CHAPTER XXIV.
THE SELFISH PASSION.

Nagle started as if he had been absorbed in some deep mental calculation.

"What do I say?" he said, hoarsely. "What should such a man as I am say to such a proposal? I am without a penny; you have seen my dinner. Unless I take that ten-pound note I do not know where I shall find money to purchase another meal. What do I say? What can I say but 'Yes'?"

"Right," said Clifford Revel, rising and looking at his watch, and if you had been a sensible man you would have said it half an hour ago! Yes! There is the note. Put it out of sight of that grimy slave or you'll lose it."

Nagle took it up and crushed it in the palm of his hand, and Clifford Revel nodded, with a gleam of satisfaction in his eyes.

"Good-by, my dear fellow. Don't spend that ten pounds for brandy, and be ready when I send for you. I'll leave the 'properties' to you. Play your part well, and there are two hundred and fifty pounds and a fresh life for you. Good-by!" and he held out his hand.

Nagle did not take it; he had moved toward the door and opened it, and Clifford Revel passed out.

Nagle stood for a moment looking at a vacancy; then, with a gesture of supreme loathing, he took the note, and, lighting a candle, held it to the part that had taken fire and thrust the note in his pocket.

CHAPTER XXV.
THE MAGIC OF TWO SYLLABLES.

LORD EDGAR took the train to Sunbury in a frame of mind not to be described. He had waited as he had promised for Clifford Revel, and had received a letter which startled and excited him. He walked from Sunbury to Larkworthy in a state of excitement, and reached the old churchyard gate half an hour before his time. The night was dark, but the moon came through the clouds at intervals and lighted up the quaint, old place in an effective fashion, enabling him to see a slim figure hastening toward him from the little lane and he held Leila in his arms.

"Have you been waiting long?" she asked. "I am so sorry! Grandpapa would not let me leave him for some time."

"It doesn't matter, darling. I would willingly wait an hour to have you with me for five minutes."

She looked up at him with a fond smile. She seemed to have gained color since last night; seemed to be something more like her old self. Happiness is a wonderful elixir! It laughs doctors to scorn; it is this most potent medicine under the sun, and if one could only put it into bottles and sell it at one shilling and three halfpence, what a fortune one would make!

"And did you ride?" she asked, in a low, soft voice that Lord Edgar thought the sweetest music under heaven.

"No," he said, "I came by train; the chestnut was not quick enough for me—why, the train seemed to crawl! But Leila, my darling, now I have come I have something very important to say to you."

She shrunk and trembled instinctively, for, though his eyes were eager and bright with happiness, his voice was grave.

"What is it, Edgar? Not bad news? If so, don't tell me. I am so happy that I can not bear to hear of anything that—that might part us!" And she clung to him. "And that is the only bad news that can come to me."

What could he do but entfold her in his strong arms and kiss her?

"It is not bad news, and it will not part us; in fact—now prepare to be startled, darling!"

"I am prepared," she said, with a touch of her old naivete.

"Well, then, listen!" he said. "You know this state of things can't continue."

This state of things—namely, nestling against his heart—seemed so sweet that she did not feel convinced.

"No?"

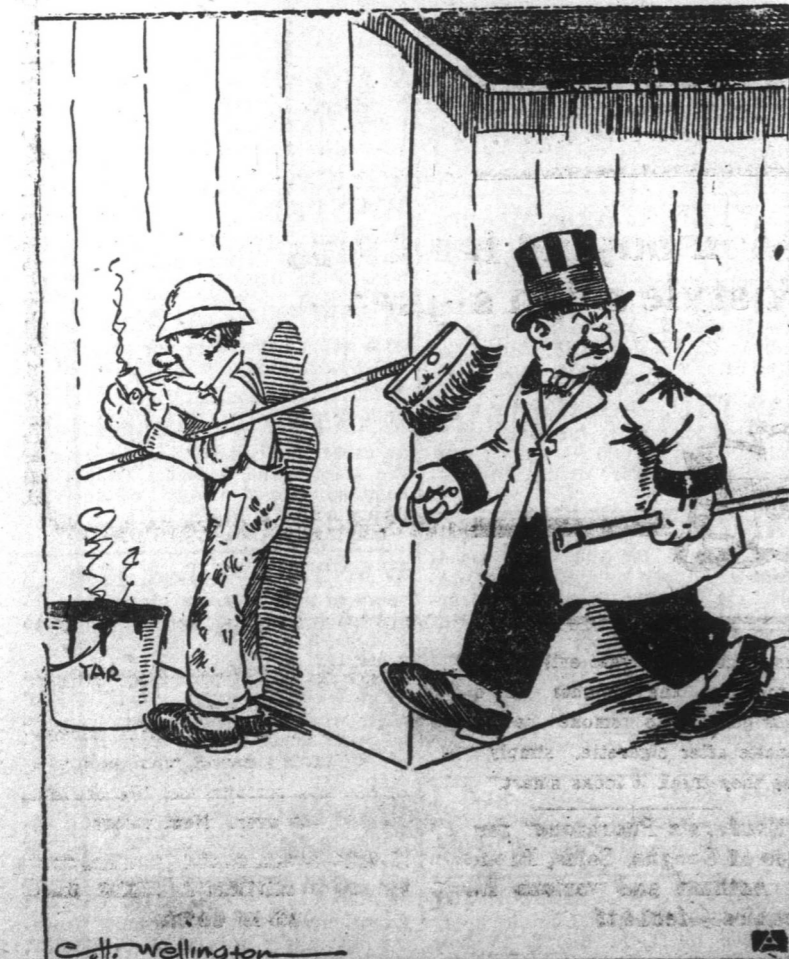

"No," he said, decidedly. "we can not go on like this. I mean that we can not go on like this forever."

"Forever is a long time," she murmured.

"For any time, then," he said. "I couldn't live without seeing you, say once a day; and to do that you must meet me in this—this clandestine kind of fashion, which I don't like."

"If grandpapa knew I should never be able to meet you again," she whispered.

And the Worst is Yet to Come—

"Without—?" The idea seemed so wild and outrageous that words failed her.

He could feel her heart beating wildly against his heart, her hand working nervously, her whole slender frame agitated by the thought.

"Exactly," he assented, as if she had given him a fresh advantage in argument; "exactly, and so we must bring it to an end."

She clung to him with her arms, but threw her head back and looked at him with alarm in her beautiful eyes.

"Are you—do you mean that—that we must not see each other?" she said, almost inaudibly.

"Heaven forbid! I mean that we must see each other every hour in the day, that we must be always together!" he said, fervently.

"I don't understand," she murmured.

"Let me tell you. You must know when I left you that I went to my cousin Clifford and told him that I had found you."

"Yes."

"Well, I need not tell you that he was delighted! Clifford is always delighted at any good fortune that befalls me. Besides, he had tried to help me in finding you, you know!"

"Yes," she said again, her eyes fixed on his.

"And when I told him, he saw that this state of things could not go on. Why, think of it! I might not be able to see you; Mr. Temple might find out that you meet me here! Oh, there are a hundred things to prevent our meeting!"

"Ah, yes!" she sighed.

"And so Clifford Revel suggested, advised that—"

"Why do you hesitate?" she murmured.

"Because I don't want to frighten you; because it seems so sudden and precipitate. Well, my darling, he agrees with me that we ought to be married!"

She started and threw her head back, and her face paled in the moonlight.

"Be—married! Yes, so we shall some day," she whispered, faintly.

"Some day, yes; but I mean now, at once!" he said, as quietly and with as matter-of-fact a voice as he could manage, seeing that his heart was beating nineteen to the dozen.

She trembled in silence for a moment.

"Now!" she breathed; "now! But grandpapa would never consent—never!"

"Then we must be married without his consent!" he said.

"Yes, Leila! Come, darling, I don't want to frighten you: I mean to break it gently, but I am such a rough idiot, without the least tact! But think, Leila—why should we be married?"

"There seemed a hundred reasons, and yet not one, excepting that concerning her grandfather, which she could put into words."

"Why not?" he persisted. "If we waited for Mr. Temple's consent, after the way in which my father insulted him, we might wait for years, and—with a deep breath—"I could not do that!"

"Your father, the marquis?" she said, with a sudden shiver. "What would he say?"

Lord Edgar's face darkened.

"Don't let us think of that," he said.

"Ah, dear, dear Edgar, but I must think, if you don't. I know what he thinks, and he will tell me; and so plainly!"

