HOUSE OF COMMONS

Wednesday, June 9, 1965

The house met at 2.30 p.m.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

STATEMENT ON MATTERS TO BE CONSIDERED

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a short statement to the House regarding the order of business for the days ahead, subject of course to the usual reservation that there may be emergencies which will change the order and indeed change the matters brought before the House.

After we complete the two resolutions dealing with parliamentary procedure it is our intention to bring before the House the two banking bills now on the order paper, Bill C-102 and Bill C-103, the revision of the Bank Act and the bill respecting savings banks in the Province of Quebec. After they have been given second reading they will be sent to the appropriate committee. Their consideration in committee will undoubtedly take some time; therefore special legislation will be required to provide for a necessary extension of the present bank charters.

Then, Mr. Speaker, we expect to bring forward the resolutions and bills implementing the budget proposals, which do deserve some priority, particularly in view of the 10 per cent cut in personal income tax due to take effect on July 1.

Then progress in consideration of supply is both desirable and indeed important. For instance, there will be a supplementary estimate to implement the program to pay grants and loans to unemployed workers who seek jobs. Another important item which should be given early consideration is the new incentive for industry in certain areas to increase employment and incomes. There is also additional legislation which is important, but I think non-controversial, which we should like to bring forward at any early date;—the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act; item No. 20 on the order paper, the bill to amend the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation Act; certain veterans legislation; the bill to establish the Indian Claims Commission which is now on the order paper; and the order setting up a joint committee of the House of Commons and the Senate concerning the state of penitentiaries.

That is the immediate program, Mr. Speaker, which I venture to submit to the House. I think it takes us far enough ahead for the present part of this session, and I think its completion would undoubtedly entitle us to that summer recess to which we are all looking forward with such great anticipation.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the program enunciated by the Prime Minister on this, the 39th day of the session, indicates that there will be many days ahead before the program will have been completed, even in the face of the co-operative attitude taken by Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition respecting legislative matters necessary to be passed by Parliament.

However, I should point out that the measures that are referred to in the budget resolutions will not meet the economic situation which to an unusual degree in the last two or three weeks has revealed portents both in Canada and the United States that are anything but hopeful. There is the stock market situation. There is the increasing balance of payments problems in so far as United States-Canadian trade is concerned. There is the relatively small increase in exports as compared with the very material increase in imports; and there is the necessity for action being taken now to meet a matter which on several occasions we have brought before this House, namely the removal of the 11 per cent sales tax on building materials and production machinery. This is something that is needed and I am sure, with the co-operation of the House, if we could but soften the heart of the Government in this regard, progress would be rapid and effective. At the annual meeting of the C.M.A. in Toronto yesterday—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Diefenbaker: —it was stated that the 11 per cent sales tax has placed Canadian industry in an unfair position.

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. The statement of the Prime Minister was very important but quite short, and I would hope that under the rules as given me by the House the various commentaries will also be within the limits of the statement and reasonably short.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, the applause which has just occurred, with which I am in entire agreement, indicates that those people opposite feel exacerbated by the suggestion I made which would be beneficial to Canada as a whole, and which was demanded yesterday by the Manufacturers Association as necessary to preserve and extend the economy. I made that suggestion in the spirit of helpfulness which at all times I endeavour to exhibit. I thought the very suggestion on my part, when taken in conjunction with the serious views expressed by the Manufacturers Association as to this need, would be met with a different response from the Liberal Party than contemptuous jeering.

As far as the other matters are concerned, Sir, to which the Prime Minister referred, generally speaking they are, with one exception, mainly non-controversial. It was in that non-controversial state of mind that I made the suggestion that action is needed now in respect of these matters that affect the economy in the face of an extensive increase in the number of bankruptcies, never equalled since 1932; and let that fact be made clear.

I hope that between now and the date of the Prime Minister's departure to attend the Prime Ministers' Conference, he will give the House a general idea of his views regarding those matters which will come before the conference, to which reference has been made in the press. All of us will want to join in wishing him the very best as he represents our country at that great conference, and all of us hope that when he returns many of the things that will be placed before us will have been passed. I found that during the period I was Prime Minister it was said that usually when I was absent at a Prime Ministers' Conference greater progress was made in respect of legislation.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I am not sure whether the last remark of the Leader of the official Opposition was a hint that the Prime Minister might consider taking that right hon. gentleman with him.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, I am willing to make that sacrifice in the interests of Parliament.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, the suggestion made by the hon. gentleman would be completely cancelled out if both of us were to go. If I were here progress would be made.

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Speaker, I can assure both right hon. gentlemen that Parliament would do its best to get on without them, and we would guarantee to accomplish a good deal of work during their absence.

I think the items the Prime Minister has announced as being high on the priority list are in the main non-controversial, and I see no reason why we should not be able to deal with them fairly expeditiously. There will be some discussion and disagreement on minor points, but I think these are items with which we will be able to dispose of without too much trouble.

There are one or two items I would hope the Prime Minister would give consideration to advancing in the order of priority. They are items which it seems to me cannot be too long delayed. One is the Canada Assistance Plan, which is of very considerable interest and ought to have high priority. Then there are two pieces of labour legislation. One involves amendments to the Fair Wages and Hours of Labour Act. If they are not dealt with it will mean that those who come under the legislation at the present time will have one standard from July 1 onward and those who are employed by Government agencies or work for contractors hired by the Federal Government and who are not covered at the present time will continue to be overlooked after July 1. I believe there would not necessarily be extended debate, and in my opinion it is fairly important that this legislation be advanced.

I had also hoped that some time before the summer recess the Government would at least make a public declaration and if possible introduce a resolution making clear its intention to implement the recommendations of the Hall Commission on national health insurance. We are all aware of the fact that a number of provinces are proceeding with provincial plans. If enough of these plans are established on a provincial basis with no uniformity among them and no provision for their being meshed into a Federal plan, this could constitute a very serious obstacle to establishing national health insurance in Canada. I hope that some time before the recess the Government will make at least a declaration stating that it accepts the principle of national health insurance and intends to introduce legislation at this session of Parliament to provide for medicare, and asking the provinces not to do anything that would make more difficult the establishment of a comprehensive health insurance plan for all Canadians.

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, in making some comments at this time it would be very easy to take advantage of the situation to list those pieces of legislation we would like to see the Government introduce and make such comments on the basis that it is good politically to be emphasizing those things about which we are most concerned. On the other hand I think we have a responsibility to each other and also to the country to make sure that what happened last year with regard to a summer recess does not happen again this year. I do not believe that a recess is a holiday. I think of a recess as providing an opportunity to go back to our constituencies and do much of the work for our constituents that we should do but have not been able to do for the past year and a half.

I had hoped that the Prime Minister would make some definite statement about the date when he expects Parliament to recess. I appreciate his outline of legislation and the order of priority, but I think it would also be helpful if a target date could be set. I hope he has in mind some date before July 1.

In my opinion it is a good thing that the Government plans to extend the present bank acts because in the period remaining before a recess there will not be sufficient time to consider adequately in committee the report of the Royal Commission on Banking and Finance and deal with the new bank bills. I would also hope the Government House Leader would make sure that the new standing committees are set up immediately and that the estimates are referred to those committees, because in the few weeks left before the recess they might be able to do a good part of the work on the estimates. Certainly that work should be started before the fall.

As we face the next few weeks I trust we will be able to deal with the legislation that has been outlined with dispatch and effectiveness because, as has been said, most of it is not controversial. We realize the importance of the Commonwealth Conference that the Prime Minister will of necessity be attending. I should like to emphasize that I believe it would be a good policy for him before he leaves to outline to the House some of the objectives which he is looking forward to achieving at that Conference. I think he would be well advised if some statement of Government policy could be made before he leaves.

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, we listened with interest to the announcement made by the Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson) concerning the priority measures he wants the house to examine until the adjournment or the end of the present session.

In his view, those measures are the least controversial items of the legislative program. Now, among those he mentioned, there are certainly some that will raise a controversy, for instance, the amendments to the Bank Act, the renewal of bank charters, their extension until the matter is discussed by the banking and commerce committee.

In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, those are points which not only will draw parliament's attention, but that of the general public.

A moment ago I heard the leader of the New Democratic party (Mr. Douglas) tell us that the government should immediately introduce a national medicare plan or bill. The Leader of the Official Opposition (Mr. Diefenbaker) reminded us about the 11 per cent tax on building materials; we are one hundred per cent in favour of abolishing this 11 per cent tax. But at the same time I thought that when the Leader of the Opposition was prime minister, not so long ago, with 208 federal members behind him, we had in this country more than one million unemployed. There was no sales tax on building materials at that time, but I only want to point out that when you are in the opposition, as in the case of the Leader of the Opposition at present, it is always easier to blame the government. The same thing applies to the present Prime Minister when he was in the opposition; he was wont to blame the government and the then prime minister.

Mr. Speaker, we are ready to examine the less controversial bills as well as the controversial ones. But we maintain that if the Prime Minister had announced today that from now on the sovereign government of Canada would use the Bank of Canada to finance the economic development of the country, we would not have heard about any socialist plan, as we just did, or any criticism as has been expressed earlier.

We regret that it seems less important to control the country's monetary system than to subdue individuals and to introduce measures directed against, and designed to belittle, the human person. Those are presented as non-controversial matters. But no mention is made of the monetary system. No mention is made of the banks. The control of finance over the economic life of our country is overlooked and thought is given mostly to downgrade the human person throughout the country.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that the Prime Minister will introduce the least controversial legislation possible, which will provide security and personal freedom to every Canadian citizen.

DOMINION-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE

STATEMENT AS TO OPENING DATE AND AGENDA

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I indicated the other day that I would make a short statement on the forthcoming Federal-Provincial Conference. All the Provinces have now agreed that this conference should open in Ottawa on Monday, July 19. It is expected to last for most of that week. I suggest that my letters of April 9 and May 13 to the Provinces concerning the agenda of the conference, together with the replies of the Premiers, might now be tabled.

The agenda of the conference originally proposed by the Federal Government was considerably expanded to meet the requests of the Provincial Governments. This is one of the reasons that the conference was postponed for a few weeks. The agenda is a very comprehensive one. The first item deals with social security. The conference will discuss the ways in which Federal-Provincial action can most effectively contribute to programs that will provide health services to Canadians on a comprehensive basis. It will also consider the basic features of an integrated Canada assistance plan which has been developed in consultation between the Federal and Provincial ministers of welfare.

The second item deals with economic development, and in particular with regional development and programs for the full utilization of human resources and the elimination of poverty, which can play a most important role in the promotion and maintenance of national prosperity and unity. The Federal Government will seek for the most appropriate and effective ways of concerting federal and provincial action in this field.

Under the third item, the Chairman of the Tax Structure Committee will present a progress report on the studies being conducted for the Committee, and the Conference will examine a number of questions related to the work of the Committee which have been placed on the agenda at the request of various provinces.

Of the remaining items some, such as item 4 concerning transportation and item 5 concerning inland water resources, have been placed on the agenda at the request of interested provinces. Some of the other items, such as item 6 relating to federal-provincial co-operation to combat organized crime and item 7 on liaison arrangements, which were originally proposed by the Federal Government, have been expanded in scope to take into account the views of provinces.

QUESTIONS

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

INVESTIGATION INTO CONTROL OF MASS MEDIA

Question No. 8—Mr. Fisher:

1. Has the attention of the Prime Minister or Members of the Cabinet been drawn to resolutions or requests by organizations such as the Saskatchewan Farmers Union asking for an investigation into the control of mass media in Canada, and particularly the press ownership on the Prairies?
2. If so, has the government any official reaction to the resolutions or requests?
3. Does the government consider that it has the constitutional authority to make such an investigation?
4. Does the work of the Combines Investigation Branch or the restrictive trades practices commission enable them on a continuing basis to appraise trends toward consolidation of ownership in the mass media, and particularly with the press?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): 1. No.

2. Not applicable.

3. This would depend upon the nature and purpose of the investigation.

4. Bearing in mind the size of the Combines Branch and the responsibilities of the senior staff in its day to day operations, it is not feasible to attempt on a continuing basis to appraise trends toward consolidation of the ownership in the mass media generally but it does do so in the case of newspapers and magazines. In this respect it should be noted that the jurisdiction of the Branch does not extend to acquisitions in the fields of television and radio broadcasting media. In the normal course of its operations, the Branch gives consideration to acquisitions in the field of newspapers and magazines for the purpose of determining whether they raise any question under the Combines Investigation Act and where the Director has reason to believe that the Act has been or is about to be violated, he takes action as required by the statute.

MINING COMPANY TAXES, VILLENEUVE COUNTY, QUE.

Question No. 121—Mr. Caouette:

What is the amount of the various federal taxes collected from mining companies in the county of Villeneuve?

Hon E. J. Benson (Minister of National Revenue): For Customs and Excise Division. There is no specific record available of sales tax paid by mining companies, as such. Their major operations do not bring them within the ambit of the Excise Tax Act.

For Taxation Division.

Statistics relating to income tax returns filed are not maintained on a basis of address by county and therefore the information requested cannot be furnished.

It should be mentioned that the Taxation Division of my department publishes annually a book known as "Taxation Statistics", which provides considerable detail broken down as fine as the information available will permit.

COST OF PRODUCING AND MARKETING LIVESTOCK PRODUCTS

Question No. 137—Mr. Rondeau:

With reference to the statement by the Minister of Agriculture, as it appears in Hansard, pages 11580-11581, concerning the gross revenue of approximately $2,816 from the sale of products derived from 6 cows and 2 sows, what is the government's estimate of the cost of producing and marketing such products?

Hon. Harry W. Hays (Minister of Agriculture): It is not practical to obtain an average for all of Canada of the cost of producing milk or hogs that would have any real meaning. Costs of production vary widely with location, type of enterprise, feed availability, size of operation and other factors. For example, a Quebec study on cost of production of hogs for 1956-57 gave a range of $7.81 to $29.18 per hundredweight live. Applying recent prices gives a range of $9.05 to $33.82 per hundredweight live. If the farms are divided into thirds according to costs, the results are as follows:

Lowest third, $13.10; median third, $18.02; highest third, $25.44.

Studies of costs of milk production show similar ranges.

DORCHESTER COUNTY, QUE., INCOMES

Question No. 167—Mr. Boutin:

1. How many individuals in Dorchester county reported, for each of the years 1960, 1961, 1962, 1963 and 1964, an income of (a) $100,000 or more (b) between $75,000 and $100,000 (c) between $50,000 and $75,000 (d) between $25,000 and $50,000 (e) between $10,000 and $25,000 (f) between $5,000 and $10,000 (g) between $2,000 and $5,000?

2. How are these individuals distributed by parish?

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of National Revenue): 1 and 2. Statistics relating to income tax returns filed are not maintained on a basis of address by county or parish and therefore the information requested cannot be furnished.

It should be mentioned that the Taxation Division of my department publishes annually a book known as "Taxation Statistics", which provides considerable detail broken down as fine as the information available will permit.

FEDERAL STEPS TO DEAL WITH FARM PRICE PROBLEMS

Question No. 277—Mr. Howe (Wellington-Huron):

1. What measures does the government plan to introduce to alleviate farm price problems as intimated by the Minister of Agriculture on April 28, 1965, to a farm delegation?

2. When will such measures be introduced?

Hon. Harry W. Hays (Minister of Agriculture): 1 and 2. This is a matter of government policy and will be announced in due course.

ADVERTISING ACCOUNTS WITH BREITHAUPT, BENSON AND CO., TORONTO

Question No. 355—Mr. Aiken:

1. Does the advertising firm of Breithaupt, Benson and Company, Limited of Toronto have any advertising accounts with the Government of Canada?

2. Has this firm carried a recruiting account for any of the armed services and, if so, when did such contract commence and when was it terminated?

3. Has there been any transfer of accounts from Breithaupt, Benson and Company, Limited to Walsh Advertising Company Limited and, if so, when was this transfer effected and what account was transferred?

4. Do any of the armed services recruiting accounts placed through Breithaupt, Benson and Company, Limited remain unpaid, and are any funds held back to ensure payment of such accounts?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): 1. No.

2. Yes, 2 July 1963 to 31 March 1965.

3. No.

4. Not known at this time because the possibility exists that all suppliers' invoices arising from the 1964-65 program have not yet been received by this agency. No funds are held back; however, provision is made in the 1965-66 recruiting advertising budget to reimburse Breithaupt, Benson and Company

Limited, for charges arising from the 1964-65 advertising campaign.

PASSPORT APPLICATION OF MRS. LUCIEN RIVARD

Question No. 410—Mr. Coates:

Has a decision been reached on Mrs. Lucien Rivard's application for a passport and, if so, what was the decision?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): 1. No. Her application is still under consideration.

OFFICIAL SCULPTOR, PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS

Question No. 457—Mr. Enns:

1. What is the name of the official sculpturer for the Parliament Buildings?
2. How are projects for sculpture decided?
3. Is there an advisory committee?
4. Who are the members of the advisory committee?
5. As the sculpture in the main hall in the front of the House of Commons has stimulated public interest, what is the main theme of each panel?

Answer: 1. R. Eleanor Milne, S.S.C.

2, 3, and 4. Prior to 1961-2 a committee comprising the Speakers of the two Houses of Parliament and the Chief Architect of the Department of Public Works met at irregular intervals to choose themes for the sculptures in the Centre Block and to decide on individual subjects within the accepted themes.

In 1963 an ad hoc committee comprising the Minister of Public Works, the acting Deputy Minister of Public Works, the Assistant Deputy Minister of Public Works and the official scuplturer met and approved the themes and subjects which are currently in work. This work will be concluded during 1965.

5. The subjects of the separate panels, each arranged as a triptych, represent unique incidents in Canada's development which cannot by their nature be repeated in later times. In order from left to right, beginning of the east wall, the subjects are: The arrival of earliest man; The arrival of European man; The exploration of the St. Lawrence River; New World migration from wars and strife; The first settlers in the east; The birth of schooling; The opening of the west; The northern searches.

A pamphlet is presently being prepared for issue in conjunction with the centennial year. Included in this pamphlet, all details regarding the old carvings and new carvings will be clearly defined.

[Mr. Lamontagne.]

GATT NEGOTIATIONS ON FRUIT AND VEGETABLE PRODUCTS

Question No. 458—Mr. Danforth:

1. Are negotiations currently under way at Geneva concerning proposed tariff changes on fruit and vegetable products?
2. What is the target date for the conclusion of this phase of negotiations?
3. When and by what manner will the results of this particular phase of the negotiations be released to Parliament and to the industry?
4. Will the various segments of the industry have an opportunity to recommend changes to the government if they feel direct hardships result from the new rates?
5. Will there be any flexibility whatsoever allowing changes in rates in the event of hardships without full consideration by the nations involved at a subsequent meeting at Geneva?

Mr. L. T. Pennell (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): 1. The tariff negotiations currently taking place under the GATT cover a wide range of products. It has not been the practice in past negotiations to state whether particular products were the subject of negotiations.

2. There is no target date for the conclusion of the current negotiations.

3. The results of past tariff negotiations have been announced in the House of Commons, if Parliament was sitting, or made public by means of a press release, at a date agreed with the other negotiating countries. It is likely the same practice will be followed in regard to the current tariff negotiations.

4. The Government is always prepared to hear representations from any firm or industry which feels that it is adversely affected by any change in tariff rates.

5. There are detailed procedures embodied in the GATT for changes in tariff rates. In essence these involve negotiation with the country with which the tariff rate was originally negotiated and with the other countries that have a substantial interest in exporting the products in question.

ARDA EMPLOYEES BY PROVINCES

Question No. 466—Mr. Dionne:

1. What, to date, is the number of employees working as regional directors, program co-ordinators, or in other capacities under the ARDA program in each of the provinces of Canada?
2. What is the salary by category and by classification of responsibility of each employee?

Hon. Maurice Sauvé (Minister of Forestry): 1. The responsibility for initiating and carrying out projects and programs under the agreements lies with the provinces. Each of the provinces has its own ARDA organization. At the present time the federal government has one employee working as a program co-ordinator.

2. The above federal employee is classified as a technical officer 9 with a salary range of $9,140-$10,700.

J. S. LAROSE

Question No. 488—Mr. Peters:

1. Has the Superintendent of Bankruptcy, Mr. J. S. Larose, been recently transferred to the Combines Investigation Branch?
2. What is his rank in his new position?
3. What were the reasons given for the transfer?
4. What qualifications are necessary for officer 6 in the Combines Investigation Branch?
5. What qualifications are possessed by Mr. Larose?
6. What is the date and number of the Civil Service Commission circular posting this job and requirements?
7. How many applicants, besides Mr. Larose, applied and what were the results of this competition and the rating of each applicant?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Department of Justice and the Civil Service Commission as follows:

1. Yes.

2. Combines Investigation Officer, Grade 6.

3. With the steady increase in the work of the Combines Branch, including the volume of work conducted in the French language, the Director, under the Combines Investigation Act, considered it essential to have a senior bilingual officer who could assume responsibility for work conducted in the French language.

4. The qualifications for a Combines Investigation Officer, Grade 6, are: University graduation in a course of recognized standing; ability to prepare comprehensive reports and memoranda on business and trade matters; ability to carry on major investigations; ability to direct and supervise the work of less senior officers; ability to assist and instruct counsel appointed by the Minister to conduct prosecutions or other legal proceedings, ability to maintain effective liaison with senior government and business officials and groups. In addition, there may be required extensive experience in law, economics, accounting or related fields, and bilingualism.

5. Thirty years' administrative and investigational experience in the related field of bankruptcy including approximately ten years as Superintendent of Bankruptcy; extensive knowledge of business operations and practices; bilingual; University graduate.

6. As this appointment was made without competition pursuant to Section 22 of the Civil Service Act, no circular was issued.

7. Not applicable. See 6.

Questions

EXPO '67—CONTROL OF EXPENDITURES

Question No. 496—Mr. Southam:

1. What controls are exercised by the federal government to prevent wasteful and improvident expenditures being made by the Director of Expo '67?
2. In how many instances, with the amounts thereof in each case, to date have expenditures been (a) disallowed, and in what amounts (b) reduced, because of objections thereto taken by representatives of the Department of Trade and Commerce?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Trade and Commerce): 1. The control of expenditures exercised by the management of the Canadian World Exhibition Corporation is based on the requirements set forth in the incorporating Act and involves:

(a) the approval of the Governor in Council and the Lieutenant Governor in Council of the over-all plan for the Exhibition, setting forth the various undertakings and projects proposed by the Corporation in connection with the planning, organizing, holding and administering of the Exhibition, the estimated cost of each such undertaking or project and an estimate of the total capital costs and operating costs of the Corporation in respect of the Exhibition.

Any material changes in the over-all plan including estimates of cost must be submitted to the Governor in Council and the Lieutenant Governor in Council for approval.

(b) The Capital Budget of the Corporation is submitted annually for the approval of the Minister of Trade and Commerce, the Minister of Industry and Commerce of Quebec and the Federal and Provincial Ministers of Finance.

The Capital Budget for the current year was tabled on April 8, 1965.

(c) The annual Operating Budget is submitted for approval to the Minister of Trade and Commerce, the Minister of Industry and Commerce of Quebec and the Federal and Provincial Ministers of Finance.

(d) Within these budgets expenditures of up to $100,000 may be made by approval of the Board of Directors of the Corporation.

(e) Expenditures in excess of $100,000 require approval of the Governor in Council.

(f) The accounts and financial transactions of the Corporation are audited by the Auditor General of Canada and the Quebec Provincial Auditor.

2. (a) and (b)—All recommendations to Treasury Board for expenditures in excess of $100,000 require the signature of the Minister of Trade and Commerce. The Minister does not sign these recommendations unless he is satisfied not only that they are in accordance with the budget but also that the expenditure is warranted and all reasonable steps have been taken to ensure economy.

PRAIRIE FARM ASSISTANCE PAYMENTS

Question No. 497—Mr. Rapp:

1. How many farmers in (a) Saskatchewan (b) Alberta (c) Manitoba, have received P.F.A.A. payments for crop failures in whole or in part for the year 1964?

2. How many applications have been (a) turned down, or (b) held up, in each of the constituencies of (i) The Battlefords (ii) Meadow Lake (iii) Prince Albert (iv) Mackenzie?

3. How many appeals in regard to non-payment have been made by aggrieved farmers, and in how many cases have such appeals been allowed?

Hon. Harry W. Hays (Minister of Agriculture): 1. (a) 25,637; (b) 12,784; (c) 1,706.

2. (a) (i) None; (ii) one; (iii) none; (iv) none. (b) (i) none; (ii) none; (iii) none; (iv) none.

3. Seventeen farmers have appealed to the board of review because of non-payment. Five appeals have been allowed and seven are being held pending a decision of the Board.

RESIGNATIONS OF CENTENNIAL COMMISSION OFFICIALS

Question No. 504—Mr. Mather:

How many officials of the Canadian Centennial Commission have left the Commission within the past three months?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): Two.

MAIL TRANSPORT, HAMILTON TO TORONTO

Question No. 514—Mr. Howe (Hamilton South):

1. At what times in each day is first class mail transported from Hamilton to Toronto?

2. At what times each day is second class mail transported from Hamilton to Toronto?

3. At what times each day is special delivery mail transported from Hamilton to Toronto?

4. Have there been any changes in this schedule in the last two years and, if so, what were the changes, and why were they made?

Hon. René Tremblay (Postmaster General): 1, 2 and 3. All classes of mail, including special delivery items are transported from Hamilton to Toronto daily at the following times (E.D.T.): 12:50 A.M., 7:00 A.M., 6:45 P.M., 9:10 P.M., 10:50 P.M.

4. Yes, the cancellation of trains and a major reorganization of mail services in the Niagara Peninsula resulted in the evolution of the present schedules and the elimination of daily dispatches from Hamilton to Toronto at the following times (E.D.T.): 12:15 P.M.; 3:15 P.M.; 7:20 P.M.; 8:45 P.M.

COUNTRIES PARTICIPATING IN EXPO '67

Question No. 518—Mr. Martineau:

1. Is a revised contract being presented for signature to the national representatives of some 30 governments taking part in Expo '67?

2. If so, why is such a revised contract being presented to these representatives?

3. When are the participants in Expo '67 expected to sign binding instruments in regard of such participation?

4. How many countries have been invited to participate in Expo '67 and how many have accepted to date?

[Translation]

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Trade and Commerce): 1. The original version of the standard participation contract was submitted in April 1965 to a Commission of the International Bureau of Exhibitions. It was then suggested to the Corporation to remove from this version the provisions of a regulatory nature and embody the same into the various sets of special rules and regulations which the General Rules and Regulation of the B.I.E. call for. This suggestion was accepted and this explains why the contract was revised.

2. See answer to question 1.

3. Some countries have already signed the standard contract while many have already scheduled the signing ceremony. The contract was distributed to all governments represented at the Meeting of Commissioners General of Section which took place in Montreal from May the 19th to the 22nd. They have all expressed their wish to sign a contract with the least possible delay after clearing the same with their own government. Even in the absence of a signed binding document, the governments that have announced their participation are presently working on the plans of their pavilion.

4. 139 countries were invited to participate in Expo '67. To date, 51 countries including Canada have accepted and it should be noted that the 10 Canadian provinces, the cities of Paris and Montreal, and the European Common Market, will also participate.

CATERING SERVICE, MONTREAL AIRPORT

Question No. 535—Mr. Groos:

1. What is the name of the firm which runs the catering service at the main building of the Montreal International Airport?

2. What is the date and duration of the contract?

3. On what basis is the contract awarded?

4. Does the Department of Transport or any other branch of the Canadian Government maintain any inspection services to see that adequate standards of service and quality control are maintained in the catering services provided for the public at airport buildings operated by the Department of Transport?

Mr. Jean-Charles Cantin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): 1. The restaurant concession is operated by A.F.C. Limited (Air Food Caterers).

2. The effective date of the lease is February 1, 1961. The lease is for five years, renewable for two further terms of five years, subject to rental reviews at each renewal period.

3. The concession was awarded on the basis of evaluation of tenders received.

4. Sanitation inspections are carried out by the Department of National Health and Welfare.

ARDA PROJECTS, ONTARIO COUNTIES

Question No. 554—Mr. Francis:

1. What projects were approved under ARDA prior to April 8, 1963, for the Counties of Renfrew, Lanark, Carleton and Russell in Ontario?

2. What projects have been approved for these counties since April 8, 1963?

Hon. Maurice Sauvé (Minister of Forestry): 1. Nil.

2. Projects which have been approved for the Counties of Renfrew, Lanark, Carleton and Russell in Ontario, since April 8, 1963, are as follows:

Renfrew County: Project No. 6017, Feasibility study of low dam—Snake River Habitat improvement for waterfowl; Project No. 6019, Acquire marginal land for forestry purposes; Project No. 6041, Muskrat River watershed development—Phase I; Project No. 6043, Muskrat River watershed development—Phase III.

ACADIA, ALTA.—ESTABLISHMENT OF TEST FARM

Question No. 559—Mr. Horner (Acadia):

1. Does the federal government intend to set up a test farm in Acadia and, if so, where and when is this to be undertaken?

2. Which governments will share the costs of this farm?

3. Is the Farm Credit Corporation now looking for a suitable farm?

Hon. Harry W. Hays (Minister of Agriculture): 1. As announced by the Minister of Agriculture on January 14, it is proposed that a series of demonstration farms be established across Canada. To date one has been established and, while no firm plans have been made concerning the locations of the other farms, it is possible that such a one may be set up in the Acadia area. In the establishment of these farms the Government does not purchase the land but enters into a contract with an existing farm operator to conduct the necessary work.

2. Answered by (1).

3. Answered by (1).

BILINGUALISM AND BICULTURALISM—OBSERVERS AT R.I.N. DEMONSTRATIONS

Question No. 571—Mr. Winkler:

What are the names of the 3 staff research workers with the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism who attended officially as observers at the R.I.N. demonstrations in Montreal May 24, 1965?

Mr. Jack Davis (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): I am informed by the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism as follows:

Two research assistants, Mr. Charles Barker and Mr. Alfrèdo Lévesque, of the research staff of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism attended as observers the R.I.N. Conference (Le congrès national du RIN) in Montreal on the weekend of Hay 22-24. Neither of these men, nor any other research staff member of the Royal Commission, attended the street demonstrations which occurred in Montreal on May 24, 1965.

POSSIBLE REMOVAL OF EXCISE TAX ON JEWELLERY

Question No. 578—Mr. Irvine:

1. Is the government considering removal of the special Excise Tax imposed on jewellery during World War II and, if so, when will action be taken?

2. Is the government considering reduction of the special Excise Tax imposed on jewellery during World War II and, if so, when will action be taken and what will be the amount of the reduction?

3. If no consideration has been given to the removal or the reduction of the special Excise Tax, will the government give consideration to this question?

Mr. L. T. Pennell (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): 1. The imposition, repeal, increase or reduction of a tax is a matter of budgetary policy. Any change of this nature needs to be introduced in the normal course of budget presentation. The 1965 Budget did not propose any change in the excise tax status of jewellery.

2. Same as 1.

3. Careful consideration will be given during the general review of commodity tax matters scheduled to take place this year to the possibility of repealing or reducing the special excise tax on jewellery.

QUEBEC—PROVINCIAL PARK AS CENTENNIAL PROJECT

Question No. 580—Mr. Martineau:

1. Is a provincial park along the north shore of the Ottawa River between Carillon and Hull (Quebec) being planned as a joint federal-provincial Centennial project?

2. Have preliminary plans for the project been presented to the federal Centennial Commission for approval?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): 1. Yes.

2. Yes.

MOTOR VEHICLE PURCHASES BY DEPARTMENT OF FISHERIES

Question No. 585—Mr. MacLean (Queens):

From March 1, 1964 to May 1, 1965, how many passenger motor vehicles have been purchased by the Department of Fisheries (a) manufactured or assembled in Nova Scotia (b) manufactured or assembled in Ontario (c) imported from the United States (d) imported from other countries?

Hon. H. J. Robichaud (Minister of Fisheries): (a) Nil; (b) 52; (c) nil; (d) nil.

STANSTEAD, QUE.—APPROVAL OF HOUSING LOANS

Question No. 587—Mr. Forest:

1. For the calendar years 1963, 1964 and 1965, how many C.M.H.C. loans were approved for the County of Stanstead for the construction of single and multiple-unit dwellings and duplexes?

2. For the same years, how many housing units qualified for the $500 winter construction grant?

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration):

1965 Jan-March	—	—	—	—	—	—

NOTE: For part 1. above, data on loans approved for single and multiple-unit dwellings and duplexes are not available for the area specified.

2. 1964, 16 dwelling units; 1965, 32 dwelling units. The first winter house-building incentive program was for the 1963/64 season, so that no housing units qualified under the program in the calendar year 1963.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION—POSSESSION OF LIVE SEALS

Question No. 594—Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria):

1. Did the Department of Fisheries, during the month of March, 1965, place a charge against an employee of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation with possesion of two live seals without a permit?
2. If so, what was the result of the prosecution?

Hon. H. J. Robichaud (Minister of Fisheries): 1. No.

2. Answered by No. 1.

DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRY—LOCATION OF PERSONNEL EMPLOYMENT

Question No. 595—Mr. Stenson:

As of April 30, 1965, how many employees were there in the Department of Industry, and of these (a) how many were employed in Ottawa (b) how many were employed in other cities (c) what are the names of these cities and how many were employed in each office?

Hon. C. M. Drury (Minister of Industry): 371 continuing employees and 11 casuals. (a) 366 continuing, 10 casuals; (b) 5 continuing, 1 casual; (c) Montreal, 1 continuing; Toronto, 4 continuing; St. John, N.B., 1 casual.

POST OFFICES—CHANGES IN CONSTRUCTION REGULATIONS

Question No. 597—Mr. Ricard:

1. During the past 24 months, have any changes been made to the regulations and requirements governing the construction of post offices with an income under $3,000 per annum and, if so, what amendments?
2. If no changes have been made, what are the requirements for the construction of such buildings?

[Translation]

Hon. René Tremblay (Postmaster General): 1. There has been no basic change in the Post Office policy within the past 24 months with respect to the regulations and requirements governing the construction of Crown-owned Post Office Buildings. It is still required that a Post Office be classified as a Semi-Staff Post Office before a request is made to the Department of Public Works for the construction of a Crown-owned building.

As part of the Supplementary Federal Government Winter Construction Program, during the past two winters a number of small Crown-owned buildings were erected for Revenue Post Offices in those locations in certain designated areas and areas of high winter unemployment.

ARRAN TOWNSHIP, ONT.,—CENTENNIAL PROJECT GRANT

Question No. 609—Mr. Loney:

Has an application been received for a Centennial Project Grant from the Municipality of Arran Township, Bruce County, Ontario?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): The Centennial Commission does not receive applications made by towns and municipalities until they are approved by the provincial government concerned and therefore has no way of knowing how many applications were submitted by towns and municipalities in any constituency. No application relating to a project or projects has been received from the Ontario Centennial Advisory Committee referring to the municipality of Arran Township, Bruce County, Ontario, as at May 31, 1965.

EMPLOYMENT IN AUTOMOTIVE INDUSTRY

Question No. 619—Mr. Stenson:

What has been the annual increase in employment in the car and truck industry in Canada in the years 1959-60, 60-61, 61-62, 62-63, 63-64, 64-65?

TARA, ONT.—CENTENNIAL PROJECT GRANT

Question No. 624—Mr. Loney:

Has an application been received for a Centennial Project Grant from the Municipality of Tara, Bruce County, Ontario?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): Yes.

CANADIAN PENITENTIARY SERVICE—SALARIES

Question No. 629—Mr. Coates:

Has a decision been reached by the government with regard to the salaries of members of the Canadian Penitentiary Service as a result of meetings which were held by members of the Service with officials of the government and, if so, what was that decision?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (President of the Privy Council): Yes.

The Government has agreed, at the request of the Civil Service Association of Canada to have an independent job evaluation study carried out with regard to the various positions in the Penitentiaries Service. This study will be carried out with the help of outside consultants. Salary levels for different categories of employment will be reviewed on the basis of this job evaluation study, and any changes which the Government decides, as a consequence of such study, to make from salary levels already announced will be given retroactive effect to April 1, 1964.

ASSISTANCE IN SETTLING CANADAIR STRIKE

Question No. 547—Mr. Coates:

1. What action has the federal government taken to assist in the settlement of the strike at Canadair, Montreal, Quebec?

2. Have firms holding sub-contracts on government work with Canadair had to effect lay-offs and, if so, what action is being taken to assist the companies in question?

Return tabled.

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Mr. J. B. Stewart (Parliamentary Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, motion No. 42 is acceptable to the Government. I understand that motion No. 37 is to be withdrawn. I ask that notices of motion Nos. 41 and 43 be called. I ask that notices of motion Nos. 32 and 39 be allowed to stand.

MÉGANTIC, QUEBEC—MAIL CONTRACTS

Motion No. 37—Mr. Langlois:

That an Order of the House do issue for a return with regard to the mail contracts award in Mégantic County showing (a) the names of the tenderers (b) the expiry date of said contracts (c) the amount of each contract.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

CORRESPONDENCE FROM GARTER KING OF ARMS RESPECTING FLAG

Motion No. 41—Mr. Coates:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of any letter or correspondence received by the government from the Garter King of Arms prior to the adoption of the new Canadian flag, January 28, 1965.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): In the absence of the mover could this motion be allowed to stand?

Mr. Speaker: Is it agreed that this motion stand?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Motion stands.

[Mr. Coates.]

COAT OF ARMS ON SOCIAL INSURANCE CARD

Motion No. 42—Mr. Diefenbaker:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all letters and/or other communications received by the Minister of Labour or other Ministers of the Government in which objection has been taken to the Canadian Coat of Arms on the social insurance number card and/or requesting that the Maple Leaf as it appears on the flag be substituted therefore.

Motion agreed to.

IMPORT DUTIES INCURRED BY E. J. BENSON

Motion No. 43—Mr. Nasserden:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all correspondence, official notices, and other relevant documents since April 30, 1965, relating to custom duties incurred by Mr. E. J. Benson, 119 McMichael St., Kingston, Ontario, on any goods imported by him into Canada.

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of National Revenue): In view of the fact that I have already provided the hon. Member and the House with more information than is required in the motion, and in view of its implication with regard to the privilege attaching to correspondence between my Department and individual taxpayers, I respectfully request that the hon. Member withdraw this motion.

Mr. E. Nasserden (Rosthern): I was quite surprised when I first brought this motion forward that the Minister should have asked me to withdraw it before it appeared on the order paper. The answers which have been given in the House so far do not engage those aspects of the matter in which I was interested; therefore I should like the motion to be proceeded with.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Speaker: The Chair would like to point out that an explanation of this matter was given the other day by the hon. Minister and unless the hon. Member has other information it does seem that there is no further information to give. Of course the Chair is in the hands of the House.

Do I understand that the hon. Member would like to withdraw the motion now?

Mr. Nasserden: No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Grégoire: Shame.

Some hon. Members: No seconder.

Mr. Speaker: Is there a seconder to this motion? There being no seconder the motion cannot be put to the House and will be withdrawn.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

THE CANADIAN ECONOMY

WAR ON POVERTY—EXTENT OF PROVINCIAL CONTROL

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Forestry. It arises out of an article which appeared in Le Devoir of June 7 and a report of the hon. gentleman's speech. Is it correct that the so-called war on poverty is to be placed under provincial control at the insistence of the Premier of Quebec, as reported in that statement and in that article, which is accompanied by a picture showing the smiling faces of the Minister of Justice, the Minister of Forestry and the Postmaster General?

Hon. Maurice Sauvé (Minister of Forestry): That picture was a very good picture of a most successful meeting. I think I explained yesterday that there was some difference between the text I delivered and the headlines in the papers.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I ask simply this. Is the program in connection with the project in question to be given exclusively to the provinces to look after, and was this decided at the request of the Premier of Quebec? That is the question.

Mr. Sauvé: No, Mr. Speaker.

STEPS TO MEET REPORTED INCREASE IN COST OF LIVING

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Heward Grafftey (Brome-Missisquoi): A supplementary question relating to the war on poverty. My question is directed to the Minister of Finance, and is based on an answer given by the Minister in the House yesterday as well as on figures released during the past 48 hours showing a most disquieting rise in the cost of living, notably in relation to food, clothing and housing.

Will the Minister of Finance inform the House whether it is the intention of the Government to take immediate and specific action, thus beginning the war on poverty by alleviating the effects of serious inflation on the millions of Canadians who are living in want and who must pay these higher prices on fixed or shrinking incomes?

Mr. Speaker: Order. This question is very interesting and important but I do not see how the hon. Member can expect a detailed answer on the orders of the day. Perhaps he will put this question on the order paper.

Mr. Grafftey: I sought to circumvent that possibility by asking whether any specific action was contemplated. However, in view of the lack of information both yesterday and today this question must be debated at ten o'clock.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, may I put the question in these terms. With reference to the statement made by the Minister of Finance yesterday to the effect that in the past 12 months the cost of living has risen 2.2 per cent, and in view of the fact that the report of the Economic Council says that a 2 per cent annual increase is the maximum that should be allowed, I want to ask the Minister of Finance whether the Government has any plans to deal with the situation in the event that this trend continues beyond the danger point, which it has already passed.

An hon. Member: That is the same question.

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): In the first place, Mr. Speaker, I think I should say a word about one or two—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Gordon: —of the hon. gentleman's comments.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. It does seem, in fairness, that if the question of the hon. Member for Brome-Missisquoi is to be placed on the order paper perhaps—the second so-called supplementary is just an elaboration of the first question—then perhaps the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam would also put his question on the order paper.

Mr. Douglas: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I am not asking the Minister for any detailed information at all; I am asking him simply whether the Government has any plans to cope with this problem if the present rising trend in the cost of living continues beyond the danger point. All the Minister has to say is yes or no.

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Speaker, in view of the comments and speeches that have already been made on this subject I think I should perhaps make a remark or two. In the first place, the Economic Council to my knowledge have never suggested that any particular increase in the cost of living or in prices was desirable. They did suggest in their review that in working out their model they had arbitrarily taken into account an average increase of 2 per cent.

I certainly cannot agree with my hon. friend that the increase in prices to date has reached the danger point, to use one of his rather excitable phrases, if I may say so. This question of the state of the economy, including the question of prices, is under very considerable and continuous study by the Department of Finance. I received a very long memorandum on this subject last night, and I can assure my hon. friend and the right hon. Leader of the Opposition that conditions are not nearly as bad as they have tried to let on.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that the hon. gentleman saw fit to bring me into this may I ask him this question. Did he read the observations of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and does he disagree with them, as he disagrees with the views of Mr. Kierans?

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Speaker, I do not know what the tail to that remark implies, but I am in a position to reassure my right hon. friend that conditions this year have been very good indeed and that the prospects look very good. If when the opportunity arises, when the next supply motion is before the House, he would care to make a motion to this effect, I would be very glad to debate the situation with him.

Mr. Jack McIntosh (Swift Current-Maple Creek): On a question of privilege—

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Speaker, in view of—

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. Member for Swift Current-Maple Creek has risen on a question of privilege.

Mr. McIntosh: Mr. Speaker, when the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam rose and asked his question you said it should be put on the order paper, but you allowed the Minister to rise and make a long-winded speech. Today we have 30 minutes in which to ask questions; many of the backbenchers have questions to ask, and this is not fair to them.

Mr. Speaker: I understand the purpose of the interjection very well. It was precisely for the reason of the lack of time during this half hour period that I did try to suggest that this question be put on the order paper. Perhaps it is the heat under which we are labouring, and we will now try to make more progress.

[Mr. Gordon.]

Hon. Paul Martineau (Pontiac-Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question to the Minister of Finance. The Minister indicated that he had received a memorandum from his officials on the rise in the consumer price index. Can he state whether that memorandum indicates that we are to expect further rises in prices, or does he himself expect or foresee such further rises?

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Speaker, perhaps we might leave this question until we have an opportunity to debate the subject.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

[Later:]

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Mr. Speaker, I had intended to ask this supplementary question of the Minister of Finance following a question asked about the cost of living; however, in view of the fact that on another occasion the Minister replied to the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam that the increase in the cost of living means nothing to the ordinary man, will he now indicate whether he is still of this opinion, in spite of the fact that the recent cost of living increase has more than wiped out any tax benefit?

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Speaker, I have never said any such thing.

Mr. MacInnis: Mr. Speaker, on a question of privilege—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. MacInnis: I fully intend on another occasion to bring forward a copy of Hansard to prove that the Minister of Finance did make that statement.

Mr. Gordon: Go ahead and do that.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

INQUIRY AS TO INCREASE IN FOREIGN AID PROGRAM

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, my question is to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. In view of the fact that yesterday the Minister stated to the Canadian Manufacturers' Association that Canada's foreign aid program is far below that of other major countries in the world and that it should be at least double what it is now, up to approximately 1 per cent of our g.n.p., could the Minister tell us whether he was stating Government policy and if so, does he plan to extend Canada's foreign aid expenditure during this current year?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I was both surprised and perhaps a little chagrined at one of the stories to which my hon. friend directs my attention. I suggest that he read that story together with the text of my statement which appeared in another part of the same newspaper. I did point out, of course, that the Government had considerably improved and augmented the Canadian external aid program, and that it was our objective to take into consideration our capacity to meet future obligations arising in this field.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Bow River): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Member for Royal (Mr. Fairweather).

Mr. Woolliams: I have a supplementary question.

Mr. Gordon L. Fairweather (Royal): I have a supplementary question, too, Mr. Speaker.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Fairweather: I could not resist this one, Mr. Speaker. The Minister is quoted in today's Globe and Mail as having said:

> Don't quote me as saying that we will or that we should increase our external aid. That would be my opinion if I had an opinion, but as a member of the Government I don't have any opinion.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Fairweather: I suggest that the implications of this are serious for the country and for the world; and is it the Minister's opinion that he has been misquoted?

Mr. Diefenbaker: Or was it confession?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, I am glad this question has been asked by an industrious but relatively new Member of this House.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): This gives me the opportunity to give him advice which I am going to follow myself in this instance. It is advice that is supposed to have been given by the Earl of Shaftesbury when in the government, and it is "Never take issue with the chroniclers of the day".

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Diefenbaker: So it was confession.

Inquiries of the Ministry

WATER LEVELS

QUEBEC—LETTER RESPECTING RAIN MAKING OPERATIONS

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Minister of Transport.

Can he tell us today whether he has received a letter from the vice president of Weather Engineering Co.? Can he tell us also since when has he been expecting that letter?

[English]

Hon. J. W. Pickersgill (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, if over the noise in the House I heard the hon. gentleman correctly, he asked me whether I had yet received a letter from the vice president of Weather Engineering. The answer is no, and I am quite surprised that that gentleman did not keep the promise that he gave to me.

Mr. Gerald A. Regan (Halifax): A supplementary question to the Minister of National Defence on the subject that has been raised by the hon. Member. In view of the large number of Air Force planes that went over at noon, and the fact that a badly needed and very heavy rainfall has now started in Ottawa, would the Minister indicate whether they were seeding the clouds at noon?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, they were not seeding the clouds, but this gives me an opportunity to say that they were rehearsing for the first Canadian Armed Forces Day that will be held here commencing at 10.30 a.m. this Saturday.

Some hon. Members: Order.

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, only half an hour is allowed for the question period today, and the Minister in answering a somewhat planted question is getting up to make a long statement—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Starr: —and deprive the backbenchers of their opportunity to ask questions.

Mr. Speaker: The half hour question period started at 3.10 and will be over at 3.40. May I urge hon. Members to ask their questions quickly and in as few words as possible.

Inquiries of the Ministry

NATIONAL DEFENCE

EFFECTIVENESS OF NEW ANTI-SUBMARINE DESTROYERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. P. B. Rynard (Simcoe East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Minister of National Defence. The question is based on an editorial appearing in the Daily Packet and Times regarding Canada's projected new anti-submarine destroyers. The title of this editorial is "Will our new anti-submarine destroyers be too slow to run and too weak to fight?" Would the Minister like to comment on this?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to advise my hon. friend that he has been badly misinformed in this regard. The new destroyer escorts which are planned, together with the heavy helicopters they will carry, will be one of the most effective anti-submarine systems in the world. The anti-submarine helicopters are very fast and well equipped. They have worked out a technique which is unique in the western world, and in combination with the weapons system employed will probably be paramount among anti-submarine systems. I can assure my hon. friend that he should take this message back to the paper to which he referred.

TRANSPORT

DELAY IN MOVEMENT OF GRAIN FROM WESTERN CANADA

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. R. Southam (Moose Mountain): Mr. Speaker, I have a question I should like to direct to the Minister of Trade and Commerce. My question is based on many current complaints and newspaper stories respecting the slow movement of grain out of western Canada and particularly southeastern Saskatchewan. Can the Minister say whether the Canadian Wheat Board is getting the proper co-operation from the C.P.R. and the C.N.R. in moving grain out of these congested areas?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, as I said in reply to a question recently, the main problem has been that Canadian Pacific Railway did not start moving grain to the Lakehead as early as the Board would have wished. Consequently quotas at delivery points in southeastern Saskatchewan along the C.P.R. route to the Lakehead are not as high as they should be for this time of year. However, I am happy to say there has been a notable improvement in recent days, and if the C.P.R. continues to haul grain to the Lakehead at the rate it has been doing over the last few days the Wheat Board expects that the quotas will be equalized at a higher level at the end of the year.

Mr. Jack McIntosh (Swift Current-Maple Creek): I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Trade and Commerce. According to the Wheat Board's statement on quota distributions it is to be noted that the provinces are now on a six bushel quota whereas last year most provinces were on an eight bushel quota. The Minister mentioned the southeastern part of Saskatchewan. Does this answer apply to the question which I asked as to why the provinces were two bushels per point ahead last year compared to this year?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, I think I should take that as notice.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

DORION COMMISSION—INQUIRY AS TO REPORT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Justice. It is rumoured that the Dorion report is now in the hands of the Government. I am wondering whether the Minister would care to confirm that. Second, in view of the fact that the report is either in the hands of the Government or about to come into the hands of the Government, could he give the House a report on the very interesting escape of Rivard?

Mr. Speaker: The hon. Member for Kootenay West.

Mr. Woolliams: Then I will put the question to the Prime Minister. Is it a fact that the Dorion report is now in the hands of the Government?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

CONSIDERATION OF STAFF BOARD REPORT ON STAFF

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address a question to the appropriate Minister, of which I failed to give you notice. Can the appropriate Minister inform the House when action is going to be taken to implement the Civil Service survey or report intended to improve the economic circumstances of employees of this House?

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, assuming that the hon. Member is referring to the staff board report rather than the Civil Service report, the answer is tomorrow.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

SOUTH VIET NAM—PARTICIPATION BY CANADIAN TROOPS

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Guy Marcoux (Quebec-Montmorency): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Since the President of the United States has just announced that he is ready to send troops to Viet Nam if the generals of the South Vietnamese army request them, and since Australia and New Zealand have sent contingents to South Viet Nam, has the Canadian government consulted in that connection or did it offer any military assistance to South Viet Nam?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the answer is no.

[English]

DISCUSSION OF NUCLEAR ARMS AGREEMENT WITH INDIAN PRIME MINISTER

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Paul Martineau (Pontiac-Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. Does the Prime Minister intend to discuss an international agreement which is designed to prevent the further spread of nuclear arms in his forthcoming talks with Prime Minister Shastri of India?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I think in discussing international affairs with the Prime Minister of India, whom we are welcoming tomorrow, this is certainly one subject which will come up.

Mr. Martineau: A supplementary question. Has any draft of any such proposed agreement been brought to the attention of the Prime Minister, or has he himself brought any such draft agreement to the attention of Prime Minister Shastri?

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, we have been considering draft agreements on this subject, but I am not in a position to say whether any particular draft will be considered tomorrow.

FISHERIES

NORTH ATLANTIC COMMISSION—CONSIDERATION OF SALMON CONSERVATION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (Queens-Lunenburg): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the attention of the Minister of Fisheries. Last year the Danes increased their catch of salmon on the Greenland coast from 200 tons to 1,200 tons, among which were found tagged salmon from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Newfoundland. As the International Commission on the North Atlantic Fisheries is presently meeting in Halifax and it is my understanding that the question of the conservation of our salmon resources is not on the agenda, would the Minister impress upon the conference the importance of discussing and attempting to resolve this problem, which is of vital importance to our inshore fishermen and to our tourist industry?

Hon. H. J. Robichaud (Minister of Fisheries): Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. Member I first wish to mention that I believe he is misinformed when he says that the problem of salmon being caught in Greenland waters is not on the agenda. As a matter of fact I arrived back from Halifax yesterday and the matter is being brought up at the annual meeting of ICNAF which is now taking place. Furthermore, I wish to state that this situation is of serious concern not only to Canada but to other countries which are interested in this fishery. The matter is more complicated because a proportion of the catch is being caught in what could be considered as Greenland territorial waters.

DOMINION-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

QUEBEC—ADDRESS TO HER MAJESTY RESPECTING PROVINCIAL CONSTITUTION

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. L. J. Pigeon (Joliette-L'Assomption-Montcalm): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Prime Minister.

Can he tell the House if he did state yesterday that the Address to Her Majesty the Queen adopted by the Quebec Legislative Assembly with regard to limiting the powers of the Legislative Council is unconstitutional?

[English]

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker, I made no such statement.

[Later:]

[Translation]

Mr. Pigeon: Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a supplementary question to the right hon. Prime Minister in connection with the question I have already asked him.

Did he receive an official protest from the Legislative Council of the Province of Quebec in connection with the petition forwarded by the Quebec Legislature to the federal government to amend the powers of the Legislative Council?

[English]

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, I have received no such communication.

TRADE

WHEAT—ANNOUNCEMENT OF SALE TO POLAND

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of Trade and Commerce whether reports that the Canadian Wheat Board has completed another sale to Poland are true. I would also ask him whether any flour was included in this latest sale, if one has been made.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Trade and Commerce): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I can confirm that the Canadian Wheat Board has in the last few days sold another 300,000 metric tons of wheat for shipment to Poland. The sales totalling 11 million bushels will be moved through east and west coast ports. I regret to say that there is no flour involved in the contract.

[Later:]

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I intended to ask a supplementary question of the Minister of Trade and Commerce following his reply to the hon. Member for Medicine Hat, but the public address system failed at the time and I did not quite hear the Minister's answer. Did I understand the Minister to say that in respect of the new sale of wheat to Poland, shipments would be made through eastern and western ports? If that is accurate, can the Minister say whether any of these shipments will be made through the Port of Churchill?

Mr. Sharp: No, Mr. Speaker, but I understand that the program for the shipment of wheat through Churchill will be at a very high level this year.

Mr. Simpson: I have a supplementary question. At this stage last year the report was made that there would be a record shipment season at Churchill and, as the Minister knows, the shipments last season dropped by some 1,500,000 bushels. In view of the fact that the Canadian Wheat Board report shows once again that substantial savings were made as a result of shipments of grain through Churchill, can the Minister indicate whether this has been pointed out to the purchasers from Poland?

Mr. Sharp: Yes, Mr. Speaker, the great virtues of the Port of Churchill, which have been expounded by my hon. friend, are well known throughout the world, and particularly to the Wheat Board which does everything possible to encourage buyers to take wheat from that port. This year it is fully expected there will be a high level of shipment through that port, and it is hoped it will be a record year.

AGRICULTURE

INQUIRY AS TO PAYMENTS UNDER NEW DAIRY POLICY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Auguste Choquette (Lotbinière): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask a question of the Minister of Agriculture. I would ask the minister whether he is in a position to tell the House when the farmers will be receiving their first cheques under the new dairy policy recently announced. Will it be in July?

Hon. Harry W. Hays (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, considerable work is required to collect the necessary information; some 200,000 farmers across Canada are involved. However, we are hoping that the initial payments can go out as early as July.

PROHIBITION OF EXPORT OF HORSES FOR SLAUGHTERING

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. A. Webb (Hastings-Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Minister of Agriculture. Because of representations made by the Humane Society of Canada, has the Minister taken the necessary steps to introduce legislation to prohibit the shipping of horses—that is, horses of less than a certain value—to other countries for slaughtering purposes, thereby assuring that these animals will have a humane end in Canada and that the horse meat can then be exported from Canada?

Mr. Speaker: That is obviously a question for the order paper.

Mr. Webb: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. For days and days on end hon. Members have asked questions—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Webb: Hon. Members have asked questions regarding the killing of seals—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. There does seem to be an electric atmosphere in the House this afternoon.

QUEBEC—COST OF PRODUCTION OF LIVESTOCK

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Gilbert Rondeau (Shefford): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Agriculture.

On April 9 last I put on the order paper a question bearing No. 137 in which I asked the Minister of Agriculture to tell us the approximate cost of producing and marketing six cows and two sows which, according to one of his statements, brought a revenue of $2,816.

Now, the minister has just answered me with these figures: lower third, $13.10; median third $18.02 and upper third $25.44. And that is the cost of producing six cows and two sows. Could the Minister give me more detailed information than what he has supplied to me in writing today?

[English]

Hon. Harry W. Hays (Minister of Agriculture): No, Mr. Speaker. I am sure if the hon. Member goes out, observes the conditions and does a little multiplication, he will then have satisfactory information in this regard.

FEED GRAIN—REQUEST FOR EASTERN MARKETING BOARD

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Clément Vincent (Nicolet-Yamaska): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Forestry.

In view of the fact that the Prime Minister announced this afternoon the legislative program until the Summer recess, could the minister tell us whether his department has considered or studied the report of the committee on agriculture and colonization concerning feed grains and more particularly the matter of the establishment of a feed grain agency for eastern Canada, so that the matter could be discussed by the House before next Winter?

Hon. Maurice Sauvé (Minister of Forestry): Mr. Speaker, the officials of the department did study the committee's report and I must point out to the hon. Member that the Prime Minister has announced this afternoon the legislative program for the weeks ahead.

[English]

EDUCATION

INQUIRY AS TO INCREASED FEDERAL ASSISTANCE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Reg Cantelon (Kindersley): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister which I am prompted to ask by the comments of the Secretary of State with respect to external aid. Is the Government considering increasing federal aid to higher education in our country, which is now only one sixteenth of one per cent of the gross national product?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, that matter is under consideration. It is a very illuminating question.

NATIONAL EMPLOYMENT SERVICE

PSYCHOLOGICAL EFFECT OF ADVERTISEMENTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. W. H. A. Thomas (Middlesex West): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Labour which arises from his answer to a question asked yesterday about the National Employment Service advertising for help in areas where a shortage of help now prevails. Once the fact is established that there is a shortage of help in an area, is it the Minister's intention, or the intention of the unemployment service, to discontinue advertising for help in such an area?

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I shall be glad to confirm my impression that advertising will cease just as soon as available workers are placed in jobs that are open.

Inquiries of the Ministry

LABOUR RELATIONS

MONTREAL—FEDERAL INTERVENTION IN LABOUR DISPUTES

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Robert Beaulé (Quebec East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Labour. In view of the importance of labour disputes in the Montreal region, does the minister propose to intervene in order to facilitate negotiations?

Mr. Georges Valade (Sainte-Marie): Ask Mr. Lesage.

[English]

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I regret that I was unable to hear the hon. Member's question, but I will be glad to take it as notice and answer it tomorrow.

DIVORCE

REQUEST FOR ROYAL COMMISSION ON REFORM

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Reid Scott (Danforth): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Prime Minister. On April 13 the right hon. gentleman told the House that he was giving consideration to the setting up of a royal commission on divorce reform in Canada. I wonder whether he has now completed his consideration of this question, and whether he can announce when this commission will be set up.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I certainly will have to check what I said on April 13, as I do not recall having made that commitment in those terms. I will be glad to look into the situation.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

INQUIRY AS TO IMPLEMENTATION OF MANPOWER POLICY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. S. J. Enns (Portage-Neepawa): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Labour, asking him how soon he expects the newly announced manpower program will be implemented. Can the Minister also indicate whether there will be any retroactive feature to this program, perhaps to the time of the Prime Minister's announcement in this House?

[Mr. MacEachen.]

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, it is not intended that there will be a retroactive feature to this program. The Prime Minister indicated that we hoped to deal with this particular program during this part of the session. As soon as staff and administration arrangements can be made, the program will be put into effect.

QUEBEC—DELAY IN PAYMENT OF WINTER CONSTRUCTION BONUS

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Lucien Plourde (Quebec West): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Minister of Labour.

Could the minister expedite the matter of paying the $500 promised to owners of homes built in wintertime since up to now, in the Quebec region, only 25 per cent of the owners received that bonus.

[English]

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, an extension to this particular program requires additional authority from Parliament, and just as soon as the House can deal with the supplementary estimates which have to be brought forward we will be able to make these payments. I hope that will be possible very soon.

NORTHERN AFFAIRS

EXTENSION OF FRANCHISE IN NORTHWEST TERRITORIES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Gene Rhéaume (Northwest Territories): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Prime Minister. Is there any chance that the Government will consider including in its legislative priorities to be dealt with before the recess the minor amendments to the Northwest Territories Act? I am sure these would receive unanimous agreement in the House, thus allowing everyone in the Northwest Territories the right to vote in forthcoming territorial elections?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I will be glad to look into that matter, Mr. Speaker.

PENSIONS

LEGISLATION RESPECTING SUPERVISION OF PRIVATE PLANS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Finance. In view of the fact that both Ontario and Quebec, and perhaps other provinces, have made public the details of their legislation to provide for the regulation of pension plans that come under provincial jurisdiction, would it not be desirable that the legislation at the Federal Government level which the Minister promised last December 18 be put on the order paper?

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): I will be glad to discuss this with the Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker, to see whether that can be done.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton South): Mr. Speaker, on the same point of order originally raised by the hon. Member for Swift Current-Maple Creek, are we as backbenchers to understand that restrictions are placed on us during the half hour question period on Wednesday even though the Minister of National Defence deliberately violated the purpose of this period this afternoon?

Mr. Speaker: It does seem to the Chair that no comment is called for. The hon. Member knows the difficulties involved in conducting public assemblies, and he will have to use his own discretion in reaching his own conclusion.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

AMENDMENT OF STANDING ORDERS RESPECTING CONDUCT OF BUSINESS

The House resumed from Tuesday, June 8, consideration in Committee of the following resolution—Mr. Pearson—Mr. Batten in the Chair:

That the following amendments be made to Standing Orders:

1. That Standing Order 6 be deleted and the following substituted therefor:

Standing Order 6

6. (1) At 6:00 o'clock p.m. on Wednesdays and Fridays and at 10:00 o'clock p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, unless provided otherwise in these Standing Orders, Mr. Speaker shall adjourn the House without question put until the next sitting day.

(2) A motion that the House continue to sit after the hour specified in Section (1) may be made at any time without notice. If any member objects to the motion, Mr. Speaker shall request those members who object to rise in their places and if ten or more members then rise, the question shall not be put on the motion. If no member objects or if fewer than ten members rise in their places, the motion shall be deemed to be carried. No debate or formal vote shall be held on such a motion to extend a sitting. An extended sitting under the provisions of this Section, unless a closing time has been specified, shall not be terminated except by the adoption of a motion to adjourn and Mr. Speaker shall not deem that a motion to adjourn the House has been made by virtue of the operation of any other Standing Order.

(3) If any member objects to the taking of a vote at any time between 1:00 o'clock p.m. and 2:30 o'clock p.m. or between 6:00 o'clock p.m. and 8:00 o'clock p.m., Mr. Speaker shall request those members who object to rise in their places and if five or more members rise, the taking of the vote shall be postponed until after 2:30 o'clock p.m. or until after 8:00 o'clock p.m. as the case may be.

(4) When it is provided in any Standing Order or in any order of the House that the business under consideration at the ordinary time of adjournment be forthwith disposed of or concluded, Mr. Speaker shall not adjourn the House until the specified proceedings be completed.

2. That Section (1) of Standing Order 12 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 12, Section (1)

12. (1) Mr. Speaker shall preserve order and decorum, and shall decide questions of order. In explaining a point of order or practice, he shall state the standing order or authority applicable to the case. No debate shall be permitted on any such decision, nor shall any such decision be subject to an appeal to the House.

3. That Sections (3) and (4) of Standing Order 15 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 15, Sections (3) and (4)

15. (3) Except as otherwise provided in these Standing Orders, the order of business for the consideration of the House, day-by-day, after the daily routine shall be as follows:

(Monday)

Questions.
Government orders.
(From six to seven o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)
Notices of Motions.

(Tuesday)

(4) When a debate on a motion "That Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair" for the House to go into Committee of Supply is in progress at 6:00 o'clock p.m. on either a Monday or a Tuesday, the order for Private Members' Business on that day shall be suspended.

4. That Section (2) of Standing Order 31 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 31, Section (2)

31. (2) When the business of Private Members is being considered, no member shall speak for more than twenty minutes at a time.

5. That Section (5) of Standing Order 39 be enacted to read as follows:

Standing Order 39, Section (5)

39. (5) Before the Orders of the Day are proceeded with, questions on matters of urgency may be addressed orally to Ministers of the Crown, provided however that if in the opinion of Mr. Speaker a question is not urgent, he may direct that it be placed on the Order Paper, provided also that the time allowed for a question period prior to the calling of the Orders of the Day shall not exceed thirty minutes.

A member who is not satisfied with the answer given to a question asked an any day at this stage, or a member who has been told by Mr. Speaker that his question is not urgent, may give notice that he intends to raise the subject-matter of his question on the adjournment of the House. The notice referred to herein, whether or not it is given orally during the question period before the Orders of the Day, must be given in writting to Mr. Speaker not later than 5:00 o'clock p.m. the same day.

6. That the Standing Orders be amended by adding thereto a new Standing Order 41-A, to read as follows:

Standing Order 41-A

41-A. Unless notice of motion has been given under Standing Order 41, any member proposing to raise a question of privilege other than one arising out of proceedings in the Chamber during the course of a sitting shall give to the Speaker a written statement of the question at least one hour prior to raising the question in the House.

7. That Standing Order 43 be amended by adding thereto a new Section (2), to read as follows:

Standing Order 43, Section (2)

43. (2) When debate on any motion made under Standing Order 15 (2) is adjourned or interrupted, the order for resumption of the same shall be transferred to and considered under Government Orders.

[Mr. Speaker.]

8. That Standing Order 44 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 44

44. When a question is under debate no motion is received unless to amend it; to postpone it to a day certain; for the previous question; for reading the orders of the day; for proceeding to another order; to adjourn the debate; to extend the sitting of the House; or for the adjournment of the House.

9. That Section (4) of Standing Order 59 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 59, Section (4)

59. (4) The Chairman shall maintain order in the Committees of the Whole House, deciding all questions of order subject to an appeal to Mr. Speaker; but disorder in a committee can only be censured by the House, on receiving a report thereof. No debate shall be permitted on any decision.

10. That Standing Order 65 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 65

65. (1) At the commencement of each session, a special committee, consisting of seven members, shall be appointed, whose duty it shall be to prepare and report, with all convenient speed, lists of members to compose the following standing committees of the House:

(a) on Agriculture, Forestry, and Rural Development, to consist of 45 members;
(b) on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts, to consist of 22 members;
(c) on Crown Corporations, to consist of 22 members;
(d) on External Affairs, to consist of 22 members;
(e) on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, to consist of 22 members;
(f) on Fisheries, to consist of 22 members;
(g) on Health and Welfare, to consist of 22 members;
(h) on Housing, Urban Development and Public Works, to consist of 22 members;
(i) on Human Rights and Citizenship and Immigration, to consist of 22 members;
(j) on Industry, Research and Energy Development, to consist of 22 members;
(k) on Justice and Legal Affairs, to consist of 22 members;
(l) on Labour and Employment, to consist of 22 members;
(m) on Miscellaneous Estimates, to consist of 22 members;
(n) on Miscellaneous Private Bills, to consist of 22 members;
(o) on National Defence, to consist of 22 members;
(p) on Northern Affairs and National Resources, to consist of 22 members;
(q) on Privileges and Elections, to consist of 22 members;
(r) on Public Accounts, to consist of 24 members;
(s) on Standing Orders, to consist of 22 members;
(t) on Transport and Communications, to consist of 22 members; and
(u) on Veterans Affairs, to consist of 22 members.

(2) The Special Committee shall also prepare and report with all convenient speed, lists of members to compose the following standing committees:

on Printing, to act as members on the part of this House on the Joint Committee of both Houses on the subject of the printing of Parliament, to consist of 23 members;

on the Library of Parliament, so far as the interests of this House are concerned, and to act as members of the Joint Committee of both Houses to consist of 21 members; provided that a sufficient number of members of joint committees shall be appointed so as to keep the same proportion in such committees as between the memberships of the House of Commons and Senate.

(3) A majority of the members of a standing committee shall constitute a quorum unless the House otherwise orders;

Provided that, in the case of a joint committee, the number of members constituting a quorum shall be such as the House of Commons acting in consultation with the Senate may determine.

(4) The Standing Committees shall be severally empowered to examine and enquire into all such matters and things as may be referred to them by the House; to report from time to time their observations and opinions hereon; to send for persons, papers and records; and to print, from day-to-day, such papers and evidence as may be ordered by them, and Standing Order 66 shall not apply in relation thereto.

(5) Any member of the House of Commons who is not a member of a standing committee, may unless the House or the standing committee otherwise orders, take part in the deliberations of the standing committee, but shall not vote or move any motion or any amendment or be counted in the quorum.

11. That Standing Order 99 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 99

99. No Bill for the incorporation of a railway or canal company, or for authorizing the construction of branch lines or extensions of existing lines of railways or of canals, or for changing the route of the railway or of the canal of any company already incorporated, shall be considered by the Committee on Transport and Communications, until there has been filed with the committee, at least one week before the consideration of the bill, a map or plan drawn upon a scale of not less than half an inch to the mile, showing the location upon which it is intended to construct the proposed work, and showing also the lines of existing or authorized works of a similar character within, or in any way affecting the district, or any part thereof, which the proposed work is intended to serve; and such map or plan shall be signed by the engineer or other person making the same.

12. That Standing Order 105 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 105

105. Every private bill, when read a second time, is referred to one of the standing committees as follows: bills relating to banks, insurance, trade and commerce and to trust and loan companies, to the Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs; bills relating to railways, canals, telegraphs, canal and railway bridges, to the Committee on Transport and Communications; the bills not coming under these classes, to the Committee on Miscellaneous Private Bills, and all petitions for or against the bills are considered as referred to such committee.

The Deputy Chairman: Order. When the Committee rose last night an amendment proposed by the hon. Member for Lapointe was being considered. This amendment reads as follows:

That all the words after the word "decision" in line 4 of the proposed Standing Order 12, subclause 1, be deleted.

Is the Committee ready for the question?

● (3:50 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Gauthier: Mr. Chairman, there are a few comments I should like to make concerning resolution 15, and especially with regard to section 2, in support of the amendment moved yesterday by the hon. member for Lapointe (Mr. Grégoire).

Mr. Chairman, before the house is called upon to vote on this amendment, I suggest that all members should examine carefully the provisions contained in section 2 of the said resolution, the purpose of which is to eliminate the right of appeal from rulings made by the Speaker.

If we had a permanent Speaker, we would be the first to vote in favour of section 2. But I would point out to the house that we are still governed by old principles. That is to say, the Speaker of this house does not hold a permanent post but is selected by a political party from among its own members and, consequently, he will often be inclined to go along with his party before considering an issue peculiar to a given area or group.

That is why we say it is not desirable at present to adopt the provisions of paragraph 2 of resolution 15, so long as we shall not have a permanent Speaker.

Mr. Chairman, we are told we should not question the honesty of a Speaker. I for one try not to have doubts about the honesty of the Speaker, but he has to be settled in his job and protected so that his honesty be preserved. I maintain that at the present time it is almost humanly impossible for a Speaker, considering the way he is appointed, to preserve his honesty a hundred per cent.

Mr. Chairman, they must not take us for mugs. When a man is elected within his party, when he is chosen by a party for the Speakership, it is logical, it is human—you cannot fool us, we were not born yesterday —he will always be inclined to go along with his party.

As for his impartiality, we wonder if he is well conditioned to be truly impartial. I realize that the present Speaker and his deputy—whom I wish to congratulate—endeavour by all possible means to be fair, but on some occasions, the impartiality of a Speaker does not simply depend on his will;

it can depend on external causes or still it can be due to a lack of knowledge of a question or its circumstances.

In fact, many things must be taken into consideration. The Speaker must be acquainted with the matter. For example, there is the case of the rain-making operations in the Saguenay-Lake St. John area. Many problems with which the Speaker is not familiar may crop up.

That is why we say that, in such a case, the opposition must have the right to appeal from the Speaker's ruling to make him understand the matter. Then it will be up to the house to decide by a vote whether it should maintain or reverse that ruling, as the case may be. But as long as this system is in force, we will be unable to accept the changes proposed in resolution No. 15.

Besides, it is also a matter of justice for the opposition parties because that is our only way to protest legally when for some reason or other, which might have nothing to do with the Speaker, efforts are made to prevent us from getting justice. That is the only weapon at the disposal of the third parties to get justice in this house when they are not satisfied with the Speaker's ruling.

It was also suggested that this undermines the Speaker's authority. On the contrary, I think it strengthens it. In fact—and I am always thinking in terms of our present conditions—if we leave full freedom of decision to the Speaker, it simply becomes a dictature, directed against the opposition. Because since the Speaker comes from a party and is selected by a party, he is inclined to follow his party. As long as these conditions prevail, I maintain that the right of appeal from the Speaker's rulings will ensure the fairness and authority of the Chair. Knowing that his rulings can be appealed may cause the Speaker to think twice before making a ruling. In my opinion, far from undermining the Chair's authority, it strengthens it by helping the Speaker to make fair rulings while they might have been not as fair for the various reasons I have given. An appeal from the Speaker's ruling allows the house to consider the whole question with him; then, if the vote taken is in favour of maintaining his ruling, it means that the appeal was not valid; on the other hand, if the Speaker is overruled, justice is done to the opposition parties. Even in that case, the Speaker's authority is confirmed as far as the principles of justice are concerned.

I believe the Speaker is there to uphold the rules of the house, but he must be the first to respect them and he must endeavour not to break them.

I am sure that the knowledge that his decision can be appealed will refresh the Speaker's memory; it is a constant reminder that he, himself, must first of all, observe the rules and then, have the others observe them as well.

Others have claimed that the purpose of this provision is also to make the house more effective. I think that the first reform to make to ensure the effectiveness of the house —and I said something about that at the outset—would merely be to eliminate confidence votes. Then the house would be more effective but it would not be so through the abolition of the right to appeal the Speaker's ruling. Indeed such an appeal can only delay the business of the house for 15 or 20 minutes. If the government had proposed, in its reforms, the abolition of want of confidence votes, which enables the government to pass legislation that the opposition does not like, whenever the latter wants to keep on governing, that would have been more effective. By means of the want of confidence vote, the government forces us, should we want to keep on with the administration of the business of this country without defeating the government, to accept measures that we regard as bad and that we would not want to accept; but not wishing to overthrow the government, thus causing the population a further expense in the tens of millions of dollars, we are forced to accept some of that legislation. In my opinion, resolution No. 15 and the provision relating to appeals against the Speaker's rulings has nothing to do with the efficiency of government.

I would now like to say a few words on paragraph 3 of resolution No. 15 which proposes mealtime sittings.

My motto has always been, Mr. Chairman, that there is a proper time for everything. When it is time to work, one works; when it is time to eat, one eats; when it is time to rest, one rests. I am surprised to see that in order to increase the weekly sitting hours, we shall have to work while eating or to eat while working.

• (4:00 p.m.)

Mr. Chairman, should a manufacturer follow such a rule, he would soon be bankrupt. If, in order to accelerate the business of the house, we must sacrifice our lunch and dinner hours, you will agree with me that we cannot work and eat while sitting here.

To me, this is another gimmick on the part of the government to have the greatest possible number of members out of the house so as to be able, often, to pass measures they want adopted fast but which deserve discussion. The government would take advantage of the absence of a number of members who would be out to eat. That may not be of great importance for a party with 100 or 120 members, although it should not be so, for it is just another opportunity or reason for a member to be absent for two or three hours during lunch or dinner.

On the other hand, if two or three members of our group are on a delegation, and if two or three of us are out eating, there will not be enough left to call a vote, because we must be at least five for that. If there are not five of us present, the government will do as it pleases. It is intended that we should sit during lunch and dinner, thus removing us from the house at all costs, so as to pass quickly legislation which often affects our localities and in respect of which we shall not have the occasion to defend the interests of our ridings.

Mr. Chairman, I understand that the government wishes to increase the sitting hours, but there are many other ways of doing so without depriving us of our meal hours.

Let us simply take an hour for lunch or dinner, instead of two hours or two hours and a half; let us work in the morning, let us work on Wednesday night. As long as we are in Ottawa, let us have regular working hours, but let us not be deprived of time for meals and rest. I perceive something mean in this amendment to the rules, and I am surprised that not a single member of the opposition should have spoken on this matter. I do not know whether they prefer to skip out for an hour or an hour and a half in order to eat while the house is sitting, but I frankly admit this is very difficult, for I feel that we are here not to let legislation go by without debate, but rather to discuss it. While the house sits, our duty is to be present to debate our problems, to try to pass the reforms put forward by the government and to adopt legislation to the needs of our constituencies.

That is why we should be present in the house instead of resting or eating. The right to eat is sacred and a member could not be blamed for leaving his seat in order to take his meal. That means the government must change its attitude concerning this provision and allow us at least one hour for meals, even though we may have to make up for it on Wednesday nights or in the mornings. No one will convince me that it is impossible to find 40 hours outside of mealtime. Come now. I notice that on the same day, we will take the four hours formerly set aside for meals, and that we will work during mealtime. For me, as for many others, that is nonsensical. Let us decide on other hours, let us shorten the mealtime but let us be allowed to be present when the house sits, without depriving us of our right to three meals a day.

Some hon. Members: The vote.

Mr. Martineau: Mr. Chairman, I have a few comments to make on one of the questions dealt with by the hon. member for Roberval (Mr. Gauthier) who preceded me. It relates to paragraph 3 (1) of the resolution before us.

The previous speaker said that members should not be deprived of their lunch hours. The suggestion surely has merits, but I think it is cause for more concern, not particularly for the inconvenience it would cause to the members themselves—we know they can leave the house whenever they please, although this is not recommended—but to the staff of the house who cannot leave at will; I think that in suggesting sitting during lunch hours, insufficient thought has been given to the staff.

We have in this chamber interpreters, reporters, the clerk and his assistants, not to mention Your Honour, who must remain on duty during our long sitting hours. In my opinion, not only will this proposal affect the personnel, but it is quite inhuman. Labour unions would never allow private enterprise to deprive their members of normal meal hours. And now it is proposed that employees who have an exacting, delicate and very strenuous job to perform should stay at it during long hours and even give up their meal hours.

As I say, such a proposal runs counter to social justice and I have no hesitation in calling it inhuman and antisocial.

Mr. Chairman, if such conditions would not be tolerated within private industry, can the government indulge in the luxury or even have the gall to lay down for its staff labour conditions it would not allow in private industry?

Since the government has the responsibility to implement normal labour standards, and since it would not allow private industry to apply such labour conditions, I appeal specially to it to change its proposal so that every employee of this house can have normal meal hours. It is a fact that one may answer:

Well, hire more staff. However, we must not forget that there are many and real difficulties involved when you want to recruit the qualified employees required for the dispatch of the business of the House.

Mr. Chairman, these remarks apply to every employee of the House, to the interpreters, and to the reporters who accurately report the proceedings of the House. It is a highly specialized work for which the reporters are inadequately paid in comparison with those who do similar work in private industry.

In fact, I know many official court stenographers who receive a much higher salary than those who are now serving in the same capacity in the House of Commons. They are highly qualified employees who seldom make mistakes or blunders.

It is not sufficient to hire other employees. The working conditions must be favourable to find extra personnel.

Up to now, because of the salary offered and especially of the inhuman conditions the staff must accept, the government is unable to hire the required personnel. To show how difficult it is to find qualified personnel for the debates section, especially the French debates section, it could be pointed out that a young stenographer from France had to be employed. We are very happy at the appointment of this young woman, because like the other members of the staff, she performs her work exceptionally well. But the fact that skilled personnel must be recruited abroad shows once again that recruiting is extremely difficult.

Also, if working conditions are going to get even worse, it seems to me that not only will it be impossible to recruit new personnel, but I am very much afraid that the present house staff members will plan to change jobs and go to private industry, because as I indicated a while ago, working conditions in private industry are surely much more attractive.

Mr. Chairman, the provisions of subsection 3 of paragraph 1 of resolution No. 15 are to allow hon. members to leave the House during meal hours because they provide for a suspension, so to speak, of a vote during normal meal hours.

I think that such a provision is discriminatory—

• (4:10 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. McIlraith: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, I wonder what that argument has to do with the amendment to paragraph 2 which is before us.

[Mr. Martineau.]

Mr. Martineau: Mr. Chairman, I will answer the President of the Privy Council very briefly. It is not strictly pertinent to the amendment. The remarks that I have to make will be very, very brief; I have only two or three other points to raise. I believe that in view of the latitude shown by the Chair with regard to the discussion of this amendment we would certainly be able to dispose not only of the amendment but the whole question much more quickly if I were allowed to finish my remarks, instead of having to begin them over again when the amendment has been disposed of. I admit that the President of the Privy Council is right in his remarks, strictly speaking, but if you will be indulgent, Mr. Chairman, I will terminate my remarks as soon as possible.

Mr. Douglas: On the point of order, Mr. Chairman, I do not want to interrupt my hon. friend, and I agree wholeheartedly with what he is saying, but I think it would be advisable if we had some clarification from the Chair as to what the procedure is to be. Are we going to deal with each paragraph, pass it so it is disposed of and finished with, or are we going to roam all over item 15; because that way it seems to me we are going to have a great deal of difficulty. I had understood that what we were going to do today was start with paragraph 2, dispose of it, then revert to paragraph 1 and then go seriatim through each of the paragraphs. It seems to me that only if we do that will we know where we are. I have no objection to the hon. Member finishing his remarks, but I think there should be some clarification with regard to the rest of the debate. Otherwise I can see us wandering all over the place.

The Deputy Chairman: Order. In this matter the Chair is in the hands of the Committee. It is my opinion that with a resolution of this kind, particularly when the time for debate is limited, we might well work a little more effectively if we were to follow this resolution through paragraph by paragraph. On the other hand I must point out to the Committee that there is a single resolution before the Chair, and unless the Committee decides to discuss the resolution paragraph by paragraph the Chair would have to consider any comments made within the bounds of the resolution as being in order.

Mr. Winch: On this point, Mr. Chairman, it is my understanding that when you took the Chair you read out an amendment that was before the Committee of the Whole House. I understood we were discussing the amendment which is before us.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, perhaps I might say a word or two on this point. My understanding was that, by unanimous consent, when we began consideration of this resolution last night we did agree, in effect, upon an order which would provide for paragraph by paragraph consideration. It was on that ground that we agreed to commence with the consideration of paragraph 2. I think this was in effect an order of the House and that last night the Chair had received that direction from the Committee.

Mr. McIlraith: If I might say something on this point, Mr. Chairman, I do not think it would be quite accurate to say there was an agreement last night as to the way in which we would proceed. Technically the resolution is one resolution and any amendment should be made to the whole resolution, and I suppose it is in order, technically, to discuss the whole resolution. But it seems to me that because of the nature of the resolution this could only lead to a confused and unsatisfactory type of discussion in Committee and I would suggest that if it meets the wishes of the Committee, subject to the hon. Member for Pontiac-Témiscamingue having an opportunity to complete his remarks, we should seek to complete paragraph 2 and from that point on discuss the paragraphs as they come, paragraphs 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, and so on, until we finish. It seems to me that this would be a more orderly way to proceed and would be more satisfactory to the Committee.

Mr. Winch: That means a decision on the amendment now before the Committee?

Mr. McIlraith: Yes. I would point out that I have undertaken in one way or another, mostly because of suggestions from private Members on both sides of the House, to present amendments to paragraphs 1, 5, 7 and 10, and there will also be an amendment at the conclusion to make a term provision rather than a permanent change in the rules. If we followed the orderly procedure that I have suggested, rather than putting them all forward together I would put them forward on each paragraph as we come to it. I think that is the fairest way of proceeding, and if it meets the wishes of the Committee I would suggest that we proceed in that way.

The Deputy Chairman: Does the Committee now agree that after the hon. Member for Pontiac-Témiscamingue has completed his remarks we proceed with the discussion of this resolution paragraph by paragraph?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chairman: May I point out to the Members of the Committee—

Mr. Starr: After the vote.

Mr. McIlraith: Yes, after the vote.

The Deputy Chairman: —that if we are to follow that procedure we will, of course, not pass each paragraph but will terminate the discussion on each paragraph.

Mr. Starr: Mr. Chairman, my understanding was—and I think this has been more or less agreed on, with the co-operation of all parties of the House—that we would deal with paragraph 2 and then call the question and bring it to a vote; then we would revert to paragraph 1 and deal with each paragraph separately, in rotation, with the amendments and the votes that may be required.

The Deputy Chairman: Then I presume that the Committee is directing the Chair to confine the discussion to the paragraph under consideration at any particular time.

Mr. Douglas: After the hon. Member for Pontiac-Témiscamingue has finished his remarks.

The Deputy Chairman: Yes, after this particular amendment has been voted on. Is that agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Martineau: Mr. Chairman, I wish to thank you for your indulgence. I will be very brief in terminating my remarks.

[Translation]

Mr. Chairman, I was saying that this provision seems to me quite discriminatory, because it allows hon. members to leave the house during meal hours. It provides for a specific exception whereby hon. members who make such a request can block any vote during meal time. Therefore, such a provision is to accommodate, to a certain extent, hon. members who wish to go out for lunch.

But a similar privilege is not granted to the members of the staff who have to remain on the job all the time during lunch hours and perform more exacting duties than the members who may leave the house at will.

Such discrimination against those whose responsibility it is to expedite the business of the house is beyond comprehension.

In my opinion, the adoption of this suggestion to sit during normal meal hours would have the effect of quickly wearing out the staff. The efficiency of work of the house is the reason mentioned for this amendment. Far from increasing efficiency, it would, I think, lessen it considerably if employees became exhausted because of the extra work involved as a result of this excessive number of overtime hours as compared to normal conditions existing in private industry.

It was suggested that it would solve the problem if the debates were not taken down by the reporters during the meal hours. This solution cannot of course be considered seriously. Replacing the staff by machines, during those hours, cannot be considered seriously either. Either those machines can function efficiently and satisfactorily or they cannot. If they can, then they should be used all the time; if they cannot, there is no reason why they should be used during meal hours and not during normal sitting hours.

In essence, this would not lead to efficiency but to exhaustion. This could lead to a situation where the house would surely lose its most efficient and skilled employees; should we insist on passing this measure, employee efficiency would surely be lessened.

With respect to the French debates division, where recruiting of staff is so difficult, as I said at the beginning of my remarks, I suggest that the enforcement of this provision would result in downgrading the French debates division which is now working in a very acceptable, and I would even say, excellent way. On the one hand, new personnel cannot be recruited and, on the other hand, the staff which might remain faithfully on the job would quickly be faced with chronical exhaustion.

A much simpler solution is to keep the normal hours and also to determine the opening and adjournment periods of the house; in this way, members of the staff could fully rely on vacations which would be set beforehand.

A revision of the salaries of the house employees would also have to be seriously considered in order to put them on an equal footing with those paid for similar work in private industry. If instead of showing indifference for the well-being of employees, normal reforms were proposed, I am convinced that there would be an increase in the efficiency of the house thanks to a staff which would be reasonably paid, satisfied, able and enthusiastic.

[Mr. Martineau.]

• (4:20 p.m.)

[English]

The Deputy Chairman: Is the Committee ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Amendment (Mr. Grégoire) negatived: Yeas, 18; nays, 50.

The Deputy Chairman: I declare the amendment lost.

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Chairman, I desire to say just a few words on paragraph 2, which abolishes the right of appeal from the Speaker's ruling. There is not any doubt about the fact that this right of appeal has been abused by using it to get the view of the House on the substance of what is before the House, rather than on the actual ruling of the Speaker. But the fact that this right has been abused does not warrant abolishing it completely, any more than we would abolish many of the other rules that are abused from time to time by Members of the House.

I have two basic objections to this complete abolition of the right of appeal. The first is that there is always a danger of bias on the part of the Speaker and, even if there is not actual bias, there is always the danger that Members may feel the Speaker is biased in favour of the Government by whom he is nominated. Moreover the history of Canadian parliamentary life has been that the Speakership has often been a stepping stone from a private Member's position to a Cabinet Minister's portfolio. Because of that fact the Speakership has not been thought of as having that degree of impartiality that would free the Chair from any feeling that there was bias on the part of its occupant.

The suggestion has been made that appeals could be abolished if we had a permanent Speaker. The right hon. Leader of the Opposition, the Prime Minister and the Minister of Labour have each talked about the idea of a permanent Speaker, and even names have been tossed around, I think somewhat unwisely. No one to date has spelled out what the Government or the Official Opposition means when they talk about a permanent Speaker. The Minister of Labour went so far as to ask the different political parties to express their views about the acceptability of a certain individual as a possible permanent Speaker. I hope before this debate concludes that someone on behalf of the Government, preferably the Prime Minister, will tell the House exactly what is meant when they talk about a permanent Speaker. Certainly until they do I am not in a position to give the views of this party with regard to the establishment of a permanent Speakership. So far the responses to the suggestion of establishing such an office have been very nebulous and vague, indeed.

There have been three ideas advanced by various people, and I think they are contained in the brief which was prepared by Professor Denis Smith. The first is the so-called McGee Plan, which proposes that the Members of Parliament elect from among themselves one Member to be the Member for Parliament Hill. This would mean amending the constitution to make Parliament Hill a constituency, so that the Member elected would resign the seat to which he had been elected. A by-election would be held, and the hon. Member would become the Member for Parliament Hill. If that is what the Government has in mind, we would like to know. We are prepared to consider and examine that suggestion very carefully, but we do not know whether that is in fact what the Government has in mind.

The other proposal, which is usually mooted when one talks about a permanent Speaker, is that someone who is the Speaker, or is being promoted as a person suitable for the occupancy of the Chair, should be given an acclamation at the next election, in that all parties would undertake to refrain from opposing him. Under that proposal when such an individual returned to the House following an election would automatically be elected by the new House to the Chair. I want to make it very clear that in my opinion this is not a very satisfactory arrangement. I do not think that we here, whether it be the political leaders or the political parties, have any right to make a commitment that we will disfranchise the people of a particular constituency for an indefinite period of time.

If the people of any constituency decide that a man has been a very good Speaker and consequently ought not to be opposed, that of course is their privilege. Many of us would probably encourage them to take that point of view; but any political party that believes in the autonomy of the constituency organization, and I am one of those, certainly could not undertake to tell any constituency that they must not put up a candidate in a forthcoming election. I am not sure it would be a good thing for any other political leader to undertake such an assignment, because this would not necessarily be for one term, but could be for three or four terms; and that is a long period of time during which to deny the people of a constituency the right to exercise their franchise.

The third concept that usually is associated with a permanent Speakership is that of continuity of tenure of the Speakership. In my opinion this makes a great deal more sense, and is to a very large extent the practice that is being followed in Great Britain. If a man has occupied the Chair with distinction and to the satisfaction of Members in all parts of the House, I think it would be all to the good if at dissolution all parties indicated that he had discharged his duties so satisfactorily that in the event of his being re-elected at the polls, whatever party formed the next Government, he would be nominated as the Speaker. That would ensure the continuity of tenure without committing any party to refrain from nominating a candidate to run against the Speaker. It would also ensure that a change of Government would not necessarily entail a change in Speakership. I have no doubt that, as has happened in Great Britain, if the Speaker has been continued in office over one or two terms, the likelihood is that the people of the constituency and the Members of the various parties would refrain from opposing him during an election, but they would do so on the basis of a voluntary decision made by the people. That would not require some of us here to decide who should be the Speaker, or who should nominate and who should not be nominated in a particular constituency.

I hope that this question of the so-called permanent Speakership will be clarified, because I think it is important that if we are going to abolish appeals against the Speaker's rulings the Speaker must more and more be divorced from partisan considerations. The continuity of tenure by the Speaker, irrespective of a change in Government, would go a long way toward removing any suspicion that there was bias or prejudice on the part of the Speaker when he makes the decisions he must make from time to time in order to carry on the work of the House. I trust that we are going to get some clarification of this point. That would be a forward step. If we are to reach some agreement, we ought to reach it on the basis of a distinct understanding of what we are talking about.

Certainly as far as I am concerned, I think the third alternative to which I have referred, the continuity of tenure, is the one which would cause the least dislocation and would be the easiest to apply. If this worked satisfactorily over a period of years, then some future parliament could decide whether or not further improvements could be made so as to guarantee the impartiality of the Speaker and the appearance of impartiality, which is just as important as the impartiality itself.

• (4:40 p.m.)

The second objection I have to abolishing appeals from the Speaker's rulings concerns not only the matter of bias which may be attributed to the Speaker but also the question of errors of judgment. No individual is infallible. No Member, no matter how conscientious or how scrupulous he may be, can guarantee that he will always be right. The rules of this House are exceedingly complicated and in the final analysis the man in the Chair has to make a decision. He must interpret those rules on the basis of precedent; he must analyse the situation before him and reach a decision.

It is quite conceivable that the decision will be wrong. The difficulty is that not only will that wrong decision work an injustice at the time but, even more serious, it will become a precedent upon which other decisions will be based in the future. In parliament we build up a series of precedents, as we do in the common law, and one erroneous decision could start a whole trend of decisions which could not be reversed and could have very unfortunate results.

I think there is a half way ground between what the Government is proposing and the amendment just defeated which sought to amend paragraph 2 so as to permit appeals against the Sepaker's rulings. The middle ground was referred to yesterday by the hon. Member for Edmonton West and it is also contained in the brief which was prepared for the Committee on Procedure by Professor Denis Smith of Trent University. I will read only a couple of paragraphs which I think set forth the proposal in fairly succinct terms. He says:

> The Speaker, however, may sometimes make mistakes in applying the rules, and occasionally invites appeals on this ground. On February 24, 1965, Mr. Speaker Macnaughton admitted the possibility that "even the Chair is perhaps in the position sometimes of making an error," and invited an appeal against his ruling that a prima facie case of privilege had not been made by Mr. Douglas. The decision was appealed, and the Speaker's ruling was reversed. The simple abolition of appeals would provide no recourse for the House against patently mistaken rulings, except the extreme recourse of a substantive motion of censure.
> An intermediate measure of reform might provide that an appeal could only be made by substantive motion accompanied by the citation of authorities and precedents in writing, and that such an appeal would be referred automatically by the House either to the Committee on Privileges and Elections or to the Committee on Procedure, if it were to become a standing committee. The appropriate committee would examine the merits of the appeal, and report to the House, which would act upon the recommendation of the committee to sustain the ruling or to allow the appeal. This deliberate and formal procedure would eliminate most nuisance appeals, but would permit legitimate appeals based upon careful study of the rules.

[Mr. Douglas.]

I want to commend to the Committee consideration of the point put forward by Professor Denis Smith. It is absurd for us to begin with the assumption that a Speaker, no matter how fair, no matter how impartial, no matter how learned, will never make a mistake. If we abolish appeals from the Speaker's rulings we are left with no alternative but to move a motion of censure, and I submit, Mr. Chairman, there are many instances where one disagrees with the Speaker on a matter of law or on the interpretation of the rules of the House, but where one would certainly hesitate to move a motion of censure which calls in question not just his judgment but his integrity.

It seems to me that this middle ground of having a standing committee on procedure to which an appeal could be referred is a good idea, not so much for the purpose of rectifying an immediate situation but to prevent the establishment of a precedent which could lead to great misunderstanding later. I think the proposal made by Professor Denis Smith is worthy of the Committee's consideration. I believe that abolishing appeals completely is going too far. I am quite willing to admit that there have been abuses and there ought to be some restriction on the right to appeal, but to leave Members no recourse when they disagree with the Speaker except to move a motion of censure on the Speaker seems to me not to be the essence of wisdom. Therefore I move:

> That the proposed new Standing Order 12 (1) be amended by changing the period at the end thereof to a comma, and by adding immediately thereafter the following words: "provided, however, that an appeal on a substantive motion, accompanied by the citation of authorities and precedents, may be submitted for study to a special committee to be appointed for that purpose."

Mr. Pickersgill: Mr. Chairman, I should like to say a word about this amendment. When the hon. Member for Edmonton West spoke about this procedure, which if I remember correctly I think he said is followed in the West German Parliament, it did seem to me that the general idea had a certain amount of appeal, if I may make a very bad play on words. I think I was the first Member of the House who as a member of the Opposition proposed the abolition of appeals. I did so consistently for three successive sessions when I was sitting on the other side of the House, so I do not think anyone can accuse me of being an advocate of the abolition of appeals because I think they are an embarrassment to the Government.

I think that the idea that a majority of the Members of the House can reach a better decision about a matter concerning the rules is so absurd that it just cannot commend itself to any sensible person. In that regard I point out that in the normal course an appeal in a legal matter is to another court, not to the jury that has participated in a trial at a lower stage, if I may mix my metaphors thoroughly.

I think the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam was quite right when he said that appeals had almost never been taken on the grounds that the rules were incorrectly interpreted, but in an effort to get a phony decision on the question which was itself ruled out of order. This seems to me not only an abuse of our procedures but a very serious affront to whoever may be Speaker. I do not believe we will ever be able to get a continuing Speaker of this House until after we have abolished appeals. I know I would never take the position if there were any appeal from me. I think once this matter has been debated in the House, I do not think any other Member will be willing to take the office if the House is not willing to trust him. Some of the reasons that have been given for not trusting the Speaker, that he might conceivably be biased, do not impress me very much. They did not impress me when I was sitting on the other side, either.

This is a very ingenious idea but one which I feel that at this stage, since it is also novel and has been sprung upon us without warning, might be something which a committee ought to study very carefully. I would find it difficult, myself, to support the amendment in its present form. In saying that, however, I should like to add that I do believe it is a matter which should be studied by whatever body the House sets up to study the rules over the next period. After all, the rules we are debating now are to be effective for a trial period only, which will expire at the end of the next full session. It seems to me that, in view of the general expression of confidence, we could abolish the appeals now and consider this suggestion very carefully. If I interpret it correctly, the appeal would not be against the effect of that particular ruling. The ruling would stand, but there would be an appeal against its becoming a precedent. It would be only on that basis that I think it would be feasible at all, because obviously you could not suspend all the proceedings of the House while the committee studied the ruling in order to determine whether or not the decision should be allowed in that particular case.

In other words, I am speaking only for myself as one Member of the House when I say that the idea embodied in the hon. gentleman's amendment has some attraction for me. No one wants to move votes of censure against a Speaker to express dissent. I think the hon. Member for Edmonton West, in bringing this matter before the House, with the kind of special experience the hon. gentleman has had in a very difficult parliament, has done us a real service. At the same time, I would hope that we would not be rushed into the adoption of the proposal without considering all its implications, particularly as there will be a chance, in the further consideration of the rules, to consider the best way of doing it in our own Canadian fashion. If there were a general understanding that this idea would be considered and, if we could work out something satisfactory, we would have it brought back to the House as the view of the whole House, I wonder if the hon. gentleman would consider not dividing the House but withdrawing his amendment?

Mr. Baldwin: I think this is a very interesting suggestion, particularly because it follows along the lines of an idea I expressed when I first spoke in this debate. I said, as reported on page 1579 of Hansard, that I was quite convinced, as a result of the proposal to abolish the appeal from the Speaker's ruling, that certain things would come about which we did not contemplate at this time. Then, I said, and I quote:

> I believe as well that if the particular proposal by which appeals from Mr. Speaker's ruling are abolished, it might not be a bad idea to have in existence a committee which would be seized of an understanding of these rules, and which would meet from time to time and to which Mr. Speaker could have access.

This is not quite the same as the proposal in the amendment, but I make this suggestion that I am quite in agreement with what the Minister of Transport said. You could not have the House left in suspended animation. If Mr. Speaker made a decision, the House would have to act in accordance with the rules. We could not wait for a week or ten days to have the committee which is proposed in the amendment of the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam inquire into whether or not the decision was one which should stand, then bring before the House its views contained in a substantive motion upon which the House could vote, and confirm or alter the ruling of Mr. Speaker.

I do believe, however, it is quite essential that in connection with a decision which is made, and which might not be one the House feels is in the best interests of all concerned should stand, not only for this Parliament but for subsequent parliaments, rather than put it in the form that there could be an appeal, such a committee might be seized with the duty of carefully considering the issue. If the committee thought the decision was one which should not stand as part of our procedure, they could then bring a substantive motion, just as is proposed in this amendment, and the House could then divide on this question. If it is left in this form, you would then have a situation where Mr. Speaker has given his decision and yet there is still an appeal outstanding. I think you would be in difficulty. I believe there is merit in the suggestion. Possibly the Government might consider, before we have completed our deliberations which will continue until tomorrow, holding consultations with the hon. Member who has moved the amendment and the hon. Member for Edmonton West who brought this matter forward. The House should have an opportunity to alter a ruling which it feels should not stand.

Mr. Lambert: I think the situation might be clarified to the satisfaction of all if we could get an undertaking from the Government that we would have reinstated the Special Committee on Procedure. There has been no provision made for that committee to continue the studies it had undertaken. I believe this procedure would take care of the matter, if we could have that undertaking. After all, while the Government says these rules are going to be reviewed, it does not say how or when. I suggest that the reinstitution of the Special Committee on Procedure might facilitate things.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Tardif): Order; it being five o'clock I must interrupt the business to permit the House to consider private Members' business.

Progress reported.

AGRICULTURE

REQUEST FOR ROYAL COMMISSION ON FARM MACHINERY PRICES

Mr. Reynold Rapp (Humboldt-Melfort-Tisdale) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of appointing a Royal Commission to investigate the increased costs of farm machinery across Canada in relation to the price of farm products.

He said: I am very pleased to have this opportunity to introduce my motion for discussion at this hour. The purpose of my motion is this: to have a Royal Commission appointed to investigate the increased costs of farm machinery across Canada in relation to the price of farm products.

In the past such investigations have usually been carried out by the standing committee on agriculture of this House, as was the case in 1960-61. In my opinion the disadvantage of having an investigation of this kind carried out by a standing committee is that very often—and this is what happened in 1960-61—parliament is prorogued and an election called, with the result that the recommendations of the committee are neither properly studied nor implemented. I understand this was the case not only in the particular year to which I have referred, but in previous parliaments in the past. Similar circumstances arose. If a Royal Commission were set up as suggested in my motion the investigation could continue whether the House was sitting or not, or whether parliament had been prorogued or not; the commissioners would not be interfered with.

As hon. Members know, at the present time one of the great problems which faces our farm industry is the high prices of farm machinery. These prices are out of all proportion to the price the farmer receives for his produce. What is worse is that the prices of farm machinery rise year after year while the prices of farm products remain the same or, in some cases, are even lower. What is the reason for this? Well, a Royal Commission would be empowered to investigate and discover the reason for this inequality of price.

The 1960-61 Agriculture Committee of which I was a Member investigated farm machinery prices. The first step at that time was to call in the four main farm machine companies of Canada. These companies were: Massey-Ferguson Ltd., International Harvester Co. of Canada Ltd., John Deere Ltd., and Cockshutt Farm Equipment Ltd. It was a most interesting investigation and we listened with great interest to what these machinery companies had to say about the steady rise in the cost of farm machinery. They gave many reasons. Each company contended that its margin of profit was below 4 per cent and also that its volume of business was decreasing. Well, the reason for a decline in business might be found among the records of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. During the period 1951-61 the number of farms decreased by 23 per cent. Maybe this is one reason why the volume of business done by these companies had decreased. It was also stated by the machine companies that the costs of labour and materials had climbed to a much greater extent than had farm machinery prices.

We also invited the Canadian Labour Congress to present its views and it is interesting to note that in their statement the C.L.C. representatives contended that wages in the farm implement industry had not risen as much as they had in other industries. Though their wages had increased by 100 per cent since 1949, the standard of living had not increased as much as it had in the farm implement industries. They admitted that steelworkers' wages had increased by approximately 200 per cent since 1949.

As I say, we heard from the four main farm machine companies. We were also presented with a statement by the C.C.I.L.—the Canadian Co-operative Implement Company of Winnipeg. This was very different from the statement made by the four major companies, who said their profit amounted to only 4 per cent. We were particularly interested in the financial statement of the C.C.I.L. According to this statement the experience of the company over the years had been that in relation to total sales of slightly more than $54 million a net savings amounting to $5,640,000 had been made on sales which represent only a very small percentage of total machine sales in western Canada. In 1959, when C.C.I.L. had a better percentage of total sales than in several preceding years there was a saving of approximately 14 per cent on sales. More than $1,650,000 has been paid in cash to member customers and more than $500,000 has been placed in a deferred dividend position. This is very interesting. Here we have the four main implement companies contending that they are making a profit of only 4 per cent from their sales while the C.C.I.L. is making a profit as high as 14 per cent on sales.

I have in my hand some information from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics which will throw some light on the subject and endorse my argument that a Royal Commission be set up to investigate the increased cost of farm machinery across Canada in relation to the price of farm products. Here is a table headed "Value of Farm Implement and Equipment Sales, Canada, 1954-1964". I will give the figures in millions of dollars. In 1954, sales of farm implements and farm equipment amounted to $146 million and the price rose continuously over a ten year period until in 1964 it stood at $366 million. This represented an increase of about 100 per cent. The sale of repair parts in 1954 amounted to $27 million and by 1964 there had been an increase to $52 million. You can see, Mr. Speaker, that prices have continuously increased; they rose by almost 100 per cent during this nine or ten year period.

Now let us consider the D.B.S. table entitled "Index Number of Wholesale Prices of Canadian Farm Products, Canada, 1949-1964". The basis of these figures is that the index 1935-39 equals 100. In 1949 the index stood at 228.7, while in 1963 it stood at 229.9, an increase of only one point over a 15-year period. I now come to the index numbers of wholesale prices of field products. We find that in 1949 the index stood at 191.9 and in 1963 it decreased to 184.4. Then for animal products we find that in 1949 the index stood at 265.4 while in 1963 it rose to 275.4.

You will see from these tables, Mr. Speaker, that the prices of farm products have not kept pace with the increase in the prices of farm implements and machinery. I also have another table, obtained from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, entitled "Selected index numbers of prices of commodities and services used by farmers". It is based on the index 1935-39 equalling 100. With regard to the composite index exclusive of living component, in 1949 the figure was 204.1, while in 1963 it stood at 298.6. In 1949 the index for farm machinery stood at 158.3, while in 1963 it rose to 272.9.

These figures reveal a very, very interesting and at the same time sad picture. The prices of farm machinery and services of which a farmer must avail himself have gone up 100 per cent to 200 per cent in some cases, while the prices of farm products over a 15-year period have not only failed to increase but in many instances have decreased. This is the reason, Mr. Speaker, why I would like to have a Royal Commission investigate this matter and take appropriate steps to correct the unjust and unfair situation that exists today in our agricultural industry.

I have just one more table. This deals almost exclusively with prices for wheat, oats and barley in the Prairie Provinces. Here, too, the index is based on 1935-39 equalling 100. We see that in 1949 the index stood at 255.4, while after a 15-year period in 1963 it rose to 268.4. There has been a tremendous increase in the cost of farm machinery, while there has been an increase of very few points in the price of agricultural products, in this particular case wheat, oats and barley.

As I stated earlier in my remarks, Mr. Speaker, the number of farms has decreased during the 10-year period 1951 to 1961 by 23 per cent. This is the reason why farm delegation after farm delegation come to see the Federal Government, ask to have their plight investigated and come up with suggestions and recommendations whereby our farmers may receive the same treatment that is accorded other segments of our population. I would like to see the House approve this motion so that the Government might go ahead and appoint a Royal Commission to investigate this problem.

I could deal with many more points in this connection and supply more information from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, but there is only one hour in which to discuss this matter and I would like to see other Members from all parties in the House stand up and express their views. I would like to have your permission, Mr. Speaker, to submit the tables I have mentioned, which were received from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, for either printing in the body of Hansard or as an appendix to Hansard.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Batten): Order. Does the House give permission to having the tables referred to by the hon. Member included in his speech or as an appendix to Hansard?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Russell C. Honey (Durham): Mr. Speaker, I want to introduce my remarks, in dealing with the motion of the hon. Member for Humboldt-Melfort-Tisdale (Mr. Rapp), by saying that I think all of us in this House are concerned with and appreciate the problems in the agricultural industry which the hon. Member has described. But I think he is perhaps taking a rather narrow approach to the whole matter and that the setting up of a Royal Commission as the hon. Member requests, while this in itself might be helpful, would entail wasting a great deal of time, pending the inquiry and the report of the Commission, before the Government would be in a position to take action in this respect. Also, there are indeed other facets of the problem facing the agricultural industry today that are of equal concern, and the whole scope of the agricultural problem is one which the Government has under constant review. The legislation introduced—I shall refer later in my remarks to this legislation and the policies of this Government—has been helpful in approaching a solution to this problem.

I wish to refer, as my hon. friend has done, to some statistics which will indicate that the matter he has discussed is not, relatively speaking, as pressing as other problems in this particular field. The hon. Member for Humboldt-Melfort-Tisdale referred—and I am pleased that he did—to the work carried out by the Standing Committee on Agriculture and Colonization in 1960 and 1961 when it was empowered by this House to inquire into the matter of the cost of farm machinery in relation to the price of farm produce. The hon. Member who preceded me was a Member of that Committee and speaks with more authority than I can, because I was not in the House of Commons at that time. However, a review of the proceedings shows that the Committee sat 36 times during this period. I think the first hearing was on July 12, 1960, and the Committee sat until June 5, 1961. It did not meet again because, as has already been mentioned, an election was called the following year. In view of the volume of work that was done by that Committee in connection with this problem, I think I might be a bit critical.

• (5:20 p.m.)

The Committee was not reconvened after the election of June 18, 1962 because the Parliament which was then returned after that election did not have the opportunity to set up the Committee on Agriculture and Colonization. So that the great volume of work which was done by that Committee has really never been reduced to the form of a report, and I think in that respect it is regrettable that something more concrete has not emerged from those rather lengthy, and I think important, deliberations.

The difficulties in the farming industry today have, of course, been partly overcome. The farmer is approaching the solution to his problems through more efficient operation, and in doing so requires newer and more efficient machines. It is a matter of interest, Mr. Speaker, that machinery investment on farms in Canada today amounts to $2.5 billion. We can compare this with 15 years ago when investment was $1.5 billion. I mention this to show the rapid increase both in size and cost of farm machinery in the post-war period.

However, we all know that the cost of other farm expenses is also going up, for example labour, machinery, operating expenses, and so on. I think it is interesting to look at the rate of these increases. I have before me some information supplied by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics indicating the relative rate of increase of these other operating expenses as compared with machinery costs. It is an index of prices of commodities and services used by farmers, and I introduce these figures by saying, so as to make them more intelligible, that the index I refer to is a measure of the change in prices of things farmers buy for use in their farming operations. The composite index reflects changes in the average prices for large groups of production goods and services.

While the prices of most goods and services have moved up since the 1940's the prices of some have moved more rapidly than others. The sub-indexes have been calculated for the major components of the composite index.

During the 1950's, the price of farm machinery rose more rapidly than the average of all prices of goods and services used by farmers. From 1949 to 1959, the index of farm machinery prices rose 90.0 points while the composite index rose 65.4 points. The index of prices of building materials rose 88.5 points. Since 1959 however, the rise in the index of farm machinery prices had been at a slower rate than the index of prices of many other goods and services by farmers. During the past five years, during 1960 to 1964, the index of farm machinery prices advanced 25.4 points. The composite index in the same period advanced 31.9 points and the building materials price index advanced by 30.1 points. Farm wage rates advanced even more rapidly. From 1949 to 1959 the index of farm wage rates rose 164.9 points as compared to the 65.4 point rise for the composite index and 90.1 point rise for the machinery price index. During the past five years farm wage rates have continued this trend, their index rising 72.2 points as against 31.9 for the composite index and 25.4 points for the index of farm machinery prices.

As I mentioned in my opening remarks, I do think—I say this with respect because I know the hon. Member, like all hon. Members in this House, is very concerned about the problems facing the agricultural industry—that we have to approach the question, as the Government is doing, from the over-all, broad approach; and this is the reason I read into the record the relative increase in prices in the farming industry, because it indicates that while the price of machinery is a serious and important factor, relatively speaking, in the cost of farming, it is no more important, or in late years as important, as the increase in the cost of labour and other services and requirements for which the farmer must pay.

I mentioned earlier that one of the solutions to our problems—all of us in agriculture refer to the cost-price squeeze—is greater efficiency. This has resulted in bigger and better and more expensive machines, and this in itself is a very important approach which we must take to our agricultural problems. The farmer has done an exceedingly fine job of increasing his efficiency, but that is not the whole answer; and certainly we cannot find the answer to the broad, over-all problems entirely within the scope of increased efficiency. The problem, of course, is that the price the farmer is receiving for his produce is not keeping pace with the cost of his operations, the various facets of which I have already described.

Another problem, one which this Government is moving and has moved very rapidly to assist, although it is not the entire solution—and I do not think anyone on this side has ever suggested it is—is the question of better credit facilities. The amendments to the Farm Credit Corporation legislation, which doubled the amount of credit available to farmers, and the amendments to farm improvement loans legislation, which increased the amount available from $7,500 to $15,000, in fact doubling it, have put the Canadian farmer in the position where there is more credit available to help him consolidate his land, purchase equipment and so on, thus making his operation an economical or more economical and more viable one. These approaches which the Government is taking are helpful, and I have mentioned others. They are all part of the whole pattern of solutions to these problems of our agricultural industry. One of them, and a very important one, is the question raised by the hon. Member for Humboldt-Melfort-Tisdale (Mr. Rapp); and as I have already said it is one of the important problems with which we in this House have to deal.

However, I wonder whether a Royal Commission is really the answer. I think the motion is a reasonable and certainly conscientious attempt on the part of the hon. Member to bring this matter to the attention of this House, but I think, as I have already said, that we may be approaching the question within too narrow a scope.

I should like to put on the record a quotation which may be helpful from the proceedings before the Standing Committee on Agriculture and Colonization when it dealt with this problem in 1960 and 1961. I am referring to some remarks of the late Dr. Hannam, who was then President of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture. This quotation appears in Minutes of Proceedings and Evidence, No. 3, when he was giving evidence before the Committee, as reported at page 102 of the report. In his evidence he did not, nor did others on behalf of farm organizations, suggest the approach of a Royal Commission.

This is what Dr. Hannam said when dealing with the problem with which the Committee was faced in respect of agriculture generally in Canada:

> In our view the basic difficulties of agriculture arise out of the technological forces making for rapidly rising productivity in agriculture, together with the failure of the demand for farm products to increase correspondingly. The result is a chronic tendency to overproduce and a downward pressure on farm prices and on numbers of farmers.
> We think that farmers recognize this fact, and would not want us to run any risk of leaving an impression that we think the problems of agriculture are essentially caused by exploitative increases in costs, though these can be damaging when they occur. To leave such an impression would not serve the best interests of farm policy needs in Canada.
> It is in the improvement of conditions of marketing and pricing of farm products, in expansion of markets, in the creation of economic opportunity for rural people, and in progressive credit and resource use policies that the greatest hopes for improvement in the farmer's condition lie.

I should again like to refer to the proceedings of that Committee and, in particular, to a recommendation made by the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool through its President, Mr. C. W. Gibbings, who presented a comprehensive brief containing a number of interesting and useful recommendations. Again, these recommendations did not include a reference to the setting up of a Royal Commission.

The recommendation I think is of interest in the context of this problem reads as follows:

> That Governments, organized farmers and individual farmers themselves consider methods of encouraging custom hiring and renting, the sharing and co-operative ownership of farm machinery in areas and under conditions where each is feasible and desirable.

Hon. Members will recall that a few months ago this Government passed the Machinery Syndicates Credit Act, which I think is in fact the implementation of that recommendation made by Mr. Gibbings at the time he appeared before the Committee. I do not intend to go through the details of that legislation because hon. Members are familiar with it, but it does provide a method for co-operative purchase and ownership of farm machinery, when three or more farmers wish to join together for the purposes of obtaining loans under this Act.

The legislation, as you know, Mr. Speaker, has been in effect for only a few months. Up to this time in Canada 46 syndicates have been established and have received some $500,000 in loans. This is the sort of thing that can and does help toward solving the problems of the farmer. There is a great deal more to be done and I would not suggest for a moment that that is not the case. However, I do believe that the steps this Government has taken have been of great assistance.

I should like to mention one or two other steps the Government has taken, if I may, which were included in the budget resolutions now before us. One is the provision for the write-off, in the year in which they are incurred, of all the expenses of draining and of clearing farm lands. I believe this is going to be very helpful, and this is the way a farmer can be realistically helped in his battle against rising prices of things he uses, and his battle for stabilized prices for the things he sells.

One other measure referred to in the budget resolutions that I wish to mention is the provision for storage and handling of grain, whereby purchase and construction costs may be written off in a much shorter period of time than has been the case heretofore. Again this is a practical demonstration of the things that can and in fact are being done to assist the farming industry.

That is about all I wish to say, but I want to conclude by suggesting, and I am sure many hon. Members on this side of the House will associate themselves with me in this belief, that I appreciate the sentiment and goodwill behind the motion moved by the hon. Member for Humboldt-Melfort-Tisdale (Mr. Rapp). That is one way of approaching this serious problem, but I hope that by my remarks I have to some extent shown that the problem is much broader and much more complex than would appear to be the case as reflected in the narrow, and I use that word in the sense of a specific approach, concept the hon. Member has mentioned.

Mr. Enns: Mr. Speaker, would the hon. Member permit a question?

Mr. Honey: Yes.

Mr. Enns: In his earlier remarks the hon. Member quoted some statistics to show how much money had been lent to farmers under the provisions of the Act sponsored by this Liberal Government. Would the hon. Member not agree that statistics regarding the increased amount of money lent to farmers does not show the whole picture? If ten tractors cost $20,000 ten years ago, there would be an entry of $20,000 in the statistical table, and if this year the same ten tractors cost $40,000, a comparison of the amounts of loans would not give a complete picture and might be misleading.

Mr. Honey: Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. Member has misunderstood me. I do not recall quoting any statistics to that effect. What I did say was, and I have not got the exact figures and suggest that the hon. Member check Hansard in this regard, that in the last four years there has been a shift in the relative cost of farm operations. Again I suggest the hon. Member check me by reading Hansard in this regard, but during the ten years after the war the greatest expense to a farmer related to farm machinery; but that expense has shifted so that, relatively speaking, labour and other costs of farm operations are taking more of the farmers' dollars today than machinery costs. I think those were the only statistics in that context which I used, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I shall be as brief as possible, but there are one or two pertinent points I want to raise. The hon. Member in moving this motion has brought a most important and serious matter to the attention of this House. However, I do not think the hon. Member meant exactly what his motion says. It reads:

> That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of appointing a Royal Commission to investigate the increased costs of farm machinery across Canada in relation to the price of farm products.

Surely what the hon. Member had in mind is not the relationship between the costs of farm machinery and the price of farm products, but rather the price of farm machinery in Canada. If that is tied in with the price of farm products, it does not mean the same thing. I may be wrong, but I take it the major question in the mind of the mover of this motion relates to the increase in the cost of farm machinery to the agriculturists of Canada.

I agree completely that this is a matter that should be of immediate concern, study and report. Unfortunately there is a great deal of misunderstanding as to the base of the cost of farm machinery. I have read article after article in this regard. I have talked to farmer after farmer and they all have the idea that the increased cost of farm machinery has been brought about because of increased labour costs. Steel is the basic material that goes into the production of farm machinery, and investigation will prove that the increased wages and fringe benefits given over the years to those working in the steel industry have not added to the cost of farm machinery, because the increase in production per man hour in that industry has more than compensated for the increased wages and fringe benefits of the workers.

There is another important aspect to the cost of farm machinery with regard to which we run into a problem, brought about by the fact that there are those who believe in the capitalist system of free enterprise and competition. The fact is that many different types of machinery are produced by different firms but all these machines are designed to do the same job. What is the result? Farm machinery costs are sky high because the supplier has to keep on hand parts for so many different types of machinery produced by so many different companies. If hon. Members sincerely want to reduce the cost of farm machinery they are going to have to decide to accept standardization based on the most efficient equipment to do the job. If that were done, carburetors, transmissions, gear boxes and so on would be interchangeable between various machines. If we continue to have six to a dozen different types of machinery all designed to do the same job, which means suppliers have to have the spare parts for all these machines, we will never get the price of farm machinery down to a level where it will not be such a major factor in the farmer's costs of production.

If the idea of the mover of the motion is, as I think it must be, that he wants a real study made of the costs of farm machinery resulting in recommendations to the Government and the House of Commons, and if he believes that the Government and the House of Commons will have the intestinal fortitude to do what is then required to bring down farm machinery prices to a level in keeping with the pocketbooks of the farmers, I think this will be a marvellous step forward. I said I would be very brief but I want to add that any inquiry must have the guts—I said "intestinal fortitude" but I will now say "guts"—to face up to the situation that nothing can be done in this regard under our competitive system unless we are prepared to accept standardization of equipment. If the hon. Member is prepared to have an investigation made with that idea in mind, then I say glory be to him for introducing this motion.

The hon. Member has asked for a Royal Commission. My personal opinion is that a Royal Commission is not required. A study, an investigation in depth, is required, and I believe that because of the experience we have had of certain studies in depth being made by special committees of the other place this would be an excellent task to give the other place, so they can do the same kind of job of investigation they have done with regard to at least two other matters and make a report to the Government and to Parliament.

An hon. Member: No.

Mr. Winch: One of my hon. friends says "no". I say that if you are not going to abolish the Senate, if you think there is a task the Senate can perform and that the Senate has a worth-while contribution to make, then this is exactly the kind of job we should give to that body. If you have not got that kind of faith in the Senate, then abolish it.

Mr. A. B. Patterson (Fraser Valley): Mr. Speaker, I think it is unfortunate that the Standing Committee which studied this matter in 1960 and 1961 was not able to complete its work and bring in recommendations. I agree with the hon. Member for Durham (Mr. Honey) that it is unfortunate the Committee was not reconstituted in the succeeding session to complete the work it began in 1960 and 1961.

I believe that the hon. Member for Humboldt-Melfort-Tisdale (Mr. Rapp) has pinpointed one of the problems that has been uppermost in the thinking of farmers right across the country, a problem that has been the subject of a great amount of study and investigation and has contributed greatly to stirring up feelings of resentment on the part of those who are being victimized, it seems, by the high costs of production while at the same time their products bring them such a low return. This was emphasized quite definitely in the submission of the National Farmers Union to the Government of Canada on March 1, 1965. On page 22 we find this statement:

> The high cost of farm implements is one of the commonest complaints among farmers. The cost index of farm machinery has increased more than two and a half times since 1940. As farms have decreased in number and increased in size, the investment in new farm machinery and repair parts has been steadily rising and the dependance of the farmer on equipment has increased proportionately.

In my view there are a number of things that enter into the high cost of machinery. There are those who argue that in actual fact the cost of machinery has not increased as much as appears on the surface. Reference was made by the hon. Member for Vancouver East (Mr. Winch) to the cost of steel. In an addendum to the submission of the National Farmers Union to the Government I find the following with reference to the increases in the basic price of steel:

> The inflationary implications in the rise of basic steel products are certain to have widespread repercussions. In the main body of our submission we have outlined to you the concern of farmers at the rising costs of production and declining prices of farm products. The price increases announced by the steel industry promise to increase costs of farm machinery, repair parts and other basic steel requirements of agriculture.

In addition to the increase in the cost of steel we must bear in mind the fact that more complicated and more costly types of machinery are required today. The fact is, of course, that such machinery is available, and naturally when new types of equipment are produced they are produced to be put to work for the benefit of the people. There is also the aspect that farm units are larger, with a resulting need for larger farm equipment. I believe this is one of the main reasons why costs of production are increasing so rapidly in the agricultural industry.

I should like to mention another point, the cost of financing. I believe the hon. Member for Durham referred to the very many ways in which the Government has made credit facilities available to the agricultural industry.

• (5:50 p.m.)

I know that it is absolutely essential that the farmer have access to the necessary capital and to credit. However, the thing that disturbs us is that, even with the opening up of additional facilities, the interest rate remains at a relatively high position. I believe that a move in the direction of lowering the interest rate would help tremendously to solve this particular problem.

I was told just this afternoon that in New Zealand farmers have access to capital at an interest rate of 1 per cent. I think any one of us can readily understand the tremendous benefit that such a program would be to agriculture, if instead of paying the rates that have been established they could find their capital requirements at an interest rate of 1 per cent. We can readily understand that this would reduce tremendously the cost of production. I believe therefore that this is one point to which we must give careful consideration in seeking to establish adequate credit facilities for farmers. We would then place the farmer in a better position to finance his operation.

I have been advised that at the present time the depreciation on farm machinery is equal to 50 per cent of the total cost of production. I think that is a startling fact, Mr. Speaker, and something that ought to cause us to agree to some very definite study being given to this matter, whether it is by Royal Commission or some other agency. This matter ought to be taken into consideration because if the depreciation on farm machinery is equal to 50 per cent of the cost of production, then something is seriously wrong. I was discussing this matter with a farmer not long ago and he said: You know, many of us are forced to live or exist on the depreciation on our machinery. This is an unfortunate situation. I believe, therefore, the hon. Member for Humboldt-Melfort-Tisdale (Mr. Rapp), and other Members who are interested in this subject, have a legitimate reason for requesting an adequate study of this matter in the interests of our farmers.

A suggestion was made that one of the necessary things is adequate farm prices. I do not know if the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Hays) is aware of this fact, but within the last few days I was discussing with some of the farmers of Quebec the new price formula for milk. I asked them if this was going to have any beneficial effect on their income. The reply of these farmers was, and I hope the Minister of Agriculture recognizes this, that immediately upon the announcement that there was to be a set price for manufactured milk, the tests were dropped and a lot of the farmers are no better off now than they were before. I do not know where the fault lies, but it does seem again that even though the farmer is assured of a set price for his milk, those who buy it immediately drop the test rate and he is not going to be any better off than he was before. This is something which ought to be taken into consideration.

I should like to refer briefly to a statement appearing in the Throne Speech concerning agriculture policy. I quote from page 3 Hansard for April 5, 1965:

> My Government is developing new policies to enable farmers generally to achieve larger and more reliable incomes so that their living and working standards will be comparable to those enjoyed in other sectors of our economy.

Now, reference was made by the hon. Member for Durham (Mr. Honey) to the many plans the Government has, some of which have been implemented. However, I believe the Government would be well advised to accede to this request that has been made to establish some body, whether it is a Royal Commission or some other agency, to go into this matter in detail and come up with some satisfactory solution to it. The suggestion was made again this afternoon that possibly the appointment of a Royal Commission was not the best idea, because the Government might be handicapped in bringing in remedial legislation in the meantime. I do not believe that would slow up the Government at all. They are slow enough. I do not believe this would affect that particular problem. I believe the Government should take this suggestion seriously, which has been introduced in the form of this motion, and give adequate consideration to the problem involved.

Mr. John Mullally (Kings): In the few moments remaining, I cannot attempt to cover the various items to which I should like to refer in connection with this particular motion introduced by the hon. Member for Humboldt-Melfort-Tisdale (Mr. Rapp). I join in the views expressed by my colleague, the hon. Member for Durham (Mr. Rapp), and tell him that we are concerned and interested in the problem, in the cost of farm machinery. However, I have to agree with my colleague and say it is not my view that a study by a Royal Commission will in any way assist in reaching a satisfactory solution of the problem.

There are three things I think I should mention very briefly, and which I think may help in reaching some satisfactory solution. They do not involve a study by a Royal Commission. First, I believe that the basis of the problem, and it is encompassed in the words of the resolution, is the fact that farmers are not receiving a fair return for their agricultural products. In order to enable farmers to buy machinery and to meet the other costs of farm operations, they must receive a better return for their agricultural products. Second, I think farmers will have to make more intelligent use of their farm machinery. In order to use machinery intelligently, they will have to have economic units. This most expensive and efficient machinery, such as we have today, cannot be effectively operated on a small farm. I feel, Mr. Speaker, that farmers should be encouraged to make a greater use of the legislation which has been enacted by this Parliament on the initiative of this Government. The hon. Member wishes them to acquire machinery, and they need to acquire it at a reasonable cost, at reasonable rates of interest.

An hon. Member: Six o'clock.

Mr. Mullally: May I call it six o'clock?

At six o'clock the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Thursday, June 10, 1965

The House met at 2.30 p.m.

FINANCE

ANNOUNCEMENT OF TERMINATION OF MUNICIPAL LOAN LEGISLATION

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I undertook to make a statement this week concerning the Government's policy regarding the Municipal Development and Loan Act.

