a tabouret or a low stool and place a cushion on it. Lie face down on the cushion, grasp the legs of the stool with both hands and raise the legs slowly and then lower them. This slow movement gives one control of the muscles. Repeat the exercise five