"Not a word of that!" he said, in his impetuous way. "Forget all that, Leila. Between my father and myself yawns a wide gulf. He has done his best to ruin my happiness; he has wronged me past words. It is he who would have separated us, and who nearly succeeded in doing so."

"Ah, Edgar! But he is still your father!" said Leila.

"He is the Marquis of Frintosh," he said, coldly, and until now she did not know how coldly he could speak. "He has fought against me with edged tools; he can not complain if I use them in my turn and against him!"

She listened, trembling and uncertain.

"Not!" he continued. "By stratagem he sought to part us—we who love each other so dearly, and it is only just that by stratagem he should be met."

"Edgar, dear!" she murmured, "this is not your language; it is that of some one else—your cousin."

He started, remembering that he had used the very words which Clifford Revel had spoken just before they parted.

"They are good words—let them be whose they may, Leila," he said. "I owe the marquis nothing. I shall not consult him. I shall not need to do so. He has been kind to me, but he has balanced that kindness by his conduct toward you. Don't speak of him again, dear! After all, it will not matter to him. He cares nothing for me, and why, therefore, should I sacrifice to him?"

Women are not good at argument, it is pretty generally admitted, and women when they are in love lose what little knowledge of logic they originally possessed. Leila was silent.

"As for the professor," said Lord Edgar, "he will come around when he finds that it is too late to object. After all, what is his objection to me? That I am the son of the marquis? That is all! I can't help being Lord Fane! I wish to Heaven I could! I would like to be an usher in some school; then he would welcome me, I suppose!"

"What can I say?" she whispered, all quivering with fear and happiness.

"Say 'Yes,' darling!" he murmured, smoothing the soft, silky hair from her face and kissing her. "Say 'Yes,' and let us put an end to 'this suspense and secrecy.'"

"What can I say?" she whispered, all quivering with fear and happiness.

"Say 'Yes,' darling!" he murmured, smoothing the soft, silky hair from her face and kissing her. "Say 'Yes,' and let us put an end to 'this suspense and secrecy.'"

"Secrecy!" she said. "But—our marriage will be secret, Edgar?"

He nodded.

"Yes, for a time. Clifford thinks that it would be best."

"Your cousin," she said; "it is his advice?"

"Yes," he said, heartily. "and his advice is worth having, dearest. He knows more of the world than I do, and he is deeply attached to me. You will like him for my sake, and your own, when you see him. He has been everything that is kind! He has arranged everything."

"Arranged?" she said, with a troubled look in her limpid eyes.

Lord Edgar nodded.

"Yes!" he said. "Clifford is not the man to do things by halves! He asked me to-day if my happiness was set upon you, and I said that I could not live without you!"

"Ah, Edgar!" and the trusting heart beat against his own.

How to Remove Pains Caused by Kidney Trouble

It may be news to you, but it is history to thousands of persons, who have suffered from Backache, Painful Urination, Swollen Joints, Constant Headaches, etc., that Gin Pills remedy Kidney and Bladder troubles by first removing the cause.

The cause of all Kidney diseases such as Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, etc., is congested Kidneys. Kidneys that fail to perform their function of filtering the poisons and impurities from the blood. These poisons remaining in the system are the direct cause of a chain of dreaded diseases.

If you've never heard of Gin Pills before ask any of your friends about them. Gin Pills have been on the market for years; they are the old reliable remedy for Backache, etc. If you suffer from any Kidney or Bladder afflictions try Gin Pills.

Should you not care to buy them as an experiment, a sample box will be sent to you on request.

Gin Pills contain the beneficial ingredient of Gin without the slightest trace of alcohol. For many years bottled Gin was considered the ready remedy for Kidney or Bladder troubles. Scientific research proved, however, that the reason for this was due purely to the extract of Juniper it contained and nothing else. From hundreds of letters received by us we are convinced that all any sufferer of Kidney or Bladder trouble needs to do is try Gin Pills—and they will find relief at once.

That is the proportion of medicine contained in Zam-Buk, and that is why Zam-Buk's healing powers are so superior to ordinary ointments, which contain about 5 per cent. medicine and the balance animal fat.
Zam-Buk contains absolutely no animal fat or harsh mineral drugs, but is composed exclusively of extracts of medicinal plants and herbs and vegetable oils. These are so blended, refined and concentrated that they contain the maximum amount of soothing, antiseptic and healing power.
In addition to this, Zam-Buk has marvellous powers of penetration. It thus reaches and destroys all germs in the underlying tissues, leaving no trace of disease to break out again.
Zam-Buk is best for all skin diseases, ulcers, blood-poisoning, and piles. All dealers, 50c. box.

SINN FEIN PROTEST.

PARIS, May 22.—Premier Clemenceau, President of the Peace Conference, has received a letter from Edward De Valera, Count Plunkett and Arthur Griffiths, Irish Sinn Fein leaders, in which they declare that Ireland will not be bound by the action of British delegates on the question of peace. They ask recognition on behalf of Ireland.

DEATH DEALING EXPLOSION.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, May 22.—Firemen early to-night had removed the bodies of 25 persons killed in an explosion which destroyed the Douglass Starch Works. The fire, which spread to all parts of the plant, is reported as beyond control. The explosion wrecked buildings for a distance of blocks.

PREVENTED FROM FLYING.

Naval Seaplane N.C.-4 is prevented from leaving Ponta Delgado to-day on account of high winds. The Navy Department received a message from Admiral Jackson this morning saying "N.C.-4 will not leave to-day, as seas too rough for start."

WANTS MODIFICATION.

VERSAILLES, May 21.—The German Independent Socialist leader is here to consult with the German delegation as to the probability of signing the Peace terms unless they can be modified.

FURTHER DELAY.

PARIS, May 21.—(Havas).—The seven days respite allowed the Germans, for signing the Peace Treaty, will likely be spent in pacifying the agitation so foolishly created in Germany. The big interests, independent and majority Socialists, also business men and military authorities, favor signing for fear of Bolshevism. Scheidmann and Noske Cabinet ministers, have compromised the position by exaggerated statements, but the treaty is expected to be signed between June 12 and 16.

LIVING ON GRASS AND ROOTS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 20.—Starvation and misery prevails among Armenian refugees in the Caucasus regions, according to the American delegate commissioners for the Near East, and reports that extreme distress led to cannibalism among the frantic people are probably true. Outside provision must be made for 500,000. Many people are living on grass and roots. The death rate is high among children.

No More Sea-Sickness.

A new suggestion was made in a recent issue of "Engineering" for the construction of a cabin on passenger steamers that will be unaffected by the motion of the vessel.

A former suggestion was to control the oscillation of a saloon, suspended from a fore-and-aft axis, by means of a gyroscope with a vertical axis of spin.

The latter scheme aims rather at the steadying of the ship than to make a portion of it independent of the general motion. A gyroscope is fixed so that when the ship is on an even keel and the gyroscope is in equilibrium, the axis of the flywheel is vertical. The wheel is pivoted on a frame whose motions are damped by a brake pulley having a graded amount of friction. The action of such a gyroscope is to endow a small ship with the motion of a large one.

NEW TYPE OF AIRCRAFT MAKES VERTICAL ASCENT.

According to reports from London, Eng., experiments were recently made with a new type of airplane which is called the "Helicopter". The machine is said to be capable of rising and descending vertically, without putting its nose up, and also able to hover in the air. If these reports are correct, another great step has been taken toward the mastery of the air with a heavier-than-air machine.

Should Women Smoke?

In an age when so many women smoke, it is quite refreshing to find a popular actress who is not a devotee of the art.
Miss Ivy Shilling, the popular dancer, was recently asked to give an opinion on this question, which has been revived by the case at a London police-court, when the magistrate refused to convict a woman who had declined to stop smoking in a restaurant.

"My work requires all my physical and mental balance, every nerve must be alert and quick to carry the brain's message to the limbs," said Miss Shilling. "Even one cigarette has a bad effect. Very few people realize how physically fit a dancer must be. I must say I like flowers and plenty of fresh air in my dressing-room; not smoke and cigarette ends.

"Although I don't smoke myself, at the same time I do not think smoking in moderation is injurious. So many women become slaves of the habit and carry the badge of their bondage in stained, nicotine fingers; nothing looks sicker. The real evil to-day, to my mind, is the number of quite young girls who smoke recklessly cigarette after cigarette, simply because they think it looks smart."