This legislation was passed in the summer of 1963 as one item in a broad program to increase employment. It authorized a total of $400 million in loans to municipalities up until the end of March, 1966. This sum was allotted by the statute among the provinces in proportion to their population. It offered an inducement for the acceleration of work on municipal construction projects by providing for forgiveness of 25 per cent of the principal amount of the loan in respect of all loans on projects which were completed by the end of March, 1966, or in respect of the amount of the loan that had been advanced up to that time for projects not completed by that date.

I am pleased to report that this legislation has been a great success. During the course of the last two years over 1,500 loans have been approved to nearly 1,000 municipalities. Municipal works projects have been accelerated in accordance with the purpose of the legislation, and employment on municipal construction projects has thereby been increased. Each loan has been made after certification by the appropriate municipal and provincial authorities that it would give rise to additional works projects that would not have been undertaken without such assistance. This test of "additionality" was one of the most important and difficult features of the legislation. I am glad to acknowledge the co-operation of the municipalities and the provinces in the administration of the plan.

The report of the Municipal Development and Loan Board for the fiscal year ended 31 March, 1965 will be tabled in the House shortly, and will contain details of the loans made.

One of the problems we have run into in the administration of the Act is the precise effect of the termination date in limiting the amount of the loan which can be forgiven. There is no problem in respect of projects completed before 31 March 1966. However, it has been found in practice that it takes time to check on the progress of work done on projects and make advances in respect of them. Moreover, the agreements with the provinces under Section 7 of the Act provide for certain procedures which also result in some time interval before the advances can be made equivalent to the value of the work done up to any particular date.

To meet this problem I am submitting in the supplementary estimates an item to provide for the forgiveness of that portion of the principal amount of the loan that is advanced after the 31st day of March, 1966, with respect to the costs incurred on the project up to that date. I think this will meet the chief problem that has been of concern to the provinces, the municipalities and the Board in the administration of the statute.

Some projects for which loans have been made or will be made under this legislation will not be completed before next spring. This was contemplated in the legislation and specific provisions made for it, as indicated by the arrangements I have just mentioned in respect of uncompleted projects. It seems probable that the major part of the 100 million of potential forgiveness will be earned by the municipalities.

The Government has given careful consideration to whether this legislation should now be enlarged or extended. There is no doubt that it has been a success in increasing employment on municipal projects, which was the purpose for which it was introduced. The economic situation since the time the program was introduced has improved markedly. The results of other Government measures are improving and sustaining the level of employment and the rate of economic growth. The rate of unemployment declined from 5.8 per cent, seasonally adjusted, in the first quarter of 1963 to 4.0 per cent in the first quarter of 1965. In many parts of the country it is now at considerably lower levels than the average for the country as a whole. Efforts to stimulate employment in the construction industry particularly by further measures applicable in these areas would be inappropriate.

Furthermore, it would be quite impractical to endeavour to continue indefinitely to apply the "additionality" test in respect of municipal projects, and this is the key feature of this legislation. Such a test, though difficult, can be applied in respect of a temporary program covering a short period such as this was meant to be. It cannot be applied on a permanent basis.

I should remind hon. Members that this legislation was never intended to be a permanent source of loan finance for municipalities. It has of course been a most helpful source of finance for them during this period when acceleration of their programs was desirable.

The effects of the Canada and Quebec pension plans will be to build up funds available to the provinces. In the future these funds may be used to assist very substantially in the financing of capital projects both of the provinces themselves and, directly or indirectly, of the municipalities. These funds will be available at interest rates comparable with those provided for under this legislation. Consequently we see no need to continue this in a modified form simply as a source of loanable funds for municipal purposes.

Some suggestions have been made that the period during which forgiveness on the loans could be earned should be extended to enable some municipalities which did not take advantage of the loans at an earlier date to secure the benefit of this. The Government has considered this proposal and has come to the conclusion that to adopt it would not be fair to those municipalities which made great efforts to expedite their work in accordance with the essential purpose of the legislation. Moreover, we must recognize that if we introduce proposals such as this, intended to expedite projects at a time when additional work is desirable, and then modify them to make the benefits available over longer periods, we tend to undermine the effectiveness of any such action in the future.

If at some future time a change in economic circumstances should make it appropriate or necessary for the Federal Government to offer inducements to expedite capital projects generally or those in any particular field such as municipal projects, the Government will be quite prepared to consider them and to consult with the Provincial Governments concerning them. Should the result of such consideration and consultation lead to the conclusion that action along these lines would be desirable, we will not hesitate to place proposals before Parliament designed to attain this end. It would be best, however, if such proposals were specifically tailored to the situation then prevailing, taking into account the experience we have had with the Municipal Development and Loan Act as well as with other measures that have been introduced in the past two years and in earlier periods.

[Mr. Gordon.]

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, two years ago when the Minister of Finance announced the Municipal Development and Loan Act he did so with the aid of a tremendous propaganda machine which inflated the plan all out of proportion in the minds of the people and gave the impression that something was going to be done together with the provinces to provide employment in Canada. The plan was actually inflated beyond its real worth, because only two years later the Minister is now telling us he is going to drop it.

Only 1,000 out of some 4,500 municipalities in Canada have participated in the plan and the reason they did so was that they were able to get at a lower rate of interest the same loans they would have obtained in any event, and in addition there was a 25 per cent forgiveness clause. Even so, only 1,000 out of some 4,500 municipalities took advantage of the plan. This in itself shows that the plan has been a complete failure—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Starr: —because no work was undertaken under the plan that would not have been undertaken ordinarily, since municipalities do not obtain loans or undertake projects they do not need. These projects would have been undertaken in any event, and the benefit the municipalities derived was in the fact that they were able to get a low interest rate and forgiveness of 25 per cent of the cost of the project if completed by March 31, 1963.

I do not see the reason for dropping this plan at this moment, because I feel that those who would like to participate in it should have been given an opportunity to do so, even though the plan has not been a success in any manner or form, nor has it lived up to the propaganda the Minister attached to it.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, there will be widespread disappointment at the announcement which has just been made by the Minister of Finance to the effect that the Government does not intend to continue and expand the municipal development and loan legislation. Municipalities which have had applications before their respective Provincial Governments for some time, only to find that the funds allocated to those particular Provinces have been depleted, will now be rejected completely for no other reason than that they happened to be at the bottom of the list and their applications were not processed before the funds ran out. It seems to me most unfair that those municipalities whose applications were late in being dealt with, through no fault of their own, are not to have the benefit of this legislation.

The reason given by the Minister for not asking Parliament to increase the funds available under this legislation is that the unemployment situation is now satisfactory. This will be news to the people across Canada when the unemployment figure is still much higher than in most of the countries of Western Europe. If the Government are going to discontinue this plan on the ground that unemployment is not a serious problem, then at least they ought to continue the plan in those areas where the unemployment figure is above the national average. To wipe it out all across Canada on the ground that the Minister of Finance, sitting in his ivory tower, thinks that unemployment has disappeared will arouse a great deal of resentment in Canada.

The impression this Government gave, both prior to the election and at the time this legislation was introduced, was that the Municipal Development and Loan Act was a response to the requests of Provincial Governments and the conference of mayors and municipalities for a municipal loan bank or a permanent municipal fund upon which municipalities could call for assistance. This has certainly been the impression which the Liberal Party has sought to create in Canada. Now the Minister tells the municipalities this was only a temporary measure, that the funds have been exhausted and he does not intend to continue the program.

This will cause a great deal of discontent and dissatisfaction. The Government is now passing up a golden opportunity to participate in the improvement of municipal services in Canada. We in this party have been claiming throughout the years that Canada has starved its municipal and social services, and the fact that municipalities now will not be able to get the benefits of this legislation means that many municipal projects which otherwise would have been proceeded with will have to be forgotten.

I think, Mr. Speaker, that the municipalities will be extremely disappointed, and I am certain the Minister has not heard the end of this matter.

[Translation]

Mr. Maurice Côté (Chicoutimi): Mr. Speaker, it seems regrettable that the hon. Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon) should announce that the loans to municipalities will be discontinued, in view of the number of such loans which were granted during the short period that the act was in force. In fact, 1,500 loans were granted to 1,000 municipalities. This shows that municipalities must borrow in order to carry out their plans for beautifying and improving their communities. Henceforth, they will be prevented from taking advantage of loans at reasonable interest rates.

On the other hand, we are aware of all the loans which are contracted through investment brokers. Naturally, a very small amount of money was borrowed through this act, because hundreds of millions were loaned through stock brokers. But to date, Mr. Speaker, the act has not gone far enough. We should have set up a municipal credit bank as advocated by us in this house. I think this would be the right time to set up such a bank in order to lower municipal taxes and provide for certain developments as suggested by the hon. Secretary of State (Mr. Lamontagne) in the wonderful speech he made yesterday or a few days ago, when he urged municipalities to make all kinds of developments and improvements in connection with the confederation centennial. Only a municipal credit bank could make such loans at the administrative rate to enable municipalities to carry out those projects.

Someone suggested a while ago that such a loan system should be maintained in underdeveloped areas. Of course, it is a very interesting suggestion, because underdeveloped areas need loan facilities at reduced rates more than others.

Mr. Speaker, I therefore urge the Minister of Finance to reconsider his decision and to take into consideration the setting up of a municipal credit bank which would assist our municipalities by lending them money at the administrative rate.

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, we are very pleased to hear the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon) tell us about the success of the Municipal Development and Loan Act.

In fact, the Minister has announced that almost 1,500 loans were made to some 1,000 Canadian municipalities and have proven themselves to be an efficient weapon against unemployment, that the municipalities which have borrowed at a reasonable interest rate have enjoyed advantages unknown to them previously.

That leads me to say to the Minister of Finance that as a result of our numerous suggestions since he has taken over his department, he is not so dumb; when we ask him to provide the provinces with the necessary funds for their development enabling them to help the municipalities and the school boards with interest-free credit created by the Bank of Canada, he knows that such legislation makes sense and could be passed by the house.

Should he do so, I am convinced he would be highly satisfied to have been of service not only to a section of the people but to every Canadian and he would realize what a tremendous success it would be to finance without interest the whole Canadian public administration so that the taxpayers would not have to pay two or three times for the services available to them. Is there a municipality today which does not need improvement or economic development?

Instead of informing us that this scheme will be discontinued on March 31, 1966, the Minister of Finance should inform us that as of now he will follow a new policy, making the services of the Bank of Canada available to the provinces, the municipalities and school boards of our country.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

TWENTY FIFTH ANNIVERSARY OF DEATH OF HON. NORMAN MCLEOD ROGERS

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I beg the indulgence of the House to permit me to refer to the tragedy of 25 years ago today, when a former Minister of National Defence was killed in an airplane crash.

The late Norman Rogers was honoured on June 12, 1940, by burial from the Houses of Parliament. Born at Amherst, Nova Scotia, in 1894, Norman Rogers served Canada in many capacities. He was Minister of Labour in the Mackenzie King government from 1935 to 1939, and from 1939 until his death was Minister of National Defence. An extract from the diary of the late Right Hon. Mackenzie King reads:

> As long as Canadian history continues to be recorded, Rogers' name will have its association with the Houses of Parliament as the first person to be honoured by burial from its Hall of Fame. This truly is as it ought to be.

I know that all hon. Members of the House will wish to join in paying tribute to the memory of this great Canadian, the late Hon. Norman McLeod Rogers.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, time flies and these events sometimes are effaced in memory. I remember that day very well. I asked Hon. Norman Rogers the last question that he was asked before he left on that fateful trip. Norman Rogers was a man who had a wide variety of avocations; an outstanding student, a fine parliamentarian, soldier of distinction in the First World War. Parliament and Canada were poorer when he passed away.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, may I associate the members of this group with the remarks that have been made on the twenty fifth anniversary of the death of Hon. Norman Rogers. I had the privilege of sitting in the House with him and I know of the great public service he gave to Canada. I also remember the great shock that was felt throughout this House when the news came of his untimely death. I think the Minister has done well to remind Parliament and the Canadian people, on the anniversary of his death, of the fine service which he rendered to his country.

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, it was not my privilege nor that of anyone in our party to have known Hon. Norman Rogers personally, but certainly on many, many occasions I have heard him spoken of very highly, and we recognize the service that he gave to his country. I too remember the day very well, from outside this House, when that unfortunate accident took place. We join the Minister of National Defence and on this twenty fifth anniversary add our own words of remembrance of the service of this distinguished Canadian to his nation.

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration): Mr. Speaker, if you would pardon a personal note, when I was a very young man I had the honour and privilege of rooming with Norman Rogers during the period when he was a student at Dalhousie Law School. There was not a day that I was with him that I did not benefit from that association. I would like to add my personal tribute to those of the Minister and the others who have spoken.

Mr. Raymond Langlois (Mégantic): Mr. Speaker, on this occasion we of this party would like to underline with the Minister of National Defence this twenty fifth anniversary of the death of the late Minister of National Defence. We think of all the good this man did, not only for his country but for mankind. It also makes us think that we should try to build more men of that calibre, not that they might have such fatal accidents as a result of which the late Minister died, but so they can be a guiding light to men of this country in the future. I believe the Minister has done a very good thing today in reminding us of this twenty fifth anniversary.

DIVORCE

MEASURE TO PROVIDE FOR EXTENSION OF GROUNDS

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming) moved for leave to introduce Bill No. C-114, to provide in Canada for the dissolution and the annulment of marriage.

Some hon. Members: Explain.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Speaker, in introducing this Bill today I am reminded of statements that have been made in a number of provincial parliaments, including the recent one by Andy Thompson, the leader of the Liberal Party in Ontario, who has indicated that a vehicle must be provided for improving the divorce legislation of our country.

The Federal Government, of course, must pass the substantive legislation. I have suggested in this Bill provisions that some of our sister Commonwealth countries such as New Zealand and Australia have recently brought into their legislation, in adding to adultery, which is now the only ground for divorce in the majority of the Provinces of Canada, the grounds of desertion over a period of three years, cruelty and incurable insanity.

I put forward this measure only as a vehicle for the Government so they may provide a vehicle to the Provinces which are now crying out for this type of legislation.

Motion agreed to and bill read the first time.

Inquiries of the Ministry

BANK ACT AND QUEBEC SAVINGS BANKS ACT

EXTENSION OF CHARTERS TO DECEMBER 31, 1965

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance) moved that the House go into Committee at the next sitting to consider the following resolution, which has been recommended to the House by His Excellency:

That it is expedient to introduce a measure to amend the Bank Act and the Quebec Savings Banks Act to extend to December 31, 1965, the authority to carry on business for the banks to which these Acts apply.

Motion agreed to.

FINANCE

INQUIRY AS TO POSSIBLE TAX REDUCTIONS

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, following the extraordinary announcement made by the Minister of Finance today I am wondering whether he is giving consideration to other action to be taken before we adjourn, namely action for the reduction of taxation as demanded by such business leaders as the president and retiring president of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, all of this in view of the further decline today in the stock markets in Canada and the United States. What has the Government in mind to meet a situation so paradoxical as is occurring at the moment?

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, if my right hon. friend will have patience until the beginning of next week, I hope to move the resolution that was forecast in the budget proposing a reduction in personal income taxes of 10 per cent—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Gordon: —the greatest reduction in 12 years.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): You mean you got the biggest raise.

Mr. Diefenbaker: The hon. gentleman spoke with enthusiasm on that because he benefits to the extent of $600. I had nothing to do with bringing it in, but the hon. gentleman did. I would ask the hon. gentleman this question. In view of the fact that he and many of those associated with him today on the Government benches voted in favour of interest free loans from the Bank of Canada in November 1962, and supported the principles of Social Credit, does he not think that if he was sincere at that time this would be one time when he should fall in line with the views that he voted for?

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Speaker, I tried to follow that question. It seems to me the right hon. gentleman was emulating the style of the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Mr. Starr: Wait till he hears that.

Mr. Bell: You would not say that if he was there.

Mr. Gordon: If I am right in thinking the right hon. gentleman was asking me whether the Government favoured the policies put forward by the Social Credit party, the answer is no.

Mr. Starr: Then why did you vote for them?

Mr. Diefenbaker: Well, so there is no mistake, has the hon. gentleman changed his views since he voted in favour of this, something which we voted against but which he and his associates supported?

An hon. Member: Yes or no?

MUNICIPAL DEVELOPMENT LOAN FUND—USE OF UNALLOTTED AMOUNTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, perhaps I can get the Minister of Finance to shed his veil of silence by asking him a question with respect to the municipal development and loan fund legislation regarding which he made an announcement this afternoon. Could the Minister tell the House whether all the funds which were voted by Parliament are likely to be used up? If they are not completely depleted in all the provinces, is there any possibility that whatever is left could be allocated to the provinces which have already reached their maximum allocation but still have applications on hand?

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, it is difficult to say categorically that the funds allocated to every province will be used up to the extent of the full 100 per cent, because it is too soon; this program has another nine months to run. Therefore, as I cannot forecast this particular matter, I think it would be inappropriate for me to indulge in speculation.

Mr. Douglas: A supplementary question. Could I ask the Minister whether the Government would give consideration at least to processing the applications which provincial governments have on hand? This may require additional funds but would not need a great amount in addition, and would also not penalize the municipalities whose applications were late in being dealt with.

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Speaker, I am sure my hon. friend and all other hon. Members of the House who recall the passage of this legislation, which I was glad to hear others agree has been a great success, know that the administration and allocation of the funds as among municipalities was left, and properly so, to the provinces concerned. In some cases, I think in most cases, the provinces felt that only they were in a position to determine whether it was wise for a particular municipality to be granted a loan for a particular purpose. To suggest that the Federal Government should interfere in this arrangement which has worked very satisfactorily would not, I think, be a wise suggestion to accept.

Mr. Douglas: A supplementary question. Surely the Minister is aware that I did not suggest interference. I asked the Minister whether the Government was prepared to consider providing additional funds to cover applications which were already on hand to be processed in those provinces where the funds which were allocated have been depleted.

Mr. Gordon: I apologize if I misunderstood my hon. friend's question. The processing of these applications is a matter for the provinces. They have held some of them up, presumably intentionally. They knew how much money was available for the municipalities in their provinces and they proceeded to allocate it as they thought best. I think it would not be the intention of the Government in any way to interfere in that process.

[Translation]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a supplementary question.

The Minister of Finance just said that all those loans to municipalities are usually approved by the provinces. Did the federal government ever make a loan directly to a municipality?

If the municipality must apply to the provincial authorities in the first place, and if the latter then apply to the federal government in order to obtain the required funds, can the Minister of Finance tell us if the federal government has made a direct loan to a municipality in Canada? In other words, must the municipalities go through the provinces in order to obtain a loan?

[English]

Mr. Gordon: In almost all cases, Mr. Speaker, it is the province that decides, as my hon. friend has suggested. But under the Act there is provision for the Federal Government to act directly if the province concerned wishes it to do so, and I think this was the case with one or two provinces.

Mr. G. L. Chatterton (Esquimalt-Saanich): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. It might be the case that the $400 million appropriated by Parliament would not be used up at the end of the program. Would the Minister consider giving a further allocation to the provinces which have exhausted their funds, on the understanding that any applications outstanding would be financed only if any money was left over from the $400 million?

Mr. Gordon: I think, Mr. Speaker, I have made this reasonably clear. I have pointed out to my hon. friend that this particular measure was designed to spur employment opportunities quickly, and it succeeded in doing that. It was not intended as a permanent source of finance for the municipalities. Parliament in its wisdom decided that the program should terminate on March 31, 1966. That is provided for in the Act. Unless the Act is changed that is what will take place, and I have been saying that we are not proposing to change the act.

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Queens): Mr. Speaker, since the Minister has become a coiner of words as well as a minter of money, will he take steps to suppress that horror which he used twice today—"additionality"?

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Speaker, I have already had a note of protest about this particular word from the hon. Member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands. When I came to the word some hon. Members may have noticed that I paused—I paused or choked—because I did not like it. It is a form of jargon which I deplore. However, it has been widely used, and I did not think it was up to me at this late date to choose another word.

Inquiries of the Ministry

NATIONAL DEFENCE

PARTICIPATION BY ARMED FORCES IN LOCAL EVENTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, the basis for my question is the military parade which will take place on Saturday, which I think most of us agree is a very good thing. However, it is apparently contradictory to the policy of the Government in refusing requests for participation in local parades, air shows and local fairs across the nation. I am referring specifically to the refusal of a request for the traditional fly-past at the opening of the exhibition in my home city, an event which has been carried on for 25 years, and the air show on the Pacific coast, which has recently been rejected—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Thompson: Is the Minister considering reversing this policy so that our permanent military forces can take part in these local fairs and air shows across the nation?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of National Defence): The policy which has been in effect for a number of years does make provision for participation in the celebration of armed forces days across the country and at the international air show in Toronto, the Calgary air show and so on. With respect to participation by planes in local activities, this question is under study to determine whether the regulations can be relaxed. As soon as a decision has been taken I will be glad to inform the hon. Member.

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): Can the Minister of National Defence tell us the approximate cost of the super-spectacle on Saturday?

Mr. Hellyer: The Associate Minister has taken this question as notice and I think he will be answering it in a day or two.

WATER LEVELS

QUEBEC—LETTER RESPECTING RAIN MAKING OPERATIONS

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Transport.

Can the minister tell us whether he has received today a letter from the Weather Engineering Service, and can he also tell us whether he has acknowledged the order issued by Mr. René Lévesque, the Quebec Minister of Natural Resources, for good weather and sunshine over the Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean area?

[English]

Hon. J. W. Pickersgill (Minister of Transport): Yes, Sir. I have received a letter from Mr. Power, and it is not exactly the kind of letter I expected to receive from him. I have also read certain observations about this gentleman made by Mr. René Lévesque, and this is one occasion upon which I am inclined to agree with Mr. Lévesque.

PARLIAMENT HILL

PROVISION FOR PARKING FOR TOURIST BUSES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Lloyd Francis (Carleton): I wish to address a question to the Minister of Public Works. Is the Minister prepared to make any announcement with regard to temporary parking for the buses which bring tourists and school children to this House? A large percentage of them are obliged to travel around the city for lack of temporary parking facilities. Is there a possibility of using the site formerly occupied by Laurentian Terrace, on Sussex Street, for this purpose?

Some hon. Members: Order paper.

Mr. Speaker: I realize the importance of this question, and I believe the matter has been under consideration for some time. However, it seems to me the question is one which should be put on the order paper.

FORESTRY

REMOVAL OF DEPARTMENT LABORATORIES TO SAULT STE. MARIE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. D. M. Fisher (Port Arthur): I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Forestry.

An hon. Member: Ten o'clock.

Mr. Fisher: I was waiting to see whether the Minister was listening. I understand the Minister is reviewing a decision whether to concentrate federal forestry research at Sault Ste. Marie or at Richmond Hill—Maple. In view of information reaching me that preparations are under way for a move to Sault Ste. Marie, has the Minister any further information to give the House?

[Mr. Grégoire.]

Hon. Maurice Sauvé (Minister of Forestry): There is no change in the announcement made on February 18.

Mr. Fisher: I wonder whether the Minister may be spending so much time reforming the Liberal Party in Quebec that he has not got around to making a decision.

FISHERIES

NORTH PACIFIC TREATY—DATE OF MEETING

On the orders of the day:

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Queens): I should like to address a question to the Minister of Fisheries and ask him whether a date has yet been set for this year's meeting regarding the North Pacific Fisheries Treaty, which I understand is to take place in Washington. In the light of the importance of the matters to be discussed at this meeting I think it is desirable we should know when it is to be held.

Hon. H. J. Robichaud (Minister of Fisheries): No specific date has been set. As the hon. Member knows, I have already stated in the House that the United States will be the host country for this meeting. It is proposed to hold it some time this fall, but no specific date has been set.

PRIVILEGE

MR. SOUTHAM—REPLY TO QUESTION ON ORDER PAPER

On the others of the day:

Mr. R. R. Southam (Moose Mountain): I wish to rise at this time on a question of privilege. It has to do with a question that I placed on the order paper on May 18 and the answer I received yesterday. The question was answered by the Minister of Trade and Commerce; I am sorry he is not here today to listen to this.

In order to place my question of privilege clearly before Members of the House I should like to refer to Hansard of June 9, page 2153, and read the question with the answers I received. The question is listed as No. 496, and it is in my name. It has to do with control of expenditures in connection with Expo '67. We are all aware that this is a subject which is exercising the minds of the public at the present time; they would like to have further information regarding this exhibition. This is the question I asked:

1. What controls are exercised by the Federal Government to prevent wasteful and improvident expenditures being made by the Director of Expo '67?

2. In how many instances, with the amounts thereof in each case, to date have expenditures been (a) disallowed, and in what amounts (b) reduced, because of objections thereto taken by representatives of the Department of Trade and Commerce?

This is the answer given by the Minister of Trade and Commerce:

1. The control of expenditures exercised by the management of the Canadian World Exhibition Corporation is based on the requirements set forth in the incorporating Act and involves:

(a) the approval of the Governor in Council and the Lieutenant Governor in Council of the over-all plan for the Exhibition, setting forth the various undertakings and projects proposed by the Corporation in connection with the planning, organizing, holding and administering of the Exhibition, the estimated cost of each such undertaking or project and an estimate of the total capital costs and operating costs of the Corporation—

Hon. J. W. Pickersgill (Minister of Transport): I wonder whether the hon. gentleman could tell us the nature of the question of privilege before he reads at length from Hansard.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: I was about to suggest to the hon. Member that if he would state his question of privilege we could probably dispense with a little of the preamble.

Mr. Southam: I am almost finished. I will read the balance of it.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Speaker: Order. The hon. Member was requested by the Chair to skip the extraneous part of the preamble. The material is on record in Hansard already. Perhaps he would come directly to his question of privilege in order to save the time of the House.

Mr. Southam: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My question of privilege is this, and I think it will be evident to every hon. Member who will read the answer I received. This answer is completely evasive and I think is entirely misleading to Members of the House. I intend to reintroduce part of this question which was on the order paper in the hope that I may receive a complete answer.

SHIPPING

INQUIRY AS TO RESUMPTION OF SHIPBUILDING SUBSIDIES

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. L. J. Pigeon (Joliette-L'Assomption-Montcalm): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Transport.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Does the government intend to adopt a shipbuilding subsidy policy in order to promote the development of a genuine Canadian merchant marine and, at the same time, help reduce unemployment in Canada?

[English]

Hon. J. W. Pickersgill (Minister of Transport): The hon. gentleman was good enough to send me the press clipping upon which he based his question. It raises broad matters of policy which cannot possibly be answered in response to a question asked on orders of the day.

PUBLIC WORKS

BRITISH COLUMBIA—USE OF PRISON LABOUR IN PENITENTIARY PAINTING

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): I desire to direct a question to the Minister of Public Works. Notice has already been sent to him. My question is of an urgent nature because the affirmation or reconsideration of the decision which is involved requires immediate attention.

I should like to ask the Minister whether he is in receipt of a telegram from the painter's union in Vancouver protesting the intended use of penitentiary inmates to do the painting work on the new—and I repeat the word "new"—multimillion dollar Federal Drug Institution being constructed in British Columbia. If so, what consideration is being given to the request of the union that on new construction—and again I emphasize the word "new"—penitentiary labour should not be used?

Hon. Lucien Cardin (Minister of Public Works): I have received the telegram to which the hon. Member refers. It is true that inmates are to be used for the interior painting of a penitentiary. Whether the penitentiary is new or whether the work is to be done in connection with maintenance does not change the principle.

I must say I am a little surprised at the attitude of the union in this matter, because I think all hon. Members know that under the Department of Justice rehabilitation is an increasingly important objective of our penal institutions. In that regard this type of work and other work comprise part of the inmate training program which has been quite successful in rehabilitating inmates.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Since inmates of the penitentiary are being used to do work that would ordinarily be done by others at regular rates of pay, will the Department together with the Department of Justice give consideration to paying the inmates regular wages which would be held and given to them on their release? That would really help to rehabilitate them.

Mr. Cardin: Mr. Speaker, I will be happy to discuss this matter with the Minister of Justice.

AGRICULTURE

QUEBEC—PROPOSED MARCH OF FARMERS ON OTTAWA

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Lessard (Lac-Saint-Jean): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Minister of Agriculture concerning a decision that has just been made by the members of the U.C.C. of the Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean area, namely that they will march on Ottawa.

Is the Minister of Agriculture aware that such a decision has been taken unanimously by the farmers of the Saguenay-Lac-Saint-Jean area, and is he getting ready to receive them, to listen to their point of view, in order to find a solution to their problem?

[English]

Hon. Harry W. Hays (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, we are willing, of course, to listen to any group of farmers who may come to Ottawa. As hon. Members know, the responsibility for providing relief for crop disasters is that of the Provincial Government. The Federal Government does, however, have a crop insurance scheme under which it will contribute to provincial programs 20 per cent of the total premiums and 50 per cent of the operation costs.

In so far as assisting agriculture is concerned, I should like to point out that during 1964, for example, Federal grants and subsidies paid to agriculture in the Province of Quebec amounted to $41,433,000, which was approximately 28 per cent of the total payments made across Canada. On a per farm basis Federal assistance during that year in the Province of Quebec averaged $432 per farm compared with the national average payment per farm of $304.

Hon. Paul Martineau (Pontiac-Témiscamingue): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. The farmers of the Lake St. John region apparently are plagued by too much rain, but I want to ask the Minister whether he is contemplating any emergency measures to help those farmers of the Ottawa valley who are affected because there is not enough rain, with the result that drought conditions are the worst in many years.

[Mr. Orlikow.]

Mr. Hays: Mr. Speaker, in this regard one does not know if one is afoot or on horseback. I can assure the hon. Member that we are very sympathetic to the farmers of both regions. So far as the Lake St. John area is concerned, I do not think the Federal Government has any responsibility with regard to rain making.

Mr. Martineau: Mr. Speaker, I am more interested at the moment in the farmers of the Ottawa valley. I am sure the Minister has received representations from many associations of farmers in that area. Has he taken note of these representations, and is he taking any special steps?

Mr. Hays: Mr. Speaker, these representations should first be made to the Province. In this regard may I say that on Tuesday afternoon in Toronto I discussed the drought problem with the Ontario Minister of Agriculture. We are all greatly concerned about this matter, but at the moment we have had no representations from the Province.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

QUEBEC CITY—SECURITY REPORTS IN ENGLISH ONLY

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Robert Beaulé (Quebec East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Justice.

Is the minister now in a position to reply to the question I asked him on May 12 concerning the preparation of the R.C.M.P. reports at Quebec harbour?

Hon. Guy Favreau (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, all members of the R.C.M.P. at Quebec harbour are bilingual and may use any one of the two official languages. However, they have had verbal instructions to report any complaint they receive in the language it was made. As for administration directives dealing with security, they are all given in both French and English.

[English]

AIR TRANSPORT

AUTAIR HELICOPTERS LTD.—APPEAL FROM BOARD ORDER

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Fernand E. Leblanc (Laurier): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Transport.

Did the minister receive a notice of appeal from Autair Helicopter Services Limited concerning Order No. 4245 of the Air Transport Board and, if so, could he tell the house how he dealt with that appeal?

[English]

Hon. J. W. Pickersgill (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I did receive such an appeal, and I disposed of it yesterday by allowing the appeal which asked that the suspension of the licence should not take place until there had been a public hearing. It might be convenient for hon. Members if I were to table the three documents concerned, the order of the Board, the appeal and the judgment I made on the appeal.

Hon. Paul Martineau (Pontiac-Témiscamingue): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. In view of the fact that about 100 persons now employed will be thrown out of work because of the order of the Air Transport Board, will the Minister consider staying the suspension of the firms operations until the appeal has been disposed of?

Mr. Pickersgill: That is precisely what I did, of course, by allowing the appeal. The appeal was against suspension before a hearing had been held, and I agreed with the appellant that a hearing should be held before there was any suspension of the licence.

Mr. Martineau: Is the Minister then stating that the company will be allowed to continue its operations pending the appeal hearing?

Mr. Pickersgill: That is precisely the purport of the judgment, which the hon. Member can read.

INQUIRY OF THE MINISTRY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Lawrence E. Kindt (Macleod): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Finance. What action do he and the Government intend to take to prevent the flight of capital from Canada resulting from the drop in the stock market and the policies of the Government?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. I find this question extremely interesting but I do not see how in the next two or three minutes it is possible to give a detailed reply to this very important question.

COMMONWEALTH RELATIONS

REPORTED PROPOSAL FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF REPESENTATIVE ASSEMBLY

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for External Affairs, both for a very good reason, I should like to direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister. Has the Government of the United Kingdom or the Secretary of State for Commonwealth Relations, Right Hon. Arthur George Bottomley, indicated to the Canadian Government that at the Prime Ministers' Conference a recommendation will be made by that Minister for the setting up among the Commonwealth nations of a representative assembly? What is going to be the attitude of Canada in this regard? I ask this question because there is no possibility of discussing this matter; and may I indicate at once that in asking the question I am not giving any support whatever to the suggestion.

Hon. J. W. Pickersgill (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, in the first place, obviously this is a question with regard to which I have no information. I have not heard of any such proposition but in any case I would hesitate, with my limited capacities, to answer it. The Prime Minister will be in his place tomorrow, and I am sure he will be glad to have had notice so he can prepare the very careful reply that I am sure he will wish to make to so far reaching a suggestion.

CANADIAN CENTENNIAL

MEETING BETWEEN MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT AND COMMISSION MEMBERS

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Gustave Blouin (Saguenay): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Secretary of State.

Could he tell the house whether a date has been set for a meeting of hon. members of parliament with the members of the Centennial Commission concerning the programs and projects of that commission?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, the date was suggested and even set for next Tuesday, at 9:30 a.m. in room 307 of the West Block.

[English]

INDUSTRY

STEPS TO MEET REPORTED STEEL SHORTAGE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Industry. In view of the increasingly grave shortage of steel in Canada and the consequent serious increase in the number of lay-offs in secondary industry all across the country, what emergency measures are being taken by the Government to relieve this shortage of steel and thus prevent further lay-offs in secondary industry dependant on steel supplies?

Hon. C. M. Drury (Minister of Industry): During the past 12 months there has been a substantial increase in the demand for steel in Canada. This has been consequent upon the upsurge in economic activity. This has been met in the interim by a significant increase in imports, mostly from the United States and Europe, as well as by bringing on stream a substantial amount of new Canadian production. I think the shortages and the time lag on deliveries which has been experienced over the last 12 months are likely on the way to being cured.

Mr. Nesbitt: If these shortages should continue and increase—I realize this question is slightly hypothetical—would the Minister give consideration to recommending to his colleagues that the import duties on steel from certain countries be temporarily withdrawn until the shortage is over?

Mr. Drury: While accepting this as a hypothetical question, I may say that it would not be apparent to me that a change, temporary or otherwise, in the tariff on steel would materially affect the supply.

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Lessard (Lac-Saint-Jean): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a supplementary question to the Minister of Industry. Could he tell the house whether the Quebec authorities, in order to achieve their SIDBEC project, have requested the good offices of the federal government, from the technological, scientific as well as monetary standpoints?

Mr. Drury: Mr. Speaker, there have been discussions about SIDBEC between officials of the federal Department of Industry and those of the provincial department. Moreover, the federal authorities are always ready to give as much help and advice as possible.

BROADCASTING

INQUIRY AS TO REPORT OF FOWLER COMMITTEE

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Secretary of State.

I have been asking him repeatedly now for the past three or four months what the C.B.C. intends to do concerning extension of its radio and television services in British Columbia to serve the French population of that province. But the Secretary of State has always replied that the Fowler Commission would be presenting its report.

Furthermore, that report was to be presented in May. This is mid-June and we do not have it yet. Could the Secretary of State tell us today when that famous Fowler Commission report will definitely be presented and, more particularly, when the French speaking citizens of British Columbia will receive the same treatment by the C.B.C. as their English fellow citizens of the province of Quebec?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, because of very complex studies, the publication of the Fowler Commission report has been delayed, but Mr. Fowler assured me recently that the report would definitely be ready and published early in September.

My hon. friend can be assured that, as soon as the Fowler Commission recommendations are received, action will be taken as quickly as possible.

[English]

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): May I ask a supplementary question of the Secretary of State. In view of the fact that this time last year it was indicated the Fowler report would be ready early this year, and in view of the fact that it has been postponed on three or four occasions, will the Secretary of State not consider asking the Government to give consideration to making the grant suggested by the C.B.C. to carry out this extension of service, which is greatly needed in the north?

Mr. Lamontagne: The Government is of the view that we should wait for the recommendations of the Fowler Committee. Since this is the most serious investigation which has ever been made into broadcasting in Canada, I do not believe a study of a year and a half is too long.

Mr. D. M. Fisher (Port Arthur): I should like to ask the Secretary of State if he would consider approaching the Board of Broadcast Governors and asking them to suspend any awards or grants of licences for the extension of service until we have the Fowler Commission report.

Mr. Lamontagne: Well, Mr. Speaker, I should like to check on this, but my view is that the freeze on the extension of alternative service is still on.

Mr. Fisher: May I ask a supplementary question. I would refer the Minister to the hearings that are being held next week at which both the C.B.C. and a number of private stations have applications for extension of service. In view of the fact that the Minister does not seem to be informed of this, I wonder if he could look into the matter a little more thoroughly.

Mr. Lamontagne: I will.

Mr. Simpson: I wonder if the Secretary of State could inform the House how the Government can justify waiting until the Fowler Committee makes this report before approving any further extensions of service, when they allow the capital expenditures of the C.B.C. to carry on into the hundreds of millions of dollars when for a few million dollars they could extend services. How can this be justified?

Mr. Lamontagne: I should like to tell my hon. friend that the extension of service has not been stopped, and there are several millions included in the C.B.C. estimates for this year for that purpose.

[Later:]

[Translation]

Mr. L. J. Pigeon (Joliette-L'Assomption-Montcalm): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Secretary of State.

Should the Fowler Commission recommend in its report the extension of the C.B.C.'s French network wherever there is a French speaking minority, can the Secretary of State assure the house that the Government will ask the C.B.C. to give effect to such a recommendation?

Mr. Lamontagne: Mr. Speaker, the party to which I belong has already taken a very definite position on that matter.

[English]

HOUSE OF COMMONS

CONSIDERATION OF STAFF BOARD REPORT ON STAFF

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Lloyd Francis (Carleton): I should like to ask the President of the Privy Council if he has any further information on the subject of increases for certain members of the staff of the House.

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, as indicated yesterday this matter has been considered and a decision taken. As I understand the practice, it is that the report is printed in Votes and Proceedings. This will be done in due course.

TRANSPORT

MARITIME PROVINCES—REQUEST FOR FREEZE ON FREIGHT RATES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Thomas M. Bell (Saint John-Albert): I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Transport, since this might be my last opportunity to do so before a time limit on questions is imposed next week. Might I ask the Minister if he has seen a resolution passed by the Maritime Provinces Board of Trade in Saint John this week which urges a freeze on all rail freight rates in the Maritimes pending the study the Minister announced at the beginning of the week. If so, does this commend itself to the Minister?

Hon. J. W. Pickersgill (Minister of Transport): I thought from the preamble to the hon. gentleman's question that he was about to go to another place. I am relieved to discover that he is going to stay here to enjoy the new regime.

In reply to the question, I may say I have no doubt that a communication is on its way to me from the Maritime Provinces Board of Trade. I did note the press report to which the hon. gentleman referred. I have had similar representations from other bodies in the Atlantic Provinces and the matter, of course, will receive the most careful consideration.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Bell: In this connection, will the Minister make a statement on whether representations are expected at the Dominion-Provincial Conference in connection with the transportation item on the agenda, because this question is looming large now in the Maritimes.

Mr. Pickersgill: I do not think I should attempt to anticipate the proceedings of the Federal-Provincial Conference, but I may say I did give an assurance to the Premiers of the Atlantic Provinces that before any legislation was introduced I would receive representations from them; and it was thought, if the legislation could not be introduced before a recess, that that might be conveniently done at the time of the Federal-Provincial Conference.

HARBOURS

MONTREAL—REQUEST FOR EASIER ACCESS TO FACILITIES

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Georges Valade (Sainte-Marie): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Transport. It concerns an urgent matter which affects some two million people living in Montreal. A news item appeared in La Presse to the effect that the Montreal harbour authorities deny access to the harbour to the citizens of Montreal who have no other place for summer relaxation.

Is the minister aware of this situation and does he intend to order the Montreal harbour authorities immediately to allow the citizens access to harbour facilities during the summer season?

[English]

Hon. J. W. Pickersgill (Minister of Transport): Mr. Speaker, I do not think it would be very wise for a Minister of the Crown to proceed in the arbitrary fashion the hon. gentleman has suggested, but I will look into the matter.

Mr. Valade: As a supplementary question, does the Minister not realize that just a letter to the director of the harbour might be sufficient, asking him to be more lenient in the application of the rules so that people could use the port facilities during the season?

Mr. Pickersgill: I would be very glad to look into the matter.

[Mr. Pickersgill.]

AGRICULTURE

SOUR CHERRIES—INQUIRY AS TO ASSISTANCE TO GROWERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington South): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Agriculture. In view of the close proximity of the sour cherry season, could the Minister advise the House whether he proposes to use the value for duty provisions of the Customs Act or the price support system in order to assist the cherry growers of this country?

Hon. Harry W. Hays (Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, no decision has been made so far as this matter is concerned. Last year when the sour cherry people were in trouble the Stabilization Board assisted them at a cost of approximately $300,000, but no decision has been made this year nor have we had any representations from these people.

Mr. Hales: Would the Minister do everything within his power to keep down the great flow of U.S. cherries coming into Canada?

DAIRY PRODUCERS—MAILING OF CLAIM FORMS FOR SUPPLEMENTARY PAYMENTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. John Loney (Bruce): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Agriculture but in his absence I will direct it to his Parliamentary Secretary. Can the Minister inform the House when the mailing to dairy producers of the claim forms for supplementary payments will be completed?

Mr. B. S. Beer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Agriculture): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Minister I am not able to give a concrete answer, but I will obtain the answer for the hon. Member.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

POINT EDWARD NAVAL BASE—ALTERNATIVE EMPLOYMENT FOR RELEASED EMPLOYEES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Associate Minister of National Defence; I think he is behind the curtain, or perhaps he has had to return to his office. In view of the fact that, according to yesterday's press, employees at the Point Edward Naval Base are now receiving official letters that they have been fired, something I questioned him about the other day, can the Minister now advise where these former government employees, numbering several hundred, are going to find employment? May I also ask the Minister if he is possibly being brainwashed by the repeated statements of his colleague the Minister of Finance, that we "never had it so good"?

Mr. Speaker: Order, please. If the question is in order at all it is one for the order paper.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, these employees received their letters yesterday, about 24 hours ago.

Mr. Speaker: Order. I am afraid the hon. Member is really beginning to dispute the suggestion or decision of the Chair, and it seems to me this is not the proper time to do so.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): On a point of order, this question is urgent. It is of national importance. It concerns a base of the Royal Canadian Navy. It concerns unemployment, which is of national importance. I would like to know what is going to be done on behalf of these several hundred—

Mr. Speaker: Order. I would like to congratulate the hon. Member on calling attention to the point at issue.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): On a further point of order, Mr. Speaker, I did not bring up the question just for the sake of bringing it to the attention of the House. We have several hundred people who do not have any jobs.

Mr. Speaker: Order. If every single, individual Member of Parliament asked about unemployment in each individual constituency, I think the hon. Member would realize we would have to be here for 36 months.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): May I pose a question to you, Sir, with all due respect. When has it become out of order to ask questions about unemployment in this House? For years I have sat here and heard other Members ask such questions. Why has it become unpopular at this stage?

Mr. Speaker: The reason, it seems to me, is very simple. The same question has been asked quite often this session—

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): With no answer from the Government.

Mr. Speaker: —and it has been carefully considered several times by different Ministers. I think we have some very pressing and urgent questions coming up, and I do not see how the hon. Member can expect a complete answer to his question in the space of two minutes.

MID-CANADA RADAR LINE—MAINTENANCE OF AIR STRIPS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of National Defence. In relation to the phasing out of the mid-Canada radar line, can the Minister say whether consideration is being given by his Department or any other Government department to the maintenance of air strips such as the one at Winisk?

Mr. Speaker: Would the hon. Member put this question on the Order Paper. It seems to me it was asked before.

VETERANS AFFAIRS

INQUIRY AS TO INCREASES IN DISABILITY PENSIONS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. A. B. Patterson (Fraser Valley): Mr. Speaker, yesterday when outlining the business for the next two weeks or so the Prime Minister indicated that certain veterans legislation will be introduced. I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Veterans Affairs and ask him could he indicate just what is intended in this legislation and, specifically, whether substantial upward revisions in disability pensions are being considered.

Hon. Roger Teillet (Minister of Veterans Affairs): Mr. Speaker, this is a matter of Government policy, and I think a proper answer would be that the bills will be introduced as soon as possible, I hope within the next 10 or 12 days, and at that time the intention will be made known to the House.

Mr. Speaker: Orders of the day.

Mr. Knowles: The hon. Member for Winnipeg North.

Mr. Speaker: May I point out that it is two minutes to four o'clock. Perhaps we should allow a little more leniency in anticipation of some new rules, but I point out that it is almost four o'clock. The hon. Member for Winnipeg North.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

ETOBICOKE, ONT.—TREATMENT BY DOCTOR OF NARCOTICS ADDICT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I have been trying to get the floor for an hour, so I do not think I have to apologize. I wanted to ask the Minister of National Health and Welfare a question, but since she has left the Chamber her Parliamentary Secretary might take it as notice.

I would like to ask the Minister what steps she is taking to revise the administration of the Narcotic Control Act so that doctors who wish to treat narcotic addicts will not be interfered with in their medical treatment by the Department in the way that an Etobicoke doctor was interfered with, and about which Rev. Mr. West, director of the Anglican Correctional Chaplaincy for the Diocese of Toronto wrote to the Minister in such strong terms.

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I think out of fairness to the House this type of question is not one that should be permitted without notice before orders of the day, and to that extent should be put on the order paper.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Speaker: Order. Would the hon. Member put this question on the order paper?

Mr. Orlikow: I would like to debate it at ten o'clock.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, the President of the Privy Council has raised this matter repeatedly and suggested that Members put questions of this type on the order paper. I point out that this is a matter that affects someone immediately. If anyone looks at the order paper he can see the length of time questions remain on it. Questions have been on it since April 5 and April 6, half a dozen since April 6 and one since April 5. Last session we had questions that were on it for five months.

For the Minister to get up and say that a question which affects someone in a community near Toronto, on which a decision should be made in the course of the next few days or weeks, should be put on the order paper, where it may lie for days if not weeks, is not good enough.

[Mr. Speaker.]

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Speaker, I think I should clarify my reasons for asking that it be put on the order paper. It is perfectly apparent to any one in the House who listened to the question that it could not be answered without notice, and surely the hon. Member should not be taking up the time of the House asking a question which, by its nature, cannot be answered without notice. Either he should put it on the order paper or give notice of it.

I admit it is an important question, but it is not one which meets the criteria set out in the rule book for questions which are asked before orders of the day are called. That is why I took objection to it, and I think if hon. Members examine the question carefully when they see it in Hansard they will realize I would have been remiss in my duty here if I had not pointed that out.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker, I want to point out to the President of the Privy Council that this is a matter which was raised today in the lead editorial of the Globe and Mail, and the Minister received a letter from the Chaplain working in this field. So the Minister really did not need notice from me, which I gave today, because she knows about the case and she knows the medical association has said that it is useless to try to deal with this question. As far as putting it on the order paper is concerned, when we get into debate today I want to point out to the President of the Privy Council that I have had questions on the order paper for as long as six months.

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Speaker: Order. Perhaps the hon. gentleman would give notice and raise the matter at ten o'clock. The hon. Member for Danforth.

Mr. Reid Scott (Danforth): Mr. Speaker, I wanted to ask a question of the Minister of Justice but he seems to have disappeared.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

AMENDMENT OF STANDING ORDERS RESPECTING CONDUCT OF BUSINESS

The House resumed from Wednesday, June 9, consideration in Committee of the following resolution—Mr. Pearson—Mr. Lamoureux in the Chair:

That the following amendments be made to Standing Orders:

1. That Standing Order 6 be deleted and the following substituted therefor:

Standing Order 6

6. (1) At 6:00 o'clock p.m. on Wednesdays and Fridays and at 10:00 o'clock p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, unless provided otherwise in these Standing Orders, Mr. Speaker shall adjourn the House without question put until the next sitting day.

(2) A motion that the House continue to sit after the hour specified in Section (1) may be made at any time without notice. If any member objects to the motion, Mr. Speaker shall request those members who object to rise in their places and if ten or more members then rise, the question shall not be put on the motion. If no member objects or if fewer than ten members rise in their places, the motion shall be deemed to be carried. No debate or formal vote shall be held on such a motion to extend a sitting. An extended sitting under the provisions of this Section, unless a closing time has been specified, shall not be terminated except by the adoption of a motion to adjourn and Mr. Speaker shall not deem that a motion to adjourn the House has been made by virtue of the operation of any other Standing Order.

(3) If any member objects to the taking of a vote at any time between 1:00 o'clock p.m. and 2:30 o'clock p.m. or between 6:00 o'clock p.m. and 8:00 o'clock p.m., Mr. Speaker shall request those members who object to rise in their places and if five or more members rise, the taking of the vote shall be postponed until after 2:30 o'clock p.m. or until after 8:00 o'clock p.m. as the case may be.

(4) When it is provided in any Standing Order or in any order of the House that the business under consideration at the ordinary time of adjournment be forthwith disposed of or concluded, Mr. Speaker shall not adjourn the House until the specified proceedings be completed.

2. That Section (1) of Standing Order 12 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 12, Section (1)

12. (1) Mr. Speaker shall preserve order and decorum, and shall decide questions of order. In explaining a point of order or practice, he shall state the standing order or authority applicable to the case. No debate shall be permitted on any such decision, nor shall any such decision be subject to an appeal to the House.

3. That Sections (3) and (4) of Standing Order 15 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 15, Sections (3) and (4)

15. (3) Except as otherwise provided in these Standing Orders, the order of business for the consideration of the House, day-by-day, after the daily routine shall be as follows:

(Monday)

Public bills.

B. On the second and each alternate Thursday thereafter:

Private bills.
Notices of motions (papers).
Public bills.

(Friday)

Government orders.
Questions.

(From five to six o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)

Public bills.
Private bills.

(4) When a debate on a motion "That Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair" for the House to go into Committee of Supply is in progress at 6:00 o'clock p.m. on either a Monday or a Tuesday, the order for Private Members' Business on that day shall be suspended.

4. That Section (2) of Standing Order 31 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 31, Section (2)

31. (2) When the business of Private Members is being considered, no member shall speak for more than twenty minutes at a time.

5. That Section (5) of Standing Order 39 be enacted to read as follows:

Standing Order 39, Section (5)

39. (5) Before the Orders of the Day are proceeded with, questions on matters of urgency may be addressed orally to Ministers of the Crown, provided however that if in the opinion of Mr. Speaker a question is not urgent, he may direct that it be placed on the Order Paper, provided also that the time allowed for a question period prior to the calling of the Orders of the Day shall not exceed thirty minutes.

A member who is not satisfied with the answer given to a question asked on any day at this stage, or a member who has been told by Mr. Speaker that his question is not urgent, may give notice that he intends to raise the subject-matter of his question on the adjournment of the House. The notice referred to herein, whether or not it is given orally during the question period before the Orders of the Day, must be given in writing to Mr. Speaker not later than 5:00 o'clock p.m. the same day.

6. That the Standing Orders be amended by adding thereto a new Standing Order 41-A, to read as follows:

Standing Order 41-A

41-A. Unless notice of motion has been given under Standing Order 41, any member proposing to raise a question of privilege other than one arising out of proceedings in the Chamber during the course of a sitting shall give to the Speaker a writen statement of the question at least one hour prior to raising the question in the House.

7. That Standing Order 43 be amended by adding thereto a new Section (2), to read as follows:

Standing Order 43, Section (2)

43. (2) When debate on any motion made under Standing Order 15 (2) is adjourned or interrupted, the order for resumption of the same shall be transferred to and considered under Government Orders.

8. That Standing Order 44 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 44

44. When a question is under debate no motion is received unless to amend it; to postpone it to a day certain; for the previous question; for reading the orders of the day; for proceeding to another order; to adjourn the debate; to extend the sitting of the House; or for the adjournment of the House.

9. That Section (4) of Standing Order 59 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 59, Section (4)

59. (4) The Chairman shall maintain order in the Committees of the Whole House, deciding all questions of order subject to an appeal to Mr. Speaker; but disorder in a committee can only be censured by the House, on receiving a report thereof. No debate shall be permitted on any decision.

10. That Standing Order 65 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 65

65 (1) At the commencement of each session, a special committee, consisting of seven members, shall be appointed, whose duty it shall be to prepare and report, with all convenient speed, lists of members to compose the following standing committees of the House:

(a) on Agriculture, Forestry, and Rural Development, to consist of 45 members;
(b) on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts, to consist of 22 members;
(c) on Crown Corporation, to consist of 22 members;
(d) on External Affairs, to consist of 22 members;
(e) on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, to consist of 22 members;
(f) on Fisheries, to consist of 22 members;
(g) on Health and Welfare, to consist of 22 members;
(h) on Housing, Urban Development and Public Works, to consist of 22 members;
(i) on Human Rights and Citizenship and Immigration, to consist of 22 members;
(j) on Industry, Research and Energy Development, to consist of 22 members;
(k) on Justice and Legal Affairs, to consist of 22 members;
(l) on Labour and Employment, to consist of 22 members;
(m) on Miscellaneous Estimates, to consist of 22 members;
(n) on Miscellaneous Private Bills, to consist of 22 members;
(o) on National Defence, to consist of 22 members;
(p) on Northern Affairs and National Resources, to consist of 22 members;
(q) on Privileges and Elections, to consist of 22 members;

[Mr. Scott.]

(r) on Public Accounts, to consist of 24 members;
(s) on Standing Orders, to consist of 22 members;
(t) on Transport and Communications, to consist of 22 members; and
(u) on Veterans Affairs, to consist of 22 members.

(2) The Special Committee shall also prepare and report with all convenient speed, lists of members to compose the following standing committees:

on Printing, to act as members on the part of this House on the Joint Committee of both Houses on the subject of the printing of Parliament, to consist of 23 members;

on the Library of Parliament, so far as the interests of this House are concerned, and to act as members of the Joint Committee of both Houses to consist of 21 members;

provided that a sufficient number of members of joint committees shall be appointed so as to keep the same proportion in such committees as between the memberships of the House of Commons and Senate.

(3) A majority of the members of a standing committee shall constitute a quorum unless the House otherwise orders;

Provided that, in the case of a joint committee, the number of members constituting a quorum shall be such as the House of Commons acting in consultation with the Senate may determine.

(4) The Standing Committees shall be severally empowered to examine and enquire into all such matters and things as may be referred to them by the House; to report from time to time their observations and opinions hereon; to send for persons, papers and records; and to print, from day-to-day, such papers and evidence as may be ordered by them, and Standing Order 66 shall not apply in relation thereto.

(5) Any member of the House of Commons who is not a member of a standing committee, may unless the House or the standing committee otherwise orders, take part in the deliberations of the standing committee, but shall not vote or move any motion or any amendment or be counted in the quorum.

11. That Standing Order 99 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 99

99. No Bill for the incorporation of a railway or canal company, or for authorizing the construction of branch lines or extensions of existing lines of railways or of canals, or for changing the route of the railway or of the canal of any company already incorporated, shall be considered by the Committee on Transport and Communications, until there has been filed with the committee, at least one week before the consideration of the bill, a map or plan drawn upon a scale of not less than half an inch to the mile, showing the location upon which it is intended to construct the proposed work, and showing also the lines of existing or authorized works of a similar character within, or in any way affecting the district, or any part thereof, which the proposed work is intended to serve; and such map or plan shall be signed by the engineer or other person making the same.

12. That Standing Order 105 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 105

105. Every private bill, when read a second time, is referred to one of the standing committees as follows: bills relating to banks, insurance, trade and commerce and to trust and loan companies, to the Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs; bills relating to railways, canals, telegraphs, canal and railway bridges, to the Committee on Transport and Communications; the bills not coming under these classes, to the Committee on Miscellaneous Private Bills, and all petitions for or against the bills are considered as referred to such committee.

The Chairman: Order. When the Committee rose yesterday an amendment proposed by the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam was being considered. This amendment reads as follows:

That the proposed new Standing Order 12(1) be amended by changing the period at the end thereof to a comma, and by adding immediately thereafter the following words: "provided, however, that an appeal on a substantive motion, accompanied by the citation of authorities and precedents, may be submitted for study to a special committee to be appointed for that purpose".

[Translation]

Mr. Marcoux: Mr. Chairman, in rising to make a few remarks, it is not my intention to prolong the debate—because I have been patient enough from the very start of this discussion on the proposed changes to the parliamentary procedure—but simply to dispute the claims that the Speaker, or his representative, or the chairman of committees may have preconceived ideas or prove to be partial. Personally, I believe that the Speaker is at least as objective as any other member, be it the mover or the seconder of a motion or the one who speaks in support of, or against, that motion. That is why I dissociate myself from those who claim that the Speaker may, more than others, prove to be partial in his rulings in this house.

Another point I wish to make is this. When members support the Speaker's decision, they do not necessarily support the amendment, the subamendment or the motion which has been introduced but only the Speaker's ruling. When we support the Speaker, it is on the basis that he was chosen not by the government or the opposition but by Parliament, to maintain order in the house. And since we trusted him when we appointed him, we should continue to trust him until he decides to give up his post.

When, at the beginning of a parliament, the Prime Minister moves the appointment of a Speaker, if the members do not agree, they may thereupon introduce a counter-proposal or else simply object to the appointment of the proposed candidate. I am convinced the Speaker would not accept his appointment without unanimous consent of the house. That is why I maintain that if we vote for a new rule forbidding members to appeal from Mr. Speaker's rulings, it is only because we trust him; we trust him today, we shall trust him tomorrow, and we shall also trust any Speaker who will be appointed in the future, because we rely on the Speaker's good judgment and his ability to conduct the business of the house.

Yesterday, the hon. member for Burnaby-Coquitlam (Mr. Douglas) said that the Speaker occupying the Chair once admitted he had made a mistake and had asked the house to appeal his ruling: such was his statement. I could immediately suggest that if the Speaker realized he has made a mistake, he only would have to ask, with unanimous consent from the house, that the house appeal his ruling. Then, should the members not be satisfied, they could unanimously allow the Speaker to act counter to clause 2 of paragraph 2 of resolution No. 15 under consideration.

Those are the remarks I wished to make, Mr. Chairman.

Before resuming my seat, I wish to point out that when it is said that the Speaker is prejudiced, the statement could be reversed and applied to the one who is appealing his ruling. In fact, whoever appeals a ruling of the Speaker often is sore and disappointed because he has not drafted his motion in such a way that it be in order, and then, from that grudge, if one may say so, he rises and appeals the Speaker's ruling.

Mr. Chairman, in my opinion, granting a member or a group of members the right to appeal a ruling of the Speaker on a question of personal feelings would not be more justifiable than allowing any doubt about the impartiality of the Chair.

There is another minor argument which I wished to put forward and which nearly slipped my mind. Someone criticized the rulings of the Speaker, pointing out that quite often, he did not trust in his own capacities but depended on the advice given him by the officers of the House. I must most humbly say that, in my opinion, the officers of the House are most competent to give the necessary information to the Speaker. In my opinion, their duty is simply to find faster than the Speaker, the reasons on which the latter could base his ruling if he had time to look for the necessary arguments. It seems to me that the officers of the House, who have a thorough knowledge of the procedure, and who are able to find speedily the arguments which the Speaker needs to make his ruling, are simply assisting the Speaker.

I think that we should commend them for it and once again, I do not agree with those who try to minimize their work and especially their goodwill.

Mr. Chairman, I do not intend to speak any longer, because I know that for 12 days we have been looking forward to that happy moment when we might express our opinion, by means of a vote, but I wanted to dissociate myself from those who have made such statements with respect to the Speaker and the officers of the House.

[English]

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, I should like to take a very few minutes of the time of the Committee to make one or two comments on the amendment which is before us in respect of this question of the abolition of appeals from Mr. Speaker's rulings. I noticed yesterday when the Minister of Transport was speaking that he made quite a little play on the fact that when he was on the Opposition side he had, if I remember correctly, advocated on three different occasions abolition of appeals. I must say, Mr. Chairman, having been one of the Members who was in the House at the time of what we commonly refer to as the pipe line debate, the thought that immediately crossed my mind was what his position would have been had he been on the Opposition side, in the context of that debate, in respect to the right of appeal from Mr. Speaker's rulings.

I mention this because I feel that very much of what is involved in this question of appeals from Mr. Speaker's rulings depends upon the occasion and the manner in which they have taken place in the past. I certainly agree with the Minister of Transport and with others who suggested that there has developed all too frequently a practice of appealing Mr. Speaker's rulings on grounds other than the simple merits of the ruling itself. If I may say so, I think that that change has taken place to quite an extent since the period when I first entered this House in 1953, a time when appeals were of very rare occurrence indeed and were something which no Member of the House thought of making lightly.

While I realize that the present Minister of Transport had an entirely different view from that which I had on the subject matter of the pipe line debate, nevertheless I would hope he would agree that, at least on some of the appeals which were made against the ruling of the Chair during the debate, the Opposition did have a legitimate right to feel that there had been a breakdown in the integrity and impartiality of the Chair. Had we not had the right of appeal under those circumstances, then I think there would have been a very difficult situation in Parliament, and perhaps the effect upon Parliament as an institution might have been even worse than that particular episode, in my view, demonstrated.

Mr. Pickersgill: Mr. Chairman, since the hon. gentleman has sought to interpret my views, I hope he will not take my silence as indicating agreement with the views he has just expressed.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, I was not disposed to agree that that necessarily was the case, but I am quite happy to have the Minister clarify his own position in this regard.

The reason I have sought to express my own feeling in this regard in supporting the amendment is that if a situation of that kind developed at some future time in this Parliament, then the kind of mechanism proposed by the amendment moved by the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam could be a very useful and necessary safety valve to protect the integrity of the Speakership, and also the integrity of parliament as an institution.

I will not add much more, Mr. Chairman, except to say that one of the things I found rather puzzling when I came back to this House after an absence of some four years was to discover that the practice of voting when Mr. Speaker's ruling was challenged had altered so as at least to give the appearance that an appeal from a ruling of Mr. Speaker had become a party matter. In other words, as matters have stood in this Parliament and the last Parliament, if Mr. Speaker's ruling is appealed the normal practice seems to have developed whereby the Leader of the Government first rises to indicate that Mr. Speaker's ruling should be sustained. Whereas unless I am very much mistaken the practice in former years was, at least technically in the form of voting, that it was regarded as having nothing to do with party structure and it was usually a private Member on the front bench on the Government side who was the first to rise.

If I may say so, Mr. Chairman, I think this practice has tended to aggravate the development of a tendency in the minds of many people and many Members of this House to think that when we are called upon to vote on a challenge of a ruling we would normally divide on party lines, as we would either for or against a Government measure. I think this has been a contributing factor to what I consider to be the rather hasty and ill-considered proposal of the Government for the complete abolition of appeals.

The Minister of Transport tried to suggest that if we had any hope of obtaining a continuity of the Speakership this could not be achieved, first of all, without abolishing appeals. In my view, Mr. Chairman, the Minister has put the cart before the horse. As far as I am concerned the logic is all on the side of the complete converse of that. If we can devise ways and means of achieving some continuity of the Speakership, and if this House can be guided and directed in its deliberation for a period of time by someone who has enjoyed the confidence of more than one parliament, then I think the question of the abolition of appeals would be more easily resolved, on all sides of the House. The only way we can be convinced that we have established in the institution of the Speakership someone who is beyond and above the kind of pressures to which many of us in this House feel Mr. Speaker of that day yielded in 1956, would be the acceptance of the idea of a permanent or continuing Speakership. I must say it is difficult for us to agree to endorse the idea of the abolition of appeals from rulings of the Chair, in the absence of such an arrangement.

• (4:20 p.m.)

It is in this light that the proposal advanced by my hon. friend from Burnaby-Coquitlam should be considered. He has proposed a mechanism which would eliminate the kind of frivolous or tactical appeals which have been made from time to time and which I believe to have been most unfortunate. It would base the appeal purely on the question whether or not the decision of the Chair was correct. In the light of these considerations I urge the adoption of the amendment now before the Committee.

The Chairman: Order. The question on the amendment is now being put. No Member should be allowed to vote after the motion has been put. Those hon. Members who have just come in should not take part in the vote.

Amendment (Mr. Douglas) negatived: Yeas, 9; nays, 40.

I declare the amendment lost.

Does this conclude the discussion of section 2 of the resolution before the Committee?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Is it my understanding that we now revert to the consideration of section 1?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, there may be some discussion on section 1. Indeed, I am opposed to its general purport, namely sitting through meal hours, sitting overtime and so on. But I rise at this time for the purpose of moving a simple amendment which I think is in accord with the Government's intention and which I hope the Government and the Committee of the whole may accept.

My amendment relates to what could happen in the period after the normal hour of adjournment. There is a provision in subsection (2) of the proposed Standing Order under which the House might continue sitting after six o'clock on Wednesday or Friday or after ten o'clock on Monday, Tuesday or Thursday. The Government has said the reason for pursuing this is in order that the House or the committee of the whole might be able to finish some business with which it was seized at that moment. But the Order as now drafted makes it possible, once the adjournment hour has gone by, for the Government to go on calling other items on the order paper and thus keep Members here all night, trying for example to finish a session. That might be a commendable objective at some point but, generally speaking, it is a situation which could lead to abuse. I take the Government at its word that all it wants by this provision is the right, unless more than ten Members object, to continue after ten o'clock in order to complete whatever Order had been called. Therefore, to make this clear, I move:

That paragraph (2) of the proposed Standing Order 6 be amended by inserting therein, immediately after the sentence which reads "No debate or formal vote shall be held on such a motion to extend a sitting", the following new sentence:

"During an extended sitting, as provided under the provisions of this section, no order shall be called for consideration unless such order was under consideration prior to the normal hours of adjournment."

As I say, the purpose of this amendment is simply to make it clear that this rule if it passes will be used only for the purpose for which the Government has told us the rule is desired. I wish in all fairness to enter the caveat that even if this amendment passes I still do not like the new Standing Order and there will be other comments on it. But since there may be agreement on this safeguard, I think it might be cleared up first.

Mr. McIlraith: There is one quite narrow point I should like to raise. The hon. Member says no new order should be dealt with. But the order might be for second reading of a bill; then, subsequently the House might wish to continue with another stage. Or suppose a measure was being considered in committee and it was desired to go on to third reading. Has the hon. gentleman thought about this point? Otherwise, we could agree with the suggested amendment. I did discuss the matter and we had intended to raise it.

Mr. Knowles: I certainly did think about the point which the Minister has raised. I ask him not to press that the amendment go further than I have suggested. I used the word "order" as meaning something listed on the order paper. If an order for second reading had been called prior to ten o'clock, the way this amendment is worded, that could carry on. If an order for consideration in committee of the whole had been called before ten o'clock, having gone into committee of the whole we could carry on. But I do not think it would be a good thing to word this rule in such a way that having finished the Committee stage of a bill we could go on to third reading or go on from second reading to the Committee stage. I think the Government should be taken at its word that it wants this rule in order that we may complete some particular item which had been engaging our attention before ten o'clock. The Minister of Transport made this clear. The President of the Privy Council made it clear, and I hope I have made it clear by this amendment.

Mr. McIlraith: Yes. I think the hon. gentleman misunderstood me. I was trying to question him for clarification. We are quite prepared to accept the amendment.

The Chairman: Order. The Chair would like to put the amendment. Shall I dispense?

Some hon. Members: Dispense.

Mr. Howard: Like my hon. friend from Winnipeg North Centre I am not favourably disposed to the original proposition concerning this Standing Order. Such being the case it seems silly or asinine for me to vote for the amendment now before us. I say this with all respect to the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre and to my other colleagues.

[Mr. Knowles.]

I fail to see how we can support a proposal which seeks to amend a bad proposition so as to make it a little more acceptable. We intend to fight against this idea of giving the Government open-ended permission to develop its legislation by means of exhausting Members completely night after night as has been done in the past.

• (4:30 p.m.)

I am not in favour of the amendment or of the original proposal. It may well be that we will have to spend from now until five p.m. tomorrow debating this particular matter, thus denying to Members the opportunity to move amendments to other proposed changes. There is one matter of extreme importance on which I should like to move an amendment later, but if the debate on this point carries on interminably we are quite prepared to accept that.

Because of past experience both with this Government and other governments. I am not in any respect prepared to accept the principle that we should be required to legislate by exhaustion at four o'clock in the morning merely because of the desire of the Government either to rush something through or to cram something down the throats of Members of this House. So far as I am concerned, this proposal is far worse than the so-called guillotine to which the Tories were spuriously objecting a few days ago.

The Chairman: Shall the amendment carry?

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, before you put the question I should like to ask this question. If this amendment is carried, what will it really mean? I know what it says. I know what the contention is. However, if second reading takes place at three o'clock in the morning and there is agreement to proceed with third reading, does the amendment mean that the House does not have control of its own affairs and cannot by unanimous consent proceed with third reading at that time? I doubt that this can be accomplished in this manner. If it cannot be accomplished in this manner, all we are really doing is trying to make acceptable something that obviously is not acceptable to most Members, and they want to provide a safeguard.

I suggest that this highlights one of the problems we are going to have with these rule changes. We are trying to eliminate the opportunity to accomplish something that the majority may wish to do, and I think this type of change should be seriously considered before it is decided upon. By adopting this amendment we can make changes in this section that I am sure will be acceptable to the Government, but I wonder whether this will grant the power to a minority who may be opposed to prevent the majority from proceeding to deal with an additional stage at that late hour. I think we should always realize the fact that on occasions Governments do bow to Opposition objections and it may be that at two or three o'clock in the morning, or later, it is easier to arrive at progressive amendments than at other times. If agreement is arrived at to give second reading to a measure, it is probable that the introduction of third reading and passage of the bill would also be warranted.

I think the Members of this Committee will be very asinine if they lay down rules that do not accomplish what we want, but the very opposite. If in the end we arrive at a point where we cannot progress with the business at a more rapid rate through the usual method of amendment and agreement, these rules will be a detriment rather than an asset.

The Chairman: The Committee has heard the amendment moved by the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre. Shall the amendment carry?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

Mr. Peters: On division.

Amendment (Mr. Knowles) agreed to on division.

The Chairman: Does this conclude the discussion of section 1?

Mr. Otto: Mr. Chairman, I have one question. The second last speaker said that the Government would have the power to move a motion. As I read paragraph 2, it provides for the making of a motion that the House continue to sit. Does this mean that only the Government can make such a motion or that any Member may do so?

Mr. McIlraith: Any Member may make it.

Mr. Howard: In practice only the Government will take advantage of this provision.

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Chairman, I am always hopeful that the hon. Member for Skeena may change, and possibly he will be moving such a motion many times in the future. Who knows?

Mr. Knowles: Don't suggest it; he might do it.

Mr. Pickersgill: Some of us do not share that hope.

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Chairman, I want to propose an amendment which is being moved at the request of some hon. Members. It has to do with the clarification of section 2 of the proposed new Standing Order. A question was raised as too whether or not it was sufficiently clear that the Speaker had the authority to interrupt the proceedings after the supper hour and call the postponed vote. In order to improve the wording and make it clear that it was the intention that Mr. Speaker should have the right to interrupt whatever proceedings were going on after the supper hour and take the postponed vote, I move:

That clause 1 of the proposed resolution be amended by striking out section 3 of the proposed Standing Order 6 and substituting therefor:

"Standing Order 6 Section (3).

If any Member objects to the taking of a vote at any time between 1.00 o'clock p.m. and 2.30 o'clock p.m. or between 6:00 o'clock p.m. and 8.00 o'clock p.m., Mr. Speaker shall request those Members who object to rise in their places and if five or more Members rise, the taking of the vote shall be postponed. At 2:30 o'clock p.m. or at 8:00 o'clock p.m., as the case may be, Mr. Speaker shall interrupt the proceedings then before the House and shall put or cause to be put the question on any postponed vote. The House shall be deemed to have reverted to private Members' business for such time as is necessary for the taking of any vote postponed from the time provided for private Members' business."

It will be seen that this is merely a clarification of the point in order to make it very clear that Mr. Speaker has the authority to interrupt any proceedings before the House for the purpose of taking a postponed vote.

Mr. Lambert: Briefly, Mr. Chairman, this meets the point I had raised privately.

The Chairman: Shall the amendment carry?

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, I think this point is clear but, as did the Minister of Transport, I should like to make sure that silence does not mean consent and that in supporting this amendment we are not supporting thereby some of the principles that arise that make this amendment necessary. In other words, if we allow this amendment to carry it does not mean that the resolution cannot be further amended in such a way as to make the proposed provision in effect null and void or superfluous.

The Chairman: Shall the amendment carry?

Amendment (Mr. McIlraith) agreed to.

The Chairman: Does this conclude the discussion on section 1?

• (4:40 p.m.)

Mr. Peters: I am not sure how to do it, Mr. Chairman, but I should like to delete the whole of the section. Perhaps all I have to do is move a motion that we delete the whole section. I am one of those who believe that we should not go back to barbaric conditions of giving up our lunch or dinner hours. The supper hour means more in Canada perhaps than it does in a number of other countries. I ask the Government to reconsider this provision. A limit of 36 days has already been established for estimates and the House is going to put on a further limit. I suggest the Government reconsider the idea of establishing a regular supper hour as we have it in the Standing Order. The Standing Order indicates the House shall not sit between six and eight. The amendment provides, by inference, that we shall not adjourn for a supper hour.

There is no question about it, if a Member of Parliament is doing his job he starts at nine o'clock in the morning with committees and attends the House in the afternoon. He should be entitled, therefore, to some reasonable period for a supper hour. The lunch hour in Canada, in my opinion, is not as important as the supper hour. The dinner hour may be celebrated at a different time in other countries than it is in Canada. I believe we are being silly, Mr. Chairman. I believe we are being silly enough that I will try to bring this to the attention of the House and the country in a very vocal way in the next few weeks by being more obnoxious than I have been in the past. I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that is no idle threat and I do not believe I will have any disagreement on that.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Peters: Hon. Members can say "Shame" all they like. I think we are adults in this country. Let us discuss for a moment what has happened over a period of time. We have had in the opposition one of the best lawyers that have been around Parliament for a long time, in the form of our previous legal counsel, who is now in another place. Many Members of the House of Commons developed good ideas for introducing new legislation during Private Members hour, through motions, through bills and other procedures that were seldom ever used. Now, the operation of this House has been such, and I will be prepared to talk about that during this debate, that it has not been able to cope with this problem.

[The Chairman.]

When I first came here there were probably half a dozen major bills in the names of private Members. Now, there are a hundred or more, some of which are worth while. It is true also that each Member has spent a great deal of time with the various departments and given a great deal of thought to the subject matter of these bills. What has the Government said? It has really said: We hate the idea of having to sit here and have our Government Members stand up and talk out these very good ideas. Let us refer to one of those good ideas. I have seen most of the influential Liberals, as well as some Conservatives, at a recent meeting with regard to the abolition of capital punishment. These are the same Members who loved the capital punishment bill to death for a number of years. They loved it to death because the Government of the day did not have the guts to do anything about it. They have no guts yet. They are going to do something about it in a roundabout way. What are they going to do?

They have decided this is a rather dangerous thing. They are going to have private Members hour. We are going to gain therefore body is going to be here. Let us waive the right of a quorum; let us waive the right of any press coverage that a private Member might get, and not do anything for the private Member. The Government will not even have to face a vote during that period if anybody gets up and objects to it. Surely, as adults we can come up with a better system than that. Really, we are going to extend the hours by only one hour because the Government has not been able to cope with private Members hour. We are going to gain therefore only one hour. Does the House Leader honestly think he is going to get away with this? I do not know what vehicle we will use. I am not sure we are going to find one right away, but I am sure we will find one. I am sure also, because I have seen it happen that if the Leader of the Opposition in this House finds we have a good vehicle and use it two or three times he will throw his weight behind it. If I do not hit it the first time I will get it the second.

Surely, we can arrive at a better solution of the problem that has developed in the last few years with regard to private Members hour. There will not be anybody here during the supper hour, there will not be anybody in the press gallery, so that an individual can make a speech for his riding back home. In the consumer credit field alone, there are seven or eight excellent bills in my opinion, bills that this Government should have introduced or previous Governments should have introduced. They are bills that the Government is going to have to consider, and they contain well thought out proposals. They are not crack-pot ideas directed to somebody in the home constituency. These are attempts by backbenchers who have not had an opportunity to make a contribution in the House. These Members, some with a legal background in this field, have considered the matter and offered the Government some solutions. It is not going to be good enough to slough these off in the supper hour. I do not believe the Government is going to get away with it.

Surely we are not going to be so barbaric as to say we do not want any regular hours. How stupid have we been over the years? Only last year, Mr. Chairman, did we decide to have regular holidays. We did not even have July 1 off, which was the celebration of the birth of our Dominion. We are so foolish in this country that we did not even get around to that. We got St. Jean Baptiste Day as a holiday, although some of us do not even know what the celebration is about. But we got that day because we would not have obtained the other holidays without including that. We jump from crisis to crisis in trying to solve the problems of this House. Surely any bunch of school kids in a club they might set up would have been able to devise better solutions to their problems.

There has been no advantage whatever, in my opinion, in the extension of hours. If we know what the business of the country is, if we have prepared the legislation and presented it to parliament, then parliament has some responsibility. Every day we hear about a new piece of legislation that has to be introduced before the summer holidays. The House Leader has not even as yet told us when those holidays are going to be. We know we are going to have a holiday on June 24 and July 1. It would be logical for us to assume that we might include the long week end in that holiday, and we really would not put the conduct of business farther behind if that were understood. We can think back to the fact that we got a holiday in the wintertime for two months, not because the House needed it but simply because the Government was not ready to do anything else.

Some hon. Members: No, no.

Mr. Peters: Well, it is true. We have not had any major legislation introduced since this session began. The budget was introduced, but they said it had already been prepared. The Throne Speech could have been lifted holus-bolus out of the last one without really hurting anything. The Government Members may not know it, but really we have not advanced any farther, in so far as providing the country with a program of legislation is concerned, than we were when we ended debate in the last session, at which time there were 25 or 26 important pieces of legislation which had not been considered at all. Most of them are not kicking around any more, showing they have been forgotten and how unimportant they were.

• (4:50 p.m.)

Most hon. Members I have talked to feel there should be some period for supper hour. Most people think we are civilized enough in this country to have a regular supper hour. Over the years we have been able to curtail many of the formalities. We have been able to speed up our business procedure. Now we have agreed to curtail time spent on estimates. We have made a number of concessions which the Government should appreciate.

We have agreed that the regular adjournment hour may be waived at any time so that we may continue to discuss certain legislation before the House, until Government orders are called the next day. I for one am prepared to sit all night if it serves any reasonable purpose, but we should at least be a little sympathetic to the staff.

The Clerk of the House is not well, but we have not appointed a second one. We have really no officials at the Table prepared to take on the onerous duties they must handle during our regular supper hours. Our staff carries a heavy work load. We have not the necessary stenographic staff; we have not the necessary Hansard staff; we have not the necessary translation staff to cope with the longer hours. There are advertisements in every paper one picks up seeking staff in all these branches. We have not sufficient staff now; yet the Government, with tongue in cheek, is asking to extend the hours and take away from our employees some of the amenities previously enjoyed.

If there were good reason for this we could agree to it on occasion, and have done so. It will be recalled that early one session we decided it might be a good thing to extend the hours and sit on Wednesday afternoons and Friday nights. At that time I was prepared to sit on Sundays too. I do not know why everybody throws up their hands at Sunday. It is a day in which we could fill four or five hours if we wished, and I do not see why that particular day should be overlooked.

It will be recalled that the hon. Member for Port Arthur moved to extend the hours early that session. The Government of the day accepted the motion, but that session went on for seven or eight months and turned out to be the longest session until that time. On occasions since then we have extended our sitting hours and sitting days, and on other occasions we did not need to do so. But all the time we find sessions getting longer and longer.

I suggest it would be completely barbaric to eliminate the supper hour. It will lower the mental objectivity of Members who have to sit during these extra hours, and I am prepared to do what I can to point out to the people of the country the ridicule that is deserved by a government that stoops to this method of extending the hours.

The supper hour should be maintained, and the Government is going to have to face a problem with private Members hour. I do not know what the solution to that will be, but very shortly the Government will face this problem.

I am prepared to move an amendment deleting sections 1, 2, 3, and 4 of the proposed Standing Order 6.

The Chairman: Does this conclude discussion on clause 1?

Mr. Peters: I am moving an amendment.

The Chairman: There is no amendment before the Chair at the moment. Is the hon. Member preparing one?

Mr. Howard: While my colleague is preparing his amendment perhaps I may say a word or two to express my agreement with what he has said. It is a fact, as the hon. Member for Timiskaming so ably pointed out, that with all this desire to extend the hours, giving the Government the right to legislate by exhaustion, the right to move a motion without notice, without any indication of time contained within that motion, the invasion of the normal lunch and dinner hours, and the relegation of private Members hour to an even more minor position than it has at present, will not add one bit to the so-called efficient dispatch of public business in the House. Such things have not done so in the past and I cannot foresee their doing it in the future.

[Mr. Peters.]

We could accomplish that end if, at the beginning of a session, and at regular intervals throughout, the Government indicated so far as possible the measures it would like to see passed and by what time, and asked the co-operation of the House to that end. If the Government is reasonable there will not be objection.

Governments have made such requests in the past, and whenever a government has been reasonable, has come forward openly and frankly to parliament and laid its cards on the table, by and large parliament has agreed with it and has done its best to meet the timetable set out.

I do not see why this Government should try to operate in a different fashion unless, of course, it simply does not know where it is going, that it has no idea about the course of its business or the policies it would like to see enacted—just fumbling along from day to day, as in the case of Liberal governments in the past, trying to get free of Parliament as soon as possible so that they can get on with the business of running the country by secret Order in Council.

The Minister of Transport laughs, whether at what I have said or something he has read I do not know; but we all know his attitude to parliament is to say whatever is convenient to parliament in order to get government business agreed upon, even if it means some underhand skulduggery to get parliament to agree to it.

Might I call it five o'clock, Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Order. As yet no formal motion has been received by the Chair. Perhaps before I call it five o'clock I might read the amendment moved by the hon. Member for Timiskaming. The hon. Member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters) moves:

That standing order 6(1) be amended by deleting subsections (1), (2), (3) and (4) in resolution 15.

In order to permit the House to proceed to the consideration of private Members' business, it is my duty to leave the Chair.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. It being five o'clock the House will now proceed to the consideration of private Members' business as listed on today's order paper, namely private bills, notices of motions (papers) and public bills.

PRIVATE BILLS

LAURENTIDE BANK OF CANADA

The House resumed from Thursday, May 27, consideration of the motion of Mr. Basford for the second reading of Bill No. C-95, to incorporate Laurentide Bank of Canada, and on the proposed amendment thereto of Mr. Bélanger.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Chapleau): Mr. Speaker, this afternoon we are considering Bill No. C-95 concerning which an amendment was moved by the hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Bélanger) to give the bill the six months' hoist.

I rise this afternoon to support this amendment to give the bill the six months' hoist. In view of the fact that during the next few weeks we will be once more examining the Bank Act for the purpose of renewing existing bank charters, I believe that every member of this house should be entitled to examine the Bank Act more carefully so they can move new amendments and play a role which will be better appreciated by the people of Canada.

As the Prime Minister said during the week, we shall soon examine the Bank Act. When the new bank charters are granted, perhaps those who seek a charter through Bill No. C-95, such as the Laurentide Bank of Canada, will have changed their minds and will want a bank charter enabling them to offer certain services to certain parts of the country.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, as I did a few days ago when I spoke on a similar bill, I want to assure the house once again this afternoon, that I am not opposed to banks as such, but rather to the granting of present bank charters.

We need bank branches to make certain credit transactions and to put at the disposal of the people a place to make their deposits and to put their savings in safety. I agree that our chartered banks have rendered great services in that connection in the past and I do not see why they should not continue to do so in the future.

Moreover, I believe that the present bank charters give too much power to the banks, which in fact are private institutions, by allowing them to accumulate credit which is a source of excessive power, to the point where they can direct the country's economy as they see fit.

It has been said that capital is accumulated work. I agree but, since one cannot do everything, accumulation is done by a few while the others work.

We have seen in the past that the powers granted to lending institutions such as chartered banks enabled them to direct the country's economy at will, thus permitting them to alternate periods of progress and depression. As a rule, they are the ones which generally decide on such periods.

We have seen people interested in production or services take advantage of economic progress periods to expand their industries, their businesses or their services and to invest capital through the sale of shares, bonds or borrowing. They did it in the past and nothing shows that, under the present banking system, they could not keep on doing it in times of economic progress. But before they had time to pay back their loans came a depression decided upon by the same financial authorities which, in many cases, caused industries and businesses to lose everything they had invested in expansion.

Here, Mr. Speaker, I must say that I do not approve of the present financial system. That is why I will propose—and I think many members will do likewise during consideration of this bank bill—amendments so that the present financial system may be reformed and that the issuing of credit may no longer be left in the hands of a few individuals but may be controlled by the Bank of Canada together with the Canadian government which administers the affairs of the country and represents all Canadians.

If the Créditistes in particular objected to applications for the creation of new chartered banks, they had another reason: similar applications had been made by a certain province and they were practically denied.

I know that right now two provinces are interested in owning bank shares but apparently the federal government does not want to grant them that privilege.

I think that until now only British Columbia and Quebec have expressed the desire to own bank shares. On the other hand, I know that one province in particular, that is British Columbia, has submitted a petition in the form of a bill to obtain a bank charter. That bill is now in the other place and since the Senate stands adjourned until June 22, it is obvious that the bill will not be passed before the end of June or at least that it will not be submitted to the House of Commons before then.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that if the bill concerning the incorporation of the Bank of British Columbia had been introduced in the house, we would have asked that the three bills be referred to the committee on banking and commerce for a special study; but as the said bill still remains in the Senate, we will have to wait until it comes before the house, is examined and referred to the committee on Banking and Commerce.

Mr. Speaker, I referred a while ago to the fact that some provinces want to own bank shares. A few weeks ago the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon) stated that he would object thereto.

When these two provinces expressed the wish to own bank shares, I kept wondering where this would lead us; in short, what was their purpose. So I drew a parallel between the two provinces concerned, namely British Columbia and Quebec, and I wondered what could induce the authorities of those provinces to want to own bank shares.

So far as British Columbia is concerned, I sympathize with the provincial authorities, since the province records surpluses and has no debts so to speak; thus, the holding of bank shares would place it in a beneficial position.

On the other hand, so far as the province of Quebec is concerned, a province which is up to its ears in debt, I wondered what would be the use of holding bank shares in its case. But when I heard the Minister of Finance stating that a bill would be introduced to prevent the Canadian provinces from holding bank shares—

Mr. Basford: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I fail to see that the hon. Member's remarks are relevant to the bill before us.

Mr. Laprise: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker, the few points I am raising now are precisely meant to explain why I am supporting the amendment moved by the hon. Member for Charlevoix, to have this bill given the six months' hoist.

As I was saying, the federal government's refusal to allow the provinces to own bank shares goes against the constitution in my opinion, because the British North America Act—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. If I may, I should like to draw the hon. member's attention to the fact that the comments he is making now seem to go a little beyond the limits of the subject under discussion and I suggest that he come back to the bill now before us, which deals with the incorporation of the Laurentide Bank of Canada.

Mr. Laprise: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your remarks and if I strayed away from the subject, it was precisely to make known the reasons why I support the amendment of the hon. Member for Charlevoix proposing a six months' hoist with respect to that bill.

Mr. Speaker, we now have before us two bills to incorporate chartered banks. On the other hand, everybody—including you, sir—knows that another group of businessmen has called for a bank charter, and I want to deal with those three petitions at the same time. I was saying that the British North America Act, and particularly section 91, subsection 13, allotted property rights to the provinces.

Mr. Speaker, I suggest that when this measure is officially put before the house, we will have the opportunity to object and to have provincial rights recognized. Moreover, according to the reports of the Senate committee which considered the matter, the Laurentide Bank of Canada which Bill No. C-95 tends to incorporate is nothing but an offshoot of a finance company called the Laurentide Finance Company.

Mr. Speaker, I feel that when the debate on the revision of the Bank Act is resumed within a few days, we will then be better prepared to determine whether it would be useful to grant new bank charters in Canada.

A few days ago, during consideration of another similar bill, I mentioned that the banks had more than 5,300 branches across the country, and that they were in a position to render the services which the people are entitled to.

When the revision of the Bank Act has been completed, I am of the opinion that perhaps we will be better informed to make a thorough study of any new application for a chartered bank.

Mr. Pierre-André Boutin (Dorchester): Mr. Speaker, once again we are considering Bill C-95 entitled: "An act to incorporate the Laurentide Bank of Canada" and the amendment proposed by the hon. Member for Charlevoix (Mr. Bélanger) to the effect that Bill C-95 should not be read a second time, but that it should be given a six month's hoist.

Mr. Speaker, I do not understand why the other place, to which were submitted three bills to incorporate banks, has rejected one and passed the other two. I think that it would have been advisable and essential for the Senate to pass those three applications for the incorporation of banks and then to send them to the House of Commons, before they were referred to the committee on banking and commerce after second reading.

I am really amazed to see that the business men going under the name of The Laurentide Bank of Canada are dead set on presenting a bill to get a bank charter, while they are perfectly aware that a bill to amend the Bank Act and banking is already on the order paper. In fact, the right hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson) said something about it barely two days ago. Since that resolution must be considered prior to July 1, I fail to see what would be the use of accepting or granting new chartered banks before we get the result of the Bank Act revision.

• (5:20 p.m.)

These people who are asking for a bank charter seem in a great hurry. It looks as if there is something in it for them. That is why we do not want new chartered banks approved until the Bank Act has been examined by the House of Commons.

On several occasions over the last few years, we denounced the excessive discretionary powers granted to the present chartered banks. These powers are too wide because they give some individuals absolute control over the whole country's economy.

Chartered banks are the very basis of our country's monetary system and, consequently, of its economic life.

A country's monetary system is, with regard to its economy, the wheel, accelerator and brakes of an automobile, that is the most important parts of the car.

In fact with the powers they hold at the present time, the chartered banks control all the economic activity of our nation. They can speed it up, as it happens in certain years, or slow it down, as they please.

We have had an example of this during the depression years from 1929 to 1939. It was not that the people were not able to work or produce, but the chartered banks had restricted credit in order to control in an even more frightening way, the economic blood stream of the nation, i.e. money.

The chartered banks hold in their all-powerful hands the economic life or the economic life blood of individuals, companies and in fact, of the whole nation. Our economic life will have its ups and downs depending on the way they increase or tighten credit.

It is to remove or reduce the influence of chartered banks at the present time and show the deadly danger of leaving in the hands of some individuals such a dangerous weapon which can increase or decrease credit, that is the reason I object to the setting up of new chartered banks.

That is why, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to second the amendment moved by the hon. member for Charlevoix (Mr. Bélanger), namely: that we should not accept, now or at any time, these new chartered banks; that the measure be hoisted six months and that we wait for the outcome of debates in the House of Commons concerning the Bank Act, which should come up in a few weeks, in view of the announcement made yesterday or the day before, by the Prime Minister himself.

That is why we should agree to the amendment moved by the hon. member for Charlevoix.

Mr. Gérard Perron (Beauce): Mr. Speaker, so that it will not be said that the war ended for lack of warriors, I take the liberty of coming back to Bill No. C-95, an application by a group of persons who have the privilege, like others throughout the country, of operating a banking business.

I would not deny them that right, provided we are properly enlightened on their aims and on the possible repercussions of granting such a right to that group of financiers who, from certain information we have, already possess considerable power in the country's financial or monetary affairs.

Among the applicants we see the names of Mr. Peter Paul Saunders, executive, Mr. Elliott Saxton, executive, Mr. William Crossley Mainwaring, executive. All those men are also managers, directors or shareholders of a finance company known as Laurentide Finance. Most of them gave evidence before the Senate committee.

According to No. 1 of the report of proceedings, Mr. Peter Saunders testified on Wednesday, May 27, 1964, that the promoters of this bank are well-intentioned and have been planning for several years to own a bank charter which would surely enable them to broaden their monetary activities, within the country and, I would even say, abroad. That explains what they intend to do with respect to the distribution of the capital stock of that bank. Page 9 of the report of the standing committee, reads as follows:

—it is now intended that the bank will be financed by a portion of the capital to be issued being offered to the shareholders of Laurentide Financial Corporation Ltd.,

—a finance company which has been doing business about ten years in Canada, both in the province of Quebec and in the other provinces, under the legislation governing small loans companies and consumer credit companies.

We all know that interest rates are charged on those small loans granted consumers for the purchase of production or consumer goods. Those people would be given a powerful weapon should they be granted, through a chartered bank which they would own themselves, the power to multiply the promissory notes signed by the borrowers of the Laurentide Financial Corporation Ltd., because for all such loans, the borrower must necessarily sign a note whereby he promises to reimburse every month on a certain date, during a period of 10, 12, 24 or 30 months, an amount which includes the principal and interest.

But when we examine those loans, we realize that the rate of interest charged is unreasonable.

The granting of this charter to the petitioners would therefore mean that vested rights would be given to persons who already exercise very strong powers in the monetary field in this country.

• (5:30 p.m.)

The Minister of Finance stated recently that he hoped the Canadian Parliament would, through the Bank of Canada, exercise better control, I would even say closer control, over the amount of money in circulation or over the money supply in Canada.

I do not think his goal will be achieved by granting charters to banks or companies or persons who, I agree, have a lot of experience in banking or in money matters.

In order to clarify the matter, the witness states, as reported on page 10 of this report:

I have mentioned that we consider it desirable for the proposed bank to ally itself with Laurentide Financial Corporation Ltd., with which company a number of us appearing before you today are associated in one way or another. It may be of interest to the members of the committee to know that the directors of Laurentide Financial Corporation formed the intention, approximately eight years ago, to assist in the formation and development of a new Canadian chartered bank. This was prompted by their view, which continues today, that such an institution could be of benefit to and be assisted by that company to the advantage of each—

I do not know whether they meant the Canadian company or their own company.

[Mr. Perron.]

—of benefit to and be assisted by that company to the advantage of each.

He goes on to say:

Active co-operation toward this end commenced some four years ago—

Here, Mr. Speaker, is the explanation of what I referred to not only in regard to monetary and banking business in Canada but also to its important and far reaching effects—

Active co-operation toward this end commenced some four years ago when Laurentide Financial Corporation Ltd., together with local interests, formed the Commonwealth Industrial Bank Limited in the Bahama Islands. At about the same time, the company began to locate its offices in Canada in premises which could be suitable for the operation of bank branches. There are now more than 70 such locations distributed amongst the provinces of Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

Thus a man could, perhaps under normal circumstances, go to the bank to borrow $1,000, $2,000 or $3,000 and be turned down. He might then climb one flight of stairs in the same building and go to the Laurentide Finance Limited where he could obtain a loan at the rate of 18 or 24 per cent interest. The next day, the same note used on the next floor up has now come down and meets the terms required under the Bank Act by those moneymakers controlling the economic blood of the nation. They are becoming the true masters of family life and individuals and they also control this parliament to a very large extent.

Certain facts are quite revealing, according to this:

A correlation of the growth in national income and the assets of all the Canadian chartered banks shows a remarkably similar pattern. In the nine-year period ending December 31, 1963, the national income increased by 72 per cent as did the assets of the chartered banks.

Assets of chartered banks, therefore, have also shown the same increase as the national income, that is an increase of 72 per cent in nine years of operation, nine years of labour by the Canadian people, nine years of intensive development of our natural resources. During the same period, the Canadian chartered banks, of which there are eight, recorded the same rate of progress.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I feel that we, of the Ralliement Créditiste, have the right to ask for more accurate information. We want to obtain fuller information concerning banking operations. That is why we are in favour of setting up a committee, to make a thorough investigation of our banking system as well as of the recommendations of the Porter commission. In allowing private enterprise, that is, those institutions called banks, to create and control the economic lifeblood of the nation, that is money, be it coins, currency or scrip money, in the form of figures, in my opinion we are failing in our duty as representatives of the people in Parliament.

It has been said and repeated many times that governments have failed to carry out their lofty purpose because they allowed private enterprise to control money, credit, at will; because they gave the chartered banks the absolute control over the creation of credit, the monetizing of credit in Canada.

I think we would be remiss in view of the fact that within a few months, that is by December 31, we will revise the Bank Act in this country.

We have witnessed too many financial ups and downs in Canada, that is times of the lean kind, corresponding to credit restrictions which lead to immediate economic crises, as a result of which we starve in spite of an abundance of wheat, and we realize that periods of prosperity occur when international or national interests must be adequately protected. Then, large credit facilities are made available and the sky is the limit when war production is concerned. Nevertheless, in the past, we have experienced the effect of credit restrictions, especially between 1930 and 1939. The situation was the same in 1932 and 1953 when restrictions were set. It was a period of unemployment and the situation was very serious in the country at a time when there were 700,000 to 800,000 unemployed. Was there a shortage of natural resources, workers, brains and roads to be built? Definitely not. Everything had slowed down in the field of consumption and the use of consumer goods.

Then, if money can have such important repercussions on the Canadian people as a whole, it is normal we should consider it as a social instrument, rather than, as suggested by the banks, as a third commodity that they have the privilege to manufacture as they please, but actually as a social instrument to be distributed and put into circulation at the same rate as society itself, through scientific progress, the labour of man and the development of natural resources. It should be distributed as a commodity at the disposal of human beings. Goods exist in order to satisfy our needs. This third commodity, as suggested by bankers, being controlled by private enterprise called banks, does not always constitute a bond between the two. That is why if we do not always support the views of those so-called economists who warn us of periods of recession and of tighter credit especially for workers and farmers, because when the big fellows are on the verge of bankruptcy, credit is released and new life is put into the economy. When the wheel turns too fast, credit is once again curtailed.

Such are the theories advocated, for instance, by the Secretary of State (Mr. Lamontagne) who explained them in a document put at the disposal of Quebec citizens. As far as we are concerned, our economic theories are to give new life to the Canadian people so that they will no longer be deprived in the midst of prosperity and the poorest will be sure to get enough to live on thanks to the government which, in the exercise of its sovereign rights, will control through its agencies normal social credit which will allow for a better development of our wealth and will give our poor classes a chance to enjoy the country's prosperity.

Mr. A. B. Patterson (Fraser Valley): Mr. Speaker, I am not sure how many times this bill has been before the House in this session and we remember, of course, that it was also before the House on a number of occasions in the last session. This is the first time I have entered the debate and I assure the House my intervention will be very brief.

There is a new development in Canada which is more or less a reversal of the trend in past years, when the number of banks operating in this country was constantly decreasing. In recent months there have been three applications for charters and it would seem that this is all to the good. I believe this development is a healthy one that should be welcomed. I do not know whether it will result in making it a little more uncomfortable for those already engaged in the banking business in Canada, but I am sure it will eventually be to the advantage of the economy and of our people as a whole.

• (5:40 p.m.)

Now, the principle of competition in banking has been urged by the Royal Commission as necessary to the proper and adequate functioning of our financial system. I believe the suggestion that has been made that there is already adequate competition amongst the various banks of our country is open to question. In the banking commission report we received some time ago two dangers were pointed out. The first was the danger of agreements which would limit competition amongst financial institutions. The second was the concentration of the financial system.

This is not the time, Mr. Speaker, to discuss over-all banking procedure and the monetary system. We are looking forward to the opportunity of debating this more fully when we return to the various bank items that have been introduced and which will be considered at a later date. There have been several developments that are giving cause for great concern. First of all, there was the announcement by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon) concerning his intention to introduce amendments which would prohibit provincial governments from owning bank's shares. This subject may be considered a little beyond the ambit of this particular bill, but it does mean that provincial governments would not be able to invest any money whatever in the shares of this particular bank, were it to be granted a charter. I think the Minister of Finance knows very well that when he brings this matter before the House there is going to be serious opposition taken to it. It is going to be criticized most strongly because we are definitely of the opinion this is something that should not be done; he should not forbid provincial governments purchasing the shares of banks. We believe it is an infringement of the rights of the elected representatives of the people in another jurisdiction to introduce such a measure. This is one of the things that is causing a great deal of concern and it does enter our minds when we are discussing the measure we have before us.

The other factor is the action of the other place in dealing with applications such as the one we have before us today. As has been pointed out, there were three applications to the other place during the last session. It seems that two were granted without serious opposition, yet the third was turned down. When the report of the Banking and Commerce Committee of the other place was dealt with, one application was rejected and the matter referred back to the Banking and Commerce Committee. The interesting thing is, Mr. Speaker, that the application of the Bank of British Columbia was referred by the other place to the Banking and Commerce Committee. Then the other place immediately took a long recess. It does not seem as though they are too much interested in getting this particular application through, at least not as much interested as they were in getting the other two applications through. These things seem rather strange. There may be certain considerations that enter into the picture which may be questioned, but it certainly looks rather strange from this vantage point.

There are other things that I believe are of interest about the particular bill before us. It has been indicated the bank intends to establish headquarters in Vancouver. We all appreciate the tremendous developments that are taking place in British Columbia. Certainly I think that Province warrants something like this. I feel it is a good thing so far as this particular measure is concerned. Then, too, the directors are residents of Canada. This is commendable because in the past there has been a great deal of opposition to the acquisition of Canadian enterprises and industry by those outside our borders. This is a desirable feature, therefore, of this particular measure.

As I say, Mr. Speaker, I believe that the multiplication of banking institutions in Canada is a desirable thing. I have no particular objection to this particular bill except this, and it has been mentioned several times and was dealt with specifically by the hon. Member for Lake St. John (Mr. Lessard) last session, when he pointed out that the bank could possibly become the wholesale office for the retail outlets of the Laurentide Finance Company. This is something open to question; we wonder if it is desirable. It could be abused and it could possibly have a very serious effect on our people and on our economy. Nevertheless, let me say again that I believe there should be additional banks established in Canada. For that reason, I believe that possibly we should delay the passage of this particular bill until the other one comes from the other place. Then, as has been pointed out, the three could be considered together in the light of the needs of Canada for banking institutions and in the light of the debates that will possibly take place on the question of banks and banking in Canada.

• (5:50 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, Bill No. C-95, an Act to incorporate the Laurentide Bank of Canada, has been under study and under consideration for a few weeks under this title, while last year we considered a similar bill from the other place.

As was stated by the hon. Member for Fraser Valley (Mr. Patterson) we have no objection to the proliferation of banking institutions or banks in Canada. On the other hand we are against an application being treated differently from other applications.

Today we are considering Bill No. C-95. There is also Bill No. C-99 to incorporate the Bank of Western Canada, but the bill we do not have concerns a bank which would be called the Bank of British Columbia. This bill has not been dealt with in the other place, in the same way as the two other applications for the setting up of new banks in Canada. When the three bills respecting the setting-up of banks are introduced together in the house, and referred later to the Banking and Commerce committee, we will allow the passing of Bills C-95 and C-99; but until then, if any discrimination is shown as at present, we in turn, will do likewise.

We are now considering the amendment moved by the hon. member for Charlevoix (Mr. Bélanger), for a six months' hoist. Well, after the vote on the amendment moved by the hon. member is taken, we will introduce a further amendment for another six months' or even 12 months' hoist if necessary. So long as the other bank bill is not introduced in the same way as the other two I have just mentioned, we will vote against the others.

Bill No. C-95 provides that:

—the persons hereinafter named have by their petition prayed that it be enacted as hereinafter set forth—

Precisely along the same line as the act now governing chartered banks in Canada.

—and it is expedient to grant the prayer of the said petition: Therefore Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, enacts as follows:

1. Peter Paul Saunders, Executive, Andrew Elliott Saxton, Executive, William Crossley Mainwaring, O.B.E., Executive, Paul Britton Paine, one of Her Majesty's Counsel, Howard Theodore Mitchell, Publisher, and Edgar John Saba, Merchant, all of the City of Vancouver, in the Province of British Columbia, and Lionel Leroux, Notary, and Bernard de Lorimier Bourgeois, one of Her Majesty's Counsel, both of the City of Montreal, in the Province of Quebec, together with such persons as become shareholders in the corporation by this Act created, are incorporated under the name of Laurentide Bank of Canada, hereinafter called "the Bank".

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have received in my office, among the citizens I have just mentioned, visitors from British Columbia and the province of Quebec who told me that the purpose of this bank is to give sound help to the poor French Canadians of the province of Quebec who have been unable, up to the present, to finance their own projects through their own financial institutions, and to help small wage earners in the province of Quebec to spread their wings, to gather economic momentum, to develop and to expand the economy of the province of Quebec.

In the province of Quebec, we have chartered banks. For instance, the National Canadian Bank, which was established by French Canadians, to assist French Canadians, to finance the province of Quebec, to finance the economic development of the province of Quebec. There is not a single Canadian bank that is stingier than the National Canadian Bank when it comes to banking operations, to assisting the economic development of a province like ours or of any province.

An hon. Member: One has to resort to the Royal Bank.

Mr. Caouette: Yes, one has to resort to the Royal Bank.

I can see that the hon. Member for Argenteuil-Deux-Montagnes (Mr. Drouin) is applauding. He probably finds it difficult to borrow from the National Canadian Bank.

The privileges requested by the Laurentide Bank are exactly those enjoyed by the other chartered banks throughout the country. What are those privileges? Well, let us assume I walk into the Laurentide Bank of Canada after it has been established, and I borrow $10,000. Under the law now governing Canada's chartered banks, I borrow $10,000 at 6 per cent interest, which amounts to $600. As I do not quite need the $10,000 immediately, I put the money into a savings account rather than a current account. The bank will pay 3 per cent interest on my savings account, that is $300 on my $10,000 deposit. This means that I lose $300 per year if I do not use the $10,000 I have borrowed.

But that is not the paradox. It is that, whenever I open a savings account in any branch of a bank in Canada, immediately my savings account is transferred to the reserve account of the said bank, and then the bank has, or will have soon, a right—if the legislation to decrease their reserve to 7 per cent comes into force—to multiply my $10,000 savings account by 14½ times, thus creating $145,000 worth of credit at 6 per cent interest; this will yield the bank $8,700 in interest per year, in addition to the $600 I pay on my loan, which means $9,300 in addition to the $10,000 I borrowed one year before. That is the paradox. And that is the monetary system that the Grits as well as the Tories persist in maintaining in Canada, a system which breeds poverty and which resulted in small people becoming smaller in greater numbers and in big people getting bigger in greater numbers in all Canadian provinces. In fact, the power of the banks is almost unlimited. For instance, someone may borrow out of the $145,000 created by that savings deposit because it makes up a reserve for the chartered bank, giving it authority to multiply again by 14½ the amount of its reserve. We may say that Canadian banks have an unlimited power which is laid in the hands of a small group of men who are not the owners of that money but who are the depositaries of those funds that they manage as they please.

We do not object to having two, four or ten more banks in the country. We are not against the system itself. We ask that the banks have a 100 per cent reserve like the credit unions. Then, the banks will be able to lend exactly as they do today, but they will lend what they have and not what they do not have. The only institution which should have that power to multiply by 14, 15 or 20 is the Bank of Canada, owned by the Canadian people. And that is the responsibility of a Parliament that is responsible, sovereign and able to assume its own responsibilities in a country such as ours.

Mr. Speaker, as I pointed out at the beginning of my remarks, we do not object to other banks being incorporated in Canada. Besides, in the committee on banking and commerce we will be able to discuss the control placed in the hands of these few individuals, but when I see the government placing before us all kinds of legislation designed to restrict private enterprise, which builds something in Canada, in brief to restrict the personality of men and individuals in Canada, then I object.

However, when we should tackle our monetary system, members on the other side of the house remain silent. In fact, to your right, people seem to be out of breath, without any voice in short they are unable to express themselves when we have to deal with monetary matters.

Well, we, in this corner of the house, the Créditistes, will not be afraid to speak time and again on this question.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. The hour appointed for the consideration of private Members' business has now expired.

[Mr. Caouette.]

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED UNDER ADJOURNMENT MOTION

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to provisional Standing Order 39-A, to inform the House that the questions to be raised at ten o'clock p.m. this day are as follows: (1) the hon. Member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie)—C.B.C.—request for better facilities in Vancouver; (2) the hon. Member for Carleton (Mr. Francis)—Parliament Hill—provision for parking for tourist buses; (3) the hon. Member for Kootenay West (Mr. Herridge)—Labour relations—Hal Banks—deposit in Montreal bank to cover wages of S.I.U. seamen.

The House will now resume the business that was interrupted at five o'clock.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

AMENDMENT OF STANDING ORDERS RESPECTING CONDUCT OF BUSINESS

The House resumed consideration in committee of the following resolution—Mr. Pearson—Mr. Lamoureux in the Chair.

That the following amendments be made to Standing Orders:

1. That Standing Order 6 be deleted and the following substituted therefor:

Standing Order 6

6. (1) At 6:00 o'clock p.m. on Wednesdays and Fridays and at 10:00 o'clock p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, unless provided otherwise in these Standing Orders, Mr. Speaker shall adjourn the House without question put until the next sitting day.

(2) A motion that the House continue to sit after the hour specified in Section (1) may be made at any time without notice. If any member objects to the motion, Mr. Speaker shall request those members who object to rise in their places and if ten or more members then rise, the question shall not be put on the motion. If no member objects or if fewer than ten members rise in their places, the motion shall be deemed to be carried. No debate or formal vote shall be held on such a motion to extend a sitting. An extended sitting under the provisions of this Section, unless a closing time has been specified, shall not be terminated except by the adoption of a motion to adjourn and Mr. Speaker shall not deem that a motion to adjourn the House has been made by virtue of the operation of any other Standing Order.

(3) If any member objects to the taking of a vote at any time between 1:00 o'clock p.m. and 2:30 o'clock p.m. or between 6:00 o'clock p.m. and 8:00 o'clock p.m., Mr. Speaker shall request those members who object to rise in their places and if five or more members rise, the taking of the vote shall be postponed until after 2:30 o'clock p.m. or until after 8:00 o'clock p.m. as the case may be.

(4) When it is provided in any Standing Order or in any order of the House that the business under consideration at the ordinary time of adjournment be forthwith disposed of or concluded, Mr. Speaker shall not adjourn the House until the specified proceedings be completed.

2. That Section (1) of Standing Order 12 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 12, Section (1)

12. (1) Mr. Speaker shall preserve order and decorum, and shall decide questions of order. In explaining a point of order or practice, he shall state the standing order or authority applicable to the case. No debate shall be permitted on any such decision, nor shall any such decision be subject to an appeal to the House.

3. That Sections (3) and (4) of Standing Order 15 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 15, Sections (3) and (4)

15. (3) Except as otherwise provided in these Standing Orders, the order of business for the consideration of the House, day-by-day, after the daily routine shall be as follows:

(Monday)

Questions.
Government orders.
(From six to seven o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)
Notices of Motions.

(Tuesday)

Government orders.
Questions.
(From six to seven o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)
Public bills.

(Wednesday)

Questions.
Notices of motions for the production of papers.
Government orders.
(From five to six o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)
Notices of motions.
Public bills.

(Thursday)

Government orders.
Questions.
(From six to seven o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)

A. On the first and each alternate Thursday thereafter:
Notices of motions (papers).
Private bills.
Public bills.

B. On the second and each alternate Thursday thereafter:
Private bills.
Notices of motions (papers).
Public bills.

(Friday)

Government orders.
Questions.
(From five to six o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)
Public bills.
Private bills.

(4) When a debate on a motion "That Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair" for the House to go into Committee of Supply is in progress at 6:00 o'clock p.m. on either a Monday or a Tuesday, the order for Private Members' Business on that day shall be suspended.

4. That Section (2) of Standing Order 31 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 31, Section (2)

31. (2) When the business of Private Members is being considered, no member shall speak for more than twenty minutes at a time.

5. That Section (5) of Standing Order 39 be enacted to read as follows:

Standing Order 39, Section (5)

39. (5) Before the Orders of the Day are proceeded with, questions on matters of urgency may be addressed orally to Ministers of the Crown, provided however that if in the opinion of Mr. Speaker a question is not urgent, he may direct that it be placed on the Order Paper, provided also that the time allowed for a question period prior to the calling of the Orders of the Day shall not exceed thirty minutes.

A member who is not satisfied with the answer given to a question asked on any day at this stage, or a member who has been told by Mr. Speaker that his question is not urgent, may give notice that he intends to raise the subject-matter of his question on the adjournment of the House. The notice referred to herein, whether or not it is given orally during the question period before the Orders of the Day, must be given in writing to Mr. Speaker not later than 5:00 o'clock p.m. the same day.

6. That the Standing Orders be amended by adding thereto a new Standing Order 41-A, to read as follows:

Standing Order 41-A

41-A Unless notice of motion has been given under Standing Order 41, any member proposing to raise a question of privilege other than one arising out of proceedings in the Chamber during the course of a sitting shall give to the Speaker a written statement of the question at least one hour prior to raising the question in the House.

7. That Standing Order 43 be amended by adding thereto a new Section (2), to read as follows:

Standing Order 43, Section (2)

43. (2) When debate on any motion made under Standing Order 15 (2) is adjourned or interrupted, the order for resumption of the same shall be transferred to and considered under Government Orders.

8. That Standing Order 44 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 44

44. When a question is under debate no motion is received unless to amend it; to postpone it to a day certain; for the previous question; for reading the orders of the day; for proceeding to another order; to adjourn the debate; to extend the sitting of the House; or for the adjournment of the House.

9. That Section (4) of Standing Order 59 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 59, Section (4)

59. (4) The Chairman shall maintain order in the Committees of the Whole House, deciding all questions of order subject to an appeal to Mr. Speaker; but disorder in a committee can only be censured by the House, on receiving a report thereof. No debate shall be permitted on any decision.

House of Commons Procedures

10. That Standing Order 65 amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 65

65 (1) At the commencement of each session, a special committee, consisting of seven members, shall be appointed, whose duty it shall be to prepare and report, with all convenient speed, lists of members to compose the following standing committees of the House:

(a) on Agriculture, Forestry, and Rural Development, to consist of 45 members;
(b) on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts, to consist of 22 members;
(c) on Crown Corporations, to consist of 22 members;
(d) on External Affairs, to consist of 22 members;
(e) on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, to consist of 22 members;
(f) on Fisheries, to consist of 22 members;
(g) on Health and Welfare, to consist of 22 members;
(h) on Housing, Urban Development and Public Works, to consist of 22 members;
(i) on Human Rights and Citizenship and Immigration, to consist of 22 members;
(j) on Industry, Research and Energy Development, to consist of 22 members;
(k) on Justice and Legal Affairs, to consist of 22 members;
(l) on Labour and Employment, to consist of 22 members;
(m) on Miscellaneous Estimates, to consist of 22 members;
(n) on Miscellaneous Private Bills, to consist of 22 members;
(o) on National Defence, to consist of 22 members;
(p) on Northern Affairs and National Resources, to consist of 22 members;
(q) on Privileges and Elections, to consist of 22 members;
(r) on Public Accounts, to consist of 24 members;
(s) on Standing Orders, to consist of 22 members;
(t) on Transport and Communications, to consist of 22 members; and
(u) on Veterans Affairs, to consist of 22 members.

(2) The Special Committee shall also prepare and report with all convenient speed, lists of members to compose the following standing committees:

on Printing, to act as members on the part of this House on the Joint Committee of both Houses on the subject of the printing of Parliament, to consist of 23 members;

on the Library of Parliament, so far as the interests of this House are concerned, and to act as members of the Joint Committee of both Houses, to consist of 21 members;

provided that a sufficient number of members of joint committees shall be appointed so as to keep the same proportion in such committees as between the memberships of the House of Commons and Senate.

(3) A majority of the members of a standing committee shall constitute a quorum unless the House otherwise orders;

Provided that, in the case of a joint committee, the number of members constituting a quorum shall be such as the House of Commons acting in consultation with the Senate may determine.

(4) The Standing Committees shall be severally empowered to examine and enquire into all such matters and things as may be referred to them by the House; to report from time to time their observations and opinions thereon; to send for persons, papers and records; and to print, from day-to-day, such papers and evidence as may be ordered by them, and Standing Order 66 shall not apply in relation thereto.

(5) Any member of the House of Commons who is not a member of a standing committee, may unless the House or the standing committee otherwise orders, take part in the deliberations of the standing committee, but shall not vote or move any motion or any amendment or be counted in the quorum.

11. That Standing Order 99 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 99

99. No Bill for the incorporation of a railway or canal company, or for authorizing the construction of branch lines or extensions of existing lines of railways or of canals, or for changing the route of the railway or of the canal of any company already incorporated, shall be considered by the Committee on Transport and Communications, until there has been filed with the committee, at least one week before the consideration of the bill, a map or plan drawn upon a scale of not less than half an inch to the mile, showing the location upon which it is intended to construct the proposed work, and showing also the lines of existing or authorized works of a similar character within, or in any way affecting the district, or any part thereof, which the proposed work is intended to serve; and such map or plan shall be signed by the engineer or other person making the same.

12. That Standing Order 105 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 105

105. Every private bill, when read a second time, is referred to one of the standing committees as follows: bills relating to banks, insurance, trade and commerce and to trust and loans companies, to the Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs; bills relating to railways, canals, telegraphs, canal and railway bridges, to the Committee on Transport and Communications; the bills not coming under these classes, to the Committee on Miscellaneous Private Bills, and all petitions for or against the bills are considered as referred to such committee.

At six o'clock the Committee took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The Committee resumed at 8 p.m.

The Chairman: Order. When the Committee rose at 5 p.m. an amendment proposed by the hon. Member for Timiskaming was being considered. Is the Committee ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Otto: Mr. Chairman, I do not want to take up the time of the Committee; however, the hon. Member for Timiskaming made some statements which I do not believe should go unchallenged. First he said that he could become quite obnoxious.

Mr. Scott: What is wrong with that?

Mr. Otto: I am not going to challenge that, either. In connection with this resolution he also said that there was something wrong about sitting through the lunch and dinner hour occasionally. Surely the hon. Member does not suggest that something spectacular happens apart from the dinner hour. Consider the time now, Mr. Chairman. It is not dinner hour. I am sure we will get as good an attendance as we have had on many occasions when there is no dinner or lunch hour. On top of that, it would not do us too much harm, some of us, to miss the occasional lunch and dinner hour.

Mr. Fane: Speak for yourself.

Mr. Lambert: Wear your own halo.

Mr. Otto: Specifically in connection with the private Members hour, Mr. Chairman, the hon. gentleman seemed to consider that the private Members hour should be at a more appropriate time. I want to challenge that, first. I think we should try to stick to the truth and with the knowledge that private Members hour is really of little use at the present time.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Otto: It is of very little use. Considering that a great number of Canadians are under the impression that a bill introduced by a private Member has some importance, I think it is about time we brought it to their attention that such a bill often cannot pass, and rightly so, because surely the hon. gentleman does not represent that a private Member's bill should pass without responsibility, and the Government have to take responsibility for it.

Surely no one can suggest that such a bill can always pass, and is it not just as well that, failing to do away with private Members hour completely, we should have it on some occasion when it does not interfere with the conduct of business in the House? I suggest we have come to the day when the time of the House is becoming very, very precious and it is time we dealt with the business of the Government rather than indulging in an exercise of elocution or debate. Having said that, Mr. Chairman, I just wanted to state to the Committee that I do not believe the arguments presented by the hon. Member really have much foundation in fact.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, I would expect that the remarks just made by the hon. Member are probably shared to a greater or lesser degree by most of the Members of the Liberal Party. It is quite true that over the years this matter of the private Members hour, and bills introduced by private Members—although some consideration has to be given to what they really are—must be of such a legislative nature that there is no financial responsibility resting on the Government. A private Member is not allowed to introduce a money bill. A money bill, of course, has to be introduced by way of resolution. While some resolutions can be introduced by private Members, the financial responsibility attaching to them has to be worded in such a way that the Government will give consideration to the spending of money, not that the Government will spend it.

This has not always been true because there have been one or two exceptions. One that comes to mind is the bill passed recently for which one of the colleagues of the hon. Member who has just spoken has taken some credit, and rightly so, whether or not the credit is on the debit or credit side of the ledger. This bill involved the matter of a very simple change in the name of our major air line, from Trans-Canada Air Lines to Air Canada. There was an incidental expense in this connection that has amounted to something like three quarters of a million dollars already, and there will probably be much more expense in the future. This I presume, because the Speaker allowed it, was an incidental expense and was really not involved in the original bill. But I think it is a fact that many of the bills which have been introduced over the years have been introduced to give some expression to a new idea and have in many cases—I referred this afternoon to the one concerned with the abolition of capital punishment—become popularized throughout the country and have actually been acted upon by the Government.

It is true that there is this caveat on the abolition of capital punishment that it is going to be a free vote. But it has been my impression since I have been in this House that there is no such thing in parliament as a free vote; that parties do insist on a certain amount of loyalty, and that we in Canada are not grown up in the political sense to the extent that we can really have what could be called a free vote.

The other matter, Mr. Chairman, is the attendance in this House. I am inclined to believe—and I think there are other hon. Members who will agree with me—that the attendance is going to be very sparse between the particular period from six o'clock to eight o'clock. I suggest that it is quite likely there will be an adjournment during that period because of the lack of a quorum. In the committees which I have attended I have not noticed a predominance of Government Members, and often the reason a quorum was not obtained earlier was that the Government had not been able to provide their share of the people to make up the committee. I believe the same thing will be true in the House and the Government will be very hard pressed to persuade Members to take part.

I would like to mention one other matter that has not been raised; that is, the role of the Official Opposition. It seems to me that the new House Leader of the Opposition cannot go completely blameless with regard to some of the things that were decided in these very complicated relationships in reference to the Standing Orders. It would appear to me—and I may be doing him an injustice—that most of these changes have been made by agreement between the two major parties in this House for the specific purpose of trying, wherever the rules will allow, to re-establish the two-party system. I am not particularly concerned about the fact that I know the Members of his party are no less interested in having a dinner hour than most of the other Members of the House. In my opinion they are not quite in the same position as the Government Members.

Mr. Moreau: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Member a question?

Mr. Peters: Sure.

Mr. Moreau: I wonder whether the hon. Member is aware of the statistics on committees attendance. I wrote to Mr. Speaker for the figures with regard to the percentage attendance, by parties, in committees. I find in the reply which the staff prepared that the attendance on the Government side was better than any other party's, certainly better than the hon. Member's.

• (8:10 p.m.)

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, I have not come prepared to debate attendance on committees in general, and I have no intention whatever of defending my party and its attendance in committees. However, I sit on several committees, one of which is the Agriculture and Colonization Committee, and I think no one who has sat on that Committee during the past year is unaware of the fact that it is always Government Members we wait for to get that Committee started; and it is always lack of Government Members which causes the Committee to cut short its session before the termination of the period it decided to sit.

I also point out that I am on several other committees, but as I am not statistically prepared to deal with attendances generally I can only speak about those I sit on. I am not quarrelling about this, but there is a tendency in this regard in other committees too. For example, on the Special Committee on Railways—

Mr. Moreau: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a question of privilege. The hon. Member is suggesting that his attendance on the Agriculture Committee has given him an insight into the statistics regarding attendance on that particular Committee. I would put on record that the N.D.P. attendance—

The Chairman: Order. That is not a question of privilege. I suggest to the hon. Member that the relative attendance of Members on committees is not relevant to the discussion at hand at the moment.

Mr. Moreau: On a point of order—

The Chairman: Order, please. The hon. Member for Timiskaming has the floor.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, I agree that this is not a matter now before the Committee. The only reason I raised it was because I was wondering whether we intend to set up here something which I doubt, from past experience, will be successful in providing even a bare quorum. I am also wondering whether the Government is removing the quorum during this period. It seems to me it might be very nice if the mover of a private Member's bill could get up and make his half hour's speech and then everyone could go to supper, and we would not have to go through the rigamarole of talking it out. If the Government would withdraw their Members during private Members hour they could always call it off because there was not a quorum.

If we are contemplating that type of action, must we not be rather silly to suggest that this will really provide more time and opportunity for discussion? I do not think there is a Member in this House who is convinced there is some use in private Members bills. Private Members often find when introducing a private Member's bill that the Government give it no consideration at all. Anybody with any connections with private Members business who believes this period serves some small function, would be more interested in having the whole procedure involving private Members business improved immensely, rather than relegating it to a period in which it is quite obvious that nobody expects any great amount of attendance.

I am not in disagreement with some of the suggestions which are made in this section. However, it was necessary to move the deletion of the four paragraphs relating to standing order 6 because the changes which are being made eliminate the existing standing order. While this does not set new hours it does eliminate the hours we now have, substituting these four paragraphs instead.

I am not sure if anyone has considered private Members hour in relation to the practice developed over the years of presenting new ideas and philosophies to the House, which the Government may eventually introduce as legislation. Offhand I cannot think of too many examples of this, but since I have been here there have been at least four or five bills which have been accepted. As the previous speaker said, I am quite prepared to admit that in the main this was not as a result of a free vote, but they were accepted by the Government and literally reintroduced with Government support. This should be a consideration when deciding on changes such as those now contemplated.

The hope of the Government, Mr. Chairman, if there is any legitimate hope, is that this will eliminate the problem of private Members hour experienced by Governments within the last four or five years. But this is a problem which we as well as the Government should face independently of rule changes. Other countries have much different ways of introducing private Members legislation. They also have different ways of introducing public legislation through private Members. I suggest that the Government may not have taken a really close look at what this is going to do to some of the legislation which is controversial, which is receiving a great deal of attention and is developing into a filibuster situation. I think the Government have found a way of getting around it, but I do suggest that in days to come the warning I have sounded will probably prove to be the fact, and this particular section will have to be renegotiated.

I have talked to a number of people who say that they agree we should have enough polish and finesse to have regular breaks for lunch. I have heard no Government Member stand up and say that this has been considered in terms of staff requirements or any of the physical conditions which must be met when such a change is made. I have heard a number of Members say they do not agree with this and they just won't be here. They have said: "When my Whip says to me he wants me in the House between six and eight, I won't be there". That may be all very well, Mr. Chairman, but I would suggest that these Members of Parliament also have a responsibility to Parliament. It is not always the Government which makes the correct decision; some Members who feel strongly about things should also express their opinions. Therefore I give the warning, although I am sure my warning will not be heeded, that this step is going to make for a very interesting two hour period over the next two or three weeks, and we will just see how it develops.

The Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Amendment (Mr. Peters) negatived: Yeas, 12; nays, 60.

• (8:20 p.m.)

Mr. Barnett: Obviously the majority of the Members of the committee is not in favour of the amendment which was proposed by our hon. friend from Timiskaming, despite the persuasiveness of some of the arguments he put forward. I would have been happy to have joined him in putting forward arguments on this question, but in view of the general arrangements which have been made in connection with the consideration of these proposals it is probably undesirable that we should take a too-extended period in which to discuss any one aspect of the proposed changes in the Standing Orders.

However, I do feel some consideration should be given to the proposed first paragraph of Order No. 15. I have a feeling—though I am sure the President of the Privy Council would not be prepared to admit it is correct—that when the proposal to abolish the supper recess was originally considered by him and by his colleagues who were drafting it they had in mind providing, in effect, a sop to the Opposition side of the House to make up for the proposal to restrict the number of days spent in Committee of Supply, and the other measure to restrict debate in special circumstances, which will probably be passed in one form or another. It has become obvious that if this was the intention—

Mr. McIlraith: Would the hon. Member permit a question? Has he not been concerned about the fact that in the course of the afternoon sittings, due to the length of the time taken on routine proceedings and the question period, and taking into account the private Members hour, there is very little opportunity left for the consideration of Government business? Is the hon. Member not concerned about this?

Mr. Barnett: The answer to that question is that the President of the Privy Council is proposing certain other action so as to make more time available for Government business in the afternoon. I realize we have not dealt with these proposals as yet. I am not maintaining for a moment that there have not been occasions during the last session or so when, between 2.30 and 6 p.m. the time available for the dispatch of Government business was much less that I think should have been available. I do not think this is the moment at which to discuss just how and why such a situation has arisen. I suppose each of us would have his interpretation of what has happened. Each of us could produce his own justification for actions he has taken as an individual Member which have helped to bring these circumstances about. But as I read this proposal it is that private Members business should be taken up in one of the hours which have been devoted in the past to the supper recess. Having regard to all the other proposals to speed up the dispatch of Government business which are being put forward, I do not see why this should be necessary, and I note that no argument has been put forward to explain why the House, having spent from six o'clock to seven o'clock on private Members business, should turn immediately to the consideration of Government business.