GREETINGS!

To our thousands of earnest readers, past and present: to those thousands of readers yet unborn: to those that love us and to those that hate us: Greetings!

Like most politicians, the world's most crooked river is the Jordan. It wanders nearly 220 miles to cover 60.

THE MODERN PHARISEE.

Louise was naughty all day, while Margaret's conduct was most upright. At bedtime the mother said to Margaret: "You were such a comfort to me to-day when Louise was so trying."

Margaret at once dropped upon her knees and prayed: "Oh, Lord, bless Louise and make her as good as me—if you can."

SURPRISE INFORMATION.

The North and South Poles are not the coldest places in the world. The two coldest places are in Northern Canada and in Siberia, both being in the 50th parallel of latitude. The Poles are considerably warmer than those places.

THAT TROUBLESOme "H."

A certain English foreman in one of the Kensington-tailor-factories is in the habit of having an apprentice heat his lunch for him. The other day he called a new apprentice:

"Go down-stairs and 'eat up my lunch for me," ordered the foreman. The boy—a typical young American, with no knowledge of cockney English—obeyed with alacrity. He was hungry.

Ten minutes later the foreman came down. He also was hungry. "Where's my lunch?" he demanded. The boy gazed at him in amazement.

"You told me to eat it up—and I ate it," he stated. "I didn't tell you to heat it up!" roared the irate foreman. "I told you to 'eat it up.'"

"Well, I didn't heat it up," maintained the youngster, stoutly. "I ate it cold."

GOLD.

For gold his sword the hireling ruffian draws; For gold the hireling judge distorts the laws; Wealth heap'd up on wealth, nor truth nor safety buys; The dangers gather as the treasures rise.

Dr. Johnson.

It is the small, handy and cheap inventions that pay. For instance, the rubber tip to pencils brought the lucky inventor some $100,000.

POOR SCOTT!

She sat next to Winston Churchill and naturally felt she must talk about books.

"You are very fond of Sir Walter Scott, Mr. Churchill?" she began.

"Very," replied the author.

"I adore him," replied the girl.

"Don't you think his 'Lady of the Lake' very exquisite?" asked Churchill.

"Oh, I just dote on it," she replied.

"And Scott's 'Emulsion'?"

"Oh, that," warmly answered the girl. "I have read it a dozen times."

"A dozen times?" echoed the astonished author. Then a suspicion came into his mind and he asked: "Don't you love Scott's 'Emulsion'?"

"Oh, that," warmly answered the girl.

NEITHER HEARD NOR SAW.

MONTREAL, May 22. Officers on the steamers Minotora and Saturnia to-day, reported watching for the Sopwith plane while passing along the track the aviators expected to make. They saw nothing of the aviators or machines and received wireless calls failed to bring any response. The vessels were in the immediate neighborhood of Newfoundland Sunday and Monday.

At one o'clock to-day, Mr. G. C. Fearn, the veteran of Newfoundland Commerce, was presented with a piece of silver plate at the Board of Trade (Rooms) by the Newfoundland Board of Trade, incorporated 1909, to George C. Fearn, Esq., as a mark of appreciation of his valuable services and in its formation asking the Board to accept since its incorporation, President 1912—Secretary 1909-10-11.

Mr. Fearn, who has booked passage on the s.s. Digby, sailing to-day for England, made most felicitous reply, thanking the donors for their appreciation of services during his connection with the Board.

Two former Presidents were present and made brief addresses after which handshakes of farewell to Mr. Fearn were given amidst hearty God-speed.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

OF COURSE IT IS A TRUISM.

One day this spring I took a long walk with two companions. On our return trip we found that a very strong wind had sprung up and we had to walk four miles which made our advance almost twice as difficult as it would have been under normal conditions.

As the walk was good stiff one under the best conditions, it became, under these, an endurance test. We set our teeth and plodded along.

Which Found the Last Mile Easier? At last within a mile from home we came to a part of the road where we were somewhat sheltered and the strain eased a bit.

Said one of my companions, "Well, this is a relief. This seems almost easy in comparison to what we've been going through."

Said the other, "It's hard enough to like to see the wind drop altogether, myself."

Those people had the same wind to walk against, but you can guess who found that last mile the easier.

One Saw Clouds, Another the Patches of Blue. In the morning I was sitting on my porch and as my neighbors went by, several of them stopped to comment upon the weather.

And the second said, "Isn't it nice stopped, that it doesn't seem to clear off?"

And the second said, "Isn't it nice it has stopped raining?"

And what, after all, is happiness? It is, of course, an axiom and even Aristotle would say that the difference between happiness and unhappiness, between content and discontent is often measured by just such difference in points of view as these.

Whether you compare your lot with the lot of those who seem more fortunate (I say seem for who can ever really judge of such matters?) than you, or whether you compare it with those who seem less fortunate, whether you are sorry that it does not clear off or happy because it has ceased raining makes all the difference in the world in your state of mind. And what, after all, is happiness but a state of mind?

If you prefer, you can, of course, reject all this as tiresome truisms. But remember, although a truism is self evident, it is also that which its name implies and you won't hurt anyone so much as yourself by rejecting it.

Evangeline Booth.

Evangeline Booth, commander-in-chief of the American forces of the Salvation Army, arbiter of the destinies of 170,000 uniformed followers in her service, rose from the lowest rank in the Salvation Army to her position at its head. Although the daughter of General Booth, the founder of the army, she began selling "War Cries" on the streets, and doing other trifling duties.

While in England, where she founded the army's work in the slums, Miss Booth visited the hovels of the poor in the guise of a street singer or beggar, even after she had won her commission in the army. She was stoned and persecuted and served prison sentences, but persevered. To-day her followers know that she will not ask them to do what she has not, or would not do herself.

Although her life is dedicated "to the glory of God," she is thoroughly human. An interviewer writing in Everybody's Magazine, says Miss Booth is an excellent swimmer, and once swam Lake George, four-and-one-half miles across, with a broken ankle in a plaster cast. She has never found a horse she cannot ride. She is a musician of rare ability, who can play almost any instrument, and she has written many songs.

"The army has always been the same, but it is through the war that the public in general has discovered it," she said.—Ex.

WHAT WE DON'T KNOW. We know when we're knee deep in trouble, we know when we're suffering pain. We know when we're in any hour of the day when we're reason to growl and complain.

But we don't seem to know, as the days come and go, when everything's really all right. We can talk of our ailments quite glibly, we can tell all our friends of our woes. There isn't man but with faithfulness can describe every burden he knows.

But mighty few know when they're happy, and fewer are able to tell with a joy that is real, the way that they feel on the days they are perfectly well.

We know all the symbols of sorrow, we know all the signs of despair. We know when we're sick and we know how to grumble at care. But when we have reason for smiling, when all of our worries are small, when the sun's shining bright and our world is all right, we don't seem to know it at all.

We value our joys when we've lost them, we have praise for our friends when they're dead. We can feelingly tell that it's fine to be well when we're flat on a hospital bed.

But we know not when we should be happy, with all of our farseeing powers. You and I must allow that we haven't learned how to appreciate joy when it's ours.

Horse of Another Color.

(Farm and Home.) The old story about Henry Ward Beecher and the horse is still good. One day, when about to take a ride, Mr. Beecher glanced at the horse and remarked: "That is a fine-looking animal; is he as good as he looks?"

The man replied: "Mr. Beecher, that is the best horse in our stable. He will work in any place you put him, and he can do anything that any horse can."

The preacher gazed admiringly at the horse, and then said, as if in soliloquy: "I wish to goodness he was a member of our church."

PRIVATE GRIEF.

I cannot weep for others' woes or sympathize with those who wall; I have new shoes that hurt my toes, and outside griefs seem cheap and stale. The hungry Huns are needing bread; I do not heed them when they call; I shrink and groan at every tread—I have new shoes which are too small. You point to Kaiser Bill and say, "There is the man who cornered grief; he's whacking sawlogs by the day, who once was Prussia's haughty chief." He has some reason for the blues, this out-cast whom the whole world scorns; but he is wearing large loose shoes, which do not chafe his kingly corns.

How bravely I would stand the gaff, if I were there, in Bill's retreat! I'd lose a crown and throne and laugh, if I had shoes that fit my feet. They tell sad tales of Europe wrecked, of cities razed by vandal blows; these tales would move me, I expect, if I could but forget my toes. No tales can anger or amuse, I see no point in aught you tell; there's nothing counts but feet and shoes. In this sad world wherein we dwell, I can admire the dewy rose, or hear with joy the nightingale; for I have shoes which hurt my toes—all other things seem flat and stale.

Wash leather furniture very gently with warm water in which there is a little vinegar, wipe with a dry cloth and then restore the polish by mixing the whites of two eggs and a little turpentine, which is applied with a flannel.

REQUIESCANT.

"Hope springs eternal in the human breast," and because of this many people have had a lingering feeling that some news would be heard of the daring adventurers who swept out over the hills and into the great void beyond on last Sunday afternoon. They flew away then from mortal ken and from that fatal hour when the Sopwith areoplane disappeared over the horizon, not one gleam has come to lighten the fears which already have been expressed. What their end, or the manner of it, can but be conjectured. They may have fallen like a plummet, from dizzy heights into the unfathomable ocean, and met instant death; they may have successfully reached the surface by volplaning, and there perched on their frail craft, watched "the hell of waters howl and hiss," until overcome by exposure they perished and the ever greedy sea claimed their bodies for its own. Many causes might have contributed to the disaster which is so universally deplored. The perils of the air journey were real enough to daunt even the stoutest hearts, but Hawker and Grieve, courageous and gallant gentlemen, were not dismayed. They had made the most minute preparations and calculations for success. They were in no doubt concerning favourable meteorological conditions when they made up their minds to start on the supreme adventure, but the fact that they were heavily handicapped by the meagre service furnished them stands out too prominently clear. The British Air Ministry did not bestir itself and the Admiralty was not active in rendering assistance. In fact there was too much passivity in British official circles—a deliberate passivity which has been the cause of questions in the British Commons, some members even suggesting that it was through the negligence of both the Air Ministry and the Admiralty that two valuable lives have been lost. Whether they would have been saved or not had there been precautions taken and the line of the route patrolled by fast destroyers, is another question. There would have been, at least, a prospect of rendering aid, but as nothing of the sort was done as a measure of safety, the aviators who departed beyond the sky line on Sunday took a sporting chance, and a desperate one at that. They went out into the unknown places of the air and whether or not they took their final plunge, one hundred or one thousand miles off our coast, detracts nothing from their courage. The risk was great, but not so great as their heroism in accepting it.

On Monday when the whole of North America was filled with enthusiasm over the bulletin flashed under the ocean that Hawker had been sighted off the Irish Coast, the Telegram offered congratulations to the intrepid fliers and their associates in the city. Alas! that these congratulations were premature and to-day we regretfully and mournfully twine a wreath to the memory of two of the bravest spirits that ever set out to accomplish great things. That they failed is to be deplored, but in their failure which cost them their lives they have won a glory and a fame that will never die and throughout the ages there will be a halo of immortality ever brightening and radiantly glorious, around the names of Hawker and Grieve, who sacrificed themselves in the interests of science and in a gallant attempt to effect the conquest of the air.

The "Telegram" Leads.

Since interest in the accomplishment of the Transatlantic flight has centered locally, the Telegram has published 27,000 words, written originally by the staff on the flight and published since February 15th. There were also 10,000 words of reprinted articles, copied from foreign newspapers and magazines. This does not include headlines or sub-headlines, but solely the reading matter of each article. This is a record that the Telegram has set, and one that certain papers, claiming to give the "fullest and most accurate" accounts of the great flight, will find hard to equal.

Prof. Shaw's Lecture.

Last night at the Presbyterian Hall, Professor Shaw who, arrived by the Digby from Halifax, delivered an address to the congregation of St. Andrew's on "The Church and the Forward Movement." Professor Shaw is Chairman of the Presbyterian Synod Committee on the Forward Movement for the Maritime Provinces, and is travelling through the provinces giving ideas of the church's work. Rev. Gordon Dickie, M.A., presided and briefly introduced the speaker, who said the movement was really a national one and a call for a larger citizenship. We have passed a critical period in the history of the world, and the war has been brought to a victorious conclusion. It was a Lord's Victory, and we should concentrate all our efforts to him. Men have been given a new point of view, they have formed different relationships with each other. The Church has a part in this, said the speaker, and he laid particular stress on the need of having a proper outlook and knowledge of how to give. The larger movement is a financial one, and the Presbyterian Church of Canada is to give a Peace contribution of four million dollars which will probably be called for in the Autumn. At the close of the address these presents were introduced to Prof. Shaw, and refreshments were served by the ladies of the congregation. Prof. Shaw is enroute to Scotland and will return in the autumn to resume his work at the Halifax Theological College.

Late Season North.

The furthest point reached in the north for this season yet is Change Islands. To the north of the Bays and Coast are blocked with ice, and in view of this it appears that it will be a late season for the northern people. Last year at this time there were thousands of barrels of herring caught, but this season, because of the ice conditions, there is practically nothing done in that locality in the way of fishing.

Special Chef to Disguise Billie Burke's Prunes.

When asked whether he experienced any serious trouble in filming Billie Burke's Paramount picture, "The Mysterious Miss Terry," director J. Searle Dawley told the following anecdote:

It seems that Billie Burke as Miss Terry is a resident of a boarding-house where, as everyone knows, said Mr. Dawley, "people eat prunes daily with relish. Billie Burke having just returned from the Baltimore where she had lunched, found it impossible to accomplish the feat, and it was necessary to find a substitute for the prunes that would appeal to her epicurean palate as well as resemble the prunes in quest of it. It was decided to give the required 'boarding-house atmosphere.' This was done by flavoring a dish of extra quality California peaches with chocolate—a process known only to a most expensive French chef who had to be hired for the purpose. Aside from this, Director Dawley said he had had no difficulty.

NOTE OF THANKS.—It was the wish of our son, that after his death we publicly thank all those who in any way helped to add a ray of sunshine to his dark hours, especially Dr. Rendell and the young lady nurses who visited him, and who did everything that was humanly possible. We also wish to add our thanks for the floral tributes (the loved flowers), that were received by us from his many friends, after his death. Respectfully, W. C. and Mrs. Mauser.

"continued from 8th page" Active cargo, which vessel sailed from Catalina on the 9th inst. and I have been in time to prevent her going to the House of McMahon & Co., if she sails at Lisbon. Messrs. J. W. Garland & Co., of Cadiz will, I hope, do the best that can be done with her cargo. I was rather disappointed to find that the quantity of carries in general, and I don't know how Josh. Carl and Capt. Roalms managed it. As I expect this will be by the same opportunity from St. John's as my letter No. 12 referring to that. I remain, Sir, Your humble servant, WM. KELSON.

merchandise fish, 2,500 qts., exclusive of the captain's adventure of 40 qts., and will, I hope, reach that place long before the October convey. The John & Elizabeth sailed also with an excellent cargo for that place on the 20th ult., and the Active for Cadiz or Lisbon as (I before wrote you) on the 9th ult., all which I hope will arrive safe and do well. The Active, Alpha and John and Elizabeth I have directed to return here, and I calculate that two out of the three may do so. The George I hope may soon make her appearance as the supplies I expect by her will be much wanted. Our catch and collection here and at Catalina up to this date are 11,000 qts. merchandise fish, and 52 tons oil, and will yet increase considerably. The price of fish was here till the 20th Sept. 23/6 per qt., oil £25 per ton. Since that date it has been 20/6 for fish and £21 for oil, but for a short time only. Sleet & Read's agent having deviated from the prices agreed upon between the four Houses (Garland's, yours, Graham and Boag's and their own) and given the same prices as before the 20th Sept., and to which we are all in some measure obliged to comply. Mr. Garland has shipped off from Trinity only one cargo of new fish (the Amy) this season, and Sleet & Read are now loading their first (the Helena). I hope our shipments will not prove unfortunate.

"The Science of Deduction."