Other hon. Members have referred to the problems which the staff of the House will face. I listened with interest to a most eloquent speech on this subject by the hon. Member for Pontiac-Témiscamingue. So far, no spokesman for the Government has told the committee what practical measures are being proposed in an attempt to deal with this problem. I think we should have a statement from someone speaking on behalf of the Internal Economy Commission telling us just what the authorities have in mind in this regard. The President of the Privy Council very often acts as unofficial spokesman for the Commission in this House and I think we are entitled to have an assurance from him on this point. Possibly it is very well for us to subject ourselves to the indignities which are proposed in this motion, but it is quite another matter for us to foist a situation of this kind on those who are employed in the service of the House. I hope this aspect of the matter will be clarified or that there may be some modification of the proposal as it now stands before we end discussion on this particular part of the resolution before us.

Mr. Knowles: In line with the concluding suggestion just made by my hon. friend from Comox-Alberni may I put forward an amendment which obviously represents a compromise. It was our view, and it still is, that it is a mistake to add these two hours between six and eight. We think it is unfair to the Members of this House, unfair to the staff and unfair to the press. We believe it will not gain the time which the Government thinks will be gained. Our amendment which would have restored the two hour recess between six and eight o'clock and the one and a half hour recess on Friday has been defeated, so it would not be in order to move that proposition again. However, I should like to suggest to the Government that it go this far—that it provide for an hour's recess between seven and eight on Mondays, Tuesdays and Fridays.

It will be obvious that what I am offering is a compromise, giving more than we are asking. It accepts the proposition that we should sit straight through on Fridays. But I would urge, without repeating the arguments that have been made by other members of this group, that for this trial period the whole proposition the Government wants might work better if it would consider letting us have that one hour break on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays. Therefore I move:

That subparagraph (1) of the proposed Standing Order 6 be amended by changing the period at the end thereof to a comma, and by adding immediately thereafter the following words: "provided, however, that at seven o'clock p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays Mr. Speaker shall leave the Chair until eight o'clock p.m.".

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Chairman, the amendment offered is an attempt to introduce something that I suppose superficially must appear to be attractive to many Members, but I think that the proposition that the House should sit continuously throughout the afternoon and evening is one that is in common usage in many of the jurisdictions of the world and seems to work satisfactorily. We have made a compromise on all of these rule proposals that I think is very far reaching in that they will be applicable for the balance of this session and for one session thereafter on a trial basis only. I respectfully submit that we should proceed in that way, try out the suggested proposal and see if it will work. I am quite confident that it will. I sincerely believe that Members will like it much more than the present system under which they are actually forced to neglect that part of their work which involves their being back in their constituencies, in that through circumstances, not through any will of their own, they are kept here throughout the whole of the year. I think that much better results would be achieved by Parliament and in Members serving their own constituencies if our work was programmed so as to make it possible for Members to expect to be at home in their constituencies at least for certain periods of the year. For that reason I would ask the House to reject the amendment of the hon. Member and to try the proposition put forward.

Mr. Fairweather: Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the President of the Privy Council a question. What additional staff is contemplated to provide for these extra hours that the House will sit? Have these arrangements been put in motion?

Mr. McIlraith: The short answer is yes. I cannot give precise numbers but, for instance, additional Hansard reporters have been authorized, and an additional editor, and the same applies to the committee and other staffs. There is no doubt that it will take a little time to work out and perfect the system. That is perhaps the strongest reason of all for a trial basis for these rules, but the steps have been taken. Authority for the expenditure has been granted, and so on.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, I was going to rise to ask a rather similar question of the President of the Privy Council. When I was speaking a few minutes ago I said I felt, and I still feel, that we should have in somewhat greater detail than the President of the Privy Council has yet indicated what plans are afoot. He mentioned the Hansard reporters, but he made no reference to the translators or to what provision will be made in respect of the protective staff, the page boys, the officers at the table and so on. I feel quite seriously that even those who are prepared to oppose the amendment of the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre are entitled to know what the situation is, because generally speaking I think they are concerned about the matter.

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Chairman, I well understand the hon. gentleman's concern about the question. I am in some difficulty in answering it for two reasons. One is that under our system it is the responsibility of Mr. Speaker to provide the necessary staff to carry out whatever clerical and other tasks are needed by the House, but I think that answer is somewhat legalistic and is not sufficient to allay any fears in this regard.

The other difficulty is that if we were to engage staff permanently and start paying them before the changes were authorized this would, I am sure, bring a charge from the benches opposite of arrogant action on the part of the Ministers comprising the Internal Economy Commission. So for these two reasons it is not possible to give the kind of information the hon. Member wants. But it is possible for me to tell him that from the time these rules were put forward some tentative arrangements were developed, in conjunction with those responsible for the administrative services of the House of Commons. Working arrangements, if you like, were made with them to provide the organization and staff to service the changed requirements. Full cognizance has been taken of that factor.

There is no thought at all that we can extend the number of hours of sitting by 30 per cent and not increase the staff and rearrange the organization. There is no such thought at all. All these steps have been taken, the kind of steps that are preliminary to authorizing the expenditure and securing the establishment. In some cases additional prospective members of the staff have in fact been interviewed and have indicated their readiness to come. For instance, I might tell hon. Members that I asked this afternoon whether certain arrangements having to do with the ceremonial part of servicing the House between six and eight p.m. had been provided for. But it is impossible for me to go through the administration section by section and say what the staffs are. Speaking only from recollection, I rather think that three Hansard reporters and another Hansard editor are involved, and the same thing is true of other staffs.

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, the Minister has mentioned that authority will be granted for additional staff.

Mr. McIlraith: It has been.

Mr. Prittie: It may be possible to get extra page boys or Hansard reporters, but on Monday of this week the Secretary of State made a statement to the House in reply to questions I and the hon. Member for Quebec East had asked concerning interpreters, and the fact of the matter is that there are really not enough to do the work in Parliament and in its committees, as well as other jobs outside of Parliament. Furthermore, such people are simply not available in the country at the present time and even if authority is granted to hire more it will be quite some time before they can be secured. I do not know how this staff is going to cope with the problem of the hours of sitting when the staff is already spread very thin at the present time.

The Chairman: Is the Committee ready for the question?

• (8:40 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Chairman, I should like to make a few remarks about the proposed amendment of the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles).

For many days we have been discussing parliamentary procedure. It is needless to say that a reform of our parliamentary procedure is essential. However, I should say that our procedure and standing orders were not so bad, but when you make ill use of them, you are forced to amend the standing orders and to impose more severe restrictions. As some took an unfair advantage of our parliamentary procedure, we are forced to accept reforms.

Mr. Chairman, we on this side of the house are ready to agree to those reforms inasmuch as they are respectful of democracy and of the privileges of each member of this house.

No privilege of hon. members must be infringed upon and that is why we are ready to shorten the debate and even the time allocated for each speech. We are willing to accept reforms in several fields, as long as they respect democracy and the freedom of each member.

Hon. members should have the right to vote orally at any time. In ten or fifteen minutes, much can be said, provided that only the important and relevant matters are dealt with. We must not wander too far from the subject. In fact, we are ready to accept reforms under those conditions.

Mr. Chairman, if Canadian industries managed their business as we administer those of the state, many of them would be on the verge of bankruptcy within 15 days, if not sooner, because we do nothing for the country. We waste the country's money and when we return to our ridings, people ask us what we are doing here—

The Chairman: Order. Perhaps the hon. member would allow me to interrupt to remind him that we are now considering paragraph 1 of Resolution No. 15. I would advise him to restrict his remarks to that part of the resolution.

Mr. Latulippe: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Once again I revert to the amendment moved by the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre on the question of sitting during meal hours.

As a businessman of the twentieth century I find that everything has been reformed, that our great reformers, our great economists are reforming everything throughout the country, except the standing orders of the House of Commons, which have practically not been changed since confederation.

With regard to the motion, I feel that we must take enough time to eat, as businessmen would do. We must adjourn our debates at mealtime to allow everyone to live like human beings. We must also give all employees of the house, as well as the restaurant employees, time to live because we are no longer in 1914 or 1887; we are in 1965, in a country which has known progress not only in the field of science but in all fields. We have accepted all kinds of changes in all fields and we must do as much in the house.

Therefore, Mr. Chairman, hon. members' privileges must be preserved to the utmost; time allowed for debate can be shortened while giving every member the chance to express himself freely.

As far as the matter of a permanent Speaker is concerned, I fail to see what would be the use of changing the existing situation. We have our standing orders and the Speaker enforces them.

Personally, I have been satisfied with the successive Speakers we had since I have been a member of Parliament. I think that the Speakers have done their duty and I fail to see what purpose would be served by the appointment of a permanent Speaker.

We must take the Speakers as they are, we must select them from our membership and I believe that every Speaker considered it his duty to enforce standing orders. The Speakers who followed one another have enforced the rules and it is to the credit of the House to have appointed Speakers such as those I have known since I came here. I am satisfied with the way Speakers are appointed.

Mr. Chairman, I suggest once more that parliamentary procedure in the house should have been improved a long time ago, but it was not done. In fact, we have no time to do anything nowadays.

There is the unemployment problem which should certainly take part of the time of the house, so that we may find a solution. There is also the problem of agriculture—

The Chairman: Order.

Mr. Latulippe: —there is the problem of finance—

The Chairman: Order. I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but I must remind him that he should limit his remarks to paragraph 1 of the resolution now before us.

Mr. Latulippe: Mr. Chairman, I would like to repeat to the House that we must take time out for meals at the proper hours.

I think that we are able to do a man's job within the regular sitting hours. We should be able to work and represent the Canadian people honourably during reasonable hours, without doing away with mealtime recesses.

Nowadays, we do not have time for anything in this House. When we must take our responsibilities, we are no longer able to do so. All matters are submitted to independent House committees for consideration, large sums of money are spent to set up committees and to pay employees outside the regular government staff.

It seems that members no longer have time to work; they do not want to take their responsibilities. We have great responsibilities; let us face up to them. We are paid to take our responsibilities; let us take them. We do not take them because a great number of committees have been created; the work is done by independent men, outside ranks of the citizens who are elected by the people.

We are the ones elected and paid by the people and, consequently, we must do our work. We do not do our work because we do not want to face up to our responsibilities. Great responsibilities rest on our shoulders; let us accept them. We have been elected because of our promises to the people to represent them with dignity. Therefore, let us abide by our oath of office.

I conclude my remarks in that vein and, again, I would like to have dinner at six o'clock and lunch at noon.

• (8:50 p.m.)

The Chairman: Is the Committee ready for the question?

Amendment (Mr. Knowles) negatived: yeas 17; nays 74.

The Chairman: Does this conclude the discussion on clause 1?

Mr. Knowles: May I ask the President of the Privy Council a question before we conclude discussion on paragraph 1, but first may I say I am glad to note we can count on 74 hon. Members being here between seven and eight o'clock.

In view of the Minister's statement that plans have been made to engage extra staff, but in view of his further statement that this extra staff cannot be engaged until after the House passes the order, is it the intention to bring this fully into effect on Monday of next week, or will there not be a few days or a week of grace so that the necessary adjustments can be made?

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Chairman, the necessary arrangements have been made to bring this fully into effect on Monday.

Mr. Knowles: Does that mean there will be engaged by Monday sufficient extra Hansard reporters, Hansard editors, page boys, interpreters, translators, protective staff and all the rest?

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Chairman, I do not keep track of the individual staff Members and which one is on duty for each day. As the hon. Member probably well knows, it will be done by a combination of circumstances, some by having extra hours of work, some by working on their normal days off, some by extra staff, and by various other arrangements.

Mr. Knowles: Will you handle the complaints?

Mr. McIlraith: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I will be very glad to.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, may I direct a question to the President of the Privy Council?

Would he take down the names of all the Liberal members who voted in favour of the house sitting between seven and eight o'clock, so we may know when they are not here, they did not vote in earnest? For instance, the Members for Lévis (Mr. Guay), Montmagny-L'Islet (Mr. Berger), Saint-Denis (Mr. Prud'homme), Dollard, (Mr. Rouleau)—

An hon. Member: Order.

Mr. Grégoire: None the less, it would be interesting to know those who will respect their vote.

[English]

The Chairman: Order. Clause 3.

Mr. Baldwin: May I ask the President of the Privy Council whether, in the setting up of the new daily routine, he has taken into consideration the terms of a provisional standing order agreed to previously by which the term "oral questions" was placed on the daily routine of business? It may be that this has been taken care of elsewhere, but I note that no provision for oral questions is provided under the proposed Standing Order 15.

While I am dealing with this matter may I recall to his attention a discussion which took place earlier, and this compels me to refer to proposed Standing Order 43 which states:

> When debate on any motion made under Standing Order 15(2) is adjourned or interrupted, the order for resumption of the same shall be transferred to and considered under Government Orders.

When we were having a general discussion at the beginning of this debate several Members, myself included, drew to the attention of the President of the Privy Council and the Minister of Transport that if this were adhered to without any change at all, on a rigid compliance with the changed wording it would mean that motions for concurrence in committee reports would be transferred to Government Orders and might not be given the freedom which the House would desire.

At that time I suggested we might consider adding a new item to the daily routine, namely, motion for concurrence in committee reports. If the Government intends following that suggestion I suggest this is the place in which it might be effected.

Mr. McIlraith: Both points have been dealt with, Mr. Chairman. I notice the hon. Member referring to the small green publication. I think if he will check he will find that oral questions are covered in Standing Order 39(5). I have not checked this at the moment, but my understanding is that no change was made in Standing Order 15 to provide for the term "oral questions" where it appears on page 8 of the small green book. There are some changes in this small green book that were never authorized through changes made by the House. The point, however, is adequately covered by Standing Order 39, which is contained in clause 5 of the order before us, where the right for oral questions is quite clearly established. Incidentally, I will be moving an amendment to provide for the length of time allowed for them.

The other point raised by the hon. Member is dealt with in an amendment which I have undertaken to move when we reach clause 7. It is taken care of, not by amending Standing Order 15, but by adding a provision to Standing Order 43 which will provide that when the debate on any motion under Standing Order 15(2) is adjourned or interrupted, the order for resumption of the same shall be transferred to and ordered for consideration as the first order of business under Government Orders.

Then, to protect the right of the private Member to priority, it is proposed to change Standing Order 18 by adding a subparagraph stating that except as provided for in Standing Orders 43 and 56 the Government shall have the choice to arrange the business of the House under Government Orders.

Mr. Prittie: All of these changes are of great benefit to the Government but no provision has been made for an extension of private Members hour, which is to be given a change in time. Many Members feel dissatisfied with private Members hour at present. Some are dissatisfied because it is an hour and because nothing is ever decided, and invariably everything is talked out.

• (9:00 p.m.)

It is unfortunate that when the House is taking so much time to change the rules this matter has not been gone into and some suggestions made by the Government. Some Members suggest that the private Members hour as it exists at the present time is quite useless. I would not go that far. It has certainly some value; there is a chance to air certain ideas, they are reported in the press and some useful public discussion takes place. It has also some value from the point of view of the individual Member, I suppose, because it provides him with some publicity. But it can certainly be improved in many ways.

First of all, Mr. Chairman, I suggest that more time should be made available for the discussion of a bill. I do not expect that we can get any time away from the Government to add to that hour, but I suggest there might be some type of consolidation of the private Members hour, bringing it forward once every two weeks, with possibly fewer bills, allowing more time for each bill to be discussed. As it is, three Members can take up the whole hour. We have some very interesting bills on the Order Paper. There are bills dealing with the freedom of the press. The hon. Member for Port Arthur has one about disclosure of news sources; the hon. Member for Leeds has one about the age of marriage; there are bills on the question of divorce, on lotteries and bingo. These are subjects on which many Members would like to express themselves and they are subjects which are of very much interest to people in the country. But, as I said, three Members can take up the whole hour at the present time and at the end of that hour the bill simply dies, and that is all there is to it.

I think we should be considering some change along this line. I have suggested that at least a minimum of two hours be provided for private Members bills, even if it means that we discuss fewer of them during each session. I should also like to suggest that a vote be required at the end of that time. This would not inconvenience anybody, in my opinion, except possibly the Government Whip. But if we believe in good attendance in the House of Commons, this should be no particular problem. Government Members talk these bills out so that the Government will perhaps not be embarrassed; but I do not think the situation is any different from ordinary legislation, when Opposition Members may move amendments, and if the Government does not want to accept them they simply have to get their forces out. I think it would be more satisfying to the private Members of this House if some type of decision could be taken on their measures after a proper form of discussion.

It may be that all these bills do not need to be talked out. It seems to me that the Government is not using the private Members hour enough as a vehicle for passing certain legislation. During the last session we did pass one such bill, which obviously had the blessing of the Government. I refer to the bill to change the name of Trans-Canada Air Lines. There is some suspicion that a private Members bill would be the vehicle for the discussion of the question of the abolition of the death penalty. It seems to me that measures of social reform could come forward this way and in many cases pass. But as it is now, I have spoken to Members of all parties, including the Government party, and they are not at all satisfied with the private Members hour. I would certainly urge on the President of the Privy Council that a committee on the rules be constituted to carry on a continuing type of study of the rules of the House, and the reform of the private Members hour should have a very important place in any study by such a committee.

The Chairman: Does this conclude the discussion on paragraph 3?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Paragraph 4?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: Paragraph 5?

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Chairman, with regard to paragraph 5, I did give, as a result of some discussion the other day, an undertaking that I would move an amendment to paragraph 5 to provide that there would be one day a week when the question period would be one hour in length. Before formally moving that motion I wanted to ask the Committee for a little guidance on one point. I had indicated that I would put forward certain other amendments to different paragraphs. Since we are working under an allocated time proposition, I wonder if it would be in order if I moved these amendments now; or what method does the Committee wish me to adopt to make sure that the amendments I have undertaken to put forward are put forward before the expiry of the time allocated?

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, since we have agreed that we are taking a paragraph at a time, we should stick to each paragraph; but perhaps the Committee would consent to the Minister reading at this time each of the amendments he proposes to move as we go through this resolution.

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Chairman, the only thing is this. We shall be entering into a rule perhaps later on, the so-called allocation of time rule, or closure by compartment. Let us follow that course now, because that is what it will be in the future. We will get accustomed to it.

Mr. McIlraith: I think that technically I have the right to move them all now.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. McIlraith: It is just a matter of which way is most convenient to the Committee. I am quite satisfied to do it whatever way the Committee wishes; I would just like their guidance on the point. I do not want to be in the position of being accused of not moving an amendment to the resolution that I have undertaken to move.

Mr. Churchill: Unless the amendments are moved the guillotine may fall later on and prevent them.

Mr. McIlraith: This is why we were very careful before we started this discussion to point out that there is one resolution only before the Committee.

Mr. Knowles: You could have had them all read by now.

Mr. McIlraith: Yes.

Mr. Churchill: You can read them, but not move them.

Mr. McIlraith: Then I would be out of order. Mr. Chairman, I move, seconded by the Solicitor General:—

Mr. Knowles: You don't need a seconder.

Mr. McIlraith:

That Section (5) of the proposed Standing Order 39 be amended by adding after the words "not exceeding 30 minutes", where they appear at the end of the first paragraph thereof, the words "except on Mondays when the time allowed for a question period prior to the calling of Orders of the Day shall not exceed one hour".

Mr. Fairweather: Mr. Chairman, the amendment here—I do not mean the one about the question period of one hour on Monday, but the whole philosophy behind curtailing the question period—is really not a very bad step on the part of the Government and will only cut in half the time that is now largely a period of questions of questionable order. I do not think it is going to sharpen question time. I had hoped that the Government would really take a bold step here and move to the British system, where notice of all questions is given, and where Parliament does not expect the chief minister, the Prime Minister, to be there each day. I think he is on duty, so to speak, on Tuesdays only. I really think it is a tragedy that we have been so timid about this.

Unless there is a drastic bringing to order of the type of questions asked, it is my submission that all we are going to do is to cut in half, or if today is any example cut by two thirds, a period which has largely been spent on asking questions of local interest which have no national importance. I am as guilty, I confess, as anybody else in this; we all become accustomed to bad habits and share in breaching the rules.

I think this is one place where we might pay tribute, as was done yesterday, to the former Speaker, the hon. Member for Edmonton West. A lot of people thought he was very tough. I thought he ran a very good show here, as a matter of fact.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

An hon. Member: We would expect you to applaud that one.

Mr. Fairweather: I have never felt I had to applaud all Tories; that would be of no particular advantage. But I urge the Government to re-establish the Committee on Organization and Procedure and reform the question period. This measure will not do that at all.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Chairman, this is the first time I have spoken in this debate on procedure to any large extent because I recognize, as do most hon. Members of the House, that as the business of parliament becomes more involved and parliament is called upon by circumstances to take a more active role in directing the affairs of the country, unless Members of Parliament are to spend 12 months a year here we must have a great deal more direction in the work of parliament and a great deal more allocation of time than we have had in previous years.

The fact is, of course, that more time spent here will be taken up by Ministers of the Crown and the frontbenchers of each of the parties. Those of us who are backbenchers will take up less time and will have less opportunity to express our points of view. I think that anyone who thought about this change realized this from the beginning, but I think we accepted it because we realized there was no alternative if the business of parliament is to be done.

I have no objection to a limitation of the time devoted to question period, although I am skeptical that we will save very much time. I am not going to make any specific proposals for more changes to the rules because it seems to me there comes a time when you reach a point of diminishing returns; but it does seem to me that unless there is a different approach to the question period, with a half hour question period there will be no time at all for questions other than those from Members on the front bench.

In this regard I am not blaming the Leader of the Official Opposition, the leader of our party or the hon. Member for Lapointe, to name just three examples, who are on their feet a number of times every day. I am not going to be too critical of the present Speaker because I know it is a difficult job. But I know that if I want to ask a question, or if any Member of the back benches on the Opposition side, or even backbenchers on the Government side, want to ask questions, I presume we will all have some difficulty.

Today was a good example. I wanted to ask a question which the President of the Privy Council did not think was a proper question for orders of the day. But the Speaker could not decide this until I had asked my question. I stood up when the question period started at three o'clock. At four o'clock the Speaker —and I am not blaming him—wanted to end the question period. I was still trying to ask my first question. The Leader of the Opposition and a number of other Members had been on their feet five, six, eight times.

Mr. McIntosh: You should sit down here.

Mr. Orlikow: It may be worse for those who sit behind the Leader of the Opposition, although I do not think so.

Mr. Starr: Your leader was up four times too.

Mr. Orlikow: I included my leader. I am not blaming the Leader of the Opposition alone; I did say that. There was a time though when there were at least 10 or 12 questions in a row from Members of the Official Opposition. I do not question their right to ask questions, but Members in this group and other groups could not get the floor at all.

Mr. Churchill: There are 93 of us.

Mr. Orlikow: If we are going to restrict time and be fair to all Members, the Speaker —whoever he is; I am not thinking only of this session—must exercise a good deal more authority and judgment than he has up till now. It seems to me that if we are going to restrict the question period to half an hour a day, then I would agree with the hon. Member for Royal and others who have said that the Speaker will have to rule a large number of questions, including possibly the question I tried to ask today, as not of an urgent nature and therefore permissible. But aside from that it seems to me that the Speaker will have to use some judgment in restricting Members so that no Member will be able to dominate the whole half hour.

I would suggest here that no Member be permitted to ask more than two questions on any day when other Members want to ask questions, and that a series of supplemental questions should not be permitted. As the Speaker has said on so many occasions, what we really get is not a series of supplemental questions but in fact a debate. We now have the period after ten o'clock for Members who are not satisfied with answers they receive, and surely that is the place.

Mr. Churchill: You are going to make it awfully hard for your colleagues in your party.

Mr. Orlikow: I am not concerned with my colleagues in my party; we can look after ourselves. I am concerned with the rights of all backbenchers regardless of party. We are all supposed to be equal here. It seems to me that the Members of this House are going to be like the animals in George Orwell's novel "Animal Farm", where he said that all animals are equal, but some are more equal than others. It seems to me that unless the Speaker is going to tighten up the whole question period, when many Members of Parliament—and all of us are elected from constituencies and theoretically are equal—and especially those on the back benches, will be a good deal less equal than other Members. I hope the Speaker will give some consideration to this problem if and when we adopt these rules.

Mr. Fisher: Mr. Chairman, I am really speaking for the benefit of the Speaker, particularly the Speaker who is in the Chair during the question period. It seems to me from my own experience that one way of cutting down oral questions is to have a much speedier reply to written questions, and especially starred questions. One of the things I hoped would be considered by the President of the Privy Council and House Leader is that we get together, somewhat along the lines suggested by the hon. Member for Carleton the other day, when he introduced his motion, and have a complete review of the whole subject of written questions, including starred questions, and the various rules in connection therewith.

I have been here long enough to have heard Speaker Michener, Speaker Lambert and the present Speaker—you find entries in Votes and Proceedings to confirm this—read off all the different rules regarding questions.

House of Commons Procedures

• (9:20 p.m.)

Every week there are dozens of examples of questions which do not meet these requirements. I do not think this holds so true with regard to written questions, but I am sure a number of these should not be accepted. I personally prefer to put starred questions and to get oral answers in most cases. But if you put down a starred question and it stays on the order paper for five or six weeks, it is hopeless. I make a practice of splitting up my questions so that they do not relate to more than one department, and then there is no excuse for making them an order for return.

On the whole I think this Government has done fairly well in answering written questions. But could we not get some rule or procedural arrangement which would, in a sense, allow for something like an adjournment debate if within a certain period of time a department had not answered a particular question? This would place a degree of pressure on the department, prompting a reply as soon as possible. It would also be a means of giving some satisfaction to individual Members. My suggestion is, I repeat, that with regard to written questions and particularly with regard to starred questions to be answered orally, a committee should examine the situation, having in mind the possibility of introducing a procedure as a means by which an hon. Member whose question has not been answered within a certain time would get some redress—for example, the equivalent of an adjournment debate during which he could raise the issue in which he was interested. I realize that no one in the Government is likely to speak on this subject: I am really addressing my remarks to Mr. Speaker.

This brings me to the position of Government Members during the question period. I have no objection to the younger Member for Halifax, or the Member for Lotbinière or the Member for York-Humber rising to ask questions from time to time. From my experience in this Parliament no more than ten or 15 Members supporting the Government have made a practice of asking questions on the Orders of the Day. But when we have a situation where the question period is limited to half an hour on four days a week, and an hour on the other day, it seems to me there will be some block against the asking of questions by Government supporters in terms of the umbrage likely to be caused among Members of the Opposition. There is also the onus which is placed on the Speaker.

[Mr. Fisher.]

After all, it is the Speaker who has to recognize hon. Members. I noticed my friend from Winnipeg North standing up for an hour today; the hon. Member for Carleton was bobbing up and down for a long time before he was recognized. Being recognized by the Speaker is one of the factors which is involved during this question period. I put it to Mr. Speaker that he will need to handle this whole question of the recognition of Government Members very carefully. People get to their feet to raise a question—

Mr. Pickersgill: Would the hon. Member allow me to ask him a question? Does he not think it would be a good idea if we were to restore the old practice which prevailed two or three Parliaments ago when Ministers were generally given notice of these questions before they were asked in he House? Instead of having a daily quiz program we followed this practice. Does the hon. Member not think its revival would result in far better answers and a far speedier operation of the whole business? I think this is the only Parliament in the world where questions are asked without notice first being given.

Mr. Fisher: Really, the hon. Member for Royal put his finger on it there. The British practice is, of course, to give notice. Over there they take their questions and make a list of them. The real spice during the British question hour comes from the supplementary questions. In this field my hon. friend from Kootenay West is an old practitioner. He does this. I do not say this is the reason why the Speaker, in recent months, has been anticipating his questions and declaring them out of order. Sometimes I think my hon. friend is not unhappy when this occurs because he is given the opportunity of dealing with the subject at ten o'clock. When I first came here he told me this was the practice, and I followed this practice. Then I noticed that very often, if a Minister was given four or five hours warning, his assistant would prepare a long answer which, very often was evasive. He would then read this in the House, and the Member asking the question faced an embarrassing situation. After such a long reply, what should he do?

There is another practice—and I am talking about what really happens, not about formalities. I can recall one occasion when I gave notice of a question concerning a strike in progress against the Northern Ontario Pipe Line Corporation. I received a telephone call from the Minister in the course of which he gave me a great deal of information, very useful information indeed. Then he suggested, in a sense, that since I had got the information I wanted it was hardly necessary for me to ask the question. Of course, I was embarrassed. I had obtained the information that I wanted, it was true. But I also wished to bring the question to the attention of the House and, as a consequence, to the wire services and so on.

I see the Chairman holding up his finger as an admonition to me. All I can say is that the suggestion which the Minister made a few minutes ago should be taken up by whichever group considers this question. I certainly hope that should we get a committee to review the question process, backbenchers from both sides of the House will be well represented on it.

I sometimes think that Ministers and others who have been here for many years have lost sight of the urgency which prompts backbenchers or younger Members when they ask questions. Another point I wish to make in connection with Mr. Speaker and the recognition he gives to Members is this: The Chair recognizes seniority in the House during the question period in two ways, it seems to me. One type of recognition is recognition in terms of priority, and I have no quarrel with this. The assumption is that the Leader of the Official Opposition, as an official of the House, is entitled to catch the Speaker's eye first. The pattern seems to continue from there and, as I say, I am not quarrelling with that.

But there is a tendency for Speakers to recognize seniority in another and less desirable way, that is, by allowing a latitude to senior Members of the House which is not allowed to others. This applies both to the questions they ask and to the arguments they introduce. Backbenchers, particularly the newer ones, are not allowed this latitude. When it comes to an abuse of the form and the type of question, the Speaker must in all fairness be as severe in dealing with the most senior Members of this House as he is in regard to the most junior Members.

Mr. Lambert: Do they include the hon. Member for Kootenay West?

Mr. Fisher: I do not consider that the hon. Member of the Conservative Party who made that interjection is one of those in the Opposition who abuses the form of questions and turns them into argument. But he has been here long enough and he has been constant enough in his attendance to know that in all Opposition groups there are Members who get away with arguments and debate and nastiness, if I may use that term, during the question period, though the same latitude is not allowed to more junior Members. On the particular question of fairness and equity I suggest that what is fair for a junior Member of the House or one far back in the rows is also fair and should be applied to the senior Members of the House. I cannot leave this point without mentioning the fact that seniority is not recognized in the question period in so far as the Government and its Ministers are concerned, but there is a parallel in the abuse with regard to questions put and answers given that is just as serious.

• (9:30 p.m.)

Here again I make the point that much of the argument, much of the illegality, if you want, of questions is occasioned by the kind of answers given. Usually you get what tends toward a debate, particularly with supplementaries when you get smart-Aleck or terribly evasive answers, or answers that are completely designed either for a laugh or, in a sense, to throw a punch back. There is no dividing or appraising of guilt in this regard, but again it is a question for the Speaker to decide and the Speaker to control.

I cannot think of a better way in this particular Parliament to restore to the question period that kind of edge that the hon. Member for Royal and the hon. Member for Winnipeg North, my colleague, were talking about than to call to order some Ministers and some senior Members of the Opposition when they do put questions which they extend with argument beyond what is permitted to other Members of the House. In other words, I think what is fair for some Members of the House should be fair to all other Members of the House.

There is one other point I want to make in connection with the question period. It has been made before and it relates to ministerial answers. Members will be able to hark back to a number of occasions when really exciting questions have been brewing in the House and its environs. I can think of two in particular. I think of the time when the whole question of Rivard and the Dorion inquiry was in embryo or developing. I also think back to the time that the Minister of Finance was having difficulties immediately after his first budget. As hon. Members will recall, the question period was very important in developing the issue, the conflict and the response of the Government to the situation.

It is conceivable, of course, that such situations will develop again that will seem as crucial and as critical to the Opposition. With the half hour question period and the possibility of Government backbenchers asking questions and getting answers or Ministers being able to give long, prepared answers, it is quite obvious that Members of the Opposition could be left with a sense of tremendous frustration. It will take only a bit of masterminding on the part of the Government to reduce the effective question period on any occasion to a fairly small amount of time. Again, all I can suggest is that it will be the responsibility of the Speaker to recognize when this kind of prearranged defence mechanism created by the Government and its schemers is at work, and it will be then that the Speaker will have to come to the rescue of Members of the Opposition and the whole idea of the question period in the House of Commons.

I hope my friends on the Government side will not think that these remarks reveal too great a scepticism or suspicion with regard to their intentions. It seems to me that they would have the same feeling if they were on this side of the House, no matter what Government was in power. Since I have noticed the Acting Prime Minister and the President of the Privy Council nodding their heads at the idea of a review of the whole matter of questions, I wonder whether they would take a couple of minutes to tell us just what they have in mind in order to carry this particular point a bit further, and how quickly we may get to work on the whole business of correlating all the precedents of the past, and our present practices, into some kind of more simplified code that we could all honour much more easily than the present code with regard to questions.

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Chairman, because of the short time to deal with the many rules remaining I will only touch on one or two aspects of the speech made by the hon. Member for Port Arthur. One that I want to pick out and deal with very quickly has to do with not only the oral question period, which certainly concerns me greatly, but with written questions both from the point of view of the length of time taken to get replies and the nature of the questions permitted to appear on the Order Paper. I have had occasion recently to look at an Order Paper with a former employee of the House, and to go over some of the changes over the years. I must say I was rather appalled when I looked critically at the form of written questions on the Order Paper.

Since that time I have had occasion to look at the time taken for replies to such questions. I noticed that some questions were put asking if the Government had done certain things when, if the Members had put their questions in a different form and had addressed them to a particular Minister, thus indicating one department, there would have been a great deal of time saved in providing the answers. All I want to point out is that the form of both oral and written questions and the time taken to get replies to written questions is a subject that I think needs attention.

The state of the law as to what is permissible is, I think, clear enough in the textbooks if you have the time to dig up the various rulings of Speakers over a great number of years. However, it is quite impractical for a Member to do that, and I think we should, among all parties, find some method of gathering together what are the proper criteria to be applied to the form of questions, what types of questions are permissible and possibly codifying our findings. Quite frankly I had not thought of doing that, but I am rather interested in the suggestion. It might be helpful to codify our findings in such a way that the code could be distributed to all Members and would also serve as a guide to the officials receiving questions because, without some apparent authority, it is very difficult for them to reject a question brought to them by an hon. Member. It is quite a responsibility for an employee to take, but I am quite interested in the idea of a code. Just in what way this subject should be followed up I am not prepared to say at the moment.

There is one other matter I might mention. I refer to the remarks of the hon. Member for Royal a few minutes ago when he spoke about the abnormal demand made on the Prime Minister to be here during the whole of the question period every day, inasmuch as the interests of the House and of all hon. Members opposite would probably be equally well served if he were available at better designated periods. This is an idea that I think is deserving of attention in due course. I think I will conclude my remarks at this point. I should like to dwell on the subject at greater length but will refrain from doing so.

[Mr. Fisher.]

Mr. Pickersgill: Mr. Chairman, I think I ought to make a sort of confession to the House. Perhaps what I did was wrong, but it could be changed. When we formed the Government and I was chosen House Leader, I had been very irritated while I was in the Opposition by the great many questions which were, quite properly according to the rules, made orders for returns because they affected two departments. It was quite clear the Members who put the questions on the Order Paper wanted to have them printed in Hansard. I suggested to my colleagues that, by reason of leaving them on the Order Paper longer, we should try to get the information gathered together, so instead of their being made orders for return and the answers never being printed, the answers would be printed in Hansard. I am therefore to some degree to blame for the fact that some of these questions have stayed on the Order Paper so long. If it would suit hon. Members better to have them made orders for returns and taken off the order paper, it would cause less criticism for the Government, but I do not really believe it would serve the purposes Members have in putting the questions on the Order Paper.

I do agree with what my colleague says about trying to direct a question to one department, and another one to another Minister, and thus the two questions would get more effective answers. No one likes to have someone coming to the House later and saying one department has been overlooked. Once you phrase a question, is the Government doing so and so, there is a tremendous search goes on and in many cases this is a waste of the taxpayers' money to no purpose whatever.

Mr. Starr: I was very much taken with the argument, but if that argument is factual why is it that we look at question No. 43 and find it has been standing since April 6, which is about nine weeks. It could have been answered in 15 minutes, and yet it is unanswered in nine weeks.

Mr. Chatterton: I was interested in the comment of the President of the Privy Council that the problem of oral questions and questions on the Order Paper might be considered. I put this suggestion forward briefly. The reduction in time for oral questions is on a trial basis. If that proposal is successful or acceptable, it will depend upon the extent to which backbenchers feel their questions are being answered. In the interest of keeping the oral question period short, may I suggest to the President of the Privy Council that questions placed on the Order Paper should be answered within a certain period of time, and after the expiry of that time the appropriate Minister would either give the answer or give an explanation to the House for the cause of the delay. I know that in many cases questions require lengthy periods for answers to be obtained. If a Minister were required, after a period of seven or ten days, to give an answer or else an explanation, this would satisfy the Member putting forward the question. If such a practice were followed, questions which would normally be put during the oral question period would be put on the Order Paper, thus reserving the oral question period for more appropriate questions.

Mr. Douglas: In order to save time, Mr. Chairman, I wonder if I might make a suggestion now to the President of the Privy Council? I recognize we are not going to be able to cover the whole field in the time we have left. If I remember correctly, one of the recommendations of the Speaker's Committee last year was that we might set up a Standing Committee on Procedure to discuss some of these matters we have been discussing tonight, such as trying to work out some equitable arrangement on the question period and the matter we were discussing yesterday concerning some technique for written appeals of Speakers' rulings, for the purposes of establishing a precedent rather than dealing with the immediate matter before the House. Both these items could be referred to such a Standing Committee if it were set up.

I wonder if the President of the Privy Council, between now and the time this matter is going to be wound up tomorrow, might consider providing in paragraph 10 that a Standing Committee on Procedure be established. If the House is going to be asked, after this trial period ends at the end of the next session, to review these changes it would seem useful to have a Standing Committee which had been studying the whole matter of the extent to which these new rules have been satisfactory to all concerned. Then if these new rules were brought up for ratification or amendment, we would have some concrete proposals to place before the House. I believe such a Standing Committee might well be set up and could have plenty to employ itself with in the next year.

Mr. Fairweather: Is it the intention of the Government to set up such a Committee? If it is not a Standing Committee, will the Committee on Procedure and Organization be reconstituted in the next few months?

Mr. McIlraith: I do not want to give a categorical answer at the moment. I will take under consideration the suggestion that there be a Standing Committee. One of the difficulties of the last Committee on Procedure, when you consider the matter of answers to written questions which we have been discussing, was that there was no Minister on it from the Government side, no person who had Ministerial experience. I prefer to leave the question asked by the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam unanswered at the moment, and I will take it into consideration.

Mr. Douglas: I might just offer the Minister an alternative. If he feels there are obstacles, which I cannot think about at the moment, to making it a Standing Committee I think we would be prepared to settle for an undertaking that the Government would set up again the Committee we had last year.

Mr. McIlraith: I must correct myself. I said a moment ago there was no Ministerial representation from the Government side on that Committee. There was the Minister of Labour, who was the Government representative. I regret my inadvertence. I do not want to give a commitment that a Committee will be set up in the form it was last year. I want to consider the matter. We may have some kind of party conference about it, but I am not prepared at the moment to give a commitment as to how we should approach it. I am prepared to say that I will follow it up.

Mr. Knowles: I have one question, Mr. Chairman. Does the Minister recall that the Prime Minister, when he introduced these rule changes, suggested that one of the reasons it was possible to bring forward changes of this kind was that there had been a Committee of the House studying the matter for a couple of years. Does that not lend weight to the point made by the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam? In view of the importance of the changes we are now making, would it not be a good idea to have a Committee continuously studying the subject?

Mr. McIlraith: Yes, I am aware the Prime Minister said that. I am aware also of where the suggestion that he say this came from.

Mr. Scott: I have a short amendment upon which I wanted to test the Committee.

[Mr. Douglas.]

The Chairman: Order, please; there is an amendment before the Committee at the moment.

• (9:50 p.m.)

Mr. Scott: I am sorry; I should have said subamendment. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman the effect of the half hour question period is really going to be that the private Member is virtually going to be cut out of that period. It seems to me this will follow almost automatically because of the practice of recognizing the senior Members of the House during the question period. I am not sure we can particularly complain, as that practice has been followed for some time; but the net effect of this will be that private Members from now on will have virtually no part at all in the question period, because in the half hour there will not be enough time for them to participate, due to supplementaries, etc., from the front benches.

We recognize the need to shorten the question period, but the hon. Member for Royal hit it on the head when he said shortening the time will not improve its quality. In fairness to private Members, they should have at least one opportunity a week to participate in the question period and for that reason I suggest to the Government House Leader that the question period on Mondays, at least, be without time limit. It may be private Members will not take advantage of the opportunity but it will be there for them if they wish to avail themselves of it.

Therefore I propose that the amendment be amended by deleting the words, "exceed one hour" and substituting therefor "be so limited." This may sound confusing but on reading the amendment it can be seen it ends with the words shall not exceed one hour.

The Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Amendment to the amendment (Mr. Scott) negatived: yeas 37; nays 41.

The Chairman: I declare the amendment lost.

Amendment (Mr. McIlraith) agreed to.

The Chairman: Does this conclude the discussion on clause 5?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, in considering clause 6 of the resolution I would like to make some comments with regard to questions of privilege, inasmuch as direct reference was made to me on Tuesday during discussion of the rules, regulations and procedures of the House.

I had not intended to take any part in the discussion on the proposed rule changes, as I am quite satisfied with their content and import, but I take my cue from the Prime Minister who, speaking in the House on Tuesday last, said he was speaking on an amendment to the resolution before the House and pointed out it gave him an opportunity to speak, and so dwell at some length on matters not strictly within the ambit of the amendment.

This clause of the resolution will undoubtedly limit the raising of questions of privilege in future, and remembering what the hon. Member for Saint John-Albert said this afternoon when he stated he was asking a question because hereafter the time might be cut so short that he would not be able to, I am rising on a question of privilege as the opportunity to do so will be somewhat curtailed by clause 6, with which I am in hearty accord.

On May 28 I asked a question in the House, and in it I stated a personal conviction. I asked the Minister of Justice if his department or the Cabinet:

—have ever given consideration to making it illegal for mass communication media to mention names of accused before they are convicted. Personally I do not believe they should be mentioned by name until a conviction has been registered.

I asked the Minister had any consideration been given to such fair treatment, and in his reply, a very sane and solid reply, the Minister remarked:

I must say, Mr. Speaker, that this...is one of the questions which I have under very serious consideration.

Immediately some people rose in the House and began to pillory the Minister as though this were a terrible statement for him to make, and the press of the country immediately picked it up and started to scream that the freedom of the press was being invaded—call out the army, call out the navy, call out the air force—freedom of the press was being attacked.

The Minister had given a straightforward answer and went on to say:

—there is also such a thing as respect for the freedom of the individual and in the case of juveniles the regulation already exists in the Criminal Code that their names must not be disclosed in the papers. Surely this is not an interference with the freedom of the press.

On Tuesday last the hon. Member for Prince Albert, who gave a worth-while speech with regard to the function of parliament and its effectiveness, took occasion to wander afield and made direct reference to the suggestion I had made in the course of my question. At one point he said, and I quote from page 2106:

All over this country a howl went up. I was shocked by the suggestion.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to emphasize that I was not sent here by the electors of York-Humber in order not to shock the hon. Member for Prince Albert.

May I call it ten o'clock?

Mr. McIlraith: Before it is called ten o'clock I wonder if I might put on record the amendments to the various clauses?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. McIlraith: I move that section 2—

Mr. Churchill: You mean you intend to move the amendments now?

The Chairman: Order. Is the Minister simply reading the amendments for the purpose of the record at this time?

Mr. McIlraith: My understanding is that technically they could all be moved because it is only one resolution. I thought it would be desirable if Members had them all, but if I merely read them they will not appear in Votes and Proceedings tomorrow.

Mr. Knowles: Amendments made in committee do not go in Votes and Proceedings anyway.

Mr. Churchill: Put them in Hansard.

• (10:00 p.m.)

Mr. McIlraith: Yes; but I do not want to recede from the position, which is the correct one, that there is one resolution before the Committee at this time, and we agreed to discuss it paragraph by paragraph and have proceeded in that way. I think that was the reasonable, correct and satisfactory way for the House to deal with this resolution.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, I do not think anyone is arguing about the point the President of the Privy Council is now making. But is it not a fact that if he has two, three or four amendments to make, they may be all amendments to one resolution but he cannot move them all at once? He has to move one amendment, get it carried and then move another. That is the reason I suggest he simply read them.

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Chairman, I can put them all into one amendment quite easily, although they deal with different Standing Orders. I will do it either way.

Some hon. Members: Let us do it.

Mr. Pickersgill: We could put them in tonight so they will be printed in Votes and Proceedings tomorrow.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, I would suggest that the only ones applicable are those that refer to this paragraph.

Mr. McIlraith: Since we are on paragraph 6 I will read the proposed amendment, if that will be more pleasing to Members opposite; but I would point out that they all come in answer to requests from Members opposite:

That Section (2) of the proposed Standing Order 43 be amended to read as follows:

"When the debate on any motion under Standing Order 15, Section (2) is adjourned or interrupted the Order for resumption of the same shall be transferred to and considered as the first Order under Government Orders."

and in consequence of that proposal:

That Section (2) of Standing Order 18 be amended to read as follows:

"Except as provided in Standing Orders 43 and 56, Government Orders may be called in such sequence as the Government may think fit".

And the following:

That Section (1) of the proposed Standing Order 65 be amended by striking out the words "with all convenient speed", and substituting therefor the words "within ten sitting days after its appointment", and by striking out the number "22" where it appears therein and substituting therefor the number "24".

And a new Standing Order 68A:

In any standing or special committee of the House questions of order shall be decided by the chairman, subject only to an appeal to the committee.

And also:

That the amendments to Standing Orders made by this Resolution be continued in effect until the end of the next ensuing session unless this House otherwise orders.

Progress reported.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Speaker, tomorrow we will consider the report of the special committee dealing with the procedures of the House. When that is completed we will continue with the business we have been discussing today, and when that is completed we will deal with the banking legislation, and then the budget resolutions.

Mr. Starr: You spoiled your whole speech by the last few words.

[Mr. McIlraith.]

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the House under Provisional Standing Order 39A deemed to have been moved.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION—REQUEST FOR BETTER FACILITIES IN VANCOUVER

Mr. R. W. Prittie (Burnaby-Richmond): Mr. Speaker, the question I wish to bring to the attention of the House and the Government is the continuing problem of the television and radio facilities of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation at Vancouver. For many years the television production centre at Vancouver has been in a former garage, a building formerly used by an automobile dealer. It has been there since T.V. productions started in Vancouver in 1953.

"Barn-like", "cramped", "inadequate", "inefficient"—these are all adjectives which can be used to describe the C.B.C. television centre in Vancouver. Next to Toronto and Montreal, Vancouver is the principal production centre of the C.B.C. Year after year the local staff have worked in very cramped conditions, but in spite of this they have turned out some fairly good productions. One has only to think of the plays which come from Vancouver, particularly the Cariboo series last year or a variety program such as "Some of Those Days", to realize that they do turn out good programs, in spite of the fact that they have been working under the most trying conditions for many years.

The C.B.C. radio facilities in Vancouver are located in the Hotel Vancouver, but the premises are on a month to month basis and it is understood that they will have to leave the building before very long. Again, there have been some very high quality radio productions out of Vancouver.

I think it is disgraceful that neither the present Government nor the previous one authorized the C.B.C. to spend the capital for a new production centre in Vancouver. Over $100 million has been authorized for new centres in Montreal and Toronto—about $105 million altogether. There was an opportunity for the C.B.C. to acquire improved buildings on the West Coast. This was when the decision was made to close the former R.C.A.F. station at Kitsilano Park in Vancouver. A certain amount of land and some existing buildings were available. This would not have been as good as a new centre but would certainly be infinitely superior to the present antiquated building which the Corporation has to use for its centre of operations.

It would have been quite possible to have given the City of Vancouver most of the site for park purposes and have retained a small part of the site for the C.B.C. However, after many months of negotiation—and these negotiations have been going on now for about 15 months—the Government has agreed to transfer the entire site to the City of Vancouver, without reservation. It is true that the government had hoped that the city would negotiate an agreement with the C.B.C. for the use by the Corporation of some of the buildings and part of the land. But just recently the majority of the City of Vancouver Council voted against this particular proposal. I maintain that the Government has a responsibility to ensure that the C.B.C. in Vancouver obtains better quarters.

There has been a constant movement of actors, directors and producers from Vancouver to Toronto. A very large number of the most talented people at C.B.C. Toronto came from Vancouver. I believe that if there were more opportunities for them on the West Coast, we could retain many of them there and further improve the type of production coming from Vancouver. More budget for production is part of the problem, and I have raised this in the House before. Better production and building facilities are also part of the answer. I agree that ideally the Kitsilano Park site should be used for park and recreational purposes and the C.B.C. should have a completely new building. I admit that putting the C.B.C. into Kitsilano is a second-best solution.

As I said before, the Corporation does need in Vancouver for its regional B.C. headquarters and for production purposes a new building. I would suggest that if no agreement is reached with the City of Vancouver the Government has a responsibility to provide such quarters elsewhere, perhaps a building unit which could house both the C.B.C. and a west coast unit of the National Film Board. I believe there is consideration being given to the possibility of establishing in Vancouver a unit of the National Film Board.

In this connection the Government and the C.B.C. should bear in mind the offer made by the Reeve of Burnaby to the C.B.C. of land for a broadcasting complex at Burnaby. This site is not far removed from the centre of population. It is near all the main highways and roads serving the population, and indeed the private television station in that area is further from the centre of the City of Vancouver than the site proposed by Burnaby. There is no particular reason why the C.B.C. should be in downtown Vancouver. But wherever it may locate, the Government has a responsibility to make sure that the C.B.C. has new quarters soon if the negotiations with the City of Vancouver fail.

There have been repeated reports during the past week that the majority of the city council is firmly opposed to the C.B.C. obtaining part of Kitsilano Park.

Mr. J. B. Stewart (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State): When the hon. Member referred to this matter on June 3 he spoke in the indicative mood. He stated that a majority on the Vancouver City Council had voted against allowing the C.B.C. to occupy part of the Kitsilano site and went on to ask a question based on this supposed fact.

Tonight he has based his comments—it was hardly a question—on a much more hypothetical approach to the matter. We find the word "if" appearing in at least two places in what he says. I think he now realizes that the city council has not come to a final conclusion. My understanding is that the C.B.C. will be making representations to the council shortly in connection with this matter.

Until the city council has concluded its examination of the subject and has communicated its decision, any action based on an assumption concerning that decision would clearly be premature. I think I should reassure the hon. Member by telling him that the hon. Member for Vancouver-Burrard is constantly interested in this very question.

PARLIAMENT HILL—PROVISION FOR PARKING FOR TOURIST BUSES

Mr. Lloyd Francis (Carleton): I should like to call the attention of the Minister of Public Works to a local crisis which has developed on Parliament Hill itself.

Each year, as we have all observed, the numbers of school children tourists, and others who come to visit Ottawa and Parliament Hill, is increasing at a rapid rate. When they come by chartered bus they get off the bus in front of the centre door and at that point it has unfortunately, this season, become necessary for the buses to be instructed to leave Parliament Hill itself. There simply is not room enough to park them here while the school children and other visitors watch the proceedings of Parliament and inspect the beautiful facilities which are part of our national heritage.

This is most unfortunate because it has a number of consequences which I should like to outline to the Minister and to the Parliamentary Secretary concerned. In the first place, some of the buses have stopped temporarily; they have gone on the grass. Last week when a driver was out of his bus one of them ran down and crashed into four cars which were parked. I do not know for which I have most sympathy. I sometimes think it would be to the credit of all of us if there were fewer cars parked on the Hill. But I do think a procedure by which these drivers are obliged to circulate in the streets of Ottawa while their passengers are visiting the Hill is a most unsatisfactory state of affairs. It has discouraged tourists and it creates a problem in the city.

Some of these buses used to park on the parking lot of one of the bus companies here, a company which operates our only major bus station. But they came in such numbers that they encumbered the operation of the station itself and the company was reluctantly obliged to ask them to park elsewhere.

I believe a solution is to be found in two suggestions. The first is of a temporary nature and I have put my idea in writing for the Minister of Public Works to see, namely that the site of the former Laurentian Terrace on Sussex Street be used as a temporary parking lot. This structure has been torn down and no reconstruction has taken place on the site. I see no reason to prevent buses parking on that site at least for the balance of the present season.

I should like to see the Government of Canada go to the expense of installing a telephone at that point so that bus drivers could telephone the constables in charge of tourists on Parliament Hill and inquire whether a particular party they had brought here had finished its tour. Then they would be able to return to the Hill at the appropriate time, pick up their passengers and leave.

For the longer period, Mr. Speaker, I would hope that the plans for a parking garage to take all the automobiles and buses off Parliament Hill could be proceeded with. I know that the former Minister of Public Works, the hon. Member for Maisonneuve-Rosemont (Mr. Deschatelets), had plans for a large parking garage at the rear of Parliament Hill on the edge of the Ottawa River. Such a parking garage could have been built in different stages. It could have been concealed very nicely within the cliff of Parliament Hill and it would have served a very good purpose in taking off the Hill some of the cars that now clutter the area in such vast numbers, thus changing Parliament Hill from what it is now, unfortunately, a glorified parking lot. I think this would be consistent with the purpose that the Canadian people would like to see served by the symbols which our Parliament Buildings and Parliament Hill represent to school children from coast to coast across Canada, a symbol of our sovereignty, a symbol of our nationhood, the place where our national government is conducted, a place which they could visit proudly but without inconvenience. I submit that the inconvenience now being suffered discourages the visit to Parliament that all school children in this country hope to make and which we hope they will be able to make.

[Mr. Francis.]

Mr. G. Roy McWilliam (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, I am sure all Members appreciate the remarks of the hon. Member for Carleton (Mr. Francis), particularly as they apply to those young students across Canada who are fortunate enough to be able to come to the capital, tour Parliament Hill and see Parliament at work.

When the hon. Member raised this question this afternoon I immediately made some inquiries as to where the responsibility actually lies with regard to parking on Parliament Hill. In the intervening time I was not able to get a concise statement as to exactly who is responsible for parking on Parliament Hill. I agree wiith the hon. Member that there are plans in the department for underground parking to get rid of the mess, if I may call it that, on Parliament Hill.

In late years the custom has been that parking permits are issued by the Sergeant-at-Arms under the jurisdiction of Mr. Speaker, and I am told that any ban on the parking of buses or other vehicles is issued by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. I am fairly sure that in most cases the Department of Public Works does not know anything about such bans unless they are brought to its attention.

As I said, we are very much interested in the situation. I am sure everybody is anxious to see it cleared up. The hon. Member's remarks will be carefully noted, I am sure, by those who hold responsibility and jurisdiction in this matter, and I assure the hon. Member that his remarks will be brought to the attention of the Minister of Public Works (Mr. Cardin). I trust that favourable action will be taken.

• (10:20 p.m.)

LABOUR RELATIONS—HAL BANKS—DEPOSIT IN MONTREAL BANK TO COVER WAGES OF S.I.U. SEAMEN

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to deal briefly with questions I raised in the House, in relation to which I later found it necessary to take advantage of this fortunate period. My first question was:

> Has the Minister any knowledge of an agreement between Harold Chamberlain Banks and the Government of Cuba for the deposit in trust in a Montreal bank of $400,000 to cover the cost of the wages of S.I.U. seamen that were intended to be employed on the ships purchased by the Government of Cuba from Canadian National Steamships?
> Has the Minister any knowledge of negotiations being undertaken at the present time between the officers of the S.I.U. and the representatives of the Government of Cuba for the return of this money to the Government of Cuba on the understanding that $75,000 will be paid to the S.I.U. or Harold Chamberlain Banks?

Then, I followed that up with this question:

> I wish to direct a question to the Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs. Would the Minister inform the House whether in his opinion the powers of the trustees of the Maritime Transportation Unions permit those trustees to approve any financial arrangement or agreement between the Seafarers International Union and a foreign power? Does the Minister consider this to be a correct constitutional procedure?

I brought these matters to the attention of the House as the result of correspondence from the members of the union and as a result of meeting members of some locals of the union. Now, I am informed, Mr. Speaker, that the motive power, as it were, behind this deal is Mr. Paul Hall. I am interested also that this is in the nature of a Kootenay evening in the House, both for and against. In view of what has been said about these gentlemen a good many of the union members and other persons are very suspicious as to what is going on in this respect. Dr. Harry S. Crowe said at one time when he was research director of the C.B.R.T. and General Workers Union:

> The Seafarers International Union of North America and its President, Paul Hall, are every bit as undesirable as the Seafarers International Union of Canada, and its President, Hal Banks.

Then, I have a very interesting statement from Mr. Millard, who seems to have changed his tune in recent days. This is what Mr. Millard had to say on one occasion:

> Though I too am a Canadian and trade unionist, I do believe in industrial and international trade unionism and, therefore, deplore the cynical and irresponsible actions of men like Paul Hall and Hal C. Banks—they undermine the good name of unionism and defraud hard working and trusting workers. Thank goodness they are the exception and not the rule and I still believe that right will prevail. Some day we may be able to tell you what we are doing to activize the good elements in the U.S.A.-Canadian Trade Union movement.

Mr. Millard made the statement at the time he was a trustee of the Maritime Union. I am reliably informed that Mr. Paul Hall is the booming spirit behind this deal that is going on at the present time. Regardless of this statement, I have an official communiqué of a statement by Mr. Millard, and I quote:

> I am pleased to report that discussions carried out between myself and Mr. Paul Hall, President, Seafarers International Union of North America have resulted in a number of basically important conclusions which hold promise for stability in the Great Lakes shipping industry.

Then, he goes on:

> The confidence in Mr. Hall and the S.I.U. International demonstrated by the trusteeship in seeking these meetings has been amply justified.

I do want the Members of the House to compare that statement with the previous statement by Mr. Millard. Later on, he goes on to mention the question of the power of the trustees. Then I read from the official communiqué issued by the trustees on March 11 last:

> Canada's five maritime unions under trusteeship were told today no collective agreement is to be put before union membership prior to receiving approval by the Board of Trustees of the Maritime Transportation Unions.
> A directive to this effect was issued over the signature of Board Chairman Mr. Justice Victor L. Dryer and Trustees Judge René Lippé and Charles H. Millard.
> An earlier directive stipulated in broad terms that "no agreement is to be finally concluded and signed before being approved by the trustees."

I have had some consultation with persons who know something about this question and my first query is, have the trustees any power under the Act passed by this Parliament to approve an agreement with a foreign power? Second, we want to know why there was this change in attitude. Why has Mr. Paul Hall suddenly become such a responsible person after the trustees indicated the type of person they thought he was?

The affidavits taken by employees of the maritime trustees, affidavits taken by members of the S.I.U. and affidavits taken by those who are directly concerned with this matter clearly indicate it is time the Standing Committee on Industrial Relations was established, that the trustees were called before it, and the employees of the trustees, plus the officers of the union and members of the union.

I look forward to the explanation to be given by my colleague from Kootenay East, and I might say I have no malice against him whatever, as I trust he is going to give me a very satisfactory answer.

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, since we have the House almost to ourselves perhaps I may speak practically intimately to my hon. friend. I fear that the hon. Member for Kootenay West (Mr. Herridge) is possessed of an obsession with regard to the activities of Hal Banks.

In the interests of justice I, too, hope Mr. Banks will sooner or later be made to pay his debt to society. But even more important, I feel this obsession of the hon. Member must be removed so that when he retires to the sandy beaches of the great Arrow Lakes and reclines there on the sand, he will not see an apparition of Mr. Banks in the window of every cabin cruiser that passes his palatial residence on that beautiful lake shore.

In respect of the hon. Member's concern that Hal Banks is going to receive an additional $75,000, I have been supplied with information by the Chairman of the Trustees as follows.

In order to prevent harassment the Cuban government undertook by a negotiated and signed agreement some years ago to man certain ships it had recently purchased from the struck Canadian National Steamships (West Indies) Company with members of the S.I.U., for a period of at least two years after re-activation of the ships. Everyone knows that to date none of these ships have been re-activated. As an indication of good faith the representatives of the Cuban government are said to have posted a bond of $400,000, a sufficient amount to pay the wages of the S.I.U. seamen for the stipulated period.

Last fall Cuban representatives approached Mr. McLaughlin of the S.I.U. in connection with the manning of only two of these ships, which had been laid up on the East Coast. The Cubans proposed a deal for annulment—I emphasize annulment—of the agreement, for which they would pay $75,000 to the S.I.U. of Canada. It therefore follows that any moneys paid for the revocation of this agreement will become the asset of the S.I.U. of Canada, and the trustees will exercise their powers pursuant to section 13 of the Maritime Transportation Unions Trustees Act.

In the light of these facts I think I can assure the hon. Member it is highly unlikely that any portion of such funds, if they do become available, will get into the hands of one Harold Chamberlain Banks. There was no indication that Mr. Paul Hall was implicated in these negotiations.

Motion agreed to and the House adjourned at 10.32 p.m.

The House met at 11 a.m.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

PRESENCE IN GALLERY OF PRIME MINISTER OF INDIA

Mr. Speaker: Today this House is signally honoured by the presence in the Speaker's Gallery of Lal Bahadur Shastri, Prime Minister of India.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Speaker: This is the first visit to Canada by Prime Minister Shastri, who is such a worthy successor to the late and beloved Prime Minister Nehru. We welcome him as a fellow parliamentarian and as the elected leader of the world's largest democracy.

The Prime Minister of our great Commonwealth partner is a man of the people, a man of peace. At the early age of 16 he became a follower of Mahatma Ghandi and played a courageous part in the struggle for national freedom. Since then he has been a leading figure in India's constructive and successful quest for self determination and has served his people with integrity, competence and humility. The election of Lal Bahadur to the highest office within the gift of his people demonstrates very strikingly the effectiveness of the democratic process in India.

Relations between India and Canada have always been close and cordial. We have very much in common. We are both countries that stretch from sea to sea. It was in the search for a short route to India that our country was first discovered, and our original inhabitants still carry the honoured name of Indians. On the world scene, as fellow members of the Commonwealth of Nations we have worked together and have shared the same aspirations for a world at peace. In the management of our own affairs we have each followed the parliamentary process as common inheritors of the British tradition of democracy.

Today in Canada we are striving to meet and master problems of national unity that are the product of 400 short years in which men and women of two languages and two cultures have lived side by side. Surely we can take heart from the example of India—a multilingual, multiracial society, an amalgam of many religions and cultures, with a history extending over so many centuries. Her very substantial accomplishments, in the face of so many hardships, are surely an example to all the world.

We welcome you, Sir. We honour you as the leader of a great and historic nation whose future progress will be a major determinant in the ultimate survival of democracy and peace among the nations of the world.

PROCEDURE

FIRST REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present the first report of the special committee on procedures of the House of Commons. Copies are available in English and French for all hon. Members. I intend, in accordance with the agreement of last Tuesday, to move concurrence in the report later this day.

Before motions are called, Mr. Speaker, since the motion I will make will be for concurrence in the report I wonder whether it would be agreeable to the House to proceed with routine proceedings and oral questions in the usual way, with the understanding that the House would grant permission to revert to motions after the oral question period in order that the question period will not be lost.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

[Note: Text of the foregoing report appears in today's Votes and Proceedings.]

SOCIAL INSURANCE

ANNOUNCEMENT OF CHANGE IN FORM AND STYLE OF CARD

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, in accordance with a commitment I gave the Leader of the Opposition some days ago I wish to advise the House of certain decisions which have been made about the future use and form of the social insurance number card.

It will be recalled that this card was first issued last year in connection with unemployment insurance, and was designed to provide the same numbering system for the Canada Pension Plan. Some Provincial Governments have expressed an interest in the possible use of the same numbers and cards in connection with other programs. This clearly would be a considerable convenience to the public. It means, however, that the card should be one suitable for use in connection with programs under the authority of Provincial as well as Federal legislation. It also makes the durability of the card even more important. The Government therefore intends to introduce a plastic card.

Second, in order to provide a national symbol equally appropriate for programs under either Federal or Provincial jurisdiction, the card has been redesigned with a maple leaf superimposed by the word "Canada" in place of the coat of arms which is a distinctively Federal symbol and therefore not the most suitable for Provincial use. The card in this new form will be suitable for many possible uses besides the most urgent one which, of course, is for both Federal and Provincial pension plans.

Hon. Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre): Mr. Speaker, this is a rather interesting disclosure finally forced out of the Minister of Labour by questions on orders of the day by the Leader of the Opposition over the last week. He has now given us a very weak excuse for removing from the social security card the coat of arms—

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Churchill: —which of all symbols is surely the most distinctive of the national unity of this country. For the Minister to tell us shamefacedly that this is not suitable because of Provincial attitudes will not go down with the public at all. I think it is a disgrace that this Government should continue its whittling away of our history and traditions. We now see a continuation of their program of destruction of our history and traditions. The removal of the coat of arms from the social security card is the first step, I suppose, in the removal of the coat of arms from all other places where it is displayed in Canada. Will the next step be the removal of the coat of arms from this building? This is a disgraceful announcement by the Minister of Labour.

[Later:]

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): I wish to direct a question to the Minister of Labour. It is related to the announcement made this morning regarding social security cards. Can the Minister tell us which provinces requested the use of these federal security cards for provincial programs, and what programs those provinces have in mind?

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): The two Provinces which occur to me immediately in this connection are the Provinces of Quebec and Saskatchewan.

Mr. Starr: Can the Minister tell us what programs they have in mind for the use of these cards?

Mr. MacEachen: In Quebec, of course, the provincial pension plan is a program which will need a numbering system. The hon. Member can appreciate the confusion which would arise if two numbering systems were used by the same people for various programs. This is why we have produced a card which can be used with a single numbering system for both Federal and Provincial purposes, now and in the future.

Mr. Starr: What is the program in the other province?

Mr. MacEachen: I cannot tell the hon. gentleman what the program is, but I understand from the officials that the province of Saskatchewan has expressed an interest in using the card system, possibly for the medical insurance plan.

Mr. Jack McIntosh (Swift Current-Maple Creek): In view of the fact that the Minister's statement on these social security cards this morning is related to question No. 650 in my name on the order paper, I wonder whether the hon. gentleman could complete his answer and tell us whether the machinery and plates for these cards were imported from the United States and, if so, at what cost to the public.

Mr. MacEachen: In order to process these new plastic cards, which are very attractive in design, it is necessary to use additional machinery. I will answer the question as to the source of the machinery and the cost when the question is called.

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington South): Is the removal of the Canadian coat of arms from these social security cards to be the policy of this Government in the printing of future documents?

Mr. MacEachen: No. The reason for the change has been explained. It certainly does not imply any diminution in our respect for the Canadian coat of arms.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Queens): I should like to ask the Minister of Labour a supplementary question. Is there any truth in the rumour that he or someone in his department held discussions with representatives of one or more provinces with the idea of having the social security numbers allotted by the vital statistics branches of the provinces when births are registered?

Mr. MacEachen: No, Mr. Speaker, I have had no discussion along these lines with any provincial people.

Mr. Heath Macquarrie (Queens): A supplementary question to the Minister of Labour. Did any provincial authorities suggest to the Minister that incorporation of the coat of arms would make these cards not suitable for joint purposes?

Mr. MacEachen: The answer of course, Mr. Speaker, is no. No objection has been expressed to me by provincial governments with respect to the Canadian coat of arms, but it was desirable to have a single numbering system and a general purpose card. Of course the Canadian coat of arms is a distinctively federal symbol and would not be appropriate for use on provincial programs, and that is the purpose of the change.

Mr. W. H. A. Thomas (Middlesex West): I should like to ask the Minister of Labour whether his description of these cards as general purpose cards will extend for numbering purposes to the military services?

Mr. MacEachen: No, Mr. Speaker.

WATER LEVELS

TABLING OF STATEMENT RESPECTING PORT OF MONTREAL

Hon. J. W. Pickersgill (Minister of Transport): I wonder if I might table a statement that is being issued today concerning low water levels at the port of Montreal, which I undertook to make available to the House before I spoke in the port of Montreal on Monday.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

EDUCATION

STUDENT LOANS—TABLING OF STATEMENT AND REPORTS

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): I wish to table a statement relating to the Canada Student Loans Plan, together with three reports which have been adopted by Federal and Provincial representatives dealing with the administration of the program. In view of the widespread interest in this plan, particularly among the many students who have a vital interest in this matter, I would ask leave of the House to have the statement and reports printed as an appendix to today's Hansard.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

[Editor's note: For text of documents referred to above, see appendix "A".]

CRIMINAL CODE

AMENDMENT PROVIDING COMPULSORY BREATHALIZER TESTS

Mr. Barry Mather (New Westminster) moved for leave to introduce Bill No. C-115, to amend the Criminal Code (impaired driving).

Some hon. Members: Explain.

Mr. Mather: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this Bill is to reduce the death and accident toll taken by traffic. It would seek to do this by enacting legislation to control the impaired driver. Statistics show that in recent years one third of the road accidents in Canada involve persons who have been drinking. The Bill which I put forward incorporates proposals made by the Canadian Medical Association, the Canadian Bar Association and the Canadian Highway Safety Council. Specifically it would amend the Criminal Code to make compulsory breathalizer tests for determining blood alcohol levels.

Motion agreed to and bill read the first time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

ATTENDANCE BY MR. SPEAKER AT CEREMONIES OVERSEAS

Mr. Speaker: If I may have the attention of the House for just a moment I should like to make a short statement.

I am sure this House will be interested to know that I have accepted an invitation from the Speaker of the British House of Commons to attend, in London, a conference of Speakers from the 21 member nations of the Commonwealth. Following that conference I have been asked to participate in a ceremony at Westminster to mark the 700th anniversary of the Parliament of Simon de Montfort and the 750th anniversary of Magna Carta.

I propose as well to journey to Geneva for discussions with Mr. André de Blonay, Secretary-General of the Inter-Parliamentary Bureau, concerning the annual meeting of the Inter-Parliamentary Union to be held in Ottawa in September of this year.

I plan also to make a brief visit to Paris to discuss with M. Chaban-Delmas, President of the French National Assembly, ways and means of strengthening the links between Parliamentarians of our two countries. I expect to return to Ottawa the week end of June 25.

During my absence, with the leave of the House, the Deputy Speaker, the hon. Member for Stormont, would occupy the Chair. I ask leave of the House to engage in the service of the House overseas.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

AIR TRANSPORT

REPORTED OFFER TO BUY AIR CANADA AND C.P.A.

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Bow River): I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Transport. It is reported that a group of Canadian businessmen, headed by prominent western industrialists, made a firm offer to purchase Air Canada, and also made the same offer to purchase C.P.A., and that this offer was turned down by the Cabinet. Would the Minister care to comment on that?

Hon. J. W. Pickersgill (Minister of Transport): There is no truth whatever in that story.

Mr. Woolliams: I might say to the Minister that it was reported in several good Liberal newspapers.

DEFENCE PRODUCTION

SURVEY SHIPS—REQUESTED CHANGE IN TENDERING PROCEDURE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, on June 1 the Prime Minister said the Government was giving consideration to whether it would continue its policy of calling for regional bids for ships being purchased by the Government. In view of the fact that the Government is ordering three ships on the Pacific coast the outcome of the Government's deliberations in this regard is of great importance to those employed in the shipbuilding industry. Is the Prime Minister ready yet to announce the outcome of this consideration?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker, but I hope there will be an announcement very shortly and that it will be satisfactory to all concerned.

[Mr. Speaker.]

SOCIAL INSURANCE

PROSECUTIONS RESPECTING FAILURE TO OBTAIN NUMBERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Labour. Several times in recent weeks I have asked him whether companies other than the publishers of Canada Month are being prosecuted as a result of refusing to force their employees to take out social insurance numbers. Are other companies or organizations, such as teachers organizations, refusing to force their members to take out these numbers?

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, my information is that the only prosecution is the one referred to by my hon. friend, under the provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Act. In connection with the teachers I understand that encouragement is being given by the officers of the Canadian Teachers Federation that its members secure social insurance numbers. Originally a protest had arisen from the fact that teachers were not covered by unemployment insurance and therefore were not obligated to register; but now, in view of the passing of the Canada Pension Plan, in which statutory authority is laid down for future registration, the teachers associations are encouraging their members to register.

Mr. Thompson: As a supplementary question, does the Government intend to prosecute other companies that are also refusing to force their employees to take out social insurance numbers?

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, the prosecution is on the grounds of failure to comply with the law as established for 20 years under the Unemployment Insurance Act. If there are further infractions of the law, then consideration will be given to further prosecutions.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

QUEBEC CITY—SECURITY REPORTS IN ENGLISH ONLY

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Robert Beaulé (Quebec East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Justice.

Could he tell the house whether the report forms used by the R.C.M.P. are bilingual?

Hon. Guy Favreau (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I should like to take this question as notice.

Mr. Beaulé: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question.

I rise on a point of order. The minister said yesterday that officers may use either official language. He must have known then whether the forms are bilingual or not.

Mr. Favreau: Mr. Speaker, I said yesterday that verbal instructions had been given to the effect that any complaint received should preferably be reported in the language it was made. However, it will be readily understood that as far as administrative matters are concerned, especially in the case of forms which may be used in any office in Canada, I could not say off the cuff how things are.

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask a supplementary question.

Does the Minister of Justice intend to see to it that in the near future all those forms will be bilingual throughout the country, so that if a French Canadian in Western Canada or an English Canadian in the province of Quebec is involved there will be no discrimination of any kind?

Mr. Favreau: Mr. Speaker, every aspect of bilingualism within the R.C.M.P. has been under consideration for several months by the commissioner, some of his officers and myself. I already have on my desk reports on that matter. I will inform the house as soon as possible but it is obviously a rather complicated matter.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

INQUIRY AS TO PROCUREMENT OF NEW TACTICAL AIRCRAFT

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): My question is directed to the Minister of National Defence. The Minister has been telling us since March that he would be announcing in a few days a decision with regard to a replacement aircraft. Can he now tell us just when those few days will end, and whether the 60 days of decision have gone by the board?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of National Defence): I tried not to be too precise in my answer, being fully aware of the problems involved in reaching a decision on a matter as important as this. However, I do hope we shall be able to reach a decision within three or four weeks at the outside, now that most of the information we require is available.

HALIFAX—INQUIRY AS TO DISPOSITION OF MINESWEEPERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. Russell MacEwan (Pictou): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of National Defence whether any decision has been reached yet with regard to the minesweepers at Halifax. Will they be placed in reserve or turned over to Crown Assets Disposal Corporation for sale?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, four will be declared surplus immediately, and in respect of the balance we are waiting for a further study that is being done by the Departmental staffs.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

VIET NAM—NEGOTIATIONS FOR SUSPENSION OF AIR STRIKES

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Hon. Paul Martineau (Pontiac-Témiscamingue): I should like to put a question to the Prime Minister.

Does he intend to open negotiations with President Johnson in order to prompt him to stop air raids over North Viet Nam as a prerequisite for negotiations or is he in a position to renew the hope expressed to that effect by the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Martin) before the committee on external affairs?

[English]

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): No, Mr. Speaker, no negotiations are intended with regard to that matter. We discussed these matters with the President of the United States.

EFFECT OF MILITARY DISPLAY ON CANADIAN PRESTIGE ABROAD

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of External Affairs. I should like to ask him whether the proposed Moscow-type military display in Ottawa on Saturday will assist him in maintaining Canada's prestige abroad as a peace loving nation and will assist him in his activities with regard to disarmament proposals; or will it give the impression that Canada is becoming very militaristic?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I hope that tomorrow's occasion will be, as I expect it will be, a display of the effectiveness of the Canadian armed services which is so ably demonstrated by those who represent Canada in the various UN peace keeping forces for example on the Gaza strip and in Cyprus. I should think that until such time as we are able to have an effective system of world wide disarmament all Canadians, including my hon. friend, will be pleased to see this display of Canada's military forces.

Mr. Churchill: My interest in Canada's military forces exceeds that of the Minister, but I was wondering whether this is the appropriate time, in the disturbed conditions of the world, for this type of display. If there were a war imminent for Canada this would be appropriate, but is it now when we are pressing the peace loving nature of Canada in international affairs?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, I hope my hon. friend did not take my last response in any way as a reflection on his gallantry, which no one in this House disputes.

CYPRUS—INQUIRY AS TO MAINTENANCE OF CANADIAN FORCE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. A. B. Patterson (Fraser Valley): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. Is it the intention of the Government to renew Canada's participation in the United Nations peace keeping force in Cyprus beyond the present commitment; and if so, have any agreements been secured for a sharing of the cost by other member nations of the United Nations?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the answer to the last part of the question is no. The Security Council will probably be meeting next week to consider the renewal of the mandate. After we have been notified of the decision of the Council the Canadian Government will make its decision.

NATO—INQUIRY AS TO REDUCTION IN CANADIAN FORCES

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. In the light of reports of basic shifts in the policy of western countries in NATO, is the Minister in a position to advise the House whether this will involve a reduction in the Canadian forces in Europe at the present time?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): I should like to take this question as notice, Mr. Speaker.

SPORTS

OPPORTUNITIES FOR REPRESENTATIONS TO ADVISORY COUNCIL

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, as one who represents a riding which has always made a fetish of physical and moral fitness I wish to address a question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare, of which I have given her oral notice. In view of the mounting interest in the sports and fitness program in Canada, will the Minister consider providing other avenues for sports and other groups to make representations to the Advisory Council on Fitness and Amateur Sport?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, a channel does exist in that the national sports governing bodies make representations to the Advisory Council, which advises me. However, as I understand my hon. friend's problem, it is with regard to sports groups which have not had their applications referred to the Council by their national bodies. I would be very pleased, at the request of the hon. Member, to take this question under advisement and see whether there is some appropriate way to make sure they will be considered.

WORLD STUDENT GAMES—REQUEST FOR TRAVEL GRANT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Arnold Webster (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Minister of National Health and Welfare. Canada hopes to send a ten member team of athletes to the World Student Games in Budapest in August. What answer has the hon. Minister given to the request from the Canadian Union of Students for a $10,000 travel grant for this purpose from the National Advisory Council on Fitness and Amateur Sport?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I have not received any such request, notwithstanding the fact that I saw a newspaper report to this effect.

INDUSTRY

ASSISTANCE TO WORKERS DISPLACED BY AUTOMOBILE AGREEMENT

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address a question to the Minister of Industry based on the meeting he had this morning with the delegates from Oshawa, Ontario, representing the workers in the automobile industry and its parts plants. I would ask the Minister whether he can advise if he was able to allay the fears which this delegation brought before him regarding the probable loss of jobs in the Oshawa area as a result of the Canada-U.S. auto agreement, and whether he was able to advise them what safeguards there are or are contemplated so as to look after these displaced workers who are in the 35 to 65 age group.

Hon. C. M. Drury (Minister of Industry): Mr. Speaker, I think the answer to both questions is yes.

CROWN ASSETS

DISPOSAL OF SURPLUS D.E.W. LINE EQUIPMENT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Minister of Defence Production. In view of the fact that tenders close on Tuesday next, and in view of the fact that millions of dollars of public funds are involved, will the Minister consider extending the closing date for tenders and reconsider the method of disposing of surplus D.E.W. Line equipment?

Hon. C. M. Drury (Minister of Industry): Mr. Speaker, I am not quite sure why the hon. Member feels that the whole method of disposal should be reconsidered. The problem of disposing of large quantities of equipment which has become surplus consequent upon the closing down of the mid-Canada line has been given very intensive and serious consideration. I do think that the procedure being followed is in the best interests of the Canadian taxpayer.

Mr. Simpson: A supplementary question. Does the Minister not feel it is worth while considering the suggestion that the Government transport this equipment themselves, taking advantage of what would appear to be tremendous increase in the price they would receive for the equipment if they were to bring it out themselves?

Mr. Drury: In comparing the relative return to the Crown as between the Government bringing the equipment out to the market and allowing the bidders to make their own transport arrangements, the advantage seems to lie in favour of seeking bids on the "as is, where is" basis.

Mr. Simpson: One further supplementary question. I would again ask the Minister whether he would give this his fullest consideration, because there seems to be considerable fear that this equipment will go for a relatively small amount of money due to its particular location at this time, and much more money could be derived by the Crown if the Government were to bring it out themselves.

Mr. Drury: Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, a more valid assessment could be made of this particular problem at the time the bids are in.

PUBLIC BUILDINGS

HULL, QUE.—INQUIRY AS TO CONSTRUCTION

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct my question to the Minister of Public Works. We have been here for three sessions and on many occasions we heard the present minister and his predecessor say that, eventually, federal buildings would be erected in Hull, Ottawa's sister city, if you like. But everytime the matter is mentioned we are given the same answer: the project is under consideration. Could the minister finally tell us today whether or not the federal government or his department intend to erect federal buildings on the other side of the river, that is in the city of Hull?

Hon. Lucien Cardin (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, it is the intention of the Department of Public Works to build public buildings in the whole area of the national capital, including the city of Hull.

I am not in a position to say at the present time which building will be erected in Hull.

Mr. Caouette: Will there be any?

Mr. Cardin: Yes.

[English]

AGRICULTURE

CORN—STEPS TO CONTROL DWARF MOSAIC DISEASE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Danforth (Kent, Ont): Mr. Speaker, I wish to pose a question to the Minister of Agriculture. I do it in this fashion because of the extreme urgency concerning this year's crop. Since we have learned that last year a new corn disease called dwarf mosaic reached epidemic proportions in U.S. corn growing areas adjacent to our own, causing millions of dollars of damage, would the Minister consider the immediate implementation of a crash program at the Chatham Entomological Laboratory and other Federal institutions in the Canadian corn growing areas, with a view to the possible control of insects suspected of transmitting this new corn disease?

Hon. Harry W. Hays (Minister of Agriculture): Yes, we will be glad to consider this, Mr. Speaker.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

OTTAWA—COST OF MILITARY PARADE

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Léo Cadieux (Associate Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday the hon. Member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands asked for the estimated cost of the Armed Forces Day parade to be held this Saturday. The cost attributable to this parade is estimated to be $36,000, which includes $29,890 for petrol, oil and lubricants used by the various service vehicles and aircraft and for the local hiring of buses to supplement service transport. This figure does not include normal pay and allowances, as this is not an extra cost. On the other hand, all extra out of pocket expenses are included.

NATIONAL PARKS

BANFF—PURCHASE OF BREWSTER TRANSPORT COMPANIES BY U.S. CORPORATION

On the orders of the day:

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Acting Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources. Is the Government aware that Greyhound Corporation of the United States is negotiating to purchase Brewster Transport Company Limited and the Brewster Rocky Mountain Grey Line of Banff, Alberta; and if so, what is the Government's position with respect to the question of substantial private business in our national parks in the hands of non-Canadian interests?

Mr. Speaker: This is a very important question, but it is a good question for the order paper and I am sure the hon. Member will receive a detailed answer.

Mr. Dinsdale: On a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker, the urgency arises from the fact that the negotiations are taking place which vitally concern Canada's interests.

TRANS-CANADA HIGHWAY

NOVA SCOTIA—CONSTRUCTION ACROSS PICTOU HARBOUR

On the orders of the day:

Mr. John Mullally (Kings): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Public Works. Yesterday the Premier of Nova Scotia announced that work will begin immediately on the trans-Canada highway across Pictou Harbour. Since this is the trans-Canada highway route to Prince Edward Island, I should like to ask the Minister whether this announcement is accurate?

Hon. Lucien Cardin (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, I was interested in the article to which my hon. friend refers. My information is that the necessary approval under the Navigable Waters Protection Act has not yet been completed and that the public notice of the construction which is required under the Act has not yet been given.

Mr. Mullally: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I should also like to ask the Minister whether a route has been selected for the trans-Canada highway near Truro, Nova Scotia.

Mr. Cardin: Mr. Speaker, the general location of the route up to Truro has been selected. However, the proposed by-pass of Truro has not yet been approved by the Federal Government.

INQUIRY OF THE MINISTRY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. F. J. Bigg (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. It is reported that Mr. Justice Porter of the appellate division of Alberta, and a member of the Redistribution Commission, is being considered for appointment as Lieutenant Governor of Alberta. I wonder whether I could be assured that this is correct.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, it is of course quite improper on the orders of the day to ask about the appointment of a representative of the Crown in the provinces. May I tell my hon. friend even though the question may be out of order, that this is just a newspaper rumour.

REDISTRIBUTION

ALBERTA—PUBLISHING OF CONSTITUENCY MAPS IN NEWSPAPERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether I could put a related question to the Secretary of State. Has the Minister any report to make on the question I put to him two or three days ago in reference to the apparent leak that appeared in Alberta before the redistribution maps were published in the Canada Gazette?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, we are in communication with the Commission but we have not yet received any answer. I must also tell my hon. friend that these Commissions are not agencies of the Crown, so they are not even obliged to answer.

EDUCATION

INQUIRY AS TO CONSIDERATION AT DOMINION-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Prime Minister and ask whether the Government has received a request from any of the provincial Premiers to have the subject of the financing of higher education put on the agenda for the forthcoming Federal-Provincial Conference.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): The correspondence has been tabled, Mr. Speaker. I will have to look into the correspondence to see if that subject was mentioned. I will be glad to answer on Monday.

Inquiries of the Ministry

LABOUR RELATIONS

VANCOUVER—EFFORTS TO SETTLE STRIKE OF GRAIN HANDLERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Minister of Labour in view of the fact that the Alberta Wheat Pool terminal elevator at Vancouver has been tied up for well over a week because of a strike. Has Dr. Perry been successful in arranging for any meetings between the labour union involved and the Alberta Wheat Pool; and if so, has there been any indication that the workers are going to conclude this strike that is tying up a capacity of some five million bushels of wheat?

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, Dr. Perry has had meetings with the unions and the employers and is continuing his mediation efforts. I have received no report which would indicate that he has reached a conclusion of this work at this moment.

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT

CONTINUATION OF PROGRAM OF SMALL POST OFFICE CONSTRUCTION

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Henri Latulippe (Compton-Frontenac): Mr. Speaker, I wish to put a question to the Minister of Public Works.

Does the government intend to continue building post offices in designated areas, such a step being appreciated by the citizens, since it helps reduce unemployment in winter?

Hon. Lucien Cardin (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, this matter is at present under consideration.

[English]

FORESTRY

REMOVAL OF DEPARTMENTAL LABORATORIES TO SAULT STE. MARIE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. D. M. Fisher (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of Forestry a question arising out of the decision to consolidate forestry research in Sault Ste. Marie, which he announced so indirectly yesterday. I should like to ask the Minister whether he will undertake, when his estimates come before the Agricultural, Forestry and Rural Development Committee later this session, to co-operate by supporting a request for the calling of outside witnesses by the Committee in order to present views and opinions about this consolidation.

Hon. Maurice Sauvé (Minister of Forestry): No, Mr. Speaker.

DOMINION-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

QUEBEC—ADDRESS TO HER MAJESTY RESPECTING PROVINCIAL CONSTITUTION

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Hon. Paul Martineau (Pontiac-Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a question to the Prime Minister.

Is he in a position to tell the house when the debate he promised on the Address being forwarded to Her Majesty the Queen by the Quebec legislative assembly will take place? At the same time, would he tell us whether such an address has now been presented to the Queen?

[English]

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, so far as the first part of the question is concerned, there should be opportunities for discussion of this matter. A supply motion would provide one opportunity. So far as the second part of the question is concerned, the address has not yet been received by me from the Governor General. It may have been received this morning, but it had not been received last evening.

STUDY OF EFFECT ON CANADA OF SEPARATION OF QUEBEC

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Paul Martineau (Pontiac-Témiscamingue): Mr. Speaker, I have a related question. Could the Prime Minister make the progress report he promised to the House some time ago on the study that has been undertaken by the Federal Government with regard to the possible or probable effects on Canadian Confederation of Quebec separatism.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, there is no study being made in those terms. There is a question on the order paper about the interdepartmental examination, and I think I O.K.'d the answer to that this morning. My hon. friend will recall that a few weeks ago I tabled in the House an interim report of the study.

[Mr. Fisher.]

Mr. Martineau: Do I take it the Prime Minister does not intend to make a report to the House on this matter?

Mr. Pearson: Yes, Mr. Speaker, when the work is completed there will be a report made to the House.

COMMONWEALTH RELATIONS

REPORTED PROPOSAL FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF REPRESENTATIVE ASSEMBLY

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Prime Minister. Yesterday the Leader of the Opposition put a question to the Prime Minister, who was unavoidably absent, regarding the reported proposal for the establishment of a representative assembly that may come up at the Commonwealth Conference. The Acting Prime Minister, the Minister of Transport, quite candidly admitted that with his limited capacities he could not answer the question. I wonder whether the Prime Minister has received an opinion from the Secretary of State for External Affairs on this matter, and is he prepared to reply to that question?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, naturally I feel somewhat elated at being able to answer a question that defeated my hon. friend the Minister of Transport. The question of parliamentary discussions within the Commonwealth and the possible setting up of an agency for that purpose is to be discussed in London at the Commonwealth Conference. The proposal for such discussions was made by the United Kingdom Prime Minister. He said in his message to the other Prime Ministers that he hoped for a general discussion and exchange of views on the possibility of progress in the direction of further Parliamentary discussions among members of the Commonwealth. Naturally we will be very glad to participate in that kind of examination, but we are very conscious, as I am sure all hon. Members are, of the important part played in this field by the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, and I think one would have to keep that in mind in the consideration of any new parliamentary machinery.

OLD AGE SECURITY

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISEMENTS RESPECTING APPLICATIONS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. In reply to a question of mine on June 1 the Minister indicated that within a few days advertisements would appear in every newspaper in Canada telling people when they may apply for old age security under the new provision which lowers the qualifying age. Now that some nine or ten days have gone by can she say when these advertisements will appear and can she say whether they will answer the questions people are asking about this matter?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, they will appear next Tuesday or Wednesday in all newspapers across Canada. They will contain a chart indicating that if you were born on or before such and such a date you will apply on such and such a date. I am sure they will answer any questions.

FISHERIES

NEGOTIATIONS RESPECTING ESTABLISHMENT OF FISHING ZONES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. S. Barnett (Comox-Alberni): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs which will recall to his mind his appearance before the Standing Committee on Marine and Fisheries on the matter of the extension of our fishing zones. Have the negotiations for the establishment of base line co-ordinates been completed? If not, what is the Minister doing to assist his colleague, the Minister of Fisheries, in this connection in view of the Minister's primary responsibility for external affairs?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): What am I doing, Mr. Speaker? I am working very hard together with my colleague, the Minister of Fisheries, in respect of a negotiation that is proving very difficult.

Mr. Barnett: Is the Secretary of State for External Affairs aware of the fact it is almost a year now since the act was proclaimed in connection with the extension of our fishing zone?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, I am only too well aware of the fact.

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Queens): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Can the Secretary of State for External Affairs give the House some indication of what progress, if any, is being made as a result of his efforts?

Mr. Churchill: Just give your opinion.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): My hon. friend is not, of course, a member of the External Affairs Committee, but I hope to make a full statement on this matter. As a former Minister of Fisheries my hon. friend knows that we have negotiations under way with a number of countries, including the United States. These negotiations involve matters that are of great concern to these countries not only from the standpoint of fisheries but from other points of view. However, we are hopeful that, notwithstanding these difficulties, we will be able to reach some agreement.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Does the Minister consider his appearances before the External Affairs Committee are informative?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, I would hope that my appearance yesterday helped to educate the hon. gentleman.

BICULTURALISM AND BILINGUALISM

SUGGESTED WITHDRAWAL OF ROYAL COMMISSION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Lloyd R. Crouse (Queens-Lunenburg): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Secretary of State. In view of the fact that a recent survey in Ottawa indicated opposition to the Bilingualism and Biculturalism Commission by 15 to 1, and the growing feeling that this Commission is destroying the tolerance built up in Canada between our two founding races during the past 100 years, would the Minister give consideration to withdrawing this Commission, especially in view of its excessive cost to the Canadian taxpayers?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, although I do not accept the allegation made by the hon. Member I must repeat to the House that I am not responsible for this Royal Commission.

Mr. Crouse: Then may I direct this question to the attention of the Prime Minister. May I say it is not a matter of an allegation; the Ottawa newspapers reported the results of a survey that was made which indicated opposition to the Commission in this City by 15 to 1.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am afraid I do not even accept the conclusion of that particular survey, and

I think it would be most unfortunate and inappropriate for the Government to intervene at this time and wind up the work of that Royal Commission when its work is not yet completed.

COMPANY OF YOUNG CANADIANS

REQUEST FOR REPORT ON PROGRESS OF ORGANIZATION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Arnold Webster (Vancouver-Kingsway): Mr. Speaker, my question is for the Prime Minister. Has any progress been made in setting up the organization to recruit the Company of Young Canadians?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Yes, indeed, Mr. Speaker. An organizing committee has been set up, the personnel of which has been announced. It might be of interest to the House if I were to make a report as soon as possible on the progress of the organizing work, and I would be glad to do that.

Mr. Knowles: Has the Prime Minister enlisted?

PROCEDURE

CONCURRENCE IN FIRST REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Mr. Speaker: Does the House now consent to revert to motions in order that the President of the Privy Council may move concurrence in the report of the Special Committee on Procedures of the House?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

• (12:00 noon)

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (President of the Privy Council): I move, seconded by the Minister of Transport:

That the first report of the Special Committee on Procedure of the House of Commons presented this day be now concurred in.

Hon. Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre): I appreciate that the motion is debatable, and I appreciate also the fact that we are working under a guillotine imposed by the House of Commons some time ago so that the discussion of this report, plus the other matters before us in connection with the rules, have to be finished by five o'clock. I should like to say this, that the report which has been brought back to the House, as the report itself states, was adopted by the Committee on division and is not a unanimous opinion from that Committee.

[Mr. Pearson.]

I intend to speak very briefly in order to give to the backbenchers of this House, who are almost in revolt against limitations of time that are now being imposed in the House and who have apparently discovered that the major changes in the rules are striking at the freedom of the backbenchers, an opportunity to speak. On the other hand, I realize that if there is a vote on this report it will be an open vote since the rules affect every single Member individually. It is not a case of the Government versus the Opposition. I presume if there is a vote we will be able to observe the independence expressed by various Members of this House without the whips compelling them to do something they do not wish to do.

I just want to say this, Sir. Now that we are reaching the end of this revision of the rules and procedures, the most extensive revision since 1955, I hope there will be an appropriate pause for a year or two until we see the effects of the changes rather than trying to press on with some more changes. It has become obvious that once you start making changes in the rules and procedures of this House you discover problems that were not evident before. What is coming out of this major change in the rules and procedures is an increase in the power of the executive, which already was too great and should have been diminished. The private Members of this House are beginning to realize that, but rather too late in the day.

The second thing that comes out of it is a restriction on the freedom of speech so far as the Opposition are concerned, and the time they may devote to matters of public interest can be seriously restricted. This is a dangerous move and may have bad effects in the future.

The third matter that comes out of the study of the proposed changes is that shackles are being placed on the private Members of this House by the private Members themselves. They failed, a few days ago, to pay close attention to the speeches that were made on this subject. Only yesterday did they appear to awaken to the fact that they were encouraging the executive to put shackles on the private Members. We heard quite a bit about the advantages that accrue to those who are on the front benches and the disadvantages to those who are somewhat further removed from the aisle. I hope today the backbenchers will assert their rights by their vote and restrain the Government from the imposition of a second method of closure.

They have one on the books now and they are putting on another one.

Quite a bit of this has come about because of the composition of the present executive. Several of the most prominent members of the treasury benches have not gone through that orderly progression from the back row to the front row. It is a rather slow process, as some of us have found out, but it has its advantages. You get the point of view of the private Member which a person who is catapulted into the front row does not get.

The present Prime Minister and the Minister of Transport—I will not mention all the others—were catapulted into the front row. The Prime Minister entered the front row, I presume, when he entered the House, and the Minister of Transport got into the second row from the front, which was too far advanced a position for him at that time anyway. Nevertheless, there was the unusual progression from outside of the House of Commons right to the treasury benches. These gentlemen did not receive the training that I believe a parliamentarian should get; that is, to start at the curtains in the back row and gradually move forward. In this way an hon. Member has an idea of the penalties that fall upon the less prominent Members of the House of Commons as they sit in the back row and then gradually move forward.

I put in a plea ten days ago on behalf of the backbenchers, and I return to that subject now. People come into this House in the same way, by the votes within a constituency. There is a great equality at election time when you are standing for election. Every person is in the same position, in that it is the votes of the people in the constituency that move him into the House of Commons. When he gets into the House of Commons he finds everybody there is equal, but some are more equal than others. He discovers, slowly and painfully when he sits in the back row, that he is to be seen and not heard unless the whip of the party, acting under instructions, discovers that a debate requires somebody to carry it on. Then the backbencher is a very useful person. I have been all through this, and I realize what it is.

It is nice to have a backbencher around to vote, very nice to have him around to maintain a quorum in the House. Under the rules now it will be the backbencher who will be here during the lunch hour because the people on the front benches will have to go to have their meals. I realize that when you are in the back benches you must not interfere with the front benchers when they are making the lead off speeches on some subject. After they have made their speeches, then the backbencher is called, the subject having been fairly well exhausted by those previous utterances of the front benches. The backbencher is asked often to make a 30 or 40 minute speech because one of the frontbenchers who is away wants to come back the next day and contribute to the debate, so it must be kept open. I have been through that on many occasions. This goes back a good many years.

This is the function of the backbencher. He is a very useful person on occasion. When there is a limited debate, when closure has been applied, it is only the frontbenchers who are to be heard, the people who will speak for their party and express the opinion of the party. The backbencher is just to sit and listen and when the time comes, to vote.

This is the most difficult position the backbencher occupies in this House under the changes in the rules that have been brought forward. The first major change came in 1955 when a restriction was placed on the length of the debate on the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne and the Budget debate. Backbenchers were then squeezed out because there was not sufficient available time for them to participate in debates. Now they are contributing to squeezing themselves out further, and their function in Parliament will be less prominent than it has been in the past.

In the report presented to us today a sop is thrown out to the backbencher, in that on a closure motion which gives one day for debate on third reading there can be an extension of four hours beyond normal closing time if backbenchers who have not been heard, but still want to get something on the record, suggest to the Speaker that their names be placed on the list of speakers to be called. The extra four hours will be granted to them to express themselves but each individual will be limited to 20 minutes, so that only 12 may be heard; and if 40 others wish to be heard they will be chopped off.

This is what I call the anti-whip amendment, because it gives the backbenchers who are not in good standing with their whips, who cannot get on their party list of speakers, an opportunity to go direct to Mr. Speaker on the last day of a closed debate and get the opportunity to be heard.

I pity the backbenchers in the future. I regret they have not aroused themselves in large numbers on this occasion, and have not seen that the executive is grasping more power. They have not seen that the backbencher is being relegated to an even more inferior position than he has occupied in the past. He is now being asked to put the shackles on himself, to fasten the ball and chain on his own foot so that his activities in this Chamber will be reduced.

Much of what we are seeking would have been achieved by extending the hours of sitting from 25½ to 33 hours per week. This would have made the necessary provision for shortening a session, as some desire, and giving more Members the opportunity to speak. But we have gone further than that because the Government insists on the closure rule and backbenchers are being asked to confer this great power on the executive.

With a limit on this debate, with the guillotine not quite as sharp as it was yesterday, its edge a bit blunted, but with it ready to fall at five o'clock this evening, I now relinquish the floor to the backbenchers of the House of Commons.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I am sure we have all enjoyed the delightful touches of irony with which the hon. Member for Winnipeg South Centre has regaled us with during the speech he has just terminated under his own voluntary guillotine.

The hon. Member has rightly pointed out that the report of the special committee consisting of nine Members of the House was agreed to on division. I rise, as a member of the committee who supported the report, to support the motion for its adoption, and like the hon. Member for Winnipeg South Centre I shall try to keep my remarks brief. However, I feel one fundamental point should be emphasized once more.

In the main the business of the House of Commons consists of two things. We must have the chance to speak, the right to discuss all the matters that are brought before us; and second, we must have the right to reach decisions. The whole problem in parliamentary procedure is to find a balance between these two propositions.

This is not the first time Parliament has attempted to find that balance. When limitations were put on the length of time a Member could speak, that was part of the attempt. In 1955 when certain debates, such as on the Address, the Budget and supply motions, were limited, that was another attempt to achieve that balance. What we are now proposing is that that step be carried a bit further, that there be arrangements whereby the House itself can come to agreement that certain other debates be given a time limit so that certain items can be concluded and the House can get on to other matters.

[Mr. Churchill.]

I think the House generally believes this is the wise and responsible thing to do. I believe the people of Canada support us in our contention that we should organize our parliamentary year, which includes planning the use of our parliamentary time. Therefore I am not disturbed by the manner in which the hon. Member for Winnipeg South Centre tries to suggest, as he has done so often, that we are extending the principle of closure. That is not an accurate description of the rule we are now discussing. All he is doing is arguing by assertion.

The one thing the country has the right to expect us to do is to organize our work better, and it is on that basis that we support the principle of the allocation of time. Indeed, we have been urging for some considerable time that this be adopted. You, Mr. Deputy Speaker, will recall serving with others and with me as members of a subcommittee on procedure last session when we worked on this problem and came up with draft orders along this very line, which in fact had wide support.

When this matter was discussed earlier in the House arguments arose over the wording of the proposal for an allocation of time order. As a result the matter was referred to a special committee of nine Members of the House, and it is the report of that committee which we now have before us.

The hon. Member for Winnipeg South Centre referred briefly to the one change of substance that our committee has recommended, and I should like to refer to it also, but I do so as a supporter of the proposed change. May I point out that the rule as sent to the committee provided for certain conditions under which allocation limits could be set. It established a certain set of minimum provisions under which, if a Minister was moving a time allocation order without the support of the business committee, the least he could ask for would be two days on second reading, two days in Committee of the Whole, and one day on third reading. Some people thought this would be the pattern in all cases, but that does not follow at all. The Business Committee itself may recommend shorter or longer periods, and even a Minister may recommend longer periods.

In the case of a money bill, the minimum time possible is six days; for in addition to those five days on the bill itself there is the one day already provided for discussion of the resolution preceding the bill, and when a Minister moves a time allocation order there can be an additional day's debate on that motion.

• (12:20 p.m.)

We must also face the fact that even though some of us are opposed to the provision to extend the hours by sitting from six to eight, nevertheless that provision has been passed. The result is that each day will be longer, so the possibility of six full days of debate on a money measure adds up to quite a few more hours than would have been the case in six days of debate under the former rules. Having in mind the amount of time taken in a parliament such as Westminster, I maintain we are not being unreasonable in giving our support to the principle of time allocation translated into these specific terms.

Let me come now to the one substantial change which the committee of nine has proposed. I wish there had been an opportunity to print these recommendations as an appendix to Hansard in order that all hon. Members might have before them the substance of the proposal. That, however, is a matter for the Minister rather than for me. What we have proposed is that when third reading of a bill takes place under a time allocation, whether it is the one day minimum or whether it is any length of time that the business committee may have recommended, at ten o'clock on the last day of the time allocated for third reading it shall be possible for the debate to be extended. We have made this recommendation because we feel the appeals made by backbenchers are legitimate. We are not trying to protect the right of filibuster, the right to prevent a decision from being reached. We are saying there are occasions when Members representing constituencies rightfully feel they should have a chance to speak come what may. So we have recommended that on this final day Mr. Speaker shall have the authority to extend the time available up to an additional four hours. We have recommended that during this four hour period speeches shall be limited to 20 minutes and that speakers shall be drawn from among those who have notified Mr. Speaker that they wish to get on his list and who have given their notice at least one hour before the normal adjournment time. If the House were under an allocation of time order on third reading, at eight o'clock on the last day Members who wanted to speak would notify Mr. Speaker. If the number was small enough to enable all of them to "get on" by ten o'clock, that would be fine. But if there should be too many, Mr. Speaker has the right to continue the sitting for a further four hours and he will choose the speakers from among those who have notified him of their wish to speak.

We have also provided that during this four hour period there shall be no further amendments or subamendments. In other words we are providing for the genuine case of the backbencher who feels he must get his word into the debate, despite the fact that he has not managed to do so. We have also provided that if during the extended period, say between 10 p.m. and 2 a.m., there is a call for a vote the vote shall not be taken at that time, providing five members so request, but that it be postponed until the next sitting day when it will, of necessity, be taken as the first item under Government orders, without further debate.

I can see that we might have done better. We might have made the period longer. We might have set no final limit. But I suggest this represents a distinct improvement compared with the proposed standing order as we first took it under consideration in the committee of nine. I put it to the House that we have done a bit more toward achieving a balance between the right of Members to speak and the right of Parliament to reach a point at which a decision is made.

I believe it was a good idea for this proposed standing order to be referred to the special committee. I believe the special committee has come back with a good report. I am sorry it is not unanimous, but it is the report of the committee and I hope Members generally will acknowledge that it should be supported and that it should become an order of the House, as provided in the report itself, for the balance of this session and for the next session of this Parliament, subject to whatever decision the House may make at that time.

Mr. Speaker, I have pleasure in supporting the motion for the adoption of this report.

Mr. H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat): I, too, would like to support the report which has come back from the special committee of nine in connection with the second paragraph of the resolution before us.

I find it strange that an argument can be advanced that this in some way is likely to infringe on the rights and privileges of backbenchers. I say it seems strange, having in mind the fact that I have not heard anyone complaining in this House that the arrangements made for the debate on the Budget and the debate on the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne, each limited in extent, constitute an infringement of the rights and privileges of backbenchers.

We know that even if all the provisions contained in the new standing order 15 were used it would be impossible for a Government to limit a debate to less than one day on the resolution, in the case of a bill, two days for second reading, two days in committee after second reading and one day plus an overtime period of four hours on third reading. I would also draw to the attention of the House the fact that in addition to these six days there is also a one day debate which can be demanded on the motion to impose these rules. Therefore, every time this Standing Order 15A is used, provision will be made for an amount of time to be spent on one single piece of legislation at least equal to that which is available for discussion of the Speech from the Throne, a discussion which is, I suggest, of far greater magnitude inasmuch as it embraces the whole of the Government's legislative program for the session.

Indeed, even more time will be allowed taking into account the extra hours which will be available each day. At present the debate on the Budget is limited to six sitting days of about five hours each day. In other words it is limited to about 30 hours. This debate on the Budget involves the whole of the Government's fiscal policy for the year. Yet even should the Minister use every one of the provisions of this standing order he cannot provide for less time on a single piece of legislation than is now available to backbenchers to deal with the Government's whole fiscal policy for the year.

I cannot, therefore, accept the argument that this proposed standing order is in any way an infringement or a curtailment of the right of backbenchers to participate in debates. What it does is this. It provides that we shall move on from one piece of legislation to another within reasonable time limits. I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that the most effective form of closure we have witnessed in this House is the abuse of these open-ended debates which prevents us moving from one piece of legislation to another.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[Mr. Olson.]

Mr. Olson: During the last year or so we have seen effective use made of this method of closure so as to prevent any discussion by the House of such subjects as regional air policy which are most important to some Members. Tactics such as I have described have closed out the possibility of our dealing with major amendments to the Railway Act. They have for two years closed out a most important measure dealing with the revision of the Bank Act.

Mr. Churchill: That is not right.

Mr. Olson: Despite this, we encounter the argument that this proposal will in some way curtail the rights of backbenchers in this House.

Mr. Churchill: Give us factual reports, not that stuff.

Mr. Olson: I think it is a fact that this is the second year an extension of the bank charters has been required because all the time available, on a continuing basis for 16 months, has been used up in debates on other subjects.

• (12:30 p.m.)

Mr. Churchill: Blame the Government.

Mr. Olson: We ought to blame the House and the rules under which we are operating.

An hon. Member: They did not work before.

Mr. Olson: They have worked before, and they worked until Members on all sides of the House, and more so Members in particular parts of the House, developed the technique of abusing the rules. This sort of thing having gone on to the degree we have witnessed in this House during the past 15 to 16 months, in the interests simply of getting through the essential business it is necessary to make some kind of modifications.

A number of changes were made by the committee of nine, and generally we support all of them. I should like to say there will probably be other modifications which will be necessary, based on the experience of the balance of this session plus one more full session. I am not suggesting that what is now in the report should be made hard and fast and unchangeable because we usually find, no matter how well we try to anticipate all the difficulties or contingencies which may arise, that there is nothing better than some practical experience upon which to judge or test the effectiveness of changes so we can bring them into line with that experience.

So, Mr. Speaker, we in this party support this kind of modification of our rules. We do not accept the argument that it is a more severe restriction than some of the restrictions under which we already operate. For example, I think it could be argued, as the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre said, that even when we reduce the time an individual Member may speak to 40 minutes when the Speaker is in the Chair, and to 30 minutes in committee, this by itself was a restriction of the right of Members to express themselves. Yet it was necessary so that other Members could speak. I think one of the essentials of freedom of speech and action is that you are also willing to allow your colleagues the same right. If there are no restrictions whatever on the length of speeches or the number of days for consideration of the throne speech or the budget, and so on, then you effectively shut out those who would follow you if you take too much time.

So I just say that I think the provisions made in Government Order 15 which will allow backbenchers unlimited time to examine and discuss each Department in a standing committee and the other provisions in this resolution, taken with the other resolution which has been passed, considering the whole package on balance, will enhance the position of the backbencher rather than take something away from him.

[Translation]

Mr. Robert Beaulé (Quebec East): Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a few remarks before this report is adopted.

During the proceedings I realized that the deeper we delve into the Standing Orders, the more we impede the progress of the business of the house. I think we should put an end to this debate and that the time for action has now come. The procedure must absolutely be changed so the house may accomplish some progress. If a businessman handled his affairs the way the House of Commons handles its business, I believe he soon would be bankrupt.

The debate dealt mostly with paragraph 7 of section 15A of resolution No. 15 concerning the limitation of debates. I pointed out to the Committee that a definite period of time was allocated in regard to the address in reply to the speech from the throne and the budget debate, and that I never saw a member rise in this house to claim that he was being gagged or guillotined. I am surprised to find that such words as "guillotine" and "closure" have been used in connection with amending the standing orders in order to expedite the business of the house.

As far as I am concerned, you can be sure that our party is in favour of a major change in the rules and that we will support the report of the committee. Moreover, the sooner it is adopted the better it will be for the house.

According to paragraph 7, two days will be allowed for debate prior to second reading, two days for discussion in committee and one day for debate on third reading and, in addition, a period of four hours if a member did not have the opportunity of speaking during the debate. Therefore, in my opinion, this fully meets the requirements of the members. During a debate when the member of a party speaks for 40 minutes to voice his opinion on the principle of a bill while the Speaker is in the chair and another member of his party speaks for 40 minutes it offers constructive criticism, I think then the members have done their duties; it would therefore serve no useful purpose to extend the debate for hours, days or weeks for the simple reason of gaining public favour.

We are in favour of the standing orders as presented in this report and we will gladly vote along those lines.

[English]

Miss Pauline Jewett (Northumberland): Mr. Speaker, as one backbencher I just wanted to thank the frontbenchers who have spoken, particularly the hon. Member for Winnipeg South Centre for the crocodile tears shed on our behalf. However, it seemed to me that he had missed the point. I think most of us who are backbenchers are really quite happy with what has been done in this report by the committee of frontbenchers. Indeed, my impression is that the degree of unanimity which has been reached—and I am sorry it is not complete—shows very clearly that the frontbenchers in the last week or two have been giving a good deal of thought to the very kind of problems which most bother us on the back benches. Their thought has been given expression in some of the recommendations made, not only the ones made today but some of the changes made earlier in the previous resolution, Government Order 14.

Indeed, when I think back over the last two or three weeks and recall the various suggestions which different members in all parties have made to our House Leaders and others on the front benches, I personally am very comforted to realize how many of our ideas and suggestions have been accepted and embodied in changes. Some suggested, for example, a change in the number of days spent on supply. Others suggested, perhaps quietly, certain changes in the committee structure in relation to matters which were not desirable and which the Government conceded. Others suggested changes with respect to the length of speeches, that the Business Committee should consider how long speeches should last. That kind of suggestion came from many of us on the back benches. The suggestion that we now have the opportunity of an extra four hours on the last day on third reading is one which I think has been pushed most strongly by the so-called backbenchers.

Perhaps on behalf of some others here I may say that I think the work which the Special Committee have done in the last day or so, as well as the concessions which have been made and the friendly co-operation which has been given by all frontbenchers in the last two or three weeks, has produced changes which from our point of view, certainly from my point of view, are going to be very helpful to all of us in this House. I myself would have preferred this extra four hours to have come on second reading. I think it is a little artificial to have the extra four hours on third reading rather than on second reading, because on third reading the bill is pretty well cut and dried and all settled.

Mr. Churchill: I advanced that argument but they would not accept it. I am glad you support it.

Miss Jewett: So that is one you made on our behalf. I am sorry you did not get it through.

• (12:40 p.m.)

Mr. Woolliams: You are getting pretty friendly.

Miss Jewett: I think it might have been a little more logical to have it on second reading, when one still has some hope of influencing the vote on the principle of the bill. However, Mr. Speaker, unless others feel strongly about that perhaps there is no need to push it now. I would hope, finally, that as a result of these past several weeks discussing the procedures of the House, since today is probably going to be the last day on which we will be discussing these changes and they are going into effect, if they go through today, for the remainder of this session and next session—

Mr. Knowles: This is the last day we will have lunch, too.

Miss Jewett: Yes. In view of this, Mr. Speaker, I would hope that those Members who sit on the Business Committee will keep one thing particularly in mind as they are arranging time allocations, and that is the desirability of speeches being of variable length depending upon the bill being considered. Surely one of the most progressive concepts that has developed in some legislatures is the realization that a straight 20 minutes or 30 minutes rule for all speeches on all bills is rather artificial; that there should be perhaps a ten minute rule on some bills, certainly at committee stage and possibly even occasionally on second reading. There are some legislatures, of course, which have a three minute rule, although I do not suppose we could bring ourselves to that, nor perhaps should we. But I do hope the Business Committee will seriously consider the variability of the length of speeches depending on the bill and the stage it has reached, and will seriously consider a ten minute rule for certain kinds of bills and at certain stages.

Mr. G. L. Chatterton (Esquimalt-Saanich): Mr. Speaker, the front benchers have told me to shut up but I am not going to do so. I think I should have a chance to speak in other than the Throne Speech debate and the Budget debate. I am only going to speak for five minutes.

In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, under the proposed Standing Order 15A it is possible for the Business Committee to fix the length of time for debate before they have even seen the bill. Also, it is possible for a Minister to introduce a resolution limiting time without the Members of this House having seen the bill. I am afraid that some complicated piece of legislation might be brought before this House and in certain circumstances rammed through without adequate consideration being given to them.

My suggestion to the Government was that the allocation of time with regard to committee stage and third reading should not apply unless the subject matter of the bill had been referred to a special or standing committee of the House and that committee had reported back. Then at least we would be assured that adequate consideration had been given to the subject matter of the bill and we would also accomplish a saving of the time of the House.

In view of the fact that none of these suggestions are contained in Standing Order 15A as proposed, Mr. Speaker, I have no alternative but to vote against it. I think this is a vicious measure.

Mr. Ian Grant Wahn (St. Paul's): Mr. Speaker, earlier in this debate I suggested that possibly some principle could be established whereby the time could be extended to make sure that private Members who felt they should speak on a particular measure might be able to do so. I suggested that if necessary the debate should continue all evening. To some extent this latest amendment adopts that idea. However, there are so many limitations placed upon it that one of the main reasons for my suggestion no longer has a great deal of force.

The reason I made this suggestion was that I felt the possibility of a debate being extended all through the evening would be so unpleasant to Members on the front benches, and other Members in the House, that a real incentive would be provided to recognize the rights of private Members. It would retain, in other words, a negotiating position for the private Member. The limitations which have been placed upon the extension of debate are such as to completely destroy that particular reason for my suggestion. In other words the private Member's negotiating position has been destroyed completely, and the amendment really does not improve his negotiating position at all.

The first of the three limitations to which I refer is that the extension of four hours only applies on third reading. This is, of course, after the principle of the bill has been approved. Second reading is the time when the principle of the bill should be debated; so if there is any merit at all in giving the private Member a right to be heard, surely it should be on second reading and not on third reading.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Wahn: Under this system he is required to get up and vote on the principle of the bill on second reading and does not have an opportunity of expressing any reservations he may have until third reading. It does seem to me this puts a private Member in a very difficult position; indeed, it is an almost illogical and irrational position.

The other two limitations are matters upon which I would be interested in hearing from those hon. Members who have spoken in favour of this amendment. I would ask them to give reasons why they should be included. The first limitation is that there should be no amendments during this four hour extension period, and the second limitation is that any five Members can move that the vote be postponed until the next sitting day.

I realize that arguments can be put forward in favour of these particular limitations, but I suggest the real reason for them is to dispense with the necessity of anyone being here during the extended debate. At least, Mr. Speaker, this is one possible effect of these two limitations, because I must not impute motives. They will make it unnecessary for members of the front bench or, indeed, for Members in all parts of the House, to be present while the private Members try to make their points. The effect is to completely destroy the negotiating position which I hoped the backbencher would retain with an extended debate.

It has been pointed out that this measure will be applied on a trial basis. I think it is a very good thing that it is on a trial basis. But since it is on this basis I would have thought that those who introduced it could have afforded to be generous in protecting the rights of backbenchers rather than restricting them. If they had been generous and had given more protection to the rights of backbenchers, perhaps it would have been found after the trial period that legislation was not being filibustered after all. It seems to me rather pessimistic on their part to assume that they must limit the rights of backbenchers to the extent that they have, in order to make certain there shall be no unduly extended debate.

I think most of us are very happy with many of the amendments that have been made; we think they will improve the procedure of the House. However, Mr. Speaker, it does seem to me that since this particular rule is being adopted on a trial basis, more generous measures should have been taken to make sure that the negotiating position of the private, back bench Member was retained.

I would ask the House Leader, the President of the Privy Council, when he speaks to tell us what will happen, for example, to the rights of the backbencher in view of these limitations if there is no quorum in the House. Will the right of the backbencher be completely destroyed? I made a number of suggestions when I spoke a few days ago in this debate. I believe that any one of them could have been adopted and they would have preserved the rights of the backbencher while at the same time permitting the Government to get its legislation through without undue delay. I suggest that even at this late date some improvements could be made in this particular rule.

Some hon. Members: Question.

House of Commons Procedures

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, I have very few remarks to make—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. If the Minister speaks now he will close the debate.

Mr. McIlraith: —in closing the debate, but I should like at the very outset of my remarks to thank the hon. Members who served on the Committee for their devotion to duty and for having accepted to meet at some rather awkward hours. I want, Mr. Speaker, to put that word of appreciation on record.

• (12:50 p.m.)

In view of certain remarks made during the course of this debate there is one specific point I think I should make. The effect of these two orders is to lengthen very sharply the debate on the Budget, on the Speech from the Throne and on the resolution stage before a bill. Apparently Members have not figured out the result, but overlooking altogether the shortening of the question period and making no allowance whatever for the additional time gained in that way, the extra hours on the Throne Speech debate are something like 15, which would make provision for approximately 22 more speakers. I am not precise because theoretically the number of hours could be reduced if only Wednesdays or Fridays were utilized all through that debate. However, something more than 15 hours will be provided, and allowing 40 minutes per speech it can be easily seen that a good many more speakers can participate in that debate.

Similarly, in the budget debate which is now confined to a limited period there will be an additional 9½ hours available, thus making provision for some 17 additional speakers. The result is that the whole change being made has the effect of programming the business, but it does not curtail the opportunity for Members to speak. Rather, in total it extends their opportunity to do so. I hope hon. Members will check these figures themselves. I will conclude my remarks now so that the vote can be taken.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the said motion?

Mr. Churchill: Will you call for the yeas and nays, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those in favour will please say yea.

Some hon. Members: Yea.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: All those opposed will please say nay.

[Mr. Wahn.]

Some hon. Members: Nay.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: In my opinion the yeas have it.

And more than five Members having risen:

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Call in the Members.

Mr. Churchill: We want the Liberal backbenchers to vote.

The House divided on the motion (Mr. McIlraith) which was agreed to on the following division:

HOUSE OF COMMONS

AMENDMENT OF STANDING ORDERS RESPECTING CONDUCT OF BUSINESS

The House resumed from Thursday, June 10, consideration in committee of the following resolution—Mr. Pearson—Mr. Lamoureux in the Chair:

That the following amendments be made to Standing Orders:

1. That Standing Order 6 be deleted and the following substituted therefor:

Standing Order 6

6. (1) At 6:00 o'clock p.m. on Wednesdays and Fridays and at 10:00 o'clock p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, unless provided otherwise in these Standing Orders, Mr. Speaker shall adjourn the House without question put until the next sitting day.

(2) A motion that the House continue to sit after the hour specified in Section (1) may be made at any time without notice. If any member objects to the motion, Mr. Speaker shall request those members who object to rise in their places and if ten or more members then rise, the question shall not be put on the motion. If no member objects or if fewer than ten members rise in their places, the motion shall be deemed to be carried. No debate or formal vote shall be held on such a motion to extend a sitting. An extended sitting under the provisions of this Section, unless a closing time has been specified, shall not be terminated except by the adoption of a motion to adjourn and Mr. Speaker shall not deem that a motion to adjourn the House has been made by virtue of the operation of any other Standing Order.

(3) If any member objects to the taking of a vote at any time between 1:00 o'clock p.m. and 2:30 o'clock p.m. or between 6:00 o'clock p.m. and 8:00 o'clock p.m., Mr. Speaker shall request those members who object to rise in their places and if five or more members rise, the taking of the vote shall be postponed until after 2:30 o'clock p.m. or until after 8:00 o'clock p.m. as the case may be.

(4) When it is provided in any Standing Order or in any order of the House that the business under consideration at the ordinary time of adjournment be forthwith disposed of or concluded, Mr. Speaker shall not adjourn the House until the specified proceedings be completed.

2. That Section (1) of Standing Order 12 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 12, Section (1)

12. (1) Mr. Speaker shall preserve order and decorum, and shall decide questions of order. In explaining a point of order or practice, he shall state the standing order or authority applicable to the case. No debate shall be permitted on any such decision, nor shall any such decision be subject to an appeal to the House.

3. That Sections (3) and (4) of Standing Order 15 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 15, Sections (3) and (4)

15. (3) Except as otherwise provided in these Standing Orders, the order of business for the consideration of the House, day-by-day, after the daily routine shall be as follows:

(Monday)

Questions.
Government orders.
(From six to seven o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)
Notices of Motions.

(Tuesday)

Government orders.

Public bills.

(Wednesday)

Questions.
Notices of motions for the production of papers.
Government orders.
(From five to six o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)
Notices of motions.
Public bills.

(Thursday)

Government orders.
Questions.
(From six to seven o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)
A. On the first and each alternate Thursday thereafter:
Notices of motions (papers).
Private bills.
Public bills.

B. On the second and each alternate Thursday thereafter:
Private bills.
Notices of motions (papers).
Public bills.

(Friday)

Government orders.
Questions.

(From five to six o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)

Public bills.
Private bills.

(4) When a debate on a motion "That Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair" for the House to go into Committee of Supply is in progress at 6:00 o'clock p.m. on either a Monday or a Tuesday, the order for Private Members' Business on that day shall be suspended.

4. That Section (2) of Standing Order 31 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 31, Section (2)

31. (2) When the business of Private Members is being considered, no member shall speak for more than twenty minutes at a time.

5. That Section (5) of Standing Order 39 be enacted to read as follows:

Standing Order 39, Section (5)

39. (5) Before the Orders of the Day are proceeded with, questions on matters of urgency may be addressed orally to Ministers of the Crown, provided however that if in the opinion of Mr. Speaker a question is not urgent, he may direct that it be placed on the Order Paper, provided also that the time allowed for a question period prior to the calling of the Orders of the Day shall not exceed thirty minutes.

A member who is not satisfied with the answer given to a question asked on any day at this stage, or a member who has been told by Mr. Speaker that his question is not urgent, may give notice that he intends to raise the subject-matter of his question on the adjournment of the House. The notice referred to herein, whether or not it is given orally during the question period before the Orders of the Day, must be given in writing to Mr. Speaker not later than 5:00 o'clock p.m. the same day.

6. That the Standing Orders be amended by adding thereto a new Standing Order 41-A, to read as follows:

Standing Order 41-A

41-A. Unless notice of motion has been given under Standing Order 41, any member proposing to raise a question of privilege other than one arising out of proceedings in the Chamber during the course of a sitting shall give to the Speaker a written statement of the question at least one hour prior to raising the question in the House.

7. That Standing Order 43 be amended by adding thereto a new Section (2), to read as follows:

Standing Order 43, Section (2)

43. (2) When debate on any motion made under Standing Order 15 (2) is adjourned or interrupted, the order for resumption of the same shall be transferred to and considered under Government Orders.

8. That Standing Order 44 be amended to read as follows:

[Mr. Deputy Speaker.]

Standing Order 44

44. When a question is under debate no motion is received unless to amend it; to postpone it to a day certain; for the previous question; for reading the orders of the day; for proceeding to another order; to adjourn the debate; to extend the sitting of the House; or for the adjournment of the House.

9. That Section (4) of Standing Order 59 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 59, Section (4)

59. (4) The Chairman shall maintain order in the Committees of the Whole House, deciding all questions of order subject to an appeal to Mr. Speaker; but disorder in a committee can only be censured by the House, on receiving a report thereof. No debate shall be permitted on any decision.

10. That Standing Order 65 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 65

65 (1) At the commencement of each session, a special committee, consisting of seven members, shall be appointed, whose duty it shall be to prepare and report, with all convenient speed, lists of members to compose the following standing committees of the House:

(a) on Agriculture, Forestry, and Rural Development, to consist of 45 members;
(b) on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts, to consist of 22 members;
(c) on Crown Corporations, to consist of 22 members;
(d) on External Affairs, to consist of 22 members;
(e) on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, to consist of 22 members;
(f) on Fisheries, to consist of 22 members;
(g) on Health and Welfare, to consist of 22 members;
(h) on Housing, Urban Development and Public Works, to consist of 22 members;
(i) on Human Rights and Citizenship and Immigration, to consist of 22 members;
(j) on Industry, Research and Energy Development, to consist of 22 members;
(k) on Justice and Legal Affairs, to consist of 22 members;
(l) on Labour and Employment, to consist of 22 members;
(m) on Miscellaneous Estimates, to consist of 22 members;
(n) on Miscellaneous Private Bills, to consist of 22 members;
(o) on National Defence, to consist of 22 members;
(p) on Northern Affairs and National Resources, to consist of 22 members;
(q) on Privileges and Elections, to consist of 22 members;
(r) on Public Accounts, to consist of 24 members;
(s) on Standing Orders, to consist of 22 members;
(t) on Transport and Communications, to consist of 22 members; and
(u) on Veterans Affairs, to consist of 22 members.

(2) The Special Committee shall also prepare and report with all convenient speed, lists of members to compose the following standing committees:

on Printing, to act as members on the part of this House on the Joint Committee of both Houses, on the subject of the printing of Parliament, to consist of 23 members;

on the Library of Parliament, so far as the interests of this House are concerned, and to act as members of the Joint Committee of both Houses, to consist of 21 members; provided that a sufficient number of members of joint committees shall be appointed so as to keep the same proportion in such committees as between the memberships of the House of Commons and Senate.

(3) A majority of the members of a standing committee shall constitute a quorum unless the House otherwise orders;

Provided that, in the case of a joint committee, the number of members constituting a quorum shall be such as the House of Commons acting in consultation with the Senate may determine.

(4) The Standing Committees shall be severally empowered to examine and enquire into all such matters and things as may be referred to them by the House; to report from time to time their observations and opinions thereon; to send for persons, papers and records; and to print, from day-to-day, such papers and evidence as may be ordered by them, and Standing Order 66 shall not apply in relation thereto.

(5) Any member of the House of Commons who is not a member of a standing committee, may unless the House or the standing committee otherwise orders, take part in the deliberations of the standing committee, but shall not vote or move any motion or any amendment or be counted in the quorum.

11. That Standing Order 99 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 99

99. No Bill for the incorporation of a railway or canal company, or for authorizing the construction of branch lines or extensions of existing lines of railways or of canals, or for changing the route of the railway or of the canal of any company already incorporated, shall be considered by the Committee on Transport and Communications, until there has been filed with the committee, at least one week before the consideration of the bill, a map or plan drawn upon a scale of not less than half an inch to the mile, showing the location upon which it is intended to construct the proposed work, and showing also the lines of existing or authorized works of a similar character within, or in any way affecting the district, or any part thereof, which the proposed work is intended to serve; and such map or plan shall be signed by the engineer or other person making the same.

12. That Standing Order 105 be amended to read as follows:

Standing Order 105

105. Every private bill, when read a second time, is referred to one of the standing committees as follows: bills relating to banks, insurance, trade and commerce and to trust and loan companies, to the Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs; bills relating to railways, canals, telegraphs, canal and railway bridges, to the Committee on Transport and Communications; the bills not coming under these classes, to the Committee on Miscellaneous Private Bills, and all petitions for or against the bills are considered as referred to such committee.—

At one o'clock the committee took recess.