CHAPTER I. TRAILING THE HAT TO THE HATTER. HOLMES: "Watson! here comes a prospect who seems to be seeking our help. What do you deduct from his appearance?" WATSON: "I'm sure I can't say much. He looks like a business man to me; probably a banker, and a man of decision." HOLMES: "Quite right, my dear Watson; but surely that isn't all. Observe his hat. There is much to be learned from the hat a man wears. I intend writing a monogram on the subject one of these days. It is one to which I have given intensive thought and study. Our man seems to be a free and easy sort of individual, accustomed to take life as it comes; note the debonaire way the hat is tilted on his head. Precise and accurate; see how nicely the dent is made, excruciating almost three-quarters the side, yet not broken or irregular; certainly a neat person. Critical and conservative, the shape he wears is an established one, not freakish or extreme. Good judgment, shown when he selected the style that suits him admirably; see how finely the brim is curled, agreeing with the contour of his face. A man of means and one who chooses good clothes wisely; the hat is an expensive hat—a Bond Street product; note how wonderfully preserved the colour, though worn a long while, proven by the state of the inside band when he saluted that lady, yet the outside hasn't changed. Yes, that hat he wears is a 'CHRISTY'." Men of all professions and callings—Doctors, Lawyers, Clergymen, Laymen—recognize "CHRISTY" superiority. Let your judgment be as good. CHRISTY HATS... $5.00. SELECT QUALITY... $6.00.

Smyth's ESTABLISHED 1873. WHERE THE TRAIL ENDED.

successful trip bringing back about 250 qts. green fish only. The catch throughout the coast I do not think has been so great as last year, and to the southward we hear they have done very poorly indeed. I am rather inclined to think that fish will not be lower than it is now this season. Your business here is in a fair way of becoming more and more extensive. Some of Mr. Garland's dealers are offering themselves. Hant's Harbor, I find, will not answer for vessels to go to so well as I expected when you wrote No. 8, and perhaps we may find Catalina and Trinity afford sufficient room for extension. In hopes the Alpha has not met with any similar circumstances (if she called on Messrs. McMahon & Foster at Oporto), I remain, Sir, Your humble servant, WM. KELSON.

Poor Curing Weather. Trinity, October 19th, 1814. Mr. Robert Slade, Sir—This goes by the schr. Mary, Capt. Pattick, for St. John's with 680 qts. merchantable fish and 100 bundles hoops, the former caught and collected at Catalina and which I should not have sent off for St. John's had the weather been favorable since the schooner's return here. It having been continually wet and the season fast advancing, I judged it best to dispatch her at once instead of waiting longer for a time for landing the merchantable fish and shipping Maderia in order to prevent as far as possible Bills from being drawn on you by Messrs. Hart & Robinson for payment of our long account with them, and as soon as I can get a crew settled and the weather permits I shall send the Swallow thither also with a full cargo of Maderia. I have the pleasure of advising you of the safe return of the Alpha from Oporto, the 18th inst., with 198 hhds. salt, which averages exclusive of freight, insurance, etc., 11/6 per hhd. I think I shall load her with fish for you, unless I hear shortly something to alter my opinion. The George I hope will not be long before she makes her appearance, which vessel (if she does come) I think it will be best to send to Poole with oil of which I expect to raise nearly a cargo. Mr. Durall has just politely handed me a note stating that her old fish was sold at 24/1. I wish it may be true, but I fear I shall hear from you a far worse account. However much as I am disappointed in not receiving any letter from you by Mr. Garland's Hope (which vessel arrived here yesterday), I am glad to find she reached Poole safe and after a quick passage.

Long Accounts Discouraged. Unless I hear from you this Fall, discouraging accounts, I have reason to think that next year should voyage be fair, your trade in this city will be very considerably augmented, and it certainly will need another vessel of the size of the George. I mean in addition to those you now have. I beg to refer you to the short sketch of goods which I hope to receive by an early vessel next Spring (notwithstanding any that may come this Fall) and to remind you of two good early cargoes of Liverpool salt. Also that we must (if at any time possible) have a cargo of lumber next year from Nova Scotia. I remain, Sir, Your humble servant, WM. KELSON.

We are giving now and for some time past 20/6 for merchantable fish, and oil from £23 to £25 per ton. The Hope I understand was chiefly loaded with Rum and Molasses from Bristol. By her I received two bales of Rugs marked RS. No 1 and 2, but without any letter or Invoice. I expect next year to collect from Old Penan in this Bay, nearly or about, the George's cargo of Fish and Oil, having made an arrangement (and of which I shall write you more fully in the Fall) with a Mr. Reagan there, a man of most respectable character, and who has hitherto dealt with Mr. Durall. Our collection at Catalina will, no doubt, be more next year than it is this.

Delighted With Turnout. Since writing the foregoing the Maria has dropped in, and I with pleasure acknowledge the receipt of your letters Nos. 10 and 11. I am extremely glad to find that the George's fish was got rid of so well. I did not expect that it would have fetched 20/ per qt., and as to the Alpha's old fish, I am really surprised. I expected nothing less than to hear that having been thrown out of the Lodge with a shovel. As you observe they must have paid great attention to it, otherwise it must have been totally spoiled. I am inclined to think that the markets for new fish sent off early will not be so bad as you and Mr. Garland expected. The Alpha's fish is something better than 30/ per qt. There has not been yet a very large quantity sent off for market and I am in great hopes of our doing it that gets safe will do well. With your reply respecting the authority on discretionary power you allow me I am exceedingly satisfied, and with humble respects jointly with Ann Kelson to Mrs. Slade and Family and Mr. James Slade, I remain, Sir, Your humble servant, WM. KELSON.

Battlefield Flowers. A strange phenomenon is to be seen at present on the battlefields of France. Flowers, not known within living memory, are breaking out on the scarred surface and in shell-holes and dug-outs. Three of these flowers of strange species were seen by an old peasant going home for his midday meal, and botanists have since become interested in the discovery of the plants, which, it is believed, have sprung from seeds buried in the depths of the earth for decades past. A well-known botanist in London, discussing the phenomenon, said:— "There is evidence that seeds may be buried for a large number of years awaiting the time of germination. "It is known that seeds have been buried for upwards of sixty years without losing their power of germination. Seeds of corn and wheat buried with Egyptian mummies thousands of years ago have been planted out in the twentieth century and have germinated in the ordinary way."

Why Easter is Late.

Why does Easter fall on a different date each year? Although puzzling to many people, the question is easily answered. Easter is a movable festival because it is regulated by the moon. Easter Day is always the first Sunday after what is known as the Paschal full moon, i.e., the full moon which happens upon or next after the 21st March, the beginning of the ecclesiastical year.

Mrs. Barker Says Use Dodd's Kidney Pills For Dropsy and Heart Trouble. She Suffered Till She Took The Advice of Friends—Ask Your Friends About Dodd's Kidney Pills. St. Catharines, Ont., May 23rd. (Special.)—That dropsy and heart trouble are caused by weak kidneys, and that the right way to treat them is to use Dodd's Kidney Pills is again shown by the experience of Mrs. Barker, a well-known and highly respected resident of this city. "I had dropsy and a weak heart for some time," Mrs. Barker states. "I was advised to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and found them very beneficial, as the dropsy has left me and my heart is much stronger. I am better than I have been in years. "I recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to anyone suffering from dropsy or heart trouble." Both Mrs. Barker's ailments were caused by weak kidneys failing to do their work of straining the impurities out of the blood. The work of the heart was doubled by having to propel blood thick with impurities to all parts of the body. Ask your neighbors if Dodd's Kidney Pills do not cure weak or sick kidneys.

First Aerial Post— Man Drowned.

On Saturday, September 9, Gustave Hamel carried a mail of about 10,000 cards, letters and papers from London to Windsor, the band playing the National Anthem as he whirred away. Owing to the adverse wind, he was the only one to take the air. His official times were: left Hendon Aerodrome 4.59, arrived Windsor Castle 5.11. Mail reached Windsor Post Office 5.23. Hamel flew back to Hendon with mails at 6.5 p.m., arriving at 6.32 p.m., when he was carried shoulder high, while the band played "See the Conquering Hero Comes." The wind blew behind him at thirty miles an hour, and he reached a height of 1,200 feet. He was nearly turned over once or twice on the way. The letters were taken to be forwarded to Paddington and delivered to London the same evening. Immediately on the aviator's arrival at Windsor, a telegram was despatched to the King. Letters by the aerial post were sent to all the crowned heads and Postmaster-Generals of Europe. On Saturday, May 23, 1914, Mr. Hamel left Hardelet, on the French Coast to cross the Channel in his new monoplane, on his way from Villacoublay, Paris, to Hendon, to fly in the Aerial Derby round London which was postponed on account of the unfavourable weather. Being victor the previous year, he was most anxious to take part in the race. After leaving Hardelet, his monoplane was supposed to have been seen very high over Boulogne, after which no trace of him was ever seen again, although prompt search made in the Channel and along the coasts of England and France. The tragic end to Gustave Hamel's brilliant career was mourned not only by his friends and the flying community but by the general public. He was only 20 years of age when he joined the Bleriot School, early in 1911. He soon returned to England, acquired a monoplane of his own, established himself at Hendon, and started his active career in aviation.

Origin of the Baronety.

Many people imagine that the rank of baronet is a very ancient one; but its creation under that title dates only from May 22, 1611, when James I. offered to make 200 baronets at £1,000 apiece, in order to raise funds for his own necessities, and also—but that was a subsidiary reason—to provide men for the colonies which were then being settled in the Irish province of Ulster. Nominally, the new knights were supposed to have at least £1,000 per annum each from land in England; but no very particular inquiry was made to enforce compliance with this condition; if the person who desired to be entitled "Sir" had the necessary £1,000 for the fees, the rest was taken pretty much for granted. One curious circumstance arising from the association with Ulster, however, was that the new baronets were all allowed to add the "red hand" of the arms of that province to their own arms, and thus, to this day, many stories have arisen to account for its presence there, which have small foundation in fact further than that the family procured it through paying James I. the sum already named. Thus one baronet, shortly afterwards, murdered his cook, and the "red hand" in the arms of his successors to-day is set down traditionally as having been a punishment for doing so. Another, when out shooting, vowed, in default of other sport, to kill the first living thing he met, which, unfortunately, turned out to be a miller, and, as he kept his oath, the "red hand" was, according to the story, added to his arms. But the truth is that he was one of those who "ordered" a baronetcy from James I.

Strange Incident in the Commons.

A disagreeable yet ridiculous incident took place in the House of Commons on May 22, 1867, when Mr. Reardon, the Member for Athlone, gave notice of his intention to ask the First Lord of the Treasury whether it was true that Her Majesty the Queen (Victoria), on account of ill-health, had gone to Scotland, and did not intend to return to England for the remainder of the Session; and, if so, whether it was the intention of the Government, out of consideration for Her Majesty's health, comfort, and tranquillity, to advise Her Majesty to abdicate! This extraordinary question caused much agitation, and was followed by loud cries of "Order!" One may fancy the cloud which rested on the ordinarily stern features of the Speaker—Evelyn Denison—as he rose and said: "The House has anticipated what I had to say by its expression of opinion in regard to the terms employed in the notice by the honorable Member. No doubt any question may be addressed by a Member of this House to the confidential adviser of the Crown on any matter relating to the discharge of public duties, but such questions must be addressed in respectful and parliamentary terms. The question of the honourable Member certainly does not appear to me to be couched in such terms." Mr. Reardon immediately apologised.

"Not To-Day, Thank You."

Cold Comfort for the Coalman.
It is likely that, in the near future, it will be possible for us to snap our fingers at miners and coal-owners alike. Scientists declare that, at an early date, we shall obtain all the power that is required to run our railways and factories, light our streets and homes, and do in short everything that coal does to-day at small cost, through utilizing sunshine! Utilization of the sun's heat to supply power is no fantastic dream; it is an accomplished fact. But for the dislocation caused by the war, we might have been to-day as independent of coal as we are of stage-coaches!

Ten Days' Supply.
Just before the war, highly successful experiments were being made in Egypt by an American inventor. He arranged a series of rotating mirrors, which focused the sun's rays on a boiler, the steam of which worked engines and dynamos. So intense is the heat generated by the focused sunbeams, that the water in ordinary boilers boils in a third of the time taken by a furnace. This country, it is true does not enjoy the almost constant sunshine of Egypt, but in three hours of sunshine, granted a sufficient number of focusing mirrors and dynamos, enough electricity can be stored for ten days' supply.—Ex.

The Latest in Guns.

Fires Twenty-Eight Rounds a Minute.
A new British gun which has recently been approved, after many experiments, is said to be the best of its kind in the world. The advantages of the new gun are that it will fire the heavy 18 1/4 lb. shell used in our ordinary quick-firer a further distance and with greater rapidity than has ever been attained with a field gun before. In fact, the new gun increases the range of our normal field weapon by at least three thousand yards, and it is expected that further developments will extend the vulnerable point by another one thousand yards. Experiments have shown that the new gun can discharge as many as twenty-eight rounds a minute. One of the difficulties at first experienced was that, although the increased distance could be attained with comparative ease, accuracy could not be wholly relied upon at the lengthened range, and although the gun was used on a limited scale during the closing stages of the war, its far-reaching effects were not utilized to their full extent for this reason. The vibration set up by the extreme rapidity of fire also operated somewhat against accuracy, but it understood that both these difficulties have now been overcome, and that the gun has been found to answer all requirements.

Bees in Battle.

Probably the most remarkable weapons of war ever used were swarms of bees. There are at least two well-authenticated instances of the use of this novel and stinging war material. The first is related by Apollon of the siege of Themisyras in Pontus, by Lucullus, in his war against Mithridates. Turrets were brought up, mounds were built, and huge mines were made by the Romans. The people of Themisyras dug open these mines from above, and through the holes cast down upon the workmen bears and other wild animals, together with swarms of bees. The second instance occurred in Enlilant. The Danes and Norwegians were attacking Chester, held by the Saxons and some Gallic auxiliaries.

After adopting stonings and boiling water in vain against the besiegers, the Saxons threw down all the beehives in the town upon the attackers, who were soon routed. The gullot lays her eggs on a bare ledge of rock, the night jar in a small open space among the bracken at the edge of a wood, and the peewee out on the marsh or in the centre of an open ploughed field. The wood pigeon's nest is just a few sticks criss-crossed, while that of the house sparrow is an untidy mess of dead grass and any sort of rubbish. Seeing how careless these birds are, it is all the more strange to find, at the other end of the scale, a number of birds which construct regular fortresses for the protection of their eggs and young. Workers in Chemicals and Metals Are Often Subject to Anaemia

THE breathing of poisonous chemical fumes or of the fine dust which arises from the grinding of metals is most injurious to the blood.

As a natural result the quality of the blood deteriorates and an anaemic condition is developed.

Once the blood fails to supply an abundance of nourishment the nerves become exhausted and then there is weakness of the heart's action, inability of the stomach and other organs of digestion to perform their functions and general lassitude of the whole body.

A complete change to open air employment is the most desirable treatment, but, unfortunately, in this day of the high cost of living, not many can afford to throw up their means of subsistence and start all over again at a new occupation.

For all such there is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as the best known means of enriching the blood and thereby nourishing and invigorating the whole human system.

The appetite is sharpened, digestion is improved, the vital organs resume their natural functions and strength is restored to the weakened body. With strength comes new courage and energy, new confidence and good health.

Mr. Robert Blaind, painter, 26 Wharf St., Belleville, Ont., writes:

"About three years ago my nerves were so bad that I couldn't work at my occupation, as I felt so weak and nervous and couldn't get any sleep at night. I went to a doctor and doctored for fourteen weeks, and did not feel altogether right until a friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I did so, and after taking the first box I could see good results, a continuation of this treatment restored my nervous system and I have been feeling better ever since. I would recommend it to anybody suffering from nerve trouble, as I have found it to be a grand medicine."

Everybody whose occupation exposes him to the breathing of poisonous fumes or the fine dust from metals or mineral drugs will find in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a splendid means of enriching the blood and counteracting the bad effects. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. The portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., are on every box of his medicine.

"Not Guilty."

The hearing of the case Rex vs. Cartwell and Gill, was continued yesterday before Chief Justice Sir Wm. Horwood and the following jury: Thomas Bates, G. H. Cook, John A. Williams, W. H. Bowden, Patrick Foley, E. R. Pippy, S. Sellars, W. Casey, Alex. Ross, George Snow, W. Ewing, A. Parsons. The examination of witnesses for the Crown, and the accused in their own behalf, occupied the attention of the Court until 3 p.m., when Mr. Higgins, counsel for the accused, addressed the jury for over an hour and a half. Mr. Higgins' address was considered one of the ablest ever delivered to a jury in the local courts, and a strong plea on behalf of accused. Mr. L. E. Emerson, for the Crown, followed, and reviewed the evidence for and against the prisoners at length, concluding at 6 p.m., when recess was taken until 7.30. On resuming, His Lordship the Chief Justice charged the jury, and in doing so directed their attention to the evidence as it had been given, and as to their part in rendering a verdict. Just before nine o'clock the jury retired. At midnight they returned to Court, and through their foreman, Mr. T. Bates, announced that they had found both accused "Not Guilty." On reading of Mr. Higgins' address the verdict was recorded, both were discharged. Messrs. Higgins and Hunt for accused; Mr. L. E. Emerson for the Crown.