AFTER RECESS

The Committee resumed at 2.30 p.m.

The Deputy Chairman: Order. House again in Committee of the Whole on a certain proposed resolution to amend the Standing Orders. Last evening when the Committee rose we were discussing paragraph 6.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, last evening when ten o'clock rolled around I was commenting on section 6 of the resolution regarding the rules and procedures of the House. I was pointing out that while I had not intended to comment on this recommendation of the Government, I felt impelled to rise in view of some comments which had been made by the hon. Member for Prince Albert last Tuesday when he was speaking on the rules and procedures, and at which time direct reference was made to myself. You may remember that I recalled that on May 28 I had asked the Minister of Justice a question about whether his Department or the Cabinet had ever given consideration to making it illegal for mass communication media to mention names of accused before they are convicted. As reported at page 1769 I remarked:

> Personally, I do not believe they should be mentioned by name until a conviction has been registered—

Yesterday I indicated that the Minister had given a straightforward answer. His reply was:

> I must say, Mr. Speaker, that this...is one of the questions which I have under very serious consideration...
> But there is also such a thing as respect for the freedom of the individual and in the case of juveniles the regulation already exists in the Criminal Code that their names must not be disclosed in the papers. Surely this is not an interference with the freedom of the press.

• (2:40 p.m.)

I commented last night that a straightforward question on a simple point of practice in the mass communication field had been blown out of all proportion, by people with financial interests in the mass communication field, into an interpretation that this is an attack on the freedom of the press. I have never seen such exaggeration in such a short period of time. I rise to point out that this question is not dead and it will not be killed. The hon. Member for Prince Albert in speaking last Tuesday made the statement:

> —it was only as a result of publicity that this announcement found its way into the limbo of forgotten things.

When he refers to the announcement he means the remarks passed by the Minister of Justice in reply to my question. I can assure you here and now that this matter has not found its way into the limbo of forgotten things. It is quite interesting to me that the hon. Member for Lafontaine, who sits to my left, on numerous occasions in the past has introduced private bills on this very point, and right now in your binder for private bills, Mr. Chairman, you will find Bill No. C-90 in which the hon. Member for Lafontaine is seeking to amend the Criminal Code so that there will be a restriction of publication of proceedings. He does not say the elimination of the publication of proceedings; he talks about the restriction of publication of proceedings; and in the explanatory notes it is stated that the purpose of the proposed amendments are:

(2) to eliminate the unfortunate results of judicial errors.

Included in that is the case of people being accused of offences of which they are later acquitted or found not guilty, and to prevent their names being dragged all over the universe because they have been falsely accused in the first place. I commend the integrity of the Member for Lafontaine in getting behind this bill of his, which he has been urging in season and out of season for some time.

Further down on this side of the House we find the hon. Member for Norfolk. He has on the order paper private Member's notice of motion No. 15, introduced in this House on April 6, long before I asked the question on May 28. The hon. Member for Norfolk under private Members' notices of motions moves:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Government should consider the advisability of amending the Criminal Code so that an accused person who is eventually found not guilty—

In other words, so as to provide that a person who has been unjustly kept in custody and is afterwards acquitted may be paid his costs, expenses and compensation. I bring forward these examples to show you that the thinking of the nation is along the lines that accused people who are subsequently found not guilty are not being treated fairly in this country of ours today, despite all the uproar in the press about freedom of the press.

The hon. Member for Norfolk is not in the Chamber, but I will take the liberty of saying to you that he is interested in this question because of comments that have been made to him over the years by a Judge in western Ontario who has commented on more than one occasion privately on the injustice to accused persons who are later found not guilty, having their names dragged all over the front pages of the newspapers, blasted over the radio waves and exposed on television screens when they have done no wrong.

[Mr. Cowan.]

The Judge gives a certain example of a man who was held for two years in a county jail and was later acquitted of the charge. No compensation was given to the man, and his name was broadcast all over the countryside simply because an accusation had been made against him.

Last Saturday an article appeared in the Montreal Star following the comments that had been made in this House by the Minister of Justice and the right hon. Prime Minister, both of whom I commend for their statements and attitude on this question. The article, by one Leslie Roberts, in the centre contains this phrase:

The disjointed discussion of press freedom in the House may be a tempest in a teapot.

First of all, I wish Mr. Roberts would get this matter straight. There has been no disjointed discussion of press freedom in this House. There may have been a disjointed discussion of the freedom of the individuals in this House, but there has been no discussion of press freedom. The same writer refers to the Prime Minister's remarks of June 1 as being "an odd intervention". I personally wish to commend the Prime Minister for having answered the hon. Member for Pontiac-Témiscamingue, who on June 1 directed a question to the Minister of Justice.

I have already stated that the Minister of Justice gave a straightforward answer on May 28, one that any man of compassion and religious convictions will support wholeheartedly, when he said that the right of the individual, the freedom of the individual, takes priority over freedom of the press. On June 1 the Prime Minister stands up—

Mr. Fairweather: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. We have a very short day today. I like the views, sometimes, of the hon. Member for York-Humber, but surely we are entitled to get to the point, which is the acceptance of the two resolutions before us. The Justice estimates are coming before the committee some time, and we can discuss the ramifications of the hon. Member's problem then.

The Deputy Chairman: Order. I think the point of order raised by the hon. Member for Royal is well taken, and I would have to ask the hon. Member for York-Humber to confine his remarks as closely as possible to paragraph 6 of the resolution before the committee.

Mr. Cowan: I am confining my remarks as closely to paragraph 6 as the hon. Member for Prince Albert confined his remarks to the resolution under discussion on June 1. This has been the first opportunity I have had to comment on the remarks then made.

I prefaced my remarks last night by pointing out that the Prime Minister had commented on the fact that the ambit of the discussion was such that he could bring up some matters in a general way, and I stated that I am speaking on a question of privilege, because in paragraph 6 it is said:

That the Standing Orders be amended by adding thereto a new Standing Order 41-A, to read as follows:

Standing Order 41-A

41-A. Unless notice of motion has been given under Standing Order 41, any member proposing to raise a question of privilege other than one arising out of proceedings—

And so on. I said last night before ten o'clock that I took my cue from the hon. Member for Saint John-Albert, who yesterday rose and asked a question because, he said, of the short time we are going to be allowed for questions in the future. I believe that paragraph 6 deals with this question, because I am raising the matter of a question of privilege and perhaps in the future I will not have the same opportunity that I have now under the present rule. I am discussing paragraph 6, Mr. Chairman. Paragraph 6 refers to questions of privilege; and I was mentioned deliberately by the speaker the other day, June 8, and am replying under the same umbrella terms as those he was making his remarks under. I stated that the Prime Minister had rejected himself into the question period when the hon. Member for Pontiac-Témiscamingue addressed remarks to the Minister of Justice, and Right Hon. L. B. Pearson—

Mr. Starr: Mr. Chairman, I rise on a point of order. I have very affectionate feelings for the hon. Member for York-Humber and I know he is trying to get under an umbrella. But that umbrella is getting so big that he will not be able to hold it up. Standing Order 41 only amends the rule with regard to a question of privilege in that a Member who wishes to raise a question of privilege prior to the Orders of the Day must give to the Speaker a written statement of the question at least one hour prior to raising the question in the House. That certainly does not give the hon. Member an opportunity, at this point in the debate, to raise matters of questions of privilege at all. I appreciate that he would like to have the same opportunity that was afforded at the beginning of both these resolutions to the right hon. Prime Minister and the right hon. Leader of the Opposition and others. But that was a discussion in general terms before we began considering these resolutions paragraph by paragraph. We are now discussing them paragraph by paragraph, and I think the discussion should be confined entirely to the subject matter dealt with in the paragraph.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, perhaps you would allow me to quote from Hansard of June 8, page 2106:

Mr. Diefenbaker: No. The suggestion came from the hon. Member for York-Humber—

That happens to be myself; that happens to be a direct reference in this discussion of the rules and procedure. I believe that on the other side of the fence I have the right to answer when direct references are made to myself.

Mr. Starr: Not at this point.

Mr. Cowan: I was quoting the Prime Minister—

The Deputy Chairman: Order. I must remind the committee that we are on paragraph 6, which deals with the method of raising a question of privilege other than one which comes up in the usual course of debate. The question before the Committee is the manner of proceeding in order to raise a question of privilege. It has nothing to do with any actual question of privilege. Again I would have to ask the hon. Member for York-Humber to remain within the terms and limits of paragraph 6, particularly since the Committee has already agreed to discuss this resolution paragraph by paragraph.

• (2:50 p.m.)

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, would you allow me the indulgence of referring to the hon. Member for Ontario who remarked a moment or two ago that he and I were disposed to be friendly to each other. I have had some association with the press but I believe it is not generally known that the first time I ever met the hon. Member for Ontario was when we were both fellow employees of the Oshawa Daily Reformer. It was the Reformer in those days, not the Times. I regret very much that it changed its name, but on the other hand it changed its name when it changed its purpose in life because under the Mundy estate which employed the two of us it was a real reform paper. Today, under a Conservative owner whom I will not name at the moment, it has changed its purpose. The Times is a much better name for it as it does not express itself as freely and as forcibly as it did when the hon. Member for Ontario and I had a little influence in the organization.

An hon. Member: Order.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I am trying to confine myself to this question of privilege but I am speaking now under the present rules of the House. I want to see Standing Order 41A amended and section 6 adopted. I said so last night. But I also want to point out the unfairness of remarks made here in a discussion of rules and procedures on June 8. I intend to persist in that objective unless I am ordered down, because I am speaking on a question of privilege.

An hon. Member: You have been ordered down twice.

Mr. Cowan: I might state that the Prime Minister said he was looking into the question of securing the rights of individuals when false charges were made against them. He went on to say, as found on page 1825 of Hansard for June 1:

> The House can be assured that there is no possibility of any Government or any Government Department interfering with the important principle of the freedom of the press to report the news in accordance with the law.

This is a straightforward statement of the privileges of individuals in this country, and I am proud to be associated with men of the stature of the Minister of Justice and the Prime Minister in the stand they have taken on that score. But what do we find in this article in the Montreal Star of last Saturday, June 5?

Some hon. Members: Order.

The Deputy Chairman: Order.

Mr. Fairweather: This is completely unfair to the House.

The Deputy Chairman: I must remind the hon. Member again that the question before the House is not one of privilege either for Members of the House or for Canadians in general. We are dealing with the manner in which a question of privilege can be raised in the House, and that is the only item before the Committee at the moment.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I would point out, as I said before, that this is not a discussion of freedom of the press but a discussion of freedom of the individual, and when I have been specifically mentioned on June 8 I believe I should have the opportunity to make some comments in reply to the speech made at that time.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Starr: Mr. Chairman, in order to expedite the business of the House I wonder whether the hon. Member for York-Humber would yield his place to the President of the Privy Council, the Government House Leader, in order that he may move some very important amendments before the time for this debate comes to an end?

Mr. Cowan: At the request of the President of the Privy Council, yes, but not at the request of the present Acting Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Chairman, without my asking for leave I wonder whether the hon. Member would do that? I want to thank him for his courtesy. Is it agreeable to him?

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, I have not yet yielded to the request of the President of the Privy Council—

Mr. Starr: Who is yielding what?

Mr. Cowan: —but before I resume my seat, in order to co-operate in passing this forward looking legislation introduced by the Liberal party, which we will adopt before five o'clock, may I say that the question I raised with the Minister of Justice had nothing to do with freedom of the press but rather freedom of the individual. I am glad to know that the Prime Minister and the Minister of Justice agree with me on this score. It is because we are men of that belief that we are Liberals together, and I am willing to yield the floor to the President of the Privy Council.

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the hon. Member for York-Humber, so that it will be on record. I move:

> That Section 2 of the proposed Standing Order 43 be amended to read as follows:
> "When the debate on any motion under Standing Order 15, section 2, is adjourned or interrupted the order for resumption of the same shall be transferred to and considered as the first Order under Government orders."
> That section 2 of Standing Order 18 be amended to read as follows:
>
> "Except as provided in Standing Orders 43 and 56, Government Orders may be called in such sequence as the Government may see fit".
> That Section 1 of the proposed Standing Order 65 be amended by striking out the words "with all convenient speed", and substituting therefor the words "within ten sitting days after its appointment", and by striking out the number "22" where it appears therein and substituting therefor the number "24".

That a new Standing Order 68A reading as follows,

"In any standing or special committee of the House questions of order shall be decided by the Chairman, subject only to an appeal to the committee", be added.

That the amendments to Standing Orders made by this Resolution be continued in effect until the end of the next ensuing session unless this House otherwise orders.

Hon. Members will have noticed that this is exactly in accordance with the statement I made last night as it appears on page 2244 of Hansard. I am moving this one motion in order to get the amendments before the Committee in total at this stage. If there is any question about different parts of the amendment, I might answer them as the clauses are called.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, I should like to make a suggestion. Briefly, I suggest that the Committee might agree at this moment to pass this omnibus amendment. The reason I suggest this will be obvious. If other Members have amendments to move to any other paragraphs, we will get into all kinds of procedural difficulties should they have to move subamendments. On the other hand, each of the items in the omnibus amendment that the President of the Privy Council has now moved is the result of negotiations and I think all of them are universally acceptable.

The Chairman: Is this agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Chairman: The Committee has heard the amendment moved by the President of the Privy Council. Shall the amendment carry?

Amendment (Mr. McIlraith) agreed to.

• (3:00 p.m.)

Mr. Fisher: Mr. Chairman, I want to make one brief point in connection with section 6. It has been a tradition in this House that on certain occasions Members rise on questions of privilege and introduce complimentary remarks. For example, I remember that one Member had a constituent who had won a highland fling dancing competition in Scotland. I can remember we have had long, complimentary and very poetic expressions of appreciation for Taras Shevchenko, the great Ukrainian poet, for the Trail Smokeeaters and a whole parade of people. I would assume one of the consequences of this particular motion would be the understanding that points of privilege in that connection are just really an excuse to open up some kind of complimentary remarks about some individual, some organization or some particular ethnic group will come to an end. I just wanted to make this point and bring it to the attention of my fellow Members.

It has always seemed to me that this kind of honorific cause opened up by a point of privilege has tended to drag out our proceedings on occasion, and it is almost impossible for any individual Member of Parliament to object to it. I can remember the tributes to Taras Shevchenko went on interminably one morning a few years ago, but none of the Members was brave enough to stand up and suggest that, with all due consideration to that great Ukrainian poet, it was a little bit much when we were getting 20 minute tributes to him at the very time when we were busy. I just wanted to make that particular point.

Mr. Fairweather: You had better except the Canadian mother of the year.

Mr. Fisher: The hon. Member raises a good point. We have had recognition of the Canadian mother of the year, and I think, once, some Canadian newsboy. I am still waiting for the time when we will get Miss Canada or some other bathing beauty or figure skater into the gallery, as we have in past years, and some recognition for all these sports figures.

The Chairman: Does this conclude discussion on Clause 6? Is Clause 7 agreed to? Is Clause 8 agreed to? Is Clause 9 agreed to? Is Clause 10 agreed to?

Mr. Baldwin: This is the clause, I assume, that actually sets up the new nomenclature of the committees. I have an amendment to propose and in order to relate my remarks to this amendment I may say it will simply be to add after paragraph (u) an additional one, to be called paragraph (v), on Delegated Authority. In support of this amendment I want to refer to the first statement made by the Prime Minister when he was speaking in the House on March 18 of this year on this question of the Committees system. He used these words as they appear at page 12544 of Hansard, after having dealt with the increasing strength of the Executive and the weakness of the legislative branch of our Government:

This is a situation which has occupied the attention of all students of democratic parliamentary institutions in recent years, because with the executive you have not only the cabinet but you have behind the cabinet, a growing body of expert officialdom which is inevitably becoming more and more important as government becomes increasingly complex.

Later, he said:

Could we strengthen the legislature by deepening and broadening the committee structure? There are some recommendations in this report which, I believe, when implemented may well have this effect. I hope so.

The right hon. gentleman was referring to the 18th report, I believe, of the committee on procedure. However, when the right hon. gentleman was speaking on the debate which initiated this particular discussion, he did not go as far as he had previously. He then said, in response to a question, that he did not believe a Standing Committee on Delegated Authority was necessary, and he stated two reasons. In the first instance, he said, there is consideration being given to setting up a Royal Commission to inquire into the necessity for an ombudsman. Second, he thought the committees, as constructed and set up by this particular section we are discussing, would provide an opportunity to examine into the very dangerous situation which prompted me to move this amendment. I refer to the very increasing extent to which Government, particularly the Executive Branch of the Government, is operating with the aid of Orders in Council. I cannot accept this statement by the Prime Minister.

In the first place, if a Royal Commission does recommend the establishment of an ombudsman, and if in its infinite wisdom Parliament does decide such an officer is required, it is my submission, as a result of evidence given by the New Zealand ombudsman and as a result of discussions that have taken place in committee with an ombudsman, that without a Parliamentary Committee to which he can bring his recommendations and the grievances which are brought to his attention, he is in a very invidious position. I am not going to add any more because it is not pertinent, but I have quoted these observations to stress the importance of this question, in answer to the Prime Minister's objection to setting up a Committee on Delegated Authority. The experience in connection with ombudsmen has been that they are unable to obtain action in respect of grievances brought to their attention unless there is a committee of this nature to deal with them. I submit this is an ample answer to the Prime Minister.

Then, so far as the committees which we have now are concerned, it is my submission that these committees will concern themselves almost exclusively with the question of estimates and legislation which will come before them. These will be the primary functions. There is no question about it. I submit that a committee which would have the opportunity to deal with the issue of delegated authority, particularly the effect of Orders in Council and improper action taken under Orders in Council, is a very essential part of the parliamentary system at this time.

I am not going to say anything more than that, because time is short and there are a lot of other matters to be dealt with. I urge the Government to give most serious consideration to this particular issue. I think this is one of the most important parts of the rule changes, the establishment of a new form of these committees. If we fail to carry out the ancillary step of having a Committee on Delegated Authority, we are not meeting out responsibilities at this time.

Mr. Fairweather: I want to support the hon. Member for Peace River. This recommendation had its foundation, in so far as this Parliament is concerned, in the Special Committee on Procedure and Organization. I suppose it is one reason that the Government did not see fit to establish it. We unanimously accepted this proposal and a Member of the Government, the Minister of Labour, was a part of that committee. We were quite disappointed when the resolution before us omitted this unanimous recommendation.

This is the very problem I tried to outline in a widely reported speech which I made the other night. It was so widely reported that I will repeat a paragraph taken from an essay in the London Observer of May 2, 1965, by Bernard Crick:

—far too little time is spent in scrutiny and investigation. Both the Front Benches are content to keep M.P.'s busy with niggling detail: for what rightly interests the public however much it may embarrass the party leaders, is general debate about future policy or about the competence of the administration.

More use should be made of specialized committees of scrutiny and investigation.

Then, because I am seeking the support of the N.D.P. for this proposal, I would like to cite the Socialist Commentary of July 1964 —"Three dozen parliamentary reforms by one dozen parliamentary Socialists." I say to the N.D.P. that the Socialists in Britain made this proposal.

Mr. Cowan: Are you addressing the N.D.P. or the Chair?

Mr. Fairweather: Is that a question from the hon. Member for York-Humbug?

Mr. Cowan: I am asking whether you should not be addressing the Chairman instead of one special party in this Chamber?

Mr. Fairweather: I have already said that this recommendation received the unanimous support of the Special Committee on Organization and Procedure, of which the Minister of Labour was a member, and when the recommendations for parliamentary reform came to Parliament I was somewhat surprised to see that this fundamental part of the committee set-up was left out. It is surely a strange commentary on a Liberal administration that boasts so much about parliamentary reform.

The Chairman: Order. Perhaps I should put the amendment put by the hon. Member for Peace River. The amendment as moved by the hon. Member was slightly incorrect as to form and, with his permission, I will read it duly corrected:

That subclause 1 of proposed Standing Order 65 be amended by adding after (u) the following: "(v) on Delegated Authority."

There is a question in my mind as to whether this amendment is correct because it does not give the number of Members, which would appear to be inconsistent with the conventions whereby this type of committee always has a specific number of Members in the order setting it up. On the other hand, if no formal objection is made to the amendment, it will be accepted by the Chair.

Mr. Baldwin: I had assumed the Government would have rushed forward immediately to accept the amendment, adopt it as its own, and establish the number of Members. With unanimous consent I would add the words, "to consist of 24 members," and if the committee does not give me unanimous consent, then I am sure my hon. friend and learned colleague from Royal would be glad to propose a subamendment.

Mr. McIlraith: I think there would be unanimous consent to read it as if the words "to consist of 24 members" were included.

The Chairman: Then it will read "on delegated authority, to consist of 24 members."

Mr. Lambert: I wish to say a few words in support of the amendment. Not only had this the unanimous support of the Members on the Procedure Committee, but in the Subcommittee on Committee Structure it had the vociferous support of the Liberal participants in that committee.

Miss Jewett: We still support it.

Mr. Lambert: Fine. Like my colleague, I was very surprised that this suggested committee had not been included in the Government's proposals. The purpose of such a committee is self-evident.

No committee on estimates has the powers to take a ministry through its delegated legislation. It has no power to go through the Orders in Council passed by the Privy Council, to see that powers have not been exceeded in cases where, for example, the Governor in Council has been granted powers to make regulations. The committee should have power to see that those regulations are not back-dated prior to the legislation granting the powers, and that no regulatory body is empowered to incur expenses which it has no right to incur.

The pattern of Government in this country, as in others, has grown bigger and bigger and become much more complicated. I cannot agree with the proposition of the Prime Minister that a Royal Commission may be set up—mark you, may be set up—to look into the establishment of an ombudsman. I do not think an ombudsman can put his nose into everything on a voluntary basis. He may act on a complaint, but he is not a general review officer of Government activity.

Mr. McIlraith: Would the hon. Member not agree that the Prime Minister, in dealing with this subject and explaining why the committee was not proposed, went further in dealing with the subject of an ombudsman and went on to discuss the whole question of administrative tribunals?

Mr. Lambert: That may be so, but I am not taken with this argument about an ombudsman, because I do not think such an official would accomplish anything of this nature. What Parliament is concerned with is that the carte blanche powers it has granted to the Governor in Council, or to some board, are not exceeded. This is a fundamental feature of the examination of the activities of the Government, that Parliament, through an all-party committee, may review the regulations and pertinent Orders in Council that have been passed. At the moment we are not in a position to do so.

For that reason I think such a committee would benefit the Government because, if the Government comes through such an examination cleanly, it can be satisfied its administration is good. It would remove any suggestion that there has been some excess, and from the point of view of the Opposition there is always the chance that peradventure some excess has been committed.

I am sorry the Government did not see fit to be as reform minded and as drastic as the Committee on Procedure in this regard. I know it will be a big job to staff the committee structure, but on the other hand I do not think a Committee on Delegated Legislation would need to sit year around. Perhaps for the first year it might; but after that it would probably operate for relatively short periods of time.

The President of the Privy Council mentioned administrative tribunals. These have to deal with the relationship between the public and the Government. A Committee on Delegated Legislation would look into the relationship between Parliament and the Government, and the powers granted to Government by Parliament.

• (3:20 p.m.)

The two things are entirely different and therefore, with the greatest respect to the Prime Minister, let me say I do not think his arguments were pertinent to the question. I therefore solicit the support of Members on all sides of the House. This was put forward in the committee in the true spirit of non-partisanship. It was one of the strongest recommendations made, and I heartily commend it to all hon. Members and invite their acceptance of it.

Mr. McIlraith: I am interested in the amendment put forward this afternoon and more specifically in the terms in which it is put forward. I say this because when the committee on procedure made its report—and I regret I do not have that report here with me at the moment—the language used in dealing with this subject was perhaps not as clear as that which has been used today. The report itself raises a much broader subject than the particular one of delegated authority. I note that in discussing this question today the two hon. gentlemen concerned confined themselves to the question of an examination of the use of authority delegated by legislation. They did this very specifically and very clearly, if I may say so. There is undoubtedly a problem developing in this field as it concerns modern legislative bodies. This arises from the very nature of the increase in Government regulatory legislation of one sort or another; there is increasing delegation of authority and an increasing need for vigilance to ensure that an administrative body does not exceed its authority.

[Mr. Lambert.]

Regrettably, as I say—and I believe that if hon. Members would look at this report they would agree with me—the language used by the committee in this case did not express the proposal clearly. I have spent a great deal of time upon the report. I wish I had it here, because it dealt, in essence, with a much broader subject, and, if I may say so without offending anybody—especially as this is sometimes one of my own shortcomings—the recommendation is not as precise in its language as it might have been. I hope the author will not take offence at that remarks; I do think a review of it, now, would illustrate the point I have in mind.

As to the remarks made in the reference by the Prime Minister to this subject of an ombudsman, it is certainly not my view, nor I believe his view, that it is the function of an ombudsman to check on the improper use of delegated authority. It is not any part of his function, although he may, by the nature of his work, be called upon to deal with the point incidentally. If the ombudsman were to point out an abuse or excessive use of delegated authority, it would be incidental to his work rather than a direct part of his responsibility.

But where the possibility of abuse of delegated authority lies is largely with administrative tribunals, and this was the point of the Prime Minister's remarks. A Commission to enquire into administrative tribunals is being set up, and this is the root of the explanation why a Standing Committee was not provided for.

It will be recalled that the question of administrative tribunals was not dealt with in the Glassco Commission report. Work on this was started and then discontinued. There is, as I believe hon. Members will agree, a real need for an examination of this subject generally. I think lawyers in all the law associations I know of across this country have agreed on such a need. It seems to me it would be wrong on the one hand to have a standing committee of the House of Commons dealing with the subject of delegated authority at the same time as a commission was dealing with administrative tribunals. The commission will presumably be asked to make recommendations as to what should be done by way of safeguards in this field. Suppose the two bodies were sitting concurrently—the commission and the committee—one can imagine the difficulties which would arise if the commission were to recommend that the Parliamentary committee be discontinued as ineffective. It would surely not be a good idea to have the two bodies sitting at the same time.

There is one other consideration which entered into the decision not to include this committee—

I see the hon. Member for Edmonton West has a question he wants to ask.

Mr. Lambert: I wonder whether the President of the Privy Council would not agree there is a fundamental distinction between the functions of a committee and the functions of an administrative tribunal which does not take the annual volume of regulations, and so on, and review them and declare them on a hypothetical basis to be ultra vires, for instance. An administrative tribunal will deal with those matters brought before it on appeal by citizens or as a result of certain legal steps which might be taken by municipal or Government bodies. Those are administrative tribunals. No administrative tribunal exists, I suggest, which would take note of all the delegated legislation and the regulations made under it and review them. And this is the purpose of the committee.

Mr. McIlraith: I quite agree as to the difference between a committee and a commission, but I want to point out that one of the large areas in which there may be abuse, if there is abuse, is likely to be abuse of delegated authority by administrative tribunals. It seems unrealistic when investigating this matter through a commission to have a committee investigating this and other aspects of delegated authority at the same time. That is my point.

The other important factor which entered into the decision not to include this new standing committee is this: It will be seen from the old Standing Order No. 65 that there were some 14 standing committees. In this present revision of House procedures we have proposed 21 standing committees. Hon. Members who examine the list will notice the reference to forestry and rural development for the first time. They will see there is a new Standing Committee on Broadcasting and Films, an important new field. There is a Committee on Crown Corporations. Over the past 10 or 15 years there has been a constant demand for a Standing Committee on Crown Corporations for reasons which I need not elaborate here, except perhaps to say that if they do not get a direct vote in the estimates there is really no way in which their operations can be examined by the House. This new committee was added. A Standing Committee on Housing and Urban Development was established to deal with this most important field of activity.

Mr. Lambert: Just the Public Works Committee.

Mr. McIlraith: Well, there was no Public Works Committee under the former Standing Orders. I think this is new. Then there is a Standing Committee on Industrial Research and Energy Development. With the tremendous breakthrough in the whole field of research activity and energy development I think Members will agree it is desirable for this new activity to be examined by a standing committee of the House.

• (3:30 p.m.)

Perhaps the hon. Member for Winnipeg South Centre would agree with me, in referring to the activities of the Government in the field of research and energy development, that it is highly desirable that we have a standing committee on this subject. I might say I have had the privilege and opportunity of serving with him in some fairly active roles in connection with some areas of research and energy development.

Then there is the new Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs. Perhaps the Committee on Transport and Communications is more a change in description than a new committee.

It will be seen that if the new activities and the new provisions for these standing committess are to be fully met a tremendous addition to the work of the committees is involved. There is a 50 per cent increase in the number of standing committees, and if examined in terms of work envisaged then there will be a like increase in the area of consideration, if I can use that term, upon which the committees will be engaged. But at the same time as we have enlarged the activities of the standing committees—and here is the essential point—we have arranged to refer the estimates of the House of Commons to the committeee so that Members will have an opportunity to examine the administration and expenditures of the various departments.

For that reason, as well as the earlier reason which I gave, we came to the view that it was both premature and unrealistic to add the Committee on Delegated Authority at this time. However, there was no rejection of the idea that the subject matter of delegated authority in any responsible parliament does require better techniques for examination in the years ahead. In other words, there was no repudiation of the idea, but after a good deal of consideration and discussion there was what I might say a rejection of the suggestion that such a standing committee should be provided at time when we are making a rather substantial breakthrough in the whole treatment and structure of committees, with the consequent provision of a tremendous increase in the work to be assigned to them.

I would hope that in light of that explanation the amendment will not be pressed at this time until the Commission on Administrative Tribunals has had an opportunity to report.

Mr. Olson: Mr. Chairman, I want to rise briefly to say that I support the amendment that has been moved by the hon. Member for Peace River. It seems that the President of the Privy Council is agreeing to it; at least he certainly agreed with the principle that there was a need for the kind of function which this committee would perform.

When the President of the Privy Council began his remarks he said he did not have the committee report before him, but that their report was substantially different from the account given by the hon. Member for Peace River and the hon. Member for Edmonton West. I have in front of me the report and would like to read one short paragraph from it. I think this point was gone over very carefully by the Special Committee on Procedure and Organization, which came to the unanimous decision that this committee should have been included. The report says of the Standing Committee on Delegated Legislation.

> The function of this committee would be to act as a "watchdog" over the executive in its use of the powers conferred by statute, with the duty of reporting to Parliament any tendency on the part of the executive to exceed its authority. The committee's terms of reference should exclude it from considering the merits of or the policy behind delegated legislation, but it would be expected to draw the attention of Parliament to any regulations or instruments which impose a charge on public revenues, which confer immunity from challenge in the courts, which have an unauthorized retroactive effect, which reveal unusual or unexpected use of a statutory power, or which otherwise exceed the authority delegated by the parent statute.

Mr. McIlraith: Would the hon. Member permit a question. Could he give me the reference to the committee report in Votes and Proceedings?

[Mr. McIlraith.]

Mr. Olson: What I have before me, Mr. Chairman, is the mimeographed copy of the report which was filed on December 14, so I suppose it appears in Votes and Proceedings at about that time.

Mr. McIlraith: What is the number of the report?

Mr. Olson: It is the fifteenth report.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I disagree that the function of a Committee on Delegated Authority would be the same as that of an ombudsman. This committee would have no authority whatever to delve into the reason behind policy, as the committee stated in its report. Its purpose would be to see that the authority delegated by Parliament to the Executive or any boards or tribunals or branches of any of the departments is not exceeded by way of regulation, and interpretation of such regulation, beyond that authority granted by the parent statute.

We know, Mr. Chairman, there are certain statutes and amendments to statutes which pass through parliament, to which regulations are later attached. Sometimes the practical application and administration of these statutes is not in accordance with what was intended when they passed through this House. Therefore this committee would have the power to take a very close look at the practical application of the authority, to make sure that it was in accordance with the written word in the statute itself. As far as I can see, that is all there is involved in setting up this committee. It would not consider all the statutes in any one year. It would not even delve into all the statutes of one department in any one year. But it would have the opportunity and power, if you want to call it that, to take certain laws and make sure they were being administered according to the terms of those laws.

• (3:40 p.m.)

I should like to draw to your attention, Mr. Chairman, that I think the Executive should confine itself to the authority granted by this Parliament. But that would not be the only function of this Committee on Delegated Authority—namely, the function of being a watchdog over the Executive—because in many cases there is a far greater problem in some body examining what the bureaucracy does with power that is conferred on it by Parliament, which grants it to the Executive and through the Executive to Members in the Civil Service, or to what have been referred to as tribunals. So I think this committee would have quite a different function from the normal investigation into the activities of departmental spending by the standing committees that will look at the estimates, and so on.

Therefore I suggest there is really quite a different kind of function proposed for this committee, and I think the Government should give careful consideration to including it, so there can be a piecemeal, or a statute at a time, if I may put it that way, or a statute by statute examination to make sure that the actual, practical application is in line with that which was intended by Parliament when they passed the statute.

Some hon. Members: Question.

Mr. Barnett: Mr. Chairman, I just want to say that in supporting the amendment that has been moved I feel that perhaps one of the best arguments in favour of its adoption was advanced by the President of the Privy Council in the latter part of the remarks he made a few minutes ago, in which he spelled out at some length the additional committees that it is already being proposed to establish under the amendment that is before us.

It seems to me that he made a very good case for the argument with which I think most of us agree, namely that we should get away from the old, large, unwieldy, unspecialized committee to which Members were assigned, and attended only in a nominal capacity, in favour of a flexible system of smaller working committees, the membership of which will be made up of Members who have a particular interest in following through that particular aspect of parliamentary work. In pointing out the direction in which we are moving it seems to me that the President of the Privy Council was advancing a very strong argument in favour of the amendment of the hon. Member for Peace River.

The only other thing I wish to say, in view of the reference the President of the Privy Council made to the possibility of our having a parliamentary ombudsman, is that I agree this committee, if set up, would have a very different function from that of the ombudsman. But it does seem to me that if we did establish that office and this committee, the committee might from time to time wish to call before it the ombudsman, in very much the same way that the Public Accounts Committee calls before it the Auditor General, in order to take advantage of the special knowledge in certain aspects of the administration of government which he would have acquired during the course of carrying on his functions. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, it does seem to me, particularly in the light of what was said by the hon. Member for Medicine Hat, that the President of the Privy Council has in effect advanced very good reasons why this additional committee should be established at this time, without any need for delay in its adoption.

Mr. Pickersgill: Mr. Chairman, I just want to say a very brief word, if I may, on this point. It seems to me that what we are seeking to do here is revise the rules, and not to import a new institution, however desirable that might be. While I am not raising any technical arguments, I think there are a great many of us who would have a great deal of sympathy for the general idea that is behind this amendment. As I understand it, in the British Parliament they have had for many years a committee which looks at regulations to see whether they go beyond the power conferred by statute. That is one thing. That is a very proper function of Members of Parliament, it seems to me, namely to satisfy ourselves that the Executive is not trying to legislate by Order in Council, but is only doing those things by Order in Council which Parliament empowers it to do. That is all the Executive should ever be allowed to do, except in exercising those few minor relics of the prerogative that still exist—and they are very minor nowadays.

But, Mr. Chairman, looking very hastily at the report from which the hon. Member for Medicine Hat just quoted it seems to envisage doing something quite different from that. It seems to envisage examining the way in which some body that was probably perfectly legally and regularly constituted is performing its function. I think a great many of us would want to think quite a while about whether that was the most appropriate way for Parliament to exercise its supervision over the Executive; because under our British system of parliamentary Government and of responsible Government it is the Executive who are responsible for every act of the Executive and for every body set up under the Executive functions, and it is the Ministers who are responsible to this whole House. I have always felt that the greatest merit of our system—and I know that the hon. Member for Port Arthur, who is a great exponent of the American system, will not agree with me; but I hope most hon. Members will—is that there is always one person on whom you can pin the blame for anything.

Mr. Lambert: You have to find out who, first.

Mr. Pickersgill: That is what our duty is as Members of Parliament. I would be very much afraid that in performing this kind of function a committee which would be composed normally of a slight majority of supporters of the Government over the number who oppose the Government—otherwise the Government would not stay in office very long—would have a kind of political content instead of our having what we ought to have, a method of placing the responsibility where it really belongs.

I am not advancing this as a necessary objection to the idea at all; I am just saying it is something that I think some of us old-fashioned types might think was going a little far all at once. I agree with the hon. Member for Winnipeg South Centre. As we get older I agree with him more frequently than I used to in the past.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Pickersgill: I said that almost entirely for the benefit of the hon. Member for Port Arthur and the hon. Member for Kootenay West, those two flaming radicals. I do think that this very interesting suggestion, like that made the other day by the hon. Member for Edmonton West—who is now over on this side of the House, I am happy to see—and the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam is the kind of reform that is in a different category from the mere revision of the rules. It is a substantive thing, and I think we ought to deal with it in a different way from mixing it with the reform of the rules. For that reason, Mr. Chairman, though I see quite a lot of merit in the general idea, I do not think at this time I would be prepared to support the amendment.

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Chairman, I find myself in agreement with the President of the Privy Council and the Minister of Transport. It is a most unusual occurrence and I just want to record it in Hansard.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Bigg: A red letter day.

Mr. Churchill: I think I detected in the speeches made by Members of the former Committee on Rules and Procedure a note of irritation that the House had not accepted all their findings almost immediately.

Mr. Fairweather: Oh, no; say it isn't so.

[Mr. Pickersgill.]

• (3:50 p.m.)

Mr. Churchill: This was particularly noticeable in the remarks of the hon. Member for Medicine Hat who has been speaking on almost every section of the report. But the House does not always accept everything that is brought before it and I think these Members might learn a useful lesson, just as the Minister of Transport admits he has learned as the years have gone by. The fact is that you advance ideas in the House which are not accepted but you gracefully bow to the will of the House and continue to work on the proposition with the result that you may find it accepted in a year or two.

But I agree with the Minister of Transport that while the subject of delegated authority requires investigation and although this proposal has merit there is no necessity for a major change along that line at this particular stage of our proceedings. Furthermore, I think we have set up a sufficient number of committees now to keep everybody very usefully employed, and if we multiply the number of our committees we are going to run into difficulty because they will not function efficiently. We have heard so much talk about increasing the efficiency of this institution, so let us not go too far too fast.

If we find next year, let us say, that it is essential that a committee on delegated authority be set up, by that time the Minister of Transport will have had a chance to think about the matter and confer with the President of the Privy Council and we may reach the point where we will set up such a committee. But right now, with all these committees and quite a bit of work to do, I think we should leave this matter in abeyance and simply thank the mover of the amendment and the Members of the former committee for the great thought they have given to the matter and for advancing the idea in the House. Let us then get on with the rest of what we have to do because we have only 65 minutes left. The guillotine with its sharp edge will fall at five o'clock and I want to be here to hear the sound.

Mr. Baldwin: Mr. Chairman, I have one or two brief observations. I think most of us have thick enough skins that we can bear the impact of the guillotine without too much difficulty. In reply to what has been said by the President of the Privy Council and the Minister of Transport, I would point out that a close examination of the new committees indicates that there have been some completely new innovations. For example, we are to have a Committee on Human Rights and a Committee on Crown Corporations. Certainly these were at no time included within the phraseology of committees which were capable of being established under the previous Standing Order.

Something has been said to the effect that we should be patient and wait for the years to go by. It may be because of my great age, Mr. Chairman, but from my experience in the seven or so years I have been here it seems to me that the period of gestation between the time someone gets a gleam in his eye and the 10 or 15 or 20 years it apparently takes to implement the idea in the form of legislation is just too many years for me to have to wait, and I hope there are other Members of the Committee who feel the same way.

I recall that when I came back from war service I tried to rehabilitate myself in a knowledge of the law. In the City of Edmonton I went through the library and looked at the federal and provincial statutes. Then the librarian showed me row after row of volumes with page after page of Orders in Council passed during the course of the war. It would have taken many men studying day and night for years to absorb the knowledge and authority contained in those Orders in Council.

Two or three years ago I had the privilege of serving as Chairman of a small committee which inquired into the Emergency Measures Organization and the War Measures legislation. At that time the Minister of National Health and Welfare was a member of the committee. She asked the Clerk of the Privy Council, I believe, to bring before the Committee some of the Orders in Council dealing with this particular phase and we were told that it would take a truck to bring them all to the committee room.

This is the danger that we face at this time. It is like the old Roman emperor who, in order to comply with custom which compelled him to publish the laws, had them engraved on tablets of stone and then hung so high that no one could read them.

Mr. Pickersgill: I wonder whether the hon. gentleman would permit a question? Surely he does not want to imply that all or even most of the Orders in Council have any legislative effect whatever? I am sure the hon. gentleman knows that all Orders in Council having legislative effect are published regularly in the consolidation of the Statutory Orders and Regulations and that this reform arose out of the efforts of, among others—I do not often pay tribute to him—the present Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Baldwin: I am not making the point that they are not published, but I am making the point that there are so many that in effect knowledge of them is denied to most of the people of the country.

Mr. Pickersgill: There are not very many.

Mr. Baldwin: It is my very definite view that the time has come and in fact is long past when there should be a committee which, on behalf of the people of this country, would examine with the most scrupulous and anxious care Orders in Council and similar authorizing procedures to see, first, if they lie within the competence of the statute which sets out to permit them to be passed and, second, even if they are legally passed, whether there have not been infractions from time to time by civil servants in the carrying out of the functions assigned.

Anyone who examines any one of many statutes passed is bound to have his attention drawn to the fact that so many of them contain the power to pass regulations by Order in Council and, as I said before, I think we fall short of our duty if we do not take this step at this time.

Mr. Fisher: Mr. Chairman, after the comment of the ex-Minister from Winnipeg South Centre I felt I had to put on the record a sentence from the text that was referred to by the hon. Member for Royal and which is entitled "Three Dozen Parliamentary Reforms By One Dozen Parliamentary Socialists". With reference to new committees for this purpose it has this to say:

> Their advantages can be considerable. They enable Members to develop and use their personal expertise in the fields of government which interest them and they can, as other countries have already found, prove an excellent training ground for future ministers, and winter grazing ground for ex-ministers.

I would commend this idea to the ex-Minister from Winnipeg South Centre and to the Minister of Transport, for there is no one I would look forward with more delight to seeing classified as an ex-Minister.

Mr. Otto: Mr. Chairman, with regard to the amendment moved by the hon. Member for Peace River, let us suppose that such a committee was established to deal with the constitutional legality of the actions of an administrative body and whether or not it has exceeded its delegated authority. I think the hon. Member for Royal will recognize that such points now take years to decide in the courts and I can imagine what would happen if such points were raised in this committee. I am afraid the committee would be nothing more than a small constitutional study group that would not achieve much by way of results.

Mr. Winkler: We may need that too these days.

Mr. Otto: I am glad to see the formation of these committees is not in accord with the recommendation made by the Procedural Committee, and I say that for this reason. You will recall, Mr. Chairman, that the main reason for reform of the rules and procedures is to give Members of Parliament more responsibility and more worth-while work to do in Parliament.

• (4:00 p.m.)

I am glad to see that in this clause most of the committees are closely associated with the department, whereas previously there was never much communication between committees and Minister or departments involved. As a result, we went on re-examining and reviewing legislation already passed, but any suggestion made in those committees never reached a department or any of the Ministers. I should like, therefore, to make this one suggestion to the whips, possibly, or the Members who form these committees. I strongly urge that the Chairmen of these committees be the Parliamentary Secretaries of the various departments. Let me tell you why I make that recommendation. If the Parliamentary Secretary is the Chairman, he will have to be there, at each committee sitting. Any ideas that come forward from the Members of that committee, any good ideas, will be passed on to the Minister.

Mr. Winkler: He will throw them out anyway.

Mr. Otto: As a result, if a Minister is a good Minister he will accept the good ideas and we, as Members of Parliament, will actually have more responsibility in initiating legislation rather than merely in the examination and review of legislation.

Mr. Winkler: You are putting forward a hypothetical idea with which we have agreed for a long time.

Mr. Macquarrie: I have only a word or two to say. It is rumoured that the Minister of Transport and the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre are going to the Senate in any event, so they will liven up proceedings there. It has been indicated that this is not the time to do this, but I am not one who thinks that manana is always better. It strikes me that this is not the case at all when we have been referring constantly to ourselves as the champions of the relationship between the legislative and the executive. Here we are talking about the examination function. As has been pointed out, the new schedule of committees represents a greater degree of realism at the present time in connection with the meaningful function of carrying on an examination process. As has been well pointed out by several Members, the whole field of delegated authority and delegated legislation is one in which there is great need for this very thing. Surely, Lord Hewart's strictures have not been forgotten and they are applicable here in Canada. I would hope that the champions of the status quo would unbend and accept this practical suggestion.

The Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Amendment (Mr. Baldwin) negatived: Yeas, 27; nays, 43.

Mr. Fairweather: I want to enter a caveat about what could be an interesting Committee on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts. I think the principle has been enunciated here on several occasions, perhaps at no time more eloquently than by the late and beloved Member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings, concerning the relationship of the Secretary of State with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. I hope that statement, which has been endorsed I know by the present Secretary of State, will be carried through and that the Committee on Broadcasting, et cetera, will not set itself up as a censor for the films and so on which are to be shown. I know, and I say this with diffidence, I have no competence to judge the content of a C.B.C. program or what picture may hang in a gallery downtown, or what film the National Film Board should produce.

Mr. Pickersgill: Or world fair symbols?

Mr. Fairweather: Yes, I thank the Minister of Transport for reminding me. This was one of the sorry times when Parliament tried to exercise its doubtful taste about a symbol that has now been adopted for Expo '67. Strangely enough, each time I go into my church and see, back of the Priest at the altar, the extended hands, symbolizing I presume the same symbol as has been used for this exposition, I think how silly we were. I hope this type of attitude will not permeate this committee because if it does we will make nonsense of the committee and will be invading an area with which this Parliament has no competence to deal.

Mr. Fisher: The Canada Council, through a process that is not supported by anything statutory, has appeared annually with its report before the Public Accounts Committee. Now, is it the intention of the Government to change this practice and bring it before the committee to which reference has just been made?

Mr. McIlraith: It will have to be considered, but frankly I had not thought of it.

Mr. Fisher: I just wanted to make sure, because we do not want to lose that privilege which some of us have appreciated, of being able to interview and question the Members of the Council before the Public Accounts Committee. It makes sense to put it in the other committee; but in the limbo that may be ahead, because the President of the Privy Council has not thought about this, I hope no one will lose sight of the fact we need it in one or the other.

Mr. Pickersgill: Perhaps as the senior Minister here, I may say that I remember well Mr. St. Laurent's assurance when the Canada Council was first set up, and I can assure the hon. Member this Government intends to carry it out in one way or another in every year; so Parliament will have an opportunity to review this matter.

• (4:10 p.m.)

Mr. Lambert: A former minister of national health and welfare, who became chairman of the Canada Council, expressed grave doubts as to whether Parliament had any competence. I am not mentioning that as an argument against what the Minister has said.

Mr. Pickersgill: It was not precisely on the same point. We make an unconditional grant to the Canada Council. The moneys they spend are no longer under the control of Parliament, as Mr. St. Laurent made clear at that time; nevertheless he felt there should be some process by which Parliament could make a review of this matter. This compromise was reached and seems to have worked fairly well so far.

Mr. Fisher: It was the successor to Mr. St. Laurent who offered the technique that was used, and I think we should give him credit for this.

Mr. Pickersgill: I am quite willing to do that. I gave him credit a few minutes ago.

Mr. Barnett: Following the sermon on the exercise of patience by the hon. Member for Winnipeg South Centre—

Mr. Churchill: No; it was the Minister of Transport; he is the patient man.

Mr. Barnett: I have in mind the remarks made by the hon. Member for Winnipeg South Centre about not being too concerned if the ideas we introduce do not find immediate acceptance among Members of the House.

Mr. Churchill: I was speaking from my own experience, because a lot of my ideas are never accepted.

Mr. Knowles: Praise God from whom all blessings flow.

Mr. Barnett: I may not have acquired as much patience as the hon. Member, as he has been longer in the House than I. However, to come to the point, I wish to move an amendment and without embarking on a lengthy discussion I move:

That the proposed standing order 65 be amended by adding to section (1) thereof the following as a new subsection (v):

(v) on Indian Affairs, to consist of 24 members.

Few Members will quarrel with the fact that what parliament does in the field of Indian Affairs is of growing interest and importance, not least because of the interest of the Indian people themselves in it. From time to time special committees have been established, but I think a regular standing committee on Indian Affairs should be set up. I appreciate that under the Government proposal provision may have been made to refer this matter—

Mr. McIlraith: Does the hon. Member not think this is covered by subparagraph (i), the Committee on Human Rights and Citizenship and Immigration? It was intended that it should be included in that, and if there is any uncertainty there would be no objection to adding Indian Affairs to the title of that committee.

Mr. Barnett: I am aware that it was proposed that estimates of the Indian Affairs branch be considered by this committee, but the subject matter is of sufficient importance to be dealt with by a separate committee, not one which will be dealing with a hodgepodge of other matters.

There is to be a Standing Committee on Veterans Affairs, which could just as logically be referred to the Committee on Human Rights. I think that long after we cease to deal with veterans affairs, because no veterans are left in Canada, we will still have to deal with the Indian people.

Mr. Pickersgill: It would be an inconvenience from an administrative standpoint to have two committees to which one department was being referred. I hope the Indian Affairs branch will always be part of the Department of Citizenship and Immigration, as citizenship should always be stressed in relation to Indian Affairs. As mentioned by the President of the Privy Council, there would be no objection to enlarging the title of the Committee on Human Rights.

Mr. Barnett: The argument about dividing the estimates of a department is rather academic. What does the Minister think about the proposal presently before the House for the setting up of a Court of Indian Claims? Is not this an argument in favour of a separate committee?

Mr. Pickersgill: I cannot conceive that one committee would be considering the estimates of Indian Affairs while at the same time another committee would be considering the estimates of the Immigration Branch. That would divide the energies of the deputy minister. Nothing would be lost by having them considered in the same committee, and they would receive more thorough attention from the department and the officials if that were done.

As has been mentioned, we are setting up quite a number of committees, and now another one is suggested. I see a very real advantage in changing the title of the Committee on Human Rights so that the Indian people will not feel they are overlooked.

• (4:20 p.m.)

Mr. Barnett: I suggest that in due course we allow the members of the committee to decide by a majority whether they wish to accept my suggestion or that of the Minister.

Mr. Orlikow: I should like to support the amendment proposed by my hon. friend from Comox-Alberni. I think there is a good deal more to this than the adding of the word "Indian" to the title. Surely it is time the people of Canada realized that here we face what is undoubtedly the greatest unsolved social problem in Canada. The Indian-Eskimo Association which is probably doing more in its field than any other voluntary association, recently made representations to the Government that a separate department be established to deal with Indian questions and that the whole of this work be separated from the Department of Immigration. The Government has gone some distance in this direction; the department now has two separate branches, each under a deputy minister.

A week or so ago I had a question on the order paper asking what had been spent by the Federal Government on services to Indians in the fields of health, education, welfare and economic development. The answer was interesting. During the fiscal year 1963-64 the Federal Government spent $13½ million on welfare, $3½ million on education, $22½ million on health services and just $3½ million on economic development. Contained in these figures is a good indication, in capsule form, of where we have gone wrong. Surely the only way of reaching a situation where the Indian citizens of Canada can play their part and live their lives with the same possibilities open to them as there are to others, is to make sure they have an economic basis permitting them to pay for the services they require, like the rest of the people of Canada. These figures give us a picture of what has gone wrong in the years gone by. We have been prepared to give the Indians sufficient food and shelter to ensure they will not die from exposure or lack of food—very often—but not enough to permit them to develop to the point at which they can make their own way.

I cannot think of anything better than to set up a committee of parliament which would take the time to meet together with officials of the department and the Minister, and deal in great detail with the problems of the Indians. The Province of Manitoba from which I come, the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, and, more recently, the Province of Ontario have all begun to spend a great deal more money and effort on trying to improve both the immediate and the long range conditions of the Indians. We have for the first time an opportunity in the next generation to solve this problem, provided we are prepared to do some new and bold thinking. I wish to join my hon. friend from Comox-Alberni in suggesting that one way of doing this would be to set up a separate committee. Here in the Committee of the Whole when we discuss estimates we spend so much time discussing the immigration problem that we never have more than a couple of hours in which to discuss the serious question of the Indian population. I do not say this critically; the immigration estimates have rightly come in for lengthy examination during the last 50 years. But I do hope the Government will agree with the proposal now before the committee, and that we can have a committee of this House which will spend the necessary time on this subject and reach the basic solutions which are required.

[Translation]

Mr. Caouette: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few remarks about the proposed amendment requesting the addition of a 24-member committee to study Indian affairs.

I may say that the Minister of Transport was quite agreeable when he consented to add "Indian Affairs" to paragraph (i) "on Human Rights and Citizenship and Immigration".

I would think that the effect of the amendment would be to duplicate a committee—in this case, the committee on Human Rights, Citizenship and Immigration, which has 22 members. This amendment provides for setting up another 24-member committee. It seems to me that the aggregate of suggested committees would be sufficient and I fully support the Minister when he suggests to the member moving this amendment to add "Indian Affairs" to the heading.

We all agree in this house that the Indians should have our special attention. We are all convinced that their problems must be considered and dealt with in the light of facts and I do not believe, as the hon. member who spoke before me just said, that by being included in the human rights and citizenship and immigration committee the Indians will be dealt with more harshly. On the contrary, we would have all the latitude required to discuss Indian problems in the human rights citizenship and immigration committee.

Mr. Chairman, since the government is ready to add Indian affairs to the human rights committee, we shall support the proposal of the Minister of Transport and vote, if there is a vote, against the amendment.

[English]

Some hon. Members: Question.

Amendment (Mr. Barnett) negatived: Yeas, 15; nays, 42.

The Deputy Chairman: I declare the amendment lost.

Mr. MacNaught: I move:

That the proposed standing order No. 65 be amended by adding after the word "on" in subparagraph (i) the words "Indian Affairs".

• (4:30 p.m.)

The Deputy Chairman: Is it the pleasure of the committee to adopt the said motion?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

Mr. Peters: On division.

Amendment agreed to on division.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, now that the committee is in a mood to make amendments to paragraph 10 may I try one. The arguments for this have been made several times so I need not repeat them. We are in a position to do a job on the rules right now, because we had a committee working on this matter for a couple of years. Many of us think that this is a matter which should be kept under constant study and supervision. Therefore, I move:

That section 1 of the proposed Standing Order 65 be amended by inserting therein immediately after subparagraph (q) a new subparagraph (r) as follows:

"(r) on Procedure and Organization, to consist of 24 members"; and by relettering the succeeding subparagraphs.

There is a slight difference in form between my amendment and those which have recently been moved; instead of making another (v), I am putting it in its proper alphabetical place.

The Deputy Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Amendment (Mr. Knowles) negatived: Yeas, 26; nays, 44.

The Deputy Chairman: I declare the amendment lost.

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, I should like to make a number of amendments to paragraph 10 in relation to Standing Order 65 by deleting parts of the section and substituting amendments. I do so because I think this is a very important section of the rule changes, one which, in my opinion, can either make them successful or not. I do not want to take up much time by presenting them but I do point out that on a number of things the Government has made certain concessions.

It has been stated that the Government is prepared to have committees established within a ten day period. I should like to move an amendment which provides that after the third day from the commencement of the session a special committee, to consist of seven members, will be automatically established; that within five sitting days after its appointment the committee prepare and lay before the House a list of Members composing the Standing Committees of the House. I would include in the list of committees a subparagraph (b)—I am not opposed to the other recommendations which have been made—a Committee on Accommodation and Facilities, and the Establishment and Organization of the Internal Economy of the House, to consist of 22 Members.

I do not know whether the Government has overlooked this matter, but I think that one of these days we will have to face the problem of the operation of the House itself. I think the way we do it at the moment is pretty archaic. We have a number of treasury members of the Government who, with Mr. Speaker, make decisions as to the operation and establishment of the staff, the facilities, and other matters involving the House. I think any Member who has taken the time to examine the situation will agree that this leaves a great deal to be desired. I think this matter should be considered, and in my opinion will have to be considered, before long.

In the British Parliament, from which many of the recommendations which we have debated over the last few days have been taken, they have established a committee of peers to assist in this matter. The treasury officers and Members of the treasury benches still sit on that committee because obviously an expenditure of money is involved, but it does seem that in Great Britain something can be gained by bringing in other Members of the House to discuss problems affecting the operation of all Members of Parliament and the facilities and establishment of the House of Commons. Therefore I suggest this new committee.

I realize that this will not pass, Mr. Chairman, because Government Members, several of whom are in the House at the present time, are on the presently existing committee. They have had it all their own way for a long time, and without any doubt it is a political committee. So I do not expect support for my amendment.

An hon. Member: Do you want to put them out of a job?

Mr. Peters: Someone raises the question whether they will be put out of a job. That is obviously not my intention. My intention is only to introduce other Members of the House to the committee who might be able to make suggestions and solve some of the problems facing us.

I would amend the next part of this paragraph to read:

The following Joint Standing Committees of both Houses are hereby established: on Printing—

And so on, to consist of 23 Members; on the Library of Parliament to consist of 21 Members, and I add:

(c) on the Parliamentary Restaurant and the Precincts of Parliament, to consist of 21 Members.

This amendment, of course, will not be approved either. Nevertheless, some Members may be aware of the fact that the Restaurant Committee, under the able chairmanship of the hon. Member for Winnipeg South, did take a very active look at some of the problems which affected the restaurant and made a number of suggestions. Some hon. Members may be unaware of what some of these suggestions were. They involved such things as having three senior officers, through the offices of the Speaker, allowed to go to a very well known restaurant complex in Montreal to take training in their own particular field.

• (4:40 p.m.)

I think it is also true that there was in this training an evaluation of the capabilities of certain members of the staff, and the Restaurant Committee decided that one of the staff had to be replaced. This recommendation was made by the committee and was not acted on by the Speaker. It is interesting to note that when the Speaker returned to the committee at a subsequent meeting and was asked about this matter, he had the legal interpretation of the Restaurant Committee of the day, which indicated that there really was no such thing as a Restaurant Committee of the House of Commons. It is true that there was representation legally from the Senate side of the joint committee, but that part of the committee representing the House of Commons really had no function. I think that Members who use the facilities of the restaurant will congratulate the Chairman on the work she undertook on their behalf, and the fact is that things have improved in the restaurant.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Peters: I think it is a disgrace if we allow the Speaker to use this legal interpretation, that there is no representation from the House of Commons in connection with the Parliamentary Restaurant, to be carried over to the joint committees which have already performed such useful work, and leaving out the Joint Committee on the Parliamentary Restaurant. I have added to this, Mr. Chairman, "the precincts of Parliament" only because I know parliament one of these days is going to have to make a decision on what are the physical boundaries of parliament.

This may involve something hon. Members have not thought about, but really in the precedents of parliament the West Block is not part of the complex of parliament, and those Members who are in the West Block are in a kind of limbo, as far as concerns some of the privileges that might affect Members of this House. I think we are just burying our heads in the sand if we say we are not going to look at this problem, and allow this sort of technicality to affect our work. A very effective and efficient Chairman made recommendations with regard to the Parliamentary Restaurant which were not agreed to by certain Members of the Internal Economy Committee. I do not expect this rule to be changed. This is a Parliament of sheep, everybody is scared of an election.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Peters: Nobody wants to stand up, on either side of the house, no matter how they feel.

An hon. Member: Brave man.

Mr. Peters: You can holler all you like, but that does not really make any difference. You do the hollering, but you really do not put any action behind it. Therefore there is no other conclusion to which I can come. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I would change paragraph (4) to (5) and include in it the words:

—to sit notwithstanding any adjournment of the House and to adjourn from place to place—

All this really means is that the House will be able to do what was done so successfully by the Pension Committee, when the House adjourned and that committee was allowed to continue to sit. I have also added:

—to appoint subcommittees and to refer to such subcommittees any of the matters referred to the committee; and to report from time to time the Minutes of Evidence taken before subcommittees and reported by them to the committee.

I believe there is no argument that if this change were made the staff we have at this moment would not be able to cope with the work. Mention was made of the Committees on Immigration and Citizenship, Indian Affairs and Human Rights. I think no one will disagree that each of these fields is very large, and if a small committee was set up as a subcommittee, under the authority of the original committee, to report back to the original committee and obtain the minutes and all the benefits that would accrue to the main committee, this would probably be the answer to the problem of the diversity of subjects that will be referred to specific committees.

Then I add as paragraph (6):

Three shall be the quorum of every such subcommittee and every such subcommittee shall have power to send for persons, papers and records, to sit nothwithstanding any adjournment of the House, and to adjourn from place to place.

I include (5) as a new No. 7 and add at the end the matter of a timetable in this form:

That detailed examination of estimates, saving always the right of the Committee of Supply, be undertaken not later than the 10th of March by Standing Committees—each Standing Committee to report how, if at all, the policy in those estimates by it examined may be carried out more economically and, if the Standing Committee think fit, to consider the principal variations between those estimates and those relating to the previous financial year, and the form in which those estimates are presented to the House; and that not more than 36 days (two Wednesday or Friday sittings to be deemed equivalent to a single sitting on any other day)—

—as has been done in England:

—of the time of the House, being days before the 30th of September, be allocated to the business of supply in each session. For the purpose of this order, the business of supply shall consist of proceedings on motions "That Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair"; supplementary or additional estimates from the Standing Committees. That a and main estimates whether for the coming or the current financial year;—

This means, of course, that we are setting a timetable that really would be operative in regard to the financial section of the business of the House of Commons, namely between March 10 and September 30 of each year. Then:

—and the consideration of reports from the Committee on Public Accounts and of reports on estimates from the Standing Committees. That a Special Committee of the House, consisting of 22 Members, to be designated later by the House, be instructed to prepare and to submit to the House forthwith the changes in Standing Orders consequential upon this order, including any means of giving to the Opposition an opportunity to select the departmental estimates to be discussed.

I move these changes, Mr. Chairman, by removing paragraph 10 of Resolution 15 and having what I have read substituted therefor.

The Deputy Chairman: Order. I have read the amendment proposed by the hon. Member for Timiskaming. While I feel that a part of this amendment, particularly that part which deals with the organization and internal economy of the House, tends to amend the House of Commons Act and perhaps is not quite in order, I would leave it to the Committee to decide what they would like to do with it. I would ask the assistance of any Members who would like to make any comments.

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Chairman, there are some other grounds for arguing that this amendment is out of order; but rather than assert them perhaps it would be more satisfactory, in view of the fact that we are near the expiry of time for today, to have the amendment voted on. It seems to me that two or three things in the amendment are contrary to the rules in that it seeks to put a charge on the treasury by way of a motion not moved by a Minister of the Crown. It amends the House of Commons Act without proper steps being taken by a single resolution and on that count and on others it seems to me it is out of order. However, in view of the few minutes remaining I will not press the point but simply note it so that the allowing of the amendment to be voted on cannot be used as a precedent.

• (4:50 p.m.)

The Deputy Chairman: Is the Committee ready for the question?

Some hon. Members: Question.

Amendment (Mr. Peters) negatived: Yeas, 7; nays, 63.

The Deputy Chairman: Does this complete the discussion of paragraph 10?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chairman: Paragraph 11. Is paragraph 11 carried?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

The Deputy Chairman: Paragraph 12. Is paragraph 12 carried?

Some hon. Members: Carried.

Resolution agreed to.

The Deputy Chairman: Shall I report the resolution?

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, before you report the resolution may I make a request of the President of the Privy Council, although it is something he would have to deal with when the Speaker is in the Chair? Would it not be desirable to have made as an appendix to today's Hansard a statement of all of the actual changes that have been made in the rules during the discussions of these last few weeks? For example, order paper item No. 14 was passed in part on Tuesday and the remainder of order No. 14 was passed through the adoption of the report of our committee of nine this morning, and now we have completed order No. 15. I am not suggesting that the appendix should contain a list of all the amendments that were proposed and all the voting that took place, but rather that it should be a statement of what actually will be our rules from now on. Could that be made an appendix to today's Hansard? Then we will all have it readily available. I realize this will have to be done with Mr. Speaker in the Chair but the opportunity to do it might not present itself if I did not mention it now.

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Chairman, I think the idea is an excellent one. I wonder whether it should be in Votes and Proceedings or in Hansard. I should like to hear suggestions from hon. Members as to which they would prefer?

Mr. Knowles: I realize this is a bit unusual but why not put it in both? This is a matter that concerns all of us and there has been a lot of debate about something the terms of which readers of Hansard will not be able to follow if it is not made an appendix to Hansard. It seems to me it should be compiled and certainly included in Hansard, but I would have no objection to its being put in both.

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Chairman, I agree it might well be put in both with the new closure rule in heavy black type.

Mr. Olson: Mr. Chairman, there is one point I should like to make. I think it is desirable that a consolidation of all the changes in the rules should be printed separately so they can be found easily, but let us consider for a moment the physical requirement of someone doing this by the time Hansard goes to press tonight. It seems to me it is a rather large task to take all of this out of the debate and compile it in such a way as to meet the request of the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre. However, I think it would be desirable to include it as an appendix to Monday's Hansard which would mean there would be at least a reasonable time to do the work.

Mr. McIlraith: I understood the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre wanted simply the three orders that have been passed, namely the one last Tuesday dealing with supply, the one earlier today involving concurrence in the committee report and now Government Order No. 15 as amended. I take it he wants those three items to be printed as an appendix to today's Hansard and Votes and Proceedings.

With regard to the other matter of the consolidation of the rules, the fact is that there are other temporary rules in effect and this task will have to be undertaken separately. I should think the consolidation would be published in a separate pamphlet.

Mr. Knowles: The Minister has interpreted my request correctly. I was not asking for something that would involve a lot of work after we rise. I am simply asking that what was done on Tuesday and what was done this morning, these texts being already available, together with what we have now finished, be made an appendix to today's Hansard and today's Votes and Proceedings.

The Chairman: This order will have to be made with the Speaker in the Chair. Shall I report the resolution?

An hon. Member: As amended.

The Chairman: No, a resolution is not reported as amended, as the hon. Member will see if he will consult Beauchesne, citation 262.

Mr. Knowles: The resolution is the resolution as amended.

Resolution reported and concurred in.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Speaker, is the Minister rising to make the request I suggested a moment ago?

Mr. McIlraith: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have two other requests I should like to deal with. In the French version of the committee report on the proposed new Standing Order 15A the first four words in paragraph 1 of that report are "Il doit être formé". I am advised by the Committee Clerk, and the translator also agrees, that it should read "Est établi". I would ask for the unanimous consent of the House to have that correction made so that the report will read correctly.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is it agreed that an order of the House will issue to make the consolidation of the resolutions as amended an appendix to Hansard and also to Votes and Proceedings?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

[Editor's note: For text of orders adopted see appendix "B".]

STANDING ORDERS

SPECIAL COMMITTEE ON SUPPLY PROCEDURES

Hon. G. J. McIlraith (President of the Privy Council): Mr. Speaker, in the order passed on Tuesday provision was made for a committee to deal with the supply resolution and I should like to move a formal motion to establish that committee, although I do not have the names of its members. I move, seconded by the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pickersgill):

• (5:00 p.m.)

That, pursuant to resolution adopted June 8, 1965, a Special Committee on Supply Procedures, to consist of 24 Members to be designated later by the House, is hereby appointed and instructed to prepare and submit forthwith such changes in the Standing Orders or procedures of this House as will provide

(a) That detailed examination of estimates, saving always the right of the Committee of Supply, be undertaken by Standing Committees and that not more than 30 days of the time of the House be allocated to the business of supply in each session. For the purpose of this order, the business of supply shall consist of main estimates; interim supply; and supplementary or additional estimates excepting supplementary or additional estimates introduced after the main estimates have been approved, and excepting always the final supplementary or additional estimates;

(b) That the number of supply motions be reduced from six to four; and

(c) Ways and means for giving to the Opposition an opportunity to select the order in which departmental estimates will be discussed.

That the said Committee be empowered to report from time to time, and that the Committee be authorized to sit while the House is sitting; and that in relation thereto the provision of Section (1) of Standing Order 67 be suspended.

Motion agreed to.

Mr. McIlraith: I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if I might ask the indulgence of the House for the purpose of thanking hon. Members for the way in which they dealt with the first resolution in the House and the second resolution in Committee of the Whole, and for their patience in dealing with this subject. It took a rather lengthy period of time, but I think all will agree it was a most important subject affecting the whole procedure of the House. On behalf of the Government, Mr. Chairman, I want to record this expression of thanks to all hon. Members for their patience.

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Speaker, I hope we can get back to normal very soon so that I will not have to vote in committee with the Government. I should like to express our thanks to the President of the Privy Council for the way in which he has handled a very difficult task. I appreciate some of his troubles, particularly with the Members to my far left. We tried to be as co-operative as possible. We are prepared now, if the hon. Minister will announce the business for Monday, to release him from the House. We rejoice that he escaped serious injury this morning and we ask him to drive carefully on the way home.

Mr. Knowles: Before the Minister announces the business for Monday, may we join in the sentiments that have been expressed? It was kind of the Minister to say what he did to the House, in view of the difficulty under which he has been working today. We are glad that the trouble he experienced this morning was not more serious. We would be pleased to let him go for a rest, and we are glad also that the House has succeeded in doing this very important piece of work.

Mr. Thompson: I should like to join in expressing our appreciation of the way in which this very important work which has just been completed has been expedited. Certainly, this rare showing of good will is something that should make us all very happy. I drove by the House Leader's new car as it was parked outside last night, and today I hear that it was battered in a traffic accident. We extend our personal sympathy and trust the accident was not too serious. We thank him also for the progress that has been made. I hope the days ahead are going to be such that we will find we have accomplished one of the most important pieces of work that has been accomplished in a long time.

[Translation]

Mr. Robert Beaulé (Quebec East): Mr. Chairman, it is not very often that a bill or a resolution is adopted in such a gay mood.

We are also very happy that this debate is over, and we hope that next week we will gird ourselves for action.

[English]

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. McIlraith: Mr. Speaker, I want to thank hon. Members for their remarks. The business of the House for Monday will be the second reading of the Bank Act legislation and the Quebec Savings Bank legislation; the bill to extend the Bank Act, and then Budget resolutions.

[Mr. Churchill.]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order; it being five o'clock the House will now proceed to private Members' business as listed on today's order paper.

SPORTS

DESIGNATION OF LACROSSE AS CANADA'S NATIONAL GAME

Mr. R. W. Prittie (Burnaby-Richmond) moved second reading of Bill No. C-3, respecting the national game of Canada (lacrosse).

He said: Mr. Speaker, it may seem from the explanatory notes that this Bill, particularly the portion which reads—

The purpose of this Bill is to rectify what was probably an oversight on the part of the Fathers of Confederation—

—is not seriously intended. This view was probably increased at the time I presented a similar bill last October when there were stories on the sports pages to the effect the Indians might be waiting outside the House to scalp Members who did not support the bill. In spite of remarks of this type, I assure hon. Members the bill is seriously intended.

I think it is fitting at this time when we are considering national flags, national anthems and other national symbols, that this particular matter should be settled now. A few months ago no one thought such a bill was necessary. I am sure they would have assumed that lacrosse was our national game. Reference is made to this in a great many publications. I was looking at one book entitled, "Great Days in Canadian Sport" by Henry Roxborough—I hope you will notice the name of the author—published in 1957. On page 21 this sentence appears:

The game spread so rapidly that in 1867 one of the first Acts approved by the Confederation Parliament was to confirm that Lacrosse was Canada's national game—

There is a book in the Library of Parliament entitled, "Lacrosse and How to Play It", by W. K. McNaught, and reference is made there to Lacrosse as the national game of Canada. I have searched through the Parliamentary Library and in a publication called "The Canadian Magazine" of 1902 there is the following reference:

—on the day on which the different provinces of Canada were united into one grand Dominion—July 1st, 1867—the game Lacrosse was established as the national game of the new Dominion.

However, what was assumed was not so. We found that the hon. Member for Norfolk (Mr. Roxburgh) caused some research to be done, and this research revealed there could be no record found of any legislative or executive action taken to declare lacrosse to be the national game of Canada.

The purpose of this bill, therefore, is to correct that oversight. I would base my claim for recognition of lacrosse as our official game on two main points. It was played by the Indians a very long time ago. We Canadians have not done too much for the people whose land we took. The least that we can do is to recognize their game as the national game of the country.

The second point we should take into account is the historical fact that lacrosse has long been considered as the national game of Canada. It can probably be proven that more people play hockey and baseball in Canada than lacrosse, but the case for lacrosse should be based upon other considerations. The game is very popular at the moment. It was popular in the past; it suffered a decline, but now there is a revival in its popularity.

The president of the Canadian Lacrosse Association, Mr. Carl Madgett, informs me that there are in excess of 25,000 players in Ontario, 5,000 in Quebec and about 4,500 in B.C. Some lacrosse is played in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, at the University of New Brunswick, and at Camp Gagetown in New Brunswick.

As I have said, there is a considerable revival of interest in the game. It is flourishing in B.C. where there are numerous leagues including teams from Vancouver, New Westminster, Victoria, Burnaby, Coquitlam and Richmond. There are two senior leagues in the Province of Quebec, and the cities of Cornwall and Hull play in the Quebec league.

The National Film Board has just completed a film on lacrosse, which has been released in English and French and is being widely shown throughout the country. Just this past week the Fitness and Amateur Sport Directorate of the Department of National Health and Welfare issued a booklet called "Lacrosse" in one of its "How To" series.

We have only to look at the list of the teams which have won the various championships in Canada in past years to see how many parts of the country in which the game is played. The Mann Cup, which is emblematic of the Canadian senior lacrosse championship, was won in recent years by Vancouver, New Westminster, Victoria and Nanaimo in B.C. and in Ontario by Port Credit, Peterborough, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Mimico, Brampton, Ottawa, Orillia, and several times by the City of Toronto. The City of Oshawa won the Canadian junior lacrosse championship last year, and the main point I want to get across is that there is great interest in the game at the present time.

In addition to being played widely in this country it is also played in other countries. It is very popular in many parts of the United States, and I understand is the official state game of the State of Maryland. It is also played in the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand. The Canadian Lacrosse Association hopes to arrange a series of international contests to be played in Canada in 1967, and hopes to invite teams from Australia, New Zealand, the United Kingdom and the United States.

It is of particular interest that the only lacrosse equipment factory in the world is situated in Cornwall in the riding which you represent, Mr. Deputy Speaker, the Chisholm Lacrosse Manufacturing Company on the St. Regis reserve near Cornwall.

I expect to get the wide support of the House for this bill. I am sure all Liberal Members will support it. The Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson) is the honorary president of the Canadian Lacrosse Association, and I believe the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Diefenbaker) expressed an interest in the game when he was asked about this by the Canadian Lacrosse Association.

I know a great many Members are interested and will want to speak on the subject, so perhaps my last words on it should be ones which have come from two native Indians. I refer first to a remark made by Mr. Wilfred Pelletier, executive director of the National Indian Council, reported in the Toronto Telegram of November 6, 1964:

Any contribution made by Indians in the past has not received credit, but lacrosse is something we are very proud of, and we of the National Indian Council back the lacrosse associations solidly.

This Parliament can do something to recognize the contribution of Indians by declaring lacrosse our national game.

Another Indian by the name of Duke Redbird, of Thunderbird Magazine, had this to say:

I can't recall the Russians ever beating a Canadian lacrosse team, or even challenging one.

As I said, Mr. Speaker, there was some humour attached to this when I first introduced the bill, and the hon. Member for Norfolk (Mr. Roxburgh) introduced a bill dealing with hockey, but so far as I am concerned this bill is quite seriously intended and I should like to see the House take action today to establish this Canadian game as the official game of the country.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérald Laniel (Beauharnois-Salaberry): Mr. Speaker, I am very happy to take part in the debate on Bill No. C-3 to make lacrosse Canada's national game. All the more so because I am honorary president of the Club national de Valleyfield in the Quebec lacrosse league, and I am happy to hear the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie) say a little earlier that the Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson) was himself honorary vice president of the Canadian Lacrosse Association.

Mr. Speaker, lacrosse is a game which was very popular at one time in Valleyfield where I live and I am happy to see that this year a group of sportsmen is giving us the opportunity to install new life in this game which is infact traditionally and historically Canadian.

I would feel very remiss indeed if I did not congratulate those who took this happy initiative, among others, people whom you may not know, Mr. Speaker. Mr. J. Gérard Villeneuve and Mr. Bernard "Coco" Blanchard, two very well known sportsmen among our people. And I should not forget either those who will bend every effort throughout the season.

I wish the Valleyfield team good luck. Up to now everything has been going pretty well, and I hope the people will give it all the support required.

To come back to the bill itself, I want to inform the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond, if he has not understood the meaning of my remarks, that I support his proposal, and I suggest that all members do the same.

The sponsor of the bill said a while ago that many did not take this suggestion too seriously. As far as I am concerned, I am in earnest. We speak about protecting, even maintaining a sport which originated in Canada, a sport which is becoming more and more popular. In fact, here in the Hull-Ottawa area, the newspapers give us each evening the results of various lacrosse games.

Mr. Speaker, I understand very well the reaction of some hon. members who wonder why we insist on having as a national game one which, in the last few years, has been pushed aside by other games, hockey in particular.

It is also quite understandable that the hon. member for Norfolk (Mr. Roxburgh), who was active in amateur hockey for 15 years or so, is not very enthusiastic about this bill, but I hope he will be open minded enough to admit that lacrosse has some claims to being Canada's national game.

In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, Bill No. C-3 is certainly not trying to discredit other sports practiced in Canada today and I am the first to admit that one does not exclude the others. However, one fact remains; lacrosse is of Canadian origin, it is a game older than confederation itself and it was played a long time before the first settlers landed.

Mr. Speaker, I do not want to embarrass you, but since lacrosse sticks are manufactured solely in your riding, that is on St. Regis island, I am sure you are in favour of this bill which would be quite normal in my opinion. Besides a great many people know that for many years you have been an avid supporter of lacrosse. That industry in the Cornwall area exports lacrosse sticks to many countries, mainly to Australia, New Zealand, England and, of course, the United States. Therefore, this sport is renowned internationally; it started in Canada, the sticks are made in Canada and the world's greatest players of lacrosse have always been Canadians. This is significant just the same and I think those are sufficient arguments to make us consider such a sport at a time when we are thinking of adopting a national sport for our country.

If we refer to any encyclopedia, we find at the word lacrosse, that it is "the oldest game played in America" and also "that it is of Canadian origin". The white people started to take an interest in that game around 1840, but the native Indians had played it long before the arrival of the discoverers. It was then called "baggataway", and the teams included between 75 to 200 players. There was no limitation as far as the size of the grounds was concerned, which would extend, in some cases, to five or even ten miles.

Quite obviously, the rules prevailing at that time were completely different from what they are today and the first French settlers were most impressed, both by the game itself and the shape of the stick. Indeed, it is for that very reason that it has been called "lacrosse", on account of the curve at one end, resembling a bishop's staff. The contests were then preceded by elaborate celebrations and religious ceremonies and followed afterwards by a tremendous celebration. The women attending the matches ran along the lines, striking their tribesmen with twigs so as to spur on their players in order to render the action more furious and more thrilling. As for the witch doctors, they acted as referees and marked the limits of the game area but, in some cases, this area could extend further and further as the game went on, since the dividing lines were extended whenever a player went beyond the limits.

On June 4, 1763, a "baggataway" match was used as a means of perpetrating the greatest massacre in Canadian history. According to Mr. J. B. Patterson, the author of "The Black Sparrow-hawk's biography", the Chippewas, a tribe that lived near fort Michillimackinac, organized a "baggataway" match against the "Sacs" Tribe, in honour of the anniversary of King George III of England, which was celebrated on June 4. The Chief of the Chippewas informed the commander of the fort, Captain Etherington, that a match was being organized in honour of the King's birthday, between his tribe and the "Sacs" tribe. Soldiers and fort visitors were invited to watch the game but the captain was suspicious and refused to let his men leave the precincts. Then, the Indians decided to play the game near the fortress, so that the people inside could watch the game anyway. The game went on for several hours and many soldiers and trappers finally decided to get out of the precincts to come near the ground and watch the competition from closer range. No one had paid too much attention to the fact that the Indian women, contrary to their habit, were sitting on the sideline and were covered with heavy blankets, although it was an extremely hot day. Because of constant coming and going of the fort people, the doors finally remained wide open and suddenly, as the play got nearer and nearer, the signal was given by the Indian chiefs. They all threw away their sticks and hastily picked their tomahawks from under the blankets covering their women. History tells us that only three white men survived that adventure which stands out in our history as one of the worst massacres.

In 1840, when white men began to get interested in the game, they amended the rules and also the stick. Gradually, numerous revisions brought the game to what it is today. More and more, it is being played indoors with six player teams and although the game may still seem a little rough, we are far from the massacres of 200 years ago. Even if lacrosse can be tough, it is essentially a team sport, a sport of contact, where skill comes first and where little is left to luck. The ball must keep moving at all times and the fact that there are very few offsides makes the game most interesting.

Among the references I found, some say that lacrosse was selected as the national sport of Canada in 1867, but after checking I found that nothing in the statutes of our country indicates that parliament ever took such a decision. Therefore I consider that the bill introduced today by the hon. Member for Burnaby-Richmond is more than justified, because it will enable us to recognize and preserve a sport which could not be more Canadian and which we could easily develop and make popular.

Before resuming my seat, Mr. Speaker, I invite all hon. members to support Bill No. C-3 and to recognize in lacrosse a sport which was marked by Canadian destiny and must remain with us, not like any other sport, but rather as the national sport of Canada.

[English]

• (5:20 p.m.)

Mr. Arnold Webster (Vancouver-Kingsway): I wish to speak briefly in support of the bill sponsored by my hon. friend from Burnaby-Richmond, an area in British Columbia which has a long tradition of lacrosse.

We have heard a great deal in recent years about the need to develop in Canada a Canadian identity as we approach our centennial year. With this in mind we have become increasingly aware of our achievements as a nation in various fields of activity such as resource development, scientific research, the creative arts and international affairs. Last year for the first time in our history we adopted a distinctive Canadian flag. Very soon we shall have an official anthem. Surely the time is ripe for us to recognize our national game of lacrosse.

I suggest there are three reasons why we should make this decision. First, lacrosse was developed many years ago by native people on the northern part of this continent. By accepting lacrosse as Canada's national game we would be paying tribute to the men and women who occupied this land before the coming of the white man. Second, early in this century, lacrosse was considered Canada's

No. 1 game, with widespread interest in both professional and amateur leagues. One of my first boyhood heroes was Newsy Lalonde —a great French athlete who played professional lacrosse for Vancouver and hockey for Montreal. The third reason is that lacrosse is a good game for Canadian youth. It requires skill, stamina and sportsmanship of a high order. We should give it official recognition.

In conclusion, I wish to quote an editorial from the Ottawa Journal of May 15, entitled "Lively Lacrosse". It reads as follows:

Occasional claims that lacrosse is Canada's national sport have not met wide public acceptance in recent years. Most people know that the game has a colourful Canadian history dating back to days when Indians ruled the land. In those times, it was played by 75 to 200 braves using a curved webbed stick that eventually was to give lacrosse its name—the stick reminded French settlers of a bishop's crozier, hence "La crosse."

Great changes occurred in the game after white men took a fancy to it...fewer players and smaller playing areas were introduced, until today it can be played in a hockey arena. The Mann Cup is the prize for national supremacy in the sport, which resembles hockey in its strategy.

• (5:30 p.m.)

Ottawa has harboured many avid lacrosse players over the years and both this city and Hull have entries in the Quebec League this year. The Ottawa-Montreal-Cornwall area appears to be a growing centre for the sport, which offers rugged action and high scores to please spectators.

Whether lacrosse, or any other sport, should be declared the national game is a matter of controversy. But lacrosse certainly deserves a better fate than the all-too-common one of being airily dismissed by people who have never seen the game played!

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Louis Frenette (Portneuf): Mr. Speaker, my contribution to this debate will not be very significant; besides, I speak with a certain apprehension, especially after hearing the favourable remarks made by some members and colleagues.

I wish at first to congratulate the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie) who introduced bill No. C-3 to have lacrosse declared our national game, not for having chosen this one but to have had the idea of having a game recognized as our national sport, a thing we should do as soon as possible. He gave us also a very interesting historical background about this sport which was played by our native Indian people, our predecessors, or shall I say, the first Canadians. He gave us also an historical account of what has happened since the adoption of the game by Canadians.

[Mr. Webster.]

I have no resentment against the Indians, Mr. Speaker, but I remember very well— I still have the marks on my body—the first time I played lacrosse as a student at the Oka school. I then had the opportunity of playing against the Indians of Caughnawaga. It was a worthwhile personal experience but it nevertheless left me with a few scars which will show for some time yet.

I agree, as I mentioned earlier, that Canada should adopt a national sport, but I wonder if lacrosse should be the one to be so designated. I readily understand that lacrosse has been played from time immemorial and that it is also very popular here in Canada and elsewhere. On the other hand, I do not think lacrosse should be recognized as our national sport because I feel that a national sport should be practiced by most sportsmen. I also feel that it should promote national interest in times of national competition. Lacrosse does not qualify in this respect, no matter how it is compared to hockey.

Hockey is played by hundreds of thousands of people in Canada; it is governed by a national organization and millions of fans follow it. I feel that hockey qualifies much better as our national sport than lacrosse. Furthermore, national radio and television networks spend a great deal of money to broadcast hockey games and there is organized hockey in every Canadian community, be it a large city or a humble village.

Therefore, in my opinion, if we must recognize a national sport—and in this I share the opinion of the Member for Burnaby-Richmond—hockey wins by a long stretch over lacrosse, against which I hold no grudge. On the contrary, it is a game which requires a certain robust training, which develops the team spirit, which has great merit and demands considerable effort. However, I do not think it has the necessary qualifications to be designated as our national sport.

Once again, I congratulate the hon. Member for Burnaby-Richmond for his interest in the selection or designation of a national sport for Canada, and I also congratulate the hon. member for Beauharnois-Salaberry (Mr. Laniel) for making a worthy contribution to the debate, for doing his best to present all the advantages of the game of lacrosse. However, we are still a long way from adopting that game as our national sport.

Once more, I have no regret in not sharing the opinion of my colleague from Burnaby-Richmond. A referendum to determine which is our most popular sport, what sport mostly attracts players, sportsmen and the general public, will reveal that hockey is our national sport.

[English]

Mr. Jack Davis (Parliamentary Secretary to the Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I should like to say a few words in support of the bill which has been advanced by the hon. Member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie). In other words, I should like to support lacrosse as Canada's national game.

Lacrosse has several things to recommend it. First, historically it comes ahead of ice hockey. It was played in this country generations before ice hockey was invented. Second, it is a tough game. It is a game which calls for a great deal of stamina and skill. Any of you who have seen lacrosse played in recent years will realize that this is indeed a fine game. It is very fast. The ball, for example, never goes out of bounds. The shots on goal are much faster than the shots in ice hockey. The plays are much more intricate. They call for a great deal of skill in respect to stick handling and they are well worth watching, drawing large crowds where the sport has been played continuously over the years. My advocacy of lacrosse, in other words, is based firstly on historical reasons, and secondly on the nature of the game itself.

In respect to historical reasons I would refer very briefly to the Encyclopedia Canadiana, which says that lacrosse is the oldest organized sport in America. It is Canadian in origin. A form of lacrosse, called battagaway, was played by Indian teams of from 75 to 200 men before white men arrived in Canada. As many as 48 tribes or groups, separated by distances up to 3,000 miles—in other words, right across the breadth of this continent, across what is now known as Canada—participated in these events. The game received its present name from early French settlers who likened the curved webbed stick used by the Indians to the bishop's crozier—hence "la crosse".

As early as 1840 white men became interested in lacrosse. It became popular around the middle of the last century. The rules were drawn up with some finality in 1867; in other words, in the year of Canada's birth as a nation. In the 1870's, 1880's and 1890's lacrosse was played by many more Canadians than played ice hockey. In the 1920's, and more particularly in the 1930's, the game was altered in several important ways. It became necessary, in order to have large attendances, to play on smaller courts. The summer use of ice hockey arenas was one obvious way not only of seating large crowds but of having a facility which could be lighted at night. Wire mesh was strung around the ice hockey arena to keep the ball in bounds. The same area was used as was normally covered by ice. The size of the team was reduced from 12 to 7, in the 1930's. Within the last few years it has been reduced to six. The players, playing in rotation, are substituted much as they are in ice hockey. It therefore is not only a fast game in spots, but it is played continuously at a very high rate of speed with much the same drive and purpose as ice hockey.

Today we have teams right across Canada. Lacrosse is more popular in Ontario than in other parts of the country; but it is certainly played in Quebec and it is played extensively out in British Columbia. This is witnessed by the fact that several Members from British Columbia have spoken today. Also the New Westminster Salmonbellies and the North Shore Indians teams are among the best teams that the nation has ever had. I mention the North Shore partly because the Squamish Indians, who made up the membership of some of our strongest west coast teams, are among the finest players that the Canadian game of lacrosse has ever known. These teams, the Salmonbellies from New Westminster and the North Shore Indians from Coast-Capilano won the Canadian senior men's championship a number of times.

By contrast ice hockey has a relatively recent history. Also its history, according again to several encyclopedias, began in western Europe. It was played in various forms and under various names through the Middle Ages on the canals in Holland, the frozen ponds in Denmark and the British Isles. It was popularly known as the game of "Shinny" for some time. It really was not played in Canada to any great extent until after 1867; hence it post-dates lacrosse by a considerable period of time. It has, however, become much more popular in recent years. This is partly because of the fact that there is a considerable commercial interest in ice hockey, an interest which has spread beyond the Canadian borders into the United States and elsewhere, and many young players are encouraged to improve themselves in this game. Many facilities have become available for the training and development of ice hockey players. I am personally convinced that in time the improved equipment that is available now to young boys, teen-agers, in respect of ice hockey will also become available in respect of lacrosse. I think many of the new facilities which have been developed for ice hockey will also eventually be used for lacrosse in the late spring, summer and fall months. I believe that with these improved facilities lacrosse may revive, and indeed I believe should revive because it is a fine participators sport and a fine spectator sport.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I should like to refer briefly to the breakdown of the grants which have been made available to national organizations by the federal department through the good offices of the Department of National Health and Welfare. I am referring more particularly to the fiscal year 1963-64. There lacrosse is well down the list. Ice hockey, as represented by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, is at the top of the list. No. 2 is the Canadian Amateur Ski Association. No. 3, I notice, is the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, and No. 4 is the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen. No doubt some of these expenditures reflect the fact that our athletes have excelled themselves in recent years in certain fields. Certainly out in British Columbia we have excelled ourselves in respect of rowing, and hence the amateur oarsmen have moved well up the list. But I suggest that for the Lacrosse Association to receive a mere $5,000 over a two-year period, in contrast to the literally hundreds of thousands of dollars spent in support of other athletic activities, is not doing justice to our national game. I trust that this situation will be rectified and that in view of the growth potential as well as the historical importance of this game it will receive more support from the Canadian Government in the years ahead.

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Luc Pepin (Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, representing one of the most sports-minded constituencies in Canada, I feel that I am obliged, indeed that I have a moral obligation to participate in this debate.

Before designating a sport as national, I suggest we should consider the criteria on which such a decision should be based. To my mind, there are four possible criteria.

First, the historic origin of the sport. From this standpoint, previous speakers convinced me that lacrosse was older still than hockey and, therefore, I am ready to concede this first point.

Second, there is the criterion of the value of a sport. I think we should not indulge in a debate in this regard, since each of us will find in his favorite sports a value, a beauty that others will deny. Therefore, the second criterion, in my opinion, does not apply.

There is a third criterion. The popularity of the sport. From that point of view, I think everybody will agree that, at least for the time being, hockey is the most popular sport in Canada and it is more generally practised than the game of lacrosse. In fact, one has only to read the newspapers to find that out.

The game of lacrosse, at least in the province of Quebec, has declined for quite a long time. I admit that recently there was a revival and that it is played more and more. In Drummondville, a city which I have the honour to represent, the game of lacrosse is really spreading and the public is showing greater interest.

There is a fourth criterion which I think is interesting and important, namely the reputation enjoyed by the sport abroad. In that regard, all those who have travelled outside Canada know very well that the game of lacrosse is not considered by the rest of the world as a distinctively Canadian sport. Whether we like it or not, hockey is considered in all countries of the world as Canada's national sport. And that is precisely one of the reasons why we feel so humiliated when the teams representing us in international competitions or at the Olympics are defeated by other countries, precisely because, for the rest of the world, hockey is the first Canadian sport.

There is another aspect to this problem which, I believe, is worth pointing out. The hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie) himself, in the second paragraph of his notes, mentioned a very special aspect of this problem, that is its constitutional aspect. I quote the second paragraph:

> The purpose of this bill is to rectify what was probably an oversight on the part of the Fathers of Confederation who were so preoccupied with drafting Sections 91 and 92 of the B.N.A. Act that the question of declaring a national game escaped their attention.

Actually, I am wondering whether or not the Fathers of Confederation did not study this problem very seriously. I admit that history does not report any such discussion, at least to my knowledge, but I feel that the Fathers of Confederation must have considered this question and, precisely while considering sections 91 and 92, they certainly wondered in which category of problems, federal or provincial, this question of a national game should be included. I suppose some of them referred to section 91(f) as dealing with the defence of the country and I presume it was said that muskets were likely more useful than the lacrosse sticks and, consequently, the possibility was eliminated. Others may have argued this question came under paragraph 22 of section 91 concerning letters patent; others may have said that it pertained to paragraph 23 of section 91 concerning copyrights. Others may have stated that paragraph 24 of section 91 was applicable since the matter came under the jurisdiction of the federal government concerning Indian affairs. But I suppose that the supporters of the federal jurisdiction were themselves a little shaken by the arguments put forward by their opponents.

I suppose that in 1867 some of the Fathers of Confederation said that this decision concerning the national game should, on the contrary, come under the provisions of section 92, and that someone argued that that was provided for in paragraph 13 of section 92 dealing with property and civil rights. I also imagine that some people said this matter came under section 92(7) relating to local matters and consequently is under the provincial jurisdiction.

I can very well imagine that one of the Fathers of Confederation pointed out that weather conditions varied considerably across Canada and that mentalities and temperaments varied also. Furthermore, some must have thought it preferable not to designate any national sport, precisely because one sport could be very popular in one part of the country but less in another.

But, Mr. Chairman, I think there must have been one Father of the Confederation to suggest, finally, that the problem should be examined in the light of section 91 concerning peace and order and the good administration of the country.

One of them must have said: "That is the type of thing which will cause such serious problems between Canadians that it is much better not to raise it at this time. Since some Fathers of Confederation were, in 1867, already concerned about urgency, I imagine that there were some who said that it was not urgent to decide one way or another.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that the debate which has just taken place proves that even today, almost a century after 1867, we do not agree on what is the national sport of Canada. And I imagine that in the interest of order, peace and good administration, it would be better not to take a decision on this matter today.

[English]

Mr. John Mullally (Kings): Mr. Speaker, the hon. Member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie) who introduced the bill has certainly caused a very interesting discussion on something about which I have heard very little before. Even if he is not successful in having lacrosse established as Canada's national game, he has acquired at least one new fan for that sport.

From what we have heard today, I do not think any of us can dispute the historical significance of the game of lacrosse. The promoter of the bill and the hon. Member for Coast-Capilano (Mr. Davis), and others who have spoken, have established beyond any reasonable doubt that lacrosse has been played in this country for a great many years. In fact, as the bill indicates, it has been played in Canada for an unknown period of time, having originated with the native Indian people. On the basis of what has been said by other hon. Members who have spoken I would also agree that lacrosse is certainly an excellent game, one in which stamina, skill, team spirit and active participation are required.

However, in order to establish any sport as the national game I think there are certain other factors that must be taken into consideration in addition to historical background and the fact that lacrosse has many excellent features. I believe that one of the most important factors is that the people of the country would have to accept and recognize lacrosse as the national game, and in my opinion the vast majority of our people would be very reluctant to affirm that this is so.

I know that in my part of the country and probably throughout the whole of the Maritime Provinces the game is not played at all, or at least to a very limited extent at some of the universities. I have never seen an actual game of lacrosse and I think many of my hon. friends from that part of Canada are probably in the same boat. Therefore I would say that by an Act of Parliament we cannot impose on the people of Canada as their national game a game in which very few of them participate, a game which is known to a very small number of Canadians.

Mr. Prittie: Would the hon. Member permit a question?

Mr. Mullally: Certainly.

Mr. Prittie: Did we not impose upon the people of Canada by Act of Parliament a flag of our choosing?

Mr. Mullally: Certainly we did. I am glad the hon. Member has raised that point. That was an emblem that a large majority of the people of Canada wanted and have accepted. I submit this is an entirely different situation. I do not think we can adopt lacrosse as our national game, for the very reason that the people of Canada do not look upon it as the national game of this country. I think this is borne out by the fact that a relatively small number of people participate in the sport and very little is known about it by Canadians generally. In saying this I do not wish to minimize in any way the excellence of the game or the excellence of lacrosse as a participants sport.

The other argument I would raise against the suggestion that lacrosse be designated Canada's national game has to do with the fact that in other countries of the world we are not known as a nation in which lacrosse is played, but in practically every country of the world the game of hockey is synonymous with Canada. Canadian athletes participate in international hockey competition, and when hockey is mentioned Canada is automatically allied with it. I think this was very ably demonstrated by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Trade and Commerce (Mr. Pepin). Finally, Mr. Speaker, I think it is very difficult for any legislative body to impose a national game on the people without at least having some idea that they approve.

I see it is six o'clock, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Batten): Order. The hour for the consideration of private Members business has expired.

At six o'clock the House adjourned, without question put, pursuant to Standing Order.

APPENDIX "A"

STUDENT LOANS PLAN—STATEMENT AND REPORTS

11 June, 1965.

Statement by the Minister of Finance on the Canada Student Loans Plan

When I reported on the Canada Student Loans Plan to the House last November, about 29,000 students had then been assisted by means of Canada Student Loans in the first two months of the new program. Total loans authorized at that time amounted to about $20 million. Since then, students have continued to make good use of this Plan and according to the latest figures available, as of April 1, 1965, over 41,000 students had been issued Certificates of Eligibility by the provincial authorities for a total amount of some $26 million. This means that the actual utilization of allocations by participating provinces during the current loan year will be quite close to the total provided for in the Act.

In my last statement I explained that, after the Plan had been in operation for a few months, it became apparent that a number of administrative problems encountered by the participating provinces were the result of varying practices in handling student aid, and that a concerted effort was being made to seek a greater degree of harmony in these practices. To this end, provincial officials and officials of the Department of Finance have met on several occasions during recent months to work out a common approach to these administrative problems.

The problems fall into three categories: the principles and criteria which the provincial authorities should apply in determining the size of loan (if any) which the student needs; the standard residence rules to be used in determining the province to which students should apply for Certificates of Eligibility; and, finally, questions relating to the designation by the provinces of educational institutions and related matters.

The federal-provincial representatives have prepared reports on each of the three areas I have mentioned. These reports have been accepted recently by a full federal-provincial meeting, at which representatives of all participating provinces and the federal government were present.

Because of the responsibilities which the provinces have assumed in the implementation of the Plan, these reports deal primarily with aspects of the student loan program which fall within the jurisdiction of the Provincial administrators. Indeed, the understandings reached in each of these reports reflect the experience and expertise of provincial authorities in the field of student assistance. I would like to express my appreciation to the representatives of all the provinces and territories for their efforts. The application of these reports will, I feel sure, make a major contribution to the effectiveness of this student aid program, and I can affirm that the reports carry the full support of the federal government.

The first report deals with the difficult question of how best to administer the provision of the Act which requires that the Certificate of Eligibility issued to a student should indicate that "the student is considered to be in need of a student loan for the academic year . . . in order to pursue a course of studies." We have learned from experience this year that a reasonably standard approach to this question is highly desirable, if not essential. It is in the general interests of the Plan to ensure that the available funds are utilized to assist only those students who genuinely need assistance. This means that the provincial administrators need guidelines to ensure that student needs will be measured in much the same way in all participating provinces. Also, a standard approach is needed to provide more concrete guidance to students in submitting their loan applications.

In considering the question of the financial needs of students, it is assumed that responsibility for the costs of post-secondary education of the individual student remains primarily with the parent or family of dependant students, or with the student himself where he is not a dependant. It is also recognized, however, that governments at all levels are interested in supplementing their available resources in order to ensure that all qualified students have the opportunity to reach their educational potential. These premises are set out in detail in the report.

It follows from these premises that, as a general rule, the parents' income should be taken into account in assessing a student's need for a loan. The report therefore spells out in some detail how a student's need is to be determined, taking into account both the costs of continuing his education and the financial resources that are available to him. However, the report also provides for an appeal procedure where an applicant feels that this assessment is inadequate or where the circumstances have changed since the application was first made. The applicant may, in these circumstances, re-apply or appeal his case, in accordance with the policies of the provinces concerned. I think that this is a very important feature and I am confident that, as a result, a loan will be made to any student who really needs a loan, and who meets the other requirements.

Provincial officials and representatives of the Department of Finance will be meeting again next week with the objective of ensuring the implementation of these criteria as uniformly as possible in all participating provinces.

The second report on questions of residence establishes the principles to be used in determining which province is the appropriate one to handle a student's application. Participating provinces are, as a matter of policy, issuing Certificates only to their own residents. However, with a mobile population—and an even more mobile student body—the question of residence can be complicated and controversial. Initially, provinces did not apply the same definition of residence, so that some students experienced difficulty in having their application considered by what they thought was the appropriate province. The report establishes agreement among the participating provinces on full reciprocity in the application of the same residence definitions. In addition, it has been agreed that the ultimate goal is to have complete reciprocity on the question of residence with the Province of Quebec, which does not participate in the federal Plan.

I am glad to mention that the student-aid authorities in Quebec participated fully in working out the common guidelines, and their experience in operating their own program of student aid was of considerable help to the other members of these committees.

The third report deals with a number of miscellaneous but nevertheless important subjects such as the criteria for designation of educational institutions, definitions of what is meant by "post-secondary" school level, "Satisfactory scholastic standard" and "academic year". The understandings that have been reached will serve to assure equitable and standard rules in all the provinces.

This report does not deal with the question of what type or types of private schools, if any, should be eligible for designation by a province as a "specified educational institution" within the meaning of the Act. This is a difficult subject and is still under active consideration. As soon as agreement has been reached, it will be announced.

The principles and procedures reflected in these three reports should come into effect starting with the new loan year which begins in July. As I have said earlier, they can be expected to contribute significantly in making the operation of the Plan more effective and equitable, and should help to ensure that all Canadian students who genuinely need assistance to finance their education will obtain it.

The high degree of success which this Plan has enjoyed is due to a large extent to the constructive spirit of cooperation of the provinces and territories, and the lending agencies. The Plan was initiated shortly before the beginning of the academic year last Fall. It is to the credit of the provincial authorities administering the Plan that it was possible to implement it so quickly and so effectively.

CANADA STUDENT LOANS PLAN

Approved Report of the Federal-Provincial Standing Committee on Concept of Students' Need

1. The premises on which the concepts of need are based include the following:—

(a) The responsibility for the costs of post-secondary education to the individual student remains primarily with the parent (guardian or immediate family) where the student is a dependant or with the student where he is not a dependant.

(b) Governments at all levels are interested in supplementing family/student resources and resources available through educational institutions, where needed to ensure that all qualified students have the opportunity to reach their educational potential.

(c) It is desirable that the concepts and criteria used by governments and institutions in determining the need for loans, bursaries and other forms of assistance to students should be co-ordinated within a province by a provincial authority.

(d) It is possible to co-ordinate among the provinces the concepts and criteria of need applied in administering federal assistance in this field.

2. Both the costs of education and resources available to the student should be taken into account in developing the concepts of need.

The following criteria should be employed:

A. Costs of Education

The following costs should be taken into account in determining need:

(1) Fees—All compulsory fees of the educational institution.

(2) Prescribed Books and Instruments.

(3) Board and Lodging During the Academic Year Single Students.

(i) Institutional Residence—as charged by the institution.

(ii) Board and lodging away from home, based on average costs in the region concerned.

(iii) Students living at home will be given an allowance against student resources.

Married Students: Board and lodging allowance in accordance with the rate for a single student established as above may be allowed for each married student attending an institution. (A reasonable amount will be deductible from the financial resources of a married student (B below) to reflect the additional costs of maintaining a household.)

(4) A Reasonable Allowance for Clothing, Laundry, Dry-Cleaning and Recreational Costs.

(5) Transportation: (a) From permanent residence in Canada to institution in Canada: One return trip a year, the cost not to exceed the equivalent of the cost of the most economical means based on costs of public transportation.

(b) From permanent residence in Canada to institution outside of Canada: An allowance which will equal the lesser of one return trip a year by the most economical transportation, or a maximum amount established by the provinces.

(c) A reasonable allowance for Local Transportation.

(6) Premiums for Hospital and Medical Prepayment Plans.

B. Student Financial Resources

(1) Resources of Parents/Guardian: Parents' personal taxable income including income on assets are factors to be taken into account, and will be shown in application forms unless the student is married or can establish that he is completely independent financially from his parents/guardian.

(2) Students' Own Resources: (a) Summer Earnings; (b) Assets.

(i) Car (state value); (ii) Other Assets.

(c) Earnings During the Academic Year; (d) Scholarships, Bursaries and Tuition Grants.

(3) Spouse's Gross Income

3. General Recommendations: (1) Where an applicant feels that the award is inadequate or circumstances have changed since the award was made, the applicant may reapply or appeal his case in accordance with the policy of the province concerned. In all participating provinces, except Ontario, such re-application or appeal is to be made to the provincial authority; in Ontario, it is to be made to the institution attended if located within the province, or to the Provincial Authority for Ontario residents studying outside Ontario.

(2) A declaration shall be made by the student in his application of the same force and effect as if made under oath by virtue of the Canada Evidence Act, and where applicable by the parent/guardian.

(3) These premises and criteria are acceptable to provincial and federal governments, and the federal and all provincial authorities will co-operate in giving full publicity to them.

4. Continuing attention will be given to developing a common application form for use in the provinces.

The above report was accepted on March 29, 1965, by a full federal-provincial meeting, including representatives of all participating provinces and the federal government.

Approved Report of the Federal-Provincial Committee on Residence

(I) Criteria for Determination of Issuing Province for students from Participating Provinces (Except as in (II) Below)

A distinction is made between Group A: Unmarried students who receive financial support from parents, guardians or foster parents; and Group B: Students who are married or who can establish to the satisfaction of the Appropriate Authority or its agent that they are completely independent financially.

In the case of Group A, a student's Issuing Province is:

(a) the province where his parents, guardians or foster parents reside; or

(b) the province where his family's home is being maintained, even if one of his parents works in another province; or

(c) if parents are separated or divorced, the province where that parent (father or mother) resides with whom the student normally lives or from whom he receives his principal financial support if he lives with neither; or

(d) if parents, guardians or foster parents live abroad (e.g., armed services), the province where they last lived before going abroad.

Where the persons whose residence determines a student's Issuing Province move to another province, the province to which they have moved becomes the student's new Issuing Province as of the date of the move.

In the case of Group B, a student establishes residence in his own right. For Group B students, however, there will be a time lag of not less than 12 consecutive months before residence is established in a new province. A participating province continues to be the Issuing Province of a student in Group B who leaves that province, until the student has spent 12 consecutive months in another participating province which latter province then becomes the Issuing Province.

A landed immigrant who has been in Canada for one year or more, but who does not qualify for residence in a participating province as outlined above, may be considered to be a resident in the participating province in which he lives when applying for a Certificate.

If a student's application for a Certificate is refused on the grounds that he is not a resident of the province to which he applied, his application will be redirected to his province of origin.

(II) Pro Tem Criteria for the Determination of Issuing Province for Students in the Case of Moves in Either Direction Between a Participating Province and a Non-Participating Province

The objective as regards residence criteria is complete reciprocity between participating and non-participating provinces. Pending further consultation between Quebec and the participating provinces, the latter are prepared to proceed on the following basis:

(i) If the parents, guardians or foster parents of an unmarried student receiving financial support from them, or if students who are married or who have established that they are completely independent financially, move from a participating province to the Province of Quebec, the Province of Issue prior to the move remains the Province of Issue of these students until they qualify for student assistance from the Province of Quebec under that province's residence rules.

(ii) In the case of a student moving from Quebec to a participating province, that participating province will apply the same residence criteria as if the student came from a participating province.

CANADA STUDENT LOANS PLAN

Approved Report of Federal-Provincial Committee on Designation of Educational Institutions and Related Definitions

1. Criteria for Designation of Educational Institutions.

The Act provides that student loans are intended for students taking courses at a post-secondary school level. Accordingly, it is agreed that post-secondary educational institutions, including such institutions outside Canada, be designated by the individual provinces on the basis of academic entrance requirements and course content.

It is further agreed that no course or institution be designated if the requirements for entrance to the course or institution are below the level generally accepted in the designating province as complete high school.

2. Private Educational Institutions.

[An agreed text to be incorporated later.]

3. Post-Secondary School Level of Course or Courses.

This means a course of study provided by specified educational institutions for which the generally accepted entrance requirements include the successful completion of high school in the designating province.

4. Satisfactory Scholastic Standard.

A student who is accepted for enrolment by a designated institution in an approved course may be considered by a provincial authority to have achieved a "satisfactory scholastic standard".

5. Definition of Academic Year (Trimester and Semester).

Where an academic year overlaps two loan years the student, on the initial application, may be granted only that amount of loan required to finance the portion of the course which will be completed during the first loan year and instructed to re-apply for the amount required to finance the portion of the academic year which occurs during the second loan year. It is understood that the combined loans in a single academic year will not exceed $1,000.

The present legislation does not take into account the additional needs of students who attend institutions operating on the trimester system, since such students are limited to loans of $1,000 per academic year, even though the course of studies takes approximately one year less than a similar course taken at another institution. It is suggested that this question be re-considered when the Act is being reviewed.

The above report was accepted on March 29, 1965, by a full federal-provincial meeting, including representatives of all participating provinces and the federal government.

APPENDIX "B"

PROVISIONAL ORDERS EFFECTIVE UNTIL THE END OF THE NEXT ENSUING SESSION.

Ordered

1. (a) That detailed examination of estimates, saving always the right of the Committee of Supply, be undertaken by Standing Committees and that not more than 30 days of the time of the House be allocated to the business of supply in each session. For the purpose of this order, the business of supply shall consist of main estimates; interim supply; and supplementary or additional estimates excepting supplementary or additional estimates introduced after the main estimates have been approved, and excepting always the final supplementary or additional estimates;

(b) That the number of supply motions be reduced from six to four; and

(c) That a Special Committee of the House consisting of twenty-four members, to be designated later by the House, be instructed to prepare and to submit to the House forthwith the changes in Standing Orders consequential upon these orders, including any means of giving to the opposition an opportunity to select the departmental estimates to be discussed.

2. That the orders of this House under numbered paragraph 1, and the changes in Standing Orders consequential upon this Order, be continued in effect until the end of the next ensuing session, unless this House otherwise orders.

Ordered—Standing Order

6.(1) At 6:00 o'clock p.m. on Wednesdays and Fridays and at 10:00 o'clock p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, unless provided otherwise in these Standing Orders, Mr. Speaker shall adjourn the House without question put until the next sitting day.

(2) A motion that the House continue to sit after the hour specified in Section (1) may be made at any time without notice. If any member objects to the motion, Mr. Speaker shall request those members who object to rise in their places and if ten or more members then rise, the question shall not be put on the motion. If no member objects, or if fewer than ten members rise in their places, the motion shall be deemed to be carried. No debate or formal vote shall be held on such a motion to extend a sitting during an extended sitting as provided under the provisions of this section, no Order shall be called for consideration unless such order was under consideration prior to the normal hour of adjournment. An extended sitting under the provisions of this Section, unless a closing time has been specified, shall not be terminated except by the adoption of a motion to adjourn and Mr. Speaker shall not deem that a motion to adjourn the House has been made by virtue of the operation of any other Standing Order.

(3) If any member objects to the taking of a vote at any time between 1:00 o'clock p.m. and 2:30 o'clock p.m. or between 6:00 o'clock p.m. and 8:00 o'clock p.m., Mr. Speaker shall request those members who object to rise in their places and if five or more members rise, the taking of the vote shall be postponed. At 2:30 o'clock p.m. or at 8:00 o'clock p.m., as the case may be, Mr. Speaker shall interrupt the proceedings then before the House and shall put, or shall cause to be put, the question on any postponed vote. The House shall be deemed to have reverted to private members' business for such time as is necessary for the taking of any vote postponed from the time provided for private members' business.

(4) When it is provided in any Standing Order or in any order of the House that the business under consideration at the ordinary time of adjournment be forthwith disposed of or concluded, Mr. Speaker shall not adjourn the House until the specified proceedings be completed.

Standing Order 12

12. (1) Mr. Speaker shall preserve order and decorum, and shall decide questions of order. In explaining a point of order or practice, he shall state the standing order or authority applicable to the case. No debate shall be permitted on any such decision, nor shall any such decision be subject to an appeal to the House.

Standing Order 15

15. (3) Except as otherwise provided in these Standing Orders, the order of business for the consideration of the House, day-by-day, after the daily routine shall be as follows:

(Monday)

Questions.
Government orders.
(From six to seven o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)

(Tuesday)

Government orders.
Questions.
(From six to seven o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)
Private bills.
Public bills.

(Wednesday)

Questions.
Notices of motions for the production of papers.
Government orders.
(From five to six o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)
Notices of Motions.
Public bills.

(Thursday)

Government orders.
Questions.
(From six to seven o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)

A. On the first and each alternate Thursday thereafter:
Notices of motions (papers).
Private bills.
Public bills.

B. On the second and each alternate Thursday thereafter:
Private bills.
Notices of motions (papers).
Public bills.

(Friday)

Government orders.
Questions.
(From five to six o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)
Public bills.
Private bills.
Notices of Motions.

(4) When a debate on a motion "That Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair" for the House to go into Committee of Supply is in progress at 6:00 o'clock p.m. on either a Monday or a Tuesday, the order for Private Members' Business on that day shall be suspended.

Standing Order 15-A

15-A. (1) There shall be a Business Committee to which the leader of each party in the House from time to time by written notice to the Speaker may appoint one member.

(2) During routine proceedings a Minister of the Crown may propose that the question of allocation of time for any item of business, unless otherwise provided for, be referred to the Business Committee, and upon such proposal being made that question shall stand referred to the Committee.

(3) The Business Committee shall report back to the House on or before the third sitting day following such reference.

(4) If the Chairman of the Business Committee reports that the Committee has unanimously recommended an allocation of time for the item of business or stage thereof, a Minister of the Crown may without notice propose a motion, to be decided without debate or amendment, for concurrence in the report, and, if agreed to, the motion shall have the same effect as if it were an order of the House.

(5) If the Chairman of the Business Committee reports that the committee has been unable to reach a unanimous agreement or if the committee fails to report within the time specified by Section (3) of this Standing Order, a Minister of the Crown, notwithstanding the provisions of Standing Order 41, may give notice of motion that at the next sitting of the House, provided that day is not a Wednesday, he will move that an order be made allocating the time for the item of business or stage thereof.

(6) A motion of which a Minister has given notice under Section (5) of this Standing Order shall be made during routine proceedings. Unless the debate on the motion has been previously concluded, Mr. Speaker shall at fifteen minutes before the expiry of the time provided for Government business in such sitting, interrupt the proceedings and forthwith put every question necessary to dispose of the main motion. A motion requesting allocation of time, if agreed to, shall have the same effect as if it were an order of the House.

(7) No motion made by a Minister under Sections (5) and (6) of this Standing Order shall provide for the allocation of a period of time less than two days for the second reading, two days for the committee stage, and one day for the third reading of any bill. For the purposes of this section, third reading shall be deemed to have been considered for one day provided the order for third reading is called as the first item under Government Orders on a Monday, Tuesday, Thursday or Friday, and provided

(8) During debate on any item of business or stage thereof for which an allocation of time has been made under this Standing Order, if an amendment is proposed which in the opinion of Mr. Speaker materially changes the item of business or stage thereof and which raises any issue for which in the opinion of Mr. Speaker there has not been or otherwise will not be an adequate opportunity for discussion, Mr. Speaker may announce an extension of not more than two days to the allocated period of time.

(9) The term "allocation of time", wherever used in this Standing Order, may include the allotting of time to any item of business, to any stage thereof, or to any part thereof, and may include the fixing of limits for the length of speeches.

Standing Order 18

18(2) Except as provided in Standing Orders 43 and 56, Government Orders may be called in such sequence as the Government may think fit.

Standing Order 31

31. (2) When the business of Private Members is being considered, no member shall speak for more than twenty minutes at a time.

Standing Order 39

39. (5) Before the Orders of the Day are proceeded with, questions on matters of urgency may be addressed orally to Ministers of the Crown, provided however that if in the opinion of Mr. Speaker a question is not urgent, he may direct that it be placed on the Order Paper, provided also that the time allowed for a question period prior to the calling of the Orders of the Day shall not exceed thirty minutes, except on Mondays when the time allowed for a question period prior to the calling of Orders of the Day shall not exceed one hour.

A member who is not satisfied with the answer given to a question asked on any day at this stage, or a member who has been told by Mr. Speaker that his question is not urgent, may give notice that he intends to raise the subject-matter of his question on the adjournment of the House. The notice referred to herein, whether or not it is given orally during the question period before the Orders of the Day, must be given in writing to Mr. Speaker not later than 5:00 o'clock p.m. the same day.

Standing Order 41

41-A. Unless notice of motion has been given under Standing Order 41, any member proposing to raise a question of privilege other than one arising out of proceedings in the Chamber during the course of a sitting shall give to the Speaker a written statement of the question at least one hour prior to raising the question in the House.

Standing Order 43

43. (2) When the debate on any motion made under Standing Order 15 (2) is adjourned or interrupted the order for resumption of the same shall be transferred to and considered as the first Order under Government Orders.

Standing Order 44

44. When a question is under debate no motion is received unless to amend it; to postpone it to a day certain; for the previous question; for reading the orders of the day; for proceeding to another order; to adjourn the debate; to extend the sitting of the House; or for the adjournment of the House.

Standing Order 59

59. (4) The Chairman shall maintain order in the Committees of the Whole House, deciding all questions of order subject to an appeal to Mr. Speaker; but disorder in a committee can only be censured by the House, on receiving a report thereof. No debate shall be permitted on any decision.

Standing Order 65

65. (1) At the commencement of each session, a special committee, consisting of seven members, shall be appointed, whose duty it shall be to prepare and report, within ten sitting days, after its appointment, lists of members to compose the following standing committees of the House:

(a) on Agriculture, Forestry, and Rural Development, to consist of 45 members;

(b) on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts, to consist of 24 members;

(c) on Crown Corporations, to consist of 24 members;

(d) on External Affairs, to consist of 24 members;

(e) on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, to consist of 24 members;

(f) on Fisheries, to consist of 24 members;

(g) on Health and Welfare, to consist of 24 members;

(h) on Housing, Urban Development and Public Works, to consist of 24 members;

(i) on Indian Affairs, Human Rights and Citizenship and Immigration, to consist of 24 members;

(j) on Industry, Research and Energy Development, to consist of 24 members;

(k) on Justice and Legal Affairs, to consist of 24 members;

(l) on Labour and Employment, to consist of 24 members;

(m) on Miscellaneous Estimates, to consist of 24 members;

(n) on Miscellaneous Private Bills, to consist of 24 members;

(o) on National Defence, to consist of 24 members;

(p) on Northern Affairs and National Resources, to consist of 24 members;

(q) on Privileges and Elections, to consist of 24 members;

(r) on Public Accounts, to consist of 24 members;

(s) on Standing Orders, to consist of 24 members;

(t) on Transport and Communications, to consist of 24 members; and

(u) on Veterans Affairs to consist of 24 members.

(2) The Special Committee shall also prepare and report with all convenient speed, lists of members to compose the following standing committees:

On Printing, to act as members on the part of this House on the Joint Committee of both Houses on the subject of the printing of Parliament, to consist of 23 members;

On the Library of Parliament, so far as the interests of this House are concerned, and to act as members of the Joint Committee of both Houses, to consist of 21 members;

Provided that a sufficient number of members of joint committees shall be appointed so as to keep the same proportion in such committees as between the memberships of the House of Commons and Senate.

(3) A majority of the members of a standing committee shall constitute a quorum unless the House otherwise orders;

Provided that, in the case of a joint committee, the number of members constituting a quorum shall be such as the House of Commons acting in consultation with the Senate may determine.

(4) The Standing Committee shall be severally empowered to examine and enquire into all such matters and things as may be referred to them by the House; to report from time to time their observations and opinions thereon; to send for persons, papers and records; and to print, from day-to-day, such papers and evidence as may be ordered by them, and Standing Order 66 shall not apply in relation thereto.

(5) Any member of the House of Commons who is not a member of a standing committee, may, unless the House or the standing committee otherwise orders, take part in the deliberations of the standing committee, but shall not vote or move any motion or any amendment or be counted in the quorum.

Standing Order 68

68-A In any standing or special committee of the House questions of order shall be decided by the chairman, subject only to an appeal to the committee.

Standing Order 99

99. No Bill for the incorporation of a railway or canal company, or for authorizing the construction of branch lines or extensions of existing lines of railways or of canals, or for changing the route of the railway or of the canal of any company already incorporated, shall be considered by the Committee on Transport and Communications, until there has been filed with the committee, at least one week before the consideration of the bill, a map or plan drawn upon a scale of not less than half an inch to the mile, showing the location upon which it is intended to construct the proposed work, and showing also the lines of existing or authorized works of a similar character within, or in any way affecting the district, or any part thereof, which the proposed work is intended to serve; and such map or plan shall be signed by the engineer or other person making the same.

Standing Order 105

105. Every private bill, when read a second time, is referred to one of the standing committees as follows: bills relating to banks, insurance, trade and commerce and to trust and loan companies, to the Committee on

Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs; bills relating to railways, canals, telegraphs, canal and railway bridges, to the Committee on Transport and Communications; the bills not coming under these classes, to the Committee on Miscellaneous Private Bills, and all petitions for or against the bills are considered as referred to such committee.

That the said amendments to the Standing Orders be continued in effect until the end of the next ensuing session unless this House otherwise orders.

PRIVILEGE

MR. KNOWLES—ERRORS IN PRINTING OF PROVISIONAL STANDING ORDERS

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege, notice of which I sent to Your Honour in writing at nine o'clock this morning under the provisions of the new Standing Order 41A. I have also discussed it with Your Honour, with the officers at the table and with the Government House Leader who is unfortunately not able to be here at this moment.

My point relates to two rather major errors in the Provisional Orders which we adopted last week as printed in the appendices to Friday's Hansard and Friday's Votes and Proceedings. The first error relates to the new Standing Order 15A, the one that provides for the allocation of time. The special committee of nine which brought in a report Friday morning recommended amongst other things the inclusion of a new paragraph 9. That paragraph has been omitted from page 2309 of Hansard and from page 6 of the appendix to Votes and Proceedings for Friday. In both cases the new paragraph 9 needs to be inserted and the old paragraph 9 needs to be renumbered as paragraph 10. This error was not made in the body of Votes and Proceedings, but it was made in the appendix to Hansard and the appendix to Votes and Proceedings in both the English and the French editions.

The second error relates to Standing Order 6, section 2. During the discussion of this matter in Committee of the Whole on Thursday this section was amended by inserting therein a new sentence which reads as follows:

> During an extended period, as provided under the provisions of this section, no order shall be called for consideration unless such order was under consideration prior to the normal hour of adjournment.

The record of that amendment having been passed will be found in Hansard for Thursday, June 10, at page 2211. However, in Friday's Hansard at page 2307, in Votes and Proceedings at page 3 of the appendix and also in the body of Votes and Proceedings at page 224, inserting this additional sentence has resulted in a certain amount of garbling so we have several lines that really do not make any sense. This same error appears in the French editions, in the appendices to both Hansard and Votes and Proceedings, but the French edition of the body of Votes and Proceedings does not carry this particular error.

Obviously, Mr. Speaker, I am not attaching any blame for these errors. They are the kind of errors that could easily be made last week. It was obvious also to Your Honour when I discussed this matter with you this morning, and I am sure it will be obvious to all hon. members, that the working documents we will need for the rules of the House should be correct. I suggest, therefore, that the appendices that were added to Hansard and Votes and Proceedings on Friday might be reprinted correctly and made appendices to Hansard and Votes and Proceedings for today.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I am sure the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre will agree with me that there is no valid question of privilege but a very good point of order. A close study of the appendices of both Hansard and Votes and Proceedings of Friday last confirms the printing error to which the hon. Member has referred. I assume there will be unanimous consent to the reprinting of the appendices in corrected form in today's Hansard and Votes and Proceedings.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

[Editor's note: For corrected provisional orders see appendix "B"]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

TABLING OF COMMUNIQUÉ FOLLOWING VISIT BY PRIME MINISTER OF INDIA

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I should like to table the joint communiqué issued after the meetings we had with the Prime Minister of India, meetings which I believe were both pleasant and productive. I should like to ask, if the House agrees, that this be printed as an appendix to today's Hansard.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

[Editor's note: For text of communiqué see appendix "A"]

FOOD AND DRUGS

FIRST REPORT OF SPECIAL COMMITTEE

Mr. H. C. Harley (Halton): Mr. Speaker, I desire to present the first report of the Special Committee on Foods and Drugs. Later by unanimous consent I intend to move concurrence.

[Note: Text of foregoing report appears in today's Votes and Proceedings]

[Later:]

Mr. Harley: Mr. Speaker, by unanimous consent I move that the first report of the Special Committee on Food and Drugs, presented this day, be now concurred in.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, for a special reason we ask that consideration of this motion be deferred for 48 hours, as provided under the standing orders, and that regular notice be given, so that the motion might be studied in two days from now.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Since there is not unanimous consent the motion cannot be put at this time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

TABLING OF REPORT OF INTERNAL ECONOMY COMMISSION

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I be permitted to lay before the House, on behalf of Mr. Speaker, an extract from the minutes of a meeting of the Commissioners of Internal Economy, held on June 10, 1965, relating to classification changes affecting a number of positions in the House of Commons.

[Note: Text of foregoing report appears in today's Votes and Proceedings]

COMMONWEALTH CONFERENCE

STATEMENT BY PRIME MINISTER RESPECTING MEMBERSHIP AND AGENDA

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am leaving later this day to attend the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference which opens in London on June 17. All members of the Commonwealth will be represented at this conference by their Prime Ministers or by Ministers designated by the Prime Minister, I believe, in one or two instances.

The members of the conference will now include—and this is quite a change, as my right hon. friend will recall, from days not so long ago at Commonwealth Prime Ministers' meetings—the following in order of seniority inside the Commonwealth: Great Britain, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India, Pakistan, Ceylon, Ghana, Malaysia, Nigeria, Cyprus, Sierre Leone, Tanzania, Jamaica, Trinidad and Tobago, Uganda, Kenya, Malawi, Malta, Zambia and Gambia; 21 members in all.

All but four of these countries have been admitted to the Commonwealth since 1947. Indeed, all but seven have joined the Commonwealth since 1957. Of the 21 members three are from Europe, if you include the islands of Cyprus and Malta—I am not certain where they belong geographically—three are from the western hemisphere, two from Australasia, four from Asia and nine from Africa.

It is not the custom at these conferences to have an agreed and formal agenda before a conference begins, but the agenda which will be submitted on Thursday by the host Prime Minister, Mr. Wilson of the United Kingdom, I think I can say without impropriety will include the following items which I have no reason to believe will not be formally adopted as items of the agenda:

(a) The world political situation, and under it the following subheadings: problems in Asia and the Far East, which will include the Indonesian-Malayan difficulty, Viet Nam, and relations generally with China.

(b) Problems in Africa, and this undoubtedly will include consideration of the question of Rhodesia and the present situation there.

(c) Problems in Europe.

(d) East-west relations generally.

(e) Disarmament and United Nations peace keeping problems.

Then the question of the progress toward independence of British dependant territories which have not yet reached independent status will come up for discussion, and it may well be that the question of Rhodesia will be discussed under this item rather than the one I have just mentioned.

Then there will be a discussion of economic affairs, the general world economic situation, the possibilities of developing inter-Commonwealth trade, and problems of economic development generally. Also, Mr. Speaker, the question of a Commonwealth secretariat, which was considered at the last meeting, will be discussed in terms of the terms of reference of the secretariat and the appointment of a secretary general.

Finally, Mr. Speaker—and this is a matter that was mentioned in the House of Commons the other day—there will be discussed the question of a Commonwealth parliamentary assembly, which was suggested by the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom.