What a Light!

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir,—The letter of "Fireman" in this morning's Daily News, re the miserable gas lamp that is supposed to do duty near the junction of King's Bridge Road and the old railway crossing, is a timely one, and every person who passes that much frequented thoroughfare will agree with the candid utterances of Fireman.

This supposed light is a perfect nuisance, and a most absurd "bluff" on the part of the Municipal Council or whoever else has to do with the proper and adequate lighting of the streets.

King's Bridge Road is perhaps one of the most frequented walks on our suburban line, and surely in view of this a decent light should be placed near the particular crossing of Circular and K. B. Roads.

It is surprising to me that some serious accident has not occurred ere this, and if the place is not sufficiently lighted a casualty is bound to happen.

It will be too late to hold mighty investigations then; now is the time to prevent anything so serious a nature by providing this necessary light to the aid of the pedestrian, the motorist and all concerned.

What is wanted is a good sized electric light there—and wanted immediately.

Yours truly,
MOTORIST.

At 8 p.m. on May 22nd, at St. Thomas' Church, Miss Bertha Bryant and Mr. Walter Cooke were made man and wife by Rev. C. A. Moulton, a large number of friends of the contracting parties witnessing the ceremony. The bride's dress was of cream lustre and silk trimmings, the bridesmaid, Miss Parrott, being gowned in blue silk; the duties of best man fell to Mr. Gerald C. Lewis. A reception was held at the bride's home, Rennie's Mill Road, where the presents were viewed, and a very pleasant evening spent, after which the newly married couple drove to their future home, Waldgrove Farm, White Hills.

Body of Edith Cavell Laid to Rest in Norwich.

Impressive Ceremony in Westminster and in Nurse's Native City.

London, May 15.—(By the Associated Press)—Great Britain today paid tribute to Edith Cavell, English nurse, executed by the Germans at Brussels on October 12, 1915, when her body, enroute from Brussels to her native village of Norwich, was taken to Westminster Abbey for an impressive memorial service.

It was a public funeral, in which it seemed every resident of the great metropolis endeavored to participate. The streets through which the cortege moved were congested with crowds and every inch of standing room in the neighborhood of the Abbey was occupied by a densely massed multitude, which was eager to do reverent homage to "that brave woman," as the Bishop of London described her, "who deserves a great deal from the British Empire."

The congregation of the Abbey included high officials of the government, representatives of foreign countries and men prominent in many walks of life. King George was represented by the Earl of Athlone, brother of Queen Mary. The service was conducted by the Dean of Westminster. No address was delivered. The opening sentences of the burial service were sung by the choir, which then sang the 23rd Psalm and a short lesson was read from the Revelations of St. John. Then came Sullivan's anthem "Yea though I walk Through the Valley of the Shadow of Death," and "I Heard a Voice from Heaven."

The Litany, the Lord's prayer and two collects were then repeated, followed by the hymn "Abide With Me." The benediction was then pronounced and the Last Post and Reveille were sounded.

The service which began at noon, lasted half an hour. The procession left the Abbey to the strains of Chopin's funeral march and proceeded to the station, where the coffin of plain oak was placed on a train for Norwich.

The Funniest Airship

MIGHT HAVE FLOWN IF IT HADN'T BURST.

"Anyone quitting his post without permission will have his brains blown out without ceremony." That was one of the gaudy provisos of a projected journey from Paris to London by "aerial ship" some eighty years ago.

This airship, the first of its kind, was built to accommodate thirty passengers, who were to sit in one long row. Newspapers at the time described the shape of a balloon as being "like that of a fish's air-bladder." In case the wind was not favourable, on each side of the airship was fixed a paddle—to be turned by a handle. Amongst other things they were to take aloft was a Davy's safety-lamp, in case night came on and the passengers thought they would like to read.

Many thousands of people gathered to see it start. It never did. As soon as the envelope became inflated it toppled over and burst with a mighty explosion. So the crowd, evidently thinking they could make better use of it than anyone else, rushed on it and tore it to shreds, which they sold as souvenirs of a most memorable occasion.

Thou Shalt Not Swear.

For laws that are strange, Uncle Sam "licks creation," if one may judge from a few only of the bills recently introduced in the various State Legislatures.

In Maryland, for example, a Bill was introduced making it a misdemeanor for a woman to appear in a public place wearing a hat exceeding ten inches in diameter.

In Texas it is a criminal offence to swear over the telephone, and in Nebraska, all hotels must have bedsheets nine feet long, clean towels, and must disinfect all linen once a season.

Delaware proposed to tax all bachelors and gipsies, "both of which are regarded as undesirable aliens"; New York State, to establish water wagons for the carrying through the streets of habitual drunkards, and to protect bashful brides and bridegrooms from the stares of the curious by allowing them to send marriage applications by a messenger.

Chicago has a very salutary law imposing fines on husbands who slap their wives with the left hand, one dollar; with the right hand, two dollars; while sitting down, five dollars; and while standing flat-footed, three dollars.

Of all the States, probably Illinois takes the palm for really amusing "tricks": such as the law prohibiting bachelors from being called "Mister," their Christian names and surnames, only being used as a mark; and the other prescribing that every bridegroom must make an affidavit that he has not been intoxicated more than twice during the year before his marriage.

Senile Marriage.

Old-time law-makers would probably have been in sympathy with the Brooklyn millionaire who maintained that at eighty-six he was too old to be legally married. In Rome, under the Emperor Augustus, a law was passed forbidding men to marry when they were over sixty, and women when they were over fifty.

Peter the Great also disapproved of senile marriage, and enacted that no marriage contract should hold good if either of the contracting parties was over eighty at the time it was entered upon. This law is still enforced in Russia, or, at all events, was enforced until the Bolsheviks came into power.

The following promotions and presentations were lately made by the Lt. Col. Commanding, and the chevrons and medals were recently presented to the lads officially by Mrs. R. F. Goodridge, wife of the Colonel, who is an enthusiastic worker when her services are needed in aid of the Brigade.

Another shipment of kit goes forward to Heart's Content to-day, showing that Company is growing strong. The Old Comrades met last Monday night under Veteran and President Rowland F. KING AND AN ANGRY VANMAN.

The King had an unpleasant experience the other day of one phase of the London traffic problem. His Majesty was motoring home from St. Paul's Cathedral, and as his car turned a corner at New Bridge Street (two-horse way threatened to obstruct progress. The royal chauffeur attempted to pass, and the vanman, representing what he no doubt imagined to be an infringement of the rules of the road, expressed his opinion of the chauffeur in a vituperative volley uttered in a penetrating voice. The chauffeur ignored the angry driver, but His Majesty, who had heard every word of the tirade, turned his head sharply and gave him a disapproving glance. Whether the man was aware that he had incurred the royal displeasure is doubtful, but in any case he did not say more, and the King's car passed on its way.

RETORT TO THE KAISER.

London has kept St. George's Day (April 23) as an English festival in a very quiet English manner, and in English weather hovering between fair and wet. Plenty of roses were for sale, some offered by pretty sellers for charity, some by the flower-women of the West End of London. The bulky, rumbling ladies who wear shawls and straw hats as insignia of their trade. However, the majority of the people one passed in the streets wore neither rose nor flag, and I warrant a good proportion did not know that it was St. George's Day or Shakespeare's birthday. Naturally the chief appeal of the day was as the first anniversary of the daring attack on the Zebrugges at sea, which, although it did not fulfil our hopes and bottle up all the German submarines which were in the Flanders bases, had an amazing effect on German nerves, and made the enemy fear for his bases in the Bight. Commander Collingwood Hughes, speaking at the New Gallery on the 23rd inst., told how the Kaiser said to a British officer taken in the Zebrugges attack: "You had a hot time last night. 'Not so hot as you had," replied the Englishman. I saw many American soldiers in town wearing the flag with the cross of St. George. The absence of demonstrations on a national holiday puzzled them.

THE KING AND AN ANGRY VANMAN.

What the man was aware of he had incurred the royal displeasure is doubtful, but in any case he did not say more, and the King's car passed on its way.