That is all I think I can usefully say about the meeting at this stage. When I return I will, of course, be happy to report to the House about the conference. I think I can say with some assurance that the meeting, which will be considering matters of very great importance to the Commonwealth and to the world in which the members of the Commonwealth play such an important part, will further strengthen the relationships among the members of this great association of free nations which now spans all the continents.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the privilege that comes to a Prime Minister to attend a Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference is one of the most challenging opportunities that can come to anyone.

The Prime Minister has spoken of the tremendous growth of the Commonwealth, pointing out that of the present membership of 21 all but seven have joined since 1957. The expansion has been phenomenal, and the past informality of these conferences has been maintained despite this increase in the membership.

My first words to the Prime Minister will be words of good wishes in the mission that he goes on. I wish him Godspeed and a return with that inspiration which comes from attendance at such conferences.

He has mentioned some of the matters that will arise. One of them has to do with further transitions from colonialism to independence, and I have but one word to add in that connection. In 1961 and 1962 I took the stand in the Prime Ministers' Conference that no nation within the Commonwealth should permit itself the luxury of practising discrimination as a foundation or principle. That today is accepted, but I should like to add that in my opinion no nation, no colony desiring to join this commonwealth, should be accepted if its political philosophy constitutes support for communism. I think this is a necessary consequence and should be accepted as a principle of membership. To do otherwise would be to place the members of the Commonwealth in the position of having within their ranks those who would destroy that parliament of nations bound together neither by seal nor sword but constituting for the world an example of what freedom loving nations can achieve when operating in concert.

Mention was made of one or two matters which will come up for consideration. One is the idea of a commonwealth secretariat. As an experiment in bringing about closer unity I think a secretariat could perform a worthwhile function in providing a continuing group for the exchange of information and an understanding of the problems of other members. But I do hope we shall not give adherence to a secretariat having executive powers. The other day I asked a question regarding the Commonwealth Assembly. I had hoped we might have found some time to discuss this question. We all recall the days of Joseph Chamberlain, who envisaged a new concept of empire in which representatives of the component parts would meet at Westminster. With the passing years that concept has been outgrown and outmoded. Call it what you will, I hope the Prime Ministers will not come to a conclusion that anything in the nature of a representative or parliamentary institution should be set up within the Commonwealth.

My reasons for that are simple. First, such a step would be a retrograde one; and second, if determinations of policies were to be made or recommended, then you would have a central institution which would vote, which is the only way in which democratic assembly decisions can be made. If there is one thing that we must guard against in the Commonwealth—and this applies particularly to the Prime Ministers' Conference—it is that. We should never have a vote. If we were to establish within the Commonwealth, at the Prime Ministers' Conference, the exercise of a vote by the various component, representative countries, it would not be very long before the Commonwealth would cease to exist; for none of us, I think I can say—certainly not Canada, and I know of no other country—would accept the principle that a majority vote among Commonwealth Prime Ministers would in any way be acceptable.

Then there is a third matter, and the Prime Minister did not refer to this. It has been suggested that there should be a Commonwealth court to adjudicate on disputes that arise between member nations within the Commonwealth. Personally I think such an institution might be an effective one. I realize that there are arguments against it; but at the same time when I think of the situation now existing between India and Pakistan in reference to the Rann of Kutch area and other disputes that I could speak of, I ask myself whether there is any reason that the nations of the Commonwealth should not be able to make one further advance and bring about the establishment of a court, a constitutional court if you will, to deal with matters arising between Commonwealth countries.

I am not going to say anything about the unfortunate events of the last two or three days in Ottawa in connection with this matter, but I do feel that so long as there are disputes between the member nations of the Commonwealth and no means of solving them except through the instrumentality of the Prime Ministers' Conference and other diplomatic, behind the scenes discussion, the acceptance of the principle of a Commonwealth constitutional court is not beyond possibility. It might indeed provide for the settlement of matters that at the present time seem almost insoluble.

I would repeat to the Prime Minister what I said earlier. We wish him well. We hope the conference will be a success. These conferences pass from year to year creating new precedents. My own impression is that we are closer in the Commonwealth today than we were 15 years ago, and the reason for that relationship is the fact that each of the nations endeavours to understand the other and under the Queen, either as Sovereign or as head of the Commonwealth, we bring before the world an example of what nations dissimilar in colour and religion, from all parts of the world and in all states of economic development, can achieve when there is a will to do so.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I am sure we all desire to thank the Prime Minister for giving us some idea of the various items which will be discussed at the Commonwealth Prime Ministers Conference, and I am sure the people of Canada hope the results of these consultations and deliberations will be beneficial not only to Canada but to the world at large.

In these days of power blocs there is a good deal of cynicism about the role which a free association of free nations can play in world affairs. My own personal view is that the Commonwealth has an important role to play. While it does not have a central government and is not bound together by binding treaties, it does bring together Governments of peoples from every part of the world including Asia, Africa, Europe, the western hemisphere and Australasia, and enables peoples of many tongues and races to meet together with a common loyalty to common democratic objectives.

I think such a meeting cannot do anything but good. Only time, of course, will prove whether or not this free association of free people can play an important part in world affairs. I feel certain that in view of the type of men who will be representing the Commonwealth at this conference they will be capable of making a great contribution.

I am glad to see that the matter of Commonwealth trade is going to be discussed. Commonwealth trade is unfortunately very much like what Mark Twain said about the weather; everybody talks about it, but not very much is done about it. There are great possibilities within this field, and Canada with its present imbalance of payments could benefit from expanded Commonwealth trade. I trust out of these discussions some policies and trade negotiations will be set up which will increase Canada's trade with other parts of the Commonwealth.

I hope the same opportunity will be given for discussions in respect of external aid within the Commonwealth. As the Prime Minister knows, I have frequently suggested that one of the things Canada might well consider is concentrating its external aid efforts on Commonwealth countries within the western hemisphere, adopting them as our special consideration. I am not suggesting that we should do less elsewhere but that we should do more for those small nations that have very serious economic problems and that are at our back door. In this category there are both French and English areas in the western hemisphere. These are areas which we could help very easily, and with which we have close contact. This is one area of assistance that might be discussed at this Conference.

I am sure all Members of this House, certainly the Members of this group, wish the Prime Minister well as he goes to the Conference. We trust and are sure that Canada will be ably represented, and we are proud to have the Prime Minister speak on behalf of the people of Canada. We wish him well and hope he will have a very happy and successful trip.

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege to join with others in this House in thanking the Prime Minister for outlining the program he expects to be dealing with at the coming Commonwealth Conference, and also in wishing him success in the particular role, of which I am very conscious, that he will be carrying on at this particular Conference. We know of the number of delicate problems which will be dealt with and the rather unique position he presently holds in the confidence of the Prime Ministers of the Commonwealth. We know also the responsibility he faces and that this Conference will not be an easy one.

It is rather significant that this Conference is to be held just preceding the Afro-Asian Conference. Last year the Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference was held just before the African Unity Conference at Cairo, and we know how much influence the Commonwealth Conference had on some of those who played an important role in the OAU Conference. It might likewise be anticipated that this Conference will have a good influence on the outcome of the Afro-Asian Conference which follows it.

It is also rather unique that this year—and I think this places special focus on the importance of this years' Conference—is the 750th anniversary of the Magna Carta and the 700th anniversary of the first parliamentary government. Certainly there is a tremendous lesson in this fact particularly for the newer members of the Commonwealth. There is no doubt that the greatest heritage we have from Great Britain is that tradition of parliamentary Government such as we follow here in our parliamentary set-up. This is something very necessary today in the world if the freedoms of the individual and the potential development of free democratic processes are to be fulfilled in these newer countries as well.

I found the remarks of the Leader of the Official Opposition interesting when he referred to the fact that, if things continue as they are now, it might well be possible that the Commonwealth will include a nation with a communist-inclined government. I join with him in questioning whether such could be possible in view of the tradition of parliamentary democracy that is so characteristic of the Commonwealth. It is important, however, to remember that in respect of these problems he voiced there are similar conditions at present which might be just as difficult to reconcile with a parliamentary Government and which threaten to remove from some of the associated Commonwealth nations some of the genuine freedoms of a democratic way of life.

We noted that the Prime Minister mentioned a number of the important items on the agenda. We are particularly conscious of the decision that is to be made as to whether there is to be a Commonwealth secretariat. It was of interest to note this morning that the Australian Prime Minister has already voiced his opposition to such a set-up. On the other hand, we in Canada have one of the leading contenders for the position of Secretary General of such an organization. Certainly the future of the new Commonwealth is closely related to this decision, and to the decision as to whether there might be a Commonwealth parliamentary assembly.

These decisions, I am sure we all agree, are those which will determine the direction the Commonwealth will take in future years. I am sure that out of this current meeting decisions will be forthcoming which will set the course for the new Commonwealth which I am confident is going to emerge, and which must come about if in the years ahead it is to carry out its responsibility with the same degree of success it has had in past years.

Therefore we join with all Members of this House in wishing the Prime Minister and those who will accompany him great success at this very important and responsible meeting of the Commonwealth.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, the right hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Pearson) will soon leave to attend the conference of the Commonwealth prime ministers. I hope he arrives in London in time to attend the decoration ceremony of the "Beatles" who were made members of the Order of the British Empire. In my opinion, this will be a memorable ceremony, and the Prime Minister of Canada should attend it.

Some 40 years ago, more precisely at the end of the first World War, my father was created commander of the Order of the British Empire. But times have changed since; we do not hear any more about the British Empire, except as regards decorations. We hear about the Commonwealth; the institution formerly called the British Empire has become a democratic association of free countries which discuss on an equal footing their common problems.

I express the wish that the discussions which will take place at the forthcoming commonwealth Prime Ministers' conference will benefit all member countries.

The Prime Minister referred to the possible setting up of a commonwealth parliamentary assembly. I wonder what would be the purpose of establishing such an assembly, when we already have the commonwealth parliamentary association, an informal association without any official jurisdiction.

What problems would this commonwealth parliamentary assembly discuss? Would it have to make certain decisions on behalf of commonwealth countries? Which matters would come under its jurisdiction?

Mr. Speaker, I wonder if that type of Commonwealth Assembly is indicated, or if it would not rather tend to withdraw certain privileges from each of its members.

I do wish the Prime Minister an excellent trip to England. I am sure the members of the house will, in the meantime, endeavour to accomplish as much as possible in the way of adopting legislation so that, upon his return, he can give us a report on his trip and the discussions that will have taken place. I also hope the legislative program he proposed last week will have been completed, for the welfare of the Canadian people, and that he will be pleased with the work performed during his absence from the house.

We, therefore, wish him "bon voyage" and, in the meantime, we will attend to adopting as many legislative measures as possible.

[English]

Mr. Pearson: Mr. Speaker, perhaps I may be permitted to thank my right hon. friend and the other party leaders for their good wishes, and to assure them I am looking forward to the conference. I will work hard in London, right through the dinner hour if necessary, and I am looking forward to my return with even greater anticipation.

QUESTIONS

(Questions answered orally are indicated by an asterisk.)

REPRESENTATIONS BY ASSOCIATION OF OPTOMETRISTS

Question No. 43—Mr. Lambert:

1. Did the Minister of National Health and Welfare receive a delegation from the Canadian Association of Optometrists on March 23, 1965, and did this delegation meet other members of the Cabinet?
2. What was the nature of the representations made?
3. What is the Minister's reaction and is it anticipated that early decisions in regard to them will be called for?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Minister of National Health and Welfare): 1. It was not possible for the Minister of National Health and Welfare to meet with the delegation from the Canadian Association of Optometrists on March 23, 1965. However, at the Minister's request, this delegation did meet with the Deputy Minister of National Health on April 7, 1965.

2. The delegation from the Association expressed its views on the recommendations made by the Royal Commission on Health Services.

3. The views of the Canadian Association of Optometrists are being given the same careful consideration as is being extended to those of all interested parties.

SURVEY OF HARBOUR, SYDNEY, N.S.

Question No. 107—Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria):

1. Is the government now making a survey of the Sydney harbour and its facilities?
2. Who is in charge of such a survey; what is the purpose of the survey and what is the estimated period of time it will take to complete the survey?
3. What is the cost; when will the results be known and to whom will the results be made available?

Mr. Jean-Charles Cantin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): 1. A study on the ground was made last fall which has since been revised on the basis of later information.

2. The study was conducted by the interdepartmental group made up of officials of the Departments of Transport and Public Works. Its purpose was to examine proposals for harbour improvements that had been made by local interests.

3. No costs specific to the study were incurred. They were covered by normal departmental arrangements. The report was for the information of the Government.

RENTAL FOR RUNNING RIGHTS, PRINCE ALBERT—DEBDEN, SASK.

Question No. 260—Mr. Cadieu (Meadow Lake):

1. What rentals does the C.P.R. pay the C.N.R. for running rights over the C.N.R. line from Prince Albert to Debden, Saskatchewan?
2. Are these rentals paid annually and, if not, in what manner are the rentals paid?

Mr. Jean-Charles Cantin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The Management of Canadian National Railways advise as follows:

1 and 2. The Canadian Pacific shares in the operating cost on a wheelage basis and also contributes 50 per cent of the interest on the capital valuation. Rental payments are predicated on the principles of the original agreement dated September 17, 1930, and supplements thereto; payments vary from month to month dependant upon the proportion of use made of the facilities by Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

OWNERSHIP OF RAILWAY LINE, NORTH BATTLEFORD-MEDSTEAD, SASK.

Question No. 261—Mr. Cadieu (Meadow Lake):

1. Do the C.P.R. and the C.N.R. own a railway line jointly from North Battleford to Medstead, Saskatchewan?
2. If not, what rental payment does the C.P.R. pay the C.N.R. for travelling rights?

Mr. Jean-Charles Cantin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The Management of Canadian National Railways advise as follows:

1. No, the line of railway is owned by the Canadian National Railways.

2. The Canadian Pacific shares in the operating cost on a wheelage basis and also contributes 50 per cent of the interest on the capital valuation. Rental payments are predicated on the principles of the original agreement dated November 15, 1932. Payments vary from month to month.

LENGTH OF PRESENT PARLIAMENT

Question No. 378—Mr. Chapdelaine:

How long will this Parliament last?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Section 50 of the British North America Act provides that "Every House of Commons shall continue for Five Years from the Day of the Return of the Writs for choosing the House (subject to be sooner dissolved by the Governor General), and no longer." Thus the present Parliament can legally continue until May 8, 1968. Whether it will be dissolved at an earlier date depends on conditions and contingencies that cannot now be predicted or scheduled with certainty.

PILOTS EMPLOYED, SARNIA-PORT WELLER DISTRICT

Question No. 382—Mr. Smith:

1. How many Canadian pilots were employed in the Sarnia-Port Weller district in the 1964 shipping season?
2. How many Canadian pilots will be employed in the Sarnia-Port Weller district in the 1965 shipping season?
3. On an average, how many hours did each pilot work in the 1964 shipping season?
4. Did these pilots come within the terms of the Labour Standards Act and, if so, what steps, if any, are being taken so that their hours of work will comply with the provisions of this Act?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): I am informed by the Department of Transport and the President of the Privy Council as follows:

1. 33 Pilots.
2. 40 Pilots.
3. 2,733.5 hours on assignment, which includes actual pilotage, time in open water and waiting time on board ship in ports.
4. The Labour Standards Act did not become effective until April 1, 1965, and consequently pilots could not have come within its provisions in the 1964 season. It has been stated in the House by the Minister of Labour that, while the provisions of the Labour Standards Act do not apply in law to employees of the federal government, the principles set out in the law are accepted as the policy of the government in relation to its own personnel. The effect of the application of the hours of work provisions of the Act to the pilots employed in the Sarnia-Port Weller district is being examined along with the other problems relating to other groups, but no decision has yet been reached on this point.

ARDA EXPENDITURES BY PROVINCES

Question No. 467—Mr. Dionne:

What were the amounts spent each year in each of the provinces of Canada under the ARDA program since its implementation?

Hon. Maurice Sauvé (Minister of Forestry): The figures stated on page 2320 indicate federal funds only expended since the implementation of the ARDA program. However, the provinces have contributed a like amount but this information is not available.

DETAILS OF SEALING OPERATIONS

Question No. 538—Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria):

1. What was the yearly revenue, since 1954, for seal fisheries for Prince Edward Island and for the Magdalen Islands?

2. What was the number of ships engaged in sealing in the Gulf during the 1965 season?

3. How many aircraft sealing licences were issued for 1965?

4. What was the exact number of "white coats" taken in the Gulf in 1965 and, how many were taken (a) by each boat (b) by each aircraft?

Hon. H. J. Robichaud (Minister of Fisheries): 1. In the period 1954 to 1964, landings of seals in Prince Edward Island were reported for only three years, in which value to fishermen was as follows: 1958, $15,000; 1962, $70,200; 1964, $29,900.

On the Magdalen Islands, the value to fishermen during the same period was as follows: 1954, $14,600; 1955, $1,500; 1956, $101,700; 1957, $26,800; 1958, $23,800; 1959, $7,300; 1960, $42,400; 1961, $4,900; 1962, $29,700; 1963, $244,000; 1964, $517,600. Information for 1965 not yet available.

2. 11 small, 8 large.

3. 50.

4. In Gulf Area 2 as established by the Seal Protection Regulations there was a quota of 50,000, which was all taken. Final figures as to number of seals taken by boat and aircraft in this Area and in balance of Gulf are not yet available.

FOREIGN SHIPS IN SEALING OPERATIONS

Question No. 539—Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria):

1. How many foreign ships have been sealing in the Gulf area for each year since 1954?

2. Were the Canadian sealing ships' crews wholly composed of Canadians?

3. After the seal skins are purchased from the sealers, where do they end up and more specifically, in which country and through which channels?

[Mr. Sauvé.]

4. Does Canada re-import seal skins, as such, or processed into coats, souvenirs, boots and other articles?

Hon. H. J. Robichaud (Minister of Fisheries): 1. Years 1953 to 1963—1 in each year. 1964—4; 1965—nil.

2. In the Seal Protection Regulations there is no nationality requirement for issuance of a sealer's licence; hence, no information is available.

3. In 1964 Exports of seal skins (raw) from Canada were as follows:

Country	Number	Value
United Kingdom	25,384	$385,144
Austria	10	324
Belgium, Luxembourg	689	15,545
West Germany	4,131	110,694

INTERNATIONAL JOINT COMMISSION—GREAT LAKES WATER LEVELS

Question No. 560—Mr. Martineau:

1. What has been the outcome of public hearings on the problem of water levels in the Great Lakes held by the International Joint Commission?
2. What solutions have been proposed by the experts appearing before the I.J.C.?
3. Is it proposed to submit the James Bay Diversion plan, commonly know as the Grand Canal Project, originated by Thomas Kierans, of Sudbury, Ontario, for discussion before the I.J.C.?
4. Has the government communicated with Premier Robarts of Ontario or Premier Lesage of Quebec, or other members of their respective governments, inviting them to participate in a co-operative study of Northern water resources and if so (a) what has been their reply (b) what would be the scope of such studies (c) would it include the feasibility of exporting water to the U.S.A.?
5. Has the government considered setting up, in co-operation with the United States and the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, an over-all authority to study the whole question of North American water resources and to implement proposals made?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources): 1. I have been informed by the Canadian section of the International Joint Commission that the public hearings referred to were the preliminary sessions conducted by the Commission to give the customary opportunity to those interested to submit information and views on the problem under reference. They were held in Toronto; Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan; Windsor; and Chicago. The testimony given at these sessions by the 47 witnesses who appeared and the briefs submitted are presently under study by the Commission and its advisers.

2. I have been informed by the Canadian section of the International Joint Commission that the information and proposals submitted related primarily to the need of regulation of lake levels and the effects of specific levels on the various interests involved. The statements were for the most part non-technical in nature.

3. The terms of the Great Lakes Levels Reference transmitted to the International Joint Commission by the Governments of the United States and Canada quite properly confined its investigation and study to the natural drainage of the Great Lakes which constitute international or boundary waters. The Grand Canal scheme proposed by Mr. T. W. Kierans of Sudbury involves the utilization of resources owned by the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec. It is proposed that investigation and study of this scheme and other possibilities for diversion of Ontario and Quebec waters into the Great Lakes drainage be undertaken nationally under arrangements worked out between the federal and Ontario and Quebec provincial authorities.

4. (a) The Government has communicated with the Premiers of Ontario and of Quebec inviting their participation in a co-operative study of the diversion possibilities referred to in 3 above. Both Premiers have indicated that such a co-operative study would be acceptable in principle but the Premier of Quebec has indicated reservations which require clarification before completion of mutually acceptable study terms and conditions. This clarification is in progress.

(b) The exact scope of the study remains to be determined but in general it would include examination to determine the feasibility of diversion proposals already made and of other diversion possibilities which may exist.

(c) It is not intended to include the feasibility of exporting water to the United States.

5. No.

MR. JOHN RATZ—REPRESENTATIVE IN LABOUR DISPUTE

Question No. 605—Mr. Howe (Hamilton South):

1. Has Mr. John Ratz of the Personnel Division of the Department of Northern Affairs and National Resources been appointed to represent management on an arbitration board in the current dispute between Beach Foundries Limited of Ottawa and Local 641 of the United Auto Workers?

2. Has Mr. Ratz been given a leave of absence to participate on this board and, if so, will his salary continue during his absence?

3. Will Mr. Ratz be permitted to accept payment for his service on the arbitration board?

4. Are civil servants customarily permitted to act in a representative capacity in labour-management disputes?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources): 1. This employee was invited to serve as company nominee on the board of arbitration in question in a private capacity. He consulted the Department before accepting the nomination and the matter was reviewed with officials of the Civil Service Commission to determine whether there was any conflict with section 86 of the Civil Service Regulations with respect to holding office outside the Civil Service. It was decided there was no such conflict and Mr. Ratz was given permission to accept the nomination in a private capacity.

2. Mr. Ratz' participation on this board will be on his own time.

3. As Mr. Ratz will be acting in his capacity of a private citizen on this arbitration board, it will be at his option as to whether or not he accepts payment.

4. The permission given to Mr. Ratz to attend the board does not reflect a change in government policy which is broadly laid down in section 86 of the Civil Service Regulations and more specifically in P.C. 3/1440 of March 21, 1951.

PUBLICATION OF "THE CANADIAN MINERAL INDUSTRY"

Question No. 610—Mr. Caouette:

1. What year was the publication The Canadian Mineral Industry, 1961 published and distributed in (a) English (b) French?

2. Is this same publication available for 1962 and 1963 in (a) English (b) French?

3. If not, what are the reasons for not making this publication available?

Hon. W. M. Benidickson (Minister of Mines and Technical Surveys): 1. (a) 1963 (b) 1965. Advance chapters of this volume, in the form of individual preprints, were issued earlier, beginning in May of 1962 in the case of the English edition, and in August of 1962 in the case of the French edition.

2. (a) and (b) The English edition of The Canadian Mineral Industry, 1962 was issued in June of 1964; the French edition is at the printing stage. Advance chapters, in the form of individual preprints, were issued to the public beginning in June and October of 1963, respectively. Both French and English editions of The Canadian Mineral Industry, 1963 are in varying stages of production and printing. Advance chapters were issued beginning in April of 1964 (English edition) and November 1964 (French edition).

3. Every effort is being made to speed the production of this publication. Delays in the issuing of the French edition reflect the time required for translation, editing and preparation of copy; but it is expected that with the help of additional staff it will be possible to reduce this time difference to a minimum.

GROUND WATER SURVEY IN SASKATCHEWAN

Question No. 612—Mr. Southam:

1. Is the federal Department of Mines and Technical Surveys presently conducting a ground water survey in Saskatchewan and, if so, in what areas are these surveys taking place?

2. If no survey is under way, when will this program be reactivated?

Hon. W. M. Benidickson (Minister of Mines and Technical Surveys): 1. Yes. The areas studied in 1965 include (a) Good Spirit Lake area, (b) South Saskatchewan Reservoir region between latitudes 50°N and 52°N and longitudes 106°W and 108°W, (c) Assiniboine drainage basin, (d) Stelman area, (e) Nokomis area.

2. Not applicable.

ESTABLISHMENT OF TEST FARM IN SASKATCHEWAN

Question No. 613—Mr. Southam:

1. Is it the intention of the federal government to set up a test farm in Saskatchewan and, if so, where will this farm be situated, and when?

2. Will the various levels of government share in the cost of these projects, and what is the estimated cost of each test farm?

3. Who will be responsible for the selection of the farm site?

Hon. Harry W. Hays (Minister of Agriculture): 1. As announced by the Minister of Agriculture on January 14, 1965, it is proposed to establish a series of demonstration farms across Canada. To date one has been established and while no firm plans have been made concerning the locations of the others, it is possible that one may be set up in Saskatchewan.

2. No, the Federal Government will bear the cost of establishing such farms.

Until decisions are made on the type of project that is to be conducted on each farm, it is not possible to estimate the annual operating cost.

3. The Canada Department of Agriculture.

MEMBERSHIP IN COMPANY OF YOUNG CANADIANS

Question No. 615—Mr. Rapp:

1. How many applications, by provinces, have been received for membership in the Company of Young Canadians?

2. When is it anticipated or planned that the selections will be made?

Mr. Jack Davis (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): I am informed by the Company of Young Canadians as follows:

1. The Company of Young Canadians has not yet invited any applications for membership nor does it yet have any formal application forms. However, about 1,500 enquiries ranging from preliminary questions to tentative applications have been received by the Company. These applications can be broken down by provinces as follows: Ontario, 45 per cent; Quebec, 9 per cent; British Columbia, 18 per cent; Alberta, 11 per cent; Saskatchewan, 5 per cent; Manitoba, 4 per cent; New Brunswick, 3 per cent; Nova Scotia, 3 per cent; Prince Edward Island, 1 per cent; Newfoundland, 1 per cent.

2. Sometime after the organizing committee has presented its report and the Company of Young Canadians has been formally established and after appropriate machinery for selection has been established.

INDIAN AFFAIRS—YUKON AGENCY ADMINISTRATION

Question No. 622—Mr. Howard:

1. Since June 1, 1960, has Indian Commissioner Boys visited the Yukon Indian Agency and, if so, upon what dates, for what purpose, and of what duration was his stay?

2. Since June 1, 1960, has Mr. Fred Clark of the Indian Affairs Branch visited the Yukon Indian Agency and, if so, upon what dates, for what purpose and of what duration was his stay?

3. Since June 1, 1960, has Mr. Fred Clark had any authority over Indian housing in B.C. or the Yukon and, if so, when did that authority commence, and was information to this effect communicated to one William E. Grant, former Superintendent of the Yukon Agency?

4. During the time that William E. Grant was Superintendent of the Yukon Indian Agency, did he relate to anyone, and especially to Commissioner Boys, or Mr. Appleton, any information to the effect that the administration of Indian Affairs in the Yukon Agency proceeded at times on an unorthodox basis and, if so, what action, if any, did any of the said gentlemen take?

5. During 1962, did the said William E. Grant relate to Commissioner Boys that relief funds for the Yukon were being used to assist Indian people with such matters as housing, education and handicrafts and, if so, what was the response of Commissioner Boys?

6. Did Commissioner Boys state to William E. Grant that he (Boys) knew of other instances where money allocated for one purpose was used for a different purpose and that, so long as such arrangements were of benefit to Indian people, the expenditure was not objected to?

Mr. Hubert Badanai (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Citizenship and Immigration): 1.

Date	Duration	Purpose
November 16, 1961	2 days	General administration
June 14, 1962	6 "	" "
February 27, 1963	4 "	" "
June 30, 1964	8 "	" "
January 18, 1965	4 "	" "

2. No.

3. Upon his appointment as Regional Supervisor of Indian Agencies for the British Columbia Region, from July 1961 until October, 1964, Mr. Clark was delegated some authority over Indian housing and all Agency Superintendents were informed of this.

4. The William E. Grant case is presently before the courts. Therefore it would be improper to provide a reply to this part of the question.

5. See (4) above.

6. See (4) above.

RESIGNATIONS FROM CENTENNIAL COMMISSION

Question No. 639—Mr. Webb:

1. Among personnel earning $5,000 per annum or more in the Centennial Commission (a) how many resignations have been received since January, 1965, (b) how many have been accepted, and (c) how many have not been accepted?

2. What are the names and reasons for resigning given by all Centennial Commission employees referred to in part 1?

3. Are Sam Cormier, Les Maiden, William McDonald, C. F. Prevey and Robert Hume employed by the Centennial Commission, giving in each case the salary received, the position occupied and, if required, the date and reason for resignation?

4. What position does R. L. Elliott occupy with the Centennial Commission, giving salary, brief description of duties, date of commencing employment, and previous experience relevant to employment with the Commission?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): 1. (a) Three; (b) three; (c) none.

2. Name and Reason Given: A. J. Cormier, to accept the position of Chief of the Liaison Division in the Canadian Citizenship Branch of the Department of Citizenship and Immigration, Robert M. Hume, the fact that the Centennial Commission Visual Arts Program was assuming a considerably smaller role than was previously hoped is one determined by the Commission with careful consideration. The participation of the Commission would henceforth be minor, and the responsibility for programming, something less than could be justified under the duties of an Administrative Officer 8; J. Séguin, to accept a higher position (Administrative Officer 6) in the Department of Northern Affairs and National Resources, to be reinstated in the Civil Service and to obtain a more diverse experience.

3. Name	Salary	Position and Reason Given for Resignation
William McDonald—resigned December 14, 1964	$14,050	Chief Ceremonials Division—The position had been accepted because there were certain areas of planning envisaged for which he believed his past training and personal interest rendered him particularly useful. The situation has been changed with the result that the work for which he was responsible no longer required the specific background of knowledge which he possesses. The future program of work forecast for the Chief of the Ceremonials Division did not include those elements upon which he wished to base his final working years.
C. F. Prevey—yes	15,300	Financial Adviser and Director of Administration.
Robert Hume—resigned March 31, 1965	12,300	Visual Arts Officer—see reason given in answer to 2.

4. Director, Planning Branch, at a salary of $20,150.

His duties: to assess and evaluate centennial proposals; to plan a co-ordinated program of National projects; to implement approved projects.

He commenced employment June 24, 1963.

(a) eleven years service in the following departments of the Federal Government: Secretary of State, Reconstruction and Supply, Resources and Development, Public Works.

(b) Experience over 4½ years as Executive Director, Royal Architectural Institute of Canada.

(c) Three years as a member of the Board of Directors, Canadian Centenary Council and Chairman of the Council's Program Research Committee.

Questions

HAMILTON, ONT.—REQUEST FOR INCREASE IN WAGES OF LETTER CARRIERS

Question No. 643—Mr. Howe (Hamilton South):

Has the government received representations from the Federated Associations of Letter Carriers, on behalf of the Hamilton Branch thereof, urging increased wages and improved working conditions and, if so, what has been their reply?

Hon. René Tremblay (Postmaster General): No representations were received by the Post Office Department.

SALARIES OF FORMER CENTENNIAL COMMISSION PERSONNEL

Question No. 652—Mr. Aiken:

Of the six senior men who have recently left the Centennial Commission (a) what was their job and salary immediately before joining the Commission (b) what was their position and salary in the Commission immediately before leaving (c) for those of the six who have gone to civil service jobs, to what particular job have they gone and at what salary?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State):

(a) and (b)—January 1, 1965 to June 3, 1965

Name	Date of Resignation	Job Before Joining Commission	Salary Before Joining Commission	Last Position in Commission	Salary on Leaving
Jacques Séguin	January 31, 1965	Translator, Secretary of State	$6,840	Assistant to Secretary	$8,990
Robert Hume	March 31, 1965	Installation Officer, National Gallery	9,300	Visual Arts Officer	12,300
A. J. Cormier	April 22, 1965	Sr. Liaison Officer—Dept. Cit. & Imm.	11,800	Chief, Cultural Division	15,300

(c)

Name	Job accepted on leaving Commission	Salary of job
Jacques Séguin	Senior Staff Officer—Dept. of Northern Affairs and National Resources	$9,300
A. J. Cormier	Chief of Liaison—Dept. of Citizenship and Immigration	15,100

CONFERENCE TO FORMULATE NATIONAL HIGHWAY POLICY

Question No. 655—Mr. Stefanson:

Has the government plans to implement their commitment made in the House of Commons on July 17, 1963 to convene a federal-provincial conference for the purpose of formulating a national highway policy and, if so, when will this conference be convened and when does the government plan on announcing a national highway policy?

Hon. Lucien Cardin (Minister of Public Works): In view of the forthcoming federal-provincial conference during which many important facets of federal-provincial relationships will be considered, no specific plans are being made for a meeting of highways ministers.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE STUDYING QUEBEC SEPARATION

Question No. 658—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. When does the government expect the report of the committee (referred to by the Prime Minister in the House of Commons on June 30, 1964 and subsequently) studying the economic, cultural and social effects which might flow from the separation of Quebec from the rest of Canada?

2. Who are the members of this committee?

3. How many of them are giving full time to this study?

4. What staff is serving this committee and what is the background of experience and education of such staff personnel?

5. What persons outside the government service have been asked to serve on this committee?

6. Is it intended to publish the report?

Mr. Jack Davis (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): There is no committee with the purpose described. The appointment of an interdepartmental committee was announced on September 9, 1964 (Hansard page 7769). The interim report of the interdepartmental committee, which is studying the economic and social forces affecting the unity of Canada, was tabled in the House of Commons on May 7, 1965.

BUILDING TO BEAR NAME OF SIR JOHN CARLING

Question No. 667—Mr. Ormiston:

Was there ever a decision or an agreement of the Department of Public Works to name an appropriate specified public building after Sir John Carling?

Hon. Lucien Cardin (Minister of Public Works): Yes. The new Agriculture Headquarters Building, erected on the Experimental Farm in Ottawa, has been named the Sir John Carling Building.

FINANCING OF EXHIBITION BUILDINGS

Question No. 670—Mr. Pascoe:

1. Is the government's policy of Capital Grants to Exhibitions being replaced by a program of long term low interest loans for multi-purpose buildings?
2. Will these loans be available to Exhibitions this year?

Hon. Harry W. Hays (Minister of Agriculture): 1. The development of a program of long term loans to exhibitions for major construction programs is presently under consideration.

2. This is a matter of policy and will be announced in the usual manner, should such a program be introduced.

BANKRUPTCIES IN CANADA

Question No. 674—Mr. Irvine:

1. How many bankruptcies were filed in Canada in (a) first quarter 1962 (b) first quarter 1963 (c) first quarter 1964 (d) first quarter 1965?
2. Of the total number, what percentage were connected (a) with building business, retail and wholesale (b) with manufacturing (c) with food retailing?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Trade and Commerce): 1. The number of bankruptcies, estimated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics for the first quarter of the years 1962 to 1965 inclusive is as follows:

1st quarter 1962 — 838
1st quarter 1963 — 945

(c)	7.9	8.4	6.6	5.4

HIGHWAY ACCIDENTS

Question No. 686—Mr. Grafftey:

1. In the year 1964, how many Canadians, as the result of automobile accidents on Canada's highways (a) died (b) were injured?
2. How many of those killed were under 15 years of age?
3. How many of those injured, under 15 years of age, are now crippled?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Trade and Commerce): 1. All motor vehicle traffic accidents, 1964: No. died, 4,655; No. injured, 139,686.

2. Number killed, 14 years and under: 815*.
*Includes data for Quebec which relates to 16 years and under; all other provinces are 14 years and under.

3. This information is not available.

CENTENNIAL COMMISSION APPOINTMENTS MADE WITHOUT KNOWLEDGE OF COMMISSIONER

Question No. 687—Mr. Ormiston:

Since April 22, 1963, what was the name, classification, salary and title of each person employed by the Centennial Commission whose appointment was approved by Treasury Board or Governor in Council following submission of a formal recommendation(s) of the Secretary of State without the specific prior knowledge of the Centennial Commissioner of the intent to make such submission or without prior knowledge of the substance of each particular submission?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): None.

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURNS

TRANSFER OF NATIONAL EMPLOYMENT SERVICE

Question No. 373—Mr. Fisher:

1. Did the Minister of Labour receive a request or requests from any Civil Service Staff Association for a meeting with him to discuss the transfer of National Employment Service staff from the Unemployment Insurance Commission to the Department of Labour, if so, what was the gist of such requests and did the Minister have any meetings with staff association representatives to explain the effects this transfer may have on staff morale?

2. Since the Minister of Labour announced the transfer of the National Employment Service to the Department of Labour has there been any directives or instructions issued to field offices of the Unemployment Insurance Commission as to how they are to administrate the operations of the Unemployment Insurance Commission and the National Employment Service, either jointly, or as separate operations; if so, what was the nature of such directions and instructions and will the Minister have them tabled for the information of the House?

3. Did the Minister of Labour or any of his officials make any representations to the Civil Service Commission and Treasury Board for higher salaries to be paid the present staff of the National Employment Service; if so, what action has been taken by those two bodies to implement the Department of Labour recommendations and what will be the retroactive dates for such salary increases?

4. Have any representations been made by the Minister of Labour or his officials to the Civil Service Commission, for any or all senior positions in the National Employment Service being created since the transfer to the Department of Labour to be filled by open competition, rather than reclassify, present National Employment Service staff now occupying present supervisory and managerial positions at the various levels?

5. Has there been any instruction issued, or authority given by the Minister of Labour, Civil Service Commission or Treasury Board for a "fitness review" to be held of all or part of the National Employment Service staff transferred from the Unemployment Insurance Commission to the Department of Labour, April 1, 1965; if so, what is the gist of such instructions and authority?

6. Is it a general practice in federal government departments to conduct "fitness reviews" of regular staff; if so, are those reviews conducted through the Civil Service Commission or by officials of the department concerned?

7. What actually are the Civil Service Commission's authority and responsibility concerning reclassification of positions; are they or the department concerned responsible for interviewing present incumbents of such positions and making the necessary recommendation for or against the reclassifications?

8. Has the National Employment Service, Department of Labour, Civil Service Commission or Treasury Board, issued any instructions or directives requiring future officers positions in the National Employment Service to be filled by university graduates; if so, has there been any criteria established naming the professional fields those graduates are to be recruited from?

Return tabled.

CENTENNIAL COMMISSION—RESIGNATIONS AND PROJECTS APPROVED

Return tabled.

HMCS "DOCKYARD"—PAY FOR PREVAILING RATE EMPLOYEES

Question No. 589—Mr. Douglas:

1. What was the rate of pay, by classification, for prevailing rate employees at HMCS Dockyard, Halifax, prior to January 1, 1964?
2. What increases were granted to these employees effective January 1, 1964?
3. Have any further increases been granted since January 1, 1964 and, if so, on what date and what were the increases?
4. Were any prevailing rate employees excluded from receiving these increases and, if so, what were the reasons for such an exclusion?
5. Are driver-operators classified below labourers on the wage scale and, if so, for what reason?
6. How do the wage rates for these prevailing rate employees in Halifax compare with wage rates paid to similar prevailing rate employees in British Columbia?

Return tabled.

HALIFAX-DARTMOUTH AREA—PAY FOR PREVAILING RATE EMPLOYEES

Question No. 590—Mr. Douglas:

1. What was the rate of pay, by classification, for prevailing rate employees included under the Halifax-Dartmouth area rates prior to July 1, 1964?
2. What increases in wage rates have been granted to these employees since June 30, 1964?
3. What was the reason that these employees were not granted an increase effective January 1, 1964, as were the prevailing rate employees at HMCS Dockyard, Halifax?
4. Were any prevailing rate employees excluded from receiving this increase and, if so, what were the reasons for such an exclusion?
5. Have any increases been granted to such employees subsequently?
6. Why are prevailing rate employees of the heavy equipment section demoted to driver-operators between May 1 and October 1?
7. What is the difference in the rate of pay for heavy equipment operators and driver-operators?
8. How do the wage rates for these prevailing rate employees compare with wage rates paid to similar prevailing rate employees in British Columbia?

Return tabled.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

NATIONAL MEDICAL SERVICE—MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT UNDER STANDING ORDER 26

Mr. William Dean Howe (Hamilton South): Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of making a motion on a matter of public importance which in my opinion is of sufficient urgency to require immediate debate. As you know, there is a medical services insurance bill before the Ontario legislature, which is now in the committee stage. If this bill passes it will provide voluntary coverage subsidized after a means test, and with minimal benefits, all of which features are in strong contrast to the Hall Commission recommendations.

If this bill passes in its present form it will be extremely difficult, if not impossible, to implement a national medical services plan. As Ontario is Canada's largest province and has the highest per capita income, a national scheme could not possibly function without its participation. In this connection I wish to quote very briefly from the Hall Commission report.

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Howe (Hamilton South): The report refers to "the danger which Canada faces if health planning and health care coverage is left solely to the initiative and financial ability of individual provinces without regard to adequate standards of health services for Canadians from one end of the country to the other". And further:

> It becomes evident that a formula must be sought on a national scale, with Federal-Provincial agreement on programs to ensure the provision and distribution of resources for the achievement of the best possible health care...for all Canadians.

This Government may wish to dissociate itself from the stand of its provincial caucus but its leader, speaking for his party, called the Ontario bill "completely inadequate" and moved to amend the bill to incorporate the principles laid down in the Hall report.

It becomes evident that this may well be Canada's last chance for a comprehensive national medical care plan. This Government has so far failed to act on the recommendations of the Hall report to provide Canadians with the care they need—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order.

Mr. Howe (Hamilton South): —and is now allowing a vastly inferior plan to jeopardize the possibility of such care.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Will the hon. Member kindly resume his seat. If the hon. Member will consult Standing Order 26 he will note that he has to state his case as briefly as possible so the Chair may be given an opportunity to consider the matter of urgency. I do not think the hon. Member should make an argument at this time, but rather he should state what the exact question is that he wants to have considered at this time under Standing Order 26 (1).

Mr. Howe (Hamilton South): Mr. Speaker, I was just at the point of moving a motion. My remarks were merely explanatory to bring me up to this point.

I ask leave, Mr. Speaker, seconded by the hon. Member for Danforth (Mr. Scott), to move the adjournment of the House under Standing Order 26 for the purpose of discussing a definite matter of urgent public importance, namely the failure of this Government to act to provide medical services and the consequent action of the Ontario Government in implementing a plan which will ultimately be detrimental to all of Canada. The imminence of passage of that legislation is sufficient indication of emergency.

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, may I say a word about the regularity of the motion that has been proposed by the hon. Member. Standing Order 26 is quite clear. Paragraph 6 (c) of that Standing Order provides that the motion must not revive discussion on a matter which has been discussed in the same session. If the hon. Member will refer to the amendments moved already in the course of this session he will find that medicare has been the subject matter of a motion of non-confidence.

For that reason his motion falls to the ground. If an additional reason were necessary it would be sufficient to point out that such a motion cannot refer to a matter outside the competence of Parliament or the Government and his motion, of course, refers to events taking place in the legislature of the Province of Ontario.

For these reasons, Mr. Speaker, it is evident that this motion is quite out of order.

Mr. Pearson: May I rise on a point of order. We have not yet been able to see the motion which the hon. Member put forward as a matter of such great urgency. There have been no copies distributed.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): The Minister of Labour has given two reasons why, in his opinion, this motion is out of order. The first is the fact that medicare has already been discussed, and that statement is correct. However, the motion which the hon. Member for Hamilton South has moved does not deal with medicare by itself; it deals with medicare in relation to the fact that a plan is now being dealt with in the Ontario Legislature which, if passed, would jeopardize the establishment of a comprehensive health insurance program for Canada. Therefore the subject matter of the motion moved by the hon. Member is quite different from a general discussion of medicare such as we had in the Speech from the Throne debate.

The second objection taken by the Minister of Labour is that this deals with something outside the jurisdiction of this House. I suggest the motion does nothing of the kind. The motion deals with the failure of the Government to act on something which is directly within the purview of this House, namely the steps which are necessary to implement the recommendations of the Hall Commission. The hon. Member's reference to what is happening in the Ontario House is merely used as illustrative of the fact that the Province of Ontario, in addition to several other Provinces, is taking legislative action which if carried to its ultimate conclusion will make it very difficult to establish a national health insurance program in Canada.

May I say just a word while I am on my feet on the matter of urgency. It is now a year since the Hall Commission brought down its report. One of the recommendations of the Commission was that within six months of the report being received by the Government of Canada, a Federal-Provincial conference should be called to lay the necessary plans for the implementation of this report. This has not been done, and because it has not been done several Provinces, British Columbia, Alberta and now Ontario, are proceeding with provincial plans which in the main are to be based on administration by private professional groups and insurance companies.

Mr. D. S. Macdonald (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): I rise on a point of order, Mr. Speaker. The Minister of Labour has just brought before the House a point of order to the effect that this matter should not be heard at this time. I submit that the hon. gentleman is now arguing the question of urgency, which could only arise after Your Honour ruled on the question of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The Chair would like to hear comments from hon. Members on the subject of urgency.

Mr. Douglas: Your Honour must be grateful for all the assistance you get from the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Justice.

Because of the action which several Provincial Legislatures are taking it has become imperative that the Parliament of Canada should act, and act promptly, if the Hall Commission recommendations are ever to be implemented. For that reason it is urgent that this matter be discussed, and be discussed without any further delay. The fact that in the Ontario Legislature the opposition parties, both the Liberal Party and the New Democratic Party, are asking for a health insurance plan which would be Government sponsored and Government operated, as suggested by the Hall Commission, lends support to the idea that the matter of who will administer this plan should be settled now.

Our argument on urgency is that if the Government of Canada favours a Government sponsored and Government operated plan as recommended by the Hall Commission, it should say so now before provincial Governments take action which will make it virtually impossible later on to put the Hall Commission recommendations into effect.

For that reason we think this matter should be debated, and should be debated today. We feel that any further delay will work great hardship on the people of Canada and will prevent a comprehensive health insurance program being established in this country in the foreseeable future.

Mr. H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat): I suggest that the attempt to move the adjournment of the House under Standing Order 26 by the hon. Member for Hamilton South is out of order for several reasons. The first and most important one, in my view, is that it fails to involve a matter that is within the administrative responsibility of the Federal Government. Citation 100 of Beauchesne's fourth edition states very clearly that the definite matter of urgent public importance for the discussion of which a Member may ask leave to move the adjournment of the House under Standing Order 26 must involve the administrative responsibility of the Government. Quite clearly, at the present time the administrative responsibility for a medicare plan rests within the jurisdiction of the Provinces. This situation could not change unless there were agreement by the Provincial Governments to transfer that responsibility to the Federal Government.

Now, Mr. Speaker, regardless of the recommendations in the Hall Commission report, these recommendations from a Royal Commission do not transfer the responsibility for this kind of service. I suggest, therefore, that the motion fails in that respect.

The second thing and this was a point that was raised by the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam—the urgency of debate is to determine who is going to administer a medicare program for Canadians. I suggest at the moment that until there is an agreement between the Provincial Governments and the Federal Government, there is no question but that the jurisdiction lays with the Provincial Governments. This is the reason Alberta, British Columbia, Saskatchewan and now Ontario have gone ahead with these plans within the confines of their area of jurisdiction.

Citation 100 subsection 3, to which I have referred says that urgency does not apply to the matter itself, but it means urgency of debate. It goes on to say that the public interest must demand that the discussion take place immediately. Well, Mr. Speaker, we would then have to decide what substantial progress could be made as the result of having a debate today. I suggest there is absolutely no possibility of transferring jurisdiction over this matter from Provincial Governments to the Federal Government by having a debate today. The motion fails therefore, under the test of urgency of debate and should be ruled out of order.

Mr. Reid Scott (Danforth): As the seconder of the motion I want to support my colleague as strongly as I can on the important motion he has placed before Your Honour. If I may refer to the two main objections taken by the previous speaker, he first argued that administration of such an important matter as a national health plan is purely within the jurisdiction of Provincial Governments. I suggest an examination of the British North America Act makes it clear this is a field of concurrent jurisdiction. It is not restricted to the Provincial Governments.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. May I suggest to hon. Members taking part in this debate at this point that they limit their comments to the question of urgency upon which the Chair seeks guidance.

Mr. Scott: I would be glad to do so. The argument has been put forward that no useful purpose could be served by a discussion of this matter in the House today and by some decision being rendered. But, Mr. Speaker, the Government of Ontario made clear a long time ago that it would have to take action in the field of health insurance in the absence of any positive leadership and any positive action by the Federal Government. Here we have another example of a Government in Canada hiding behind the B.N.A. Act in order to avoid having to take such—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The hon. Member for Lapointe.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, what is urgent in all that is medicare itself and not whether who is going to apply it. The urgent and important point is to see to it that every Canadian citizen can have access to medical care.

Now, today some want to make this problem an urgent one not in order to know whether Canadian citizens will have medicare, but who will administer the plan.

Alberta, British Columbia and Ontario want to apply it under their jurisdiction, but some want to hold a debate on the ground that the matter is urgent. They say the federal government must administer it, because they would like the state to interfere.

For our part, we are in favour of a system which would enable us to obtain medical care, but we object to a discussion led by the socialist, centralist and antiautonomist N.D.P. which would like the federal government to intrude once more and deprive the provinces of their jurisdiction in the field of health. We object for that reason. We do not want any such socialism or centralization, because we want the provinces to be independent and, consequently, we are opposed to the motion introduced today by the N.D.P.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Minister of Labour has advanced a point of order which has been considered by the Chair. I think there is much to be said in support of the point made by the Minister, because the question raised by the hon. Member for Hamilton South does refer to a matter which has been disposed of previously in the course of the current session, and on this ground the motion would appear to be contrary to one of the subsections of Standing Order 26.

[Mr. Deputy Speaker.]

On the question of urgency, which is the point on which I would make my ruling at this time, I would like to refer the hon. Member who made the motion to Beauchesne, citation 100(3):

"Urgency" within this rule does not apply to the matter itself, but it means "urgency of debate".

In his argument the hon. Member did make the point that this is a very urgent matter. What the Chair has to consider at this time is whether the business of the nation would be advanced by a debate at this point, and I have very serious doubt as to whether a debate at this point in our proceedings would advance the proposition favoured by the hon. Member for Hamilton South. I suggest that the motion fails on the point of urgency, and in the circumstances it cannot be accepted by the Chair.

DOMINION-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

QUEBEC—ADDRESS TO HER MAJESTY RESPECTING PROVINCIAL CONSTITUTION

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, before the Prime Minister leaves I wonder whether he would give the House some idea as to the course he, as Her Majesty's adviser, intends to follow with regard to the address passed by the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Quebec asking for the trimming of the powers of the Legislative Council? I ask this in view of the passage by the Legislative Council of a resolution opposing favourable recommendation by the Government of Canada to the address passed by the Legislative Assembly.

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the address from the government of Quebec with regard to the resolution passed by the Legislative Assembly on this matter was received by my office for transmission to Her Majesty last Friday afternoon from the Governor General in a letter forwarded by him from Vancouver. The government of Quebec's communication is therefore now before us, as a Government, and it will be discussed by the Cabinet tomorrow. After that discussion, as I will not be here, the Acting Prime Minister will be making a statement on the procedure which the Government will recommend should be followed on this matter.

Perhaps my right hon. friend could wait until we have considered this matter in the Cabinet; then a full statement will be made in the House. I might add, however, we have not received from the government of Quebec any address forwarding the address passed by the Legislative Council. Indeed, I do not know whether the government of Quebec itself has received that address from the Legislative Council via the Lieutenant Governor.

Mr. Lambert: The counter address.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, I ask the Prime Minister to give consideration to the serious potentialities to the revision of the constitution which would result from the Government of Canada, in pursuance of whatever promise was made to the Premier of Quebec, forwarding the resolution from the Legislative Assembly with its recommendation for acceptance by the Queen. The Prime Minister said the other day that he would make a statement, and I have certainly been looking forward to hearing it in this regard.

Does the Prime Minister not know as a fact that the Legislative Council of Quebec have passed such a motion, whether or not it has been transmitted through the Government and Lieutenant Governor of Quebec? Second, if it is not passed on is there any reason constitutionally why the Legislative Council should not be able to communicate directly with the Queen?

Mr. Pearson: Well, Mr. Speaker, of course I know that an address of this kind has been passed by the Legislative Council. That is common knowledge. I just do not know, Mr. Speaker, and I would not like anything I have said to give the impression, that no action in this regard will be taken. I do not know what action the government of Quebec will take in regard to this address from the Legislative Council. That will be a factor in the consideration we have to give to this matter.

However, I assure my right hon. friend we do appreciate the importance of this matter—constitutionally, as well as from the political point of view—and the aspect of the situation he has mentioned will certainly be taken into account in the consideration the Government is going to give to this matter, a consideration it is going to give it at the first meeting of the Cabinet since formally receiving the communication of the Governor General. I can assure him a full statement will be made as soon as that consideration has been completed.

Mr. Diefenbaker: After that consideration has been given, with the legislative assembly representing only a part of the legislature of Quebec, will the House have the opportunity of expressing its views in this regard?

Mr. Pearson: The House will have an opportunity of expressing its views on this matter before any request is made of Her Majesty or of Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

VIET NAM—REPORTED PROPOSALS FOR DISCUSSIONS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): My question is addressed to the Prime Minister. Press reports say that Canada has suggested to Washington and Hanoi a new approach to discussions designed to break the deadlock over negotiations in Viet Nam. The report I have here goes on to say that the Prime Ministers of India and Canada have agreed that negotiations on the future of Viet Nam cannot begin until the bombing is stopped. Is it correct that representations have been made to Washington and Hanoi? If so, when were they made and through what channels were they transmitted?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): That report is inaccurate in the sense that it refers to agreement with regard to a new approach. The Prime Minister of India and I discussed the various approaches we had made and which other Governments had made with a view to bringing the conflict to an end by negotiation. There was no new approach discussed, because I think every possible approach has been canvassed in the last two or three months. Therefore the latter part of the article from which the hon. gentleman has quoted is also incorrect, because no commitment of that kind was made.

Mr. Douglas: Is it the intention of the Government of Canada to make any representations to Washington suggesting that there should be a cessation of the bombing of North Viet Nam as a prelude to further peace talks?

Mr. Pearson: We have already made our position very clear to the Government of the United States, and I propose to send a report of the talks we have had with the Prime Minister of India to our embassy in Washington for transmission to the United States Government which will, I think, be interested in them.

Inquiries of the Ministry

BROADCASTING

INQUIRY AS TO CHAIRMAN OF BOARD OF BROADCAST GOVERNORS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): In view of the announcement that Dr. Stewart, Chairman of the Board of Broadcast Governors, expects to retire in a few months to assume new responsibilities in connection with the University of Alberta, and in view of the importance of this post can the Prime Minister tell us before he leaves whether he hopes to be able to announce a successor to Dr. Stewart in the near future?

Right Hon. L. B. Pearson (Prime Minister): I have been aware for some time that Dr. Stewart was contemplating retirement, but it is not yet a decision and we hope we may be able to prevail on Dr. Stewart to stay for some time longer.

EDUCATION

STUDENT LOANS—REFUNDS TO QUEBEC

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Finance?

Since he tabled last Friday a statement of the activities in the nine provinces and the two territories of the Canada Student Loans Act for 1964-65, could the minister tell us what amount was handed to the province of Quebec under that act, if Quebec made an application and if not, if the federal government gave it that amount of its own accord?

[English]

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): I would be glad to look into this and report tomorrow.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a supplementary question?

If the Minister of Finance cannot tell us what those amounts were could he at least tell us if something was granted to the province of Quebec under that act?

[English]

Mr. Gordon: I would be glad to report on that tomorrow.

[Mr. Pearson.]

REDISTRIBUTION

ONTARIO—PUBLICATION OF MAPS IN WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): In view of the decision by the Redistribution Commission in Ontario to publish ten-page advertisements of the new maps prepared by the Commission in daily newspapers only in that Province and in view of the fact that many of the constituencies concerned are served by weekly newspapers, would the Minister bring this matter to the attention of the commission and urge them to publish such maps in weekly newspapers in the Province of Ontario as well as in the dailies?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): I will, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Bow River): A supplementary question. On Friday the Minister said he did not have authority to report to the House on the leak which occurred in Alberta with reference to the commission's findings before the maps were published in the Canada Gazette according to the law. What authority has the hon. gentleman for such a statement, bearing in mind that this commission has to report to Parliament and is responsible to Parliament, and that the salaries of its members are paid by this Parliament?

Mr. Lamontagne: These commissions are not agencies of the Crown. Therefore they are not accountable to the Crown. However, I have communicated with the commission in Alberta and I expect a report will be sent to me. I shall be glad to transmit it to the House should I receive it.

Mr. Woolliams: Is the Minister seeking that information or leaving it to the discretion of the commission? The hon. gentleman says he has no authority to demand an explanation. That is a matter of opinion. But is he seeking to obtain this information, or is he just passing on a request?

Mr. Lamontagne: I have been seeking the information, Mr. Speaker.

INQUIRY OF THE MINISTRY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. L. E. Cardiff (Huron): I wish to address a question to the Minister of Finance. This morning I received a letter from the Women's Institute of Hensall, Ontario, asking whether the Minister of Finance would remove the tax on exterior paint in order than anyone wanting to celebrate the centennial by painting the outside of his house might do so a little cheaper—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

INQUIRY AS TO NATIONAL MEDICARE PROGRAM

On the orders of the day:

Mr. William Dean Howe (Hamilton South): My question is directed to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. In view of the imminence of the passing of the Ontario Medical Services Bill can the hon. lady make a statement as to what steps will be taken federally to provide all Canada with an adequate medicare plan?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Minister of National Health and Welfare): The hon. Member probably has reason to know that this is one of the leading items on the agenda of the conference which is to take place next month. The deliberations at this conference will culminate discussions which have been going on for more than a year regarding medicare plans for the whole of the country.

Mr. Knowles: For forty six years.

Miss LaMarsh: Also, I do not think the hon. Member could have overlooked statements I have seen in the press by both the Premier and the Minister of Health of Ontario—I have had no personal contact with them—indicating that the bill presently before their legislature is not the end of the matter. Both have indicated that their positions were flexible. It is highly possible that if there is a further scheme put forward, a scheme applicable across the country, the Ontario legislation would be amendable.

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): I should like to ask the Minister whether at the meeting next month it is the intention of the Federal Government to make a proposal for some kind of sharing of medical costs in a national plan.

Miss LaMarsh: I do not think in the absence of the Prime Minister I am authorized to discuss a matter of Federal Government policy which has not yet been announced to the House.

INDUSTRY

MANITOBA—GRANTS TO COMPANIES IN DESIGNATED AREAS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): I had intended to direct a question to the Prime Minister. I see he has now left the House, so I will direct it instead to the Minister of Finance. I should like to ask the Minister, in relation to the program of grants to industries locating in specific areas, whether it is the Federal Government or the Provincial Government concerned which decides the areas which are to qualify for such grants.

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): The Federal Government, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Simpson: Can the Minister inform the House why it is that the whole of northern Manitoba has been ignored in this regard, particularly since we have such large numbers of our native Indian people in this area, most of whom are desperately in need of employment?

Mr. Gordon: I think the hon. Member has probably read the announcement of the plan and the criteria which will apply to it. As he knows, the criteria would not take into account the unfortunate position of the Indian population, who must be helped in other and more direct ways.

Mr. Simpson: Does not the Minister feel that if industries such as pulp and paper were to move to areas near these Indian reservations in northern Manitoba a great deal of employment would be created for these people?

Mr. Gordon: Yes, I am sure it would. But I do not think this kind of industry is likely to move in just because of the particular program to which the hon. Member has referred. I think another program is needed, one which will act more quickly.

TRANSPORT

DELAY IN MOVEMENT OF GRAIN FROM WESTERN CANADA

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Jack McIntosh (Swift Current-Maple Creek): On Wednesday, June 9 I directed a question to the Minister of Trade and Commerce with regard to quota distributions and the hon. gentleman said he would take it as notice. I would ask him at this time whether he is in a position to answer my question. Although the two bushel differential of which I spoke is perhaps not very much, it represents 25 per cent of the aggregate of last year, in other words close to 100 million bushels. If this grain cannot be moved before the end of July the economy of Canada will have suffered an important loss. I wonder whether the Minister will discuss this question with his colleague the Minister of Transport and see whether the railways cannot do something to move these 100 million bushels before the end of July.

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, when I was in the west last week I had an opportunity to have some talks with the Canadian Wheat Board about this matter of quota distribution. They made it quite clear to me then that they had been rather dissatisfied with the performance in particular of the C.P.R. in moving cars, but that the situation had improved considerably and they are hopeful that the quotas can be equalized before the end of July at the highest level to which they have now been raised at some points.

Mr. McIntosh: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. The quotas being equalized does not mean anything. If the quota is obtained on the last day they are permitted to haul wheat, it means nothing. Although the quota stands at eight bushels, if they cannot deliver it, it does not mean anything to the economy of Canada.

CANADIAN CENTENNIAL

MEETING BETWEEN MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT AND COMMISSION MEMBERS

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Alvin Hamilton (Qu'Appelle): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address my question to the Secretary of State. It has to do with the meeting of members which the Secretary of State has called for tomorrow morning at 9.30. Will it be possible to have the six or seven men who have resigned from the Centennial Commission present, so we can find out from them their views on what is happening, without any possibility of recrimination against them in civil service positions?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, we have organized this informal committee in order to communicate to Members interested the programs and projects which are being developed for the Centennial. I do not think this should be an opportunity to inquire about those who have left.

[Mr. McIntosh.]

LABOUR RELATIONS

MONTREAL—PROPOSED APPLICATION FOR CHARTER FOR PORT COUNCIL

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address a question to the Minister of Labour on a subject of continuing interest to the Members of this House and persons interested in the economy of this country. In view of the fact that Mr. Paul Hall, President of the Seafarers International Union of North America, intends to issue a charter that will provide for the formation of a port council of not less than ten unions at the present time in Montreal—over 22 have been approached—would the Minister inform the House whether this charter is being issued with the approval of the Board of Trustees of the Maritime Transportation Unions; also, does he know whether this charter has the blessing of the Canadian Labour Congress?

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I have asked my officials to ascertain the information requested by my hon. friend.

FINANCE

NEW GOVERNMENT BOND ISSUE OF $325 MILLION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of Finance a question respecting the very large announcements in the press of today in connection with a new bond issue of $325 million. The advertisement also goes on to say that the Bank of Canada will acquire a minimum of $75 million of this $325 million issue. I should like to ask the Minister of Finance whether the Bank of Canada already owns $75 million worth of Government bonds that will be exchanged for the new issue, or is this an additional acquisition of Government bonds by the Bank of Canada?

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, this issue plus $75 million of cash is being used to pay off an existing issue of $400 million which matures on July 1. The other $75 million to which my hon. friend refers, to be acquired by the Bank of Canada, is not to replace bonds held by the bank.

CONSIDERATION OF BANK ACT AMENDMENTS BY DOMINION-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, will the Minister of Finance say whether requests have been received from any of the provinces to the effect that the Bank Act revisions which will be considered later today should be placed before the Dominion-Provincial Conference for discussion and consideration, particularly the part thereof which would deny provinces the right to own shares or stocks in chartered banks?

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): Not to my knowledge, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, did not the Premier of Quebec ask that this subject be included as one of the subjects to be considered by the Dominion-Provincial Conference, and has that not been drawn to the Minister's attention?

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Speaker, I will be glad to review the correspondence and advise my hon. friend tomorrow.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that we are about to start our consideration of this matter, I should like to know now whether it has been drawn to the attention of the Minister that as far back as April 29 the Premier of Quebec made this request. Surely the Minister is aware of that fact today.

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Speaker, the Premier of Quebec told me personally that his only concern, as far as the Bank Act is concerned, is whether pension and other funds shall be given the right to invest in a relatively moderate number of shares. In my statement —I cannot remember whether it was on the resolution or at the second reading stage— I referred to this and suggested that if the Banking and Commerce Committee, having heard the discussion, agreed to go into it and could come up with a suitable suggestion as an amendment, the Government would consider it.

AGRICULTURE

FEED GRAIN—REPORTED STATEMENT RESPECTING EASTERN AGENCY

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Hon. Théogène Ricard (St. Hyacinthe-Bagot): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Forestry.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Can he tell us whether his announcement regarding the setting up of a compensation board for eastern farmers with regard to feed grain, is based on a bill which was on the order paper when the Conservative government was defeated in 1963?

Hon. Maurice Sauvé (Minister of Forestry): No, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Ricard: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Could the minister give us the main outlines of that new legislation?

Mr. Sauvé: In due time, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. The Minister chose to make outside the House the announcement upon which the hon. Member based his question. Surely we have the right to find out what are the plans of the Government in this regard. It is stated in the report in Le Devoir that it will fulfil for eastern agriculture a function similar to that of the Wheat Board. Surely we are entitled to ask what is this plan that the hon. gentleman found it convenient to announce outside the House but refuses in the House to give information about.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. Perhaps the point is well taken, but the question was asked by the hon. Member for St. Hyacinthe-Bagot and the Minister gave a reply. Of course the right hon. Leader of the Opposition has to accept the answer given by the Minister even if it is not, in the opinion of the hon. Member, satisfactory.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Possibly the hon. Member would allow me to ask a question in this connection. Does this announcement, made without details but with much fanfare, mean that in the Province of Quebec or the Province of Ontario a board will be set up for the purpose of purchasing feed grain; and having disposed of it to consumer farmers, whatever the profit may be it will be distributed to them by way of payment at the end of the crop year? Is that the meaning of this?

Mr. Sauvé: Mr. Speaker, this was not at all the topic of my presentation on Friday night. I discussed the report of the committee of the House of Commons, and brought before this audience three hypotheses or possible solutions to the problem. I will be pleased to send a copy of that speech immediately to the hon. Member for St. Hyacinthe-Bagot and also to the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I thank the hon. gentleman, Mr. Speaker, but I have already read his speech and I did not find it any more enlightening than apparently the press did. I ask him, does he intend to set up a board operating, as he stated, in a way similar to the Wheat Board? Surely he can answer that question. He was able to speak with such pride on his potential achievement, and surely he can give us that many facts.

Mr. Sauvé: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, but I think the hon. gentleman has not read my speech, because if he had he would have seen that the third proposal says, in French:

Mr. Diefenbaker: I read it all.

[Translation]

Mr. Sauvé:

Third hypothesis of action.

[English]

I will read slowly. On page 6 it was:

[Translation]

Second hypothesis of action.

[English]

And on page 3 it was:

[Translation]

First hypothesis of action.

[English]

I did not announce anything; I just brought before the members of that group possible solutions to this very important problem not only for eastern farmers but also for western farmers.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Just another hold-up.

Mr. Ricard: A supplementary question—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. May I suggest that this is now argument.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

REVIEW OF CRIMINAL CODE PROVISIONS RESPECTING BAIL

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Reid Scott (Danforth): Mr. Speaker, I wanted to ask a question of the Minister of Justice of which I have sent him notice. On September 17 last the Minister, in answer to a question from myself, indicated that he was conducting a review of the Criminal Code including Canada's outdated procedures with respect to bail for accused individuals. In view of the urgency of reform indicated by the serious disclosures contained in an article by Professor Martin L. Friedland in the Globe and Mail, has the Minister completed his study, and is he now in a position to make a statement of policy to the House?

Hon. Guy Favreau (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I wish to thank the hon. gentleman for having sent me notice of his intention to put that question. I must state further that I have been very much interested, and I am keeping my interest, in the articles by Professor Friedland.

As far as the study of the matter of bail is concerned, it involves many aspects. As the House knows, my own study is being pursued, but I must note for the benefit of the House that this is one of the questions which is referred to within the terms of reference of the Special Committee on Correction, and I must say it is doubtful that a policy will be disclosed in this respect until such time, whether at the beginning of its work or otherwise, as the new committee will have had occasion to report to me in this regard.

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON PROPOSED CHANGES IN PAROLE SYSTEM

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Reid Scott (Danforth): Mr. Speaker, because of the fact that this is the only day this week we will have an hour for questions I should like to direct a question to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Justice. On February 23 the Minister of Justice said he would make every effort to make a statement to the House on Government policy in regard to parole before the House voted on the issue of capital punishment. In view of the fact that this issue weighs heavily on the minds of many Members, will the Parliamentary Secretary ascertain whether we can still expect this statement of Government policy on parole, or whether this is another matter that will be referred to the committee of experts?

Mr. D. S. Macdonald (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I will be glad to pass on the inquiry.

TRADE

DUMPING DUTIES ON CHINESE TEXTILES

On the orders of the day:

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, last week in response to a question from the hon. Member for Qu'Appelle I undertook to obtain further details in respect of certain mainland Chinese products, the values for duty of which were the subject of recent directives pursuant to section 38 of the Customs Act.

My Department has not received any so-called "affidavits" alleging that the Chinese products involved are not comparable to the Japanese products on which the appraised values for duty were based. One interested party, however, has made oral representations with respect to one product, namely worsted fabrics, contending that in our comparison of the Chinese goods with similar Japanese goods additional allowances should have been made for quality. Although, as I stated on June 2, in making our appraisals we were cognizant of variations in quality, consideration is now being given to the representations which have been made.

It is not unusual for importers to protest departmental rulings in cases such as this, where values for duty have been increased. We are always willing, however, to consider such representations, and I might add that there are ample provisions in the Customs Act itself for the hearing of appeals and redress of grievances.

The hon. Member also wished me to consider valuing goods from mainland China on the basis of Hong Kong goods. On June 2 I mentioned that the procedure we are now using is in accordance with clause II of Memorandum I of the long term wheat agreement, which was signed by the Canadian Wheat Board and a Chinese import and export corporation in August of 1963.

Clause II provides that goods of a class or kind made in Canada shall "be valued for duty purposes on the same basis as similar Japanese goods or their equivalent, with due regard for differences in quality, finish, construction, et cetera." An exchange of interpretive notes between the signatories modified the provisions of this clause to the extent that Chinese goods could be valued on the basis of Hong Kong goods "in situations where Japanese values cannot be established." It will be obvious that Hong Kong values are to be used only as a second resort.

In view of these provisions and the availability of Japanese valuation data, the directives I issued were in terms of Japanese values. Indeed, it is usually more difficult to establish fair market values in Hong Kong than in Japan, due to the nature of the Hong Kong market, where relatively few sales are made for home consumption.

Inquiries of the Ministry

COMBINES

REPORTED SPEECH BY RESTRICTIVE TRADE PRACTICES COMMISSION MEMBER

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. W. Prittie (Burnaby-Richmond): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Justice, of which I gave him notice.

When Dr. Donald Eldon of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission said in Vancouver that the Commission is taking a more lenient attitude toward monopolies, was he speaking with the approval of the Minister?

Hon. Guy Favreau (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I again thank the hon. gentleman for sending me notice of his intention to pose this question.

It is my understanding that in his address Dr. Eldon was expressing his views as to the role of the Restrictive Trade Practices Commission under section 19 of the Combines Investigation Act, in appraising the effect on the public interest of restrictive practices alleged by the Director of Investigation and Research. The duties of the Commission being set out in the statute, the Minister of Justice does not in any way attempt to direct how these duties should be performed, nor does the Commission seek such direction. Dr. Eldon, therefore, did not obtain nor did he require my approval as to the contents of his address in this instance.

PUBLIC SERVICE

LETTER CARRIERS—REQUEST FOR SALARY INCREASES

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address a question to the Postmaster General, but in his absence perhaps one of his colleagues in the Treasury benches will bring it to his attention.

Because the letter carriers are so grossly underpaid that in sheer desperation are about to launch a work to rule program, and in view of the fact that they are leaving in substantial numbers for other better paid jobs, will the Postmaster General prevail upon his colleague to bring about substantial pay increases for these underpaid employees?

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Acting Postmaster General): Mr. Speaker, as Acting Minister I can state that this matter has been brought to the attention of my colleague the Postmaster General and his department and is at this time receiving careful study.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. R. W. Prittie (Burnaby-Richmond): I have a supplementary question. Would the Minister tell us when the Government intends to make an announcement concerning that category of employees, in view of the fact we have been told for some months that this matter has been under constant study?

Mr. Nicholson: Mr. Speaker, I will have to take that question of the hon. Member as notice, as I cannot supply any information today.

Mr. Barry Mather (New Westminster): Mr. Speaker, I have a further supplementary question. Can the Minister indicate whether the Department is aware of a statement issued today by the Federation of Letter Carriers to the effect that unless an increase is granted within a short time, it will consider a work to rule policy?

Mr. Nicholson: Mr. Speaker, I did not hear the first part of the hon. Member's question. I think I should take it as notice, at least until I have had an opportunity of reading it.

SUPERANNUATED FEDERAL EMPLOYEES—REQUEST FOR INCREASED PENSIONS

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance. Has he recently—by "recently" I mean within the last few days—received a request, even a demand, from those who are today in receipt of superannuation or their dependants, if any, for increases and boosts in the amount of their superannuation allowances because of the rising cost of living? Is the Minister giving consideration to this matter, and will there be a favourable reply to the request of these people who have a most legitimate case?

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): No, Mr. Speaker, not within the last few days.

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I wish to address a question to the Minister of Finance. In view of the unprecedented rise in the cost of living amounting to 2.2 points in one year, which is working tremendous hardship on those on fixed incomes, is the Minister now considering helping those in receipt of old age pensions by granting them an increase in their pensions?

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Speaker, we seem to be getting a little far afield. I can assure my hon. friend that this matter is being given careful and continuous consideration and, as my hon. friend no doubt knows, it is being studied as a matter of priority by the Economic Council.

[Mr. Nicholson.]

Mr. Knowles: One hundred dollars a month is the answer.

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to direct a related question to the Minister of Finance. Has the Minister received representations, and if so what consideration is being given to them, if any, about a limited number of retired members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who find themselves in that particular age group not affected by the increase in basic pensions that took place in 1959 and 1960? I have in mind particularly certain men of even the rank of corporal who are now retired on the munificent sum of about $65 a month.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. It does seem to the Chair that at this point we are going rather far afield and are now discussing questions of general policy which Ministers should not be expected to reply to at this time.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

REPORTED STATEMENT RESPECTING INSTRUCTION IN WIRE TAPPING

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, recently the Ontario Civil Liberties Association in a brief to the McRuer Commission urged strongly that steps be taken to prohibit wire tapping. In an article which appeared last week in the Telegram the Commissioner of the R.C.M.P. was quoted as saying that the R.C.M.P. teaches its staff methods of electronic intrusion techniques. I wonder whether the Minister of Justice can tell us if he is aware of this, and whether the Government is giving consideration to introducing legislation to prohibit wire tapping.

Hon. Guy Favreau (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, as to the last part of the question, it is evident that this concerns a matter of eventual policy to be announced in due course, if a decision is made on the subject. As to the first part of the question concerning reference to an alleged statement by the Commissioner of the R.C.M.P., I propose to make an announcement tomorrow.

AGRICULTURE

REPORTED STATEMENT RESPECTING PROSPECTS FOR GRAIN SALES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. K. H. More (Regina City): Mr. Speaker, on a recent trip to western Canada the Minister of Trade and Commerce received some publicity for expressing the view that the future was bright for grain sales and encouraging farmers to grow a bountiful crop of wheat. Crop reports for the same date that he made these statements indicated that some 85 per cent to 90 per cent of the crop was already seeded. If the Minister is still around at the commencement of another crop planting program, will he make these announcements earlier so the farmers can take advantage of his inside information?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, I can confirm that I made the first of the statements to which my hon. friend has referred, namely that sales have been excellent and sales prospects are excellent. Perhaps it was my exuberance that led the press to infer from this that I was urging increased production. I did not do so.

Mr. Jack McIntosh (Swift Current-Maple Creek): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. How does the Minister intend to get this additional grain to the seaports?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, there has never been a greater movement of grain in the whole history of this country than has taken place since this Government took office.

Mr. McIntosh: Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Minister would not want to misinform the House. The amount this year is going to be less than last year.

Mr. Lawrence Watson (Assiniboia): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is the Minister aware that a good many points on the C.N.R. are still on a five bushel quota, and the farmers are beginning to think that if the wheat is going to be moved it had better be moved pretty soon?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, I do not know what answer I am expected to give to the hon. gentleman's question, but I can assure him that both I and the Canadian Wheat Board are doing everything possible to move as much wheat as can be moved before the closing of the present crop year.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

REQUEST FOR EXTENSION OF TELEVISION SERVICE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Secretary of State. In view of the recent reported statement by the Chairman of the Board of Broadcast Governors, Dr. Andrew Stewart, to the effect that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation may inaugurate colour television early in 1967, would the Minister suggest to the C.B.C. that they carry out their program of providing network television service to the 98 per cent of the people of Canada whom the C.B.C. state they plan to serve, as the Corporation itself indicated it intended to do, before entering into the provision of colour television which it is reported will cost well over $20 million?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I expect to make a statement on this matter in the next few days.

BANK ACT

DECENNIAL REVISION AND EXTENSION OF CHARTERS

The House resumed, from Tuesday, May 18, consideration of the motion of Mr. Gordon for the second reading of Bill No. C-102, respecting banks and banking.

[Translation]

Mr. Bernard Pilon (Chambly-Rouville): Mr. Speaker, at the end of the discussion on this bill I said that the Commission should suggest that the field of mortgages be reopened to the banks, as was done in 1958. When the rates of interest were increased, some banks withdrew from those fields.

It is also strongly recommended that loans of that nature be granted, more particularly as regards already built houses, in order to alleviate the burden of small owners.

There will be more competition if the banks enter the field of mortgage loans, and the rates of interest of small and large lenders will be safeguarded.

I believe that the present rate of 6 per cent is reasonable. It is perhaps more competitive than we might believe. When the loan companies take the rate of interest into consideration, it would be superfluous to say that they lend money at a higher rate of interest for the simple reason that their loans carry greater risks.

This bill will allow banking institutions to expand and facilitate their relations with their customers. Soon during this session we will be examining further bill C-5 concerning loans granted under section 88 in order to protect small producers, who are being paid only as regards the products against which claims are not exempted.

I would like to quote what the minister said as reported on page 986 of Hansard:

> The Government agrees it is important to maintain Federal authority in the field of banking. Otherwise the time might come when it was no longer possible to effectively carry out national policies in a field which has been clearly assigned to the jurisdiction of Parliament. However, we feel the first step is to improve the provision of the Bank Act itself as it is applicable to the chartered banks.

In concluding, in order to reassure the board of directors of our banks concerning the maintenance of the 6 per cent rate of interest, the minister stated on May 6, 1965, as reported on page 987 of Hansard:

> As long as the general level of interest rates remains reasonably close to current levels, the exceptions being made in the case of mortgage loans and the customary service charges on personal loan plans should allow the banks to adopt somewhat more flexible interest rate policies on both loans and deposits. If, however, at some future time there should be a general rise in world interest rates which would make these proposals unworkable, then the Government would reconsider the 6 per cent limit.

● (4:20 p.m.)

[English]

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): I regret, Mr. Speaker, that I was having a private conversation with the Minister of Finance, and that is why I was not in my seat when the hon. Member completed his remarks.

The other day, in another context, reference was made by the hon. Member for Medicine Hat to the fact that because of a certain method of conducting its business the House, and particularly the Opposition, had prevented consideration of the changes in the Bank Act for two years. Of course the hon. Member was talking through his hat, and I am not making a pun. He was completely off base, as quite often happens in matters of this kind. After all, we know that the Porter report was only tabled and made available to the public in April, 1964, barely a year ago. Since there had been no such report for 30 years, and since the problem was so complex, the Government required time to examine it and assess public reaction as well as the reaction of the financial world. I believe it was completely wrong to say, as the hon. Member said so extravagantly, that the House had been delaying this matter for two years. I just wanted to clear up that misconception which may have arisen as a result of that remark.

Now, Mr. Speaker, at the resolution stage a number of speeches were made on behalf of all the parties in this House. I should like to say now that having had an opportunity of looking at the Bill, I think we can agree—certainly I can agree—with an editorial which appeared in the Financial Post in the following terms:

> For the first time in 30 years able men inside and outside government have done the detailed homework to gear our financial machinery to the future. Let us not throw away our chance.

Frankly I think, under these circumstances, as a result of the Royal Commission report, the Government has thrown away the chance. I believe that in many ways this Bill represents a timid approach to the problem. This approach is indicated by the Minister's remarks at the resolution stage. I should like to make some reference to his remarks at that time, when he said that the central theme of the report of the Royal Commission was that financial institutions, particularly banks, should have broader investment and borrowing powers and so become a more competitive and flexible system. He said that the Government was taking a long run view of this matter. The question immediately comes to mind, how long is a long run view? There are certain problems which are not going to go away merely by postponing consideration of them.

I believe one of the problems which the Government has deliberately kept away from is the control of the near banks. This was the central feature of the Royal Commission report, yet there is absolutely nothing in this Bill to cover that subject. I know that at the second reading stage the Minister said the banks represent a much larger segment of the financial community, and since they are under the central banking system the Bank of Canada has certain controls over the chartered banks, the Superintendent of Banking has certain controls over the chartered banks, and whatever control is imposed upon the chartered banks will sort of filter down to the near banks.

I hope the Minister is not serious when he says that, because I am sure he will recognize that there are a number of trust companies not under Federal jurisdiction, for instance. I say immediately that I am not concerned primarily with the operations of those under Federal jurisdiction.

I am concerned about those that are under exclusive Provincial jurisdiction. On May 18 the Minister, rather blithely I thought, indicated that they were relying on the provincial inspection system for these companies, and if it was not up to scratch the effect would not be too great. I am afraid I cannot agree with him. I hope I am not doing him an injustice in paraphrasing his words. I am repeating the strictures I made at the resolution stage. There are some trust and loan companies operating under provincial charter and some of these Provinces have reasonably adequate inspection systems, while in other Provinces I am afraid they do not exist so effectively.

If I may, I should like to repeat what I said at page 1000 of Hansard for May 6, the second column:

> In my view, there are a lot of institutions that are carrying on the business of near banking that must be brought under some form of control. Frankly, their operations are very close to the line. It will only take the failure on the part of one or more of these institutions to honour their depositors' credits to start a terrible run, and a lot of people will get hurt. A number of these institutions operate on what I think is a far too narrow principle, in so far as liquid reserves are concerned. They are well over-extended in real estate and construction promotion. It would take but one or two bad breaks for the whole house of cards to tumble.

I hold the same views today. The Government evidently feels that the operations of these institutions may not have too great an effect on monetary policy or in the whole picture of the control of the volume of money. This is a debatable point, and I think it is one which might well be examined in committee. We should like to know, for instance, why the Governor of the Bank of Canada made a certain statement in this regard. It will be very interesting to see why it is thought that the operations of such institutions had such an impact on the monetary supply.

One has only to consider the remarks of the Chairman of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board the other day, a man who was speaking on behalf of the bankers. We know very well that politically there may be pressures upon him because he went counter to what is an easy credit policy in the United States, but certainly he spoke on behalf of the financial community when he said there are signs, and there can be signs, that some operations may be very dangerous. We have only to reach a flattening out, or to arrive at a plateau in certain types of developments in this country, for a lot of speculative promotions to get into trouble, including some which are being financed by the sort of organizations about which I am speaking.

The Minister indicated that the amendments to the Bank Act were going to deal only with banks. He said he did not feel the Bank Act should deal with the operations of some people who might be brought in under the umbrella if control were extended; he did not think that was a purpose of the Bank Act. I certainly do not think that trust companies which carry on trust business or other activities can escape the supervision of their quasi-banking operations. That is not logical reasoning. If it is intended that banking operations in this country be under supervision, then they too should be under that supervision.

Though the Minister gave his reasons, as recorded at page 1429 of Hansard on May 18, I do not think we have gone into this matter sufficiently, and we will welcome the opportunity of examining him in the Banking and Commerce Committee. Dealing seriatim with the amendments, the Minister said that the operations of the banks would be extended, and he paid tribute to their competitive position.

One does not need to go into the whole history of the banking system in Canada to realize that the banks, by and large, have done a tremendously good job. They provide a very extensive service. I believe there is a branch of a chartered bank in Canada for about every 3,500 people, whereas in the United States the ratio of banks or branches of banks is one for every 5,500 people. From personal experience I know the operations of many bank branches in Canada are not profitable; in other words the branches are not self sustaining. As a matter of fact a lot of the so-called plaza branches in shopping plazas are rendering a public service only. They do collect sums of money, but later I will be discussing the changed nature of the banking system during the past 10 years to show that the number of branches has little relationship to the profit picture. The operation of the banking system as a whole is not successful only because each branch makes a profit.

The Minister indicated that in 1960 and 1961 the banks went into the personal loan field or term plan field and, as a result, interest rates in that field dropped. That is a matter of record. I believe it is generally agreed that in the auto financing field the average rate dropped from 16 per cent or 15 per cent to 12 per cent or 11 per cent as a result of the activities of the banks in this competitive field. The banks are to be congratulated on that, and according to the Minister's own words they are to become more competitive in the conventional mortgage loan field, primarily in residential financing. They will be allowed to place 1 per cent of their assets per year, to a maximum of ten years, in this field. This varies from a low of about $15 million per annum in the case of the Bank of Nova Scotia to around $50 million in the case of the larger banks. In the case of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce it is something like $41 million.

One banking official told me that in the Province of Alberta his bank alone could get a commitment of $41 million in one month in the conventional mortgage loan field in that Province. Equally there could be secured a commitment of $40 million or more in the residential field in the Province of Ontario and in the Province of B.C. There would be nothing outstanding about that; therefore I do not think the splash is going to be quite as great as the Minister indicated.

The total assets of the Canadian banks amount to roughly $17,880 million, and at a rate of 1 per cent I presume the Minister feels something like $178 million a year would be available in the housing mortgage field from the chartered banks. Whatever is absorbed by the chartered banks in this field will diminish the direct lending financial requirements of the Government of Canada through the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. In some way this will relieve the Government's borrowing requirements, but I do not think this is necessarily the reason the banks should be brought into this picture.

There is a further provision reducing the cash reserve ratio from 8 per cent to 7 per cent over a period of time. This rejects entirely the Royal Commission's recommendation of various reserves allotted to specified kinds of deposits. Naturally the Government has rejected provision for an extension of the banks' services into different kinds of businesses. Certainly the banks will not be able to enter into different kinds of deposit businesses, and there will be no category of reserves in such fields. However, I may say this does not recognize that the greatest liquid requirement is under current accounts or, open deposits; that savings accounts require less and, of course, the matter of time deposits is another question entirely.

[Mr. Lambert.]

I put it to the Minister that one of the greatest sources of funds for the banks are savings accounts. There are some 12 million savings accounts in the whole system, but it is also a fact that as a percentage of bank assets, personal savings accounts have declined from 50 per cent of the assets to 47 per cent, and demand deposits have declined from 34.6 per cent in 1954 to 29 per cent in 1963.

• (4:40 p.m.)

One of the chief reasons is that so many people are now withdrawing funds from the chartered banks which they hold at a limited interest rate of 3 per cent or 3½ per cent and investing them at 6¼ per cent or 6½ per cent in some of these near banking operations. These are the people who will be hurt if there is any difficulty in the future. I think the Minister will need to tell us why he is providing for the maintenance of this one category of cash reserves.

In addition there is now to be a statutory embodiment of the secondary reserves, formerly a matter of practice. The banks will now be required to maintain funds for special emergencies; the Minister through the Bank of Canada will require them to put up these reserves to meet special situations. I am wondering why this secondary reserve should be based on the whole of the deposits, rather than limited to deposits on demand. I think the Canadian Bankers Association makes a valid point in this connection. In any event it is one upon which we shall want to examine the Minister and his advisers.

Then we come to the question of non-resident ownership. This is in keeping with the limitations imposed on trust and life companies. A limitation is to be imposed of 10 per cent of a bank's shares in connection with any one non-resident investor, and 25 per cent of such investors as a group. But we also see there is to be a 10 per cent limit on resident shareholders; no shareholder will be able to hold more than 10 per cent. These are some of the retroactive features of the act. Another retroactive feature is the requirement that the banks shall divest themselves of all but 10 per cent ownership in any companies they have organized outside their realty holding companies. This again is another feature of the measure about which the Minister will need to give some convincing explanations, because I think the hon. gentleman can expect careful examination with regard to it.

I agree with the Minister's remarks about shared ownership and interlocking directorships. I think it is only good sense that there should not be a conflict of interest or domination of the banking system by a small, powerful group.

This limitation of shareholdings to 10 per cent in the case of resident shareholders will not apply to new banks which are being organized. But the bill does not spell out, nor have we been told clearly, how long a bank is to be considered as a "new bank". When will a bank have to regularize, so to speak, its share ownership at 10 per cent? Implicit in the Minister's remarks was a threat to control foreign currency transactions by Canadian banks. The reasons for this are not apparent from anything the Minister may have said. There is also to be a prohibition applied to the establishment by foreign banks of agencies in Canada. This has nothing to do with deposit business; we know an agency cannot accept deposits. This prevents the establishment of any agency in Canada. I do not know how others will view this provision, but the Canadian chartered banks certainly operate agencies. I think immediately of agencies in New York, Chicago and Houston. A number of our banks operate on the basis of agencies—and operate most successfully, I may say. Yet we are about to deny any foreign bank the opportunity to operate in Canada on the basis of an agency. Why is there not to be reciprocity in this regard? Is it because by operating on the basis of an agency a foreign bank would get into Canadian business?

Mr. Gordon: Just as I said.

Mr. Lambert: To what extent? Certainly there are ways of getting around this. I do not know what purpose this provision will accomplish unless it is to invite retaliation. I hate to think the Royal Bank might have to close its agencies in New York, Chicago and Houston. Certainly in the oil business there is a tremendous contact through these agencies. I believe that we in Canada, especially as far as the Province of Alberta and the oil industry are concerned, would suffer very much if such a situation ever arose. If this policy is likely to invite retaliation we want to hear the Minister tell us more about it; in particular, why he thinks there may not be retaliation.

One of the last features of the legislation on which I wish to speak has to do with new banking corporations. This, frankly, is a weird and wonderful thing which has been put before us. The Minister has said that the incorporation of banks should not be the subject of scrutiny, basing himself on abuses of procedure which he says have taken place in the past year or so. We are now to have a change. I believe this will merely be a change from the frying pan into the fire. Under clause 8 letters patent for a chartered bank may be issued by the Governor in Council. If this proposal does not possess all the trappings of patronage I do not know what does. It is certainly susceptible to patronage. I can easily imagine three or four groups applying at the same time for a charter for a new bank. We shall see what happens, particularly when the number of charters to be granted in the wisdom of the Government are less than the number of applications.

At the present time Parliament decides, and the Government exerts its influence with regard to the number of charters which come forward. I doubt whether Parliament or the Government should indulge in any paternalism, but I have placed on record—during the debate on the incorporation of the Laurentide Bank last session, I believe—the number of banks to which charters had been granted but which had never gone into business.

• (4:50 p.m.)

In any event, here we have a situation where the Government proposes that the Governor in Council shall issue letters patent and that these letters patent shall become effective on the fortieth sitting day of a session after having been laid before the House, unless the letters patent shall have been annulled. It is also provided that within 15 days after the issuance of the letters patent they shall be tabled in the House; and within 15 days thereafter a motion must be made according to form in the House of Commons, signed by at least ten Members, if the letters patent are to be annulled. A debate must then be initiated within four sitting days of the motion being made. But it does not say when the debate must terminate, and strangely enough it says that unless the letters patent shall have been annulled, they shall be in force.

In other words there is a built-in inducement for a Government filibuster. The motion would likely be from the Opposition. If the letters patent are issued by the Cabinet, certainly no ten Government Members are going to stand in their places and put forward a motion to annul those letters patent. Therefore the motion would be from the Opposition side, and the way the Act is worded no decision on an Opposition motion is the equivalent of a negative vote on the motion and the letters patent shall not have been annulled and therefore shall become effective.

I am saying this is theoretical, Mr. Speaker. It may be that now under the rules an allocation of time order should be made, and all that; but there it is in the Act in section 8(5). This is all possible. Therefore I say this is an odd way of revamping the incorporation of chartered banks.

Of course the other place has nothing to do with it. The letters patent are issued from the Governor in Council; the House of Commons alone will have the power of annulment. There is nothing about the Parliament of Canada. In other words Parliament is being bypassed with regard to the control of banking. This Act, however, is going to be an Act of Parliament. This Act will ask the other place to forever set aside their rights respecting the control of banking and the examination of banking in so far as the incorporation of new banks is concerned.

I think we are going to require an explanation in this regard. Why was this formula chosen? Was it because of the temporary embarrassment over the formation of new banks? A few moments ago the Minister answered the Leader of the Opposition in regard to the possibility of Provincial Governments or their emanations investing in either non-voting stock or having bank stock for investment purposes in so far as university trust funds, etc., are concerned. With that part of it I would agree, and I hope we will see something instructive from the committee to this end. The Minister has been quite fair about this. But if that were the case, is it a certainty that there would be this continuing, shall we say partisan objection to the present bank charters because a certain Provincial Premier is not getting precisely what he wants and there is a certain pressure group here acting on his behalf? I do not think this should be so. I think Parliament still has the right to examine chartered banks, and what is being exchanged is going to work something like the old Biblical story of the man who had devils in his house. He left his house; it was swept clean. He returned to live with devils who were seven times more difficult. Frankly, Mr. Speaker, I think this is what is going to happen, namely that the formula now proposed is going to be even worse than the present one, because there is no safeguard except the allocation of time within the new rules, and there is no guarantee that they will continue beyond the next ensuing session; but we are writing it into the Bank Act, putting it away for ten years.

[Mr. Lambert.]

I consider it a most dubious formula, and I would much prefer to be able to carry on under the present circumstances; because I can assure the Minister that if the same philosophy prevails and this Act goes through, say at the end of this year, and the applications for incorporation come in, the same ten people can stand up, put in their motion for annulment and start the battle all over again; and without any conclusion, either. Therefore I put it to the Minister that this provision in the Act will certainly stand a lot of re-examination.

Mr. Speaker, there are many other things which I could say about the Act that I think I would like to save for the committee hearings or later. I am glad to see that the Minister has recognized the facts of life. This is quite understandable; it could have been predicted months ago that there would have to be an Act extending the provisions of the Bank Act. The Minister has asked for this extension until December 31, 1965. Even that, I think, may be shaving it a little closely; and this is something the Government has to consider. It is all very well to say that this Act shall go to the Banking and Commerce Committee, but if the Minister looks at the calendar he will realize that if there is a summer recess and Parliament does not come back until after September 17, there is going to be precious little time for this voluminous Act to be considered in committee unless there is a special effort made with regard to the committee.

This, of course, is presupposing that the Minister is not going to insist that the committee sit during the summer recess. I realize that the Banking and Commerce Committee is not yet organized. It might be organized by next week, and everyone who wishes to appear will have to be given an invitation. We know what it is like during the summer months, and if the committee does not sit then it will be sitting in October and November, subject to the difficulties of debate in December. Perhaps the session would finish by the end of November, which I suppose is a fond hope.

In view of this, Mr. Speaker, I am just wondering whether the Minister might not be wiser in having the extension to July 1 of next year. This is not to invite extended discussion, but I am looking at the practicalities of the calendar and the consequent limitations on discussion both in committee and in this House.

• (5:00 p.m.)

Mr. Reid Scott (Danforth): Mr. Speaker, in participating during the second reading stage of this bill, let me say that it is not our intention to delay its passage at all, but that we are hopeful it will receive second reading today and be sent to the new committee, the name of which escapes me at the moment.

One of the things I want to suggest to the Minister for consideration deals with the manner in which the committee will handle this bill in its initial stages. I think an examination of the potential Members of the committee will indicate that there is only one Member who was here during the last revisions of the Bank Act in 1954, and that is my colleague the hon. Member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Cameron). With that exception, most if not all of the Members will be completely unfamiliar with this particular piece of legislation. Of course the bill has some 111 pages and many clauses, and I would urge the Minister to use the first week or two of the sittings of the committee as a real educational program for the Members of that committee. I am sure they would like to have the various officials of the department called to give them a complete background picture of the whole banking and monetary system in Canada. During later consideration, a great deal more headway could be made if at the preliminary meetings a reasonable number of witnesses could be called to lay before the committee a complete picture of the banking and monetary structure in Canada. It would be useful if this could be done before the committee got into detailed discussions of the Act itself.

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether my hon. friend would permit a question. Does he not think that perhaps the suggestion he has now made would be more appropriately made to the steering committee of the Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs when it is set up a little later this week?

Mr. Scott: No doubt this suggestion will be made to that steering committee but, knowing the influence of the Minister and his genial disposition, we thought there would be no harm in putting the bug in his ear, particularly in view of his general disposition to acquiesce in helpful suggestions made by Members of the Opposition.

Mr. Knowles: And because of his powers of persuasion.

Mr. Scott: Yes, and because of his powers of persuasion over his colleagues. In general, we hope a very clear picture will be given to the Members before they get into a detailed discussion.

We do not at this stage want to say too much about the various clauses of the bill, because they are voluminous and complicated but there are one or two matters that I want to comment on in passing. One of the main features of the bill is a provision permitting banks to get into the whole field of mortgage lending. This is a good move and one which I think will meet with general acceptance. There are, however, one or two aspects of this which we should like to refer to the Minister for his consideration, so that when he appears as a willing witness we will be able to go into these matters with him in greater detail.

We suggest to him for his consideration that the limitation of three quarters of the value of property is too low, and that some consideration might be given to permitting the banks to lend up to something closer to the 90 per cent figure of the value of the property that is being put forward. We have had various legislative items permitting this so far as private lenders are concerned, and we think it advisable to extend it to the banks.

Second, the total limit of 1 per cent per year deposit liabilities, which in actual figures would be about $160 million per year which the banks could put into mortgages, seems to us to be much too low to permit the banks to become a very significant factor in mortgage financing in Canada. Broken down, this might account for about 10,000 housing units; and it seems to us, having regard to the increase in housing requirements as forecast by the Economic Council, consideration will have to be given to raising this limitation so that banks can play a proper, adequate and influential role.

Third, there should be a requirement that a sizeable amount of funds invested in mortgages should go to financing ordinary housing. What is really needed, as the Minister is well aware, coming from an urban area, is a constant source upon which the housing industry can rely for housing financing. Previous governments tended to regard housing financing as largely a pump priming operation in respect of employment opportunities.

We have never really had in the housing field a guarantee of a constant source of financing to which we could look, and this has to a large degree accounted for the imbalance in the whole housing picture. It seems to us that if there is a larger amount available, this will be of great assistance.

Fourth, some machinery should be set up for policing mortgage lending so that it will not be used merely to raise the level of interest which can be charged on business loans. In short, the banks should not be able to deem the real property put up as security on an otherwise commercial loan, just so it can charge more than 6 per cent.

We also suggest for consideration that the Government give some thought to the establishment of regulations to be put into the Bank Act so the banks cannot avoid the 6 per cent straight limitation by either adding on extra service charges, or demanding that borrowers keep certain minimum balances in their accounts. There is a lot in the Act about secondary reserves and cash reserves, but we should like to reserve our comment in that regard until a later date.

One important provision in the Act is the provision, inserted, I gather, at the insistence of the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon), which will in effect prohibit Provincial Governments from owning shares in commercial banks, and certainly from exercising any degree of control over them. Personally, this is a subject in respect of which I am open to persuasion. The first thing we should like to emphasize is that in consideration of this whole problem, we are of the group which feels that nothing should be done to interfere with the ability of the Central Bank to effectively conduct the monetary and fiscal affairs of the country, and that anything which would detract from that would be unwise.

Having said that, Mr. Speaker, I find it difficult at the moment to draw a distinction between the Act incorporating three Toronto financiers into a commercial bank, and permission for Provincial Governments, or the people of provinces through their elected Governments, to have the right to participate in a bank unless, as I have said, the Minister can show that there are other considerations which enter into this, and that the fact of a Provincial Government owning a bank or having a large degree of share participation in it, in some special way will enable that Government to persuade such a bank to interfere with Central Bank Policy. Of course all we have had to date is opinion evidence from the Minister. He has given us bland assurances that this danger exists and that this legislation is necessary to overcome that danger. If the Minister can convince us that this is the case, again when he appears as a witness, we also suggest that he consider this proposition. If there are some such problems created by the special situation of a Provincial Government being involved in a bank, we might well in the committee consider whether the Bank Act could be so revised and strengthened as to overcome the danger. It might be better to direct our minds in this direction rather than to assume in the beginning that we should exclude Provincial Governments from any participation in banking activities.

As I have said, this is a very important principle of the bill. We are anxious to maintain the authority and prestige of the Central Bank and, at least for myself, we are open to persuasion on this particular aspect.

The other matter we want to comment on in passing deals with the new method of incorporating banks. I am quite prepared to concede that the present system is certainly somewhat ridiculous in that private Members, rightly or wrongly, can band together and talk out these various bank charter bills. It seems an unwise way of incorporating some of our main financial institutions. But at the same time it seems to us, subject to clarification, that the new method also raises dangers.

We have heard a suggestion that new charters will be granted by the Cabinet and we want to suggest that this lays the Cabinet open to the same problem of improper influence and improper connections in the granting of charters. Rather than creating that danger, which I suggest is a real one, it seems to us that we should give consideration in the committee to revising the procedures by which the House grants charters so that small groups could not, as has been done in the past, effectively blockade such bills. Even though I have participated in some of these debates, I am prepared to admit it is not a proper procedure and that there ought to be some form of revision.

I think we do not want to comment any further at this time because, in keeeping with the new spirit of haste and co-operation evident under the new rules, we would like to get the bill to the committee. But I do want to repeat the suggestion I made in the beginning that the Government give the committee a thorough briefing. The only other suggestion I would ask the Minister to consider is that he investigate whether or not some form of insurance of safety deposit boxes against robbery cannot be established. So many people have lost their holdings in the past, because of the lack of such protection, that we would like to see whether legislation cannot be devised so that safety deposit box holders can be protected by insurance against the risk of robbery. Other than that, Mr. Speaker, we tentatively support the bill and urge that it go to the committee for careful study.

Mr. H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat): Mr. Speaker, we too would like to see the bill go to the Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs before the summer recess, and along that line we support the notice of a further extension of existing bank charters given a few days ago by the Minister of Finance. We want to ask a number of questions when the bill is before the committee and with regard to most of the proposed changes we will withhold our remarks until that time.

I see that the hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) is still here, although he is near the curtain and not actually in the House. In his opening remarks he made the suggestion that I had been talking through my hat on a number of occasions with respect to the subject of banks and banking. I am not particularly interested, Mr. Speaker, in whether or not the hon. Member for Edmonton West agrees with me. What I said was that twice this Parliament has had to extend the charters of the existing banks because there was not sufficient time to deal with the required decennial revision of the Bank Act. He says now that I am talking through my hat because the report of the Porter Royal Commission was not even available to the House until February of 1964 and therefore it was impossible to do the necessary work in time to meet the deadline of June 30, 1964. It may be his opinion that there was not time, Mr. Speaker, but I suggest that if the Minister of Finance had not been preoccupied with getting his budget ready and a number of other very important duties it might have been possible for him and his department to prepare changes to the Bank Act and present them to Parliament before June, 1964. Possibly it might not have been, but what I said was that there is a requirement now that there be a deferment of two years. I stand by that, whether or not the hon. Member for Edmonton West agrees with me.

When it comes to talking through one's hat I think we all have to give the hon. Member for Edmonton West first prize because when the resolution preceding the bill was before the House on May 6 he said, as found on page 1001 of Hansard:

> In so far as the Alberta Provincial Treasury Branches are concerned, certainly those of us who do not share the political views of the present administration in Alberta would like to see a great deal more light shed on their operations.

Then he went on to say:

> The Provincial Treasurer merely brings in a record of the year's operations, showing either a loss or a profit. We do know that in the background there have been some rather odd things that have happened.

He went on to say that the report on the Treasury Branch system is never examined in committee, that the officers of the Alberta Treasury Branch system are not brought before a committee for examination, and so on. I have a letter here about this matter from the Provincial Treasurer of Alberta and this is what he says:

> When the Public Accounts are being studied by the Public Accounts Committee of the Legislature at each session the members have every opportunity to ask all the questions they wish regarding the operation of the branches. At the 1965 session the opposition members asked that the committee give special attention to the branches, and several senior officials attended hearings of the committee until all questions had been exhausted and fully answered.

Mr. Lambert: That is this year.

Mr. Olson: This has been the standard practice for a number of years. Whenever any members of the Alberta Legislature wished to have senior officials of the treasury branches brought before the public accounts committee they were brought before that committee and remained there as long as members of the committee had any questions they wished to ask So, Mr. Speaker, maybe these hat tricks should be left aside for a while.

Mr. Lambert: Ask the opposition in Alberta about that.

Mr. Olson: If the hon. Member for Edmonton West had nothing constructive to say about the operations of the Alberta Treasury Branch system, I suggest he would have been better off to say nothing. The fact is that the Alberta Treasury Branch system is very popular. It is providing a service that is so much in demand throughout the Province that there is difficulty in keeping up with the demand for more and more branches. At the moment the limiting factor is the training of personnel to keep up with the expansion that is being demanded.

To get back to Bill No. C-102 now before us, when the Minister of Finance made his opening statement on second reading of the bill on May 18 he said a number of things that are of very great interest to the Members of this party, and I am going to try to go over them very briefly in the same order in which he mentioned them in his statement. With regard to monetary policy he referred to the absolute size, power, control and influence of our banking institutions. We agree with that statement, but because this is so we say that the Bank of Canada and the Department of Finance ought to exercise a very large degree of control over their operations so that the Government will in fact have effective control of the monetary policy of the country.

Another point the Minister made was that while the Porter Commission recommended that the Bank Act be changed to bring under the umbrella of that legislation near banks and other institutions performing essentially the same functions as our banks are, the Government was not prepared to accept and adopt this recommendation in its entirety at this time.

• (5:20 p.m.)

Well, Mr. Speaker, we believe there are some rather large tasks ahead for the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon) if he is going to enact Federal legislation that will require all of these deposit taking institutions to be brought under the Bank Act. First of all, on May 18, the Minister sugested that a bank has not been clearly defined. He said, in fact, that there are several definitions of a bank at this time. In so far as the Federal Government was concerned, for the time being, they were going to more or less confine the provisions of the Bank Act to those institutions that were actually chartered by the Federal Government. I feel that is wise because of the tremendous implications inherent in an attempt to bring these near banks under the Bank Act, until we have a clearer definition.

The Minister did, however, say that at a later date there may be some other improvements made in the Bank Act, involving other recommendations by the Porter Commission. The Province of Alberta, I think, is a little apprehensive about this statement because if the Bank Act itself should be broadened to include deposit taking institutions in addition to the chartered banks in the near future, then of course we would like to know what further action the Government proposes to take in the direction of achieving these directives. We hope there will be sufficient discussion between the Federal and Provincial Governments, and perhaps in the committee that is to study this bill, so that more light will be thrown on the further action the Government intends to take. The Minister did not spell out how much further the Government intended to go. He did not say they were going to do it in this session, as a matter of fact. This is the reason for the apprehension, because he did indicate the Government intended to go farther at a later date.

In so far as allowing the banks to go into the conventional mortgage field is concerned and allowing the banks to charge what is referred to as the going rate of interest, which could be 1 per cent or 2 per cent above the 6 per cent limit, we do not have any serious disagreement with that. We feel there is a need in Canada for larger amounts of mortgage money to keep the pace of building going, in order to provide homes of a higher standard for Canadians. We agree wholeheartedly with the Minister's statement that the Government is not going to change the 6 per cent limit on interest rates during this revision of the Bank Act. The Minister stated also, as reported on page 1430 of Hansard for May 18, that it was the Government's desire, in fact it was the Government's policy to keep interest rates as low as possible. He suggested, too, that if they had allowed an increase from 6 per cent to any figure above that, there could have been an immediate increase in the rate of interest to small businesses. I agree with that statement. I am not sure that I agree the Government has done all of those things it ought to have done to keep interest rates as low as possible.

It seems to me it is unnecessary for the Federal Government to be offering substantially over 5 per cent rate of interest on its own Government bonds. After all, these offerings that are made by the Minister of Finance can be considered as prime interest rates, and other interest rates move in relationship to what the Department of Finance allows on these Government bonds. These bonds are certainly prime, gilt edged securities. I am pleased to note that according to the advertisement in today's newspapers Government offerings are at perhaps a slightly lower rate of interest. The offerings on a ten months basis are going to be at 3.5 per cent; the ones for 11 months at 4.5 per cent, and the one for a year at 5 per cent. I believe those rates are slightly less than some of the previous issues. If there is a trend in this direction, I am pleased to see it.

The Minister referred also to the fact that there is a wider dispersal of the ownership of the shares of the chartered banks. This might be the case, but I believe the actual controlling interest in the eight chartered banks is not so widely dispersed as the Minister would like Members of this House to believe. I say that, because there are some trust and loan companies that have been set up and which hold very large blocks of the voting stock of chartered banks. Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, these same trust and loan companies have large portions of their own stock held by banks. I am pleased to note the Minister said the Government is going to take some action to do away with these interlocking directorships between these trust companies and the chartered banks.

I have some charts before me which indicate there are large blocks of bank stock owned by certain trust companies and, in turn, the same banks own controlling stock of some trust companies. This is something therefore that the Government needs to look into very carefully. I just do not accept the argument that the small shareholders of the chartered banks in Canada have any say whatever in the policies being followed by these banks. It is these blocks of votes, even if they only amount to 10 per cent, that more or less control the policies of the banks. There have been times when I believe the banks have not had their fingers on the pulse of Canada; they have not adopted policies to meet the credit demands of the rank and file of Canadians.

We know that the banks have now moved into the field of small loans, term loans and so on. This has been very useful. Prior to the banks taking this action, they fail to recognize and meet the very legitimate demands for small loans, personal loans, term loans and things of that nature. The result was that there was a tremendous expansion of these small, consumer finance companies and they were allowed to charge exorbitant interest rates. I think it is well for the banks to move into this field and to be very aggressive in picking up this business, so we do not have these loan sharks doing the kind of business they have been doing over the past few years. I hope there will be other provisions, and that there will be some teeth in them, so that there will be a wide disposal of bank shares, and furthermore that something will be done to make sure that the actual control of these banks is not restricted to an ever smaller group of people.

We note also that the annual reports of the chartered banks in Canada from now on will have to contain a great deal more information than they have in the past. This is something that is long overdue.

• (5:30 p.m.)

I note from an article in the Financial Post of May 15 that:

> Canada's chartered banks, whose annual reports have long been the despair of financial analysts, will have to provide more information to their shareholders if the Government's Bank Act changes are passed.

I have the reports of the Bank of Montreal, the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce and several others in front of me. In all of them invariably some kind of figure is put down for profit, but it always goes something like this—"After transfers to inner reserves." If you look at these reports carefully sometimes you can find what the provision may be for taxes and depreciation, but you can never find out how much they transfer to the inner reserves. Then there is another figure below that which shows the net profit, or the amount to be distributed by way of dividends "after transfers from the inner reserves."

As a matter of fact, up until now several of the figures in these bank reports have left one knowing less about their operations after reading them than before. Therefore I hope the new provisions will make mandatory the disclosure of a number of things. From now on it appears that a bank's annual financial statement will have to show the income it gets from loans, from other securities, and the amount involved in operating revenue. Thus there will be a greater breakdown of revenue than has been shown in the past, and as expenses there will be shown interest on deposits, salaries, property tax and other operating expenses. From all this, it will be possible to get a far clearer picture of the operation of banks than we have had in the past.

Concern has been expressed about the matter of provincial governments owning stock, especially common stock, in a chartered bank. There will be a difficult constitutional problem here because in essence the Federal Government is telling the provinces that they cannot invest their funds in that kind of security. Whether the Federal Government has authority to do so is questionable, but it seems to me that the influence, in fact the control that the Federal Government can exercise on the operations of the chartered banks through the Bank of Canada is sufficient, so that there would be no transfer of responsibility for monetary policy, despite who owns the common stock.

If the Minister of Finance argues that by allowing provincial governments to own common stock in banks they may be able to have an undue influence on national monetary policy, that is tantamount to arguing that the present shareholders in chartered banks could, if they wished, have a tremendous effect on national monetary policy. He cannot have it both ways. Either the present shareholders do in fact have a tremendous influence and do in fact exercise that influence on our national monetary policy, or else there is no danger in provincial governments owning this stock.

I personally believe that the provisions of the Bank Act, even as it exists today, are sufficient to retain full and complete authority over monetary policy in the hands of the Federal Government, and I do not accept the argument that there is any inherent danger in the provincial governments owning such stock.

In the case of British Columbia, in that rapidly growing industrial complex out on the west coast, it would be beneficial to that area to have a bank with its head office there, so that it would have particular concern for the industrial and commercial expansion of that area. What is more, I believe that if the provincial government were to subscribe part of the stock, be it 10 per cent or even less, it would give to other investors in such a bank the kind of confidence and assurance needed to make sure it succeeds. I think the Minister must agree that all the Premier of B.C. asked for was authority to buy 10 per cent or less of the common stock. In my opinion that is not an unreasonable request.

In Alberta, when the Alberta Gas Trunk Line was being incorporated and when Great Canadian Tar Sands was being incorporated the provincial government insisted that the shares be first offered to Alberta residents, and that was sufficient inducement to make certain both issues were tremendously oversubscribed. By having some kind of endorsation from a provincial government it seems to add to the success of this kind of operation.

We will have an opportunity to discuss many of these matters in the committee. I hope that before the end of the week the Minister will introduce the bill to extend the bank charters for a further period. On this occasion he is asking for an extension of six months. I think the committee might be finished within six months, but it might be just as well for the Minister to ask for a little longer extension in the event that committee discussions and investigations take longer than he anticipates at present. If the Minister wishes, we would be willing to extend the charters for a year. In such case the committee would be under no pressure whatever. It would be able to call all the witnesses it wanted and take all the time it felt necessary to debate and investigate the matter.

Though the charters be extended for a year I would hope the committee could finish its work by the end of 1965. I do not propose to speak any longer on this bill, since it is going to committee and since there will be a second bill to extend the charters for a further period.

• (5:40 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Robert Beaulé (Quebec East): Mr. Speaker, the legislation under study, Bill C-102, allowing banks to carry on business for a further ten years, cannot be treated lightly, and this, on account of its significance, since the future of the economic blood of the nation is in question.

However, the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon) seems quite in a hurry; he would like this bill to be quickly referred to the committee on banking and commerce.

For more than 30 years now we have been fighting the present financial system. We are asking the Minister of Finance to be patient, because we wish to show him that the present banking system must be reformed from the ground up, and not only by means of minor amendments which, finally, would allow the banks to increase their wealth.

In his remarks, the Minister spoke about the cash reserve percentage the banks shall maintain with the Bank of Canada.

That is precisely the greatest imbalance of the banking system.

I should have liked the Minister to give us a description or to draw us a picture of the banking system.

At the same time that would have opened the eyes of many members of the house who do not understand the present system.

Since the Minister did not do so, I should like to make a few remarks now.

Today, in all civilized countries, there exists an institution whose function is to issue money. Such an institution is called a bank.

Since the beginning of the pastoral era—and even nowadays—exchange can be reduced to barter. The use of a third commodity which divides barter into sale and purchase is resorted to for utilitarian purposes.

If a farmer wanted to exchange a horse for bread, he could obviously not exchange his horse for the minimum quantity of bread required daily. He would therefore issue to the baker some leather tokens or any other conventional token of a certain value.

The baker would demand the horse when he would be in possession of a certain amount of tokens. This currency would be a means of exchange on settlement of a different quantity and quality of various goods. Money would be as it is today, a promise to pay in kind on request.

One is immediately aware that currency was then issued according to the production needs, the commodities and services to be exchanged. In other words, a person who disposed or hoped to dispose of $10 worth of goods could issue, at different intervals, $10 worth of money, while promising to pay in goods or services the party from whom he purchased goods or services.

At that time production did not issue currency under the form of an interest bearing loan, but normally under the form of a promise to render services for an appraised value equal to the services rendered.

There is only one step to take in order that this type of currency might be legal tender recognized by the state. The authorities, the government or the state, aware through its statistical services of the volume of production required to meet consumer needs, can issue a volume of currency equal to that production.

The state can issue currency and commit itself to reimburse its value to the people; such currency can circulate freely and be used as an instrument of exchange.

The issuing of money will keep pace with consumption and new issues will be made to meet requirements as production increases.

While today money is issued by private organizations as debts to producers, money must be issued by the state, without interest, directly to consumption and in sufficient quantity to buy goods and services produced.

We can therefore conclude with this definition of money: a means of exchange invented by man to exchange products and services against an equal value in products and services under the control and guaranty of the state.

In the circumstances the banker is in a unique position. He is probably the only man able to lend money without giving away anything and to make a profit on the transaction, since in the first place he gets his merchandise without cost.

What is the present machinery for creating credit? Here is an example:

Since the machinery by which money is created by the banks, is not generally understood, and since that subject is of course of the utmost importance, it would be a good idea to repeat what the hon. member for Lapointe (Mr. Grégoire) said during the debate on the resolution.

Let us take the case of a bank being formed; its social capital is immaterial. Ten depositors make a $100 deposit each in treasury bonds in that bank. Its responsibility toward the public amounts then to $1,000.

Those ten depositors do business with one another and find it more convenient, in many cases, to write notes or cheques to the banker informing him to adjust their account according to those business operations, rather than withdrawing each time legal currency to make their own payments.

After a short while the banker notices that only 8 per cent, or thereabouts, of his business is handled in legal tender—and today, according to the minister's statement, it seems that the percentage will be reduced to 7 per cent, since he tells us that hereafter the cash reserve will be 7 per cent.

As I was saying, the banker has noticed that only 8 per cent, or thereabouts, of his business was handled in legal tender, all the rest being mere bookkeeping entries. I am still talking about today's credit machinery.

At that time depositor No. 10, who is a manufacturer, receives an order. Before delivering the goods, he finds he will have to pay in wages, salaries and other expenses, far more money than is available to him.

Faced with this difficulty, he consults his banker who, after considering the above-mentioned situation, agrees to let him withdraw from his account, not only his own $100, but $100 more, a total of $200, in consideration of payment, within three months, of $106.

Such an overdraft of $100 is a credit in the account of depositor No. 10 who can now draw $200.

The responsibilities of the banker toward the public now amount to $1,100; none of the original depositors had their deposit reduced in the process nor were they consulted on this matter and it is quite correct to say that $100 worth of new money has been created with a stroke of the pen. Depositor No. 10, having fortunately secured his overdraft, distributes it to his employees in the form of salaries.

All the costs are included in the price the public pays for products and, consequently, when depositor No. 10 repays his banker with the $106 obtained from the public in exchange for the products, the banker, having placed in his profit and loss account the $6 of interest priorly created by him, compares the $100 received against the apparent credit priorly created and cancels both of them.

There is $100 worth more goods immobilized for which nobody, not even the banker, except potentially, has the equivalent in money.

Money, under its various forms, in bank or credit notes, as long as they are convertible, was defined by Professor Walker in his book entitled Money, Trade and Industry, as any medicine which has been accepted to such an extent that, no matter what it contains, no matter why the public wants it, nobody refuses it as a means of exchange for products.

As long as this definition holds, it is obvious that the possession of money or credit notes which are convertible establishes a direct link with services of others in direct proportion to the fraction of total stock controlled and, furthermore, the total financial wealth in the world, including credit, should, according to this definition, suffice to balance the total book values, material assets and potential production of the world.

Few people would think that monetary systems established in the world are perfect, and the number of those people is decreasing every day.

But when you ask for a definition of the various faults of the monetary system, it is interesting to note how the ideas of justice and value are referred to with monotonous regularity.

● (5:50 p.m.)

Possibly the most important basic idea which may be advanced at this time, as regards the monetary system, is that money is not in a true sense a measure of values.

The proper function of the monetary system is to serve through the exchange and distribution of goods and services.

It is, or should be, a system of order and not a system of rewards.

[Mr. Beaulé.]

It is essentially an administrative system subjected to politics, and because it is above all other administrative systems, the international control of currency is extremely important.

To correct the situation created by the present banking system, a technique must be found to adjust, by means of credit, and to create a relationship between the average level of prices and the available purchasing power. Under present conditions, the banking system is responsible for making that adjustment.

Finance and taxation, nowadays, are but an ingenious system for the concentration of financial power.

One could say that almost any explanation that does not completely and accurately describe how the financial system operates has the curious effect of helping the supporters of the system.

If you take the system as a whole, it seems obvious that, sooner or later, the monopoly exercised by the powers of finance must be attacked and that taxes, far from attacking it, are doing a great deal toward consolidating its powers.

What do the Créditistes propose to improve the present banking system? Here is a brief description of a reform we are advocating.

The financial system is but a system of notes that should reflect the realities of production and not control them. Finance should assist industry and business and not dominate them. The means now available to produce wealth were created by geniuses and inventors now gone to their reward and they belong to everybody and everybody ought to benefit from the results of those inventions, because they represent the greatest factor of production there is today.

Therefore, it is a factor from which all should benefit equally.

But no drastic reform will be possible as long as credit and the banking system are controlled by the persons who now dominate them.

It must follow that a national authority, representing the people, should regain control of credit and of the financial system which now constitutes a monopoly in the hands of chartered banks. We already have that authority. It is the Bank of Canada.

To reform the system we must first of all resort to the following basic principles:

Money credits in the hands of the population must equal the sum of prices attached to consumer goods on sale, whatever those prices, and those money credits can only be recalled, rescinded or depreciated by the purchase or the depreciation of these consumer goods.

The credits required to finance production must not come from savings, but from new credits issued for that production and they must be rescinded or recalled only in the proportion of the general depreciation with regard to general appreciation.

Distribution of monetary signs to individuals must become less and less dependant on employment. This means that the dividend will progressively replace salaries and wages as the man-hour production increases.

Thus, the following steps become necessary:

The setting up of a national accounting system;

The setting up of an agency to create the necessary new credits;

The distribution of a national dividend to allow everyone to benefit from applied science and to solve the problems of automation and unemployment; this technique would finally be rounded out by the application of a compensated discount intended to maintain the equilibrium between the monetary signs and the available goods and services.

Now, let us turn to the new credit. At the present time any new credit is issued by the chartered banks which lend new credits to producers at a certain interest.

The new credit required for the financing of production should not be supplied by savings, but by new credit issued for this production. This new credit must be cancelled or recalled only in the proportion of the general depreciation to the general appreciation. Therefore, new credit must be used to mobilize industry toward new production. At first sight, the banks are the proper agencies to fill this role and grant the necessary credit toward production. But contrary to the situation which exists at this moment, this credit would not belong to them but to every citizen.

The Bank of Canada, the issuing bank, an agency of the government and of the people, would grant banks the necessary credit as industry required it. Moreover, banks are well equipped to play this part. They have branches everywhere, and well trained personnel able to evaluate local needs as well as the credit rating of borrowers.

For the service they would provide, surely banks should be entitled to a reward, a payment allowing them to discharge their responsibilities. Those credits could be obtained at nominal cost from the Bank of Canada or at some other interest rate.

But banks should not demand a higher rate from borrowers. The increase of real credit caused by the increase of production would allow the Bank of Canada, by levying a part of this surplus to pay the banks for services rendered. And if banks refuse to act as agents of the community they should be forced to do so; refractory bankers should be replaced.

What is the function of chartered banks?

At present chartered banks can multiply their credit by 12.5, taking as a basis all the deposits they hold such as treasury bills and Canada bonds.

We therefore propose that the privilege of banks to multiply credit by 12.5 for their benefit be abolished and that they only be authorized to lend their own assets, especially the shareholders' investments, the deposits of small investors, to buy consumer goods or for personal purposes. What would be the result of such a policy?

I would like to point out that at the present time, according to the report of the Porter Commission, non financial companies had borrowed at the end of 1960, $2,901 million from banks and moreover, at the end of 1961, chartered banks were holding $470 million worth of company bonds.

Now, at the end of that same year, chartered banks held $3,371 million worth of Canada bonds, that is exactly the same amount invested by the banks in Canadian companies through bank loans or the purchase of their bonds. It is obvious that if the Canadian government redeemed its bonds held by banks, the latter would dispose of an equal amount for industrial or commercial loans.

We maintain that chartered banks could keep on granting loans but for personal purposes or the purchase of consumer goods. And if this currency proved insufficient, as is to be expected, the Bank of Canada would be authorized to make advances to chartered banks so that they might have available the necessary liquid assets to meet personal needs.

Now, if we consider social development, we notice that social needs, social development of the country, the building of roads, bridges, canals, waterworks, sidewalks, schools, hospitals, libraries, are financed by private capital, which deprives industries needing money for their development of the necessary capital and forces them sometimes to seek it in foreign countries. This places our economy under foreign domination.

If the development or building of fiscal capital in our country were financed by new credit issued on behalf of society by the Bank of Canada or local banks at a nominal interest cost, by using the real credit of the country, this capital advanced by the Bank of Canada, at administrative costs, to finance the social development of the country, would not remain indefinitely in circulation and would be recalled at the depreciation rate of this social capital, thus eliminating the danger of inflation.

The issuance of this new credit would be made in relation to the needs for schools, hospitals, and so on.

National needs, actual needs, determine and regulate the scrip money projected by anticipation.

And this new money, this new credit should not bear interest, because it is used to build social capital which is non-profitable.

Such are the various methods suggested to put into force the Creditiste philosophy to ensure always a satisfactory balance between production and demand.

Those are, Mr. Speaker, the changes needed to reform the monetary system which the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon) should have presented to us if he really wanted the government to have a definite monetary policy and to control absolutely the creation of credit in Canada.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I must interrupt the hon. member because it is six o'clock.

Mr. Beaulé: Mr. Speaker, I will be through in a minute.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Will the house allow the hon. member to continue for a minute?

Some hon. Members: Yes.

Mr. Beaulé: A few days ago, I was listening, during a CBC television program entitled "Champ libre" to Mr. Jacques Ruef, a great French economist of international repute and Mr. Robert Triffin, a Belgian economist and expert in the field of international high finance, who both said in New York that the international monetary system was obsolete, silly and inflationary and that the great powers ought to find another means of exchange, otherwise we would experience a worse crisis than that 1929-39.

They stated also that the monetary system should be modernized just as industry and trade have been brought up to date.

Mr. Speaker the warning of those two great men, in the sphere of high finance, should make the Minister of Finance ponder while he still can revise the bill under consideration and bring in the necessary changes.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the House ready for the question? The Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon). If the Minister speaks now, he will be closing the debate. Is this agreed?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Thompson: Mr. Speaker, I wish to speak on this matter, but I believe that according to the new rules we go into private Members' hour at this time. Is that not correct?

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED UNDER ADJOURNMENT MOTION

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. It being six o'clock it is my duty, pursuant to provisional Standing Order 39A, to inform the House that the questions to be raised at ten o'clock this day are as follows: The hon. Member for Renfrew South (Mr. Greene)—Trans-Canada Highway—requested removal of unsatisfactory portion; the hon. Member for Danforth (Mr. Scott)—divorce—request for Royal Commission on Reform; the hon. Member for Port Arthur (Mr. Fisher)—forestry—removal of departmental laboratories to Sault Ste. Marie.

• (6:00 p.m.)

Order, please. It being six o'clock, the House will now proceed to the consideration of private Members' business as listed on today's order paper, namely notices of motion.

EDUCATION

COMMISSION TO REPORT ON A NATIONAL TRAINING SERVICE PROGRAM

[Translation]

Mr. Gérald Laniel (Beauharnois-Salaberry) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the government should consider the advisability of undertaking a searching study of the youth problem in Canada, paralleling the possibility of setting up in the country a "National Training Service" for young people between the ages of 18 and 21 years, and

That, to this end, there should be appointed a Commission made up of representatives of the various bodies concerned with health, education, employment, and the Armed Forces, charged with reporting to this House on the advantages and disadvantages of such a "National Training Service", particularly with regard to the following points:

1. Discipline and respect for our institutions and for authority.
2. The possibility of its complementing training and education.
3. Improvement in health through physical education.
4. A means of promoting bilingualism among the young.
5. Strengthening of national unity through better knowledge of the country and its various ethnic groups.
6. Co-ordination with the Emergency Measures Organization.
7. Advantages in the Service being run by the Armed Forces or other similar body.
8. Possible duration of such a service and particular application to students.

He said: Mr. Speaker, if I have introduced again this year, a new notice of motion concerning the setting up in this country of a National Training Service, it is because I am more convinced than ever that various benefits would be derived from such a decision on the part of the government, more so even, since the months gone by have enabled me to find out that Canadians as a whole, as well as the people from the province of Quebec, favour most the establishment in this country of such a national service for our young people.

Mr. Speaker, at this point, may I digress a moment to add that during the last 12 months, I have continually received correspondence from various persons across the country. Furthermore, during the year the French speaking Junior Chambers of Commerce of Canada have chosen as the theme for their annual debating contest: "Compulsory military service, for or against". The final contest will take place on July 2, at the Chateau Frontenac, in Quebec City. It is nevertheless significant to find that people are interested in discussing this matter.

During the debate last year, I found that too much emphasis was laid on the words "compulsory military service" or on the word "conscription"; and the same thing can be said about the publicity made through our media of information.

That is why I have elected this year to introduce my notice of motion in a completely different manner so that, by listing a few particular points to be considered, the most obvious advantages may be seen immediately. Furthermore, I wish to point out at the outset to the hon. members of the house that the motion now before us is not asking the government to institute immediately such a service, but rather to suggest the appointment of a commission to examine all its implications and the advantages which may be derived therefrom.

Personally, I am convinced that such military training should come under the jurisdiction of the armed forces, but I thought I should leave the door open to other suggestions and that is why I suggest that representatives of groups of people interested in health, education, employment, the armed forces and, I would even add, social, rehabilitation and welfare services, should sit on that study commission.

Mr. Speaker, parents and educators are increasingly concerned about the future of our youth; and there is even apprehension in the minds of many of them. I would not want to give the impression of being an alarmist, a bogey-man and I am not saying either that there is no solution to the youth problem, but as head of a family I wonder about many things. I wonder about the same things which are bothering most parents, and I am trying to see what the future has in stock; I wonder what is lacking both within the family and our education system.

Some will say that youth must have its fling; others will add that we have all had ours. But do you not agree with me that we are nevertheless increasingly concerned about this unrestrained and free-thinking attitude?

Is this normal, this lack of respect for elders, this contempt for established authority and this tendency to do away with everything? It is disturbing to see how new doctrines and theories often talk about liberty as meaning licence and how basic democratic principles joining together liberty and responsibility are ignored.

You might say: "But what does a national training service have to do with all that?" Don't you fear, I do not think the creation of such a service would muzzle our youth in a discipled body where there would be no possibility of dialogue and where militarism would be used to crush the rebels. However, you know it is becoming always more vital to keep our young people busy, to allow them to know all the aspects of our society and to make them appreciate the things they often take for granted.

Many Canadians agree that a form of national service would constitute a wonderful instrument for helping our youth to develop both physically and intellectually in a disciplined environment, giving them a sense of values and respect for our institutions and for authority.

In a speech he made recently, His Excellency the Governor General of Canada expressed his regret that frontiers sometimes took on the aspect of barriers rather than meeting places. He invited people to open wide the provincial doors and windows, to look beyond the walls at what is going on outside.

"Let us become acquainted", he said, "because that is how we will learn to understand each other." He even suggested massive group travels between provinces in order to improve mutual understanding.

That is one of my main points, Mr. Speaker, in stating the advantages of the national training service in Canada, that is a means to enable our youth to know Canada and to visit the various areas of the country. I think it would be very beneficial to split such a service stage into four three-month periods so that the young men could alternately visit in the Maritimes, in the Eastern provinces, in the Prairies and finally on the Pacific Coast. To know one's country is to have exchanges with all those who live in it and in order to achieve this, I see nothing better than to use that national service as the most efficient school of language for young Canadians. The program could be organized in such a way that there would be a certain continuity as much in terms of education as in terms of physical training or anything else.

To those who would fear an interference from the federal government in the field of education—

• (6:10 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I regret I have to interrupt the hon. Member but I should like to bring to the attention of the hon. Member for Timiskaming, who I might say warned the Chair last week he might want to take drastic action after six o'clock today, that it is against the practice of this Chamber to consume foodstuffs while the House is sitting. I should like to refer the hon. Member to Standing Order 12 (1) which states that "Mr. Speaker shall preserve order and decorum". The Chair considers it to be against the decorum of the House to have lunch, dinner or supper at one's seat in the House. Therefore I would suggest to the hon. Member that he co-operate with the Chair, and if he feels he should partake of food at this time he can do so behind the curtain.

Mr. Peters: On the point of order, Mr. Speaker, with changes we made in the Standing Orders whereby we adopted new Standing Orders on a provisional basis I assumed that the old parts of the Standing Orders were rescinded. I would assume that the section Your Honour has just quoted is one of those sections. I am sure it is not the intention of the House to deny Members the right to participate in the debate. If we waive the supper hour I think something must be substituted for it, and I would hope Your Honour would not enforce that rule, which I believe was rescinded by the passing of the provisional orders.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The argument advanced by the hon. Member is very ingenious, of course, but I do not think he has the right to suggest that the adoption of new Standing Orders automatically repeals other Standing Orders. Standing Order 12 (1) to which I have just referred is certainly still in the Standing Orders, and I would ask the hon. Member to co-operate with the Chair at least in this instance by desisting from proceeding with what he had in mind to do.

[Translation]

Mr. Laniel: Mr. Speaker, so far as I am concerned, I am quite agreeable to letting the hon. member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters) go, if he is that weak and cannot attend the debate.

Resuming my remarks, Mr. Speaker, I say to those who would fear interference by the federal government in the field of education that I have no objection to this being done in co-operation with the provinces. In my view, surely there is a way to preserve provincial autonomy while at the same time, co-ordinating efforts of the greatest advantage to our young people. One thing that has not been mentioned in the various points suggested for study is the possibility of relating to such an institution a world history course, and what may be even more important, a Canadian history course.

Speaking for myself, I feel that the best presently available vehicle toward that end is none other than the Department of National Defence; still, I remain open to any suggestion and would even be willing to see the government set up a body within which the various interested parties could work in co-operation with the Departments of Health, of Labour and of National Defence.

This agency, which I called in my notice of motion "National Training Service" could bear any other name; I might even suggest that of "Canadian Youth Service".

At the very time when a program is being launched with a view to creating a Company of Young Canadians, it seems to me we would be shirking our responsibilities by failing to give to the government this wonderful opportunity of making a comprehensive study of the youth problem in Canada. Let us set aside the bugaboo of conscription, let us forget momentarily military questions and the shadow of war, and let us study the whole problem in the Canadian context, with a view to fostering national unity, as a means to better training, better understanding and good will.

I would like to point out clearly my views as regards the objection of those who claim that all this would be detrimental to the educational program of our youth and could make them lose a year's studies. In my opinion, it is easy to settle this problem by not compelling anyone to complete his 12 months of service before he has completed his studies, for those who wish to do so at the secondary level after their technical studies. It would be advisable for those who pursue university studies or who specialize beyond secondary school, to complete the service by three month stages, during their holidays and over a period of three or four years. Thus every young Canadian would enjoy the same advantages—and I mean "advantages" because I sincerely believe in it, and no one could upbraid the government for having delayed his studies or hampered his future.

Mr. Speaker, I do not want to venture too far today in regard to the cost of this project, but I feel that there are enough advantages to justify such a government expenditure. I want to correct some statements made last year in this house with respect to a tremendous amount, which was far from reality.

Certainly, it would be in order to pay the young people in service a reasonable allowance which could compare to the amount a new recruit gets now, or at least $20 a week, that is a total of $1,000 for 12 months. On the basis of this amount of $1,000 and considering that the number of young Canadians in service each year would be 100,000, I arrived last year at a maximum cost of $300 million, including maintenance and administrative expenditures, instructors and specialized staff. I did not invent those figures myself, and I can assure you that they are close enough to reality, and that it is perhaps possible to reduce them to $250 million.

It is true that here I do not take into consideration capital expenditures which should normally and gradually be incurred, especially if one considers that it would be advisable to erect, through the years, centres similar to our military colleges with permanent buildings which, by the same token, are much more attractive and help to create an atmosphere more suitable to study and training.

• (6:20 p.m.)

Although they would be expensive, those centres would always remain available to the government in case of conflict or emergency. Since this national service could easily make up for the militia and the armed forces reserve, almost $40 million would be saved each year and which would provide a substantial amount for the establishment of such a building program.

Last year some people were shocked when I said that this would also help to solve the problem of unemployment. I will not mention here some of the political arguments which were used, but I will say only: Can you deny the fact that such a project would free the labour market of 100,000 people, an equivalent of $150 million in unemployment insurance benefits? Personally, I would rather see this amount spent in a constructive way instead of paying people to do nothing.

Mr. Speaker, I would have much to say on the possibilities of such a national training service; the more I discuss the matter with people, the more arguments are put forward in favour of such a scheme, and the more I am convinced that we would do our country a great service by passing that resolution. I, therefore, appeal to all the members of the House to consider favourably my proposal and at least allow it to come to a vote before the end of this discussion.

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (St. Denis): Mr. Speaker, would the hon. Member permit a question?

Mr. Laniel: Certainly.

Mr. Prud'homme: When he spoke about those from whom he asked some advice, would the hon. Member be ready to consult—without expressing his detailed opinion on the merits of the matter, because he does not have the necessary time—the persons interested in this matter, certain authorities in the field of education, of employment, and especially, in youth organizations? I am thinking, for instance, of the Association of University and Classical College Students, of the Catholic Youth Labour Organization, of the General Union of Quebec or Canada students?

If such a service were set up, would the hon. Member object to consulting those youth organizations, whether they be formed of students or workers, because most of our young people between 18 and 21 do not all have the opportunity to attend college, even though they lead an active life?

Mr. Laniel: Mr. Speaker, I entirely agree with the suggestion of the hon. Member for St. Denis. It is an excellent suggestion, more especially as most of the young people I know are in favour of such a plan.

I am convinced that the leaders of such movements would like to see the government form such a commission, since they wish to take part in this study.

Mr. Prud'homme: This is what I wanted to know, whether these people were interested.

Hon. Théogène Ricard (St. Hyacinthe-Bagot): Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to delay the passage of the motion in question since the hon. member requested that his motion be voted on before the private members' hour has elapsed. Nevertheless, I wish I could make some remarks in order to help him, if possible, to get out of a dilemma.

The hon. member has made another try this year and introduced again a proposal that is not clear, even in his own mind. He is ready to give to such a project any name whatever, provided his proposal is adopted.

One fact in particular strikes me—though it is true that this proposal is his own; he suggests that this plan be implemented in co-operation with the provinces. I cannot help making the following remark, namely that it is a surprising thing to see such a project being proposed during this session when it has been suggested that the provinces should withdraw from many joint programs. While we are endeavouring to withdraw from joint programs, the hon. member is introducing a motion in order to emphasize another one.

I would not like to be unpleasant to my hon. friend, but the reason why he is coming back this year with an entirely amended project is that last year, following his "conscription" project, since he used the word himself, or "compulsory military training", there were some feelings of unrest and some objections which surely attracted his attention. He may have secured support from some people in certain quarters, but as regards newspapers, their remarks were diametrically opposed to the opinion of the hon. member, who referred to unqualified encouragement on the part of the people with whom he got in touch with the exception of a few.

[Mr. Prud'homme.]

I know that a number of young people of his constituency have expressed to him, rather clearly and conclusively, their objections to that proposal, and he is probably seeking a way out by submitting a completely new and different project from that of last year.

The remarks of my hon. friend have made me realize that he did not exactly know what he would like to propose. He did not even have a clear idea of what he wanted, and that is why he tried to enlist the aid of all members in this House to put his proposal through.

In a friendly gesture and to help him out of the awkward situation which he brought upon himself last year, I suggest he take this opportunity to withdraw his motion.

• (6:30 p.m.)

This would enable him to get out of an embarrassing situation, indeed to erase the wrong effects of the proposal he put forward last year and to regain, if possible his popularity with the young set in his constituency. In fact according to the information supplied to me the young people of his constituency will remember that when the time comes and I would not want my hon. friend to suffer from the statements he made although his intentions are good.

Furthermore it is important to note that the implementation of his proposal would call for an expenditure of $300 million which surely is a most imposing sum of money. In addition I am amazed to note that even by using the present method as an escape he gave other evidence of the little seriousness with which he considers the question because an expenditure such as that proposed should not be moved in a motion of a private member such as him and me, but should instead be moved by a minister of the Crown.

I feel that at the close of his observations, the hon. member for Beauharnois-Salaberry revealed the purpose of his proposal. His only aim, and I congratulate him for it, is to do something to alleviate unemployment. It is common knowledge that the government members are interdependent, that they promised full employment upon acceding to power. It is probably to help his colleague, the Minister of Labour (Mr. MacEachen) who had promised to check unemployment, with the assistance of his team, in a very short time. I am quite sure that is the only reason for his proposal, and before resuming my seat I should like to remind him that the most gracious and efficient way of solving the predicament in which he has placed himself would be to withdraw the notice of motion he put before the house, which gesture would assist him in mending his reputation with his constituents.

Mr. Marcel Prud'homme (St. Denis): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the hon. member for St. Hyacinthe-Bagot?

Mr. Ricard: Certainly.

Mr. Prud'homme: Can the hon. member tell this house if he is a Conservative to the extent of holding on to the past and fearing to examine the problems facing the youth of Canada? And note that I am not talking about the subject matter of the issue. I believe that is the objective of the hon. member for Beauharnois-Salaberry.

Mr. Ricard: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member for St. Denis wishes that I had said the words he is attempting to attribute to me, but for his information, I must tell him that I never mentioned that subject. On the contrary, I congratulated the hon. member for Beauharnois-Salaberry for his endeavours at helping our youth, and I never refused to examine the problems concerned.

On the other hand, the hon. member for St. Denis has been a student for a great many years, and I would not want him to abandon his studies because he apparently needs twice the time needed by others to learn.

If his colleague from Beauharnois-Salaberry could help him in any way, I would commend him for any success he might obtain.

Mr. Prud'homme: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. The hon. member for St. Hyacinthe-Bagot talked about all kinds of things but he has not answered my question.

[English]

Mr. Arnold Peters (Timiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the hon. Member for Beauharnois-Salaberry (Mr. Laniel) for introducing this very novel and worth-while motion. It can be borne in mind that a motion by a private Member should probably be relegated to this period of the evening when normally we would be having our supper, because obviously there is not going to be any government interest in the matter.

The hon. Member has had to couch his motion in such a way that he uses words like "possibility," "advisability," and "charged with reporting to this House on the advantages and disadvantages..." He has had to do so because really he is suggesting consideration of the expenditure of money, and he has mentioned that the motion, if passed, could give rise to a potential expenditure of $300 million.

I am impressed also because the hon. Member is from the Province of Quebec. We have always been interested to see the lack of enthusiasm displayed by Members from that Province in the establishment of national programs geared to education. I have always contended that we should have a federal bureau of education or department of education, not to provide education but to provide co-ordination and equality of educational opportunities across the country. The hon. Member has taken this into consideration because he has said his proposal would provide employment in such a field.

I have always believed that if we are to have an effective national unemployment insurance office, particularly an effective employment commission, we must set standards that will enable the Federal Government to provide equal opportunities for retraining the unemployed in all parts of Canada. This has not been possible in the technical field to date, and I think the hon. Member probably has in mind that the solution of technical education is a national problem. I believe the Federal Government should establish a national educational code in the technical field, and for that reason I think the hon. Member has made a very worth-while suggestion. However, I doubt if the Government will consider it at length.

We can look back at the compulsory training program we had a few years ago. People were violently opposed to it, even though it was an emergency program, and I can foresee reluctance on the part of many Members to support such a type of program.

I am not familiar with all the pros and cons involved in the advantages of military training on a national basis. We all know the problem caused by lack of discipline in our young people, particularly those between the ages of 18 and 21. In passing, I mention the armed forces parade held in Ottawa on Saturday when, no doubt, those who saw it both live and on television were shocked to find how hard it was for some participants to march in line and keep step while marching. I was highly amused to see one chap in the back changing step continually. I do not know whom he was trying to get in step with, because nobody was in step.

Mr. Prud'homme: Maybe he was an N.D.P.

Mr. Peters: Maybe he was. I always had the same problem. When I was in the services I always had to try to get into step with somebody else, but I do not think the hon. Member is really advocating military training. He is advocating some type of disciplinary training that would provide young people with equality of opportunity for employment, and thus allow them to make a greater contribution to the Canadian scene.

Most Members of Parliament know the sad state of affairs which exists when a young fellow of poor parents goes through high school, meets the academic standards but cannot continue his education, and has to be advised to go into the armed services to take advantage of the training provided there in the academic field.

• (6:40 p.m.)

This has been a sad commentary on the opportunities provided for our young people in the past. I am pleased this suggestion should come from a Member from the Province of Quebec, where no doubt the same problems have to be faced as are being experienced across Canada. I think this suggestion will receive much more favourable consideration from other parts of the country than he might have expected. He may also find it will receive a greater measure of support from some of his colleagues from Quebec, who hitherto have been fearful of the idea of education in any shape or form being provided by the Federal Government. The hon. Member has ably drawn attention to the experiences of areas in all parts of Canada and the necessity for a training period between the year when the student leaves high school and the year he finds employment in a suitable occupation.

We have all read in our newspapers recently about the increasing difficulty which college students find in obtaining summer employment at an income sufficient to enable them to provide for their continuing education. In many areas more than 50 per cent of those attending universities have this year been unable to find suitable summer employment. This situation is one which will get worse before it improves. One reason for this is the large number of young people who are prepared to take on similar employment on a permanent basis.

I believe the motion before us deserves the support of the House. The hon. Member is not asking for specific action at this point, but for a feasibility study to provide information on the basis of which the Government may reach a decision. I hope the motion will get speedy consideration in this House and that the Government will undertake to give leadership in bringing about a study of this type in the interest of providing increased opportunities for these young people who are finding it increasingly difficult to obtain employment.

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): I find this notice of motion most interesting. Last year when a similar motion was introduced, I had the privilege of speaking on it. It was interesting to note the correspondence which followed. Many of those who wrote to me were supporters of the motion; some of them were against it.

I notice that the hon. Member has made some changes in his motion this year. In principle—and I speak as a father of five boys—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Thompson: —I think some kind of training program for our youth and for the good of the country is very desirable. I know there are those who oppose compulsory training; they think of it in terms of military preparedness and object to it on that basis. I do not think this is the purpose behind the present motion at all. It seems to me that in view of the circumstances in which some of our young people are growing up in this country it would not be an undesirable thing if they spent some part of their young lives in the service of their country under the type of discipline which would be necessary.

I do not necessarily support the suggestions made as to how this might be brought about in detail, neither do I pretend to know the answers to the various questions which would arise were such an idea translated into practical terms. Nevertheless I think it would be wise to let this motion go to a committee. Or, if that is not possible, we might well be given an opportunity for a fuller debate on this subject. Certainly I commend the hon. Member for having raised it at this time; the resulting publicity will no doubt cause people to discuss this matter widely across the country.

Many of our young people are being raised today amid influences which seem to say to them: Do not ask how much you can give to your country but, rather, how much your country can provide for you. Training of the type suggested might well be of tremendous benefit in these circumstances. It would be an opportunity for beautifying our country and doing many of the things which we sometimes neglect in favour of more pressing commitments, while at the same time providing guidance of a type which would be good and wholesome for our young men. Therefore, without speaking at greater length I, personally, am pleased to support the intention behind this motion.

I use the word "personally" because I am not sure whether everyone in my party agrees with this. From my experience of many of the problems which face our young people in Canada I think the institution of such a program is worthy of our consideration and I congratulate the hon. Member for bringing this motion before the House.

[Translation]

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Chapleau): Mr. Speaker, tonight we are again considering a motion similar to that introduced last year by the member for Beauharnois-Salaberry. A perusal of the motion, however, reveals that it has been drawn up differently but the purpose seems to be the same.

Last year the hon. member introduced a motion concerning compulsory service; this year, he changed this expression to "national training service".

No doubt next year, during another session, provided the hon. member is still with us, the terms of his motion will be altered so much that its purpose will be different.

Personally, I am not completely in agreement with the purpose of the hon. member's motion.

To a certain extent, I agree with him. Many of our young people do not always behave properly. In my opinion, the hon. member who introduced this motion tonight should rather ask his colleagues and his party —who are somewhat responsible for that situation, because they have run this country for many years without being able to find a democratic means of helping our young people—to give them a purpose, an ideal in life. They are the ones who are proposing such a measure today—he makes no mention of the fact this year, but it is the same thing he was advocating last year—that is to say, the service would be compulsory and run by the army.

From this point of view, I think there is confusion among the Liberals, because if I am well informed, the purpose of the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Hellyer) is to cut down the total strength of the army, whereas the hon. member for Beauharnois-Salaberry wants to increase it by encouraging our young people to do some military service by offering them additional training in the field of health, etc., while giving them an opportunity to visit and know their country.

I wonder whether this motion is not brought forward in connection with the military demonstration that took place last Saturday in the streets of the national capital. I wonder whether we should not put together those two things aimed at influencing the young people and the public at large. They made a display of strength and greatness in order to influence them so that they would be interested in the motion brought forward tonight.

But I noticed something tonight. Last year the hon. member thought that he could fight unemployment which is rampant in Canada and that he could save the Unemployment Insurance Fund a few hundreds of thousands of dollars.

In my opinion, if the Liberals, the government or the Liberal party would make a sincere effort, they could find something better than a national training service for our youth. They could find something else to fight unemployment effectively.

If we wished to propose an objective, an ideal for our youth, a truly serious ideal, it would not be necessary to introduce such a measure.

I believe that the educational system of every province could be improved, but our governments should give parents the financial means to utilize the wealth of this country so they can give their children the training and education which they need in order to serve their country in every field.

• (6:50 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. D. W. Groos (Victoria (B.C.)): Mr. Speaker, I very much respect the motives which prompted this notice of motion from our colleague the hon. Member for Beauharnois-Salaberry (Mr. Laniel). It is a notice of motion that has very far reaching effects.

I have only two main points that I wish to make because I see that our time is very short.

First of all, the operative part of the hon. Member's notice of motion is, I think, contained in the wording, "the Government should consider the advisability of undertaking a searching study of the youth problem in Canada". I thought initially that this reference to a "youth problem" was an unfortunate phrase and I was inclined to take mild exception to it; but I think it was perhaps due to the translation, because when I discussed it with the hon. Member I found that we do see eye to eye on this matter. No one knows better than he, and he admits it, that there is not very much wrong with the youth of today. The response to the Company of Young Canadians I think is a very good demonstration of that fact. But young people, moving today in such numbers as they are from the farms to the cities, have very much lost control over their destiny and environment and it is very difficult for them to provide for themselves in this twentieth century.

I think that youth is inclined today to question the old standards and the old values, but I see, like my hon. friend, nothing wrong with that. I think our standards and values are no good if they cannot stand up to this type of scrutiny. I think our young people seek very much today an outlet for their energies; they want to contribute and they want to be constructive. I think today there is an altruism in their attitude toward life which was not present in former years. Most of the young people I know certainly want to share the blessings of this land and the fruits of their labours with others both within this country and abroad, and I think this National Training Service might very well be a suitable vehicle for doing so.

These young people want to find out more about the Canada in which they live and more about other Canadians. I think we had an example in the Montreal Gazette of Saturday, I believe it was, from a very distinguished Canadian, a native son of British Columbia, Dr. Rocke Robertson, the Principal and Vice Chancellor of McGill University, who said that one of our main problems in Canada today is that we do not know enough about each other; that is, the two cultures that make up this country. I think this motion conjures up some memories of the United States Civilian Conservation Corps of depression years, and much good came of that. We see today across the country many lasting evidences of the good work these people did.

I agree with the idea of a study, and I think perhaps this study would show the impracticality of a scheme of such generous proportions as has been outlined by the hon. Member. But I know he would be prepared to lower his sights to within the realm of practicality, and perhaps a pilot program, something of smaller dimensions, would be what is necessary at this time; something small, something voluntary, something which would teach skills for specific projects on the frontiers, perhaps, of Canada—the west, the north, the far East—something which would lay down minimum and maximum periods of service within this program. There would be very many incidental benefits other than those mentioned in the hon. Member's notice of motion, of physical education, bilingualism and self-discipline.

I said I had two main points, Mr. Speaker. I am hoping you will allow two or three extra minutes in view of the time that was wasted by the hon. Member for Timiskaming (Mr. Peters) when he produced a meal in the House shortly after six o'clock. The second point I wish to make is that with regard to the second paragraph of the notice of motion I think the operative portion is that "there should be appointed a Commission made up of representatives of the various bodies concerned with health, education, employment, and the Armed Forces". I would just like to say about this proposal that it would seem to me to be an ad hoc committee and I think we have seen many ad hoc committees—

Mr. Peters: Question.

Mr. Groos:—and what we need today is perhaps—

Mr. Peters: Question.

Mr. MacDonald: Go and get your supper.

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Groos: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if you could call for order; there seems to be quite a lot of noise coming from the other side of the House.

Mr. Peters: Question, Mr. Speaker.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Batten): Order. It being seven o'clock, the hour for the consideration of private Members' business has expired and the House will now resume debate on the second reading of Bill No. C-102, an Act respecting banks and banking, which was interrupted at 6 p.m.

BANK ACT

DECENNIAL REVISION AND EXTENSION OF CHARTERS

The House resumed consideration of the motion of Mr. Gordon for the second reading of Bill No. C-102, respecting banks and banking.

• (7:00 p.m.)

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, resuming debate on the bill to provide for the revision of the Bank Act I would say at the outset that when I spoke at the resolution stage of this bill I outlined several of the main points that were apparent on a quick perusal of the proposed legislation. I also brought out a few of the details that seem to be unique in relation to our system of banking, as it is carried on in Canada today. I spoke of the definition of the purposes and functions of banks as they operate in our private enterprise economy. I would just say that we in Social Credit are in no way opposed to a private enterprise banking system. We believe that the banking system which we have at the present time has been developed to a very high degree of efficiency. I do not think we ought to be concerned about interfering with the function of banks, by taking them over, any more than we should be concerned about the taking over of any other industry or commercial operation that is doing an effective job. However, we do believe there are certain changes that should be made in respect of our banking system, and that the place where these changes should be made is here, in this legislation which affects or controls the operation of the private banks. I think these changes are very essential if we wish the banking system to carry on in its present way, particularly in view of some of the problems facing banks which affect the economy, and the problems which might well arise if private enterprise banks are threatened with takeovers, such as have happened in some Communist countries which operate under an extreme form of socialistic Government.

This legislation is very important then not only to the banks themselves, but also to the proper functioning of the nation's economy and in some aspects to this bill with which we are concerned. We commend the Minister for some of the aspects contained herein, but generally speaking I think the bill is significant because of those things which have been left out. Before commenting on these various aspects, I should like to make one or two observations about the remarks of the hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert).

The hon. Member, in prefacing his own speech, let fly at my colleague, the hon. Member for Medicine Hat (Mr. Olson) and accused him of talking through his hat. I do not know which hat he had in mind; perhaps he was speaking of the Medicine Hat which that hon. Member represents. In view of some of the remarks made at an earlier date by the hon. Member for Edmonton West, it is my feeling that he was talking through his hat, rather than the hon. Member from the city which carries that name.

I should like to refer to page 1001 of Hansard for May 6 where the following words of the hon. Member for Edmonton West appear:

> We do know that in the background there have been some rather odd things that have happened.

The hon. Member was referring to the Alberta Provincial Treasury Branches. He made several charges in respect of that institution without giving any substantive support. That is the usual type of aspersion cast by political opponents of the Government of Alberta, but it is interesting that they are not made by business, industry or even the private banks themselves.

On June 5 of this year the Edmonton Journal carried an article which stated that 60 centres in Alberta have requested the establishment of Treasury Branch service. The specific part of the article to which I refer states:

> Sixty communities have requested treasury branch services, says C. G. Davey, superintendent of the provincially-owned banking system.
>
> He told The Journal this year's program will entail opening branches in three centres which do not have full-time service and modernizing premises in ten other communities.
> Representations have come from boards of trade, chambers of commerce and other businessmen's organizations, he said.

I think that is proof that the Treasury Branches in Alberta are rendering a very necessary and important service. Are such institutions odd? I do not think they are odd at all. The hon. Member made another charge when he said:

> There is no power to bring any of the officers of the system before a committee of the legislature. There is no committee examination, and there has not been any committee examination of the operations of the Provincial Treasury Branches.

That is absolutely wrong. The hon. Member was talking off the top of his hat. He may think he can justify his vagueness by such claims, but that is a sheer departure from the fact and he has not given correct information to this House. If he examined the 1955 report of the Public Accounts of the Province of Alberta, he would find that a committee dealt at length with the Treasury Branches and questioned the administrative heads of those branches. The only restriction placed on the question was the refusal to give public information in respect of individual accounts or loans. This is a practice followed by every chartered bank, the Porter Royal Commission and what we have known as the Banking and Commerce Committee of the House of Commons. Full particulars of the operation of the Treasury Branches are contained in the Alberta Public Accounts each year.

The services performed by the Treasury Branches of Alberta are not only in the field of banking, but also in the field of Government service generally, and these services were summarized by the Minister of Finance of Alberta in his first budget speech delivered to the Alberta Legislature a few months ago. I do not intend to deal with this at great length, but I think the record must be set straight.

The Alberta Public Accounts indicate that the Alberta Provincial Treasury Branches—and this was substantiated in the budget speech of the Minister himself—last year held a total value of deposits of $109,507,000. Total loans amounted to $65,873,000 with a total reserve for doubtful accounts as at March 31, 1964, of $3,388,000. I believe those figures indicate that these Treasury Branches are rendering a very important service to the public and to the commercial operations of that province. They also indicate a need for an extension of bank services presently being rendered to the people of Western Canada.

I do not understand the Minister of Finance in his action against Provincial Government investment in banks, and I refer not only to the application by British Columbia for a chartered bank, but to others, in view of the fact that the Governments of the provinces concerned are anxious that adequate banking facilities and services be provided to meet the needs of their citizens. For those reasons we support the applications for charters for the Bank of Western Canada and the Laurentide Bank, as we will support others which indicate that they meet the requirements of the Bank Act.

[Mr. Thompson.]

Referring again to the legislation now before us, I should like again to state that it is significant more for what it does not contain than for what it does contain.

There are several points upon which we should like to commend the Minister. We commend him first of all for permitting an increase in the interest rate beyond 6 per cent for certain type of loans, which banks are presently not allowed to make. We commend him second, for bringing under the provisions of the Act some financial institutions, including near banks. I think this is necessary if we are going to have a financial policy on a national level. We also commend him for not tampering with credit unions or the Treasury Branches in Alberta, because we believe that both these institutions provide services which are essential to the economy and that they should be permitted to operate in this way. I trust there will be no attempt to deal with these matters either by amendment to the Bank Act or by secondary legislation such as the legislation dealing with the Quebec Savings Banks. Certain of these matters, of course, come within the exclusive jurisdiction of the provinces and any attempt to curtail or circumvent provincial jurisdiction can expect to meet with strong resistance from the provinces.

• (7:10 p.m.)

Thus certain features of this new banking legislation appear to be improvements. Others are of questionable value. Information will undoubtedly be obtained when the bill goes before the committee, and we hope we may get through with this stage of our discussions tonight. The hearings of the Finance Committee would in my opinion be very important, and certainly as a result a lot of information is going to be brought to light. Therefore I would concur with my colleague, the hon. Member for Medicine Hat (Mr. Olson), in hoping that the Minister will not delay the introduction of the legislation to extend further the present Bank Act, and at the same time I do not see why there should be any reason to shorten the length of time of that postponement. Let us have enough time so we can consider these things in the depth in which I think they should be considered.

However, there are certain features of the new Bank Act that we might discuss at this stage. For instance, there is the provision with respect to the cash reserve requirement in clause 72, subclause 1. It requires a bank to maintain a cash reserve in the form of notes of and deposits with the Bank of Canada. Subclause 3, however, authorizes the Bank of Canada to require a bank to maintain a secondary reserve in the form of notes of and deposits with the Bank of Canada as well as other types of secondary securities. Why should a bank be required to maintain a cash reserve and then a secondary cash reserve, both in the form of notes of and deposits with the Bank of Canada? Could not the Bank of Canada under this type of provision defeat the very purpose of the provision in clause 78 (2) whereby the cash reserve percentage of 8 per cent shall be decreased progressively to 7 per cent?

There seems to be no sound reason at all to abandon the power to maintain a flexible cash reserve ration for the banking system, even though this power has not been fully used for some time. This clause institutes a new secondary reserve system of treasury bill holdings in addition to the 7 per cent cash ratio reserve also required. It is putting into law what has been done unofficially for some years. Nevertheless, I do not quite see the purpose that the Minister has in mind in introducing this into the legislation. Why could we not have carried on under the present practice?

From the point of view of the stability of the banking system it may be a good thing but, of course, John Q. Public is having to pay the interest on the treasury bills that the banks have to hold. I repeat that some similar requirements to this and relating to cash reserve ratios should really be required of any institution that is actually engaged in some form of banking, that is, in the acceptance of deposits which are transferrable and repayable on demand, but not backed 100 per cent by legal tender.

There are other questions to which we might refer that are not answered in this legislation. For instance, what about the relationship between a bank and a wholly owned trust company subsidiary? The legislation makes some reference to this and it seems that it is rather effective in one direction; but is this arrangement to be terminated or is it going to be allowed to continue? If so, under what terms and conditions will it be allowed to continue, keeping in mind that the Porter Commission made no recommendation as to banks being allowed to enter into the trust business at the present time, although it did recommend that the Bank Act be applied to a wider group of deposit taking institutions, which would seemingly include trust companies.

Section 18 (1) also raises a point of particular interest. This allows the bank to open accounts in central banks abroad and to accept deposits from central banks in other countries and pay interest on them. I may be reading too much into this, Mr. Speaker, but I believe this could develop into a most valuable instrument to aid international trade and settlements. In fact, I found it of particular interest because it is very similar to the recommendations made in a private Member's bill recently sponsored by my colleague, the hon. Member for Chicoutimi (Mr. Côté), which would amend the Bank of Canada Act to allow that bank to hold non-convertible currencies of other nations in its reserves. If this is what the new legislation intends, I think we could very well find the answer to many of our problems that are related to international trade and settlements, and certainly it might be used to expand our trade beneficially from the point of view of financing the sale of many of our surplus commodities.

Appropriate Bank of Canada deposits of dollars with countries abroad, or accepting deposits of "soft" currencies in Canada could make it not too difficult to stabilize currencies of nations needing such help, and at the same time provide funds with which to develop trade with many of the emerging countries. In my opinion the question of aid is not just something related to dollars or technical know-how such as we have in great abundance in Canada, but such action would help in a very material way to facilitate trade between Canada and some of the emerging countries which desperately need such trade.

There is another very interesting section which I might mention briefly. I refer to section 23, which is actually repealed. An honourable funeral is here given to the myth that the value of our currency is in any way determined by its convertibility into gold. I am reminded of a quotation. I do not know the author but certainly it applies here. This quotation states:

> A fallacy prevalent yet
> Is to think that the money we get
> Is based upon gold.
> It's not. What we hold
> Is deposit, created by debt.

Again, if possible hon. Members might be asked to ruminate on the question: If this be so, then what does back our currency, and why? This is a good question as we seek to understand what goes on in our own financial system and how our monetary system functions.

Our economic system has indicated for some time that we are now tending to move toward an inflationary trend which may well need to be checked. I am going to quote a few paragraphs from an article entitled "Money Supply At New Peak" which appeared on the 18th of May. The article reads in part as follows:

...the money supply was $18,743 million as at May 5, a new high record. This figure was up $193 million for the week, widest weekly increase since the end of March. In the past year—

In the fiscal year 1964-65.

—the money supply has expanded by $1,691 million.

Apparently it was thought that the affluent situation of the economy in particular required this, but certainly it is a lot of new money to come into existence in one week.

The amount of coin held outside the chartered banks is shown as $232 million in the latest report, unchanged from the preceding week. The amount of paper money or notes amounted to $1,933 million, an increase of $44 million for the week.

It is interesting to note that on the same date the amount of notes held by the chartered banks was $405 million, so that the public held nearly five times as much in paper money as the banks did. Bank notes do not earn interest, and banks tend to keep their holdings of such paper money at a minimum consistent with their requirements. In the week ended May 5 their holdings of bank notes were reduced by $40 million.

• (7:20 p.m.)

Then, Mr. Speaker, the same article mentions that the chartered banks, on May 5, held $3,746 million in Government of Canada securities, Treasury Bills and other securities, only $58 million less than a year ago. The article mentions that, in addition, they held $1,186 million on provincial, municipal and corporate securities, or $20 million more than a year ago and that deposits in, and notes of the Bank of Canada amounted to $1,368 million or $122 million more than a year ago.

As has already been brought to the attention of the House, the Government picked up $75 million of the present issue of Treasury Bills which went on the market today. This all refers back to the statement I made during the Throne Speech debate, Mr. Speaker, with regard to the fact that the Bank of Canada today holds approximately 15 per cent of the national debt. This is something many of us do not realize. Nevertheless, on August 7 of last year the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon) himself mentioned the fact and it is recorded on page 6552 of Hansard that these holdings comprised 14.6 per cent of the total Government securities outstanding on June 30, 1964. He stated also that the total income of the bank was $127,851,000 and the net income paid to the Consolidated Revenue Fund was $116,386,000. We are not protesting these facts. We are just pointing out that on this basis there is no reason why the Bank of Canada could not hold more of Canada's net debt, particularly since it is borne out that this is the policy of the present Government at this time. In other words, the Canadian people get the profit from the issues of this credit against their real credit; that is actually what is happening when the Bank of Canada buys up $75 million of these Treasury Bills. Instead of privately controlled financial institutions getting these profits, the people get them.

Well, Mr. Speaker, we will not continue talking about that. However, I should like to advance one proposal which I believe would be of great benefit to Canada. This proposal is not new. Members of this party have presented it before this House before, and my predecessor, Mr. Solon Low, referred to it during the bank legislation revision in 1954. We believe the Minister of Finance would be well advised to establish a permanent monetary commission composed of men who represent the Bank of Canada, the chartered banks, the Department of Finance and various aspects of our economy such as agriculture, labour, industry, and private business in general. Such a monetary commission might well be an extension of the board of the Bank of Canada, meeting regularly to consider all these matters related to financial and monetary policy of the Federal Government. This commission would not be silently responsible to some unseen power or authority, but would be able to answer directly to the representatives of the Canadian people sitting in the House of Commons. Likewise, they would be able to report through the Auditor General as the public accounts are reported today, making it possible to deal with financial and monetary matters before the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

It would be a means also of keeping Members informed about the Government's monetary policy, thus keeping the public informed as well. An informed public makes for a strong democracy as well as a strong Parliament. I am convinced such a permanent monetary commission would provide the answer to many of the problems we face in our economy today, problems which I do not believe are being given sufficient attention in our thinking to provide the answers. We would get from such a commission an independent report periodically. In this way the Members of this House would be able to keep their fingers much closer on what was actually happening in the functioning of our economic system. The commission could be charged with overseeing the policy drafted and set up by the House of Commons; and overseeing and managing could include a very important point, one which I think is of tremendous importance to the people of Canada, and that is the decennial revision of the Bank Act which we are debating now.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would say that what we need in Canada today is a desirable economy. A desirable economy might be expressed as an economy which utilizes all modern methods of production, but which at the same time offers equitable employment for all. I suggest that there is a national inventory level of purchaseable production which, when maintained by an effective demand, would bring about the desirable economy. "Effective demand" is when the people of Canada would have within their own hands the necessary purchasing power to buy those things which are necessary to enable the standard of living of which we are capable and which, at the same time, would solve the problem of distribution that presently faces us. Certainly, our problem today in the economy is not one of production nor one of consumption, so long as there are people in Canada or in the world who need the things we can produce. As long as there are people who need what we can produce, there can be no surplus. What we need is an effective demand that will move the production of which we are capable into the hands of those who produced it and who wish to consume it. This should be the function of a desirable economy.

It is through the effective functioning of our banking system, it is through the policies that are laid down in the legislation regarding banking by this House, that such a desirable economy can be brought about. I just emphasize, therefore, that the meetings of the committee to which this legislation is going to be referred, this whole question of bringing about the proper type of legislation to control monetary policy through our banking system, should deal with this important matter connected with the welfare of the country.

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I have listened with interest to a portion of this debate. Unfortunately, I could not be here all the time because of other duties in my office and elsewhere. I must say I have listened with great interest to the hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr. Thompson). I can never quite understand our Social Credit friends, Mr. Speaker, because if they were to give effect to the ideas they put forward in this House concerning Social Credit, we would have a socialist democratic form of Government. There is no question about it. I cannot understand why they want to socialize credit without accepting the full social responsibility of such action.

Mr. Thompson: May I ask the hon. Member a question? Does he not think it would be much better to consider socializing our credit to preserve and strengthen a private enterprise economy, than it would to turn it over to state ownership?

Mr. Herridge: I am glad to answer that question. If we socialize our credit, then what we have actually done is to assume federal social responsibility over the economy, upon which could be based legitimate private enterprise which also recognized its responsibility to the community.

• (7:30 p.m.)

Mind you, Mr. Speaker, I realize these people have a germ of an idea in which there is a basis of truth. The only thing is that they will not come quite far enough along the road.

To the majority of people, banking has been a mystery every since the Rothschilds financed Wellington at the Battle of Waterloo, and Napoleon on the other side. Later they made a big profit as a result of a messenger going to Britain and informing the Rothschilds of the victory of Wellington, before the government knew.

Mr. Thompson: And the people of Great Britain are still paying the interest on that.

Mr. Herridge: That is quite right. The people of Great Britain are still paying interest on debts incurred during the Napoleonic wars, and later.

Mr. Churchill: Would the hon. Member permit a question?

Mr. Herridge: Certainly.

Mr. Churchill: I am sure the hon. Member would not want his statement to reverberate down through history about Rothschild financing Wellington at Waterloo. Was it not a fact that he got advance notice of Wellington's victory at Waterloo, and as a result of that made a fortune?

Mr. Herridge: They financed both governments in the Napoleonic wars, but the House of Rothschild was substantially founded on the profits made as a result of Wellington's victory at Waterloo. I think we are both correct. Anyway, this question has always been a mystery to the average man.

The late former Prime Minister, Mackenzie King, recognized this fact when he said something to this effect in the House, recognizing as he did the power over the economy that was in the hands of those who control credit—"Give me control of the credit of any nation and I will control that nation." I am sure our present Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon) has the same point of view, only he has not expressed it so forcefully. However, there will come a time in the not too distant future when the Members of our party will have allies in the Members of the Social Credit party and the Creditistes in the cause of social control of credit, and at some later date, possibly 25 or 30 years hence, we can expect to get allies from the Progressive Conservative party.

I give the Minister credit for having an appreciation of the responsibility of the banks to the nation as a whole. I understand that this bill is to be referred to a committee—I have forgotten its exact name.

Mr. Knowles: Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

Mr. Herridge: My hon. friend from Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) says it is Finance, Trade, Economic affairs and what not. Anyway, I trust this committee will take every opportunity not only to inform its members but all Members of the House and the people of this country on how the banking system works.

I just want to place on record some ideas that have been given to me by a person who believes we can improve the service rendered the nation by the banks by a combination of public control through legislation and private operation. I think my friends in the Social Credit group would go along with his ideas, and I just mention them because I have had considerable correspondence with this gentleman and think he should be called before the committee to explain his ideas; he gives a program for mobilization of money under federal control in a five year plan.

Mr. Woolliams: What is his name?

Mr. Herridge: Richard H. Babbage. Possibly he is known to the Minister. Anyway, his general idea is, and I quote:

[Mr. Churchill.]

An extended banking system supervised by the Bank of Canada pursuant to existing statutes enacted by the Parliament of Canada.

Designed to consolidate:

1. Federal control of currency and credit;
2. Provincial control of natural resources;
3. Effective financial supervision of all organizations operating in public ownership.

Then he goes on to deal with the organization of this type of plan, and first he says:

1. Establish in the Bank of Canada a separate account for each provincial government.

2. Set up a national revolving fund as a federal government account in the Bank of Canada made up as follows:—

(a) Revenues of all government agencies, Departments, Crown Corporations and Canadian Wheat Board.

(b) All chartered bank reserves and rest funds.

(c) Special payments received by the Government of Canada.

(d) Reserves of Life Insurance Companies.

(e) Revenues of all public utility corporations.

(f) Pension fund holdings of federal government bonds.

(g) General public holdings of federal government bonds.

(h) Branch line rationalization fund.

All the foregoing deposits would remain in chartered banks as agents for the Bank of Canada.

Then he goes on to suggest:

Deposit accounts enumerated above would be designated "Special Account (Control)" in Bank of Canada ledgers. Expenditures debited to such accounts would require federal Cabinet Order in Council. This procedure is followed by the Canadian Wheat Board at present.

The national revolving fund, holding currencies of countries trading with Canada, could finance all foreign aid programs. Similarly, obligations to the United Nations and NATO could be serviced, as well as interest on the national debt which could be liquidated progressively.

I hope my friends in the Social Credit group are following me.

Forming a continuous flow of flexible money supply the national revolting fund would finance all projects for the good of Canada in keeping with special powers allotted to the provinces in the B.N.A. Act subject to Cabinet authorization.

Credit demands by private individuals and corporations would be serviced and provided by chartered banks, solely, under free competition as to interest rates.

All government grants, subsidies, subventions and state insurance for private profit enterprise would cease. Risk capital, unhampered by taxation on consumption by Government at three levels, would have fair administration subject to the rule of law.

Any doubt about the capacity of Canadian chartered banks to furnish loans (both long and short-term) for greatly stimulated activity in farm and factory, is dispelled by statistics, published recently, in American Banker Magazine, which rates two Canadian banks among the ten largest banks in the free world, judged by size of deposits.

How Canadian banks stood in that list appears as follows:

Royal Bank of Canada (8)	$4,686,339,000
Canadian Imperial Commerce (9)	4,529,904,000

Bank of Montreal (17)	3,709,920,000
Toronto Dominion (44)	2,109,450,000
Bank of Nova Scotia (47)	2,037,221,000

These five banks hold liquid assets of Canadian depositors aggregating $17,072,834,000. Assuming an average cash ration of 8 per cent, that amount of liquidity would finance loan demands in excess of $213,000,000,000.

I mention this because I have had a lot of correspondence with this gentleman who, I think, has something for us to consider in the ideas he has put forward.

The more rapid and radical changes induced in our way of life by science, the greater is the need for social stability made possible by organized sharing of potential hazards.

More than two-thirds of income tax, collected by the federal Government at present, comes out of pay envelopes of all who earn salaries and wages. This represents the most acutely felt "potential hazard" afflicting the Canadian population today. Financing through a national revolving fund would pull deduction slips from pay envelopes.

Mobilization of money operating under federal control in compliance of laws of Canada would, at once, ensure absolute control of the public purse by the House of Commons, notwithstanding anything in any part of the constitution.

This is a very interesting idea and does provide an opportunity for the federal social control of credit, and yet do it through the chartered banks. In my opinion, a person with such a policy should have an opportunity to appear before the committee, express his views, and be questioned. I simply rise to suggest that this committee has an opportunity, if the committee majority agree to accept that opportunity, to call persons and witnesses before it to gather their ideas not only with respect to our banking system as it is now, but to the system as it might be amended or altered. In so doing they would inform members of this House as to the way in which the banking system operates and how it could be improved. The population of Canada generally would also be provided with important information on this subject. Not only could we amend the Bank Act, but in so doing we could give the people generally an understanding of the way in which credit is distributed for the development of our economy. If this committee undertakes its responsibility not only to the Government and to the House but to the people of this country generally we would have some knowledge of the effect of bank policies upon our economic health and future development.

• (7:40 p.m.)

That is all I have to say, now. I think these ideas, as well as the ideas which have been put forward by others, should be given consideration. Even the ideas of the hon. Member for Red Deer (Mr Thompson), should be considered. If he wishes to go before the committee and outline in detail how the program put forward by his hon. friends would affect our economic development, I think he should be given the opportunity to do so.

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): It has been suggested recently that clause 75(2)(g) is restrictive and unfair in its application to the Mercantile Bank of Canada. There seems to be considerable misunderstanding about the facts of the matter, which are as follows:

The proposed bill includes sections which:

(a) will ensure that control of the Canadian banks—apart from the Mercantile—will be retained in Canadian hands;

(b) will restrict non-resident participation to 25 per cent of the shares of any bank;

(c) will restrict the holdings of any single shareholder or group of shareholders—foreign or domestic—to 10 per cent of the shares;

(d) will not permit Canadian banks to control other corporations including trust and loan companies.

The Government is anxious to see a number of new banks incorporated. Therefore, in the initial stages in order to encourage this, it is not proposed that the limitation of shareholdings to 10 per cent will apply. However, such new banks will be subject to the provisions of clause 75(2)(g) which will limit their total resources to 20 times their authorized capital until such time as their shares are more widely distributed, and no single person or group holds more than 10 per cent.

The Mercantile Bank of Canada is a wholly owned subsidiary of the International Banking Corporation which, in turn, is owned by the First National City Bank of New York. I understand that International Banking Corporation also owns all the shares of International Trust Company, which is a Canadian trust company operating in Canada.

All this places the First National City Bank of New York in a preferred position on three counts:

(i) It owns all the shares of a Canadian bank, something that no one else will be permitted to do.

(ii) It owns both a chartered bank and a trust company in Canada, something no other bank or anyone else will be permitted to do.

(iii) It is the only foreign bank which may conduct a banking business in Canada.

In these circumstances, the question arises whether the provisions of clause 75(2)(g) which will apply in the case of all other banks in Canada, should be applicable to the Mercantile.

It is argued on behalf of Mercantile that the application of clause 75(2)(g) will be restrictive and therefore that it is unfair to the owners of that bank. I cannot accept this suggestion of unfairness. This whole matter was very fully discussed with representatives of the First National City Bank of New York before they acquired the shares of Mercantile.

On July 18, 1963, Mr. James Stillman Rockefeller, President of the First National City Bank of New York, and Mr. Robert McFadden, an officer of that bank and now President of the Mercantile Bank of Canada, called upon me in my office here in the Parliament Buildings. Mr. R. B. Bryce, Deputy Minister of Finance, and Mr. Clayton Elderkin, Inspector-General of Banks, were present during the discussion.

Mr. Rockefeller informed me that his bank had made an arrangement with the shareholders of Mercantile to acquire the shares of the latter bank but that no firm commitment had been made with them. I interpreted this to mean—or at least I did to begin with—that no commitment would be made to buy the shares in question if the entry into Canada of the First National City Bank was not looked upon with favour by the Canadian Government. I said I was glad to have an opportunity of expressing the views of the Government in this matter because, while we were aware of the size, importance and standing of the First National City Bank of New York, there would be some objections to the proposed purchase.

I said I quite realized it would be legally possible in this way for the First National City Bank to acquire a banking subsidiary in Canada. This rather unique circumstance amounted in effect to a loophole in the law which requires that bank charters be approved by Parliament. Because of this, First National City Bank could establish a subsidiary here which might be expanded into a large foreign-owned banking institution—unless subsequent action were taken when the Bank Act came up for revision.

I pointed out that if the First National City Bank entered the Canadian banking field in this way, it was probable that other United States banking corporations would wish to do so as well—but in that case either new charters would have to be obtained or such other United States banking corporations would have to purchase a controlling interest in one of the existing Canadian banks. I said the latter course would not be looked upon with favour by the Canadian Government and I added that it was highly unlikely that a new charter would be granted by this Parliament for a bank that was to be non-resident controlled. I said the Government would not be in favour of any such action.

I emphasized that the situation then, that is, in mid-1963, was different from what it had been in 1953 when the Mercantile received its charter. Since that time, the Royal Commission on Canada's Economic Prospects had recommended that control of Canadian chartered banks should be held by Canadians. I said that following receipt of the report of the Royal Commission on Banking and Finance the Government would have to decide how the Bank Act should be revised, and in particular what should be done to ensure that control of the Canadian banking system remains in Canadian hands.

I informed the representatives of the First National City Bank that normally it would be unfair to apply retroactively any legislative restrictions on control of banks by non-residents. However, I said that since the First National City Bank were now aware of the Government's views, and had not at this time purchased control of Mercantile, the Government would not consider they were entitled to any special exemption from legislation in respect of foreign ownership that might be brought down in the future.

After a very full discussion, I advised the representatives of the First National City Bank of New York not to proceed with their proposed action until after the Bank Act was revised. There was no misunderstanding on the part of any of those present as to exactly what was meant. The representatives of the First National City Bank of New York were given clear notice of the Government's views. They were forewarned about the kind of legislation that might be expected when the Bank Act came up for review. I pointed out that Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. McFadden had sought an interview with me to ascertain the views of the Canadian Government before proceeding with a certain transaction. They had now been informed of the Government's views in categorical terms.

Mr. Woolliams: Would the hon. gentleman permit one question?

Mr. Gordon: Would you allow me to finish?

Mr. Woolliams: Yes.

Mr. Gordon: It is difficult to understand why the representatives of the First National City Bank of New York would have sought an interview with me as Minister of Finance if they had planned to go ahead with the transaction regardless of the views of the Canadian Government. Nevertheless, that is exactly what transpired. About 10 days after the interview referred to, the representatives of the First National City Bank informed me that, notwithstanding the Canadian Government's views, they had decided to go ahead with the acquisition of the Mercantile Bank shares. They did so with their eyes open.

• (7:50 p.m.)

It has been reported in the New York press that the First National City Bank entered into this transaction "in good faith" and therefore no action should be taken in revising the Bank Act that could in any way discriminate against the Mercantile. This is not a true representation of the facts. As I have said, the First National City Bank were quite aware of the Government's views before they purchased control of the Mercantile Bank. In these circumstances, if we were to treat the Mercantile differently from other banks now incorporated or which in the future may be incorporated in Canada we would be discriminating against everyone else—

Mr. Herridge: Hear, hear.

Mr. Gordon: —including, incidentally, any other U.S. banking institutions which might like to purchase a controlling interest in the Canadian banking system but who will be prevented from doing so under the provisions of this Act.

Mr. Lambert: The Mercantile was already foreign owned.

Mr. Gordon: For some time I have been looking forward to the opportunity of replying to some of the arguments and opinions put forward by Social Credit Members relating to our banking system and our banking legislation.

Mr. More: What about those of the hon. Member for Kootenay West (Mr. Herridge)?

Mr. Gordon: The revisions which we now propose making to the banking legislation do not represent any departure from the principles on which our monetary system has been established, so they raise no new questions of this nature. However it is natural that hon. Members who feel strongly on these matters should wish to take this occasion to advance in detail some of the views they have expressed in the past, and which are founded on the belief that there are fundamental defects in our monetary and financial system which need to be remedied.

Let me say first of all that I believe the general understanding of economics up until about 30 years ago was inadequate for the task of analysing the working of the financial system. It was understandable, therefore, that various monetary reform movements, including Social Credit, should arise. In the past 30 years, however, great progress has been made in analysing the working of our economy, thanks very largely to the basic ideas developed by John Maynard Keynes, and since applied widely throughout the world.

As a consequence of the progress made in the last three decades, it is not necessary to be a Social Crediter these days to understand that the supply of money occupies an important place in our economy, or that its proper management is essential if we are to achieve our economic objectives. I mentioned these objectives, hon. Members may remember, in the third paragraph of the budget speech, which can be found on page 427 of Hansard.

Our economic objectives are essentially in terms of real things—real goods and services —and the way they are distributed among Canadians. The essential purpose of our monetary system is to enable the economic system, as a whole, to produce the goods and services Canadians want, and to distribute them.

If we are to secure a high and sustainable level of economic growth, the money supply must grow along with our other economic magnitudes. This is well recognized both by the Government and by the Bank of Canada. In this connection I might refer hon. Members to what I said in the Budget speech in regard to monetary policy and liquidity, and to what the Governor of the Bank said in his annual reports; for example, on the first page of the report for 1964. Our present monetary system is one which enables this growth in the money supply to be brought about fairly and sensibly under the careful day-to-day management of the Bank.

There is, I think, no question in any of our minds now of the necessity of this growth in the money supply, or of the need to manage it, in order to achieve our economic objectives. The preamble to the Bank of Canada Act constitutes an early statement by Parliament a generation ago of the desirability to establish a bank to carry out this management of the money supply to promote the economic and financial welfare of the nation. Where we and most other people differ with the hon. Members who espouse Social Credit doctrines is in the causes for the necessity of the expansion in the money supply, in the means by which it should be brought about, and in the degree to which it should and can safely take place.

Social Credit theory, as I understand it, argues that there is an inherent deficiency in our economic system which leads always to an insufficiency of the supply of money. There have been, I know, a number of arguments of various degrees of sophistication as to what gives rise to this deficiency. These were fashionable a generation or so ago, and some hon. Members may recall them in connection with the "A plus B" theorem. I have never been convinced that there was such an inherent deficiency. I have been convinced, however, that management of the money supply was necessary both to enable the economy to reach its full potential at any particular time and also to enable it to achieve a high and sustainable rate of growth.

However, I do not believe there is any point in going into this theoretical question of inherent deficiencies at this time. What we need to ensure is that we have a monetary system which enables the money supply to be properly managed and to be expanded or restrained from time to time in the degree that is desirable in the public interest.

Our present monetary system does permit an effective, flexible control over the money supply to be achieved. This control is exercised by the Bank of Canada in varying the amount of cash in the banking system. The main method by which the Bank of Canada affects the amount of cash in the system is by buying and selling Government securities from and to the public. The sale of securities reduces the supply of cash, since purchasers of the securities pay for them by turning over cash in their bank accounts to the Bank of Canada. The purchase of securities by the Bank of Canada increases the supply of cash, since the Bank pays for those securities by handing over cheques drawn on itself which are then deposited mainly in the chartered banks.

[Mr. Gordon.]

The chartered banks must maintain minimum cash reserves with the Bank of Canada —8 per cent of their deposit liabilities under the present law, and 7 per cent under the law as now proposed. This requirement is, as it were, the first call on the increase in their deposits resulting from Bank of Canada purchases of securities from the public. When that requirement is met, the banks may increase their loans and buy securities themselves, up to the point where the resultant increase in the deposit liabilities requires a further increase in their minimum reserve deposits with the Bank of Canada.

It is thus the combination of open market operations by the Bank of Canada and the minimum reserve requirement which essentially determines the volume of deposits in the chartered banks. And it is the volume of deposit liabilities of the chartered banks which essentially determines the supply of money, the supply of bank credit, and indirectly, through the complicated market mechanism described in the report of the Royal Commission, the volume and terms of other credit in our financial markets. I might refer hon. Members, who have not had an opportunity of reading it, to chapter 6 of the Royal Commission's report which deals with this. The nature of the system permits a day-to-day control to be exercised and the effects of any adjustments to be noted and assessed when subsequent changes are under consideration.

• (8:00 p.m.)

Mr. Speaker, Social Credit critics claim that the control of the money in the economy rests with the private banking system. Moreover, it is claimed that the private banks can increase the amount of money in the country at will, and without cost to themselves. These claims are entirely wrong. The control of the amount of money in the economy rests with the public monetary authorities, that is, the Bank of Canada and the Federal Government. I might mention in parenthesis that the proposed amendments to the Bank of Canada Act, relating to the powers of the Bank of Canada and the Federal Government, spell out in greater detail than hitherto exactly where the power does reside. The money supply can only be increased in so far as the Bank of Canada supplies the necessary cash which flows into the chartered banks and increases their deposits. The banks can only increase the money supply within the scope given them by the Bank of Canada and they must maintain the confidence of the public in order to attract and retain deposits.

If the amount of cash in the system is increased the banks compete for their share of it. This they do by inducing individuals to deposit with them any additional cash they may have. These deposits represent a liability of the bank to the depositor on which interest may be paid by the bank to the depositor and in respect of which services must be rendered. If a bank's cash reserves are increased by the action of a depositor the bank is in a position to increase its earning assets by making loans or buying securities. Indeed, a bank must increase its earning assets if its deposits increase significantly, since deposits involve a cost to the bank. In the process of increasing its assets the banking system's total deposit liabilities will increase up to the point where its cash reserves, which are controlled by the Bank of Canada, are equal to the required cash ratio—or nearly so. The banking system's total deposit liabilities and its total assets cannot exceed the limit thus established. Any individual bank can increase its loans and investments only to the extent that it has attracted and can retain deposits. So that if for any reason an individual bank's depositors decide to reduce their balances with that bank it must to that extent draw on its assets, first by running down its cash and then by making good the loss of each through liquidating other assets in order to maintain the required cash ratio. The success of an individual bank depends on its ability to induce the public to hold its liabilities.

I turn now to the question of the degree of monetary expansion, which is the third source of our difference with Social Credit. While the difference here is of great importance, it may be fair to say it is one of emphasis and degree. Many exponents of Social Credit imply that large increases in the supply of money can safely be made, and indeed should be made, except perhaps at times when clearly the economy is at full employment and under strain. We believe, on the other hand, that the increase in the supply of money has to be carefully controlled and determined after careful economic analysis and the application of good judgment to appraisal of the economic situation. If the increase in the amount of money is too little, credit stringency may inhibit the desirable economic expansion of growth. But if, on the other hand, the increase in the money supply is too much, it will lead to price and cost increases and to balance of payments difficulties. If such increases in the money supply and consequent increases in the pressure of expenditure in the economy should persist, we can expect that ultimately they will lead to inflation and, in a country such as ours, to an exchange crisis.

I do not believe that the proponents of Social Credit feel that price increases and inflation constitute a serious danger; indeed, in their view it is better to run these risks than to suffer a deficiency in expenditure for purposes either of employment or of social justice. In my view they greatly underrate the dangers inherent in such attitudes. This is the chief weakness in their approach to our financial problems.

Quite apart from the effects on the balance of payments and the exchange position, inflationary pressures are highly undesirable. In the first place, they produce an unstable situation which cannot last. They lead to speculation, to efforts to anticipate further price increases and to expenditures on many things both of a capital and current nature which are not justified by the long-run prospects of the economy. Moreover, these excesses are apt to be reversed in time when the public is unwilling any longer to accept the consequences of inflationary conditions and when the economic actions to which they have led have proven to be ill-founded.

Second, we must recognize that inflation is fundamentally unfair. It confers great benefits on the economically strong and sharp. Those who can quickly see what is going on, and can manoeuvre and bargain to take advantage of it will undoubtedly gain. They are not to be found only in one particular class in the community, but include many of those with strong economic bargaining power. They gain at the cost of the weak, the innocent and the uninformed. It is true that nowadays governments, under such circumstances, frequently come to the aid of the weak or the innocent. But there are always some whose plight is overlooked, who will not or cannot seek to protect themselves. It is these poeple who bear the burden of inflation. It is this unfairness in the distribution of benefits and costs which leads to the political and social trouble to which serious inflation almost inevitably brings nations, whether they be advanced industrial societies such as some in Europe after the First World War, or developing countries such as some in Latin America in more recent years.

The other chief danger arising from excessive expenditure associated with an excessive increase in the money supply is the effect on the balance of payments. Naturally, much of the excessive expenditure will create demands for imports as the limits of domestic production are approached or exceeded. These imports must be paid for by the use of foreign exchange from a nation's reserves or by borrowing abroad, or by setting in motion forces that will check other imports or increase exports. The solution of borrowing from abroad is not likely to be available if a country is clearly permitting excessive expansions in its money supply and expenditures to create the kind of situation I have discussed. The use of reserves can only go on for a limited period as nations cannot normally afford to hold sufficient reserves to finance a lengthy spree.

Consequently, the likely result of a prolonged period of excessive expenditure is apt to be a depreciation of the currency involved. We have before us the example of the United Kingdom now having to take stern action to meet the situation created by a moderate excess of expenditure in an economy operating at full stretch. Our own history affords two examples since the end of the war, arising out of different causes, of the necessity to meet serious shortages of foreign exchange by unpleasant emergency action.

When a country gets into balance of payments difficulties as a result of excessive expenditure, it is apt to find itself confronted by a crisis arising from the anticipation of further difficulties. The expectation that it will be forced to permit its currency to depreciate naturally leads people to take whatever action they can to protect themselves, either by delaying the acquisition of that country's currency or expediting its sale, in carrying on commercial transactions. Moreover, both the residents of the country and others outside it who have invested in it are likely for reasons of ordinary prudence to want to protect themselves by moving their capital out of that country to somewhere else. It is this which gives rise to the need for vast sums to meet these capital movements under conditions where currencies appear threatened. This in turn calls for demonstrably effective measures to ensure that the excessive expenditures are being checked, unless of course the nation is prepared to see its exchange rate forced to a lower level.

• (8:10 p.m.)

If by any chance it should ever appear that a Canadian Government was going to apply Social Credit policies in a wholehearted way, I believe we could expect Canadians and others with investments here to move their capital out of Canada. I say this because those favouring Social Credit principles have given great emphasis to the increases in the money supply to which their doctrines lead. They have stressed the size of the programs they feel can be achieved by the application of these doctrines. Almost certainly this would undermine confidence in the currency on the part of all those who were in a position to protect themselves. In other words, as I have said before, any prospect of Social Credit theories being applied in practice would lead to a financial crisis in which the little fellow would be bound to suffer.

I should like to turn now to a number of specific points that have been brought forward by hon. Members favouring the Social Credit doctrine.

Mr. Woolliams: You are doing a good job.

Mr. Gordon: I have been interrupted by my hon. friend, but may I say I am only doing this because hon. Members of the Social Credit party and the Creditistes have asked me to comment on their theories. I promised to do so and I am just fulfilling that promise.

Mr. Patterson: We appreciate it.

An hon. Member: But we disagree.

Mr. Gordon: First of all, I should like to comment on the implications of the proposal that banks should be required to hold 100 per cent cash reserves. Let me describe as briefly as I can the kind of situation which could be expected to prevail if the banks were required to match their deposit liabilities with assets held only in the form of cash, which earns nothing. That is what is meant when people suggest that the banks should be required to keep 100 per cent cash reserves against all deposit liabilities instead of holding, as at present, 8 per cent in the form of cash and 92 per cent in the form of interest bearing assets.

In these circumstances no bank could make a loan to a customer except from the relatively small amount of its own capital. It could not use savings deposited with it to finance business stock in trade, for example, or to buy seed grain. It could not assist a municipality to operate efficiently through the year when its tax receipts come in irregularly. It could not assist the private citizen to budget his major expenditures by providing funds when they are needed so that he can pay for the "big ticket" items over a period of time out of his current income. Because the bank would not be earning interest by making loans, it would not be able to provide the other services which people look for, except at greatly increased cost to the customer. The cost of paying a bill by cheque, for example, could increase to many times the present bank charge for handling a cheque.

Then, too, the citizen who placed his savings in the bank would quickly find that he was losing money. If the bank could not use deposits to make loans, it could not make interest payments to its depositors. Instead, it would have to charge customers with the full cost of safekeeping and maintaining accounts. The bank would be required to lend the savings of Canadians which had been deposited with it to the Bank of Canada without interest, to be lent in turn without interest to the Government for its purposes. Whether these purposes were good or bad, the arrangement would not be a fair deal for those who deposited their funds in the banks.

This is the essence of the proposed 100 per cent reserve system. It is a way for the Government to get the use of people's savings, their capital, deposited in banks without paying them interest on it. I do not believe that such a system could work to the advantage of the people of Canada. Moreover, if it ever should be tried in practice, people would keep only the barest minimum on deposit with the banks and invest their money in other institutions or in securities.

I should now like to comment as briefly as I can on the subject of interest on the public debt and whether it does indeed represent a burden or a loss of purchasing power, as some hon. Members have suggested. It is true that interest payments are an expenditure by Government. They must be provided for in the budget and we raise money by taxation to meet these costs. But almost all of Canada's national debt is held by Canadians. The interest payments made by the Government are a form of income in the hands of those Canadians who receive them. Government bonds provide a secure means of investment for the savings of the people, either directly in the form of Canada Savings Bonds or other Government obligations or indirectly through savings in pension funds, insurance companies, trust companies and similar institutions which invest substantial amounts in Government bonds. Thus the country as a whole does not lose purchasing power as a result of the interest paid on the debt. A writing down of this debt or arbitrary reduction of interest payments would represent a loss of savings and of income to those who have saved for their old age or for emergencies. It would represent a loss, for example, to people who have protected themselves and their families through life insurance policies.

I had hoped the exposition of the working of the present monetary system given by the Royal Commission would have lifted the level of the debate on monetary theory to a discussion of modern issues based on a better understanding of the system. It is now generally accepted by those who understand the working of our economy that our monetary system must be well managed, and that is the case today. To try to convert our banking system to a 100 per cent cash reserve system, to try to create money to be lent to governments without interest, would be an irresponsible interference with the rights of millions of Canadians who save their money and keep part of it on deposit with our banks.

Canada is fortunate to have a good banking system that uses the savings deposited with it to help other Canadians to produce and sell what we need, or to finance purchases for later repayment. We can improve it in detail as we are now proposing to do. But we must not be deluded into thinking that all bank deposits can or should be diverted to Government purposes without interest. That would not only be grossly unfair to depositors but would destroy the essential role which the banks play in financing primary producers, consumers and businesses of all kinds.

As I said a minute ago, I have made these remarks because I promised, and have been promising to do so, and this seemed to me a good opportunity. I felt that hon. Members of the Social Credit parties had spoken not infrequently on this general subject and that they were entitled to a careful reply, which is what I have tried to give them this evening. In conclusion I should like to urge my friends in the two Social Credit parties to abandon theories that are obsolete and are based on clearly demonstrated misconceptions.

Mr. Herridge: Would the Minister permit one question?

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Batten): Order.

Mr. Herridge: The Minister mentioned that the present banking system provides the credit necessary for the economy on a flexible and almost day to day basis. Can he explain why firms in my district in 1960, when there were credit restrictions and they wanted to borrow $10,000 from the bank, were told by the bank managers that they were restricted. They had bonds to cover the loans, but they were advised to go to the Canadian credit unions to get the credit, and did so. Can he inform the House why that was necessary?

• (8:20 p.m.)

Mr. Gordon: Well, Mr. Speaker—

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Batten): I should point out to the House that the House is advised the Minister was closing the debate on second reading. According to the Standing Orders—

Mr. Douglas: The hon. Member is asking a question, and the Minister has agreed to reply. He asked the question before the Minister sat down. Surely there is no objection to the Minister's answering.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Batten): I just hope the Minister can answer this question without generating further debate at the close of second reading.

Mr. Gordon: I would be glad to answer this question, and then I should like to make one other comment in reply to a question raised earlier by the hon. Member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands (Mr. Cameron).

In reply to the question raised by the hon. Member for Kootenay West (Mr. Herridge) I can only say that, like him, in 1960 I was not altogether happy with the way monetary policy was being conducted. I believe that I am on record to that effect.

Mr. Douglas: Is that why the Minister voted for debt free money?

Mr. Gordon: The hon. Member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, one of the more serious Members of his party when it comes to banking and finance, raised a point about the provision in the proposed bill having to do with the granting of charters. He wanted to know if an applicant for a new charter were refused, would there be any provision for appeal. I might, of course, point out that there would be no reason at all in such circumstances why an applicant could not try to prevail on some hon. Member of the House to introduce a private bill. Whether or not such a private bill would have any more success than some of the private bills have had recently, I am not in a position to say. However, that would be an obvious resort for people in that position.

[Mr. Herridge.]

Mr. Woolliams: The Minister agreed to answer one question for me when he was speaking. My question certainly is not a political one.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Batten): Order, please. I must advise the Minister that his time has expired. If it is the wish of the House, the Minister may answer the question.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Woolliams: My question briefly was this: Was the Mercantile Bank the only bank at that time owned by foreign interests that could be acquired by United States interests?

Mr. Gordon: It was the only one owned by foreign interests. As I have reported or announced on another occasion in this House, there was an attempt, or a proposal, to acquire control of a Canadian owned bank, but that was prevented by the announcement which was made in this House on September 23 last, when we said that legislation was going to be introduced to prevent that sort of thing and it would be made retroactive.

Motion agreed to, bill read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

BANK ACT AND QUEBEC SAVINGS BANKS ACT

EXTENSION OF CHARTERS TO DECEMBER 31, 1965

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance) moved that the House go into committee to consider the following resolution:

That it is expedient to introduce a measure to amend the Bank Act and the Quebec Savings Banks Act to extend to December 31, 1965, the authority to carry on business for the banks to which these Acts apply.

Motion agreed to and House went into committee, Mr. Batten in the Chair.

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Chairman, the resolution before the committee proposes that the charters of these banks be extended for six months, until the end of December, 1965. It was thought that this should provide ample time for the committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs to deal with the proposed revision of the Bank Act, to report back and have the bill revising the Bank Act passed. I still hope there will be plenty of time. It is certainly my hope that this bank legislation would be dealt with expeditiously.

Some hon. Members of the Official Opposition, and some of the other Opposition parties have suggested to me it would be acceptable to them if, instead of extending the charters until December 31, 1965, we were to extend them until July 1, 1966, that is for a full year. I am in the hands of the committee. The hon. Member for Edmonton West, who has held a rather exalted position in this House, has mentioned to me, as I was about to point out, that this would be an unusual amendment to suggest. I am advised that it could be passed if there were unanimous consent, but I am not sure of this. I am looking at my friend opposite, who put me up to this in the first place. If there is any question about it, Mr. Chairman, I will just forget about the whole thing. I believe we should be able to get the revision of the bank legislation through by the end of this calendar year.

I apologize for these remarks which I was making at the suggestion of some of my hon. friends opposite. If there is some question about it, we should forget about it. I hope that since this is a rather straightforward, small bill, it can be passed. If there are any questions, I would be glad to answer them.

Mr. Lambert: I was pointing out this afternoon to the Minister of Finance the difficulties that might ensue as a result of a prolonged summer recess, depending upon the length of the committee deliberations. However, regardless of whether we have unanimous consent or not, there is one minor difficulty. We do not have the recommendation of His Excellency the Governor General on the amended resolution which, I am informed, would be required. I agree, therefore, with the Minister, that we should leave it at that.

Mr. Olson: We also made the suggestion that perhaps it would be better to extend these charters for one year. We have no real concern, however, that the revision cannot be dealt with by December 31, 1965.

• (8:30 p.m.)

As has been pointed out, if there is a reasonably long summer recess and the committee deals with it after the recess, we do not want the committee to be under the pressure of a time limit. We want it to have ample time to interrogate the officials of the Department of Finance and of the Bank of Canada, and anyone else it wishes to call before it. If it were possible to find a way to provide an extension for 12 months, rather than six months, I would hope it would be entirely feasible to have the work completed by the end of the year.

Resolution reported and concurred in.

Mr. Gordon thereupon moved for leave to introduce Bill No. C-116 to amend the Bank Act and the Quebec Savings Bank Act.

Motion agreed to, bill read the first and second times, and the House went into committee thereon, Mr. Lamoureux in the Chair.

On clause 1.

[Translation]

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, what is the number of the bill now before us?

[English]

The Chairman: There is no number assigned to this bill yet.

Mr. Lambert: No?

The Chairman: No.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, I simply rise to offer a solution to a problem. I realize it might not be very popular, but I will try it anyway. There seems to be some concern as to whether the ten year revision will be got through before the end of December. Perhaps the simplest thing to do is do what we did with the Canada Pension Plan, have the committeee meet during the recess.

Mr. Gordon: I am very grateful for that suggestion.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I hope the Minister will hold firm against this very subversive suggestion.

Mr. Olson: Mr. Chairman, this bill provides for an extension of the existing bank charters. Very briefly I want to take advantage of this opportunity to say to the Minister of Finance that we in this party appreciate the statement he made a few minutes ago respecting Bill C-102, the Bank Act that is before the House, which has not yet been passed and therefore makes this extension necessary.

While we agree with almost all of what he had to say respecting the way the monetary system operates in Canada today, we are in very serious disagreement with his conclusions about what would happen, and what some of the consequences might be of making certain of the changes we advocate.

The Minister took the trouble to prepare a very detailed statement in reply to a lot of the representations we made over the past few months. We appreciate this. It is very interesting because to my knowledge there have not been many ministers of finance who have taken our arguments seriously or replied to them in an objective way. We appreciate the effort and the manner in which he responded to us.

His statement deserves vary careful scrutiny by the Members of this party and, I suggest, by Members in all parts of the Chamber, and we will answer those parts of it with which we do not agree when we go into further debate on Bill C-102.

We notice that the Minister agrees that it is necessary for the health of our economy that there should be an ever-increasing money supply and that this increase in the money supply should take place in direct proportion to the expansion of the economy. This is precisely the argument we have advanced over the years. We have also argued that part of this increase in the money supply should come from its actually being created by the Bank of Canada.

We note that during the last few hours there has been an additional acquisition of something like $75 million of Canada's national debt by the Bank of Canada. We agree with this, and we also agree with the Minister that there cannot be an irresponsible increase in the money supply, that this has got to be something that is based on sound judgment and in keeping with what the economic conditions of the day require.

We have also noted that during the last few days some $75 million worth of Canada's national debt was paid off from cash out of the Federal treasury, and an additional $75 million was acquired by the Bank of Canada. This means that $400 million worth of Canada bonds that are coming due are going to be replaced with only $250 million worth of bonds that will be re-issued to the financial institutions in the country. This is a desirable and important step, because the interest on that $150 million will no longer be required to be paid to the financial institutions that previously held this debt.

I want to say very clearly to the Minister that we do not believe we can have an irresponsible expansion of the money supply. It has to be in line with the expansion of the whole economic structure, but we think that gradually it will be possible for the Bank of Canada to acquire more and more of the public debt, so that eventually we may reach the stage where we pay the interest charges to an institution owned entirely by the Minister of Finance for and on behalf of the people of Canada.

I am not going to spend a lot of time at this stage answering in detail what the Minister said. We are going to study his statement carefully. Again I wish to say it is commendable for him to have taken the trouble to make such a clear and objective reply to the representations we have made over the past months and years.

Mr. Barnett: I do not rise for the purpose of continuing the discussion which was initiated by the hon. Member for Medicine Hat, but when I entered the Chamber a few moments ago I heard some references to a subversive suggestion which came from this corner of the Chamber. Well, I had a little conference with a couple of my hon. friends behind the curtains and as a result I think I can tell the Minister of Finance that the hon. Member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands might be prepared to consider favourably that suggestion with respect to carrying on the meetings of the committee, provided the committee could arrange to sit on Vancouver Island. Indeed, he went so far as to offer to provide some of the facilities which the committee might require. I thought the committee might be interested in that proposition. As a Member from an adjacent constituency I may say that if we could agree to those arrangements I would be happy to show some of the Members of that committee during the leisure hours some of the glories of Comox-Alberni.

Mr. Herridge: I was interested in the arguments advanced by the Members of the Social Credit Party and the Créditistes. I should like the Minister to explain to us what in his opinion is the difference between a provincial savings bank, as dealt with in this bill, and a provincial savings agency.

Mr. Gordon: About 125 years. That would be the simple way of explaining the difference. The Quebec Savings Banks were incorporated a long time ago, certainly over 100 years ago. They have been dealt with under this particular legislation ever since Confederation or thereabouts. The Treasury Branches of the Province of Alberta and the Ontario Savings Bank have been set up under provincial legislation, and are not covered by the Acts which are now before the committee.

QUEBEC SAVINGS BANKS ACT

DECENNIAL REVISION AND EXTENSION OF POWERS

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance) moved the second reading of Bill No. C-103, respecting Savings Banks in the Province of Quebec.

Motion agreed to, bill read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

WAYS AND MEANS

The House in Committee of Ways and Means, Mr. Lamoureux in the Chair.

INCOME TAX ACT

Resolved, that it is expedient to introduce a measure to amend the Income Tax Act and related provisions of the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act and to provide among other things:

1. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years the income tax payable by an individual be reduced by an amount equal to the lesser of 10 per cent of basic tax or $600 and for the 1965 taxation year by an amount equal to the lesser of 5 per cent of basic tax or $300.

2. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer may deduct in computing his taxable income an amount for the support of a person who was his niece or nephew and who during the year resided in Canada, was wholly dependant upon him for support, and was

(a) under 21 years of age,

(b) 21 years of age or over and dependant by reason of mental or physical infirmity, or

(c) 21 years of age or over and in full time attendance at a school or university,

if

(d) the mother of the niece or nephew was divorced or separated and not in receipt of alimony or similar payments, or

(e) the father of the niece or nephew was deceased or mentally or physically infirm,

not exceeding $300 if the person was a child qualified for family allowance and $550 if he was not so qualified.

3. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer may deduct in computing his taxable income an amount not exceeding $550 expended by him during the year for the support of a person who was his aunt or uncle and who during the year resided in Canada and was dependant upon him for support by reason of mental or physical infirmity.

4. That for the 1970 and subsequent taxation years the additional exemption of $500 now allowed to a taxpayer who has attained the age of 65 years be allowed only if the taxpayer has attained the age of 70 years and that for the taxation years 1966 to 1969 inclusive a taxpayer who has attained the age of 65 years but has not attained the age of 70 years be allowed the additional exemption of $500 only if he did not receive a pension under the Old Age Security Act in respect of any month in that year.

5. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer who deducts in computing his income from an office or employment

(a) annual dues to maintain membership in a trade union or to maintain membership in an association of public servants,

(b) annual dues retained from his remuneration pursuant to the provisions of a collective agreement and paid to a trade union or association, or

(c) annual professional membership dues the payment of which was necessary to maintain a professional status recognized by statute, shall not by reason of such deduction be ineligible to deduct the standard deduction of $100 described in paragraph (ca) of subsection (1) of section 27 of the Act.

6. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years a person, the spouse of such person residing with him and previously resident in Canada, or any dependant child of such person, shall be deemed to have been resident in Canada throughout a taxation year if such person was at any time in the year performing services in a country other than Canada under a prescribed international development assistance program of the Government of Canada, and was resident in Canada during a part of the year preceding the commencement of such services.

7. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years a contribution made by a person under the Canada Pension Plan or under a provincial pension plan as defined in section 3 of the Canada Pension Plan may be deducted in computing the income of such person.

8. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years the limitation on the amount related to earned income that a taxpayer may deduct as a premium under a registered retirement savings plan be increased from 10 per cent of earned income to 20 per cent of earned income.

9. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years such part of any amount that would otherwise be included in computing income of a taxpayer as a retiring allowance be deductible if it is paid in the year, or within 60 days after the end of the year, as a contribution to a registered pension fund or plan, as a premium under a retirement savings plan, or to a trustee under a deferred profit sharing plan.

10. That there may be deducted in computing the income of a taxpayer an amount in respect of an outlay or expense made by the taxpayer in the 1965 and subsequent taxation years

(a) to a person with whom the taxpayer is dealing at arms length and who is the lessee of property owned by the taxpayer, to obtain the cancellation of a lease on such property,

(b) for landscaping property used by the taxpayer for the purpose of gaining or producing income,

(c) for clearing land or laying tile drainage for the purpose of carrying on a farming business,

(d) as or on account of the cost of making representations to a government, municipality or other public authority in connection with a business carried on by the taxpayer, including representations for the purpose of obtaining a licence, permit, franchise or trademark,

(e) as or on account of the cost incurred in investigating the suitability of a site for a building or other structure planned by the taxpayer for use in connection with a business carried on by him.

11. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a corporation shall be deemed to be resident in Canada throughout a taxation year if

(a) it was incorporated in Canada before April 27, 1965 and was resident in Canada in its taxation year that included April 26, 1965 or in any subsequent on taxation year, or

(b) it was incorporated in Canada after April 26, 1965.

12. That with respect to payments received by a taxpayer after April 26, 1965, other than a payment made upon the death of an employee, the amount that a taxpayer may elect to have taxed under section 36 of the Act shall not exceed

(a) in the case of a single payment

(i) out of or pursuant to a superannuation or pension fund or plan, or

(ii) pursuant to deferred profit sharing plan, or

(iii) pursuant to an employee's profit sharing plan,

$1,500 times the number of years during which the employee, in respect of whom the payment was made, was a member of the plan, or

(b) in the case of

(i) a single payment upon retirement of an employee in recognition of long service, or

(ii) a payment or payments made by an employer to an employee or former employee upon or after retirement in respect of loss of office or employment

$1,000 times the number of years during which the employee, in respect of whom the payment was made, was an employee of the employer who made the payment.

13. That for taxation years commencing after April 26, 1965, a trust or estate (other than a trust or estate arising on death) that has income from a business carried on by it in Canada may not deduct in computing its income an amount paid or payable to a beneficiary who is

(a) a non-resident of Canada,

(b) a non-resident-owned investment corporation, or

(c) another trust or estate resident in Canada, unless that other trust or estate

(i) arose on a death, or

(ii) has been since April 26, 1965 a beneficiary of the trust or estate paying the amount and the trust or estate paying the amount has been carrying on the business since April 26, 1965,

and any amount paid or payable out of the income for the year of the first-mentioned trust or estate will continue to be included in the income of its beneficiary notwithstanding the fact that the first-mentioned trust or estate was not entitled to deduct the amount in computing its income.

14. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years the amount of income derived from a new mine that a corporation may exclude in computing its income shall be confined to income from the operation of the mine by the corporation.

15. That where a joint exploration corporation acquires after April 26, 1965 a right, licence or privilege to explore for, drill for or take petroleum, natural gas or other related hydrocarbons, the cost of the right, licence or privilege may not be renounced to a shareholder corporation.

16. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years an amount that a taxpayer may exclude from his income because it is consideration for a mining property acquired as the result of his efforts as a prospector, or as the result of efforts of a prospector who was employed or financially assisted by him, shall not include a share of profits, a royalty or a payment based on production.

17. That the Minister of National Revenue with the approval of the Governor in Council may on behalf of the Government of Canada enter into an agreement with the government of a province, under which one government undertakes to transfer to the other, in respect of income tax paid by an individual from whom deductions were made at source as though he were resident in a place other than the province in which he was resident on the last day of the year, a part of the amount deducted or withheld under section 47 of the Act or a similar provision of a provincial income tax act.

18. That in order to give effect to the provisions of paragraph 1 without reducing the amount of equalization payments to any province a consequential amendment be made to the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act to adjust the fractions set out therein in the definition of "standard individual income tax" used in the computation of equalization payments.

19. That a new section be added to the Act concerning expenditures of a taxpayer for advertising space in a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical having effect substantially as follows:

"12A (1) In computing income, no deduction shall be made in respect of an otherwise deductible outlay or expense of a taxpayer for advertising space in an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical dated after December 31, 1965 for an advertisement directed primarily to a market in Canada.

(2) An issue or edition of an issue of any newspaper or periodical that is edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada and that was not on April 26, 1965 a Canadian newspaper or periodical shall be deemed, for the purposes of subsection (1), not to be an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical if

(a) through the period of twelve months ending April 26, 1965 issues or editions of issues of that publication were being edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada at the usual intervals for issues of that publication and have since that date continued to be so edited, printed and published without interruption except for a reason other than the cessation of the business of publishing that publication; and

(b) in the case of a periodical, the periodical is similar, in content and in respect of the class of readers to whom it is directed, to the issues or editions of that periodical that were throughout the period of twelve months ending April 26, 1965 being edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada.

(3) Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an advertisement in a special issue or edition of a newspaper that is edited in whole or in part and printed and published outside Canada if such special issue or edition is devoted to features or news related primarily to Canada and the publishers thereof publish such an issue or edition not more frequently than twice a year.

(4) Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an advertisement in

(a) a catalogue. or

(b) any publication the principal function of which is the encouragement, promotion or development of the fine arts, letters, scholarship or religion.

(5) In this section,

(a) 'Canadian issue' means,

(i) in relation to a newspaper, an issue, including a special issue,

(A) the type of which, other than the type for advertisements or features, is set in Canada,

(B) the whole of which, exclusive of any comics supplement, is printed in Canada,

(C) that is edited in Canada by individuals resident in Canada, and

(D) that is published in Canada, and

(ii) in relation to a periodical, an issue, including a special issue,

(A) the type of which, other than the type for advertisements, is set in Canada,

(B) that is printed in Canada,

(C) that is edited in Canada by individuals resident in Canada, and

(D) that is published in Canada,

but does not include an issue of a periodical

(E) that is produced or published under a license granted by a person who produces or publishes issues of a periodical that are printed, edited or published outside Canada, or

(F) the contents of which, excluding advertisements, are substantially the same as the contents of an issue of a periodical, or the contents of one or more issues of one or more periodicals, that was or were printed, edited or published outside Canada;

(b) 'Canadian newspaper or periodical' means a newspaper or periodical the right to produce and publish issues of which belongs to or is vested in

(i) a Canadian citizen,

(ii) a partnership of which at least ¾ of the members are Canadian citizens and in which interests representing in value at least ¾ of the total value of the partnership property are owned by Canadian citizens,

(iii) an association or society of which at least ¾ of the members are Canadian citizens,

(iv) Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province, or a municipality in Canada, or

(v) a corporation

(A) that is incorporated under the laws of Canada or a province,

(B) of which the chairman or other presiding officer and at least ¾ of the directors or other similar officers are Canadian citizens, and

(C) of which, if it is a corporation having share capital, at least ¾ of the shares having full voting rights under all circumstances, and shares representing in the aggregate at least ¾ of the paid-up capital, are owned by Canadian citizens or by corporations other than corporations controlled directly or indirectly by citizens or subjects of a country other than Canada; and

(c) 'issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical' means an issue that is not a Canadian issue of a Canadian newspaper or periodical."

Mr. Gordon: There are two main points I should like to cover in opening the debate on the resolution to amend the Income Tax Act. First I should like to deal with the cut in personal income taxes which is to become effective on July 1. Then I should like to discuss briefly the proposal dealing with periodicals and newspapers.

Perhaps the most important section of this resolution deals with the tax cut to become effective on July 1, 1965. Understandably, this has been very well received by the public. Also understandably, there have been those who have suggested the cut might have taken some other form. I should like to say something about this.

As I explained in the budget speech, the total amount of the cut took into account the economic consequences resulting from the change and also the condition of the Budget. I pointed out that there is no precise mathematical formula that can be applied—it is a matter of judgment. It is our judgment that taking all considerations into account, we should plan for a tax cut of $250 to $275 million for a full year and that this should begin half way through this calendar year, which will be on July 1.

Having decided upon the amount of the cut, we then had to decide where it should be applied. I would like to quote what I said about this in the budget speech as reported at page 440 of Hansard.

> In choosing the nature and form of the reduction, I have been influenced by the fact that we are expecting to make a thorough revision of our tax structure after receiving the report of the Royal Commission on Taxation and discussing the whole situation with the provinces. While we can count on none of our taxes being unaffected by such a revision, I have concluded that we should leave both the sales tax and the corporation income tax largely as they are pending this review.

In other words, we decided to apply the full amount of the cut to personal income taxes.

The Presidents of the Canadian Manufacturers Association and the Canadian Chamber of Commerce have expressed the view that cuts should have been made in corporation income taxes. However, neither of these gentlemen has indicated how in his opinion such a cut in corporation income taxes should be applied. The present rate of Federal tax after the abatement to take account of Provincial tax, is 12 per cent on the first $35,000 of taxable income, and 41 per cent on everything above that amount. The rate on the first $35,000 is a relatively low one by any comparative standard, even when the 9 per cent abatement for the provinces is included.

It is not clear if business spokesmen who have advocated immediate reduction of corporation income taxes have in mind a cut both in the rate on the first $35,000 of income, or only in the top rate of tax. We expect the Carter Commission will have a lot to say about the corporation income tax. And quite frankly, the Government did not wish to prejudge the case by taking action in advance of their report.

Moreover, it is well known that corporation profits, both before and after taxes, are running at an all-time high. Corporation cash flows are also at an all-time high, thanks in large measure to the very generous provision for capital cost allowances provided for in the 1963 budget and extended in this recent budget. I mention these facts because they also have a bearing upon decisions in this field.

Some of those who favour a reduction in personal income taxes felt it should have taken another form. Mr. Gordon Sinclair, a well known broadcaster and an old friend of mine—he and I think we are about the only two people left who were not only born in Toronto but who have lived there ever since—advocated increasing the basic exemption to $2,000 for a single person and to $4,000 for married persons. The effect of this would have been to reduce federal and provincial revenues together, not by $250 million to $270 million but by $1,700 million. All I can say is that to have done this would have been highly irresponsible. I wrote to Mr. Gordon Sinclair about this and he was kind enough to read my letter over the air. I find that he has a very wide audience, judging from the comments that I received. He also wrote back and said that was fine, that I was entitled to my opinion but he was inclined to go at these things emotionally rather than statistically. That is his privilege, but I am not in that happy position when it comes to tax cuts.

• (8:50 p.m.)

I might point out that the present exemptions in Canada are considerably higher than those in either the United States or the United Kingdom. In the United States the basic exemption plus standard deductions for single persons is $200 less than it is in Canada, and for married persons it is $500 less. In the United Kingdom the basic exemption is $225 less than it is here for single persons, and $740 less for married persons. I put these figures on the record because I think some people have felt that the exemptions in Canada were less generous than in other countries, and this just is not the case.

The New Democratic Party proposed that personal income tax exemptions be raised by $500 for single persons and $1,000 for married persons, and in addition that the old age security payment should be increased to $100 a month.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Chairman, could I ask the Minister if he has read the amendment that I presented to the House, because I did not make any such proposal.

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Chairman, if my hon. friend will contain himself for about three minutes, I hope to deal with him.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Please don't do that.

Mr. Gordon: As my Parliamentary Secretary, the hon. Member for Brant-Haldimand (Mr. Pennell), pointed out on April 29, as reported at page 744 of Hansard, this would have cost some $1,150 million per annum. Under present conditions, if it were proposed that this huge sum should be added to the deficit it would clearly be inflationary and would result in a general round of higher prices.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Chairman, could the Minister tell me if somebody did make such a proposal?

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Chairman, if my hon. friend would only contain himself for just a minute or two, I will deal with that.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I do not mind being misrepresented once, Mr. Chairman, but to be misrepresented twice in less than two minutes is a little too much.

The Chairman: Order, please. The Minister of Finance has the floor.

Mr. Gordon: It may be that the N.D.P. amendment was just badly worded. In an attempt to justify an untenable position, a spokesman for that party later suggested that if the words were taken literally, they meant the increase in the exemptions would only apply to the lowest bracket. According to this interpretation, a single man earning $1,500 would pay no tax because of the proposed increase in the exemption. But a single man earning $1,501 would not be entitled to any increased exemption. He would have to pay a federal tax of $51 plus a provincial tax of $9, as he does at present, or a total of $60. I cannot imagine anything more foolish than a result like this.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Gordon: The second man, having earned one extra dollar, would be $59 worse off than his next door neighbour whose earnings were slightly less than his.

Mr. Moreau: Explain that.

Mr. Gordon: I suggest that the efforts of my hon. friends to avoid a charge of irresponsibility have produced something which on the face of it appears to be extremely foolish.

Mr. MacEwan: Outside experts, I guess.

Mr. Gordon: The fact is that the form in which the proposed reduction in personal income tax is to be made was chosen for a number of reasons. We wanted to ensure that the reduction would confer the same benefit on people with similar incomes no matter where they resided in Canada, and that it would not disrupt the financial plans of the Provinces. This led us to the conclusion that the reduction should be in the form of a flat percentage of what is known as basic tax, rather than in the form of an increase in exemptions or a change in the rate schedule.

At present all the provinces impose a personal income tax, and in all provinces except Quebec the provincial tax is a percentage of the federal basic tax. Thus a decrease in the federal basic tax resulting from an increase in exemptions or a change in the rate schedule would have automatically reduced the amount of the provincial personal income taxes in all provinces except Quebec. It would also have automatically reduced the abatement allowed from the federal basic tax on acount of provincial tax. Because of this, a tax reduction of say $100 for a resident of a typical province other than Quebec would have turned out to be a federal tax cut of $76 and a provincial tax cut of $24. For a resident of Quebec, for whom the abatement would be larger under the opting-out arrangements, an intended reduction of $100 would have turned out to be a federal tax cut of only $53. There would have been no provincial tax cut, since the Province of Quebec levies its tax without reference to the federal tax.

It follows that a tax reduction in these forms—that is, an increase in the exemptions or a change in the rates—would have resulted in different amounts of reductions for taxpayers residing in different provinces but whose circumstances were otherwise the same. It would also have seriously disrupted the financial plans of the provinces.

Of course the nine provinces could, in such circumstances, have raised their rates to avoid a decrease in their personal income tax revenues, but this would have been difficult for them and especially difficult for those provinces that had introduced their budgets before the Federal Budget was presented. Similarly, the Province of Quebec could, at the cost of a considerable reduction in its revenues, have lowered its rates so that the income tax position of a resident of Quebec, taking both federal and provincial personal income taxes into acount, was the same as that of a resident of other provinces. We did not believe that federal action that would have necessitated such changes in every province could be justified when the method chosen was available to us. Under it, the whole of the tax reduction will be borne by the Federal Government, and under it the benefits to taxpayers all across Canada will be the same. I wanted this opportunity, Mr. Chairman, to make that explanation, especially to those who have had some misunderstanding as to the reason we proposed the cut in this way.

The second point that I would like to discuss at this stage is the section of the resolution which deals with periodicals and newspapers. I would like to review briefly the events which have led up to the measures which are designed to ensure that control of our periodicals and newspapers will be retained in the hands of Canadians. Hon. Members will recall that a Royal Commission was created by the previous Government to examine the position of Canadian periodicals. This was the O'Leary Commission, whose chairman is a respected Canadian editor known for his strong views on many subjects including, as one would expect, fiercely held convictions about the vital importance of maintaining freedom of the press.

The Commission, which reported in 1961, stressed the importance to the country of Canadian self-expression through Canadian ownership and control of periodicals. It recommended as a practical way of securing such control that those directing advertising to Canadian readers should use Canadian publications as a condition of the costs being recognized as a business expense for tax purposes.

The previous Government accepted this recommendation, though with the qualification that it should not apply to foreign owned periodicals already published in Canada; that is, to Time and Reader's Digest. That Goverment fell, however, before these proposals were approved by Parliament.

This Government, after giving the matter further consideration, decided that the measure proposed by our predecessors was a sound one. This decision was announced in the Throne Speech of February, 1964. My recollection is that while the announcement in February, 1964, and the earlier announcement by the previous Government aroused some controversy, most of such controversy was centred on the exemption provided for Time and Reader's Digest. The principle of disallowing advertising costs as deductions for tax purposes was not challenged, as I remember, in the press or elsewhere.

In explaining the proposal in the House on February 20, 1964, the Prime Minister pointed out that the problem of Canadian ownership of periodicals applied also to other media of communications. In particular, he mentioned "signs that metropolitan newspapers in Canada may, before long, be in danger of coming under foreign ownership and control". The Prime Minister stated that the Government would give careful consideration to this problem.

Hon. Members will remember that the 1964 session was an extended one—to put it mildly—and we did not have time to deal with the resolution on periodicals. In the meantime, further consideration was given to the broader problem, especially to the question of ownership and control of Canadian newspapers. This included informal discussions with a number of newspaper publishers.

As a result of this further consideration and discussion, it was decided that the same principle which had been recommended by the Royal Commission and put forward first by the previous Government and then by this Government in the February, 1964, Throne Speech, should be applied to newspapers as well as periodicals.

As I said, this had not aroused opposition or suggestions that it posed a threat to the freedom of the press when it was to be applied to periodicals. It has been surprising, therefore, that this charge should be raised when the same principle is now to be applied to newspapers. It is difficult to accept the fact that a principle can be right and good, and widely accepted as such, when applied to one field of communications but not when it is applied to another.

The Government's proposal asserts no control whatever over newspapers or other publications. It does not alter in any way the complete freedom of businesses to advertise in any way they choose in existing publications or in any future publications owned by Canadians. It provides no precedent for any kind of Government interference in the complete freedom of the press.

The proposal does make it highly unlikely, however, that the ownership of Canadian newspapers will be transferred to foreigners. Some few people may not think it matters whether control of Canadian communications media is retained in Canadian hands. The Government believes this does matter, and the majority of newspaper publishers have indicated that they share this view.

Hon. Members will recall that in the early days of radio, following the report of the Aird Commission, approval was given to legislation providing that control of Canadian radio stations—and later television stations—must be held by Canadians. If this had not been done, it is safe to assert that many Canadian radio and television stations would now be controlled by absentee owners.

There are, of course, similar laws in the United States respecting the ownership of U.S. television and radio stations, as an ex-Canadian, Mr. Jack Kent Cooke discovered.

As I say, the majority of newspaper publishers have not objected to preventive measures being taken against the transfer of Canadian newspapers to non-residents. The controversy seems to arise over the timing and the method chosen to prevent this being done.

As to the timing, let me say the obvious. There is no point in locking the stable door after the horse has been stolen. Hon. Members will recall that last September I announced that legislation would be proposed in due course preventing the acquisition of any of our chartered banks by non-residents of Canada, and that this would be made retroactive to the time of the announcement; that was, to September, 1964. I was asked why it was necessary to make an announcement at that time when, as far as most people knew, no takeovers of Canadian banks were in contemplation. Shortly after making the announcement, however, I discovered that a foreign institution had planned to acquire a controlling interest in one of our principal Canadian banks. We would have been faced with a fait accompli if it had not been for my announcement.

The same thing could be true in the case of some Canadian newspapers. I do not think we would like it very much if we woke up one morning to find, for example, that control of the Toronto Globe and Mail had been acquired by certain United States interests who wished to exert a direct influence on Canadian public policy. Nor do I think we would like it very much if we woke up one morning to find, for example, that control of La Presse had been acquired by certain European interests who wished to exert a direct influence on Canadian public policy. These are eventualities the Government believes we should guard against in time.

In essence, the objections boil down to the particular measure which is proposed to accomplish an objective with which most people agree. The fact is that no practical alternative has been found, despite careful thought and much discussion with the people concerned. In practical terms, we have the alternative of proceeding with the measure which is before the House or of dropping the question altogether. If we were to do the latter, and one or more of our more important newspapers or chains of newspapers were to fall into foreign hands, neither the Government nor Parliament could shirk responsibility for having allowed this to happen.

Let me say another word about the freedom of the press, or to put it in broader terms, the freedom of the communications media. First, measures which have prevented control of Canadian radio and television stations being acquired by non-residents have been generally accepted. Second, the present proposal with respect to Canadian periodicals has not been challenged, Third, clearly there is not and could not be any question of interfering with the press in so far as the dissemination of news and opinion is concerned. Fourth, the proposal interferes with one freedom and one freedom only. It means that a Canadian publisher wanting to sell his newspaper will have to accept the best bid he can get from other Canadians. The whole point is to establish a safeguard to prevent foreigners from outbidding Canadians in this field.

• (9:10 p.m.)

I can understand the objections of publishers who may wish to expand their operations to other countries. Obviously, if this same approach were adopted elsewhere, such expansion would not be possible unless the parties concerned were prepared to apply for citizenship in such other countries as was done by Mr. Jack Kent Cooke. But this is an objection which should be stated clearly for what it is: fear that businessmen or wealthy financiers may be discouraged from acquiring the communications media of other countries and, having done so, perhaps attempting to influence public opinion in those countries. That kind of objection should not be confused with freedom of the press.

Mr. Herridge: Quite right.

Mr. Gordon: I do believe, Mr. Speaker, that the discussion which has arisen over this issue has had its uses. The very proper concern of the press about its freedom has been vigorously stated. I cannot believe that after this discussion any Canadian Government at any time would ever contemplate any measure which could seriously be construed as interfering with the freedom of the press. I know that no Liberal Government would ever think of doing so. I am sure the same would be true of any Government composed of any of the other parties represented in this House.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, in dealing with this resolution we are faced with quite a compendium of bits and pieces having to do with various sections of the Income Tax Act. Some of them are as usual hole pluggers, or perhaps it might be better to say "pluggers of holes". Then there is the particular section dealing with newspapers and periodicals on which the Minister has spoken for the last several minutes. It is not my intention tonight to deal with that latter aspect but rather with some of the other features of the resolution.

First of all, with regard to the income tax reduction I think personally that one is not being overly cynical if he says that this was devised and timed as part of a voting gimmick. Let me say why it seems to be a voting gimmick. When "10 per cent" is said quickly it sounds like a lot to people who are taxpayers, but it means nothing to non-taxpayers. It does not do anything for people not classed as taxpayers.

There have been other tax reductions in the past. In 1957 or 1958 the Minister's predesessor but one brought in a tax reduction which greatly increased the number of non-income taxpayers. I think that what happened was that the Minister had about $250 million to $275 million to play with and he said to himself, "How am I going to put that to the best use politically"?

Miss Jewett: Huh.

Mr. Lambert: It was straightforward political thinking. First of all, we know there were limitations in the case of some of the provinces, so far as the basic tax is concerned. I put it to the Minister and to the House that the tax proposal is discriminatory in a number of ways. First of all, as I said it does nothing for the non-taxpayer of whom there are many in this country either by reason of limited income or because they have varying exemptions. I do not think the Minister of Fisheries will shake his head when by reason of exemptions a person becomes a non-taxpayer, and there are thousands in this category. Either by reason of the number of dependants or otherwise potential taxpayers become non-taxpayers. In other words, they are cleared by their exemptions. Ten per cent of nothing means nothing to such a person so he gets no gain.

For the person who pays a small amount of tax a 10 per cent reduction is a very minute amount. I am not going to go into the varying scales. These were adumbrated by my late colleague, the former Member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings, and also by others. References have been made to a cup of coffee a day and so on. But then there is a further category, and this is perhaps the main reason I consider this reduction political. Perhaps the hon. Member for Northumberland may not have thought about this.

I am thinking of those people whose incomes are above the level of incomes that will benefit from this reduction. In other words, on the average the limitation of $600 means that anyone with an income above $20,000 will not benefit. Some people will say that $20,000 is a lot of money and anyone with such an income is in the higher brackets in this country. But I put it to hon. Members that in so far as economic development and commercial impact are concerned taxpayers in this category are very important, because in the main most of those who earn over $20,000 are people who are perhaps a little more industrious.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): A little luckier.

Miss Jewett: Less than 1 per cent of the population.

Mr. Lambert: They are, shall we say, more energetic. Somebody says "a little luckier". I do not know that there are many people who are prepared to work 16 or 18 hours a day, who have considerable ingenuity—

Miss Jewett: The right father.

Mr. Lambert: —and have not inherited wealth but have been very industrious people. They are not limited to any part of the country and they are somewhat restricted in number. I am sure that the official thinking goes this way: There are a certain number of these people who are dyed in the wool Liberals, so no matter what we do they will still vote Liberal.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Lambert: I have said there is a proportion. Then an equal number are Conservative and this action will only reinforce them in voting Conservative. But the overall number is not large. Then there is a third segment comprised of people who may have voted Liberal but will now vote against the Liberals because of this action. However, politically speaking, their number is small. I am sure the political thinking is: What is their political impact in votes? An analysis shows that in numbers right across the country throughout the constituencies their impact is not very great.

Miss Jewett: How many are there between $10,000 and $20,000?

Mr. Lambert: There are more between $10,000 and $20,000 than there are over $20,000. But I would suggest this is an area of discrimination. It is not the only one, but it is an area of discrimination just as one might say that a progressive income tax is discriminatory. In other words, you just grin and bear it because you can bear it a little better if you are in a higher income bracket, even though your contribution is quite as much and in fact may be considerably more than the person whose income is somewhat less. The Minister indicated that it was not possible to do anything about corporation income tax, of which the Federal share is 12 per cent of incomes under $35,000 and 41 per cent on incomes above $35,000, because the provinces have a 9 per cent vested interest in corporation income taxes. He preferred to wait for the report of the tax structure committee.

• (9:20 p.m.)

Well, I do not care how you slice a loaf of bread, lengthways or crossways, it still comes out bread. I think the Minister would agree with me, as would the hon. member for Northumberland, that the majority of corporate income tax is passed on to the consumer. It is still John Q. Citizen who pays the tax. Now, as to whether that tax cut should be an incentive or not, I subscribe to the view that corporate income tax would have much more impact than personal income tax, in so far as stimulation of the economy is concerned. After all, if I may say so, part of the political thinking behind this tax cut was to partially soften the impact of the premium that will be paid under the Canada

Pension Plan. The Minister was quite frank about this. There will be up to $79, and perhaps $158.40 payable by the self-employed person, under the Canada Pension Plan starting in 1966. This provision will, therefore, go toward softening the impact of this compulsory levy under the Canada Pension Plan.

I am just wondering if there would not have been more effect, in dealing with the $250 million or $275 million—the Minister's advisers may be able to help us in this regard —if there is that much available as a result of the growth of the gross national product, if we were to straighten up our corporate income tax structure and get away from this wholly artificial division between small business and big business, under which you get this 21 per cent and 50 per cent differentiation. I think it is wholly artificial.

Mr. Gordon: Would my hon. friend permit a question?

Mr. Lambert: Yes.

Mr. Gordon: Is he recommending that this change should be made, that there should be this evening up? If so, does he think it should be done now or does he think we should wait for the Carter Commission report?

Mr. Lambert: I am asking the Minister to see whether, within this field, there is not an area in which to work. After all, if we look at the motivation for the stimulation of the economy through a tax cut, we find it would do the most good in the field of corporate income tax. Is the Minister reinforcing my contention that this had a great deal of political gimmickry—

Mr. Gordon: I thought I was asking the question, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Lambert: All right, I am coming back to it. I will answer by asking a question.

Mr. Gordon: That is the trouble with you lawyers.

Mr. Lambert: If there is this $250 million or $275 million, I would have felt that an evening up of the two categories, with greater earnings withdrawn from a corporation in the shape of dividends, as is done in other jurisdictions, might help solve the problem of what I believe is an artificial distinction and would leave money—if the Minister will kindly bide with me—

Mr. Gordon: You intrigue me.

Mr. Lambert: This is not the first time I have made this suggestion. I made it last year, the year before, and the year before that. As a matter of fact, my colleagues used to wonder if I was ever going to get off it. No one has as yet satisfactorily answered this point. It seems to me fundamentally unsound to set at $35,000—it used to be $25,000 and earlier it was $20,000—the distinction between small businesses and what is not really big business, especially if you go just $5,000 over the $35,000.

After all the Minister and his colleague, the Minister of National Revenue, from the experience I had with the Department of National Revenue, went through the greatest torture to plug up holes in the administration of the Income Tax Act, in so far as related companies were concerned. Certain types of industries and certain types of operations lend themselves to proliferation of departments or small companies. For some time certain corporate taxpayers were really in clover because they were able to break down their operations into a whole series of small businesses. Then we came along, again with an artificial restriction, and attempted to eliminate the related companies. Every year, as a result of the ingenuity of the taxpayers, the tax officials must come along and try to plug other holes. In my opinion the administration of the Income Tax Act in this particular sector would be a great deal easier and we would not have the expense on the part of the taxpayer trying to devise ways and means of alleviating the tax load—certainly at 50 per cent the tax load is heavy on corporations—if my suggestion were followed. I may be ahead of the Carter Commission, but I still believe that if there were $250 million or $275 million available for the full 1964-65 taxation year, something could have been done in the field of corporate income tax which, from the point of view of stimulating and maintaining the growth of our economy, would have been preferable to a personal income tax cut.

Then, we come down to the next paragraph of the income tax resolution and we see changes made which make allowances for the support of nephews and nieces, not all nephews and nieces, but those who may be infirm in certain categories either mentally or physically or, if they are over 21 years of age and attending a full time course of study at school or university, provided the mother of the niece or nephew is divorced or separated and is not in receipt of alimony or a similar payment.

• (9:30 p.m.)

This may introduce a complication. If a separated mother receives alimony, and separate maintenance for her child, is it a lump sum? There is imprecision in the Act, and there is also the question if the father of the niece or nephew is deceased, or mentally or physically infirm.

This deals with a certain number of hardship cases, and I think generally Members will accept that there are always some of these fringe cases to which one feels one should be able to give relief, providing they do not cost too much money to the treasury. I can think of other categories which are equally deserving, but the numbers in them are too great and therefore they would be too costly to the treasury.

The fourth paragraph of the resolution deals with the famous amendment in the second half of the Canada Pension Plan, where a change was made in the old age security to those persons between 65 and 70 over the period until 1970, and the disallowance, as one became eligible for old age security, of the $500 allowance for being over age 65.

I must confess that on one occasion when I was commenting on this I said the Government was only giving something with the right hand and taking something back with the left hand, that the $500 not only covered the taxpayer but his or her spouse. I must confess I was temporarily in error and misled some people, and I must apologize for that. In any event this is part of phase 2 of the fourth version of the Canada Pension Plan, granting the old age security to persons over age 65.

So far as the fifth paragraph is concerned, this gives an extension of membership dues in either trade unions or professional societies, putting them outside of the $100 general allowance. In other words, full credit is being given for them.

Paragraph 6 deals with residence qualifications for persons in international service engaged in the development assistance programs of the Government of Canada. I dare say this is some inducement for persons engaging in this type of activity and it may also cover the Company of Young Canadians and people in it who may go abroad in the future.

So far as the seventh paragraph is concerned I would like to get a clarification from the Minister that any contributions made toward the Canada Pension Plan, or under a provincial pension plan, may be deducted in computing the income of the persons making them. Is this within the limitations of any pension plan contributions, such as the $1,500 ceiling? We need some clarification on this point so that we may tell our constituents whether the introduction of the Canada Pension Plan will now be caught by the ceiling on retirement savings plans. There is a limitation within the framework of the Income Tax Act with regard to these contractual obligations that a taxpayer may enter into. Is this contribution to the Canada Pension Plan going to be in addition to that? The Minister nods his head, so I will take that as his answer.

In paragraph 10 there are a number of, shall we say, exemptions of expenses that heretofore have always proven somewhat thorny. I do not know why they have been brought in this year, as there are any number of others that are quite as difficult to handle, and it would be interesting to get a rationale from the Minister for the picking out of the five subparagraphs in paragraph 10 of the resolution.

The first one that comes to my mind is that if a payment is made by a taxpayer to a person who is a lessee of a property to induce that person to cancel the lease, then the taxpayer may claim that amount as a deduction or as an expense against that year's income, provided of course the lessee and the taxpayer are dealing at arm's length.

Mr. Gordon: Which number?

Mr. Lambert: Number 10(a) on page 12 of the resolution. The first question that comes to my mind is why "dealing at arm's length"? Is this going to eliminate related companies? Is it also going to eliminate any personal relationship between the owner of the property, the taxpayer, and the lessee?

One example was quoted to me this way. A father has a shopping centre. One unit of the shopping centre he has leased to a son who is in independent business, and the other units are leased to strangers. The father is able to sell the shopping plaza, provided he is able to give vacancy. In other words, he must buy out the leases. The money that he has paid to the strangers he is able to claim as a deduction but the money he has paid to his son, who is in business independently, he cannot claim as a business expense, and to that extent I would say that this provision of dealing at arm's length is discriminatory and unrealistic, in the same way that I think there will be some difficulty in determining the corporate relationships. What will be the criteria to determine whether two companies are at arm's length?

Also, what of the taxpayer who is a lessee and he buys off the term of his lease by a lump sum payment to his lessor? Is he not able to claim that? Surely to goodness the two positions should be treated the same way? For example, say I am renting premises under a long term lease and I have three years left, and because of expanding business conditions —I am sure the Minister would appreciate this—I feel I have got to go to bigger and better premises. Suppose I wish to buy out the balance of the term of the lease under which I hold the first premises, and I enter into an agreement with my landlord whereby in return for a lump sum payment I can bring the leasing agreement to a term. Certainly I should be able to claim that as a business expense. But I cannot do so under this provision.

• (9:40 p.m.)

There is a second paragraph dealing with landscaping property used by the taxpayer for the purpose of gaining or producing income. If I landscape a house in which I live I cannot get any allowance under this provision. But if I own the house across the street I can claim the landscaping as an expense.

Mr. Horner (Acadia): And move in yourself, the following year.

Mr. Lambert: And, of course, as the hon. Member for Acadia says, I can move in myself the following year.

Then a deduction may be claimed in respect of clearing land or laying tile drainage for the purpose of carrying on a farm business. I think there is a good deal which could be done, here. It all depends, of course, on what the interpretation of "clearing land" is to be. Paragraph (d) is one which may lead us into a wilderness. It says—

—as or on account of the cost of making representations to a Government, municipality or other public authority in connection with a business carried on by the taxpayer, including representations for the purpose of obtaining a licence, permit, franchise or trademark.

What limitations are there to be? Is there to be an element of reasonableness? If there is, here is another point at which discretion is introduced on the part of the Minister. Will a taxpayer be able to bring forward all his expenses incurred in connection with, say, making representations to the Government of Canada for the purpose of obtaining a licence or a permit even if his efforts are unsuccessful and the proposed business cannot function? Take the case of a group of businessmen who get together to form a broadcasting company and apply for a television licence. They may spend a good deal of money toward obtaining a television licence and in the end they may not be successful. The expenses would be those of the corporate body which, in many instances, would have no income. To whom would the allowance be granted in such a case? Would it be set against the personal incomes of the individuals in the company? I think we shall need to obtain clear answers on points such as these, because there is a great deal of uncertainty attached to the resolution as presently written. As to expenses, does it mean a man would have to stay at a second rate or third rate hotel—or could he go down to the Chateau in Ottawa and live there like a visiting potentate? Is the Minister going to say expenses must be reasonable and, if so, who is to determine what is reasonable? Is this, too, to be left to ministerial discretion? These are questions which must be asked.

The Deputy Chairman: I must interrupt the hon. Member to remind him that the time allotted to him has expired.

Does the committee give leave to the hon. gentleman to continue?

An hon. Member: Ten minutes.

Mr. Lambert: I will not take that long.

Then I think we shall need some clarification of paragraph (e)— —as or on account of the cost incurred in investigating the suitability of a site for a building or other structure planned by the taxpayer for use in connection with a business carried on by him.

Would this permit a man operating a business in Vancouver to travel to Montreal, all his expenses being deductible. Suppose the man says: I was investigating a site for a building which I may use; I am thinking of branching out. I trust these are questions to which the Minister will give us concise answers.

As I said earlier, I do not wish to deal with this matter of newspapers and periodicals except to say this: With regard to the periodicals, we heard a great deal of complaint from the Canadian periodical press that they were being starved to death because of what they alleged was unfair competition by two United States giants which had established operations in Canada, and which for technical reasons were able to acquire their editorial content at a much lower price than Canadian concerns. These two giants, it was said, were syphoning off the great bulk of the advertising revenue available to magazines and other periodicals in Canada.

Well, the proposals contained in this resolution will only enshrine this situation because the two magazines in question, Time and Reader's Digest are specifically exempted. This resolution puts down in black and white the situation which has existed for a considerable time. From time to time the periodical press has activated discussion on this subject; at other times it has laid low. What is the future of Canadian magazines? Either they have been able to extricate themselves from this situation which existed prior to the appointment of the Royal Commission on press and periodicals, or they have resigned themselves to it and are, nevertheless, continuing to live.

I hope they are finding a means whereby they can survive—and not only survive, but expand. I do not know what provisions here can help them at all. They are not complaining about competition from periodicals published and printed abroad; the chief difficulty lay with publications printed in Canada but enjoying certain advantages because their editorial content and other facilities were supplied by the parent organization. This situation is to continue. As I say, there will be further discussion in this regard.

• (9:50 p.m.)

I wish to thank the committee for having allowed me these few extra minutes. I will not abuse the generosity of hon. Members. As I indicated earlier, this budget resolution is composed of bits and pieces. There are items on which I have not commented, for example paragraph 13 which merely plugs loopholes. I should like to say something about item 15 which I think may discourage joint ventures by companies searching for oil and gas in the Western Provinces or even on the northern islands. I say this because it is no longer possible, as exploration goes further and further afield, for exploration to be carried out by an individual company. Even the largest one is now participating along with associates or competitors in their business in joint ventures to try to find a new field. Certainly under the regulations which apply in the Province of Alberta this is an eminently sound way of doing it, because if a new field is discovered and it is on only one Crown reserve, then the whole area may be parcelled out in leases and everbody gets a crack at it.

This certainly will contribute to the companies getting together, which is, again, a sound point. But I am just wondering what the implications of paragraph 15 are going to be, because apparently the cost of acquiring the lease or licence cannot be passed back to the shareholder corporation, which frankly is the only one that is earning income; because the development syndicate or the development corporation that goes in to prove this particular well is not an income earner. I therefore rather suspect that what is going to happen is that the cost of acquiring leases which have been granted in previous years is going to be taken away this year under another form. We will discuss this further, Mr. Chairman, when the bill comes forward.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Chairman, having only five minutes at my disposal I shall just have to start to insert my knife in the ribs of the Minister of Finance and complete the evisceration at a later date. I may say that I was rather surprised that the Minister displayed such, shall I say disingenuousness, to give it no harder name, by repeating tonight the figures that he, I understand, provided his innocent and unfortunate Parliamentary Secretary who I am sorry to see is not in the House tonight, I am perfectly well aware that this is an honest misapprehension on his part. I suspect he had been misled by the Minister of Finance, who had not I am afraid at that time—in fact I am quite sure—read the amendment which was presented to the House on behalf of this party. In fact, Mr. Chairman, I recall meeting the Minister of Finance in the elevator and he was still hurling these ridiculous sums at me, and I pointed out that in fact there was another flaw in my amendment as it was written, and that anybody who earned $1,501, as he pointed out tonight, would have to pay on the $500 above $1,000.

However, tonight the Minister again produced these fantastic and astronomical figures which he provided for his unfortunate Parliamentary Secretary, and I am rather surprised that the Minister would stoop, again, to this disingenuousness instead of dealing with what was—and I admit it quite frankly —a shortcoming in my amendment; but a shortcoming made necessary by the fact that one cannot spell out all the consequences of action proposed in an amendment. What the Minister is telling us now is really this, that he is too incompetent to devise the graduation changes in the incomes just above the level of those whom I am proposing to remove altogether from the income tax brackets. Many of us have suspected this, but what I find quite disturbing is the implication that not only is the Minister incompetent but that his officials, his advisers, his experts are also incompetent and are not able to make those minor adjustments in the income tax rates that would naturally, I would have thought—

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if my hon. friend would permit a question?

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Yes, do. I am always hoping you will dig yourself in deeper. Let us have it.

Mr. Gordon: Is the hon. Member attempting now to say that he was not irresponsible and he was not even sloppy? Nobody can, surely, excuse him from one or other or both those charges.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Mr. Chairman, I am suggesting to the Minister that in an amendment—and perhaps if he had a little more experience in this House he would know this—presented in the middle of a debate in this House one does not spell out everything in detail.

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if my hon. friend—

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Perhaps the Minister can wait until I get through.

Mr. Knowles: He can contain himself.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Yes, he can contain himself. He asked me to contain myself. I contained myself until this moment, and look what happens. I found the Minister disingenuously repeating figures which were based, as he knew quite well this evening even though he was unaware of it the first time he persuaded his Parliamentary Secretary to produce them, on a gross misreading of the implications of my amendment.

An hon. Member: You grossly misrepresented it to the public.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): I suggest that it should have been obvious to anyone that the proposal which I made, which was to remove certain people altogether from the Minister's tax rolls, would necessitate some minor adjustments in the graduated income tax above that level to avoid the particular disabilities that the Minister pointed out tonight. Here is what he is telling us, that we are stuck forever with this formula; that if we want to raise the income tax exemptions in this country, if we want to remove some other sections of the community from the Minister's tax rolls, we have to grant that exemption all the way up the scale. This is what he is telling us, in effect, this evening; that because you are going to eliminate certain people from the income tax rolls, therefore the result will be even more consideration for those in the higher income brackets.

I suggest to you, Sir, that this is either a revelation of incompetence on the part of the Minister or it is a revelation of the fact that he is not concerned with such matters as equity in the distribution of our income and the distribution of the burden of taxation for public services in this country.

May I call it ten o'clock, Mr. Chairman, and complete my evisceration of the Minister at a later date.

Progress reported.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. MacNaught: Mr. Speaker, tomorrow we will continue with the discussion of the budget resolutions.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the House under Provisional Standing Order 39A deemed to have been moved.

TRANS-CANADA HIGHWAY—REQUESTED REMOVAL OF UNSATISFACTORY PORTION

Mr. J. J. Greene (Renfrew South): Mr. Speaker, I rise at this time to complain, in the brief time allotted to me, of the condition of Highway No. 17 immediately west of the City of Ottawa, which is designated as part of the Trans-Canada Highway and which I respectfully submit is a very long way from coming up to the standards which are generally accepted as satisfactory with regard to the Trans-Canada Highway. I may say that it causes me some considerable embarrassment, as a Member from that part of the country, to be reprimanded by my fellow Members from such generally reputed poor provinces as Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, when they complain to me that this highway is far from the calibre of the Trans-Canada highway that they enjoy in their provinces.

This matter has been drawn to my attention by resolutions from the elected representatives of many of the municipalities in the constituency I have the honour to represent, namely the Town of Arnprior, the City of Renfrew, the Township of McNab, and the Township of Admaston. Also the Eastern Ontario Development Association has drawn this deplorable situation to my attention, and this prompted me to raise the matter in the House during the question period the other day, and to complain further here at this time.

• (10:00 p.m.)

I quite appreciate that highways generally are within the provincial field of responsibility, but I do suggest that when a highway is part of the Trans-Canada Highway, this Government, this House, and in particular the Department of Public Works cannot suggest that they do not have some responsibility for its condition.

There is one very heartening thought about the sad condition of the highway, or tortuous trail, which I think has been properly referred to as a goat trail. As a boy, among my hero-like movies was King of the Khyber Pass and, subsequently, The Lives of the Bengal Lancers, both motion pictures which were very popular in my day among young people. I understand that certain Hollywood people intend to make another movie of the Lives of the Bengal Lancers and, inasmuch as the roads in the Khyber Pass have been considerably improved since the 1930's, they feel that this stretch of No. 17 highway would be most adequate for the filming of the new version of the Lives of the Bengal Lancers. Therefore, there must be some modicum of benefit to the people in this regard. However, I think we would sooner have this part of the road brought up to the standard we expect for our Trans-Canada Highway.

Mind you, it is nothing new for the Ottawa Valley and, in particular, Eastern Ontario in general, to get the short end of the stick. As a matter of fact, when one talks about the short end of the stick, I suggest that in that part of the country we have not yet got the butt end of a good toothpick as our share in respect of matters such as roads, to which both the federal and provincial authorities contribute. In other areas we are used to being despoiled, just as Georgia was when Sherman marched through it. We have been despoiled of our rights to water resources as a result of the transmission of power to other locations instead of having industry come to the power source, as is the case in more enlightened provinces. We have, of course, the most expensive energy—electrical, petroleum and natural gas—of any part of the Province of Ontario, so we are used, as I say, to being shortchanged in many ways. We do expect, however, to be able to get out of this part of the country with our produce, and to have some easy access to markets in order that we may share somewhat in the general bountiful advantages of this great province.

We are aware of the great metropolitan City of Toronto which received $50 million in regard to the Gardiner expressway, and $50 million in respect of the subway. In Toronto these days they have reached the point where on top of their roads, they have superhighways, and on top of the superhighways they have super, superhighways, and beneath it all they have a subway. The people I represent do not mind contributing to this great development in the metropolitan City of Toronto, as it is a wonderful area and we are very proud of its progress. Judging by the representation it sends to this House the people of Toronto are very wise politically. However, we would like to share somewhat in the bounties of this great province and we feel we can better do so if this section of the trans-Canada Highway is brought up to standard, so that we might have access to the great metropolitan markets.

I do suggest that the Federal Government has considerable responsibility in this regard. I understand that in the first instance highway No. 17 was designated as a main artery of the Trans-Canada Highway, but subsequently for some mysterious reason the main artery was diverted through Lindsay. There was a very eminent gentleman in the Provincial Government at that time who came from the Municipality of Lindsay, hence the main branch of the Trans-Canada Highway went through Lindsay, and our section of the highway for political reasons was designated as a second branch of the Trans-Canada Highway. That designation carried with it little green signs with little green maple leaves; but apart from that, no construction was to be observed.

So I suggest that the maple leaf is now the proud symbol of this nation and that it should only designate highways which are in fact of Trans-Canada standards. In the short time allotted to me I have but this to say: May we bring this highway up to Trans-Canada standards. As a Federal Government may we insist that if it is to be a Trans-Canada Highway it be brought up to Trans-Canada standards. Otherwise the vigilantes of the Ottawa valley will have little choice but to tear down those little green maple leaves, because we know it is not in fact a trans-Canada Highway.

Mr. G. Roy McWilliam (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, the remarks of the hon. Member for Renfrew South (Mr. Greene) were listened to with a great deal of interest and I am sure they will be noted. However, I am informed by the officials of the Department of Public Works that this matter does not come within the jurisdiction of that Department or of any other Department of the Federal Government.

The section of highway 17 to which the hon. Member refers is not part of the official Trans-Canada Highway for which the Federal Government shared any costs. The maple leaf signs on this section of highway No. 17 were placed there by the Provincial Department of Highways with the Province bearing the cost. The object of these signs, I am told, is to indicate a provincial northern route connecting with the official Trans-Canada Highway. The Department takes the position that repairs and improvements to this section of highway 17 are entirely a provincial matter as the Federal Government did not share in the cost of the highway.

Mr. Greene: Will the Parliamentary Secretary permit a question?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The hon. Member for Port Arthur.

FORESTRY—REMOVAL OF DEPARTMENTAL LABORATORIES TO SAULT STE. MARIE

Mr. D. M. Fisher (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, I regret I have not got the capacity for understatement of the hon. Member for Renfrew South (Mr. Greene) to assist me in raising a matter about which I am rather irked. I see that the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture is here to answer, I suppose, for the Minister of Forestry (Mr. Sauvé). It would have been too much for that great man to give us his presence this late in the evening. He is probably away in Quebec making the world safe for the Minister of Justice (Mr. Favreau).

The problem I want to touch on was raised in a question when I asked the Minister of Forestry if, when his estimates went before the appropriate committee of the House later this session, he would support a thorough investigation, including the calling of outside witnesses, with regard to the decision to put the regional forest research headquarters at Sault Ste. Marie rather than retain them at Richmond Hill or Maple where they are now. This particular issue may seem rather small, but I think this action is the most outrageous blow struck at forestry science and forestry research in a long time. It is indefensible; it is stupid.