REPORT TO THE KAISER.
 London has kept St. George's Day (April 23) as an English festival in a very quiet manner, and in English weather hovering between rain and wet. Plenty of roses were for sale, some offered by pretty sellers for charity, some by the flower-women of the West End of London, the bulky, rubimund ladies who wear haws and straw hats as insignia of their trade. However, the majority of the people one passed in the streets wore neither rose nor flag, and it was a good proportion did not know that it was St. George's Day or Shakespeare's birthday. Naturally the chief appeal of the day was as the first anniversary of the Zebrugge attack, that splendid piece of daring which, although it did not fulfil our hopes and bottle up all the German submarines which were in the Flan-der bases, had an amazing effect on German nerves, and made the enemy rear for his bases in the Eight. Commander Collingwood, Hughes, speaking at the New Gallery on the 22nd inst., told how the Kaiser said to a British officer taken in the Zebrugge attack: "You had a hot time last night." "Not so hot as you had," replied the Englishman. I saw many American soldiers in town wearing the flag with the cross of St. George. The absence of demonstrations on a national holiday puzzled them.

CLUBS OLD AND NEW.
 Many London clubs closed their doors during the war, and others were kept open, not in the ordinary way by entrance fees and subscriptions, but by donations from their members. Now that the war is over, new clubs are springing up to take the place of the defunct. But they are not quite the same as those they seek to replace, for the old exclusive atmosphere of West End Clubbing is to find no home in these new institutions. The new spirit is suggested by the secretary of one of the most popular of London clubs, who says: "The club of the immediate future must be informal, comfortable and happy. So long as it is that, and you give your members the best, it doesn't matter what prices you charge them."

SPRING FOLLAGE.
 Sycamore trees are in leaf, and the horse chestnuts and elms have opened some buds. The Forsythia, that lovely tree jasmine, is covered with lemon-coloured blossoms, and London is about to enter her most lovely period. Already the shrubs in the squares and parks are green. We had our full share of showers during the past few days, but not enough to stop the Australians in town from resuming their summer habit of lounging on the granite rims of the fountains in Trafalgar Square. They have an unlimited capacity for leisure these long-limbed Australians, and never tire of doing nothing. Americans hustle round on foot doing the sights of London with a Young Men's Christian Association guide, but the Australian, although willing to take a drive to the Albert Memorial in a wagonette, much prefers to sit in the sun and let the world go by him.

CIVIL AVIATION INSURANCE RISKS.
 Risks to persons and property in the United Kingdom from aircraft other than that engaged in hostile operations, are now being insured at Lloyd's for a premium of sixpence per cent. The imminent inauguration of civil aviation (for, be it known, civil aviation will be freed from Government control on and after May 1st) brings this question of insurance very close to the ordinary citizen. The risks include not only the actual impact of aircraft, but that of falling matter of any kind. These pertain to persons when within their own dwellings and land, as well as when traversing the highway or open land, and to stationary and portable property of every kind, including live stock, standing crops and orchards. Many business men here think that to require the whole nation to take out air risk policies at this rate would be uneconomic, but sufficient data do not yet exist to justify a final conclusion.

GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS AS LIMPETS.

There is a growing agitation—and it threatens to rise to a storm—against the continued occupation of business premises by Government departments. Important business premises are extensively held in thrall, and there seems to be no immediate prospect of the evicted tenants being restored. This is conspicuously so in the case of many of the splendid shops and office blocks in Kingsway, whose aggrieved tenants are being informed, five months after the end of hostilities, that they may not get back for two years yet. Obviously the remedy is a more speedy demobilisation of Government war staffs and the concentration of as many of those remaining as possible in the well-built temporary wooden structures which adorn erstwhile beauty spots such as the Embankment Gardens and St. James's Park.

THE ANZACS' FAREWELL.

It would be invidious to make comparisons between Friday's march through London of the Anzacs and the recent procession of the Guards. The latter moved with British military stiffness and erectness; the Anzacs lounged along with their long, lean limbs in a way that spoke of great open spaces. But it may be said that the Australian parade was more spectacular in two respects. In the first place their cavalry were well mounted. The dismounted giants of the Guards were not so impressive as the sturdy horsemen from the Antipodes on their prancing steeds. The other distinction was the display of aerial acrobatics. London has long since become blasé in regard to aviation stunts, but London was frankly amazed, and not a little apprehensive, at the almost reckless daring of the fliers. There were about a dozen machines in the air over Australia House in the Strand. The larger ones were sedate enough; not so the others. The smaller planes in their erratic evolutions emulated the erratic flight of a flock of swallows. One in particular, the more easily distinguishable because it was painted red, excelled the others in its mountebank feats. One moment it looked like being impaled on the spire of St. Clement Dane's Church; the next it was somersaulting apparently within inches of the roof of Australia House. Meanwhile its companions were performing equally perilous stunts and loops, and the crowd below, with its heart in its mouth, forgot about the procession passing in the street. The exhibition served to confirm the popular conception of the spirit of fearlessness animating the Australian soldier; but it was somewhat of a trial to the nerves of those who witnessed it.

Middle Aged Women

Women should take warning from such symptoms as heat flashes, shortness of breath, excessive nervousness, irritability, and the blues—which indicate the approach of the inevitable "Change" that comes to all women nearing middle age. We have published volumes of proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest aid women can have during this trying period.

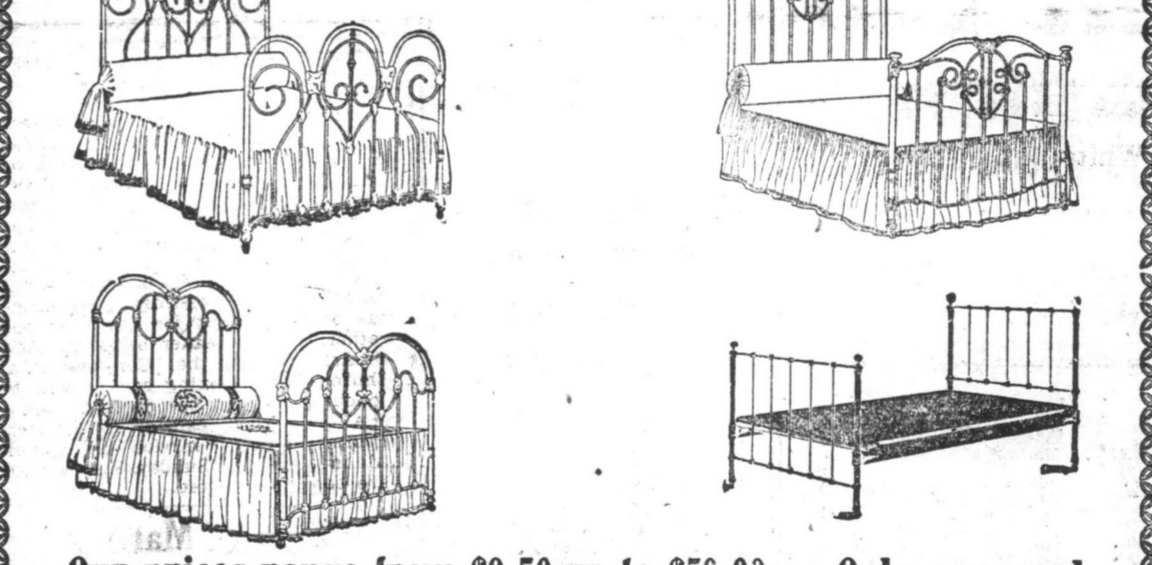

Read About These Two Women:
 Fremont, Ct.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run-down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which is surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. GODDARD, 222 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.
 Urbana, Ill.—"During Change of Life, in addition to its annoying symptoms I had an attack of grippe which lasted all winter and left me in a weakened condition. I felt at times that I would never be well again. I read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it did for women passing through the Change of Life, so I told my doctor I would try it. I soon began to gain in strength and the annoying symptoms disappeared and my Vegetable Compound has made me a well, strong woman so I do all my own housework. I cannot recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly to women passing through the Change of Life."—Mrs. FRANK HANSON, 1316 South Orchard Street, Urbana, Ill.

 Whatever may happen in other countries of Europe, we are assured Great Britain never will succumb to Bolshevism. As she was the defender of civilization by her navy against the barbarism of German undersea warfare, so she is now the chief bulwark against the spread of anarchistic doctrines. With an Empire stretching over the world, she is the most democratic of nations; and her laboring men are pursuing a constitutional course to obtain their share of the benefits arising from the general advance in wages.