The Minister's answer was no, he would not support the calling of outside witnesses. I am going to be on the committee and I am going to try to see they are called. In any event, as a member of that committee I hope to interrogate the Minister and his officials so as to reveal that this great hero of clean-up in politics has been as guilty of pork barrel politics and patronage as any minister I have ever heard of. I have a letter here from a Mrs. K. C. von Althen of Richmond Hill who is close to the foresters there. She says in part:

> While it may be too late to change the Minister's original decision, I sincerely believe that, for the benefit of the Department of Forestry, it should be pointed out in the House of Parliament that such a move is contrary to the best interests of future forest research in Ontario. In other words, if the old pork barrel approach is to be used, please say so and let the blame for future shortcoming be placed with the Minister rather than the practising scientists of the Department of Forestry.

• (10:10 p.m.)

Who was it that the Minister of Forestry could not say no to? Was it the Prime Minister, whose constituency is close to Sault Ste. Marie? Was it the hon. Member for Algoma West (Mr. Nixon), who has been here so long and so quietly? Was it the Attorney General of Ontario, Mr. Wishart, who is the Member for Sault Ste. Marie and seems to have convinced the Provincial Department of Lands and Forests it should take a completely negative attitude on this question and not say yea or nay to this move?

I wanted to turn to the Minister's original announcement on February 18, and I quote from the press release:

> "To establish our regional headquarters near the centre of major forest activity is, I feel, a sound decision," Mr. Sauvé said. "All the various factors were carefully weighed and we consulted with all those involved."

There are lies in that statement. Consultation was inadequate. Sault Ste. Marie is not the centre of forest activity in Ontario. It is quite apparent that the factors that were looked at were partisan politics and superior pressure, if you want to put it that way.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order; the hon. Member, I am sure, would expect the Chair to intervene when he says that a statement made by a Minister is a lie. This, obviously, is unparliamentary. Perhaps the hon. Member has an explanation.

Mr. Fisher: Well, I will just say that they are misstatements of the truth, Mr. Speaker, because obviously Sault Ste. Marie is not in the centre of forest activity, and certainly not of research in Ontario. It became apparent as things developed after this announcement that a great many people were not consulted, including the forestry school at Toronto, the forestry school at Port Arthur, the professional foresters and almost everybody who had a professional interest in this. You cannot blame me, therefore, for suggesting that there are some misstatements in the Minister's approach.

Later on, in a speech on March 23 to the Canadian Forestry Association, the Minister said:

> In deciding on appropriate locations for our regional headquarters, we are guided by several important considerations, namely, the seat of Provincial forest authority—

That is in Toronto, not in Sault Ste. Marie, and Sault Ste. Marie is not even a regional headquarters.

> —the presence of universities—

There is not even a technical college established at Sault Ste. Marie.

> —and the proximity of forest industries.

Well, I cannot think of a more isolated part of Ontario, in a transportation sense, and one that has a smaller variety of corporations concerned with forest activities than the immediate Sault Ste. Marie area. Therefore, according to the Minister's own standards, the decision is wrong.

Later on, in this same speech, the Minister says:

> In Ontario, we were faced with a particularly difficult situation, and we reached the decision that our regional headquarters should be in Sault Ste. Marie, which has the advantage of being geographically near the centre of the province and close to the forest industry.

He is getting a little bit closer to the truth. Sault Ste. Marie is close to the geographical centre of the Province and it is close, in terms of hundreds of miles, to the forest industry. The main point is that most of the research, research scientists, laboratories, library facilities, forestry associations, corporation headquarters, provincial headquarters and all their staffs are in the Toronto region, particularly at Richmond Hill and Maple.

[Mr. Deputy Speaker.]

I do not want to say anything more, other than that this move is going to lead to the resignations and loss to Canada and to the Government service, of some of the best people we have managed to get in the forestry service. I put the responsibility upon the Minister. I do not want an answer from the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Beer). I just want to put on the record a warning that this whole matter is going to be investigated in detail in the Estimates Committee when the Forestry Estimates come before us.

Mr. B. S. Beer (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Forestry): I wish to thank the hon. Member for bringing up this important matter. I am sure he will appreciate it if I bring to his attention the fact that I am not only Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Agriculture but also to the Minister of Forestry, and have a perfect right to answer this question on behalf of the Minister of Forestry.

I am of course grateful to the hon. Member for putting on the record the statement made by the Minister of Forestry (Mr. Sauve) on February 18. If the hon. Member had read my statement on March 4, in answer to a question put by the hon. Member for York North (Mr. Addison) he would have had much more information than he gave. On that occasion, on behalf of the Minister of Forestry, I stated that 87 per cent of the productive forests in Ontario are located in this general area and provide 93 per cent of the wood cut in the province.

Mr. Fisher: That is nonsense; misstatement.

Mr. Beer: I also stated that, in addition, 18 of the 27 pulp and paper mills in Ontario are located north of Lake Superior and Lake Huron.

I stated that present capital investment in land and buildings by the Department of Forestry is already extensive in the Sault Ste. Marie area. Total federal investment since 1950 amounted to $1,200,000. In addition the Federal Government has access to the insect laboratory which is owned by the province, with a capitalization of $950,000. Therefore we do have substantial investments in the Sault Ste. Marie area.

I also want to place on record that on May 12 the Minister of Forestry had a meeting with municipal officials and departmental officials in Richmond Hill, and I have here in my hand a letter expressing appreciation for the courteous meeting which was held on that occasion, and for the understanding view which was taken by the Minister.

Then, to conclude my remarks, I refer to the answer which the Minister of Forestry gave on June 10, which said that there is no change in the announcement made on February 18. That places the whole matter clearly on the record and states the decision of the Minister of Forestry and the Government.

Mr. Fisher: Rotten, pork barrel record.

Motion agreed to and the House adjourned at 10.19 p.m.

COMMUNIQUÉ FOLLOWING VISIT BY PRIME MINISTER OF INDIA

PRESS RELEASE COMMUNIQUÉ

DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS CANADA MINISTÈRE DES AFFAIRES EXTÉRIEURES

For Release Monday, June 14, 1965, at 08.00 hours E.D.S.T.

VISIT TO CANADA OF PRIME MINISTER SHASTRI

The Prime Minister of India, Mr. Lal Bahadur Shastri, paid an official visit to Canada June 10-14 at the invitation of the Canadian Government. During his stay in Canada the Prime Minister visited Ottawa and Niagara Falls and will spend June 14 in Montreal.

While in Ottawa, the Prime Minister of India visited the House of Commons and officially opened the Commonwealth Room in the Parliament Building. He laid a wreath at the War Memorial.

In Montreal, the Prime Minister of India will address a special convocation at McGill University at which an honorary degree will be conferred upon him. He will also call on the Mayor of Montreal at the City Hall.

The Prime Minister of India had discussions with Prime Minister Pearson, and the Secretary of State for External Affairs, the Hon. Paul Martin; with the Minister of Finance, the Hon. Walter Gordon; with the Minister of Trade and Commerce, the Hon. Mitchell Sharp; and with the Minister of Industry and Defence Production, the Hon. Charles M. Drury. The High Commissioner for Canada to India, the Hon. Roland Michener, and Canadian officials attended the discussions. The Prime Minister of India was assisted by the Indian High Commissioner to Canada, Mr. B. K. Acharya, Mr. L. K. Jha, Secretary to the Prime Minister, and Mr. R. Prasad, Joint Secretary to the Prime Minister.

In the course of their talks, the two Prime Ministers dealt with the wide range of relationships between India and Canada, with questions expected to arise at the forthcoming meeting of Commonwealth Heads of Government, and with the main international problems of the day. The talks disclosed understanding and respect for each other's point of view and a wide area of agreement on many world issues.

The two Prime Ministers expressed satisfaction with the friendship and cooperation which have at all times marked relations between India and Canada. They looked forward with confidence to the continuation of this warm relationship in the future.

Cooperation between the two countries extends to many fields, particularly the economic field. The Prime Minister of India expressed appreciation for the assistance extended by Canada to India under the Colombo Plan and for the cooperation between the two countries in promoting the economic development of India. The Prime Minister of Canada reiterated Canada's deep and continuing interest in the economic development of India and in the success of India's Five-year Plans.

Both Prime Ministers agreed on the urgent need to raise the standards of living of the peoples of developing countries. They recognized the responsibility of both the developed and developing countries to cooperate in this task and welcomed the establishment of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development as an organization which could make a vital contribution toward the elimination of disparities in economic conditions through more rapid economic growth.

The two Prime Ministers re-affirmed their support for the United Nations and their desire to see the world organization develop into an effective instrument for the maintenance of international peace and security and for the promotion of understanding and co-operation among nations. The Prime Ministers noted that the present year marked the 20th anniversary of the United Nations and was being celebrated as International Co-operation Year. They hoped that it would usher in an era of increased United Nations activity and better international co-operation in the cause of world peace and prosperity.

They noted with concern and regret the difficulties that stood in the way of the functioning of the 19th Session of the General Assembly. They expressed their sincere hope that these difficulties would be overcome as a result of the discussions now going on in the Special Committee on Peacekeeping Operations and that the world body would emerge the stronger after the crisis.

It was also noted that both governments shared the desire to strengthen practical arrangements for United Nations peacekeeping. Both have been major participants in United Nations peacekeeping operations and continue to provide contingents of their armed forces for service in the United Nations Emergency Force in Gaza as they had done throughout the United Nations peacekeeping operations in the Congo. An Indian delegation participated in the discussions between military experts on the technical military aspects of United Nations peacekeeping which took place in Ottawa last November. The Prime Ministers agreed that, whatever the constitutional and other difficulties which stood in the way of collective responsibility for United Nations peacekeeping, it was imperative that a solution be found which would enable the United Nations to continue to fulfil this essential role in future.

The two Prime Ministers re-affirmed their support for the attainment of general and complete disarmament under effective international control. They discussed the great danger of proliferation of nuclear weapons and agreed that the 18-Nation Disarmament Committee should devote itself, as a matter of priority, to finding a solution to this problem. They called upon all states to abide by the spirit and provisions of the Treaty Banning Nuclear Weapons Tests in the Atmosphere, in Outer Space and Under Water. They emphasized the importance of taking early steps for the conclusion of a comprehensive Test Ban Treaty so as to cover underground tests as well.

The Prime Ministers expressed their deep regret and concern over the series of nuclear tests to which the People's Republic of China has devoted itself in defiance of a world opinion which strongly opposes the continuance of tests in any environment. These tests represent a setback to current efforts to achieve non-proliferation of nuclear weapons. The Prime Minister of Canada expressed particular satisfaction at India's decision not to use nuclear energy for other than peaceful purposes, despite India's technical capability to produce nuclear weapons.

They further expressed their satisfaction at their mutual association in the International Control Commissions in Indochina during the last eleven years. They recognized the difficulties in the functioning of the Commissions in the present circumstances.

While recognizing that it had not always been possible for Canadian and Indian views to coincide on every aspect of the consideration of the difficult problems arising before the Commissions, both Prime Ministers agreed that their mutual association in the Commissions had been useful, and re-affirmed their desire that their representatives in the Commissions should make every effort with a view to encouraging implementation of the Agreements, which it is the task of the Commission to supervise.

The Prime Ministers examined the situation in Vietnam and considered the measures open to them to try to bring peace to that country. They reviewed their efforts to try to interest the powers directly involved in a cease fire, in unconditional negotiations, and in greater international participation in and responsibility for bringing about and guaranteeing a cease fire and any agreement which might accompany or succeed it. They expressed their regret that lack of respect for the Cease Fire Agreement, as reported by the Commission in 1962, had led to the present higher level of hostilities. They were convinced that a purely military solution was neither practicable nor desirable.

They hoped that it might still be possible for the combatants to curtail hostilities or to initiate periods of cease fire which might become permanent; they also expressed the hope that their earlier proposals for negotiations without preconditions would still yield results. They agreed to work for a solution to the Vietnam problem which will enable the people of Vietnam to enjoy freedom and independence. Any settlement should be suitably guaranteed by the international community.

Both Prime Ministers expressed concern at the increasing tendency to use force for the settlement of disputes, and the Prime Minister of Canada reiterated Canada's sympathy and support for India in her border conflict with China. He expressed the hope that the problem will be resolved peacefully and that China would agree to talks with India on the basis of the proposals of the six non-aligned countries formulated in Colombo in December 1962 which India had accepted.

The Prime Minister of India expressed his pleasure at visiting Canada and establishing contacts with Canadian leaders and people. He expressed deep appreciation of the warm hospitality extended to him and members of his party. He extended an invitation to the Prime Minister of Canada to visit India. The invitation was accepted with pleasure.

APPENDIX "B"

CORRECTED PROVISIONAL ORDERS TO CONTINUE IN EFFECT UNTIL END OF NEXT ENSUING SESSION

Ordered,—1. (a) That detailed examination of estimates, saving always the right of the Committee of Supply, be undertaken by Standing Committees and that not more than 30 days of the time of the House be allocated to the business of supply in each session. For the purpose of this order, the business of supply shall consist of main estimates; interim supply; and supplementary or additional estimates excepting supplementary or additional estimates introduced after the main estimates have been approved, and excepting always the final supplementary or additional estimates;

(b) That the number of supply motions be reduced from six to four; and

(c) That a Special Committee of the House, consisting of twenty-four members, to be designated later by the House, be instructed to prepare and to submit to the House forthwith the changes in Standing Orders consequential upon these orders, including any means of giving to the opposition an opportunity to select the departmental estimates to be discussed.

2. That the orders of this House under numbered paragraph 1, and the changes in Standing Orders consequential upon this Order, be continued in effect until the end of the next ensuing session, unless this House otherwise orders.

Ordered,—Standing Order 6

6. (1) At 6:00 o'clock p.m. on Wednesdays and Fridays and at 10:00 o'clock p.m. on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, unless provided otherwise in these Standing Orders, Mr. Speaker shall adjourn the House without question put until the next sitting day.

(2) A motion that the House continue to sit after the hour specified in Section (1) may be made at any time without notice. If any member objects to the motion, Mr. Speaker shall request those members who object to rise in their places and if ten or more members then rise, the question shall not be put on the motion. If no member objects or if fewer than ten members rise in their places, the motion shall be deemed to be carried. No debate or formal vote shall be held on such a motion to extend a sitting. During an extended sitting, as provided under the provisions of this Section, no Order shall be called for consideration unless such Order was under consideration prior to the normal hour of adjournment. An extended sitting under the provisions of this Section, unless a closing time has been specified, shall not be terminated except by the adoption of a motion to adjourn and Mr. Speaker shall not deem that a motion to adjourn the House has been made by virtue of the operation of any other Standing Order.

(3) If any member objects to the taking of a vote at any time between 1:00 o'clock and 2:30 o'clock p.m. or between 6:00 o'clock p.m. and 8:00 o'clock p.m., Mr. Speaker shall request those members who object to rise in their places and if five or more members rise, the taking of the vote shall be postponed. At 2:30 o'clock p.m. or at 8:00 o'clock p.m., as the case may be, Mr. Speaker shall interrupt the proceedings then before the House and shall put, or shall cause to be put, the question on any postponed vote. The House shall be deemed to have reverted to private members' business for such time as is necessary for the taking of any vote postponed from the time provided for private members' business.

(4) When it is provided in any Standing Order or in any order of the House that the business under consideration at the ordinary time of adjournment be forthwith disposed of or concluded. Mr. Speaker shall not adjourn the House until the specified proceedings be completed.

Standing Order 12

12 (1) Mr. Speaker shall preserve order and decorum, and shall decide questions of order. In explaining a point of order or practice, he shall state the standing order or authority applicable to the case. No debate shall be permitted on any such decision, nor shall any such decision be subject to an appeal to the House.

Standing Order 15

15 (3) Except as otherwise provided in these Standing Orders the order of business for the consideration of the House, day-by-day, after the daily routine shall be as follows:

(Monday)

Questions.
Government Orders.
(From six to seven o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)
Notices of Motions.

(Tuesday)

B. On the second and each alternate Thursday thereafter:

Private bills.
Notices of motions (papers).

(Friday)

Government Orders.
Questions.
(From five to six o'clock p.m.—Private Members' Business)
Public bills.
Private bills.

(4) When a debate on a motion "That Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair" for the House to go into Committee of Supply is in progress at 6:00 o'clock p.m. on either a Monday or a Tuesday, the order for private Members' Business on that day shall be suspended.

Standing Order 15-A

15-A (1) There shall be a Business Committee to which the leader of each party in the House from time to time by written notice to the Speaker may appoint one member.

(2) During routine proceedings a Minister of the Crown may propose that the question of allocation of time for any item of business, unless otherwise provided for, be referred to the Business Committee, and upon such proposal being made that question shall stand referred to the Committee.

(3) The Business Committee shall report back to the House on or before the third sitting day following such reference.

(4) If the Chairman of the Business Committee reports that the Committee has unanimously recommended an allocation of time for the item of business or stage thereof, a Minister of the Crown may without notice propose a motion, to be decided without debate or amendment, for concurrence in the report, and, if agreed to, the motion shall have the same effect as if it were an order of the House.

(5) If the Chairman of the Business Committee reports that the committee has been unable to reach a unanimous agreement or if the committee fails to report within the time specified by Section (3) of this Standing Order, a Minister of the Crown notwithstanding the provisions of Standing Order 41, may give notice of motion that at the next sitting of the House, provided that day is not a Wednesday, he will move that an order be made allocating the time for the item of business or stage thereof.

(6) A motion of which a Minister has given notice under Section (5) of this Standing Order shall be made during routine proceedings. Unless the debate on the motion has been previously concluded, Mr. Speaker shall at fifteen minutes before the expiry of the time provided for Government business in such sitting, interrupt the proceedings and forthwith put every question necessary to dispose of the main motion. A motion requesting allocation of time if agreed to shall have the same effect as if it were an order of the House.

(7) No motion made by a Minister under Sections (5) and (6) of this Standing Order shall provide for the allocation of a period of time less than two days for the second reading, two days for the committee stage, and one day for the third reading of any bill. For the purpose of this section, third reading shall be deemed to have been considered for one day provided the order for third reading is called as the first item under Government Orders on a Monday, Tuesday, Thursday or Friday, and provided it is continued, if necessary, until the normal time of adjournment on any such day. Such an order having been called on any Monday, Tuesday, Thursday or Friday, it shall have precedence over all other business until the time of adjournment on that day, unless it is disposed of earlier. Under any other circumstances, a total of five hours shall be deemed to be the equivalent of one sitting day.

(8) During debate on any item of business or stage thereof for which an allocation of time has been made under this Standing Order, if an amendment is proposed which in the opinion of Mr. Speaker raises any issue for which in the opinion of Mr. Speaker there has not been or otherwise will not be an adequate opportunity for discussion, Mr. Speaker may announce an extension of not more than two days to the allocated period of time.

(9) When a debate on third reading of a bill is under a time allocation order, under this Standing Order, Mr. Speaker shall have the authority to extend the sitting of the final day under such allocation order for a period not to exceed four hours, provided he has received written notice, given at least one hour prior to the normal time of adjournment, from any member or members indicating their desire to speak and provided such member or members have not spoken and there is no opportunity for such member or members to speak prior to the normal time of adjournment. Any speech made in such extended time of sitting, unless it is being made by the representative of a party which had not had a speaker during the normal sitting hours, shall be limited to twenty minutes. No member shall be allowed to speak during such an extended sitting unless he has given notice as herein provided, and no member speaking during an extended sitting shall move any amendment or sub-amendment. At the request of any five members, any vote or division called for during an extended sitting shall be postponed until the next sitting day, and shall be taken as the first item under Government Orders on the said next sitting day without any further debate.

(10) The term "allocation of time", wherever used in this Standing Order, may include the allotting of time to any item of business, to any stage thereof, or to any part thereof, and may include the fixing of limits for the length of speeches.

(2) That the proposed Standing Order 15-A be continued in effect until the end of the next ensuing session, unless this House otherwise orders.

Standing Order 18

18 (2) Except as provided in Standing Orders 43 and 56, Government Orders may be called in such sequence as the Government may think fit.

Standing Order 31

31. (2) When the business of Private Members is being considered, no member shall speak for more than twenty minutes at a time.

Standing Order 39

39. (5) Before the Orders of the Day are proceeded with, questions on matters of urgency may be addressed orally to Ministers of the Crown, provided however that if in the opinion of Mr. Speaker a question is not urgent, he may direct that it be placed on the Order Paper, provided also that the time allowed for a question period prior to the calling of the Orders of the Day shall not exceed thirty minutes, except on Mondays when the time allowed for a question period prior to the calling of Orders of the Day shall not exceed one hour.

A member who is not satisfied with the answer given to a question asked on any day at this stage, or a member who has been told by Mr. Speaker that his question is not urgent, may give notice that he intends to raise the subject-matter of his question on the adjournment of the House. The notice referred to herein, whether or not it is given orally during the question period before the Orders of the Day must be given in writing to Mr. Speaker not later than 5.00 o'clock p.m. the same day.

Standing Order 41

41-A. Unless notice of motion has been given under Standing Order 41, any member proposing to raise a question of privilege other than one arising out of proceedings in the Chamber during the course of a sitting shall give to the Speaker a written statement of the question at least one hour prior to raising the question in the House.

Standing Order 43

43. (2) When the debate on any motion made under Standing Order 15 (2) is adjourned or interrupted the order for resumption of the same shall be transferred to and considered as the first Order under Government Orders.

Standing Order 44

44. When a questionn is under debate no motion is received unless to amend it; to postpone it to a day certain; for the previous question; for reading the orders of the day; for proceeding to another order; to adjourn the debate; to extend the sitting of the House; or for the adjournment of the House.

Standing Order 59

59. (4) The Chairman shall maintain order in the Committees of the Whole House; deciding all questions of order subject to an appeal to Mr. Speaker; but disorder in a committee can only be censured by the House, on receiving a report thereof. No debate shall be permitted on any decision.

Standing Order 65

65 (1) At the commencement of each session, a special committee, consisting of seven members, shall be appointed, whose duty it shall be to prepare and report, within ten sitting days after its appointment, lists of members to compose the following standing committees of the House:

(a) on Agriculture, Forestry, and Rural Development to consist of 45 members;
(b) on Broadcasting, Films and Assistance to the Arts, to consist of 24 members;
(c) on Crown Corporations, to consist of 24 members;
(d) on External Affairs, to consist of 24 members;
(e) on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs, to consist of 24 members;
(f) on Fisheries, to consist of 24 members;
(g) on Health and Welfare, to consist of 24 members;
(h) on Housing, Urban Development and Public Works, to consist of 24 members;
(i) on Indian Affairs, Human Rights and Citizenship and Immigration, to consist of 24 members;
(j) on Industry, Research and Energy Development, to consist of 24 members;
(k) on Justice and Legal Affairs, to consist of 24 members;
(l) on Labour and Employment, to consist of 24 members;
(m) on Miscellaneous Estimates, to consist of 24 members;
(n) on Miscellaneous Private Bills, to consist of 24 members;
(o) on National Defence, to consist of 24 members;
(p) on Northern Affairs and National Resources, to consist of 24 members;
(q) on Privileges and Elections, to consist of 24 members;
(r) on Public Accounts, to consist of 24 members;
(s) on Standing Orders, to consist of 24 members;
(t) on Transport and Communications, to consist of 24 members; and
(u) on Veterans Affairs, to consist of 24 members.

(2) The Special Committee shall also prepare and report with all convenient speed, lists of members to compose the following standing committees:

On Printing, to act as members on the part of this House on the Joint Committee of both Houses on the subject of the printing of Parliament, to consist of 23 members;

On the Library of Parliament, so far as the interests of this House are concerned, and to act as members of the Joint Committee of both Houses to consist of 21 members;

Provided that a sufficient number of members of joint committees shall be appointed so as to keep the same proportion in such committees as between the memberships of the House of Commons and Senate.

(3) A majority of the members of a standing committee shall constitute a quorum unless the House otherwise orders;

Provided that, in the case of a joint committee, the number of members constituting a quorum shall be such as the House of Commons acting in consultation with the Senate may determine.

(4) The Standing Committees shall be severally empowered to examine and enquire into all such matters and things as may be referred to them by the House; to report from time to time their observations and opinions thereon; to send for persons, papers and records; and to print, from day to day, such papers and evidence as may be ordered by them, and Standing Order 66 shall not apply in relation thereto.

(5) Any member of the House of Commons who is not a member of a standing committee, may unless the House or the standing committee otherwise orders, take part in the deliberations of the standing committee, but shall not vote or move any motion or any amendment or be counted in the quorum.

Standing Order 68A

68-A. In any standing or special committee of the House questions of order shall be decided by the chairman, subject only to an appeal to the committee.

Standing Order 99

99. No Bill for the incorporation of a railway or canal company, or for authorizing the construction of branch lines or extensions of existing lines of railways or of canals, or for changing the route of the railway or of the canal of any company already incorporated, shall be considered by the Committee on Transport and Communications, until there has been filed with the committee, at least one week before the consideration of the bill, a map or plan drawn upon a scale of not less than half an inch to the mile, showing the location upon which it is intended to construct the proposed work, and showing also the lines of existing or authorized works of a similar character within, or in any way affecting the district, or any part thereof, which the proposed work is intended to serve; and such map or plan shall be signed by the engineer or other person making the same.

Standing Order 105

105. Every private bill, when read a second time, is referred to one of the standing committees as follows: bills relating to banks, insurance, trade and commerce and to trust and loan companies, to the Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs; bills relating to railways, canals, telegraphs, canal and railway bridges, to the Committee on Transport and Communications; the bills not coming under these classes, to the Committee on Miscellaneous Private Bills, and all petitions for or against the bills are considered as referred to such committee.

That the said amendments to the Standing Orders be continued in effect until the end of the next ensuing session unless this House otherwise orders.

The House met at 2.30 p.m.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

FIRST REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. John R. Matheson (Leeds) presented the first report of the Standing Committee on External Affairs, and asked for unanimous consent to move that the report be concurred in.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, for a special reason, and since another committee is also supposed to submit a report, we should like to have the two-day notice as required by standing orders, so that the report may be studied in forty-eight hours.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Since there is not unanimous consent the motion may not be moved at this point.

[Translation]

Allow me to suggest to the hon. member for Lapointe that it might be preferable for him to raise his objection normally, that is before the Speaker reads the motion to the house.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, if I recall correctly, yesterday I attempted to raise my objection before you read the motion but, at that time, you called me to order; you pointed out that I could not raise it because you had not read the motion. That is what I did today.

[English]

[Note: Text of the foregoing report appears in today's Votes and Proceedings.]

BROADCASTING

STATEMENT RESPECTING COLOUR TELEVISION SERVICE

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a statement to the House on the subject of colour television. Hon. Members know that this is a matter of growing importance and concern to Canadians in view of the rapid development of colour transmissions in the United States.

There is now clear evidence that an important part of the combined total output of the three largest American broadcasting networks will henceforth be in colour, and the rapid rise of colour set acquisitions in the United States indicates that a definite shift has taken place in that country from black and white to colour television.

Better than 50 per cent of Canadian homes with television sets are within reach of direct television signals from the United States, so that a situation is rapidly developing in Canada not unlike that of 1951-52, just prior to the commencement of Canadian television, when a large audience developed in Canada for direct American television broadcasts.

The Government has asked the Committee on Broadcasting to examine this matter and report on the situation. I reported to the House last week that the conclusions of the Committee on Broadcasting, because of the complexities of the study, cannot be available until late in the summer. I regret this, but I repeat that the subject matter of the study is indeed important and complex so that the delays were perhaps to be expected. However, the Government now finds it necessary to make a clear statement on colour television in advance of the Broadcast Committee report.

There are several reasons for this. First, it is necessary to give guidance to the Canadian electronics industry and to the broadcasters in Canada on the technical standards which will be adopted. Second, it is necessary to announce a firm commencement date for colour television in Canada so the telecommunications and broadcasting industries can work together on their plans. Third, it is necessary to authorize the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to instal colour television equipment in the facilities which will be made available for the various countries participating in Expo '67.

The advice given to the Government by the broadcasters and the electronics industry is that up to 18 months notice must be given in advance of the commencement of colour television service so the complex engineering work and the various facilities installations can be completed.

Colour Television Service

The Government has decided that the transmission of colour programs from Expo in 1967 is a necessity since three or four other countries have already indicated their intention and desire to make such colour transmissions, notably the United States, Japan, Great Britain and possibly France. There may be others also since many other countries seem now to be planning for colour television within the next two years.

If there is to be a colour television service in Canada on April 1, 1967 it will be seen that the time for decision is upon us. Both the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and the private broadcasters must be given the same advance notice and permission to proceed.

We are advised by the Committee on Broadcasting that they will recommend the commencement of colour television in Canada in 1967. They will also recommend proceeding with caution, since the implementation of colour will be a costly addition to the broadcasting budget in Canada, but that it is inevitable because of the United States colour programs.

It will, of course, be necessary for the Government to consider the cost factor very carefully, and to ensure that higher priorities, such as the extension of broadcast coverage and the necessity for improved Canadian programming, are not lost sight of.

In conclusion therefore, Mr. Speaker, I am announcing the intention of the Government, through my colleague the Minister of Transport, to prescribe the colour television standards to be applied in Canada. I am announcing also the willingness of the Government to permit the immediate application by broadcasters, under the Radio Act, for licenses for colour transmissions to commence not earlier than January 1, 1967. Finally, I am announcing the intention of the Government to authorize the C.B.C. to proceed with the necessary contractual arrangement for the installation of colour television equipment at Expo' 67 and, since the C.B.C. national English and French networks must carry these signals, the preparation of the necessary alterations to the transmitters and network facilities of the C.B.C. for this purpose. These arrangements are, of course, subject to the approval of further funds by Parliament for this purpose.

The further plans of the C.B.C. for colour should await the Broadcasting Committee report, and as I have already stated the Government will study carefully the whole question of broadcasting priorities before making further recommendations to the House.

[Mr. Lamontagne.]

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): I think in this case the Government has adopted a most unusual way of making a decision in respect of something of paramount importance to Canada and Canadians. We have endeavoured over and over again to bring together the House committee on broadcasting to discuss this and other matters connected with broadcasting, but without success. In every case when the need for expanding the present facilities in those areas which are now denied television has been pointed out the answer has been that nothing can be done in that connection until the Fowler Committee reports. On several occasions the hon. Member for Churchill has brought before the Government the question of the areas he represents, only to be met by a stone wall,—with statements that no action can be taken until the advisory committee makes its report.

Now suddenly the Government finds itself announcing policy with regard to broadcasting and, in particular, with regard to colour broadcasting, because of Expo '67. It is most laudable to have all the facilities available. After all we are to have a $10 million broadcasting building, and there has to be something to broadcast from the exhibition. This, apparently, is a step taken to justify the expenditure of the $10 million which, to my way of thinking, was a completely unnecessary and wasteful expenditure. I think the time has come to look into the expenditures of Expo '67 in so far as federal responsibility is concerned.

To return to the question of colour television, certainly this is a step all of us have looked forward to, but the manner in which the Government has gone about it indicates the haphazard thinking of those who sit opposite. A few weeks ago nothing could be done until the committee had reported. Now the committee has been communicated with to find out what its recommendation will be before they make it. Did you ever hear of a proposition like that? Why can we not find out what are the other recommendations the committee intends to make? Why the unearthly haste in this regard? Necessary as colour broadcasting is in the light of the advances which are taking place, the explanation given by the Minister simply indicates that this is another step in the way of Canada's policy being determined by what is necessary for Expo '67.

It seems to me strange to anticipate what the committee will do in advance of the report, when all over this country there are areas that are without ordinary television, and when advances in new colour television technology and broadcasting are apparently taking place in the United States. This is just another example of the kind of evasion this Government adopts toward the Parliament of Canada.

We have asked for the House committee on broadcasting to be convened, but we have been met by arrogant indifference and cavalier disregard for the rights of Parliament, the explanation being simply that the Government cannot do this because it has set up a group of individuals outside of Parliament and must wait for their recommendations. We now are asked to accept this kind of policy placed before us haphazardly with complete disregard for the rights of Parliament.

I welcome any action that may be taken in respect of colour television in Canada, but at the same time I say that the manner of going about this indicates the uncertainty with which this Government faces the problems of the nation.

Mr. D. M. Fisher (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Official Opposition might have mentioned another point about the Committee on Broadcasting which I think is even more bizarre, and that is that one of the key members of that trio is the Minster's own Deputy Minister. We have the very odd situation now of a committee recommending policy to the Government, one of whose members is the Minister's main adviser. This is certainly one of the most intriguing approaches to Government policy matters that I have encountered.

I mention this point because it just seems stupid that such major decisions affecting expenditures by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation on such a scale are revealed to us in this way without any preliminaries at all. I wonder what kind of a committee this Committee on Broadcasting really is, in view of the fact that it has been unable to produce a report up to this time. What will be the situation if the report is projected into the future and we only have a partial tip-off?

I think it is time we knew just what duties the three members of the Broadcasting Committee are carrying out in addition to their committee work. Is Mr. Fowler still doing a considerable amount of work for the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association? Is Mr. Lalonde still active in his legal practice, for instance, in connection with the Royal Commission on Pilotage? Is Mr. Steele, the Deputy Minister, still trying to carry a full load of departmental duties? It seems to me these are questions that need to be answered.

The Minister, I suppose anticipating a certain amount of criticism, did drag in two points that are objectionable in connection with this plan. He mentioned that the policy on the extension of television services is still incomplete. The Government has been asked about this for several years, and the C.B.C. gave a figure of $20 million in respect of the capital investment necessary to complete this program. In the meantime we are to get all this fancy stuff for Expo '67. We also have that wonderful radio station in Toronto broadcasting in French to no one or almost no one. We have also been told about the future plans for expansion all across the country—

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Fisher: My hon. friends cry "Shame". I have no objection to broadcasting of this kind, but I think there should be an audience before these expenditures are made.

The point I really want to make in relation to this announcement is that the Minister has opened up almost a Pandora's box of expenditures by the C.B.C. in preparation, yet we have not even received an undertaking from the Minister that the estimates of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will be placed before the committee at an early date. It just seems to me that the whole approach reflects inadequate planning.

The last point I want to make is that there is no question in my mind but that the introduction of colour television in this country will be popular. In this sense I welcome the announcement of the date and also the idea of our manufacturers being able to enter into the production of sets knowing a market is ahead of them. This will enable them to bring down the cost of such sets, which at the present time is very high.

Having said that, it certainly does not excuse the way the Committee on Broadcasting has been allowed to dawdle along in view of the carte blanche which has been given the C.B.C. in terms of expenditures on which we have no check or projection. All we have is this interesting announcement.

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, I do not think anyone is going to object to the prospect of having colour television in Canada. After all, countries like Japan have had several colour television networks for a number of years. We at least ought to be moving into this area by the time of our centennial. Therefore we approve the announcement from that standpoint.

However, I must join with those who have already spoken in criticizing the method by which this decision has been made. Surely the announcement is extremely unusual. How is it that other important matters involving broadcasting must wait until the Fowler Commission report is in, yet this particular aspect of broadcasting can move ahead without any question at all?

Another very important matter in this regard is this. How is it that we in this House are committed to the expenditure of millions of dollars to bring about colour television without even having had the privilege of considering the subject in committee? Therefore we must join in the protests which have been made in view of the fact that apparently this is not the normal procedure. I ask what is the reason behind this action.

Another interesting thing is that only yesterday it was announced by the C.B.C. that there would be a director of overseas and foreign relations. I would ask what that means. Does it mean we are going to step up our program of foreign broadcasting? Does it mean we will use some of the excellent programs which are available? Does it means still more expenditure without consultation with this House through a committee on broadcasting? Surely this whole matter should have been referred to a committee on broadcasting if it could not wait until the Fowler Commission report was presented. I think there are real grounds for protest in the strongest way of this very unusual action which has been announced today.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, I would be the last to criticize the statement made by the Secretary of State (Mr. Lamontagne) to the effect that Canada will at long last have colour television. On the contrary, notwithstanding the manner in which he made that statement, I believe that he deserves congratulations. This is an era of progress, and in the field of television as well as in other areas Canada should join modern times and have colour television. That is why I am happy to congratulate the Secretary of State for the announcement he just made today, and I hope that this will be an unprecedented success.

[Mr. Thompson.]

Mr. Speaker, the few words which the right hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Diefenbaker) said on this matter rather annoyed me. I would point out that when the Leader of the Opposition speaks, his voice seems to falter and we cannot very well understand what he says. Perhaps the microphones need adjustment or his voice may be weakening but, in any case, we can hardly hear him. On the other hand, I have noticed one thing: the Leader of the Opposition never misses an opportunity of speaking against the 1967 Worlds Fair because it is being held in the province of Quebec; he never misses an opportunity of voicing his anti-Quebec feelings.

[English]

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, there is no need for the hon. gentleman to prove his lack of a brain after making a statement like that. It is entirely false and he knows it.

[Translation]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. member for Lapointe knows that at this stage of the proceedings he must confine his remarks to the substance of the Secretary of State's announcement on motions.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, I would like to confine myself within the limits allowed the Leader of the Opposition. He deemed it advisable to criticize this decision because it favoured Expo '67. Now, I fail to see why the Leader of the Opposition takes this opportunity to criticize Expo '67. Should he not try to help make Expo '67 an outstanding success instead of provoking anti-Quebec feelings? We are shocked by such an attitude.

I heard the hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Fisher) say that the Toronto French language radio station was broadcasting for no one. However, in the Quebec City area, there are fewer English Canadians than there are French Canadians in the city of Toronto and we have no objections—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I would ask the hon. member for Lapointe to limit his remarks to the substance of the announcement made by the Secretary of State.

He is not allowed at this time to deal with the Leader of the Opposition's comments. He must limit his remarks to the announcement made by the minister himself.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, I am going over exactly the same course allowed hon. members who spoke before me. The French language radio station in Toronto was mentioned. About that matter I wish to say that if there are English language radio stations in the province of Quebec, we are happy—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Grégoire: I fail to see why anyone should attack the French language radio station in Toronto as the hon. member for Port Arthur just did. It is words like these which create unfriendliness between the two nations.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Once more I invite the hon. member for Lapointe not to wander away from the substance of the Secretary of State's statement.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, I did not intend to labour the point, but everyone knows that all the hon. member for Port Arthur knows about French Canada is Maurice Richard and Lili St.-Cyr.

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Grégoire: In any event, I feel that both he and the Leader of the Opposition would make a fine pair of anti-French-Canadians.

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Grégoire: To bring my remarks to a close, I—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Again, I ask the hon. member for Lapointe to take under consideration the suggestion made to him by the Chair to the effect that at this time he must limit his remarks to the announcement made by the Secretary of State.

Mr. Grégoire: Very well, Mr. Speaker, I should like to point out to the Secretary of State that even if we support—

[English]

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, you have now called the hon. Member for Lapointe to order on three occasions. Surely he should not be permitted to continue his remarks.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the Conservatives have become atonic or have lost their voices, but we did not hear one word of what he said.

In any case—

Some hon. Members: Order, order.

Mr. Grégoire: —nothing hurts like the truth.

I should like to point out to the Secretary of State that we are in favour of colour T.V., but that many communities and places are still without any T.V. service.

I think that the C.B.C. should appear before a committee of the house, because several good suggestions could be made by the representatives of the public for the benefit of French speaking and English speaking Canadians.

Mr. Speaker, in my opinion advantage should not always be taken of these announcements in connection with the C.B.C. on broadcasting to display nationalistic or anti-nationalistic feelings, as has been done today.

On the contrary we hope for a better understanding with regard to the C.B.C. so that future generations may be relieved, in Canada, of people such as the leader of the opposition and the hon. member for Port Arthur.

[English]

[Later:]

On the orders of the day:

Hon. J. A. MacLean (Queens): I should like to address a question to the Secretary of State in the light of the announcement he made on motions. Can the Secretary of State advise us what estimate the Fowler Commission has made as to the cost to Canada of colour television? Could he give the House some indication of the total cost and the capital expenditure which would have to be voted by Parliament in order to provide this additional service? I would appreciate it, too, if the Minister would give us a rough estimate of the cost of a colour T.V. set as compared with the cost of an ordinary set capable of receiving only in black and white.

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): I have been advised that the total capital cost of what I have announced will be about $15 million. As to the cost of colour television sets, I have no information to give the hon. gentleman.

CRIMINAL CODE

AMENDMENT RESPECTING GROUP DEFAMATORY LIBEL

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford) moved for leave to introduce Bill No. C-117, to amend the Criminal Code (group defamatory libel).

Some hon. Members: Explain.

Mr. Nesbitt: Mr. Speaker, this bill seeks to expand the criminal libel sections of the Criminal Code to include hate literature, which is sometimes referred to as group defamatory libel. It would make it an offence for any group to be held up to hatred, contempt or ridicule because of racial, religious or national background. In addition it would give the officer trying such a case discretion to send an accused for mental observation for 30 days if that presiding officer should see fit to do so. I might add that evidence to the effect that many people who disseminate hate literature are to some degree mentally unstable was given by a number of expert witnesses before the External Affairs Committee last year.

I realize that there are difficulties and dangers involved in introducing legislation of this kind, and that we should only proceed with extreme caution to change the law in this regard. However, I think this bill will provide a vehicle for discussion of this subject so that Parliament may decide whether the law as it stands should in fact be changed.

Motion agreed to and bill read the first time.

DOMINION-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

QUEBEC—ADDRESS TO HER MAJESTY RESPECTING PROVINCIAL CONSTITUTION

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, is the Secretary of State for External Affairs as Acting Prime Minister in a position to advise whether the Government of Canada, the Prime Minister or any other minister has received a message from the Legislative Council of the Province of Quebec in connection with a resolution passed by that body, calling upon the Federal Government to adopt an attitude of strict neutrality with regard to passing on to Her Majesty the Queen the address or resolution that was passed by the Legislative Assembly? Is the Minister in a position to advise whether the Legislative Council's address, which according to the information I have was deposited with the Lieutenant Governor of Quebec on the 11th of this month, has been transmitted to the Governor General? Would the Minister also say whether it is in order for the Legislative Council to pass on its objections and its resolution in that regard to the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom as the adviser to Her Majesty in the United Kingdom?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as my right hon. friend knows, the channel of communication in such matters would be from one government to another. If one body having legislative authority in a province takes a position involving a matter such as is purported in the telegram to which my right hon. friend refers, the communication to the Government of Canada would have to come through the proper channel, which in this instance must be the Government of the Province of Quebec. I believe that a communication of the kind my right hon. friend mentions has come in. I have not had an opportunity to give it the attention I will give it, but it will have to be perused in the light of what I believe to be the proper channel of communication.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. gentleman this question. Does he say that under the British North America Act the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Quebec, without the co-operation and joinder of the Legislative Council, can suggest amendments to the constitution? He said a moment ago that any body having legislative authority would forward its recommendations through the medium of the Lieutenant Governor to the Governor General. Did he by that statement indicate that the Government takes the stand that one of the three component parts of the Legislature of Quebec, namely the Legislative Council, could join with the Queen and the Legislative Assembly could be circumvented under section 71, is it, of the British North America Act?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): I think my hon. friend meant to refer to section 71 of the British North America Act. I do not believe anything I said warranted the conclusion which has been put to me by way of this additional question. I simply repeat that the proper channel of communication is between Government and Government, and in this instance not between one legislative body in the Province to the Federal Government, any more than it would be appropriate for one of the Houses of this Parliament to bypass the executive in seeking to establish communication with the Crown.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Since the hon. gentleman has referred to one of the Houses of Parliament circumventing the constitution, does he suggest that if a resolution were passed by the House of Commons and the regular communication to the Queen is through the Government of Canada, the Senate could be circumvented in an action to abolish, change or alter the constitution?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Again I must say to my right hon. friend that I do not believe my second response warranted the hypothetical interpretation which has just been made.

AGRICULTURE

BRITISH COLUMBIA—LOSSES SUFFERED BY FRUIT GROWERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): May I direct a question to the Minister of Agriculture, and ask him if he has received any request from the Government of British Columbia for assistance to the fruit growers of the Okanagan Valley and the Fraser Valley, in view of the fact that many of their fruit trees were winter killed. Has he received any such request, and is he taking any action on it?

Hon. Harry W. Hays (Minister of Agriculture): We answered this question last week, Mr. Speaker. We have received some inquiries from British Columbia, and at the present time the Government is considering them.

Mr. Douglas: May I ask a brief supplementary question. Under what programs has such assistance been requested by the Government of British Columbia?

Mr. Hays: There have been a number of suggestions made. I discussed some of the problems with the British Columbia Minister of Agriculture. If there were any call for some changes in legislation, this would be government policy and would be announced in the usual way.

Mr. D. V. Pugh (Okanagan Boundary): May I ask a supplementary question. I understand from the Minister's answer today that there is nothing further to the answer he gave me the other day, that the Province of British Columbia itself has not made a special request to this Government. Will the Minister then tell the House immediately when he does get such a request from the Government of British Columbia?

Mr. Hays: Of course in speaking with the Minister of Agriculture from British Columbia I did state that the Federal Government did have programs that would take care of a situation like this, such as our crop insurance program under which the Federal Government puts up 20 per cent of the insurance premium in so far as the farmer is concerned, and the Federal Government pays half the administration costs.

Mr. Pugh: The Minister is not suggesting now that the disaster this year could be cured by legislation to establish crop insurance which would be retroactive. Is that not so?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please; this is a question asking for a legal opinion.

QUEBEC—ASSISTANCE TO FARMERS

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Hon. Théogène Ricard (Saint-Hyacinthe-Bagot): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Agriculture.

Could he tell the house whether he has received from the government of the province of Quebec a request for assistance to farmers of the Saint Hyacinthe area, where the crops were greatly damaged following an invasion of caterpillars?

[English]

Hon. Harry W. Hays (Minister of Agriculture): No, Mr. Speaker.

[Later:]

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Lessard (Lac Saint-Jean): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Agriculture.

Since the people of British Columbia are interested in the havoc wrought upon Western agriculture, and since I have previously brought up a similar question with regard to agriculture in the Saguenay-Lac Saint-Jean district, has the Minister read the representations and the brief submitted by the UCC of Saguenay-Lac Saint-Jean, pointing up the sad experience of last year and requesting the assistance of the Department of Agriculture?

Second, has the Minister of Agriculture received any correspondence from the premier of the Province of Quebec in that respect?

[English]

Mr. Hays: I realize the situation is very serious, but I have not received a letter from the Premier of Quebec.

CONSIDERATION OF REPORTS OF WHEAT BOARD AND GRAIN COMMISSION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. J. H. Horner (Acadia): In the absence of the Minister of Trade and Commerce I wish to address my question to the Minister of Agriculture. Is it the intention of the Government to refer to the committee on agriculture the annual reports of the Wheat

Board and the Board of Grain Commissioners, in view of the fact that the world price for wheat has fallen by 20 cents a bushel and Australia has no wheat for sale, which leaves Canada as the only large country with wheat for sale to communist countries—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The question gives information rather than seeking it.

DEFENCE PRODUCTION

THEFT OF COBALT CONCENTRATE AT DELORO, ONT.

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): My question is directed to either the Minister of Justice or the Minister of Industry, because I am not sure to which Minister the question should be directed. It refers to the fact that four or five weeks ago some 150 tons of strategic cobalt concentrate were stolen. We have asked repeatedly for information as to who stole this cobalt and where it was taken. Perhaps the Minister could answer today as to what countries are in a position to make use of this strategic material, to which countries it is expected this cobalt has been exported.

Hon. C. M. Drury (Minister of Industry): I think the cobalt which has been reported stolen was the property of the Crown and administered by the Department of Defence Production. I will undertake to supply answers tomorrow to the questions asked by the hon. Member. I do not have at my fingertips the possible countries that might use cobalt.

Mr. Donald MacInnis (Cape Breton South): I understood the Minister of Industry to say the cobalt was reported to have been stolen. Is the Minister not aware whether or not it was stolen?

Mr. Drury: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I am aware.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

QUEBEC CITY—DISCOVERY OF BOMB AT HEADQUARTERS BUILDING

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Robert Beaulé (Quebec East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Minister of Justice.

Has the minister requested that an investigation be made in order to find out who put a bomb on the doorstep of the R.C.M.P. building in Quebec?

[Mr. Horner (Acadia).]

Hon. Guy Favreau (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, this matter is now being investigated.

Mr. Beaulé: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a supplementary question? Does the minister intend to pay tribute to the Quebec municipal police constable who helped dismantle this bomb, in order to prove to the people that Quebec police constables use their heads more often than clubs?

[English]

NATIONAL CAPITAL

DISCUSSIONS RESPECTING FORMATION OF FEDERAL DISTRICT

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Leon Balcer (Three Rivers): I have a question for the Acting Prime Minister. Has the Government approached the Premiers of Quebec and Ontario with a view to discussing the possibility of making the Ottawa-Hull area a federal district? Is it the intention of the Government to have this matter included in the agenda of the next Federal-Provincial conference?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: May I suggest that this is a question for the Order Paper.

FORESTRY

REMOVAL OF DEPARTMENTAL LABORATORIES TO SAULT STE. MARIE

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): In view of the fact that the Minister of Forestry has claimed so many times that he was misquoted in reports in newspapers, will he clarify the report that has just appeared to the effect a definite decision has been made now to move the forestry laboratory from King, Ontario, to Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario?

Hon. Maurice Sauvé (Minister of Forestry): I gave that answer to the House of Commons on June 10, Mr. Speaker.

[Later:]

Mr. Starr: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. The Minister of Forestry just said in answer to me that he answered the question on June 10. His answer on that occasion to the question asked by the hon. Member for Port Arthur will be found at page 2198 of Hansard, when he said:

> There is no change in the announcement made on February 18.

February 18 was not in this session of Parliament. If the Minister of Forestry continues to evade questions in the way he has been doing, then I think something should be done to make him give direct answers to direct questions.

Mr. Sauvé: Mr. Speaker, there was a debate on that subject last night, and if the hon. Member had read Hansard this morning he would have learned what was meant by that answer. In fact I was referring to the announcement of the Department of Forestry, public information section, dated February 18, when it was announced that the regional headquarters for Ontario would be established at Sault Ste. Marie.

Mr. Starr: My question was specific on this point of privilege. I asked the Minister whether the report in a newspaper was correct. All he had to do was say yes or no, instead of being evasive as he is.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

REQUEST FOR EXTENSION OF TELEVISION SERVICE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): I have a question for the Acting Prime Minister. In view of the announcement made today concerning the advent of colour television, and in view of the fact that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation has publicly announced that if Parliament would provide a special grant for the extension of television network facilities this work could be done very quickly instead of the contemplated time of ten years, will the Government now take steps to provide this special grant so the people now not served by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation network can be served as quickly as possible?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: This is a question for the order paper.

[Later:]

[Translation]

Mr. Gérard Laprise (Chapleau): Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. I should like to direct a question to the Secretary of State.

In regard to television, would he give the Chibougamau and Chapais areas the same consideration he is giving colour television in Canada?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That is a question for the order paper.

[English]

HEALTH AND WELFARE

INQUIRY AS TO NATIONAL MEDICARE PROGRAM

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I hope the Minister of National Health and Welfare will not mind if I put this question to the Acting Prime Minister. In view of the fact that the Government has found it possible in June of 1965 to announce colour television for Canada in 1967, will the Government consider announcing, before the end of the summer, that we will have medicare in Canada in 1967?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

[Later:]

Mr. Knowles: On a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker, another question of privilege got in between my question and the Minister's answer.

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, we will of course be glad to consider it.

Mr. Knowles: At ten o'clock, one of these nights.

FINANCE

REPORTED ATTEMPT TO MANIPULATE CANADIAN STOCK MARKET

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a question to the Minister of Finance and ask if he is aware that there has been a rather large scale attempt from outside Canada to manipulate the Canadian stock market. Further, if he is aware of this I would like to know whether any action is being taken to bring those responsible to justice, because I understand some of these phony orders were executed on the floor of the stock market.

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I am sure this allegation is far fetched and extremely exaggerated, and I would not put any credence in it.

NATIONAL PARKS

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON LEASING POLICY

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Eldon M. Woolliams (Bow River): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources, but first I would like to congratulate him on getting back from Siberia.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Woolliams: My question is in connection with the tourist trade which helps correct the imbalance of trade between Canada and the United States, and is in reference to the leases of property owners, people who serve a million tourists a year. Is the Minister now prepared to make a statement to the House, because this matter affects hundreds of business people in national parks who will have to renew their leases. I have had dozens of complaints in this regard, and I want to ask what is the policy at the present time.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. The hon. Member is asking what is the policy of the Government, and I assure this is not the time for an announcement of policy.

Mr. Woolliams: Maybe I can put the question so it will be in order, like my hon. friend from another constituency. Is the Minister prepared to renew the leases of businessmen who are serving the tourist trade I mentioned in my previous questions?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources): Mr. Speaker, the situation on leases in our national parks is absolutely normal. There is no difference today in respect of such leases. If the hon. Member has a specific case he might mention it to me, and we will look into it at once.

Mr. Lambert: Does the Minister mean to say there have been no changes?

Mr. Woolliams: I put it to the Minister that I have written to him and set out some definite cases, and I have been waiting for a reply for over a month.

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE

REQUEST FOR STATEMENT ON PROPOSED CHANGES IN PAROLE SYSTEM

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Reid Scott (Danforth): Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Minister of Justice a question which I put to his Parliamentary Secretary yesterday, reminding him that on February 23 he told the House he would try to make an announcement on the Government's policy with regard to parole prior to the date on which the House votes on capital punishment. Has he enunciated a new policy, or does he still expect to make the announcement prior to that important vote?

[Mr. Woolliams.]

Hon. Guy Favreau (Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, I considered this matter after my Parliamentary Secretary referred the question to me. In reconsidering the question in the light of the fact that the matter of capital punishment is to be submitted to the House to be decided by a free vote, I think it would be more proper for me not to make any assumption as to what that vote eventually will be, so as not to prejudice the question in any way. But for the information of the House I may recall that some months ago the Government amended the parole regulations to provide that in the case of a person whose death sentence has been commuted to life imprisonment, he may not be paroled except after study of his case and leave being given by the Government.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, with the uncertainty that prevails as to what the House may do in a free vote on the matter of the abolition of capital punishment, may I ask the Minister if it is the intention of the Government, until the vote takes place, to withhold any executions that are ordered or directed? I think that is the course that is generally followed when a matter of this nature is to be brought before Parliament. I am simply asking for information.

Mr. Favreau: Mr. Speaker, I think this question has already been answered in the House. The announcement which has already been made is to the effect that pending any change in the law, or any confirmation of the law as it presently stands, each case as it comes up will be considered on its own merits.

Mr. Diefenbaker: That being so, Mr. Speaker, will the Minister not bring on this matter as soon as possible? It seems to me that the necessity for action to be taken by Parliament is of paramount importance, because if Parliament is going to act and abolish capital punishment, those who are today waiting sentence should not be subject to the ordinary rules that have been applicable in the past.

Mr. Favreau: Mr. Speaker, it is the intention of the Government to allow the House to debate this extremely important matter as early as possible.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Favreau: I am proud to announce that the information booklet which is now prepared has been approved in draft form by the representatives of the various opposition parties, at least on the question of whether it is sufficiently unbiased and properly balanced. The translation is being completed and printing has already commenced. Therefore I think the House Leaders will soon be in a position to get together and discuss the matter.

Mr. Orlikow: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member for Chapleau.

Mr. Orlikow: On a supplementary—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. May I suggest to hon. Members, in view of the fact that we are operating under a new rule which limits questions to 30 minutes, we should try as much as possible to limit supplementaries. In view of this I would like to recognize the hon. Member for Chapleau.

Mr. Orlikow: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I asked the Minister a question yesterday which he said he would answer today.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Perhaps the hon. Member will have an opportunity to ask it again before the 30 minutes expire.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NATO—INQUIRY AS TO REDUCTION IN CANADIAN FORCES

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): On Friday last I directed a question to the Secretary of State for External Affairs with regard to reported basic shifts in NATO policy. The Minister was good enough to say he would take the question as notice. I wonder whether he is now able to clarify the position.

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): I hope to be in a position to answer the question either tomorrow or the next day.

DOMINION-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE

INQUIRY AS TO ATTENDANCE OF B.C. PREMIER

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Arnold Webster (Vancouver-Kingsway): My question is directed to the Acting Prime Minister. Is it true, as stated in an editorial in the Vancouver Sun, that though the Federal-Provincial Conference to be held in July is expected to last for a week, Premier Bennett of British Columbia has intimated that he and his Ministers plan to attend for one day and a half only because of more important commitments at home.

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): I shall have to review the files and find out what are the intentions of my friend the Premier of British Columbia.

FREIGHT RATES

PAYMENT OF WAGE COST IN RESPECT OF FREEZING

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. Russell MacEwan (Pictou): I have a question for the Minister of Transport. I want to ask him whether he can give the House any idea when the Government will make a decision on the request of Canada's two major railway companies for $142 million to meet rising wage costs.

Hon. J. W. Pickersgill (Minister of Transport): As soon as possible, Sir.

TELEVISION

INQUIRY AS TO CONTROL OF CABLE TELEVISION SERVICE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Jack A. Irvine (London): I have a question to direct to the Minister of Transport. Is it the intention of the Government to control C.A.T.V. or cable transmission through amendments to the Interpretation Act, as proposed in Bill S-15 which was given first reading in the other place on June 3?

Hon. J. W. Pickersgill (Minister of Transport): No, Sir.

Mr. A. D. Hales (Wellington South): Can the Minister say whether changes in this regard will be made before the Fowler Commission report is handed down?

Mr. Pickersgill: I would think it extremely unlikely.

AGRICULTURE

FEED GRAIN—REQUEST FOR POLICY ANNOUNCEMENT

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Clément Vincent (Nicolet-Yamaska): Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Forestry.

Could he tell the house, in all sincerity and without resorting to devious means, whether his department proposes to make a recommendation concerning feed grain?

Inquiries of the Ministry

Hon. Maurice Sauvé (Minister of Forestry): This was announced in the speech from the throne, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Vincent: Mr. Speaker, I have a supplementary question in this connection. Could the Minister say whether at this time the status quo, the first hypothesis of action stated by the Minister, is already the real policy of the government, as seemed to be the case in the last two years?

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

REPORTED STATEMENT RESPECTING INSTRUCTIONS IN WIRE TAPPING

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): I should like to ask the Minister of Justice whether he is now in a position to answer the question I asked him yesterday regarding allegations of R.C.M.P. participation in wire tapping operations.

Hon. Guy Favreau (Minister of Justice): Yesterday I undertook to complete my answer to the question put to me by the hon. Member for Winnipeg North having reference to the Commissioner of the R.C.M.P. being quoted in the Telegram recently as saying that the R.C.M.P. teaches its staff methods of electronic intrusion techniques.

I have been assured by the Commissioner that this was mentioned not in relation to the use or intended use of such methods and devices by R.C.M.P. members, but exclusively in relation to the knowledge which members of the R.C.M.P. must have of modern techniques used by professional criminals or by agents involved in subversive activities so they may be better able to counteract them.

It is normal and even essential that those who are to be charged with the responsibility for maintaining order and assuring security be placed in a position to cope with the modern devices and systems, including electronic intrusion techniques, which might be used by criminals or others to offend against the order and security of the state.

Mr. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Can the Minister of Justice inform the House whether the Government is in possession of or owns any electronic eavesdropping devices, and whether they are in fact in use?

[Mr. Vincent.]

[Translation]

Mr. Favreau: Mr. Speaker, I have already answered this question twice in the house lately.

[English]

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I regret to advise the House that the thirty minutes available for questions has expired.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the hon. member rising on a question of privilege related to the present discussion? Otherwise, under the new rules, the hon. member must notify the Chair.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, this is a question of privilege arising from something which happened in the house since the beginning of this sitting, but which does not result from another question—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Under the new rules, the hon. member for Lapointe cannot raise a question of privilege without notice.

WAYS AND MEANS

The House in Committee of Ways and Means, Mr. Lamoureux in the Chair.

INCOME TAX ACT

Resolved, that it is expedient to introduce a measure to amend the Income Tax Act and related provisions of the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act and to provide among other things:

1. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years the income tax payable by an individual be reduced by an amount equal to the lesser of 10 per cent of basic tax or $600 and for the 1965 taxation year by an amount equal to the lesser of 5 per cent of basic tax or $300.

2. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer may deduct in computing his taxable income an amount for the support of a person who was his niece or nephew and who during the year resided in Canada, was wholly dependant upon him for support, and was

(a) under 21 years of age,

(b) 21 years of age or over and dependant by reason of mental or physical infirmity, or

(c) 21 years of age or over and in full time attendance at a school or university,

if

(d) the mother of the niece or nephew was divorced or separated and not in receipt of alimony or similar payments, or

(e) the father of the niece or nephew was deceased or mentally or physically infirm,

not exceeding $300 if the person was a child qualified for family allowance and $550 if he was not so qualified.

3. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer may deduct in computing his taxable income an amount not exceeding $550 expended by him during the year for the support of a person who was his aunt or uncle and who during the year resided in Canada and was dependant upon him for support by reason of mental or physical infirmity.

4. That for the 1970 and subsequent taxation years the additional exemption of $500 now allowed to a taxpayer who has attained the age of 65 years be allowed only if the taxpayer has attained the age of 70 years and that for the taxation years 1966 to 1969 inclusive a taxpayer who has attained the age of 65 years but has not attained the age of 70 years be allowed the additional exemption of $500 only if he did not receive a pension under the Old Age Security Act in respect of any month in that year.

5. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer who deducts in computing his income from an office or employment

(a) annual dues to maintain membership in a trade union or to maintain membership in an association of public servants,

(b) annual dues retained from his remuneration pursuant to the provisions of a collective agreement and paid to a trade union or association, or

(c) annual professional membership dues the payment of which was necessary to maintain a professional status recognized by statute,

shall not by reason of such deduction be ineligible to deduct the standard deduction of $100 described in paragraph (ca) of subsection (1) of section 27 of the Act.

6. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years a person, the spouse of such person residing with him and previously resident in Canada, or any dependant child of such person, shall be deemed to have been resident in Canada throughout a taxation year if such person was at any time in the year performing services in a country other than Canada under a prescribed international development assistance program of the Government of Canada, and was resident in Canada during a part of the year preceding the commencement of such services.

7. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years a contribution made by a person under the Canada Pension Plan or under a provincial pension plan as defined in section 3 of the Canada Pension Plan may be deducted in computing the income of such person.

8. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years the limitation on the amount related to earned income that a taxpayer may deduct as a premium under a registered retirement savings plan be increased from 10 per cent of earned income to 20 per cent of earned income.

9. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years such part of any amount that would otherwise be included in computing income of a taxpayer as a retiring allowance be deductible if it is paid in the year, or within 60 days after the end of the year, as a contribution to a registered pension fund or plan, as a premium under a retirement savings plan, or to a trustee under a deferred profit sharing plan.

10. That there may be deducted in computing the income of a taxpayer an amount in respect of an outlay or expense made by the taxpayer in the 1965 and subsequent taxation years

(a) to a person with whom the taxpayer is dealing at arms length and who is the lessee of property owned by the taxpayer, to obtain the cancellation of a lease on such property,

(b) for landscaping property used by the taxpayer for the purpose of gaining or producing income,

(c) for clearing land or laying tile drainage for the purpose of carrying on a farming business,

(d) as or on account of the cost of making representations to a government, municipality or other public authority in connection with a business carried on by the taxpayer, including representations for the purpose of obtaining a licence, permit, franchise or trademark,

(e) as or on account of the cost incurred in investigating the suitability of a site for a building or other structure planned by the taxpayer for use in connection with a business carried on by him.

11. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a corporation shall be deemed to be resident in Canada throughout a taxation year if

(a) it was incorporated in Canada before April 27, 1965 and was resident in Canada in its taxation year that included April 26, 1965 or in any subsequent on taxation year, or

(b) it was incorporated in Canada after April 26, 1965.

12. That with respect to payments received by a taxpayer after April 26, 1965, other than a payment made upon the death of an employee, the amount that a taxpayer may elect to have taxed under section 36 of the Act shall not exceed

(a) in the case of a single payment

(i) out of or pursuant to a superannuation or pension fund or plan, or

(ii) pursuant to deferred profit sharing plan, or

(iii) pursuant to an employee's profit sharing plan,

$1,500 times the number of years during which the employee, in respect of whom the payment was made, was a member of the plan, or

(b) in the case of

(i) a single payment upon retirement of an employee in recognition of long service, or

(ii) a payment or payments made by an employer to an employee or former employee upon or after retirement in respect of loss of office or employment

$1,000 times the number of years during which the employee, in respect of whom the payment was made, was an employee of the employer who made the payment.

13. That for taxation years commencing after April 26, 1965, a trust or estate (other than a trust or estate arising on death) that has income from a business carried on by it in Canada may not deduct in computing its income an amount paid or payable to a beneficiary who is

(a) a non-resident of Canada,

(b) a non-resident-owned investment corporation, or

(c) another trust or estate resident in Canada, unless that other trust or estate

(i) arose on a death, or

(ii) has been since April 26, 1965 a beneficiary of the trust or estate paying the amount and the trust or estate paying the amount has been carrying on the business since April 26, 1965,

and any amount paid or payable out of the income for the year of the first-mentioned trust or estate will continue to be included in the income of its beneficiary notwithstanding the fact that the first-mentioned trust or estate was not entitled to deduct the amount in computing its income.

14. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years the amount of income derived from a new mine that a corporation may exclude in computing its income shall be confined to income from the operation of the mine by the corporation.

15. That where a joint exploration corporation acquires after April 26, 1965 a right, licence or privilege to explore for, drill for or take petroleum, natural gas or other related hydrocarbons, the cost of the right, licence or privilege may not be renounced to a shareholder corporation.

16. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years an amount that a taxpayer may exclude from his income because it is consideration for a mining property acquired as the result of his effort as a prospector, or as the result of efforts of a prospector who was employed or financially assisted by him, shall not include a share of profits, a royalty or a payment based on production.

17. That the Minister of National Revenue with the approval of the Governor in Council may on behalf of the Government of Canada enter into an agreement with the government of a province, under which one government undertakes to transfer to the other, in respect of income tax paid by an individual from whom deductions were made at source as though he were resident in a place other than the province in which he was resident on the last day of the year, a part of the amount deducted or withheld under section 47 of the Act or a similar provision of a provincial income tax act.

18. That in order to give effect to the provisions of paragraph 1 without reducing the amount of equalization payments to any province a consequential amendment be made to the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act to adjust the fractions set out therein in the definition of "standard individual income tax" used in the computation of equalization payments.

19. That a new section be added to the Act concerning expenditures of a taxpayer for advertising space in a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical having effect substantially as follows:

"12A (1) In computing income, no deduction shall be made in respect of an otherwise deductible outlay or expenses of a taxpayer for advertising space in an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical dated after December 31, 1965 for an advertisement directed primarily to a market in Canada.

(2) An issue or edition of an issue of any newspaper or periodical that is edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada and that was not on April 26, 1965 a Canadian newspaper or periodical shall be deemed, for the purposes of subsection (1), not to be an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical if

(a) through the period of twelve months ending April 26, 1965 issues or editions of issues of that publication were being edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada at the usual intervals for issues of that publication and have since that date continued to be so edited, printed and published without interruption except for a reason other than the cessation of the business of publishing that publication; and

(b) in the case of a periodical, the periodical is similar, in content and in respect of the class of readers to whom it is directed, to the issues or editions of that periodical that were throughout the period of twelve months ending April 26, 1965 being edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada.

(3) Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an advertisement in a special issue or edition of a newspaper that is edited in whole or in part and printed and published outside Canada if such special issue or edition is devoted to features or news related primarily to Canada and the publishers thereof publish such an issue or edition not more frequently than twice a year.

(4) Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an advertisement in

(a) a catalogue, or

(b) any publication the principal function of which is the encouragement, promotion or development of the fine arts, letters, scholarship or religion.

(5) In this section,

(a) 'Canadian issue' means,

(i) in relation to a newspaper, an issue, including a special issue,

(A) the type of which, other than the type for advertisements or features, is set in Canada,

(B) the whole of which, exclusive of any comics supplement, is printed in Canada,

(C) that is edited in Canada by individuals resident in Canada, and

(D) that is published in Canada, and

(ii) in relation to a periodical, an issue, including a special issue,

(A) the type of which, other than the type for advertisement, is set in Canada,

(B) that is printed in Canada,

(C) that is edited in Canada by individuals resident in Canada, and

(D) that is published in Canada,

but does not include an issue of a periodical

(E) that is produced or published under a license granted by a person who produces or publishes issues of a periodical that are printed, edited or published outside Canada, or

(F) the contents of which, excluding advertisements, are substantially the same as the contents of an issue of a periodical, or the contents of one or more issues of one or more periodicals, that was or were printed, edited or published outside Canada,

(b) 'Canadian newspaper or periodical' means a newspaper or periodical the right to produce and publish issues of which belongs to or is vested in

(i) a Canadian citizen,

(ii) a partnership of which at least ¾ of the members are Canadian citizens and in which interests representing in value at least ¾ of the total value of the partnership property are owned by Canadian citizens,

(iii) an association or society of which at least ¾ of the members are Canadian citizens,

(iv) Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province, or a municipality in Canada, or

(v) a corporation

(A) that is incorporated under the laws of Canada or a province,

(B) of which the chairman or other presiding officer and at least ¾ of the directors or other similar officers are Canadian citizens, and

(C) of which, if it is a corporation having share capital, at least ¾ of the shares having full voting rights under all circumstances, and shares representing in the aggregate at least ¾ of the paid-up capital, are owned by Canadian citizens or by corporations other than corporations controlled directly or indirectly by citizens or subjects of a country other than Canada; and

(c) 'issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical' means an issue that is not a Canadian issue of a Canadian newspaper or periodical."

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): Last night I was in the midst of a surgical operation, and although I see the patient is engaged in another consultation at the moment I will proceed with it.

• (3:40 p.m.)

Last month, you may recall, the Minister of Finance, after having disingenuously as I described it as kindly as possible, reiterated a misapprehension which he had at first including some astronomical figure which flowed from it in respect of my amendment—I may say that he did so twice in the space of five minutes—finally made what on the surface might be considered a legitimate objection to the amendment. However, when I pointed out that I thought anyone reading it with the slightest intelligent appreciation would take for granted that such amendment as I presented, would be accompanied of necessity by what are usually known as "catch provisions", the Minister proceeded to chide me for sloppy compilation of my amendment and suggested I had either been very careless or sloppy or had been deliberately trying to slip something over.

This charge of sloppy draftsmanship or, what is even worse, a rather sloppy approach to this question strikes me as being rather interesting, because this is the Minister who told us on April 26, 1965, when he was introducing an amendment to ensure that contributions to the Canada Pension Plan and the Quebec pension plan would be fully deductible in calculating taxable income—I am sorry the Minister finds it necessary to leave but I will not allow his absence to inhibit me in what I have to say, as I am sure you, Sir, will convey my comments to him.

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, I should just like to assure the hon. Member that the Minister will return very shortly.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands): If what I suggested was the Minister's purpose, then it seems to me this particular budget resolution he presented on April 26 is a masterpiece of sloppy draftsmanship. Certainly those individuals in the lower income brackets will receive compensation for their contributions to pension plans, but only just enough to pay for those contributions. They would have to reach an income of some $6,800 before they could draw more in tax abatements than they pay in pension plan contributions. Let us take as an example a taxpayer with an income of $10,000, $15,000 or $20,000, or one who has reached the limit of his tax abatement of $600. In the wisdom of the Government and Parliament only individuals with incomes between $600 and $5,000 are subject to contributions to the pension plan. What happens if a taxpayer has an income which is high enough to enable him to collect the maximum of $600 in the way of tax abatement? We find that he is to be given a bonus of either $520.80 or $441.60 per year, depending upon whether he is employed or self employed, is paying the whole contribution or only the employer's portion. That individual will receive this extra bonus in order that the lower income groups may be fully compensated for their payments to the pension plan. If that is not an example of sloppy draftsmanship I do not know what is.

Surely, Mr. Chairman, our Minister of Finance and his advisers are not so incompetent that they had to arrange matters so that those individuals in the upper income brackets would receive bonuses to the extent I have mentioned in order that individuals in lower income brackets may be assured that they will have their pension plan payments covered by tax rebates. I suspect that this was done because it was the easiest thing to do. I suspect it was done because it was much easier to pluck the 10 per cent figure out of the air and spread it all across the board than to revise the income tax structure.

What the Minister proposes—that is, to ensure that those individuals in the lower income bracket will have their pension plan payments covered or compensated for by the income tax rebate—is good, but I think it ill becomes the Minister of Finance to chide me for carelessness in the drafting of an amendment which is obviously a very short and simple submission to the House, without an elaborate explanation of the revisions that would be required in respect of income brackets above the level proposed, in view of the fact that he has produced legislation of this sort which will have the result of paying bonuses to people in an income bracket sufficiently high to enable them to receive the total $600 rebate. The bonuses payable will be, as I have said, $520.80 or $441.60, and are designed to ensure that individuals in the lower income brackets will be compensated. That to my mind is careless and lazy drafting, in respect of which the Minister should be severely criticized and reprimanded.

There is another matter covered by this budget resolution to which I should like to direct some comments, and I refer to that portion which deals with advertising in newspapers. I think all of us will have some sympathy with the Minister in his attempts to encourage the development and expansion of Canadian publications, and I presume that is the purpose of this legislation. I assume that he is attempting to offset the very large extent to which foreign advertisement now influences the Canadian reader. But I am wondering whether the Minister has thought of the possible consequence of his attempt to curb advertising by Canadian advertisers in foreign newspapers and periodicals. Has it occurred to him that the result may well be not to increase advertising by Canadian advertisers in Canadian publications but possibly merely to divert this advertising to United States television and radio stations.

I suggest that in my Province there is a striking example of this at the present time. The television station at Bellingham serves to a great extent the large Vancouver metropolitan market rather than the United States centre. At the present time many Canadian advertisers take advantage of the services provided by the television station at Bellingham, and I think this sort of thing is likely to be the result of the Minister's very worthy attempts to safeguard the position of Canadian publishers of Canadian newspapers.

This brings me to another aspect of the problem, Mr. Chairman, and I hope you will be lenient with me because although it is not actually covered in these resolutions, it is related to them. The purpose of the Minister's resolution seems to be to protect and encourage the development of Canadian publications. If that is so then I think we must consider the position of these phony Canadian editions of United States publications. I have in mind two in particular, Time magazine and Reader's Digest, both of which in addition to being United States publications masquerading as Canadian publications are intrinsically vicious elements in our public media in Canada. Time magazine is tendentious, to say the least. Reader's Digest is composed, as everyone knows, of planted articles, which is the very lowest type of journalism. These two publishing firms have been allowed to set up in Canada so-called Canadian editions, which I understand are printed in Canada but the entire editorial content of which comes from New York, across the line. These two magazines come here, of course, for one purpose or one principal purpose, which is to take advantage of the very generous postal regulations in Canada with regard to periodicals.

• (3:50 p.m.)

I suggest to the Minister of Finance that if he is really concerned with protecting Canadian publications and promoting their development he should take appropriate steps to redefine in very careful terms what constitutes a Canadian publication, in such a way as to exclude these extremely dubious publications which now masquerade as Canadian periodicals. I imagine this would entail some regulations under the Post Office Act. It might even entail some tariff revisions to keep out the editorial matter coming from New York; I am not sure of that. But I am sure the Minister, his colleagues and his staff could work out something which would prevent Time magazine and Reader's Digest from shamelessly taking advantage of the very generous provisions which we make in Canada regarding postage for periodicals.

I have always regretted, Mr. Chairman, that the provisions of the O'Leary Commission report in this regard were not carried out. I think it is idle for the Minister of Finance to imagine that he is doing anything substantial to protect our Canadian identity and to protect the position of Canadian periodicals merely by bringing in this amendment to the taxation act. It will penalize Canadian advertisers who advertise in United States publications, advertising which, according to the text of the resolution, is primarily designed for the Canadian market.

Incidentally, Mr. Chairman, this brings to mind another point. I am not quite clear how the Minister is going to decide where this advertising is directed. How is he going to determine whether it is directed to the citizens of Toronto or the citizens of Buffalo? Obviously the appeal will be made to both groups in the same manner. I suspect that this will become almost a dead letter. On the other hand, if the Minister and his colleagues will pluck up their courage and deal with these two very powerful publications and see that they are no longer allowed to masquerade as Canadian publications, then for the first time in all his commendable patriotic endeavours to protect the Canadian economy and Canadian identity he will have done something toward this end, instead of just going through the motions.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Chairman, I intend to confine myself to that portion of the resolution dealing with publications, and to look into the reason for and the genesis of this legislation, which in my opinion is a serious first step along the road to control of the press in Canada.

I realize there are many who feel that action should be taken to protect what is called the Canadian identity. However, as one views this legislation one can only conclude that it has been put together most haphazardly, and that it will not achieve the purposes for which it is ostensibly intended. Indeed, an argument has just been made by the hon. Member who has just taken his seat to the effect that if it is brought into effect it can only mean that radio and television stations across the line which enjoy a tremendous influence in the border areas of our country, will become the main advertising media, and that advertising which would normally go to Canadians will join the exodus to the United States.

On the face of it I think this is dangerous legislation, dangerous in the degree to which it places in the hands of a government the power to control. A great deal of thought control has been practised by this Government during the past two years. One has but to listen to some of the broadcasts that take place and read some of the articles in the press to come to the conclusion that they have all the appearance of having been directed by the Government. Indeed, when matters which cause controversy arise in this House one can always be sure that the following day among the broadcasts over the C.B.C. will be those of commentators who explain away matters which are subject to criticism. I know it is only a coincidence, but when coincidence appears to be the regular course the ultimate conclusion is that there are other explanations than mere chance. So I say at once that in so far as this legislation is concerned it constitutes a major interference with basic principles which are inherent in the concept of freedom of the press.

This is a Government that is afraid of United States investment. This is a Government representing a party which two or three years ago was criticizing the Government of that day for being anti-American. Within a period of over two years the course taken by this Government has been anti-American, indeed to such an extent that it has become anti-Canadian. The Government is afraid of American investment, but it was not afraid to provide $50 million a year to the great United States automobile companies on the basis of the recent parts agreement.

Do I exaggerate the meaning of this legislation if it is implemented? Did the Canadian daily newspaper publishers talk foolishness and nonsense on May 4? This is foolishness and nonsense on the part of the Minister of Finance, the Prime Minister and possibly the Minister of Justice. The Daily Newspaper Publishers Association said this proposal "is a fundamental violation of long established press freedom".

• (4:00 p.m.)

Several of those who made that statement have been avowed supporters of the Government of the day. They asked the Government to drop this legislation. I ask them now, on behalf of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, to drop it. This legislation is dangerous. It may not seem dangerous to those who would like to control the thinking of the people of the country, but this legislation places newspapers in all parts of Canada in a position where a first step has been taken to throttle freedom of expression. Again I point out the Daily Newspaper Publishers Association said the measure involves a fundamental violation of long established press freedom in Canada.

When I speak on behalf of the freedom of the press, may I say no one has had that freedom used against him to a greater extent than I have during the past several years. Yet, having had that experience, I assert that the maintenance of freedom of the press as more important than anything else toward the assurance of freedom within the country. That does not interest the Minister of Finance. He has ideas. He has had ideas during the last two or three years which, to use a colloquial expression, were the most cockeyed ever presented in Parliament.

Mr. Grafftey: One disaster after another.

Mr. Diefenbaker: He has had to withdraw most of them. He proposes and finally the Government as a whole disposes by dropping his most hoped for endeavours. The resolution said the publishers wished to record "our serious protest" against the budget proposal. It went on to say:

> To employ in any degree or manner a tax restraint or incentive on advertising as a means of regulating the press of this country, or its ownership, is a fundamental violation of long established press freedom in Canada.

Who supported that? Were they political opponents, or were they people who understand freedom and its preservation? Among them were Mr. R. A. Graybiel, of the Windsor Star, Basil Dean of the Edmonton Journal, Aurele Gratton of Le Droit of Ottawa and R. S. Malone of F.P. Publications Limited. Mr. Graybiel reported that they had a good reception from the Prime Minister. It is not a good reception that is being asked; it is an end to this threatened legislation. This is what we want to achieve.

I am referring now to a Canadian Press dispatch in the Montreal Gazette of May 5, Mr. Graybiel was asked about the Minister's statement in the House that those opposing the proposed legislation should put forth alternatives, and in reply he said that the executive of their association "had not been empowered by its 103 member papers to make such proposals".

Alternatives are not needed. When a Government introduces a resolution such as this, which cannot but have the effect of hobbling freedom, alternatives are not needed. There is only one alternative to this legislation, and that is to withdraw it and get rid of it. The Minister will grow in importance in this country by taking such action. He will not be spoiling the record of the Government. It has the greatest long distance record of running away from its proposals and throwing them overboard of any government in history. Why spoil that record by adhering to something so questionable as this proposal?

I do not often read from editorials, but I intend to make a couple of references. The Toronto Globe and Mail had an editorial entitled "Useless—And Worse". I think the Globe and Mail is one of the admirers of the Minister of Finance.

Mr. Gordon: Ha, ha.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I do not know what the Minister is laughing at. I have always thought the Globe and Mail held him in the highest regard.

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Chairman, I wonder whether the right hon. gentleman would allow me to comment that about the only thing we have in common is that neither of us is admired by the Globe and Mail.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I am always willing to hear from the hon. gentleman, but at the moment he is the Government. He represents the Government. The description "useless and worse" did not refer to him or the Government but to the proposal, although it could have been used in the wider sense had it been desired to do so. I refer now to the Fredericton Gleaner.

Mr. Gordon: Ha, ha.

Mr. Diefenbaker: The Minister of Finance laughs just as he laughed when we criticized his ideas in the 1963 budget, which he had to throw overboard.

Mr. MacEwan: He is laughing because it is a Maritime paper.

[Mr. Diefenbaker.]

Mr. Diefenbaker: The Fredericton Gleaner says:

> Another flaw has become apparent in the Government's budget proposal to refuse income tax credits for advertising...It is now rumoured that proposal may be a violation of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade to which Canada is a signatory.

Then it goes on to say how dangerous this legislation is. The Winnipeg Free Press had an editorial headed "Swelling Protests". They ask why the Minister did this. Why this solicitude for the newspapers? They did not ask for it. You know, Mr. Chairman, there are so many things that have been asked for, such as fairness for our old age pensioners, such as a new sense of responsibility toward the superannuated civil servants. These things have been asked for but the Government has not given them. This is something that has not been asked for by the newspapers of Canada. With reference to the resolution of the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association the Winnipeg Free Press had this to say:

> The resolution also noted that, historically government influence on press freedom through taxation techniques "went on far longer and more insidiously in Great Britain than did direct censorship of news."

What that has to do with, of course, is the fact that in 1712 a stamp tax was imposed on newspapers at the rate of a penny a sheet, and by 1815 it had risen to fourpence a copy. The purpose was to restrain the abuses arising from the publication of blasphemous and seditious libels. But the action was dangerous; it interfered with freedom, and finally the tax was abolished in the 1850's. The proposal now before us brings back legislation that was abolished over 100 years ago in the United Kingdom as dangerous. The Free Press went on to say with regard to these controls:

> They could lay open the way for some future and less scrupulous government to use them as a method of punishing or bestowing favours on Canadian newspapers.

The Free Press also had an editorial headed "Unwanted Protection" in which it said in part:

> Whether by design or through sheer clumsiness, what the Minister proposes would give this and all future governments the power to interfere with the right of all Canadians to read what they choose.

Nobody would say it was sheer clumsiness by this Government. The Winnipeg Free Press says that this measure strikes at the freedom of newspapers. It says also that the object, which is laudable enough, is to ensure that essential communications media remain in the hands of Canadian citizens. The article goes on to point out the grave dangers to which these moves will lead.

• (4:10 p.m.)

I should quote from one of the greatest Canadians of our time, even though today he is living in the United Kingdom. I refer to Lord Thomson, Roy Thomson, a man whose life has been, for the most part, the embodiment of the Alger story, a man who in the operation of his vast empire of newspapers and periodicals has, as a Canadian, extended the field of public information to a degree never before known. He says this:

> It is in violation of the universal declaration of human rights of the United Nations, where Article 19 specifies that everyone has the right to freedom of information and expression, a right which includes freedom to hold opinions without interference and to seek, receive and impart information and ideas through any media.

The purpose is to prevent foreign corporations from actively controlling or directing Canadian thinking. Well, what about Time magazine? Read Time magazine week by week. As the hon. gentleman who preceded me said, it masquerades as Canadian but it has only four or six pages of Canadian news in the Canadian edition. Canadian? Read the articles, and read the degree to which, week by week, Time magazine views Canadian problems from the point of view of the Government of the day. Is the Government fearful of the control of Canadian thinking by another country? On the occasion when I visited Commonwealth countries, Mr. Chairman, I found one item in Time magazine during that entire trip which had to do with Canada, and it was in miscellany. Canada gets less attention than does a republic with a population of 300,000.

Then there is Reader's Digest, which established itself here. We should remember that these two magazines have 40 per cent of Canadian magazine advertising. It is a tremendous power to be used, if used to control Canadian thinking.

Well, from where did this all come? It did not come from the O'Leary report. The O'Leary report said nothing about newspapers. It dealt with two magazines and that is all. There was nothing about newspapers. What is wrong with advertising? What is the basis upon which this legislation has been introduced? Are we to have a mentally controlled electorate, determined in its decisions by the fear of what the Government can do? One of the vital needs of democracy is a free press to keep the public fully informed with impartiality. The performance of this function, which is indispensable to freedom, requires that the freedom of the press be maintained. I am concerned with the philosophy of the bureaucrats behind this legislation. Eight of them sit over there, former top bureaucrats, and they like to cut through things. It is their viewpoint, I am sure, which in large measure is represented by the thinking behind this legislation.

I intend to quote from one of the leaders of Liberalism today, Mr. Tom Kent. Mr. Kent is a bureaucrat today who looks after the so-called war on poverty, the war on the poor. He is above Parliament. He enjoys a position of power about which even he had to smile when he was on private television and was asked questions by young men and women. He is the father of this. Sometimes it is difficult to find the putative father of some of these ideas that spring up from time to time, but not in this case. He was in Kingston in July, 1960. I have here a copy of his speech, which was one of the longest in history, 66 pages. Most people just measured it, but I read it. I want to set out these views which represent the philosophy of this individual today as he directs the policies that should be followed. His thesis is that Government direction of economic behaviour is necessary in order to expand social security, the redistribution of wealth.

Now, all of us believe in social security. How far did that gentleman go at the meeting to which I have referred? I think it is well to quote some of the expressions used, even though quotation is sometimes very tiring. I now read from page 61:

> The business expenditures that are of great fiscal interest are those on advertising and merchandising generally. This is the major respect in which, because of the imperfection of competition and the distortion induced by taxation, the "hidden hand" is not working. The magnetism of the market is not inducing business as a whole to find its profit, as in theory it does, in what the community wants. Business is engaged now in a gigantic effort to tell the community what to want.

• (4:20 p.m.)

That is his philosophy. He does not like advertising. It is not the kind of thing that should be done. Businesses should not develop and expand through advertising. It is bad for the people to consider buying what they think they would like to have. What we should have is a control over advertising so that people will only be able to buy that which the bureaucrats feel is good for them to purchase. If you think I overstate it I shall read on:

Business is engaged now in a gigantic effort to tell the community what to want. In the process it wastes talent; it gives every possible encouragement to wage demands, excessive personal indebtedness, and inflationary forces generally, and by stimulating unimportant wants it increases the reluctance of people to satisfy their far more important collective wants, for schools and the rest.

Socialism at its worst never equalled Kent at his best. No wonder they sometimes say that the Government is composed of socialists in a hurry. Let me read on:

I am not, of course, saying that all advertising is undesirable.

Isn't that a frank admission; not all advertising, just the kind of advertising that the bureaucrats think would be good for us. Let me read on:

I am saying that we have a tiger by the tail.

I don't quite follow that, but I presume if I took the time I could understand it.

Or, to vary the analogy, we have got our economy into a state of distorted incentives that makes us feel compelled to run faster and faster in order to stand still.

He has got something there, Mr. Chairman. That is what this Government has been doing, running faster and faster in order to stand still.

The individual business, of course, cannot do anything about this; it cannot contract out of the race while others are in it. The only profitable course is generally to try to do more and better advertising.

Then he goes on to say this:

In principle, there is no reason why advertising should not be taxed, like liquor or gasoline or thousands of other more useful things. But since in effect Government at present subsidizes most advertising to the tune of a half, through its allowance for tax purposes, the better first approach probably is to refuse to allow advertising, and perhaps other merchandising expenditures, for tax purposes.

Socialism at its worst never espoused a philosophy like that. Where would private enterprise be if it had not been for advertising? How would expansion within our country take place if the philosophy of Mr. Kent—apparently now that of the Government—were carried into effect? Then he says:

This would be, of course, a considerable upheaval.

The Minister laughs because he has read all this nonsense. He knows it all by heart and he really does not have to listen. Mr. Kent says:

It might well be approached in stages—

They are not going to abolish advertising all at once.

[Mr. Diefenbaker.]

—in the first year adding back, say 25 per cent of advertising expenditures to a corporation's profits for tax purposes, 50 per cent the next year, and so on. That would give an opportunity for adjustment, not only to the advertisers but also to the newspapers, radio and television. I do not think, incidentally, that the lessening of their dependence on advertising would in the end do anything but good for the media of communication—

I would like to know how the media of communication could exist if they did not have advertising, but apparently I am misinformed in that connection. Then he says:

—Though for their sake—

That is for the sake of the newspapers that are denied advertising.

—it would require some offsetting tariff on the advertising content of foreign publications entering Canada—not as a discrimination, but in order to prevent inequality.

This is where the paternity is established. We are being asked to carry out the policies of the 1960 conference, and apparently this has an appeal for the Minister of Finance and the Government. Mr. Kent says in effect that if we got rid of advertising by these gradual reductions, 25 per cent in the first year and 50 per cent the next year, there would be a considerable upheaval, but he says it will not be a panacea.

This advertising proposal is not, of course, put forward as a panacea. I am not claiming it as something that will fix up our tax problems once and for all.

Then with becoming modesty he says:

I am not pretending to complete certainty that it is the right thing to do, though I am quite sure that it would yield very great benefits, and I will take a lot of persuading that there are comparable disadvantages which at all offset the benefits. However, my only basic purpose is to use it as an illustration of the approach to taxation that we should take—

Then he says this:

If, for example, we did reduce advertising—

I hope the Minister absorbs this because he can learn how he can increase taxes and make us feel good about it.

If, for example, we did reduce advertising, it would thereby become easier also to raise existing taxes on consumption—liquor revenues, gas tax, vehicle licences, real property taxes, and general sales tax. Our provincial premiers could better have their day.

What a philosophy. First he says to the people, you shall not advertise. They will have that much more money available, by being protected against being induced to purchase what, in the bureaucrats' opinion, is not good for them. They will have that much more money available to pay taxes, including the sales tax. Then he says this:

> Having mentioned property taxes, which so closely affect the most poverty stricken of our three levels of government, I would say that here increases seem very reasonable. While a general capital gains tax has many undesirable features, and certainly is not to be preferred to increased taxation of inheritance, there is a very great deal to be said for a specific tax on increments in property values, which are the consequence mostly of public decisions.

There is a compendium of economic direction by the man who has been set apart and anointed as the person who has the solution for Canada's problems. In the course of this very interesting monologue he said this:

> In effect advertising is an expenditure that aims at higher consumption rather than increased efficiency.
> Direct advertising expenditures in the United States last year were over $11 billion. They have doubled in nine years. This leads to waste, the waste of scientific ability in research that produces nothing but entirely trivial modifications of products for the sake of sales gimmicks.

• (4:30 p.m.)

Apparently this is the philosphy of the Government, because Mr. Kent has been raised to the position of director and controller of the war on the poor. Mr. Kent then went on to say this:

> If one had to express the greatest inefficiency of our economic system in a sentence, it could well be that too much of our brain power is devoted to selling soap and too little to creative effort in science, in thought, in the public service. If I were Mr. Khrushchev it would be this above all that would give me confidence that my system was going to work.

He adds this:

> It is the proper role of Government to step in and alter the incentives; simply to leave advertising less attractive and then leave every business to run its own affairs—

Apparently that is the idea. That principle was advocated last night by the Minister in the course of his remarks when he said "We do not intend to interfere with freedom; this is actually being done for the good of Canadians". Mr. Chairman, all through the ages those who would direct and control are always activated by the highest purposes, filled with a surplus of idealism. And having those qualities they do not want mankind to be deprived of the benefit of their views.

There are many other quotations which I might put on record. I do not intend to do so at the moment. I say, first of all, that these principles which are being applied are not those of the O'Leary Commission; they are based upon something entirely different, the philosophy of social security to which I have just referred.

The freedom of the press in a society of free men depends upon commercial freedom of the press, freedom from direct or indirect Government subsidies or other forms of control. The irony of the present situation is that the Government purports to assist the press by making it impossible for outside competitors to compete. The fact is that these budgetary proposals will bring about a degree of Government control not known in this country, and not known in any country today which has inherited the British tradition of freedom.

I sum up by saying to the Government in the strongest possible terms, withdraw this measure. In 1964 the Government did withdraw, and various Members of the Liberal party sitting opposite today were quoted as being entirely opposed to what was then being considered. I suggest that today those same people should speak out in the strongest possible language against a course of action which, will inevitably lead, to a degree of control over the press which cannot and ought not to be countenanced by Parliament.

Over the years I have spoken on behalf of freedom. When I argued for a Bill of Rights, those sitting opposite said such a bill would have no purpose and no effectiveness. The law books say otherwise. Indeed, only yesterday it was announced in the press that it was expected the United Kingdom would shortly be bringing in a Bill of Rights modelled on the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Diefenbaker: As one who believes in freedom, as do hon. Members in all parts of this House, I make an appeal to the Government. Throw this legislation overboard. Remove it. Throw this bill out. Withdraw it, now. Every invasion of freedom during the years has been made by people who were filled with enthusiasm for worthy objectives but who had not thought the matter through. Every invasion of freedom, begun as a pathway, has become a highway. It is because of this that I hope the Minister, having already displayed on so many occasions a capacity for withdrawing from what was not proper or appropriate, will act so as to gain the admiration of Canadians generally as well as that of the press which believes in freedom—as he believes in freedom—and as do the people of Canada as a whole.

Mr. Olson: I do not intend to deal with all the clauses in this income tax resolution before us. Some of my colleagues will deal with particular sections of it.

I may say at the outset that we in this party are extremely disappointed at some of the omissions from this list of amendments to the Income Tax Act. We had hoped, and I think with some justification, that there would have been provision in the budget for adjusting corporation income tax as related to privately owned power corporations so that a measure of justice might be given to power users right across the country. We know that power producers which are Crown corporations or which are provincially owned are not subject to corporation income tax. Their cost of operation is therefore substantially lower and the saving is passed on to the consumer.

We noted that shortly after the Minister's budget speech had been delivered Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland had something to say about this serious omission. I am not sure whether the Minister has information about the intention of the Federal Government which has not yet been made known to this House. But he did say in effect—I do not have his actual words before me—that the budget speech was not the occasion on which to make an announcement on this subject.

I questioned the validity of that statement at the time because it seemed to me that the budget speech was a most appropriate occasion for the Minister to make an announcement dealing with corporation income tax in this particular field. Anyway, the Minister has told us on several occasions that no basic or significant changes in the Income Tax Act or the tax structure generally are intended until the commission which is studying all aspects of this matter has reported.

This report will perhaps be ready for the Minister of Finance and his officials before the next budget is prepared. We certainly hope the hon. gentleman will be able to make an announcement at that time correcting the injustice to which I have referred. I believe that three provinces only—Newfoundland, Alberta and one of the Maritime provinces; Nova Scotia, I believe—are affected by this situation. All the other power companies have been taken over by the provincial governments concerned. We certainly hope it is not the policy of the Federal Government to impose its corporation taxes in such a way as to force provincial governments to take over privately owned power generating corporations. That is what they did for British Columbia, and we hope this will not be the situation in the future.

[Mr. Olson.]

• (4:40 p.m.)

We also hope that if Premier Smallwood knows something about the intentions of the Federal Government which has not as yet been revealed to this House, the people of Alberta, for example, will not have to wait for the development of the Newfoundland-Labrador project in order to obtain the kind of justice to which they are entitled. We wonder whether the Federal Government is going to withdraw this tax in time for Brinco to go ahead with the enormous power development on the Churchill River at Churchill Falls, because it seems to us that this would be an important inducement to accelerate action in respect of this very large and important power development project.

I should now like to deal with paragraph 10, which in effect says that the cost of landscaping of property by a taxpayer for the purpose of gaining income may be deducted from income for the purposes of determining taxable income. It also states that the cost of clearing land by taxpayers for the purpose of gaining or producing income shall be deductible. I have asked the Minister of Finance on at least one occasion whether land levelling for irrigation purposes will be covered by the provision in respect of either landscaping or clearing of land for drainage; that is, laying drainage tile. So far he has not given a clear answer to that question. I certainly hope he makes this clear, because in the irrigation districts of Canada—I am speaking now particularly of southern Alberta—the cost of land levelling is a major expense in the operation of farms.

What is more important, Mr. Chairman, is that proper land levelling in these irrigation districts increases the potential production in some cases by more than 100 per cent. That is possible because of the even distribution of water. What is also important is that the cost of spreading water across lands that are properly levelled is substantially less than in respect of undulating surfaces. This is a legitimate cost of production in these areas which up to this time has not been allowed as an expense against income.

What is even worse is that there is no capital cost allowance for land; therefore even the actual cost of levelling cannot be included in any category in respect of which depreciation can be claimed. No depreciation is allowed in respect of land. If the cost of land levelling is to be allowed within the provisions of this resolution—and I note that that is the case, as indicated by the Minister nodding his head—this is a correction of an injustice that has been in existence for many years.

Perhaps I should also point out that the hon. Member for Kootenay West has been an advocate on behalf of irrigation farmers for many years, and I am sure he is very pleased to note that these costs will be covered by these amendments to the Income Tax Act.

Subparagraph (d) of paragraph 10 states that a taxpayer may deduct from his income the cost of making representations to Governments, municipal or others, and public authorities in connection with a business carried on by a taxpayer, including the cost of representations for the purpose of obtaining a licence, permit, franchise, trade mark and so on. There are some very legitimate cases in respect of which the costs of representations to various levels of Government in order to obtain permits, licences and so on should be allowed, but I envisage some dangers or abuses particularly if the Government accepts any or all of the so-called costs of representation. It seems to me that this particular provision should be entitled "the lawyers' amendments", because surely it will be counsel and other advisers who will benefit most by this provision which will allow legal fees and other payments to be deducted in calculating taxable income. I hope there will be the same sort of discretion used in respect of these allowable deductions for representations that is used in respect of the cost of entertaining and that sort of thing.

I also envisage the possibility of abuse particularly in respect of—

Mr. Cowan: You would be blind if you could not see that.

Mr. Olson: I am sorry, I did not hear the interjection.

Mr. Cowan: You would be blind if you could not see that possibility.

Mr. Olson: Mr. Chairman, what the hon. Member for York-Humber has said is quite true. One would be blind if he could not see the possibility of abuse, yet there is some justification for these costs being deductible. However, I hope that when these costs are presented as deductions there will be safeguards provided in such a way that there will not be serious or severe abuse.

Mr. Chairman, there are a number of other points in respect of these resolutions we wish to deal with, and other Members of this party will do so at a later stage. We intend to wait until the bill is introduced before we carry out any detailed examination.

Mr. Otto: Mr. Chairman, I intend to confine my remarks about this resolution to that portion which deals with periodicals. I do not intend to deal with this provision in that great material sphere, but rather to come down to earth.

I was very surprised to hear the right hon. Leader of the Opposition present his views so strongly in opposition to this resolution, considering the statement which appeared on the editorial page of the Toronto Globe and Mail of May 27, 1965, under the heading "The author protests". The paragraph to which I have reference reads as follows:

> The irony, of course, is that Mr. Diefenbaker is the author of the principle which Mr. Pearson would translate into law. It was Mr. Diefenbaker who, after considering the report of the O'Leary Royal Commission on Publications decided that the Government should attempt to control magazines by telling magazine advertisers where they should spend their money.

I know for a fact also that it was the hon. gentleman's suggestion that Time magazine and Reader's Digest should be exempted from this type of legislation. For those reasons I was very amazed to hear him protest so strongly.

Getting down to brass tacks, if I may use that expression, the problem is not a complicated one but a rather simple one.

• (4:50 p.m.)

As you know, Mr. Chairman, there are two types of periodicals. There are the consumer magazines and the business magazines. There are Canadian consumer magazines like Maclean's, Saturday Night and Star Weekly; and United States magazines such as Saturday Evening Post, Time, Reader's Digest and so on. These Canadian magazines are the ones in trouble, specifically Maclean's, Saturday Night and Star Weekly. These three magazines are in deep financial trouble. Two of them, Maclean's and Star Weekly, have other problems, but I shall come to this point later in order to indicate how this legislation will assist these magazines to stay in business.

Many Canadians are not aware what are the business publications. For example, there is a new magazine called the Executive, and I am sure the Minister will know it. It is the sort of magazine which is printed on very expensive paper and usually read within the confines of the Rideau Club or the Albany Club.

Mr. Gordon: Is that a crack at me?

Mr. Otto: Not at all. This is a problem magazine. In fact most of the Canadian business publications are problem magazines. We also have trade journals. In most trades or callings there are a number of publications, but in the trade magazines no effort need be spent to induce the public to read the ads. Everyone reads the ads and no one reads the editorials. In consumer magazines everybody reads the editorials and nobody reads the ads.

Now, the main problem is this. The three specific magazines to which I referred, the consumer magazines, cannot make any profit, which is why they are in trouble.

An hon. Member: Because of competition.

Mr. Otto: Not because of competition, as an hon. Member says; it is because of unfair competition. To get down to the truth of the matter, this unfair competition comes from two magazines at the present time. Time and Reader's Digest. Time magazine is a completely independent United States magazine which stands foursquare against two things, political partisanship and the Democratic party. Reader's Digest has been called the poor man's "Paradise Lost". These two magazines have their printing costs borne in the United States, and their periodicals overflow into the Canadian market and enable them to undersell advertising which would normally go to Canadian magazines and periodicals.

I will not say much about Time and Reader's Digest; as I have said, the right hon. gentleman opposite has indicated that these two should be exempt. This is a fait accompli, in that they are already exempt; but it is not our fault that the right hon. gentleman pinpointed these two magazines for exemption. However, I wish to point out how this legislation will be of assistance to other magazines.

Along this line of thought I should like to refresh the minds of hon. Members in regard to trade publications. Maclean's is published only because its owners publish trade magazines which are profitable, and it is the profits from these trade magazines which keep Maclean's going. Even at the present time a very greedy eye is cast on these profitable Canadian trade magazines by United States concerns. I could name one, but I think most of us know which it is. They would like nothing better than to grab hold of this wonderful, profitable trade and business magazine market.

I am not saying for one moment that if we help these magazines to continue in business everything will be all right within a number of years. The fact is that the magazines themselves will have to improve and find new formats and new ideas. Canadian magazines will not be able to save their souls through this legislation. But when you consider that in the United States the advertising dollar is moving into the printed page, into the printing media, and that magazines in the United States, through efforts on their own behalf, have been able to pull themselves up by their own shoelaces and are now out of the red into the black, I dare say that the same situation will apply in Canada given time. But it will not apply if Canadian consumer magazines go into bankruptcy or cannot remain in existence while waiting out this time. I have the greatest confidence that the editors and publishers of our periodicals will exercise every effort, with the assistance they are given, to stay in business, and I think they will.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, may I point out that we do not have a quorum. There are not 20 Members in the Chamber. If you will take a count you will see we do not have 20 present. Therefore I move we do now adjourn.

The Deputy Chairman: Order. I shall ask the Clerk to count the Committee. I understand there are 21 Members present. Therefore I declare a quorum to be present. The hon. Member for York East.

Mr. Otto: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, there are only 21 because some Members came in during the time of the count.

The Deputy Chairman: Order. According to the rules of this Chamber, when the House is being counted Members are permitted to enter or to leave.

Mr. Otto: Mr. Chairman, I know the hon. Member who just asked for a count is anxious to get away, but I will not detain him much longer.

There is another problem facing our periodicals, and it is not a United States or a foreign problem but a Canadian problem. I should like to illustrate some of the difficulties our magazines get into. We note that our weekend magazines are not only surviving but are making a great deal of money through a completely new method of distribution. I am not saying that all magazines will have to adopt it, but given enough time they will be able to do so. But unless this legislation is implemented, more and more United States-owned magazines will adopt the same principle now being used by the two magazines I have mentioned, and will eventually be able to undercut the advertising dollar. In that event our Canadian magazines will be unable to continue.

There is one other matter I should like to raise. At the present time some of the parent companies in the United States advertise Canadian companies and Canadian goods in United States magazines which overflow into Canada. Although this cannot be termed Canadian money directly, indirectly it is because these parent companies in some cases charge their Canadian subsidiaries for a portion of the advertising dollar. I think the terms of this resolution rectify this position, and incentive will be given to permit some of the advertising dollar to stay in Canada.

If I thought for one moment that Canadian periodicals had no chance to survive I would not support this legislation, but I am sure they do have a chance. It is well recorded that the magazine is coming back into its own. I feel confident that Canadian magazines will do everything they can to devise publications which are readable and sell advertising; they just need a little bit of time. This legislation will provide the time. It will allow Canadian magazines to remain in Canadian hands and to survive the period they have been going through. As our population increases we will then be able to have not only three or four Canadian magazines, but quite a few more. The fact is that in proportion our population is increasing more rapidly than that of the United States and the number of Canadian readers is also increasing more rapidly. I honestly and sincerely believe that the Canadian periodical industry will survive, largely due to this legislation.

• (5:00 p.m.)

Mr. Horner (Acadia): Mr. Chairman, in rising to speak on the income tax resolution in Committee of Ways and Means may I first of all say that the defence put forward with regard to the newspaper control legislation is at best the weakest that could have been offered and represents a very poor defence of the Government's intention to show favouritism toward two wealthy United States magazines which, as was said earlier, are masquerading as Canadian by publishing Canadian editions.

There are a number of things that concern me about the income tax resolution in particular. When the Minister brought down his budget he announced a number of proposed changes that cannot be found in the resolution, and may not be in the bill when it comes before the House. Actually we are all well aware of the fact that the budget gives notice of the Government's intentions and the bills that follow carry out the intentions announced in the budget.

The budget White Paper said that we are now in the fourth year of an expanding economy which started in 1961. I might add that with the devaluation of the Canadian dollar and the huge grain sales to Communist countries the expansion of our economy has continued. However, in the budget the Minister said that he feels the economy needs further stimulation and he has $250 to $275 million to pour back into the economy, or perhaps I should say that he proposes to take that much less from the economy through taxation. He suggested in the budget and in his outline of this resolution that the best way to do this is by an income tax reduction of 10 per cent. As the hon. Member for Edmonton West pointed out, this was perhaps the best political way to make a reduction in taxation, but it was a very poor way from the point of view of stimulating the economy of the country. The Minister could have turned to many other avenues if he really believed that the country needed further stimulation at this time.

Certainly it is a fact that the cost of farm loans has been increased tremendously. I wonder whether the Minister considered making any changes in the Estate Tax Act. This would have permitted more money to be poured back into the economy than will be provided by this paltry 10 per cent reduction in income tax, which does not apply to large incomes. Land prices have tripled in the last five years and to some extent this has been brought about by the easing of credit for the purchase of land. This has caused estate taxes to become out of proportion with the real value of estates now subject to taxation, or that will be in the future. Certainly such a move would have resulted in a greater amount of money being poured back into the economy than is represented by the amount of $250 million to $275 million, because this amount is being spread so thinly that it will provide very little stimulus to the economy of the country.

As was suggested by the Minister in his speech yesterday, he could have reduced the sales tax on production machinery. In reviewing the budget speech one sees that the Minister pointed out there that in the past few years costs of production in Canada have risen to a greater extent than in the United States. In what position does this place Canada? In a very poor competitive position in relation to our greatest competitor. We import more from the United States than any other country and we export more to the United States than to any other country. Therefore we should take careful note of the relationship between the cost of production in Canada and the cost of production in the United States.

The Minister admits that costs of production have increased greatly in Canada and are greater than in the United States. Therefore it is obvious that one of the costs he should have removed in this resolution is the 11 per cent sales tax on production machinery. But no, he did not do so. Such a move would not get him too many votes if an election were called. He felt that a 10 per cent reduction in personal income tax would be the best move for this purpose. He felt that a reduction of $250 million spread across the country would affect more people, and this was his greatest concern. I think he has made a great error in this regard. He may be stimulating the Liberal party by this 10 per cent income tax reduction, but certainly he is not stimulating the Canadian economy. One could add that perhaps that was his intention in any event.

I do not want to deal with some of the provisions in the resolution at this time, but I should like to refer to paragraph 10. As a rule, changes proposed in budgets are for the purpose of directing the economy and, as we always hope, improving it. Sometimes they also plug loopholes. It would appear that paragraph 10 of the resolution is opening up something rather than plugging a loophole. In subparagraph (a) of paragraph 10 the words "to a person with whom the taxpayer is dealing at arms length" are used. As suggested by other speakers, anybody who has any dealings with a lawyer soon learns that the term "arms length" is one that makes for a great deal of debate. What is dealing at arms length, and what is not, is always questionable. Subparagraph (a) is in these words:

> (a) to a person with whom the taxpayer is dealing at arms length and who is the lessee of property owned by the taxpayer, to obtain the cancellation of a lease on such property.

[Mr. Horner (Acadia).]

In other words, the purpose is to provide an income tax exemption, but the whole clause hinges on the phrase "at arms length" and, as is often said, it certainly opens up a can of worms. Certainly it opens up the avenue to many a loophole.

The second subparagraph is no better. It provides an exemption for an outlay or expense for landscaping property used by the taxpayer for the purpose of gaining or producing income. There is nothing at all to stop a person from doing an expensive landscaping job on a home he is now leasing, claiming the cost as an expense and then moving into the home the following year or two years later.

It seems odd that the Minister went out of his way either in the last budget or the one before to prevent businessmen from claiming what he said were unnecessary business expenses, and yet he is now taking this action. I know he put a ceiling on expensive cars. He said that businessmen do not have to buy expensive cars and that anything over $5,000 would not be allowed as an exemption. Then he went on to say that businessmen's travelling expenses and so on would be looked at very closely by the Income Tax Department. Now, in this budget, he is saying that you cannot buy an expensive car, but you will be allowed to do a tremendous job of landscaping if you wish. Really, all we are doing is plugging loop-holes one year and opening new ones the next.

• (5:10 p.m.)

Paragraph (c) is so poorly worded that it is not clear. It refers to the clearing of land or the laying of tile drainage for the purpose of carrying on a farming business. This will be considered for exemption. You immediately wonder if this includes the levelling of land. What is the farmer going to clear the land from—bush, rocks, or is it merely rough terrain? The hon. Member for Medicine Hat thought he saw the Minister nod his head in agreement when the hon. Member suggested it might include the levelling of land for irrigation purposes. One would certainly hope so. Why is it not set out in the paragraph? Why is there a reference to the laying of tile drainage? Why would not the construction of a drainage ditch be every bit as good? Certainly this is another method of improving farmland and thereby enabling the farmer to increase his income.

Then, in discussing changes in the Income Tax Act which might benefit the agriculture industry, one recalls that in the budget speech the Minister suggested further income tax changes might be made to benefit that industry. He said, as reported on page 436 of Hansard:

> I am also proposing some changes in capital cost allowances to help farmers who are facing difficulty in marketing corn and other grain crops in areas where there is a shortage of grain storage facilities.

The Minister goes on to suggest that under this plan provisions will be incorporated in the regulations of the Income Tax Act. I say to you, Mr. Chairman, why are these provisions not spelled out in the bill? I believe that Government by regulation really defeats democracy. No one sees the regulations until they are passed. No one sees the regulations until they are in effect or until he comes up against them. Then people ask why someone did not suggest changes in these regulations. I am firmly convinced that government by regulation opens up an avenue around democracy and I, for one, do not like it.

In the same budget speech the Minister goes on to suggest another avenue which will be opened up around democracy. He states, and I quote:

> An important tax concession will also be provided to encourage industry to take new steps to prevent the waste products from their operations polluting our streams and lakes. This will take the form of an amendment to the Income Tax Regulations to permit capital expenditures made until the end of 1966 by businesses primarily for the purpose of preventing water pollution to be deducted at the rate of 50 per cent.

Here again we have changes announced to the Income Tax Act, but little more will be seen of them, as I understand the procedures in the House. They will be implemented in the form of regulations and be completely lost to the House and to the people until they come face to face with them.

Returning to the provision concerning grain storage, we note that new grain storage facilities constructed during the period May 1, 1965 to December 31, 1966, will be covered. In other words, a little over a year and a half will be given for the construction of these grain storage facilities. The Minister goes on in his budget speech to suggest that after the construction of these facilities is completed on December 31, 1966, a period of four years will be given for write-off purposes in so far as income tax is concerned. Last week end the Alberta Wheat Pool opened a new grain elevator in my constituency. Since the building was opened after May 1, 1965, I wonder how the regulations will be applied to that grain elevator?

The Minister suggested, as will be seen from page 436 of Hansard, that grain storage facilities may be built by individual farmers or taxable co-operatives. In other words, the wheat pools could take advantage of this provision. Surely, the Minister should give us some idea—he has not as yet—as to when the regulations will be applied. If a building were constructed after May 1, 1965 but not completely paid for, would the regulation apply to the whole of the cost of the building, or only to that portion which had been paid? Surely we should have some opportunity to debate this provision and perhaps enlighten the Minister and the department concerning the best possible regulations to facilitate the grain industry in both the corn belt of Eastern Canada and the wheat growing areas of the Prairies.

The Minister referred to "grain storage facilities". The question immediately comes to mind, what is going to be classified as "grain storage facilities"? Do we mean an elevator, a feed mill or some temporary building? A building may only store grain for a matter of a month, six months or a year, but the primary purpose of an elevator alongside a mill may not be considered, under these regulations, to be permanent grain storage facilities. I wonder if the Minister or his department have considered the possibility of such conditions arising? Surely, we should be given, before we pass this resolution, some idea of what the changes in the Income Tax Act will be. Surely, we should be given some further light with regard to the proposed provisions in the budget which could prove to be helpful to the farmers of Western Canada, as well as Eastern Canada. This is especially true in the light of the plans that are out for rail line abandonment, which may or may not be proceeded with this year or next year. It may be that companies in Western Canada would be well advised to make a drastic move and rebuild a great part of their grain storage facilities during this period of 16 or 18 months. I do not know.

Surely, one could judge the possibilities better if the Minister gave the details of the proposal in the resolution now before us. Surely if this means government by regulation it defeats, to a large extent, proper representations on given subjects such as this. As I said, in effect this is an avenue around democracy and I do not approve of it. I hope that later in this debate the Minister will deal more explicitly with these matters.

Paragraph 10(d) covers:

• (5:20 p.m.)

—the cost of making representations to a government, municipality or other public authority in connection with a business carried on by the taxpayer, including representations for the purpose of obtaining a licence, permit, franchise or trade mark.

One wonders again whether the Minister is plugging a loophole or opening one. In previous budgets he attempted to plug loopholes respecting travel costs and expense accounts generally.

The same generalization would apply to paragraph 10(e). One could travel to any part of the country ostensibly to purchase a farm or a building site, and include a holiday in the trip. Under this provision it would be up to the Income Tax Department to rule on the nature of the trip. It will be at the discretion of the department, and this is placing more power in the hands of the bureaucrats. Subparagraph (c), as the Minister said, covers drainage, ditching, etc., so there should be no difficulty there, but grain storage facilities should be included in that subparagraph.

In the world in which we live it is not a fight against capitalism or communism. It is the fight of democracy against bureaucracy, and these regulations are putting more power into the hands of the bureaucrats.

The hon. Member for Prince Albert has dealt adequately with paragraph 10. One wonders where the Government and the Minister are going when on the one hand they espouse free trade without tariffs, yet under the Bank Act and the income tax resolutions they espouse Canadianism. This is economic nationalism and the danger is retaliation by other countries. That has always been the problem in the past, and we have seen an example of it in recent legislation passed by the United States. The Liberal Party should not advocate economic nationalism to the point where it will eventually bring about a detrimental effect on the economy of Canada.

Mr. Fisher: Mr. Chairman, I want to confine my remarks to paragraph 19, and I want to take my time approaching it. The matter is complicated. I suppose one should begin by congratulating the Minister for gaining some courage from last year. Last year the resolutions affecting periodicals were in the name of the Prime Minister, possibly because the Minister did not find himself able to accept the resolutions as they were. I do not know whether to compliment or insult him for the change of face he seems to have made, although one must admit there is a change from the resolutions of last year.

[Mr. Horner (Acadia).]

I assume the Minister was not anxious to put his name to the resolutions last year because in effect they were to Canadianize both Time and Reader's Digest. We all know there has been a considerable lobby on this issue, and almost all Members have been approached. I have had assurances from quite a number of Liberal Members that they will never put themselves in the position of supporting or voting for a measure that would Canadianize Reader's Digest and Time magazine and we hope at least once, and probably twice during this debate, to give them an opportunity to express themselves.

Mr. Moreau: Can we assume the hon. Member is going to devise some way to split the magazine and newspaper parts of the resolution?

Mr. Fisher: The hon. Member is talking about a technical difficulty that is a very real one. The word bastard, aside from its reference to birth, is also used in legal and typographical terminology, and I think we have to call this a proper bastard of a paragraph.

• (5:30 p.m.)

I would have welcomed more candour on the Minister's part last night in his definition of the measures which are being taken here to protect Canadian newspapers against getting into the ownership of non-Canadians. I thought at that time he had a very good opportunity to give us his own estimate of the reasons why he and his Government had decided to Canadianize Time and Reader's Digest. He could have made a good case for not Canadianizing Time and Reader's Digest. The Minister talked last night about being consistent with the policy of the previous Government. Since when has he been proud of being consistent with the policy of the previous Government? Since when has he vaunted such consistency as being the mark of good legislation? I suggest he could have taken the other stand, namely that it was the legislation of the previous Government which ended the original legislation which Time and Reader's Digest were howling about. Then, struck by the disasters which were occurring to Canadian publications as a result of its action denying the Liberal administration's restrictions on these two publications, the Conservative Government appointed the O'Leary Commission. It seems that both the previous Government and this Government got more than they bargained for because gentlemen like Mr. O'Leary and Mr. Johnson favoured a Canadianism which has some parallel, I suggest, with the kind of Canadianism of which the present Minister is at times accused.

So the Minister tells us that this legislation is consistent with the legislation which the previous administration intended to bring forward. But it is not consistent with the stand taken by the Liberal Government prior to 1957 which recognized the particular problem created by Time and Reader's Digest. Nor is it consistent with the views of the Royal Commission itself, and I hold it is not consistent with the views of Members in all parts of this House, including a number of Liberal Members.

I should like to talk about the aspects of this which concern the periodicals before looking at the newspaper field.

Mr. Moreau: The hon. Member is not suggesting he is consistent?

Mr. Fisher: I heard an interjection from over there by that chap who was befrazzled by what happened to his constituency today, and I will excuse him.

In the main, Mr. Zimmerman of Reader's Digest led the lobby in the periodical field for Reader's Digest and Time. Time has been a little cuter and less interested in a popular approach than Reader's Digest. Time would much prefer direct contact with Cabinet Ministers, particularly with Ministers like the Minister of Industry, who has a relationship through his constituency with the operation of these magazines. To give Mr. Zimmerman credit, I think he is the handsomest and most affable lobbyist I have encountered, with one of the best illustrative and prose presentations I have encountered. On the other hand, the main lobby against Time and Reader's Digest and for Canadianism in the periodical field has been the people who sponsor Weekend Magazine, Mr. Farrell and Mr. Walker of the Montreal Star and the Family Herald Weekly Star.

There are one or two points which could be made about these two lobbying groups. One is that of all the periodical publications in Canada, Weekend Magazine is in the best health. That is quite apparent to the present day, so one can hardly accuse Weekend Magazine of trying to advance its own self-interest—though Mr. Zimmerman makes a good effort at doing so—since it already has such a solid market across the country. As a matter of fact, it has such a good market through so many papers that its success is one of the main reasons, at least in my opinion, why the Toronto Star Weekly has suffered a decline in circulation from one million to less than 700,000 copies. So this particular anti-Time, anti-Reader's Digest group, while having a self-interest, has not such a degree of self-interest that its arguments do not extend to all other Canadian publications, including Liberty and Maclean's magazines.

The real oddball in the lobby field was the role of Maclean-Hunter publications. I suppose other hon. Members have encountered them. One month you are lobbied, and the next month you telephone Maclean-Hunter and you cannot even get an idea what their policy is. I have come to this conclusion: Maclean-Hunter accepted one of Mr. Zimmerman's arguments that the proper thing to do was to reach some stability in the magazine field—"let us stop fighting with each other and organize a magazine bureau to make advertising in magazines more popular, supplement each other's co-operative efforts and wrest back revenue from television, radio."

Mr. Moreau: Is Saturday Night included in that argument?

Mr. Fisher: Yes, Saturday Night is included in that argument. There is one other factor. It seems to me that since the really profitable business of their operation is in the trade field, Maclean-Hunter began to get very frightened about the prospect of McGraw-Hill, the most powerful and the most able of the United States trade publishers, moving into Toronto. There were rumours they had taken a lease on certain land in the Toronto area and were planning to get into this field.

Magic to find, there is a provision in this legislation which will prevent United States trade publications coming in from now on. It looks to me as though Maclean-Hunter were prepared to keep quiet about Time and Reader's Digest because the trade publication threat from the United States had been blocked. And I think they were suborned to a minor degree by Mr. Zimmerman's arguments that in co-operation lies a golden future. But the reality of the situation at the present time is that Reader's Digest and Time are still with us and, I suggest, they are not Canadian publications.

I recognize the kind of pressure they can apply. I have a paper mill in my constituency which produces the paper for Time and Reader's Digest. It was almost like magic how suddenly the management and workers there, including the unions, began to fire in correspondence to me demanding that Time and Reader's Digest be left alone as good Canadian publications consuming good Canadian paper—particularly that manufactured in the constituency of Port Arthur.

Mr. Moreau: Surely the hon. Member is not suggesting that the union was seduced, too?

Mr. Fisher: I am suggesting that where dollars and cents are concerned it is easy to lose sight of one's national ideals. I am firmly convinced the loss in terms of the paper market would, in time, be filled by Canadian publications if Time and Reader's Digest were put in their proper places.

An hon. Member: You had better worry about your own seduction.

Mr. Fisher: There are more ladies on the other side of the House than we have over here.

The point which needs to be made as we look ahead to the future is that by this legislation Time and Reader's Digest are set up for the foreseeable future in such a fashion that their main editorial content can continue to be drawn, in the main, from outside the country. I think anyone with any sense would agree, on looking at these United States publications, that this content is not produced in Canada in the main. I feel very strongly that this legislation should specifically wipe out parts of 12A(2). Later on we will attempt to move an amendment which will do this, although my colleagues and I are finding it difficult to draft. We intend to move an amendment which will specifically point to Time and Reader's Digest and classify them as non-Canadian publications under the intent of this resolution. At the very least, when this amendment is moved we should receive from the Minister a thorough explanation of his conversion from a Canadian nationalist, the author of Troubled Canada, the projector of the Canada Development Corporation, the architect of the Canada Student Loans Plan and the author of Let's Buy Back Canada, to a man who believes that Reader's Digest and Time magazine are really Canadian publications. I think we are at least entitled to that explanation.

• (5:40 p.m.)

I should now like to touch upon the newspaper aspect of this resolution. I have been very interested in this because I happen to know quite well the publisher of the Toronto Telegram, John Bassett, and a few other publishers with whom I have had some contact. One of the things that intrigues me is the argument advanced by a few publishers that this provision that no presently Canadian-owned newspaper shall be sold to or allowed to get into the hands of a foreign corporation is a threat to the freedom of the press. I cannot for the life of me see that there is any threat in this regard to the freedom of the press.

I do understand why Lord Thomson is raising a bit of a fuss, because his feelings have been hurt as a result of what happened to him in relation to Canadian citizenship. After receiving the "lordship", which he sought for so long, because of the regulations of our Government he had, in a sense, to dissociate himself from Canadian citizenship.

I find Lord Thomson the most attractive newspaper publisher I have ever encountered. Whenever I have gone to see him he has taken out his books and shown me how much money he is making in his various operations, and he has done so with such delight that I can understand why universities such as the University of New Brunswick and the Newfoundland Memorial University fight for the right to have him as a chancellor or donor.

This is a man who has gone from a start up in Timmins—I always felt he should be Lord Porcupine of Timmins—to those great places of the world, to the point where he often merits a full page of coverage as the greatest press lord of all in such august periodicals as the New York Times and New York Tribune.

Mr. Lambert: Do not be jealous.

Mr. Fisher: The hon. Member suggests that I should not be jealous. Let me assure him and other Members in this House that I genuinely find Lord Thomson to be one of the most interesting and pleasant persons I have ever encountered because he is so excited and pleased at being so successful. I think it is wonderful that a man can go from being a defeated Conservative candidate in the east end of Toronto to a lord in the House of Lords in England consorting with the great and mighty, visiting Russia on even terms with the heads of state.

Lord Thomson has a world-wide operation, and naturally he has the kind of holding company argument and the typical attitude of the businessman of large scope who does not want national boundaries to get in his way. Lord

Thomson looks upon newspaper publishing primarily as a business. You will remember what he said in England. He wanted to set up a Labour newspaper, if that was possible, not because he was Labour in his attitude but because he thought there was a market for that kind of newspaper, and it did not bother him to be the owner of a Labour or Socialistic newspaper, because the main thing was to have the ownership and advertising revenue.

This kind of publisher is a rarity, I grant you, not particularly caring what axe he is going to grind in his newspaper as a whole; but this attitude also reveals how little nationalism, particularly from a Canadian point of view, we are likely to get from Lord Thomson; and that is a worth-while revelation. It seems to me that his objections are a perfect example of the international operator, rather than a Canadian citizen.

I sometimes feel that when Mr. Bassett complains, it is because his conscience is bothering him in connection with his television operation. I do not know whether he was forced to, but he certainly did go to United States organizations to borrow capital in order to keep the television operation going. My point in respect of the publishers' objection is that if foreign ownership, as a principle, which many of us including the Minister of Finance and Members of this party advocate, is wrong because it strikes at the future of our nation and our national ethos, then this also applies to banks and to almost any field, primarily and essentially to the field of communications, through which an influence can be brought to bear on the culture, attitude and philosophy of the people.

Anyone who argues that this resolution, in so far as it applies to newspapers, should not be introduced, has to accept the fact that if it does not now, it is only a question of time until the kind of rationalization of capital that exists in Northern America and in the western world will lead to the accumulation of a Canadian chain of newspapers by an outside organization. Some of you are entitled to ask: Would that be bad? If I could get the publisher of the New York Times to come up here I think he might be a preferable owner to Lord Thomson, in terms of the kind of newspaper we would have. However, the whole point is, in essence, what are we going to get in terms of ownership; and that would not be Canadian ownership.

If it is vital to have a C.B.C., then it is vital to have Canadian publications owned by Canadians, wherever possible, and I support the proposition very strongly that this legislation, which will restrict the sale of Canadian newspapers in future to foreigners, is an excellent bit of legislation. I cannot see how it is going to affect the freedom of the press. It will affect the freedom of publishers, and the freedom of the publisher to dispose of his goods by selling to a foreigner.

One must recognize that this could cost the present Canadian publisher a lot of money. It is quite conceivable that the greatest capital resources of Chicago or New York, or organizations from those areas would be able to come and offer more for the Toronto Globe and Mail or the Montreal Star than any Canadian group; but even in that regard there is no way that one can look at this situation and envisage how, even if the largest of Canadian newspaper operations came up for sale—I suppose the largest of all operations is the Southam operation—it would be beyond the resources of a group of Canadians; and I am sure there would be purchasers.

The final point I want to make in connection with this whole matter is in the form of an appeal to the Government and to the Minister, on this question of Time and Reader's Digest, that we have a free vote. Perhaps it is too much to ask of or too tough on Government supporters to have them stand up and go against this whole question of Time and Reader's Digest, without something more than a tacit understanding that they are encouraged to do so by the Minister and the Government. I know that to take this approach would be a most unusual course for the Minister to follow.

• (5:50 p.m.)

I know it is unusual to advocate it, but it does seem to me that through lobbying over recent months we have had a very thorough discussion of this matter, and the issue of Time and Reader's Digest should be settled on the basis of Canadian nationalism and the way it is looked at in the future. I would suggest that the fairest way to get a vote, one which we will be prepared to accept, is to have a free vote, so that we can see on which side of the question Members of the House line up, and whether Time and Reader's Digest are to be naturalized, corporate Canadian citizens from now and forever more.

Mr. Munro: Mr. Chairman, I should like to speak briefly regarding this particular item in the resolution. Many of us in this party have felt very strongly for some time about this legislation. I think it would be reasonable to say that the Minister deserves the congratulations of many of us in this House, including many hon. gentlemen opposite who have expressed some feelings in this regard in the past, despite the speech made by their leader today. He deserves our congratulations because we have been talking about legislation of this general nature and with this general theme for five or six years at least. It has been actively discussed, yet nothing has been done.

I might point out that nothing was done by the previous Government. Now something is going to be done, and for that reason I think this is a gigantic step in the direction of preserving the Canadian identity in this media, certainly of our newspapers and to a great extent our periodicals, and as such it should win the commendation of a great many Members in this House.

I should like to refer to some of the arguments made by the Leader of the Opposition today. He seemed to centre his attack upon the legislation on the basis that it was a limitation of the freedom of the press; that it was an inroad into that sacred right which we in this country have always maintained, namely that the press should be free and independent. I too was completely mystified by this approach of the Leader of the Opposition when one considers that it was the O'Leary Commission, a Commission constituted by his own Government, which made findings which were certainly very close to the precise recommendation which has been made by the Minister today and to establish this fact I intend to quote a few paragraphs from the report of the O'Leary Commission.

I am also surprised at what must be considered tantamount to a rather hypocritical stance on this question, when one considers that the right hon. gentleman himself proposed legislation of an almost identical nature in the field of periodicals, providing for similar exemptions of Time and Reader's Digest. If it can be argued that legislation of this nature is a limitation of the freedom of the press, then it is a limitation on the freedom of the press irrespective of whether Canadian periodicals or Canadian newspapers are involved. The right hon. gentleman when he was leader of the Government, and those who supported him who are present today, espoused the principle which is inherent in this legislation both in respect to periodicals and magazines. I think it is very difficult for any of them to evade that charge.

[Mr. Munro.]

Getting back to the attack made on this legislation on the basis that it limits freedom of press, in this regard I think I should refer to the report of the O'Leary Commission which deals at considerable length with this question. At page 7 of the report, the first paragraph, the following appears under the heading of "The Need for Self-Sufficiency":

That guarantee, we are convinced is vital.

That is, the need for self-sufficiency.

For while Canada and the United States may have the same basic cultures, they each at the same time have domestic and other tasks and problems—political, social and economic—which differ widely. Canada's particular responsibilities, her government, her constitutional structure, her ideals and aspirations, her memories and milestones, even her discords, are facts in her existence which cannot be approached understandingly or usefully by communications media owned or controlled in another country, even though that country be friendly.

I emphasize that the O'Leary Commission refers to "communications media"—generalizing here—owned or controlled in another country, even though that country be friendly. The report goes on to refer to media, and surely no one would argue that newspapers are not part of the communications media. The report states:

Only a truly Canadian printing press, one with the "feel" of Canada and directly responsible to Canada, can give us the critical analysis, the informed discourse and dialogue which are indispensable in a sovereign society.

In view of this it is difficult for me to understand how the Leader of the Opposition and hon. gentlemen opposite can state that the O'Leary Commission did not recommend Canadian ownership of our daily newspapers. I do not know how anything could be more unequivocal in this regard than the paragraph to which I have just referred contained in the report of the Commission itself.

Again we see what I think is an unfortunate and tragic contradiction in policy between the former Conservative government and the speech of the Leader of the Opposition today. Here we have two basic contradictions. The right hon. gentleman attacks the legislation because of the exemption of Time and Reader's Digest, yet he provided these exemptions in his own legislation. He also attacks the principle of the legislation because it is a limitation on freedom; yet he evolved that very principle when he himself brought in legislation with respect to periodicals. He now denies the main, central theme of the report of the O'Leary Commission, a Commission set up, as I say, by his Government and which reported to his Government. So that the Leader of the Opposition is clearly wrong when he states that the O'Leary Commission did not recommend Canadian ownership of our daily newspapers.

Another, more disturbing facet of the speech of the right hon. gentleman is that it seems to be contrary to the impression he himself created throughout the country. In 1957 and 1958 he was supposed to be a leader who was going to preserve our Canadian identity. He was the one who espoused the cause of Canadian nationalism. He was the one who accused the former Liberal Government of that day of being too pro-American and not sufficiently concerned with the protection of Canadian rights. Yet in this speech he goes against the very grain of that position with which he has always endeavoured to identify himself; Canadian identity. In his speech he has denied the necessity for the protection of our Canadian newspapers as far as Canadian ownership is concerned.

Mr. Lambert: Six o'clock.

Mr. Munro: This makes me realize the inconsistencies in the views of the Leader of the Opposition set out in a recent book which was written.

The Chairman: Order. It being six o'clock it is my duty to leave the Chair so that the House may proceed with the consideration of private Members' business.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED UNDER ADJOURNMENT MOTION

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. It is my duty pursuant to provisional Standing Order 39A to inform the House that the questions to be raised at ten o'clock this day are as follows: 1. The hon. Member for Winnipeg North—health and welfare, treatment by doctor of narcotics addict; 2. the hon. Member for Danforth—administration of justice—review of Criminal Code provisions respecting bail; 3. the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre—health and welfare—medicare—request for announcement of plan.

• (6:00 p.m.)

It being six o'clock the House will now proceed to the consideration of private Members' business as listed on today's order paper, namely, private bills, public bills.

Private Bills

PRIVATE BILLS

PRINCIPAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West) moved the second reading of Bill No. S-9, to incorporate Principal Life Insurance Company of Canada.

[Translation]

He said: Mr. Speaker, the object of Bill S-9 is to incorporate Principal Life Insurance Company of Canada.

The bill originated in the Senate, where it was passed on May 27, after the Banking and Commerce Committee of the Senate had heard witnesses and studied the measure.

I must say, Mr. Speaker, that this proposal to incorporate Principal Life Insurance Company of Canada implements a petition from a group of men from the business and financial community of the City of Edmonton, known as the Collective Group.

[English]

The petitioners, Mr. Speaker, as indicated in clause 1 of the bill, are a group of Edmonton businessmen well experienced in the field of finance, retirement and savings plans and insurance. Their experience in this field extends back to 1954. The fact that they are coming to the Parliament of Canada for the incorporation of this insurance company, which will form part of the group known as the collective group, is additional evidence of the very buoyant and burgeoning economy of western Canada. I must say that this is the case not only in the Province of Alberta but also in British Columbia, and there are indications that it applies to other parts of Canada.

If we look at the financial history and economic development of our neighbours to the south, we will see that the corresponding region of their country did not really go forward until they had a nucleus or network of their own financial institutions. I think the progress in Canada is a clear indication of the necessity not only for financial institutions based in Central Canada but also for those operating in western Canada on a branch plan basis. In this regard I might indicate that in the last session of the Provincial Legislature of Alberta seven life and trust companies were incorporated for operation in that province. However, the matter in hand, the incorporation of Principal Life Insurance Company of Canada, comes to the other place and to this House because this company intends, although it wishes to operate primarily in its first years in Western Canada, to operate throughout the country and even on an international plane.

From the examination of insurance legislation in the past we know that the Government of Canada is tightening up its requirements with regard to capitalization and surplus. The Federal requirement is $500,000 of capital and $500,000 of surplus. In Alberta the requirement is somewhat less but it will be brought up to $750,000 in total by the end of the year. Under Bill S-9 this company is to be incorporated with a capitalization of $1 million, and may I say that no appeal to the public will be made for the sale of its stock.

I invite approval of the bill on second reading and then examination in detail before the Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs of those witnesses that the committee may wish to examine. The capital requirement for this company is not going to be sought from the public. Already the collective group has set aside $1 million from its reserves for the capitalization of this company.

To deal with the history of the collective group briefly, Mr. Speaker, may I say that during the early years of the operations of the company the collective group expects to concentrate its efforts on the development of Principal Life Insurance Company of Canada in the western provinces. Eventually it is hoped that the company will do business throughout the whole of the country. It already has within its own network 36 offices in Canada and two in the United States, the collective group having had certain companies organized and approved under the appropriate law in the United States. It also has the necessary personnel.

Let us look at some features of this group. First of all, what is the management team? This group, in operation for about 11 years, has shown itself to be quite a successful one. Its assets have increased more than 2,400 per cent since 1956 and in fact they amount to some $56 million according to its 1964 balance sheet. In eight years the number of holders of the group's investment contracts has risen from 4,700 to more than 63,000. The group has its own selling, administrative and investment divisions. So far as the selling of insurance is concerned, this is done through its direct sales force operating out of its various regional offices. May I say that this group was the first to introduce a massive computer into western Canada. It was the first to bring in an I.B.M. system 360 computer. It has a staff of 400.

I do not want to appear to be boasting, but this particular group has also been operating under the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act for over 11 years. Therefore they have full knowledge of the insurance and trust business and of portfolio administration. Of its 75 head office employees, 31 are university graduates and all of the senior personnel in the accounting department are chartered accountants.

May I say that I heartily endorse the organization of this company. The petitioners are listed in clause 1 of the bill. They are Donald M. Cormie, a practising barrister and head of this financial group, Ralph Perrin Forster, a man of long experience in financial areas, V. R. Stewart, a member of the management group, John W. Kennedy, a solicitor, Kenneth Marlin, a business executive, and Lynn A. Patrick, a solicitor and active counsel for the Principal Life Insurance Company.

It is instructive to note what this group has done in so far as the generation of savings is concerned as compared with other life insurance companies. The savings generated in the Province of Alberta by the collective group in 1964 amounted to $7,379,000. Now, the Sun Life was next with some $5,958,000; Prudential, $3,296,000; Manufacturers Life $3,077,000; Great West Life $2,487,000; Confederation Life had something like $1,336,000. Some Members may say that this represents a lot of money going into life insurance within the Province. However, it is a matter of statistical record that notwithstanding the fact we have a lot of insurance companies in Canada, and more are being incorporated, only 25 per cent of the population of Canada is covered by life insurance. There is, therefore, a great market in Canada for life insurance, for the accumulation of savings and for the placement or investment of those savings funds in the development of Western Canada.

I am sure hon. Members from Western Canada will share my view that moneys made available are then invested by Western Canadian businessmen who are aware of conditions there. I would say the same thing of the Maritime Provinces, British Columbia and the Central Provinces. I do not believe it is necessary to say that Boards of Directors concentrated in Toronto and Montreal necessarily have the best appreciation of the investment opportunities in other parts of the country. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I invite all hon. Members to give second reading to this bill so that it may go to committee and we can examine witnesses there.

Mr. H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat): Mr. Speaker, I rise to give wholehearted support to the request of the hon. Member for Edmonton West (Mr. Lambert) that this bill be referred to the committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs. I should like also to give full support to his statement that the economies of Alberta and British Columbia are buoyant and that it is the natural outgrowth of these expanding and buoyant economies that financial institutions of this kind come into existence. It is a fact also that financial institutions of this kind and other types assist in further expanding the economies of these areas.

I find it rather strange, however, that it is only on rare occasions we can get the hon. Member for Edmonton West and other Progressive Conservative Members to pay this kind of tribute to the Provinces of Alberta and British Columbia. Usually they have some very severe criticisms of these two Provinces. Sometimes I suspect this is mostly because there are Social Credit Governments in both of them. Nevertheless the fact is that the economies of these two Provinces have expanded faster during the past few years than those of any other part of Canada. It is natural that financial institutions should desire and attempt to set up there. We know it may be only a coincidence, but we think there has been some deliberate action and that it is because of these Social Credit Governments out there that the tremendous expansion has taken place.

We hope that there is not going to be some kind of Federal action that will inhibit this expansion. I have received a telegram today from the City of Medicine Hat which had prospects for some new industries establishing there. However, as a result of the designated or so-called development areas announced by the Federal Government, some of these industries are taking a second look at it, especially in view of the inducements and incentives offered by the Federal Government in this other legislation. I know that this might not be the right place to advance this kind of argument. However, I do feel strongly that we do not wish to have discriminatory legislation that will result in having misplaced industries. Surely it is not the purpose of the Federal Government to penalize those areas that have been expanding, and actually hold them back by legislation that makes it difficult for an industry to establish in these fast growing parts of Canada.

I do not want to say more about it, except that we welcome the opportunity to support this kind of financial institution. We hope there will be a change in the attitude of the Government so that we can have the Bank of British Columbia established in Western Canada for the purpose of assisting the expansion of the economy out there as well. We hope that there will be some change of attitude so that this expansion can be helped rather than hindered at this particular time.

Motion agreed to, bill read the second time and referred to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs.

BANK OF WESTERN CANADA

The House resumed from Tuesday, June 1, consideration of the motion of Mrs. Konantz for the second reading of Bill No. C-99, to incorporate Bank of Western Canada, and on the proposed amendment thereto of Mr. Laprise.

Mr. Jack Davis (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): The few remarks which I have to make tonight are my own and stated as a private Member. I want to say a few words about our banking system. I want to advocate the incorporation of more banks in Canada. More specifically, I want to advocate the incorporation of banks such as the Laurentide Bank and the Bank of Western Canada which we are discussing today. For these reasons, I am opposed to the amendment presented to the House which would affect the incorporation of the Bank of Western Canada by giving the bill a six months hoist. I am opposed to that. I believe that we should deal with this matter. I am referring to the incorporation of the Bank of Western Canada by sending the bill to the appropriate committee of this House in order that it may be considered on its merits. I hope this will happen, too, in respect of the Laurentide Bank.

Now, in approaching this matter of banking, I should like to explain my own position clearly. I should like to say, quite forthrightly, and I think this is agreed to by many other Members in this House, that I am a Canadian first and I am a British Columbian second. I am sure all hon. Members would put the nation before their Province in all cases. This is one of the main reasons I am opposed to the incorporation of banks which are owned by Provinces. It is for this reason

I draw a distinction between privately owned banks such as the Laurentide Bank and the Bank of Western Canada and the proposed Bank of British Columbia which, in this instance at least, would be partially controlled by the Government of British Columbia.

• (6:20 p.m.)

I believe as a second principle we should have less government rather than more government. Whenever we have a choice we should have one level of government involved in the regulation of an activity, rather than several levels of government. For this reason I believe that as money and banking are specifically reserved, under the B.N.A. Act, to the Government of Canada, no attempt should be made to bring the provinces into the business of banking.

The B.N.A. Act is quite clear on this matter. Section 91 reads as follows:

> —the exclusive Legislative Authority of the Parliament of Canada extends to all matters coming within the Classes of Subjects next hereinafter enumerated; that is to say—
>
> 15. Banking, Incorporation of Banks, and the Issue of Paper Money.
> 16. Savings Banks.

It goes on further to say:

> Any Matter coming within any of the Classes of Subjects enumerated in this Section shall not be deemed to come within the Class of Matters of a local or private Nature comprised in the Enumeration of the Classes of the Subjects by this Act assigned exclusively to the Legislatures of the Provinces.

In other words, banking, the incorporation of banks, the issuance of paper money and savings banks are matters under the jurisdiction of the nation.

I am sure no Canadian would really want to see different coloured dollar bills in our provinces. In other words, to have a nation we must have one monetary system, and to have an effective monetary system we should have one central bank and chartered banks run by private enterprise which are clearly subject to the laws of Canada. To me that is an effective banking system.

Several hon. Members have referred to the prosperity of Western Canada. B.C. is very prosperous, and so is Alberta, but I do not attribute this entirely to the provincial governments. I attribute it partly to the genius of the people who live there and to the great resources of that part of Canada. In fact, I think the natural advantages of Western Canada far outweigh the natural advantages of the rest of Canada and this is one reason why now, and on into the future, Western Canada will be more prosperous than the rest of the nation. I do not attribute this to any government, and certainly not to any individual political party.

I wish to refer briefly to what the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon) had to say in respect to the incorporation of banks. He underlined the fact that the B.N.A. Act clearly assigns to this Parliament exclusive jurisdiction over banking and the incorporation of banks, and he went on to say:

> Even a limited ownership of shares of a bank by another government, whether it be a foreign government or a provincial government, could place such a government in a special position of power or influence in relation to that bank.
> Such a situation might lead to differences of opinion between this government and another government, and to confusion over who exercises authority in regard to the bank.

This is crucial, and this authority must be clearly identified. It must be clearly identified as the national authority.

The principal argument used by the province of British Columbia is that provinces have control over property and civil rights; that shares in any enterprise are property, and hence a province can have control over bank shares, and can properly buy a controlling interest in a bank.

I suggest that provincial governments do not have all the powers of a private individual. Also their concern is with property and civil rights within a province, and not extending beyond the province. Certainly banking, in the manner that the bank of B.C. would be incorporated, does extend beyond one province, in this case from B.C. to other provinces, and beyond our Canadian provinces to other countries in the world. In other words, it extends into an area which is clearly one of federal jurisdiction.

I believe we need more banks. Certainly the Porter Royal Commission indicates this. We need more competition in respect to the lending of money. This will drive interest rates down and make money readily available. In the 1880's we had 30 to 40 banks. Today we have eight. We have five which are entirely national, two confined to Quebec but operating under federal law, and one which has branches in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver.

We need more banks in the West. We also need bank headquarters in the West because of our economic prospects and because of the growing financial power of Western Canada. The government of B.C. made a very interesting submission to the other place. It indicated that today the economy of B.C. alone is greater than that of the Atlantic region. Our population is comparable. The turnover in respect of money is substantially greater. Some of the figures are illuminating. For example, labour income in B.C. is 55 per cent greater than that of all the Atlantic provinces combined. Cheques cashed are nearly two and a half times as great as in the Atlantic region.

If one thinks not merely of B.C. but also of the Prairies having an economy half again as large as that of B.C., he knows we are dealing not only with a growing region but a very important one in economic terms. In population terms it challenges Quebec, and in economic terms it is comparable to Ontario. It is the most rapidly growing and most vital part of Canada, and needs not only more branch offices but bank headquarters as well.

The government of B.C. is fond of indicating that the Bank of America, the biggest bank in the world, has its headquarters in California. It does not, however, say that the Bank of America is owned or was initiated by the State of California. It is a private bank operating under the laws of the United States and is part of the U.S. federal reserve system. It is totally responsible to the laws of our neighbouring nation to the south. It is not akin to a provincial bank. It is not a state bank; it is a privately owned bank.

Numerous other reasons are given by the government of B.C. as to why there should be a Bank of B.C. Our friends in the Créditiste party are blocking the incorporation of other private banks in order to bring the Bank of B.C. forward but, if they will allow me, I will destroy the remaining arguments advanced for a provincial Bank of B.C. One argument is that it would assist in making Vancouver a centre of Canadian finance. If the Laurentide Bank were incorporated it would help us to attain that objective.

Another argument they advance is that a chartered bank must succeed. Since when have chartered banks in Canada not succeeded? We have not had a significant bank failure, nothing like the failures in the United States, even in the depression years of the 1930's.

A third argument is that the bank should be concerned primarily with B.C. I suggest that all banking institutions are concerned about making money, are concerned about investing in going concerns in whatever part of Canada they do business. Therefore that qualification would certainly be met by banks like the Laurentide Bank and the Bank of Western Canada.

They also argue that bank shares should have a relatively stable market value. Most of our Canadian bank shares, because of the solvency of our banks under a very fine banking system, have that stability.

• (6:30 p.m.)

They also suggest that the provincial government can be of practical assistance to a bank. I suggest that the Government of British Columbia will be putting its surplus funds, tax revenues and income from other sources into the Bank of British Columbia exclusively.

Finally, the problem of professional management would be met. Canada's chartered and other banks have been very well managed and I suggest the Bank of British Columbia would be recruiting most of its management from the staff of the chartered banks. Therefore this argument of a lack of professional management falls to the ground.

I should like to refer briefly to the nature of the directorate of the proposed Bank of British Columbia. The gentleman proposed as president is Mr. Einar Gunderson, senior partner of the accounting firm of Gunderson, Stokes, Walton & Company. He is among other things chief fund-raiser for the Social Credit Party in the Province of British Columbia. He is also the executive vice president and a director of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, a British Columbia socialistic enterprise. He is executive director of the British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority, another Government-owned agency. And he is a member of the British Columbia Ferry Authority. He is one of the principal confidants, if not the closest personal friend, of the Premier of British Columbia. The claim that this would not be a politically influenced bank falls to the ground because of the personalities involved, certainly that of Mr. Gunderson. This is the man who recently stated that, for more than a decade he had been raising money for the Social Credit party's election campaigns purposes. He has been raising it in the name of the British Columbia Free Enterprise Education Fund. Mr. Gunderson is, of course, an officer of a number of socialistic enterprises and some of these have been socialized within a relatively short period of time. He personally played a major role in bringing them under Government ownership.

Now I should like to consider the scale and scope of the proposed bank. This Bank of British Columbia would have a capitalization of $100 million, that is to say, of the same order of magnitude as the Toronto-Dominion Bank. In order to be profitable it will have to attract all of the savings of all individuals, all firms and all institutions in the province, besides those of all the Crown corporations—and then some. Were it to confine its activities exclusively to British Columbia there would be no room left for any private bank whatever. It would have the effect of driving free enterprise out of all banking in British Columbia, driven out by the man who is proposed as President of this Bank, the person who has been soliciting contributions in the name of the British Columbia Free Enterprise Education Fund. In my view, those who have been contributing to this fund have actually been contributing to the downfall of private enterprise in several important areas, one of the most significant of them being commercial banking in Canada.

What would happen if Quebec were to decide to follow this example, as is entirely likely? Eventually we might have as many as ten provinces taking an equity interest in chartered banks whose policies they would influence or control. Private enterprise would be wiped off the map in Canada in this field. The Bank of Canada would remain the agent of the Federal Government but it would have to deal with ten separate provincial banks. We could not look forward to a continuance of informal discussions held once a month or more frequently between the central bank and the various chartered banks. Instead we would be committed to a series of Federal-Provincial Conferences bearing on monetary policy. Imagine what might happen if inflation began to get under way and the Federal Government decided to pursue a tight money policy. The Province of British Columbia might resist such a policy as being against the interests of many of the people in that province. So there would be a dillying and dallying between two different levels of Government. Federal-Provincial conferences perform a useful function but I doubt whether they could be effective in managing the monetary policy of this country. I can imagine the Premier of British Columbia saying, for instance: I will go along a little distance with this tight money policy if you will turn over your offshore mineral rights to the province; instead of bringing this issue before the courts we shall have it out around the table during this so-called conference on monetary policy.

What view would other countries take of this monetary Balkanization of Canada? England has one of the most successful banking systems in the world. It has a national bank and a number of private banks subject to the law of the United Kingdom. A Labour Government was in power in the United Kingdom for a number of years but it did not see fit to permit the Balkanization of its banking system. I suggest to Members of the New Democratic Party that their endorsement of the Bank of British Columbia renders their ideas for planning on a national basis nonsensical.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I have to interrupt the hon. Member, whose time has expired, unless he has unanimous consent to continue.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Davis: This is important. The New Democratic Party wants to plan our way of life more effectively. It says the Government should move into more areas of economic activity. I can think of no activity more essential to economic planning than the formulation of monetary policy, and I cannot imagine that a national Government headed by the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam (Mr. Douglas) would look with favour on ten provincial premiers coming to the bargaining table, each with a particular banking policy, each with ideas as to whether there should be tight money or easy money, ideas as to how credit should be advanced, and so on.

As one who endorses the free enterprise system I firmly believe we need a monetary policy with only one set of rules and only one level of Government involved. This Parliament should establish the ground rules upon which banks should operate right across the country—a system flexible enough to meet all our needs as they arise. This would give mobility to industry and develop the economy to an increasing extent for the benefit of all Canadians. National unity alone requires that the setting up of provincial banks should not be entertained by this Parliament and that this proposal to establish a Bank of British Columbia should, in particular, be rebuffed. On the other hand, private banks, including the Bank of Western Canada, should be incorporated in order to make our present system more flexible and more effective.

• (6:40 p.m.)

Mr. Olson: Mr. Speaker, does the hon. Member think the proposed Bank of British Columbia operating under the Federal Bank Act would be either contrary or detrimental to the national interest?

Mr. Davis: The short answer to that question is, I think it would be detrimental to the national interest.

An hon. Member: Why?

Mr. Davis: A longer answer to the question is that there are certain latitudes permitted to chartered banks, observing the law in its strictest form, and within those latitudes, if all chartered banks owned by provinces were to throw their weight one way, it would make it very difficult to put any particular policy into effect.

Mr. Olson: I have a supplementary question. Is that true of the present shareholders of banks? Are they able to frustrate federal policy by exercising the power they have as a result of the shares they own at the present time?

Mr. Davis: I suggest that there is a great variety of interests among the shareholders of our different banks and that this variey of interests reflects the national interest to a considerable extent, and that to the extent it does not reflect national interest it allows the will of the majority to prevail.

Mr. J. H. Horner (Acadia): Mr. Speaker, I have been very interested in listening to the speech of the hon. Member for Coast-Capilano. I am sure he has assisted the Social Crediters and the Créditistes in their marathon talk-out of any proposed bank charter.

The hon. Member's speech dealt with a great many things other than the application for charter of the Bank of Western Canada, in respect of which some of us are particularly interested. The hon. Member complained that the control of the British Columbia Bank might lie in the hands of a few, and that its power might be directed in certain ways at the whim of a political party or of a few individuals.

The hon. Member never once tried to defend the application for charter of the Western Canada Bank.

An hon. Member: Yes he did.

Mr. Horner (Acadia): Someone suggested that he did. I read the remarks made by the mover of this bill, and she at no time, in moving first or second reading, refuted some of the charges made before the Banking and Commerce Committee of the Senate of 1964. I intend to refer to those hearings in greater detail later on.

If the hon. Member for Coast-Capilano has no objection to the granting of a charter for the Bank of Western Canada I do not understand why he objects so strenuously at this time. Let us be very clear at this time that a very few powerful people will have control of the proposed bank, and that those people are not people resident in Western Canada. That being the case, what is the difference in respect of the application for the charter of the Bank of British Columbia?

When the Premier of the Province of British Columbia appeared before the Senate Committee, and I have the report of that committee in my hands, although I will not have time to read the relative portions, he stated he would be agreeable to reducing his interest to 5 per cent or 10 per cent. In view of that fact what is the difference in the attitude taken by the Government in respect of these applications for charters?

As a result of a rigid cross-examination by a member of the other place the information was revealed that 49 per cent of the stock of the proposed Bank of Western Canada, at least under the terms that existed in respect of the application last year, would be held by three people. We have now heard an ardent spokesman for the Government say that it would be a terrible crime to give a charter to a bank, only a fraction of the shares of which would be held by the Premier of the Provincial Government, who wishes to develop these vast resources of his Province and who takes it upon himself as a responsibility to develop those resources for the benefit of the people of that Province. On the other hand, we hear the same spokesman and other Members of his party avidly supporting an application for a charter of a bank which supposedly wishes to develop Western Canada but which in fact will benefit very few more than three individuals. After listening to the speech of the hon. Member I am afraid that the hon. Member has more than convinced me, and perhaps this is the first time, that the sponsors of the Bank of British Columbia should expect, as a right, to receive a charter.

The hon. Member for Coast-Capilano has not convinced me that the charter requested by the bill now before us should be granted, and I shall point out in the time available to me why I am not convinced. Perhaps at some stage the mover and those people who ardently speak in favour of this bill will present some sound arguments for this application for a charter, rather than spend their time condemning another application.

The mover of the bill pointed out, as recorded at page 1260 of Hansard, that the capitalization of the new bank is to be increased and that 4,720 certificate holders are from western Provinces, whereas 830 are from outside that area. Let us compare that picture with the picture shown in respect of the application for a charter now before us as presented during the last session to the Banking and Commerce Committee of the other place.

At page 58 of the proceedings of that committee the witness, Mr. Stevens, who appeared on behalf of the applicants, is recorded as having stated that the total number of shareholders would be 6,099 and of that number only 233 were not residents of the Western Provinces. That would indicate to me that the number of shareholders does not necessarily designate where the control lies. In the present application there are fewer shareholders, but a greater number of them who are resident in areas other than Western Canada. Of the proposed 6,099 shareholders only 233 are from outside of Western Canada; but what control would those 233 shareholders have? That is the point of interest to us. It is my feeling that they would have the greater control, and this is supported by the evidence of Mr. Stevens as reported at page 59 of the same proceedings of that committee, which met on May 6, 1964.

At page 60 of the proceedings, in reply to a question, Mr. Stevens stated that the group of companies involved are The Wellington Finance Corporation, Limited, Canadian Finance & Investments Ltd., and York Trust and Savings Corporation. After rigorous examination it was discovered that the York Trust Company would hold 33,000 shares, that the Canadian Finance Company would hold $2,250,000, or 150,000 shares of the proposed capitalization, and that the Wellington Finance Corporation would hold $3,750,000 or 433,000 shares of the capitalization. In other words 43 per cent of the capital of that proposed bank would be held by those three companies, and that is only part of the picture.

Under the proposed Bank Act no individual, person or party shall own more than 10 per cent of the shares of any proposed chartered bank. I believe that the holding of a bank charter is a right of Canadians generally and that this Government or Parliament should not interfere with that right. I believe that the base of any bank charter should be spread as broadly as possible, rather than being narrowly confined as would be the case in respect of this application for a charter for the Bank of Western Canada.

Mr. Speaker, nothing has led me to believe that there is any great change in this application from that which was presented earlier. I do not suggest there are not any changes, because obviously there have been some, but let me attempt to show that it does not matter where the shares are, but that what is important is where the capital and voting rights lie. Forty three per cent of the capital of the new bank is to be held by three companies, as indicated by the evidence given before the Banking and Commerce Committee of the other place on May 6, 1964, as recorded at page 60 of the proceedings of that committee.

[Mr. Horner (Acadia).]

• (6:50 p.m.)

Further we find that British International owns 40 per cent of York Trust, and that it has voting power to the extent of 28.9 per cent in Canadian Finance. It also has 36.6 per cent holding interest in Wellington. There seemed to be some doubt about the figure in the questioning; one of the examiners thought it was 48 per cent but the witness said it was 36.6 per cent. That appears at page 61 of the committee proceedings. So 36.6 is the minimum holding. It appears that 43 per cent of the capital of the new bank would be held by these three companies; and one of them holds practically a controlling interest in all three.

A little further on in the proceedings we discover that British International Finance of Canada is controlled, as admitted by Mr. Stevens, by Mr. Stevens and his family and Mr. W. E. N. Bell. As reported at page 62 of the report he says:

> I would like to emphasize the indirect nature of that, though. For example, I would have a 49 per cent interest in one company—

There are three other shareholders, but it is not fair to suggest that a 49 per cent interest does not in fact control a company. Certainly we are not naïve enough to believe that anyone with a 49 per cent holding in a company does not, in effect, control it.

I do not want to read extensively from the proceedings, but as reported at page 63 Mr. Stevens quite frankly admits:

> To save any misunderstanding there—I am trying to be correct in my statement—I will say that the next largest holder would be William J. Mollard. He appears in the prospectus. I am trying to be correct as to whether myself plus Bell plus Mollard control—those three certainly control.
> Senator McCutcheon: Then I think the answer to my question follows from that, that you and Mr. Mollard and Mr. Bell are in a position to sell the control of British International Finance—

He points out that the three people who control British International Finance would be, in effect, the three people who are the principal shareholders of the controlling interest in the new bank applying for a charter. He also pointed out under examination that these three people could quite conceivably sell their shares to other persons or to another person, so that you could have a controlling interest in this proposed Western Canada Bank in the hands of one company.

I must say I have been looking for something to set my fears at rest. I looked for something from the mover when she moved second reading of the bill and from the ardent spokesman who favoured so vehemently the Western Canada Bank, rather than the bank sponsored by the Province of British Columbia. But I heard and saw little to set my fears at rest. However, I notice that the capitalization of the proposed bank is now larger than it was last session. I may be of a suspicious nature, Mr. Speaker, but three men went before the other place in the last session of Parliament and asked for a charter. There are only eight charters in Canada. These three individuals want the ninth. Therefore, why should we in this Parliament not suspect that they would come back in this session masquerading under the name of the Western Canada Bank? There was quite a few years ago a Western Canada Bank. As the hon. Member for Coast-Capilano (Mr. Davis) said in his speech, he did not believe for one moment that chartered banks ever lose money, and I would agree with him on that. But for some reason or other they do sell and they do amalgamate. I do not think for one moment, when the old Bank of Western Canada, so named, eventually amalgamated with the Standard Bank and the Standard Bank amalgamated with the Bank of Commerce, that in any one of those transactions the parties or persons concerned lost a nickel. Therefore I think it is the duty of Members of Parliament and those in the other place very carefully to examine the application for this charter, and whether or not the charter will be placed into the controlling hands of a few. They should investigate whether or not these people intend to carry out the declared operations of this proposed bank.

Mr. Davis: Could I ask the hon. Member a question. The hon. Member in his speech has been asking for information throughout. Surely the best way to get information is to put this bill before a committee of the House and summon witnesses. He himself can attend and ask all the questions he likes and get the facts. Why do we not proceed in this manner?

Mr. Horner (Acadia): I have no doubt whatever that this bill will get before the committee, but I have some doubt whether I would be on the committee because the proposed Government changes have narrowed down our committees system to a dangerous point. Therefore I think it only fair that the questions in my mind today should be put on paper for those who sponsor the bank to read, and so witnesses coming before the committee at a later date can bring the answers and set my fears at rest. Whether or not I am on the committee I will read the evidence given before the committee; and I firmly believe that if the hon. Member who just interrupted me was avidly concerned about and interested in getting this bill through Parliament this evening, then he had no business running wild during his time, taking five extra minutes, condemning another bank instead of speaking in support of the promotion of this bank. He now suggests that because I have asked a number of questions I am talking out the bill. I suppose that is what he tried to suggest by his polite little question to me. I must inform you, Mr. Speaker, and through you, him, and the mover of the bill, that I have many more questions yet and I am not through.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I must inform the hon. Member that it is seven o'clock and that the time allocated for private Members' business has now expired. The House will now resume the business interrupted at six o'clock.

WAYS AND MEANS

The House in Committee of Ways and Means, Mr. Lamoureux in the Chair.

INCOME TAX ACT

Resolved, that it is expedient to introduce a measure to amend the Income Tax Act and related provisions of the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act and to provide among other things:

1. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years the income tax payable by an individual be reduced by an amount equal to the lesser of 10 per cent of basic tax or $600 and for the 1965 taxation year by an amount equal to the lesser of 5 per cent of basic tax or $300.

2. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer may deduct in computing his taxable income an amount for the support of a person who was his niece or nephew and who during the year resided in Canada, was wholly dependant upon him for support, and was

(a) under 21 years of age,

(b) 21 years of age or over and dependant by reason of mental or physical infirmity, or

(c) 21 years of age or over and in full-time attendance at a school or university,

if

(d) the mother of the niece or nephew was divorced or separated and not in receipt of alimony or similar payments, or

(e) the father of the niece or nephew was deceased or mentally or physically infirm,

not exceeding $300 if the person was a child qualified for family allowance and $550 if he was not so qualified.

3. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer may deduct in computing his taxable income an amount not exceeding $550 expended by him during the year for the support of a person who was his aunt or uncle and who during the year resided in Canada and was dependant upon him for support by reason of mental or physical infirmity.

4. That for the 1970 and subsequent taxation years the additional exemption of $500 now allowed to a taxpayer who has attained the age of 65 years be allowed only if the taxpayer has attained the age of 70 years and that for the taxation years 1966 to 1969 inclusive a taxpayer who has attained the age of 65 years but has not attained the age of 70 years be allowed the additional exemption of $500 only if he did not receive a pension under the Old Age Security Act in respect of any month in that year.

5. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer who deducts in computing his income from an office or employment

(a) annual dues to maintain membership in a trade union or to maintain membership in an association of public servants,

(b) annual dues retained from his remuneration pursuant to the provisions of a collective agreement and paid to a trade union or association, or

(c) annual professional membership dues the payment of which was necessary to maintain a professional status recognized by statute,

shall not by reason of such deduction be ineligible to deduct the standard deduction of $100 described in paragraph (ca) subsection (1) of section 27 of the Act.

6. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years a person, the spouse of such person residing with him and previously resident in Canada, or any dependant child of such person, shall be deemed to have been resident in Canada throughout a taxation year if such person was at any time in the year performing services in a country other than Canada under a prescribed international development assistance program of the Government of Canada, and was resident in Canada during a part of the year preceding the commencement of such services.

7. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years a contribution made by a person under the Canada Pension Plan or under a provincial pension plan as defined in section 3 of the Canada Pension Plan may be deducted in computing the income of such person.

8. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years the limitation on the amount related to earned income that a taxpayer may deduct as a premium under a registered retirement savings plan be increased from 10 per cent of earned income to 20 per cent of earned income.

9. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years such part of any amount that would otherwise be included in computing income of a taxpayer as a retiring allowance be deductible if it is paid in the year, or within 60 days after the end of the year, as a contribution to a registered pension fund or plan, as a premium under a retirement savings plan, or to a trustee under a deferred profit sharing plan.

10. That there may be deducted in computing the income of a taxpayer an amount in respect of an outlay or expense made by the taxpayer in the 1965 and subsequent taxation years

(a) to a person with whom the taxpayer is dealing at arms length and who is the lessee of property owned by the taxpayer, to obtain the cancellation of a lease on such property,

(b) for landscaping property used by the taxpayer for the purpose of gaining or producing income,

(c) for clearing land or laying tile drainage for the purpose of carrying on a farming business,

(d) as or on account of the cost of making representations to a government, municipality or other public authority in connection with a business carried on by the taxpayer, including representations for the purpose of obtaining a licence, permit, franchise or trademark,

(e) as or on account of the cost incurred in investigating the suitability of a site for a building or other structure planned by the taxpayer for use in connection with a business carried on by him.

11. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a corporation shall be deemed to be resident in Canada throughout a taxation year if

(a) it was incorporated in Canada before April 27, 1965 and was resident in Canada in its taxation year that included April 26, 1965 or in any subsequent on taxation year, or

(b) it was incorporated in Canada after April 26, 1965.

12. That with respect to payments received by a taxpayer after April 26, 1965, other than a payment made upon the death of an employee, the amount that a taxpayer may elect to have taxed under section 36 of the Act shall not exceed

(a) in the case of a single payment

(i) out of or pursuant to a superannuation or pension fund or plan, or

(ii) pursuant to deferred profit sharing plan, or

(iii) pursuant to an employee's profit sharing plan,

$1,500 times the number of years during which the employee, in respect of whom the payment was made, was a member of the plan, or

(b) in the case of

(i) a single payment upon retirement of an employee in recognition of long service, or

(ii) a payment or payments made by an employer to an employee or former employee upon or after retirement in respect of loss of office or employment

$1,000 times the number of years during which the employee, in respect of whom the payment was made, was an employee of the employer who made the payment.

13. That for taxation years commencing after April 26, 1965, a trust or estate (other than a trust or estate arising on death) that has income from a business carried on by it in Canada may not deduct in computing its income an amount paid or payable to a beneficiary who is

(a) a non-resident of Canada,

(b) a non-resident-owned investment corporation, or

(c) another trust or estate resident in Canada,

unless that other trust or estate

(i) arose on a death, or

(ii) has been since April 26, 1965 a beneficiary of the trust or estate paying the amount and the trust or estate paying the amount has been carrying on the business since April 26, 1965,

and any amount paid or payable out of the income for the year of the first-mentioned trust or estate will continue to be included in the income of its beneficiary notwithstanding the fact that the first-mentioned trust or estate was not entitled to deduct the amount in computing its income.

14. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years the amount of income derived from a new mine that a corporation may exclude in computing its income shall be confined to income from the operation of the mine by the corporation.

15. That where a joint exploration corporation acquires after April 26, 1965 a right, licence or privilege to explore for, drill for or take petroleum, natural gas or other related hydrocarbons, the cost of the right, licence or privilege may not be renounced to a shareholder corporation.

16. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years an amount that a taxpayer may exclude from his income because it is consideration for a mining property acquired as the result of his efforts as a prospector, or as the result of efforts of a prospector who was employed or financially assisted by him, shall not include a share of profits, a royalty or a payment based on production.

17. That the Minister of National Revenue with the approval of the Governor in Council may on behalf of the Government of Canada enter into an agreement with the government of a province, under which one government undertakes to transfer to the other, in respect of income tax paid by an individual from whom deductions were made at source as though he were resident in a place other than the province in which he was resident on the last day of the year, a part of the amount deducted or withheld under section 47 of the Act or a similar provision of a provincial income tax act.

18. That in order to give effect to the provisions of paragraph 1 without reducing the amount of equalization payments to any province a consequential amendment be made to the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act to adjust the fractions set out therein in the definition of "standard individual income tax" used in the computation of equalization payments.

19. That a new section be added to the Act concerning expenditures of a taxpayer for advertising space in a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical having effect substantially as follows:

"12A (1) In computing income, no deduction shall be made in respect of an otherwise deductible outlay or expense of a taxpayer for advertising space in an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical dated after December 31, 1965 for an advertisement directed primarily to a market in Canada.

(2) An issue or edition of an issue of any newspaper or periodical that is edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada and that was not on April 26, 1965 a Canadian newspaper or periodical shall be deemed, for the purposes of subsection (1), not to be an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical if

(a) through the period of twelve months ending April 26, 1965 issues or editions of issues of that publication were being edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada at the usual intervals for issues of that publication and have since that date continued to be so edited, printed and published without interruption except for a reason other than the cessation of the business of publishing that publication; and

(b) in the case of a periodical, the periodical is similar, in content and in respect of the class of readers to whom it is directed, to the issues or editions of that periodical that were throughout the period of twelve months ending April 26, 1965 being edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada.

(3) Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an advertisement in a special issue or edition of a newspaper that is edited in whole or in part and printed and published outside Canada if such special issue or edition is devoted to features or news related primarily to Canada and the publishers thereof publish such an issue or edition not more frequently than twice a year.

(4) Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an advertisement in

(a) a catalogue, or

(b) any publication the principal function of which is the encouragement, promotion or development of the fine arts, letters, scholarship or religion.

(5) In this section,

(a) 'Canadian issue' means,

(i) in relation to a newspaper, an issue, including a special issue,

(A) the type of which, other than the type for advertisements or features, is set in Canada,

(B) the whole of which, exclusive of any comics supplement, is printed in Canada,

(C) that is edited in Canada by individuals resident in Canada, and

(D) that is published in Canada, and

(ii) in relation to a periodical, an issue, including a special issue,

(A) the type of which, other than the type for advertisements, is set in Canada,

(B) that is printed in Canada,

(C) that is edited in Canada by individuals resident in Canada, and

(D) that is published in Canada,

but does not include an issue of a periodical

(E) that is produced or published under a license granted by a person who produces or publishes issues of a periodical that are printed, edited or published outside Canada, or

(F) the contents of which, excluding advertisements, are substantially the same as the contents of an issue of a periodical, or the contents of one or more issues of one or more periodicals, that was or were printed, edited or published outside Canada.

(b) 'Canadian newspaper or periodical' means a newspaper or periodical the right to produce and publish issues of which belongs to or is vested in

(i) a Canadian citizen,

(ii) a partnership of which at least ¾ of the members are Canadian citizens and in which interests representing in value at least ¾ of the total value of the partnership property are owned by Canadian citizens,

(iii) an association or society of which at least ¾ of the members are Canadian citizens,

(iv) Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province, or a municipality in Canada, or

(v) a corporation

(A) that is incorporated under the laws of Canada or a province,

(B) of which the chairman or other presiding officer and at least ¾ of the directors or other similar officers are Canadian citizens, and

(C) of which, if it is a corporation having share capital, at least ¾ of the shares having full voting rights under all circumstances, and shares representing in the aggregate at least ¾ of the paid-up capital, are owned by Canadian citizens or by corporations other than corporations controlled directly or indirectly by citizens or subjects of a country other than Canada; and

(c) 'issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical' means an issue that is not a Canadian issue of a Canadian newspaper or periodical."

• (7:00 p.m.)

Mr. Munro: Mr. Chairman, prior to private Members' hour I was referring to the speech made by the Leader of the Opposition in which he indicated that this proposal involved some limitation of the freedom of the press. I was quoting from the O'Leary Commission report, a Commission which I would reiterate was set up during the administration of the right hon. gentleman, reporting to the Government of that day. As reported at the bottom of page 7 the Commission has this to say about the freedom of expression argument:

In our society, freedom of expression—and therefore of the organs of expression—is so firmly established as to require overwhelming justification of anything that might be construed as interference by the State. So sacred indeed is the freedom of expression—or freedom of the press, which is but a function of all freedoms—so essential is it to our way of life that its protection benefits from every doubt of State measures which concern it.

This Commission was not established to devise means of curtailing the freedom of expression, nor to fashion means to in any way limit press freedom. It has not conceived it to be its function to restrict opinion in any way. But this is not to say that venerable and sanctified clichés about "press freedom", shouted at the Commission through so many of its hearings, should deter it from a sincere accomplishment of its instructions and much less from an honest discharge of its duties to arrive at conclusions and make recommendations, whether or not they entail legislation. There is need to remember that freedom of the press is not an end in itself, but only a function of general intellectual freedom; to remember that no right includes a privilege to injure the society granting it; to understand that a great constitutional doctrine cannot be reduced to a mere business convenience, and that the press is but a Fourth Estate—not a whole community.

Leaving out a few lines, the report continues:

At the same time, however, it has viewed with distaste the sight of fundamental principles of democracy being sent to act as decoys in the interest of commerce.

I think that this amply demonstrates the point made by the Minister of Finance in his introductory remarks last evening when he stated that this proposal was in no way a limitation of the press, that it in no way was directed at any curtailment of the dissemination of information, but rather all that it did in effect was to limit the sale of newspapers by their owners to interested Canadian purchasers rather than to foreign or non-resident purchasers. In other words, it is a limitation in the business area but it has nothing whatsoever to do with the dissemination of information or editorial policy or the position taken by newspapers so far as the free expression of ideas is concerned. As was also indicated by the hon. Member for Port Arthur, I cannot for the life of me see any validity in the argument that the proposal limits or is an invasion in the area of freedom of the press.

I should like to deal a little further with the O'Leary Commission report. An interesting thing is that the O'Leary Commission not only recommends the imposition of limitations on the periodical press in order to preserve their Canadian identity but even goes further and suggests that in the future we may have to think in terms of other legislation of this type, though still not dealing in the area of dissemination of information, still not dealing in the area of editorial policy or the encouragement of conflict of opinion but, if you like, dealing in the business area, in the area of physical ownership. On page 8 of the report there is the heading "The National Interest", and this is the justification given by the Commission for the type of limitations which are proposed in this legislation. The justification is the national interest. In this regard the Commission said:

There is, after all, practically nothing a government can do without impinging upon the rights and privileges of some so that they may harmonize with those of others with which they may conflict. The constant redefinition of rights and privileges is the continuing task of government. That this process is difficult, there is no doubt. However, even in a matter as sacred as the freedom of expression limitations have been applied in the past: no publication has the right to libel.

There is one inherent limitation.

It is not inconceivable that new limitations may be necessary in the future, seeing that with the increased importance and mounting power of mass communications, there must be a corresponding gain in the power and importance of the relatively few people who control the media, and, therefore, a decrease in certain rights of other individuals in the community.

I take that as an indication by the O'Leary Commission of their concern over the degree of concentration of ownership in the whole mass media field. I take it as an indication of concern that has been expressed not only by the O'Leary Commission but by many others, because the degree of concentration of ownership in the mass media field, not only newspapers, has grown to an alarming extent in Canada. I suggest that in this particular paragraph the Commission foresees that maybe a somewhat similar type of development will have to occur in Canada, as took place in England with the establishment of the Shawcross Commission, to go into the whole area of mass ownership in the media field because, as the O'Leary Commission has stated, "there must be a corresponding gain in the power and importance of the relatively few people who control the media and, therefore, a decrease in certain rights of other individuals in the community".

It has always been recognized as a fundamental function of any government in a free society that it must protect the rights of the individual, and if this concentration of ownership should occur to the degree that it diminishes the rights of the individual we can perhaps foresee legislation in this field also. So the principle of national interest is there. Our country and other countries in our democratic society have recognized that there is a fundamental duty to protect the individual against concentrations of power and to protect the national interest against foreign influences.

This is the justification for this legislation. This is the justification advanced by the Commission which formed the basis of the legislation as it was first introduced by the former Government. Therefore, for the former Prime Minister to indicate in the House today an attitude in direct conflict with and diametrically opposed to a bill his own government had on the order paper based on the recommendations of his own Commission is, to me, simply incomprehensible.

I think this also points out another interesting development in the political evolution of the ideas of the Leader of the Opposition. Professor George Grant has recently written a book entitled Lament for A Nation. There has been some discussion of this book in Canada. In it he has identified the Leader of the Opposition as a great nationalist, as one who was opposed to the power complex and pressure groups in Canada, as one who advocated that the Canadian identity must be preserved. It must be disillusioning indeed to his champion, Professor George Grant, who extolled the Leader of the Opposition to such heights, that now the Leader of the Opposition should today criticize and indicate his lack of support for this type of legislation. I think it would be interesting to refer to one portion of the book. As found on pages 16 and 17, Professor Grant states:

• (7:10 p.m.)

There is something naïve about Diefenbaker's attacks on Toronto and Montreal business in the 1963 election, particularly in the light of the economic policies his government had pursued from 1958 to 1962. It is not surprising that the only literate and established voice on the side of Diefenbaker in the election of 1963 was Senator Grattan O'Leary, who was himself caught in the trap of romantic nationalism. Senator O'Leary also was a supporter of both nationalism and capitalism. He could presumably combine the two because he thought the leaders of Canadian capitalism after 1940 were still nationalists. There seems less excuse for such nonsense from the publisher of a great eastern newspaper than from a western lawyer. It is, nevertheless, startling that the western lawyer could still believe capitalists were nationalists after a term as Prime Minister. In short, Diefenbaker did not understand the economic implications of Canadian nationalism; he could not appraise the class structure realistically, and therefore he could not formulate the economic policies that were necessary if nationalism was to be more than rhetoric and romance. Even after his defeat, he does not seem to have learnt these lessons. As Leader of the Opposition, he attacked the measures, put forward by Walter Gordon to limit the control of this country by American capital.

Here we have it from this author, a great defender of Mr. Diefenbaker and his administration indicating his disillusionment with the inconsistencies and contradictions in the positions and postures taken by the Leader of the Opposition with regard to the policies advocated by the Minister of Finance last year and within the first year of our taking office. Again, we have an illustration of the Leader of the Opposition opposing such policies here today. It becomes somewhat of a tragedy that Canadians have learned to look to the Leader of the Opposition as the personification of the champion of preservation of the Canadian identity, and yet today we have opposition to legislation that I would suggest goes to the very heart of any real effort to preserve any type of Canadian identity at all.

Surely, Mr. Chairman, we must concede that in the ownership of newspapers we have a very essential element of the whole mass media field. When we concede that we have the whole field of the mass media involved, then we are talking about one of the fundamental areas of ownership in our whole way of life. If we should allow the mass media to fall under the control of non-residents or foreigners, we would have no semblance of independence or sovereignty left. This would surely erode the very foundations of any aspiration toward any type of Canadian independence or Canadian sovereignty. As I say, it is just beyond my powers of understanding when we are talking about the mass media here, when we are talking about legislation designed to preserve Canadian ownership in the mass media field, when we acknowledge that the mass media is one of the essential elements in forming a national identity, and when we are proposing the legislation which is so necessary to preserve that identity, that the Leader of the Opposition seems to have given up any hope of plans for the preservation of the independence and sovereignty of this country.

I noticed another thing in the position taken by the Leader of the Opposition, which was disturbing. I refer to the fact that no alternative policies were advanced. I find it impossible to believe that the Leader of the Opposition or any other Member of this House could complacently sit back and watch one of our newspapers like the Globe and Mail, the Toronto Star or the Montreal Star fall into the hands of non-residents. I do not believe that any Member of this House could accept that type of development with peace of mind. It would be bound to cause considerable pain. It would be bound to cause considerable aggravation to every Canadian because he would realize this was a further example of the encroachment of foreign ownership and control of our country. This would be an area in which the dissemination of ideas would be involved, and not just physical assets.

If the Leader of the Opposition is just opposed to the method of implementing this proposal and is not opposed to the over-all aim of the legislation, one would have thought that the party opposite would have advanced some alternative proposal by means of which the purpose of this legislation could be accomplished. No such proposal was advanced. In fact, this has been the position of all of the critics of the present policy. They admit that the Federal Government has no other legal means by which its aim could be accomplished. They realize that under the British North America Act we do not have the power to legislate with regard to the ownership of property. Perhaps this is the reason no alternative proposal was brought forward.

Surely a party that has gone on record from 1958 to 1962 as being most concerned with this problem could find an alternative, otherwise it is sheer irresponsibility to oppose this proposal. They must certainly accept the challenge of coming up with some other adequate means of accomplishing the same end, or support the Government on this particular piece of legislation before us tonight. If they do not do so, then they are guilty of the greatest contradiction, the greatest reversal of policy I have ever heard in this House during the short time I have been here.

I should like to refer to one or two other matters. One suggestion I have heard advanced in some quarters as an alternative means has been some type of subsidy arrangement advanced by the Federal Government to these periodicals. I am referring now to periodicals rather than newspapers. This would be a means of preserving the Canadian periodical and preventing it from disappearing as a result of this unfair competition to which so much reference has been made today. Anyone who advocates that type of arrangement certainly would be flying in the face of those who indicate concern about the limitation on the freedom of the press, interference with the press by Government.

I have yet to hear anyone indicate that in a subsidy arrangement there is not an intangible influence by the Government upon the periodical involved. Perhaps this is the reason we do not hear the subsidy argument advanced in this House. I think we must look back and accept the fact this legislation is inevitable. We must look back to our own Royal Commission and the conclusions to which it has come. We must look back to what almost happened to the Globe and Mail, when a non-resident investor submitted a bid and undoubtedly if his bid had been higher the Globe and Mail, which holds itself out as being Canada's only national newspaper, would have fallen into the hands of non-residents. Developments such as these undoubtedly prevailed upon the minds of the Government and the Minister of Finance when introducing this legislation. Developments such as this injected a degree of urgency.

• (7:20 p.m.)

In conclusion I would like to reiterate the point that this legislation is consistent with the type of legislation we have in other areas respecting mass media and the communications field. It is consistent with the limitations involved in the radio field to preserve Canadian ownership. It is consistent with the limitations involved in the television field to preserve Canadian ownership. None of us heard any criticism from any opposition party when those controls were imposed and in fact the origin of such limitations goes back many years. No one heard any such criticism about limitation of freedom when only periodicals were involved. We just began to hear it when newspapers were included.

This legislation is in the national interest. It is not a limitation on expression. It is not a limitation on freedom of the press. It is consistent with other legislation dealing with the mass media field. If we desire any semblance of preserving Canadian identity in the important field of mass media it is in the national interest that this Chamber should approve this measure.

Mr. Clancy: The hon. Member has just made a statement that no one opposed the C.B.C. I can refer him to many pages in Hansard showing there was a lot of opposition at the time that was introduced.

Mr. Munro: I do not know whether the hon. gentleman who has just spoken is aware that the C.B.C. was originated and set up under a Conservative government.

Mr. Clancy: That is right, but you made a statement that nobody in the House of Commons opposed it. Read your Hansard and you will see a great many people did.

Mr. Ricard: Mr. Chairman, we have just listened to the second part of the band concert accompanying the introduction of this resolution. Last night the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon) told a rather sad story in glowing terms when he dealt with the question of income tax. Tonight the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare, another member of the band, tried to convince us that this measure was worth its weight in gold.

This resolution gives me, once again, the opportunity to emphasize the viewpoint of the low wage Canadian. As a matter of fact, if I have decided to say a few words on this resolution, it is because the Canadian wage-earner is taxed more than ever before in the history of Canada. On the other hand, besides being taxed as he has never been before, he has to cope with the cost of living which has never been as high since Confederation.

That is why, Mr. Chairman, I will try once again at this time to make representations on behalf of the small wage earner.

Nowadays, heads of families in the low income bracket are up against all kinds of difficulties; they cannot make both ends meet and every year their situation gets worse. Even if the Minister of Finance, as I said a few moments ago, announced in glowing terms a 10 per cent reduction, we find, after closer examination, that many people will not benefit by this reduction. One cannot help but think that this government has only one objective in mind: to assist people in the higher income brackets as much as possible and those in the lower income brackets as little as possible. This is not the first time, Mr. Chairman, I have risen in this house in an attempt to convince the Minister of making changes with regard to personal exemptions. The Minister would have accomplished his duty and done something for the small wage earner had he announced an increase in personal exemptions and deductions for dependants.

I should like to say once more to the Minister that, in these days, it would only be fair and reasonable for single persons to have personal exemptions of at least $1,500, while the exemption for married people should be increased to $3,000 from $2,000. In regard to dependants eligible for family allowances the exemption should be $350 at least, instead of $300. As for dependants over 16 years of age who are not in receipt of family allowances, the head of the family should be able to claim an exemption of $600 instead of $550.

A few moments ago, when I listened to the parliamentary secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Mr. Munro), I was under the impression that he intended to convince us that absolutely nothing had been done to help employees in the lower brackets before this government took office.

For his information, I will point out that when we assumed power in 1957, or at least at the beginning of 1958, we raised the personal income tax exemptions for dependants so that all large families could benefit further from deductions. I believe we thus set an example which could be followed by this government. During electoral campaigns, the Liberals are lavish with their promises; once in power, they should live up to those promises. I know that I would be out of order if I proposed the removal of the 11 per cent tax which has largely contributed to increase the living costs. I shall therefore abstain from pursuing the subject.

There is another field where the minister could do something to help those who really need help. This involves increasing immediately the old age pension from $75 to $100 monthly for all Canadian citizens age 65 or over.

When the minister dealt with this question some time ago, he announced that pensioners would receive $75 at age 65, but they will have to wait at least four years more. Mr. Chairman, you know that when one reaches the age of 65, one has much less years to live than one has lived. Therefore, chances are that even though the minister's promise may be attractive for our older citizens, the latter will not, in the final analysis, be able to take advantage of the generosity shown by the minister when he announced this change in old age pensions.

Now that the Minister is in his seat, I should like to ask him once again to take my suggestions into consideration, so that something be done for those who are truly in need. It is not to those who earn a salary of $15,000 and more that a $600 exemption should be granted, but rather to those who need it the most, the small wage earners whose family responsibilities are greater and more onerous. I will not speak further. I simply urge the Minister to bring his immediate attention to those who need it most.

[English]

Mr. Barnett: I should like first of all to make a brief reference to the general subject which was dealt with a short time ago by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare and earlier by my hon. friend from Port Arthur. I will make no attempt to join the Parliamentary Secretary in psychoanalyzing, as it were, the position taken by the Leader of the Opposition but I should like to say something in connection with the questions raised by the hon. Member for Port Arthur—I noticed that the Parliamentary Secretary carefully skirted around them in the course of his remarks about the freedom of the press. I am referring to the proposal which will allow certain editions of Time magazine and Reader's Digest to continue as wholly Canadian publications.

My hon. friend made the suggestion—and I think it is a reasonable one—that this is a question which should be submitted to a free vote by Members of the House of Commons. Despite the fact that this has been brought forward as a budgetary proposal because of the mechanics involved, I do not believe this is really a budgetary matter. I think the Minister of Finance would agree that this is not primarily designed to affect the balance of ways and means; it is a matter which concerns our outlook as Canadians on our culture and its development, and the provision which should be made for the dissemination of such things. While I have made no particular effort to discuss this matter with private Members on the other side of the House I strongly suspect a great many of them are not happy about the present proposal. Indeed, I would be very surprised if the Minister of Finance himself were very happy with this situation. The remarks made by the hon. Member for Port Arthur this afternoon remind me of a situation in which I found myself a number of years ago when a proposal dealing with this subject was brought forward by a former Minister of Finance, Mr. Walter Harris. As one of the Members of this House representing the then four parties in the Chamber I was invited to take part in a panel discussion in a posh Laurentian resort before a convention of advertising executives. I found myself in the unusual position of being the only person there prepared to support the position taken by the Minister of Finance of that day. The representative of the Liberal party in our group came from a Montreal constituency, I believe. When he rose to speak he announced that this was one of the occasions when he would be bound to disagree with the Government he normally supported. If an arrangement could be made to have a free vote I suspect that a good many of the Government's present supporters might indicate they were not happy with this perpetuation of what is, to me, an unhappy situation. We are not dealing with the true facts of the situation when we regard magazines which are, basically, produced in another country as being Canadian.

I do not believe anyone here would suggest there should be any limitation on the flow of publications into Canada from other countries. I think all of us are in favour of a free exchange of ideas in the international field. But we have a responsibility in this Parliament to deal with a situation where certain publications are able to bring out publications masquerading as Canadian though in reality they are not.

• (7:40 p.m.)

Reference was made in the budget proposals of the Minister of Finance to the matter of providing the opportunity for considering as an expense, if I understand it rightly, expenditures that are made to eliminate or prevent water pollution. This proposal has not been spelled out in any great detail and I suppose this may have been because the Minister regards it as one of the incidental features of his budget. However, as far as I am concerned, I consider this to be one of the more significant suggestions the Minister has made.

I do not know whether or not this will be an effective way of encouraging the reduction of the pollution of our rivers, lakes and other waters, but if this proposal is to be brought forward, which will allow expenditures for the reduction of water pollution as deductible expense, I should like to suggest to the Minister that when he brings this proposal forward in its final form consideration be given also to including similar expenditures as taxable expenses in the field of the reduction of air pollution. I feel these two subjects are closely linked. Protection in respect of the purity of our air is equally as important as protection in respect of the purity of our water. I should like to put forward the plea that these things be placed in the same category.

Perhaps I can attempt briefly to indicate why, among other reasons, I have a particular interest in bringing this matter forward. To illustrate my point I should like to quote from some remarks attributed to Dr. Donald Anderson of the University of British Columbia Medical Faculty, who was reported last January as having said that in the Alberni Valley area, where I live, five times as many people suffer from respiratory diseases than anywhere else in British Columbia. This comes about partly because of the particular climatic condition which prevails and partly because we have a very large industry based upon our forestry products.

This matter of air pollution has been of continuing and increasing concern to some 25,000 people who live in this valley, as it has been of increasing concern to people who live in many other parts of this continent, including such places as Vancouver and of course, across the line in the City of Los Angeles, in respect of which we hear a great deal about their notorious smog.

This matter is one about which there is still some uncertainty, and one which requires in my view a good deal of further research. I am glad to say that in a very modest way the Department of National Health and Welfare has made a grant to assist a research team operating within British Columbia to make a comparative study of this particular situation where there is this high level of respiratory disease, and to attempt to determine just how far and in what way these diseases are a result of the industrial effluence which pours out into the air.

Pressure continues to be made on industry to make greater expenditures to eliminate the pollution which even though it may not be as injurious to health as many medical authorities fear, nevertheless, remains a very unpleasant situation with which one must live. In this connection I should like to quote briefly from some remarks made by the Secretary of the Interior of the United States on this subject which appeared in an article published in Pulp and Paper of March 15, 1965. The Secretary of the Interior was referring to the continuous flood of complaints he receives about the subject of air pollution.

Mr. Udall is reported as having said:

> The stock argument that these conditions are part of the "price which must be paid for progress" will not be tolerated much longer. The avalanche of protest does not come from fanatics and crackpots —it comes from solid, informed members of the community who are not demanding the impossible. Their mounting impatience is caused by justifiable belief that too little is being done to achieve the possible.

Following that argument advanced by Secretary Udall, I believe what he has said certainly applies in this country. If the Minister of Finance is going to take budgetary measures to encourage industrialists to reduce the level of water pollution certainly it is equally important that those measures be applied in respect of air pollution.

Dr. G. H. Bonham, who is the medical director of an area health unit in the Vancouver Island region, from which I come, has been making some study of these matters and has made some public comment in this regard. He refers to the lack of proper bylaws to control pollution, but he states, and I am referring to a newspaper report which appeared in the Victoria Daily Times of November 16, 1963:

> —that industries could not be entirely blamed for not using odour and smoke control measures when "the public complacently accepts the smell of money."
> He added that good control equipment was not prohibitively expensive—

In another report of the same speech by Dr. Bonham, which was carried in the Nanaimo daily Free Press, he is reported as having said:

> We are not in complete ignorance as to how to achieve this control. Ask the Swedes!
>
> They employ chemists from the B.C. Research Council (a tax-supported body) to advise them on both the installation and operation of smoke and odour control equipment.
> Lack of knowledge is thus not the only limiting factor.

I have sat in at meetings where management of industry has complained about the high cost of increasing the level of pollution elimination, and it on those grounds that under the circumstances, if the Minister is going to move into the field of encouraging expenditure in respect of water pollution, I ask as well that he include also encouragement toward the increasing of elimination of pollution of Canadian air.

• (7:50 p.m.)

While I am on my feet I should like to make reference to one other matter, and this is a subject which has become a hardy perennial, as far as I am concerned. In fact, I believe I have raised this question in respect of every budget since I have been a Member of this House. I refer to what I consider to be a basic inequity in the Income Tax Act in respect of people whose incomes are derived from salary and wages. I raised this matter during the discussion on the last budget. The Minister of Finance may recall that support came from quite a number of Members in the House for an amendment to the Income Tax Act which would meet this problem which is faced by workers who, because of the nature of their employment, have to work and live for part of the time away from their normal place of domicile.

I must say, Mr. Chairman, as I listened to the remarks of my colleague from Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands regarding the cavalier way in which the Minister apparently went about the preparation of this budget and said "Well, I guess we can afford a little tax reduction so we will make it 10 per cent across the board, and that is that", that I could not help but agree with him that the Minister could have much more carefully considered the nature of any tax reductions that he was going to make. When he introduced his first budget I know he was criticized rather severely in some quarters of the House for having had too much help in its preparation. In this case I think he has gone to the other extreme and has had no help in the preparation of this budget. He has simply said that he will throw out the sop of tax reductions and this is the simplest way of doing it, because it will save any headaches which might be involved in studying how to approach the matter.

I listened to the Minister last night, and if I heard him correctly at that time he made some remark to the effect that he felt that if there was going to be an income tax cut it should be done in a manner which would apply equally to all Canadians in all parts of Canada. I could very well take those remarks as a text for my argument in respect to section 5 (a) of the Income Tax Act. I have attempted to be helpful to the Minister several times in proposing amendments, and if he does need any further help at this time I could refer him to Bill No. C-42, which is on the order paper in the name of my colleague the hon. Member for Skeena. As a matter of fact I think I should say that the hon. Member for Skeena and I are, in effect, co-authors of this particular bill, and if I would not be in breach of the Criminal Code I might admit that we had tossed a coin to see whether this bill would go on the order paper in his name or mine. This bill sets forth what, in our view, would be a suitable amendment to the Income Tax Act, the kind of amendment which, as I mentioned to the Minister last year, I felt I was on the verge of persuading the former Minister of Finance, Walter Harris, to introduce in the session prior to the time when he ceased to be a Member of this House.

[Mr. Barnett.]

Without arguing this point any further, Mr. Chairman, I should like to place on the record of this discussion the exact proposal that I should like to see adopted, and I hope that the Minister, in the light of the very sound advice offered to him by the hon. Member for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, will reconsider the ill-considered proposal he has made for passing on something by way of an income tax reduction. I should like to see section 5 of the Income Tax Act amended by adding after subsection (2) the following subsection:

(3) Notwithstanding subsection (1), in computing the income of a taxpayer for a taxation year from an office or employment, there shall not be included

(a) expenses necessarily incurred by him for board and lodging by reason of his employment at a distance from the place where he maintains a self-contained domestic establishment;

(b) expenses incurred by him for transportation between his ordinary place of residence and his place of employment where, by reason of distance, he is required to live away from home to perform the duties of his employment; or

(c) expenses incurred by him for depreciation and replacement of tools and special equipment or clothing which are necessarily required by him in the performance of the duties of his employment.

If I may say so, Mr. Chairman, a proposal of this kind, which the Minister is well aware has been suggested by, among others, the Canadian Labour Congress in a number of its briefs to the Federal Government, would be a much better measure in the interests of the working people of Canada than the proposal which the Minister has inserted into his budget income tax resolution, I would guess as a sort of afterthought which will allow the deduction of trade union and professional society dues over and above the minimum $100 deduction. This, I suppose, is a gesture. It really does not amount to very much, but the proposal to amend section 5 of the Income Tax Act for which I have been arguing for so many years would be much more in accordance with the principle of equitable application of an income tax levy on the working people of Canada.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I had no intention of taking part in this debate, but since I read the speech delivered last night by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon), when he ventured to talk about Social Credit, I just have to say a few words about that speech which will be famous from now on.

First of all, I must say that faced with a statement such as this one, full of sophisms and dialectic errors and hardly scientific, one wonders what is the best way to answer it. Should one try to explain to the Minister of Finance such a subject, or use a humorous tone, as he did, to answer the speech he delivered yesterday?

I noticed a very great resemblance between the speech—

[English]

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order, I think my hon. friend is talking about an entirely different bill, with which we were dealing yesterday.

The Deputy Chairman: I think the point of order is well taken. The hon. Member for Lapointe is referring to a different debate and I would suggest to him that he confine his remarks to the resolution which is before the Committee.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I did not intend to speak about the bill, but only about the speech which was delivered by the hon. Minister of Finance, which is not at all the same subject.

I notice that the hon. Minister is once more deviating from his dialectical tactics and that he is attempting to put forward spurious arguments. That is why I do not intend to talk about the bill we were considering yesterday, but I would like to take advantage of this proposed resolution on the amendments to the Income Tax Act, which is a constituent and integral part of our economic system, to talk about the same economic matters with which the Minister dealt yesterday in this house. I believe that I may do so under the circumstances and that I am not straying from the subject matter.

Mr. Chairman, I see that the Minister of Finance, in the famous speech he delivered yesterday, used the same tactics as the hon. member for St. Jean-Iberville-Napierville (Mr. Dupuis) used during the last federal election.

[English]

The Deputy Chairman: I must remind the hon. Member for Lapointe that we have before us a single resolution, and his remarks must fall within the terms of that resolution.

• (8:00 p.m.)

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, a while ago, I heard another member talk about water pollution. In my opinion, that had no more to do with the item now before us than a few comments I was about to make on a mere speech made by the Minister of Finance. That is why I am surprised to see that, even before I started, you called me to order. I feel that my remarks will apply perfectly to the resolution we are now discussing.

As I was saying, the Minister of Finance used the same arguments used during the 1963 election campaign by the hon. member for St. Jean-Iberville-Napierville, who always referred to inflation when talking about Social Credit.

The Minister of Finance, once again, spoke of inflation. He brought up the same arguments that the hon. member for St. Jean-Iberville-Napierville used. But in the resolution now under consideration, there is something which we find much more interesting: the personal income tax is to be reduced by an amount equal to 10 per cent of the basic tax.

Well, Mr. Chairman, in the speech made by the Minister of Finance, I read this sentence which is directly related to what I have just said.

I would now like to comment as briefly as possible on the matter of the interest on the public debt and see if it represents such a burden or a loss of purchasing power, as claimed by some hon. members.

The minister added:

It is true that the interest on the public debt represents an expenditure for the government.

[English]

Mr. Gordon: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, with great respect may I say that I think the House has given the hon. Member for Lapointe many opportunities to expound his theories. It seems to me we have rules that some of us try to live up to and that the same rules should apply to the hon. Member. There is nothing in the resolution before the House that has anything to do with anything that the hon. Member has said so far. With great respect, Mr. Chairman, I would hope you would keep him in order.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: On the point of order, Mr. Chairman, I should like to point out that the Minister of Finance seems annoyed, because we are challenging one of his speeches.

I would also point out that he took advantage of the fact that he was the last speaker yesterday, to conclude the debate, when nobody could answer him. I say that when a Minister of Finance speaks when he knows that nobody can answer as he did yesterday, shows that he is afraid to put his ideas forward.

[English]

The Deputy Chairman: Order. I should like to point out to the hon. Member for Lapointe again that he is referring to a speech made during a separate debate. I do not think there is anything in the terms of the resolution before the House that provides him with an opportunity to make any reply. Again I must ask the hon. Member to co-operate with the Chair and to confine the remarks he is making so they can be included within the limits of the resolution before the Committee.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I submit to your ruling, but I still think the Minister of Finance is wary of discussion and that he only ventures into a discussion when he is sure nobody can answer him back. It shows a lack of courage of one's own convictions.

[English]

The Deputy Chairman: Order. Three times I have asked the hon. Member to confine himself to the terms of the resolution. I wish he would do so now.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Chairman, I shall abide by your ruling. I know that the Minister of Finance is much relieved because he is afraid of discussion.

Under section 1 of the resolution under consideration and which I quoted earlier, the income tax is reduced by an amount equal to the lesser of 10 per cent of basic tax or $600.

For the low wage earners—but we know that the Minister of Finance is not interested in them—this will mean practically no reduction at all, because it only adds up—and the Minister of Finance gave us the figures himself—to a few dollars for those earning less than $4,000 or $4,500. This 10 per cent reduction will represent a fairly large amount only for those who are in receipt of higher salaries, that is, those who the Minister of Finance has to protect in the house at the expense of the common people, the low income groups. The Minister of Finance agrees to advocate their theory since he defends them so well and reduces their tax by 10 per cent, a cut which does not apply to the small wage earners.

In my opinion, paragraph 1 of this resolution should be changed and an income tax exemption should be granted mainly to those with inadequate salaries. For instance, we have been suggesting for a long time—and this would not cause the inflation about which the Minister of Finance talks through his hat—to raise the basic tax exemptions to $1,500 for single people and $3,000 for married people. That would at least enable small wage earners to keep the little they have instead of giving it back to the Minister of Finance to allow him to repay the interest on the public debt.

I agree with the Minister of Finance that the interest on the public debt does not impoverish the little man—that is what he said in his speech yesterday. But it remains that out of the income tax collected on the salaries of small and big earners alike, $1.1 billion is used to pay the interest on the national debt.

The Minister of Finance is ready to fight for such a system. As for us, Mr. Chairman, we submit that tax exemptions should be raised to $3,000 for married people and $1,500 for single people.

Mr. Chairman, those are the only remarks I wanted to make at this stage of the resolution.

I would have liked—as I said earlier—to talk a little about the heretical views of the Minister of Finance on the monetary system. Although he knows nothing about the present monetary system, he prefers not to hear the truth and to hold discussions during which he is the only one to speak so that his remarks go unchallenged. Therefore, I leave him to his ignorance.

[English]

Mr. Flemming (Victoria-Carleton): Mr. Chairman, I wish to take advantage of the opportunity presented by this resolution to bring to the attention of the Minister an omission which I feel he will be glad to correct at the earliest possible moment. In the Minister's budget speech and under the heading of "Accelerated Capital Cost Allowance" he makes reference, as found on page 436 of Hansard, very properly, I think, to the fact that he wishes to make some special allowance for facilities for the storage of grain. He takes note of the fact that storage facilities are needed for corn production in parts of Ontario, refers to changes in harvesting techniques and goes on to say that transportation and grain handling facilities should go hand in hand.

• (8:10 p.m.)

Now, the matter I want to bring to the attention of the Minister relates to the question of storage facilities for root crops. This is of particular importance to the constituency which I have the honour to represent since part of western New Brunswick, particularly the counties of Victoria and Carleton, are large potato growing areas. In this day when chemical fertilizers are used substantially, the crop per acre is very large. This brings to mind the fact that the planting of the crop and then the harvesting of it is a major operation. The marketing of the crop cannot be carried out unless there are adequate storage facilities. Obviously in the autumn of the year a full year's production has to be harvested and these potatoes must be taken care of for the full year in order that they may be marketed in an orderly fashion. They have to be protected from the frost during the winter and from excessive heat in the spring and early summer, so there will always be a supply of potatoes available for the market.

The Chairman: Order, please; I regret that I have to interrupt the hon. Member at this moment, but the Chair would like to have a little more quiet in the committee. There are conversations on both sides of the curtain which make it difficult for the Chair to follow the hon. Member.

Mr. Flemming (Victoria-Carleton): Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I hope hon. Members take due notice of your admonition.

The point I was trying to bring to the attention of the Minister was the need for including in these income tax regulations the same sort of consideration for refrigerated storages for the potato crop of New Brunswick as is envisaged for the grain growing parts of Ontario and Western Canada. I believe this question of orderly marketing is most important. The matter of the potato crop itself is very important to that part of New Brunswick which I represent. It is necessary, if people are to be able to conduct orderly marketing, to have access to markets not only in Canada but also in the United States and South American countries. This question of refrigerated storage then becomes most important.

It is with these facts in mind, Mr. Chairman, that I make these brief remarks. I request the Minister to take notice of these facts when he finally brings his bill before the House. I hope he will make provision for accelerated depreciation facilities for the storage of the potato crop and root crops in general, and I hope this problem will be recognized and dealt with in a satisfactory way.

Mr. Mackasey: Mr. Chairman, in keeping with the new rules of the House and the desire for Members to be brief, I certainly do not intend to talk at any great length this evening. My participation in the debate at the moment is motivated primarily by the subject to which the hon. Member for Port Arthur referred, namely, the proposed legislation on periodicals. I was intrigued by the number of speakers participating in this debate who have expressed the opinion that probably the Minister of Finance was unhappy at having to sponsor the proposed legislation on periodicals. I feel this is a tribute to the Minister because I think it is realized, and this probably prompted these observations, that the Minister of Finance has shown a degree of Canadianism that most of us feel is important at this crucial time in the history of Canada.

I believe it is no secret to most Members of this House that the Minister of Finance certainly comes from a background with which I am not too familiar. I believe that by my standards, and the standards of my community, the Minister is amongst those privileged Canadians who are not necessarily waiting for the next pay cheque. Because he is a typical example of big business in so far as success is concerned, I think his concern about the Canadian identity is much more refreshing. Certainly some of the legislation proposed by the Minister was hardly the type of legislation that would necessarily endear him to the closely knit financial community with which he was so closely associated before he became a Member of the House of Commons. I agree with those who sense that the Minister is not too happy with the proposed legislation.

I cannot help but remember my participation in the debate just a year ago. At that time the hon. Member for Edmonton West reminded me that probably I would eat some of the words I uttered at that time. I shall refer in a minute or two to those words. I believe one of the tragedies of Canada, as we approach our centennial, has been our inability to act and believe as Canadians. I believe that we owe much to the Province of Quebec and French speaking Canadians. They cannot take the lazy way out as we English speaking Canadians do, when we rely heavily on the periodicals, publications and television programs from our friends to the south. French speaking Canada has had to foster, support and cultivate its own mediums of culture. When we English speaking Canadians cease to fear French Canadian domination in their own province, we will all benefit from the fact that in Quebec we have some distinction from the culture of the rest of America.

There are four fields of communication, Mr. Chairman, radio, television, newspapers and periodicals which have a very definite bearing on the cultural future of Canada and perhaps of Canada as a nation. A year ago, I did express an opinion in the House which I am glad to repeat, and which can be found at page 2122 of Hansard. I said at the time that I felt very strongly that Reader's Digest and Time magazine were American publications, have always been American publications and fully intend to remain American publications. I went on to say that it was my strong view that so far as the editorial content of a magazine was concerned, the nationality of the people who wrote the editorial should be the criterion of whether or not the magazine was Canadian or American.

• (8:20 p.m.)

In the year that has elapsed I have not changed my opinion. Reader's Digest and Time magazine are American periodicals. I have not changed my desire to help promote those magazines we consider to be Canadian. Where I have differed over the year is whether or not the legislation proposed a year ago by the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon) would do anything for our Canadian magazines. Like all hon. Members I have been subjected to the lobbyists of Reader's Digest, Mr. Zimmerman and Mr. Gundy of Time magazine; but nobody, including the hon. Member for Port Arthur (Mr. Fisher) has yet convinced me that any advertising revenue released by the expulsion of Time and Reader's Digest would flow into what we call Canadian magazines.

This is the essence of my doubt a year later. If somebody could get up tonight and convince me that the elimination of Time and Reader's Digest from the Canadian scene would automatically ensure the future of Maclean's, and other Canadian magazines, I would be the first to vote for this legislation; but somehow I am afraid the problems of Canadian periodicals run a little deeper than legislation to force advertising revenue into the pockets of those magazines.

A lot of us are dissatisfied with this whole thing, but I agree with that section pertaining to newspapers. By no stretch of the imagination can the proposed legislation be interpreted as an impediment to freedom of speech or communication. We must have a free and unfettered Canadian press to write our editorials, to criticize the Government, to bring justice to the fore, to discuss the question of Viet Nam and many other contentious problems where there is dissidence and differences of opinion. There is a danger in having our newspaper editorials dictated to us from friendly sources outside our nation.

If Canada in the next century is to emerge as a nation we must in many ways depend on the strength of our communications in the mass media field. If I am dissatisfied with the proposed legislation it is because it does nothing, absolutely nothing, to divert advertising dollars from those radio and television stations that permeate the perimeter of Canada just below our border in Buffalo, Plattsburg, and similar places. What is good for the goose is good for the gander, and if we are going to attack this thing in the proper manner then it is time we take a closer look at television and radio.

It is a welcome sign that the Minister's proposed legislation will at least eliminate certain abuses. After so many years of bickering Reader's Digest and Time are entitled to be told once and for all where they stand. While I am not particularly concerned for either Reader's Digest or Time as a corporation I am concerned for the employees who work for them, who worry about the future, who would like to know what the future is, if anything, who would like to know whether they are wasting their time away or whether they are living on borrowed time.

By our Canadian standards of fair play we owe some explanation or decision to these people, these employees and other people affected by the industry, so that they may know where they stand. If we intend to run Reader's Digest and Time out of the country, then let us do so, but let us not leave them in a state of abeyance so that their employees and people affected indirectly suffer unpleasantly about their economic future.

In conclusion I would like to reiterate my admiration for the Minister of Finance for being willing to sponsor not only this type of legislation, imperfect as I think it is, but for his willingness to push the Canada Development Corporation, and his willingness to try to establish a Canadian identity in our business. It is refreshing, as I mentioned earlier; and each time the Minister of Finance takes a step in this direction he arouses the animosity of those who were, not his playmates but certainly his business associates for many years. I think the Minister of Finance meets the criteria of a good Canadian, but I think the time has come for us to stop living in the mistaken belief that the simple expediency of punishing Reader's Digest and Time will automatically alleviate the problems of Canadian publications.

Mr. Patterson: When the Minister made his introductory remarks he said the Government was awaiting the report of the Committee on Taxation before making any substantial changes in the tax structure. For years Members of this party have advocated a thorough revision of the whole tax structure, which at present has got to the stage that it is almost impossible to analyse it and find out just what is involved. As time goes on, rather than being simplified it becomes more complex and confusing. When the tax committee makes its report I hope it will make definite recommendations which the Minister will be prepared to implement in order to relieve the tax burden on the Canadian people.

At page 10 of the Report of the Royal Commission on Banking and Commerce we find these words:

> We also believe that Canadians want the basic freedom to arrange their financial transactions with a minimum of interference, and have approached our task in this light.

This is a very significant statement because, with the passage of time, Canadians are finding it much more difficult to arrange their own financial transactions. The Government is moving in in every conceivable way, until it seems the taxpayer is hemmed in on every side. The handling of his financial transactions is taken out of his own hands by the Government, under the implied idea that the Government can handle a person's financial transactions better than he can himself.

When this commission reports I hope it will make substantial recommendations with a view to alleviating the burden on the Canadian people as a whole.

• (8:30 p.m.)

I would like to refer briefly to the 10 per cent tax cut which has been played up as something significant to the economy. It may be an indication that the Government is reversing its position and is moving toward a reduction of taxes. If it is establishing a trend, I think it is worth while, but if this is not the case I do not think it is significant in the over-all picture, bearing in mind that no tax relief is being given to those in the low income brackets. I believe there are other ways in which the Minister could have cut taxes—ways which would have been of greater benefit to the Canadian people. For instance, I believe many Members of this House thought a higher basic exemption would have contributed more than this 10 per cent reduction.

Some time ago the newspapers published an insinuation that we in the Social Credit Party had voted against the raising of the basic exemption for income tax purposes. I wish to state clearly and definitely tonight that the Social Credit Members in this House did nothing of the kind. There was a want of confidence motion brought before this Chamber criticizing the Government for not increasing the basic exemption. It is true we voted against that motion. There was nothing positive about it. Had it carried we would still not have had higher basic exemptions. We therefore took the position that it was not worthy of support. But we have consistently supported the principle that there should be higher basic exemptions. When the figure of $1,000 was established many years ago in respect of a single person it was based on the assumption that in order to secure the necessities of life a basic exemption of $1,000 was required. If this were true so many years ago, how much more true is it that a much higher sum is required today when we are faced with constant increases in the cost of living and a decline in the purchasing power of the dollar.

There are two or three other changes I should like to have seen made in this resolution. I should have liked these proposals to have included a provision that all property taxes be deductible for income tax purposes. I read an article some time ago to the effect that the Progressive Conservative Party intended to make this one of the planks in its election platform. We are not surprised. It would not be the first time that they have taken planks out of our platform and used them. This is something we have advocated for a number of years. In fact I have a document here which was put out a long time ago by the Social Credit Association of Canada and on page 16 we read: "Full property taxes should be an allowable deduction for income tax purposes".

I have an article here from the Ottawa Citizen of May 20, 1965. I will read part of it. It says:

> A resolution asking for some relief from personal income tax for homeowners was approved Wednesday by the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities.
> The mayors agreed at their annual meeting that the money paid out in municipal taxes should not be subject to further taxation and should be a deductible item on the income tax form.

Once again I am happy that Social Credit is right in line with popular proposals. I believe the Minister of Finance should take cognizance of this recommendation and have it included in the resolution, and in the bill which is to follow.

I do not expect it will have any practical result but I believe it does not hurt to reiterate some of these things. If the Minister of Finance wanted to find a way of helping the economy he could have done so by rescinding the legislation with regard to the taxes on building materials and production machinery. The Minister has insisted down through the months that this action was necessary and justified, but I suggest that in the over-all picture the rescinding of these taxes would have provided a tremendous boost to the economy.

Clause 10 of the resolution has to do with income tax allowances in respect of clearing land or laying tile drainage for the purpose of carrying on a farm business. This is a commendable provision. Possibly it will have a decided impact on the economy of various communities, especially in areas where it is necessary to do a great deal of land clearing and levelling in order to make farming profitable. We express appreciation to the Minister for this proposal at least.

I do not intend to take any further time dealing with this measure but we trust that the day is not too distant when the Minister of Finance, basing his considerations on the report of the Royal Commission, will work out some way of bringing to the people of Canada adequate and effective relief from the burden of taxation which is now becoming intolerable.

Mr. Herridge: First, may I say that while we differ from the Minister strongly on certain questions relating to taxation, all of us in this group look upon him as one of the nicest men who ever undertook legally to pick a Canadian pocket.

We presume this is a stopgap budget, a mark-time budget, as it were. As the Minister has mentioned, the Government is awaiting a report from the Royal Commission on Taxation. I hope that when we get this report it will provide an opportunity for us to lay a sound and equitable tax base in Canada. Positions with regard to Federal and Provincial taxation are changing. I do hope that as a result of this report the Provinces and the Federal Government will have an opportunity to develop a logical tax structure in which fields of taxation and responsibility are clearly defined.

• (8:40 p.m.)

There is great concern among many people of this country about United States ownership and control of our resources and our industries, as well as concern about borrowings from the United States particularly by municipalities for the development of social projects in Canada. In that connection I should like to read an extract from a pamphlet sent to me by some students in Montreal. It is entitled "Identity". I have talked with a number of students in universities throughout this country and I have been very pleased to discover that there are large and increasing numbers of young people who are interested in the type of society we are developing under the present circumstances.

I feel that the following statement is rather good:

> Again, if we desire an equalitarian society in Canada then we must have ownership and control of our economy. It is simply impossible to create a country with full medicare, full pensions, free education for everyone, full employment with a high degree of cultural leisure life, while the wealth we create fills the coffers of another country and our resources are utilized for that country's benefit.

In that connection all of us in this group wish the Minister every success in all he undertakes to restore Canadian ownership in those fields I mentioned previously.

It is my intention now to make a few observations in respect of exemptions. From my own personal experience I believe there are some valid reasons for suggesting that the exemption of expenses in respect of travellers and others entertaining in connection with business is sometimes overdone. I have actually been present when commercial travellers have phoned to points 100 miles from where they were taking orders, who in turn put in expenses as though they had travelled to the point to get the order in question. More attention should be paid in respect of these business expenses.

Recently I was in Montreal and received information to the effect that there are golf clubs there with membership fees of $5,000 per year. I was told by one of the members that the membership fee is deductible for income tax purposes because this was considered as a form of entertainment for customers and clients. This is another aspect of this question of deductible expenses that should be looked into very carefully.

One other matter I wish to mention, which has irritated me considerably because I am strongly opposed to this form of exemption, is the matter of exemptions allowed to the organization known as the Moral Re-Armament organization. I know that when I talk about this subject I tread on the toes of some very sincere and honest people, but I have gone into this question very thoroughly and I know of what I speak. I may say that I was told once by a former member of the Cabinet that in his opinion he considered this a most sinister organization.

This organization receives very large exemptions on the grounds that it is a religious and charitable organization. It carries on very expensive advertising in daily newspapers in Canada. It publishes books, and has other large expenses of a similar nature. When I asked a question in this vein I was told by the Minister that the reason for these exemptions was based on the fact that this organization is considered to be a religious, charitable body. Anyone who examines the records in the Companies Branch of the Department of Secretary of State will find some very interesting information—information that caused a Cabinet minister some years ago to say that he agreed with my standpoint in this regard, because in his opinion this was a very sinister organization, organized to promote the cold war. I think if the Minister looks into this matter he will find that the largest contributions to this organization are made by large segments of industry interested in defence production. This is a matter that should be investigated.

I do not intend to say anything more in this regard at this time, except that I hope these remarks will be considered by the Minister. Various trade unions in my constituency, members of political organizations to which I belong and members of other organizations, have asked me to bring this matter to the attention of the House under the appropriate item, and that is what I have done at this time, because they object to this Moral Re-Armament organization receiving large exemptions on the ground that it is a religious or charitable group. The activities of this organization warrant a much more thorough and complete investigation than has been undertaken by the Minister of National Revenue or any official of the Government to date. This investigation should also relate to the source of this organization's funds and the purposes for which they are used. I am sure that anyone who knows the truth about this organization must realize that it is not a religious organization in the accepted sense of the word, and I would ask the Minister to inform us as to the basis on which it receives these large exemptions as being a charitable organization.

While we do allow exemptions to businesses, as I have mentioned, I think in many cases this involves an abuse. We allow exemptions to organizations such as the Moral Re-Armament group while at the same time we do not allow legitimate travelling expenses of individuals like many who live in my constituency, who have to travel 30 miles every day to their places of employment. I urge the Minister to give some consideration in this regard. Some consideration should be given to the living expenses of individuals who must maintain two homes because they are employed at logging and mining camps. There are no exemptions allowed under the existing system of taxation for these extra expenses. I think circumstances of this kind warrant further consideration by the Minister.

Having made these very mild criticisms I should now like to refer to paragraph 10 of the resolution. Subparagraph (b) of this paragraph relates to landscaping of property used by the taxpayer for the purpose of gaining or producing income. I think that is a pretty wide provision and, while as a Socialist I would expect all good capitalists of any size to be able to pay for this landscaping themselves, because of my love for beauty in all its forms, whether natural or otherwise, I would agree with this exemption with a certain amount of reservation.

Subparagraph (c) reads:

> for clearing land or laying tile drainage for the purpose of carrying on a farming business,

I must say that I was very pleased indeed that the Minister included that exemption in his budget resolution. For 15 years I have risen in this House and argued that the farmer who brought land into production by clearing, by draining or by irrigation should be allowed the same exemption allowed to the owners of mines, or gas or oil wells. I am very pleased indeed that the Minister has included this exemption, and I know that the agricultural organizations in my constituency as well as the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, the Farmers Union and all those interested in developing agriculture and increasing production, will welcome this exemption, which is actually only the granting of that justice to the agricultural industry which has been denied for so many years.

I should now like to refer to subclause (d) which reads—

> —as or on account of the cost of making representations to a government, municipality or other public authority in connection with a business carried on by the taxpayer, including representations for the purpose of obtaining a licence, permit, franchise, or trade mark,

I support this exemption in principle, but I envisage the risk, if it is not carefully policed, that there will be abuses. I think individuals who come here as delegates representing various organizations should be allowed to deduct their legitimate expenses. In respect to those who incur expenses in making representation, I should like the Minister to inform me whether it would be possible for a Member of Parliament who is a lawyer, to make representations to the Government on behalf of a client, the charges for which would be exempted as income of that client under the provisions of this subsection. I am going to make a speech on this question a little later on a much broader scale. But while the principle that it will benefit agricultural organizations, trade unions, business organizations and others with a legitimate expense incurred in presenting their views to the Government is correct, there is the possibility of this principle being abused, if it is not carefully policed. Knowing that others wish to say a few words on this resolution I will bring my remarks to an end at this point, but I may take an opportunity at a later date to add a few brief words.

• (8:50 p.m.)

Mr. More: Mr. Chairman, in entering this debate it is not my purpose to hold up a decision on these resolutions, nor to repeat anything which has already been said. However, the last speaker raised a point about a certain organization, which I felt should not be allowed to go on the record unchallenged. I do not belong to this organization, nor do I hold any particular brief for it. I am referring to the remarks made by the last speaker about Moral Re-Armament.

He made certain allegations which would seem to disclose to this committee that in some way he obtained information from the Department of National Revenue about the source of income of this organization. As I understand the Act the Department is not at liberty to disclose anyone's personal business in connection with donations that he may make, or that any company may make which are legitimate within the laws of the land. I challenge the hon. Member to produce evidence that what he stated—namely, that this organization is supported by munitions manufacturers and others—is indeed the fact.

Although I said, Mr. Chairman, that I was not connected in any way with this organization, I have had the opportunity to visit abroad various symposiums they have held and to meet and discuss problems with people from many countries of the world who have attended them. Although they still remain an enigma to me in many respects, and although for certain reasons I cannot directly join or support them, I still came away from these symposiums which I was privileged to attend with the feeling that this meeting together, and the influence the meetings had on the peoples from newly emerging countries, and others, were for the good.

I know that the hon. Member for Kootenay West and other Members of his group think that everyone should lie down and let Communism have full sway in this world; that it is not right to stand up and protect those things in which you believe. They say that we are the culprits in the cold war and that the other side is completely free from any blame. I do not accept this. The attack which the hon. Member just made on Moral Re-Armament, which I suggest is made without evidence, is similar to attacks which his group has been making on the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Therefore I use this opportunity to bring this matter up, because I have not had a chance before to refer to these continuing attacks upon an organization which is without peer in the world. It is an organization which is almost completely unblemished. These attacks are bad for the country, and certainly do not help the morale of those in the organization, and their ability to do the job needed to be done in this country. In these attacks which are continually made, only one side of the story is given, and I am surprised that the Government and those responsible on that side of the House have not more vigorously refuted these allegations and stood up for this great organization.

Having said that, I want to refer to what I think is an omission in the resolutions now before the committee. Many exemptions are made and, for certain groups of people, have been enlarged in some respects. I believe the Minister and former Ministers have had representations from a group of people who are not what I would call large wage earners in our society. This group of people are engaged in an industry which gives very little scope for individuals with their qualifications to operate, which means they cannot classify themselves as businessmen and make the deductions which a private business operation is able to make. I am referring to the mechanics who work in the motor trades.

The fact is that most of the qualified mechanics who work in the motor trades are hired at an hourly wage. To meet the requirements of the job they are required to provide their own tools. In this day of modern automobiles these tools have become very sophisticated and expensive. Sometimes they become broken and sometimes lost. Yet these people are denied by the Government in our tax structure any consideration by way of deductions either for replacement of tools or depreciation, and I think this is a real oversight. I should like the Minister to confirm that these people have made representations to him in this regard.

I recall that not long ago the logging industry received some consideration in respect of power tools used on the job. If this is the case, then I would suggest that these mechanics, who work in a very competitive market and who do not, in my estimation, receive too large a wage for the knowledge and skills they have to acquire, should also receive consideration. I say to the Minister that if it is too late to do anything about it now, I would appreciate some assurance that these people will receive consideration the next time around.

Mr. Fisher: Mr. Chairman, as someone on the Opposition side may I say I appreciate the work which has been carried on by the Whip or his assistant on the Government side in arranging for a substantial number of Government Members to be in the Chamber since eight o'clock. Before I move an amendment I want to refer to one item in the resolution which has already been touched on by my colleague from Kootenay West, and that is paragraph 10 (d) which relates to the cost of making representations to the government being a deductible expense.

I think it is about time we had some kind of legislation relating to lobbies and the cost of lobbying. I think the Minister should tell us whether it is envisaged that a group like Dominion Brewers, who maintain an office here and present reports at various times to the Government in connection with their operations, would qualify under this particular item. As I think everyone knows, lobbying on the federal scene is proliferating. I am not one of those who think it is something terrible, but it does seem to me that this particular item opens up all kinds of opportunities for underwriting the cost of lobbying. Therefore I think the Minister could tell us more about what is envisaged in paragraph 10 (d).

In connection with the Minister's remarks on budget night I want to draw his attention to a point which he made when he brought in the question of newspapers. He intended, or someone in the Government intended, to review the postal subsidy which, in effect, Time and Reader's Digest receive. All of us remember that last session the Postmaster General, the present Minister of Citizenship and Immigration, brought in a resolution to change the postal rate structure. As I remember that particular resolution it was not brought to fruition. A number of Members were against it, and one of the reasons was that which the Minister touched on, namely that we have no real idea of the scope and future prospects of the postal subsidy which certain publications in Canada have at the present time.

• (9:00 p.m.)

Since the Minister went to the trouble to refer to this in introducing the particular part of the legislation dealing with newspapers and periodicals, I think he or the Postmaster General is required by rules of fairness to tell us more of what is in the Government's mind. What does the Post Office Department know? I know the hon. Member for York-Humber was planning to speak on this matter, and he is one of the Canadian authorities on the question of postal subsidies and postal rates for newspapers and periodicals. From previous presentations he has made, I remember it is very clear that American periodicals coming into this country and the Canadian editions of Time and Reader's Digest have an effective subsidy that is not balanced in any effective way by any similar right that Canadian publications enjoy in the United States, because of a difference in the scale and the extent of publishing.

It seems to me it is not quite fair of the Minister of Finance to suggest that there may be some kind of adjustment here, when he is bringing in this resolution, that effectively naturalizes Time and Reader's Digest. I intend to move an amendment right after reading a letter I have received from the Weekend Magazine group, the group I referred to before as the main group lobbying against Time and Reader's Digest having Canadian status. I received this letter on May 4, 1965. It is signed by Mr. Mark Farrell, managing director of Weekend Magazine. He says in his letter:

> For the first time, we are close in this country to an effective answer to the problems of Canadian publications. The policy on Canadian ownership announced in the budget speech is a sensible solution to what is obviously a sensitive problem.
>
> Why, then, does the Government destroy the logic of its position by making an exception of Time and Reader's Digest? We might as well attempt to fight an outbreak of typhoid fever by making an exception of Typhoid Mary.
>
> By granting these two foreign magazines special privileges the Government has cut the heart out of its own periodical policy. The facts about Time and Reader's Digest are well known. Both are American owned and American controlled. Both serve not Canadian interests but American interests. Neither in the true sense of the world. is published in this country; they are only manufactured here. Both are dumping operations. Both have a minimum of Canadian investment.
>
> Not only are they unfair and ruinous competition, but they cost Canada millions of dollars each year. We pay them between one and one and a half million dollars in postal subsidies each year. We bonus them to the tune of more than $200,000 by exemptions from sales tax. We give them lower postal rates than many Canadian publications. We hand them, and propose to continue doing so forever, wholly unearned profits adjustable at will by their parents in New York.
> Why? Justice certainly has nothing to do with it. The presence in a community of a social wrong has never justified its continued existence: Freedom of the press is not involved. Time and the Digest would be as free to circulate in this country as every other foreign magazine.
> Whatever the reason, it is time we faced up to it. If a pair of foreign magazines can claw a place for themselves in this country in defiance of our own interests, we might as well give up. But why should we allow them to do so? As a Member of Parliament, the solution lies in your hands.

He is appealing to Members of Parliament. I am going to move an amendment to strike out all of subsection 2 in the proposed new section 12A found in paragraph 19 of the resolution. I move:

> That the resolution be amended by deleting therefrom subsection 2 of the proposed new section 12A of the Income Tax Act as set out in paragraph 19 of the said resolution.

Before you put the amendment, Mr. Chairman, I should like to anticipate the objection that this amendment will disturb the balance of Ways and Means. Neither I nor the Minister of Finance can really give the answer or comment on that point. What the amendment does is to remove effectively the provision which gives an exemption to Time and Reader's Digest. I am quite prepared to acknowledge that it may affect the two foreign owned newspapers to which the Minister referred either in his budget speech or last night, and it may affect a paper in the constituency of the hon. Member for Red Deer, the Red Deer Advocate. But I suggest that if the amendment is put and accepted by the House it will be very simple for the Government to make an adjustment to subsection 5, dealing with the definition of what is a Canadian issue and a Canadian newspaper or periodical in order to take account of this particular point. In other words, Mr. Chairman, this amendment deletes that part of the resolution which effectively naturalizes or Canadianizes Time and Reader's Digest for all time. I think the amendment should appeal to many supporters of the Government who I know have been concerned about this matter just as we must assume the Minister of Finance was last year.

[Mr. Fisher.]

The Chairman: Before the Chair puts the amendment proposed by the hon. Member for Port Arthur, I should say I have given this matter some thought for a few minutes and, as the hon. Member for Port Arthur himself pointed out, there is serious doubt whether the amendment is acceptable from a procedural standpoint. Perhaps hon. Members might like to offer comments on this particular point for the guidance of the Chair.

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Chairman, speaking personally, while I am not unsympathetic to the general objectives put forward by the hon. Member for Port Arthur on this occasion, I do think that to accept it would create a precedent which simply could not be accepted by any Government. As you intimated, Mr. Chairman, the hon. Member for Port Arthur himself has in effect made it quite clear that this amendment is out of order.

Mr. Fisher: Oh, no, Mr. Chairman. My point was that I did not know—

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Fisher: I am speaking to a point of order.

The Chairman: Order. Do I take it that the hon. Member is rising on a point of order?

Mr. Gordon: As I said, Mr. Chairman—

The Chairman: Order please. I do not want to deprive the hon. Member for Port Arthur of the right to raise a point of order, if this is what he wants to do now.

• (9:10 p.m.)

Mr. Fisher: No, I will let it go, I just objected to that interpretation of my remarks.

Mr. Gordon: Well, I will repeat it. As I interpreted the hon. Member's remarks, and as I think the Chair certainly indicated he did, there seemed to be at least a suspicion in the mind of the hon. Member that his amendment was out of order. I may be challenged on this, but I have noticed in this House that some of those who pride themselves on their knowledge of the rules are the ones who are inclined to break the rules most often.

Mr. Scott: Thank you, Mr. School Teacher.

Mr. Gordon: I would suggest, Mr. Chairman, that this amendment is out of order because if it is interpreted narrowly, at least it does suggest that a Member of the Opposition can move an amendment which, in effect, would raise taxes or have the effect of raising tax revenues. As the hon. Member from Port Arthur suggested, the amendment certainly does raise the question of the balance of Ways and Means. His earlier suggestion that there should be a free vote on this budget proposal is quite unacceptable.

Mr. Winch: Caucus rule.

Mr. Gordon: This is a proposal which the Government has put forward after considerable thought, and the Government—

Mr. Scott: Tell us your true views.

Mr. Gordon: —will stand by it. To do otherwise would leave any government in any parliament in an impossible position. No one would know where anybody stood on anything.

The Chairman: Order, please; is the Minister arguing the merits of the question now or the point of order?

Mr. Grégoire: You should respect the rules, too, you know.

Mr. Gordon: I do not know them as well as you do.

I think perhaps I have made it clear that this amendment is obviously out of order. If my hon. friend feels strongly about it, I suggest that when the resolution comes up for decision he will have an opportunity to vote against it. So far as the Government is concerned, the Government will stand or fall on the resolution before the House.

Mr. Fisher: In speaking to the point of order, I want to make it clear that the point I was raising with regard to the question of whether or not the amendment disturbs the balance of Ways and Means is something to which I cannot give an answer, and neither can the Minister of Finance. This is simply a deletion. I should like to put it to you that if all we can do in terms of amending a resolution of this kind is to vote against a particular clause of a resolution, then we have not any function at all. If you cannot go so far as to delete something you consider obnoxious, then we have no function.

There is more to this particular item, Mr. Chairman, than the question of taxation, and the Minister is very much aware of it. This is a way of naturalizing something by a taxation mask or device.

The Chairman: Is the hon. Member arguing the point of order?

Mr. Fisher: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I am arguing against the interpretation advanced by the Minister of Finance in his comments on the point of order. He said that, in a sense, I had expressed doubt about the procedural legality of this move.

There is one other point I want to mention. The Minister made a personal aside. I should like to make the point to him that it is the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre who takes pride in being the procedural expert, and we take pride in that too. I do not know to what other hon. Member he was referring. I never claimed to be any procedural expert.

Mr. Muir (Lisgar): You have none over there, either.

Mr. Fisher: It seems to me the point of order you must decide, Mr. Chairman, is not whether or not this amendment affects taxation revenue, whether up or down. It seems to me that cannot be determined by trying to interpret the effect of this deletion. I am arguing, Mr. Chairman, that you have to make up your mind as to whether a Member of the Opposition or any Member of the House has a right to make deletions from proposals or resolutions that come before us. I am not convinced by the arguments put forward by the Minister. I hope if you are going to decide you cannot put this particular amendment, that at least you will secure from someone on the Government side some argument a little more convincing than the one given to us by the Minister of Finance.

Mr. Knowles: Mr. Chairman, may I say just a few words on the point of order? I freely admit that it is a difficult situation in which the Committee of Ways and Means finds itself when we have a one-shot resolution with 18 or 20 parts. I also recognize the argument that private Members cannot move amendments that alter the balance of Ways and Means or appear to impose taxation. However, I should like to point out two things, and one has already been suggested, namely that we do not know whether or not the amendment will alter the balance of Ways and Means.

The other point I should like to make is that in this resolution, in paragraph 19, we have something put before us in rather unusual form. Usually income tax resolutions suggest in general language what is to be put in the actual amendments to the statutes. However, in this case there is set out in paragraph 19, not a general statement, but the precise wording that it is proposed to put in the bill that will be brought before us when this resolution passes. When we get to the bill itself, and in particular when we get into committee on the bill, we will be in a different situation. We will then have the individual clauses before us. At this point we have one resolution with 19 paragraphs. Because of a ruling that was made back in 1948, we are not allowed to vote on the individual paragraphs. When we get into Committee of the Whole on the bill itself, we will be entitled to vote on the individual sections as they come before us. If this section 12A is going to be written into the Income Tax Act as a clause in the bill, then we will be able to vote on that question by itself. As a matter of fact, when that clause is before us it is my view we will be able to move an amendment to delete any part of that clause. It strikes me it does not make sense to say at this stage that we cannot vote against a portion of what the Minister has placed before the Chamber, but that in Committee of the Whole, after second reading of the bill, we will be able to vote against a portion of what the Minister will place before us at that time. For this reason I suggest Your Honour ought to look more closely at the amendment.

• (9:20 p.m.)

The hon. Member for Port Arthur has not moved any alternative. He has not proposed any form of words of his own. What he has proposed is a means whereby we can vote for a deletion of something the Minister has proposed, something we will be able to do later on when in Committee of the Whole on the bill, and I think we ought to have the same right now just by the rule of common sense.

[Mr. Knowles.]

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Chairman, I am sure Your Honour is familiar with citation 263 (2) to which my hon. friend who has just spoken has not made any reference. It reads:

"The principle that the sanction of the Crown must be given to every grant of money drawn from the public revenue, applies equally to the taxation levied to provide that revenue. No motion can therefore be made to impose a tax, save by a Minister of the Crown—

This we all agree.

—unless such tax be in substitution, by way of equivalent, for taxation at that moment submitted to the consideration of Parliament;—

I should think this is the governing factor.

—nor can the amount of a tax proposed on behalf of the Crown be augmented, nor any alteration made in the area of imposition.

I suggest we are all familiar with attempts that have been made from time to time to eliminate a particular form of taxation. In the debate last Parliament, when an attempt was made to eliminate the excise tax on particular commodities, it was held to be outside the capacity of anyone but a Minister of the Crown to move such a motion. This clearly is a proposal for an alteration of a tax made in the area of imposition. For this reason I would submit to you, as has my colleague, the Minister of Finance, that this proposal is not within the capacity or authority of any Member to make.

The Chairman: Order. The Chair wants to express its appreciation and gratitude to hon. Members, particularly to the Secretary of State for External Affairs, for their learned contributions to the point of order raised by the Minister of Finance. In the opinion of the Chair the amendment of the hon. Member for Port Arthur, if adopted, would have the effect of increasing the burden of taxation on certain taxpayers who otherwise would be entitled to certain deductions for income tax purposes.

I believe it is well known to hon. Members that when an amendment proposes to set aside a measure designed to provide relief, that amendment in effect imposes a tax and should not be accepted by the Chair. Citation 265 (1) of Beauchesne is relevant:

No Member other than a Minister of the Crown may introduce a Bill for the reduction of duties.

In the interpretation of the Chair this would be the effect of the amendment moved by the hon. Member for Port Arthur if it were accepted by the committee. The citation further reads:

The Government must take full responsibility for the taxation levied to provide the revenue.

I also refer the hon. Member to citation 269:

No augmentation of a tax or duty asked by the Crown can be proposed to the committee, nor tax imposed, save upon the motion of a Minister of the Crown—

I am not unaware of the difficulties raised by the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre but I feel it is the duty of the Chair to be bound by the relevant citations, which in this case are 269 and 265(1) of Beauchesne. In the circumstances, with regret I cannot accept the amendment moved by the hon. Member for Port Arthur.

Mr. Fisher: I am not going to argue with your ruling, Mr. Chairman, but I am going to make the point that there is something fundamentally underhanded and sneaky about the way this particular matter has been introduced into this question, because every Member knows that this is not a question of taxation. This has nothing to do with taxes.

Some hon. Members: Order.

Mr. Fisher: This has to do with a fundamental matter in connection with two particular periodicals, something that spreads far beyond taxation. Hon. Members are shouting order. I do not know why they feel they have to substitute for you as a Chairman, but if they feel there is a point of order let them get up and say so.

The Chairman: Order please. I submit to the hon. Member that there is a point of order, that the Chair has given its interpretation of the amendment moved by the hon. Member and has ruled in the light of this interpretation. I would suggest to the hon. Member that he knows the ruling cannot be discussed.

Mr. Fisher: I accept the ruling, but these remarks are for the benefit of the Minister of Finance, who was so kind as to tell us he was generally sympathetic, personally, with the intention that I may have had in mind in moving that particular amendment.

I am speaking generally now on something that has bothered a great many people in this country, and that happens to be the persuasive influence and the views of these two particular publications within this country, and their influence upon two successive governments. This is a very bothersome matter. I think most Members who feel the way I do, do not have any particular antagonism toward Time and Reader's Digest as such, as magazines. In fact I would probably be one of the first to buy Time or Reader's Digest —Time at least—as an American edition coming into the country, such as the Saturday Review of Literature, Newsweek and magazines like that.

But this is a bogus situation. These are bogus Canadian magazines, and supporters of the Minister and the Government need to realize that what they are doing by supporting this resolution is Canadianizing bogus Canadian organizations. The point that Members who support the Government should consider, if they vote for this particular resolution, and particularly if they vote for this section of it when it is embodied in the bill, is that when they vote it will be for something introduced by a Minister of Finance who did not have the courage to come clear and clean and spell out Time and Reader's Digest.

This is a complicated resolution. It takes almost two pages in Votes and Proceedings to circle around the particular point of Time and Reader's Digest and to cover the rather simple point in connection with Canadian newspapers.

I hope other hon. Members feel what the hon. Member for Red Deer has felt, a sense of outrage that this Government and this Minister, after all the parading about Canadian nationalism, after all the talk they have given to us about being free, should stoop to this.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Fisher: I wonder whether Members realize how easy it is to get sick of a Government that has a Prime Minister going around talking about the new politics, that has a Minister like the Minister of Forestry going around telling everybody to clean up, to get with the new times, to get with the new politics. I wonder whether hon. Members realize how easy it is to get sick of a Government which has a Minister of Finance setting forth policies in his budget speech and in his introduction to the Canada Development Corporation, about Canadianism and Canadian nationalism, and then see the Government come up with a device, a measure like this.

Cabinet Ministers will not even lay it out clear in the open. They are sneaking it through without even mentioning the names. I think it is only right and proper that I, and other Members who feel strongly about this, should make the point, and make it good and clear, particularly to those supporters of the Government who, in my mind at least, had given us hope that there was a real, genuine, pervasive Canadian nationalism on that side of the House.

• (9:30 p.m.)

Mr. Gordon: After listening to those rather ill-tempered and intemperate remarks by one of the most intemperate Members of this House—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Gordon: I do not know where the hon. Member was last night but I should like to remind him that I mentioned Time and Reader's Digest by name two or three times in the statement I made on this particular clause of the resolution. I am not used to being called cowardly and I do not accept it from the hon. Member for Port Arthur.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Gordon: While we are indulging in personalities I may say I resent very keenly the scurrilous remarks which the hon. Member made about the Prime Minister of this country—

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Gordon: —and which he feels free to indulge in in his other occupation as a so-called columnist.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Fisher: That is a great answer.

Mr. Douglas: That dealt with the question all right.

Mr. Grégoire: A bad argument.

The Chairman: May we have order in the Committee?

Mr. Lambert: I am afraid the Minister of Finance may have been carried away during what I might call his somewhat childish protest, if I may be kind. When it comes to addressing a lesson to the hon. Member for Port Arthur and others regarding their comments on the conduct of the Prime Minister perhaps he would take aside his colleague the Minister of Public Works and remind him of his past sins in this regard. We remember bitterly certain remarks by that hon. gentleman—

The Chairman: Order. May I remind the hon. Member for Edmonton West, the Minister of Finance and the hon. Member for Port Arthur that it may be advisable now to abandon personal allusions and return to the subject before the Committee.

Mr. Lambert: Sometimes when things have been said with apparent freedom they may be commented upon. I was commenting upon some of the words of the Minister of Finance. In these circumstances the Chair is sometimes placed in a little difficulty but we hope that good sense comes back.

As far as the resolution itself is concerned there are certain features in it which we are prepared to accept. There are others which we are not prepared to accept. It is one of the rules of this House that when an omnibus resolution of this nature is placed before us covering the whole panorama of taxation amendments it has to be accepted or rejected as a whole, though some features are acceptable and others are not acceptable.

I will make my stand on paragraph 1 known at the appropriate time where it appears in its own context. With respect to paragraph 19, of course I object to it. Therefore it is my intention to vote against the resolution. I am not in these circumstances to be considered as objecting to paragraph 1.

Some hon. Members: Question.

The Chairman: Is the committee ready for the question?

Mr. Knowles: I think there is some misunderstanding about what you are asking, Mr. Chairman. Are you suggesting that the debate is over on the resolution, or that the discussion on the first paragraph is over?

The Chairman: The request of the Chair was to ascertain whether the committee wanted to vote on the resolution. If the committee is ready to vote on the whole resolution at this time the question will be put.

Mr. Knowles: I understood a certain amount of general discussion would be allowed and that there would then be an opportunity to discuss the separate paragraphs even though a vote would not be permitted on those paragraphs. I wanted to say something on paragraph 5. I will say it now if necessary, but I would rather do it in orderly fashion as we get down to the paragraphs.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Chairman: If it is the wish to discuss each paragraph separately that could be done as it has been done before.

Mr. Cantelon: I have some remarks to make along the lines of those made by the hon. Member for Regina City. They have to do with mechanics and the fact that no depreciation allowance is made to them with respect to the tools they own. This is a most unfair situation because the shops in which they work are allowed depreciation in respect of the tools used in those shops. We know that shop foremen are allowed depreciation in respect of the tools they own. Yet ordinary auto mechanics are not allowed to set depreciation against their income tax, though the tools they own may be worth between $700 and $1,000. Obviously they wear out and at present there is no way of recovering the loss. I would direct this matter to the attention of the Minister of Finance.

Mr. Winkler: I should like to say a few words about the first paragraph concerning the income tax exemption currently being considered and made to apply as of July 1. The Government has suggested to the people of Canada that it is greatly concerned about poverty, and anticipates declaring a so-called war on poverty.

Well, in actual fact, judging from the way this legislation goes, this appears to be a war on the poor. It is obvious that those with high incomes will receive the greatest benefit while those in the lower income brackets will be discriminated against. Considering the inflationary trends which are apparent within the country today I say that the war on poverty is working in reverse, as is apparent from paragraph 1.

• (9:40 p.m.)

Let us now consider paragraph No. 4 regarding the cancellation of the $500 tax exemption for individuals at age 65. This is another way of taking money away from those people at a time when they need it most, leaving them in a fixed income tax bracket, regardless of whether the extra income is derived from a private pension, an industrial pension or a professional pension to which the individual taxpayer had contributed.

The point I am making in this regard is, of course, an obvious one. At the same time the Government speaks of a war on poverty, by these provisions it is proposing a $600 per year benefit to individuals earning higher salaries and disregarding those people in lower income brackets. They are attempting to remove the tax exemption of $500 in respect of people age 65 and over. This will be a serious blow to those people, particularly in times of inflation, and there is an apparent trend of this kind. I think there is something wrong in the attitude of the Government in their projection of this measure, particularly when one considers that they have refused on a number of occasions a request by Members of the Opposition to have old age security increased to $100 at age 65.

When we think of the Government giving this money to people in the higher income tax brackets and disallowing it to people at age 65, and when we think of the 11 per cent sales tax imposed on building materials, we are led to believe that the people of this country are being hoodwinked in regard to taxation. I am afraid that the Members of this party will find themselves in the position of having to vote against this measure because of these irregularities in Government policy.

Mr. Moreau: Mr. Chairman, would the hon. Member care to inform the House how much the $100 pension at age 65 would cost, and how he would propose to raise that amount?

Mr. Winkler: We have gone over that ground already. I do not know what the attendance record of the hon. Member is, but had he been around often enough and listened carefully enough to the amendments put forward at the time we were discussing the Canada Pension Plan he would know precisely what I am referring to. I do not intend to go back over that debate again. He knows perfectly well that this could have been done without any increase in taxes. By putting forward the view he has now expressed I am sure that he is limiting his opportunities for re-election in his small riding.

Mr. Moreau: At least I have a riding.

Mr. Winkler: It seems that the Grits always look after their own in some way or other, and it is always the Tories who suffer when the Grits are in power.

An hon. Member: That is pretty small talk.

Mr. Winkler: That may be so, but the hon. Member for Scarborough knows very well that a Liberal is a Liberal, and that if his constituents are smart and listen to what I say his chances will be much slimmer the next time round.

Let me say in conclusion that if the Government could tell us in common sense terms that they are doing something really substantial in the war on poverty through the measure now before us, we would support it, but because we can see nothing but conflict and Liberal politics involved, we on this side of the House will have to vote against the measure.

Mr. Fisher: I should like to ask the Minister whether he could give us some more information than he has given about the amendment to the income tax regulations, in so far as pollution is concerned, that he hinted would be forthcoming. Would he also answer the question raised by the hon. Member for Comox-Alberni about air pollution, particularly in respect of the pulp and paper industry. Will there be something in the bill that will be forthcoming in this regard and, if not, what kind of information are we going to get as to the actual change in the income tax regulations that will be presented.

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Chairman, I said in the budget speech that faster write-offs would be allowed for people who spent money on anti-pollution projects. This will be dealt with in the regulations to the Income Tax Act but not in this resolution or in the bill which follows it. I am sure when the regulations have been worked out in detail—first of all they will be published in the Canada Gazette —that my colleague the Minister of National Revenue will give the appropriate explanation. In my humble opinion this is not the time for such an explanation.

Mr. Fisher: I am wondering to which item now before us the changes in the regulations would relate, and if that—

Mr. Gordon: They do not relate to any of the items.

Mr. Fisher: Mr. Chairman, will you call the items because I intend to attempt to bring this subject before the committee in relation to item No. 10.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, the hon. Member for Acadia referred to these matters relating to the regulations before the dinner hour, and to fast appreciation on farm grain storage facilities, and increased depreciation in respect of pollution projects. I should like to know why it was decided to do this by regulation rather than by direct provisions within the Act.

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Chairman, I am delighted to answer that question. Everything related to capital cost allowances, including different rates of write-offs, are provided for in the regulations and not in the Act as special items.

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, in rising at this time to speak on the resolution I wish to direct my remarks particularly to clause 12A, which is that part of the resolution having to do with the newspaper and periodical industry. In commenting on this subject I should like to emphasize that this has been my life, and if I should be rejected in any future election I shall return to this business, about which I believe I know something. The hon. Member for Port Arthur was kind when he suggested that I was an authority in this field and I thank him for that reference, but let me say that I would not make that suggestion.

The question relating to Time magazine and Reader's Digest in this country is something which has received a great deal of attention, particularly since the O'Leary report was presented in 1961. However there are other facets of the game which should be considered before precipitate action is taken whereby naturalization is granted to these two magazines which have been established in this country, at least in the case of Time magazine, for about three years, particularly when one considers that it takes five years residence in Canada for a human being to become naturalized.

The interesting thing about foreign ownership of Canadian periodicals is this. I subscribe to at least ten foreign-owned magazines printed in Great Britain and the United States of America. I read the New Republic, of the United States, as well as the New Statesman and Nation of Great Britain regularly. I subscribe to United States periodicals, British publications, and to one French paper, and I have done so for many years. Is there something the matter with my reading a foreign-owned periodical when it comes into the country openly, when anyone can read it and know its contents?

• (9:50 p.m.)

It is stated that it would be bad for Canadian newspapers to be owned by foreigners. I am not going to argue the point one way or the other. But no matter who owns the paper, does not the reader of the periodical make his own judgment as to the ideas being advanced in the periodical? I have read magazines which have been published in Germany on technical aspects of the printing trade, and I think no less of them because they are owned and printed by a firm in Germany than I would of the finest printing trade publications printed in Canada or the United States of America. The fact that a publication may be foreign-owned is certainly nothing to be held against the publication, unless one is so weak-minded that he cannot form a conclusion of his own. The idea that you should not be able to read a newspaper printed in Canada which is owned by foreign interests runs counter to the fact that you can buy books printed in Great Britain, printed in the United States, printed in Germany, printed in Australia, bring them into Canada and read them. Or are we soon to have laws which say that you cannot read books in Canada unless they have been printed in Canada? I hope we are not living in a hot-house economy in this field.

To grant naturalization to two United States-owned periodicals such as Time and Reader's Digest will be a body blow to the Canadian consumer magazine industry. At the present time those two magazines are taking from the advertising agencies and the few direct advertisers who are left, something over 54 per cent of the total amount spent on advertising in consumer magazines.

I am of an age that I can recall Canadian magazines which are no longer in business but have gone the way of all flesh, due to competition. I can remember the Canadian Courier. I remember when Saturday Night was a weekly publication. I remember when Maclean's magazine was a weekly publication. I can remember when the Montreal Standard was a great and strong publication under Lord Atholstan. Today the Montreal Standard is perpetuated in the form of Weekend, which is a gravure supplement appearing in a large number of Canadian newspapers. It is making a handsome profit on its present operation but has had to change its entire format to remain in business.

I can remember when Canadian Homes and Gardens was a separate magazine but could not meet the competition of those that the hon. Member for Port Arthur called bastard editions, if I may quote him; and if he is out of order we can both be ruled out of order. Now Canadian Homes and Gardens is a gravure supplement with the Southam chain. It is a pretty fine publication today, but it is not an independent magazine.

This question of allowing these bogus Canadian papers to continue on with the blessing of the Government has to be faced. Are we going to have a Canadian magazine industry, or are we going to have bogus publications dominating the field? The O'Leary Commission recommended that Time and Reader's Digest be taxed in a certain manner, one which would discourage advertisers from patronizing them. Senator O'Leary, who is a very much respected man in the publishing world, knows the business. At the time of the report he was President-Publisher of one of our great Canadian daily newspapers and familiar with the problems of publishing in this country. This is shown by the fact that the owners of the periodical of which he was President-Publisher and chief shareholder found it advisable to sell the publication to a much stronger organization, F. P. Publications, who are turning out the paper today.

I do not know whether or not the Members of this House favour individual ownership of newspapers as compared with chain ownership. I personally favour individual ownership. But the competition which is arising in the magazine and publishing industry in this country is such that it almost appears that no one can stand on his own feet, even in the daily newspaper field in Canada unless he has chain support.

Reference has been made during this discussion to the Thomson chain. I have a brother working for the Thomson chain. Reference was made to the McGraw-Hill trade publications. I have a brother, now a naturalized United States citizen, who has been working for McGraw-Hill publications in New York since his graduation from the University of Toronto in 1948. Reference was made to the Toronto Star Weekly by some speakers today. I have a third brother who works for the Toronto Star Weekly.

Mr. Cyr: Keeping it in the family.

Mr. Cowan: I believe that with the connections I have in the publishing field I know all the facets of it viewed from any side. In answer to the hon. Member for Gaspé I might say that I even have a daughter who is at present working for the Toronto Star.

With regard to Time and Reader's Digest this is a problem which is faced by no other nation on earth. The United States of America is a nation whose people speak the English language, read the English language and are educated in the English language. In Canada there are 19 million people whose predominant language is English. The largest portion of the population reads English and the largest portion of magazines read are published in English. It is possible for publishers in the United States to try to invade the Canadian publishing market by issuing these bogus editions and soliciting advertising in Canada which is the lifeblood of the magazines. This is done, as far as the United States is concerned, in a foreign country. You do not run into a situation where publishers in France publish editions in Spain, or where publishers in Denmark publish editions in Germany, or where publishers in Sweden publish editions in Russia, because the editorial content of the French publication is in a different language from that spoken in Spain, and so on. But here on the North American continent there is a publishing enigma which is not faced by any other two countries in the world, and so I believe a separate direct method of treatment is required to handle such a situation.

To allow the United States publications to come into Canada and solicit advertising without let or hindrance is a serious matter to Canadian publishers. We talk of the "brain drain" from Canada to the United States. I believe there are a large number of well educated and very capable people continuously emigrating to the United States, and I should like to illustrate how the term "brain drain" originated.

The Chairman: Order. It being ten o'clock, shall I rise, report progress, and request leave to sit again later this day, or at the next sitting of the House?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Progress reported.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. McNaught: Mr. Speaker, tomorrow we will continue the budget resolution. If they should be concluded we will then take up item No. 10 on today's order paper, resuming the debate on the motion of the Minister of Justice to set up a joint committee on penitentiaries, followed by item No. 21, the resolution preceding the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act, and item No. 22, the resolution preceding a bill to provide for the construction of the Canadian National Railways line at Froomfield spur near Sarnia. Then if we have time we will consider Supplementary Estimates A, relating to the Department of Labour, payments under the winter housebuilding incentive program. These estimates were tabled on May 18.

• (10:00 p.m.)

Mr. Starr: That is a longer program than the Prime Minister announced.

Mr. Lambert: On a point of information, Mr. Speaker, in what order will the budget resolutions be called? Will the Customs Act resolution or the Customs Tariff resolutions be first?

Mr. MacNaught: The Customs Act will be first.

Mr. Lambert: And then the Customs Tariff resolutions?

Mr. MacNaught: I am informed that is correct.

[Mr. Cowan.]

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

A motion to adjourn the House under Provisional Standing Order 39A deemed to have been moved.

HEALTH AND WELFARE—ETOBICOKE, ONT.—TREATMENT BY DOCTOR OF NARCOTICS ADDICT

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): Mr. Speaker, I wish tonight to raise the question of the treatment of narcotic addicts by doctors. I do so as the result of a report that appeared in a Toronto newspaper last week that a doctor in Etobicoke was being harassed by the chief of the Federal Narcotics Control Division of the Department of National Health and Welfare. An article in the Toronto Star of June 4 quotes the doctor as alleging that the chief of the Narcotics Control Division "is trying to interfere with anyone who treats narcotic addicts because he is afraid that we may show his department up".

The doctor referred to the fact that he has been treating a narcotics addict who has spent most of the last 20 years in jail for illegal possession of narcotics as well as for theft, in order that this addict may get the narcotics he required at a cost of about $100 a day. The doctor's statement has been confirmed in a letter to the Minister of National Health and Welfare (Miss LaMarsh) from the director of the Anglican Correctional Chaplaincy for the Diocese of Toronto, the Reverend S. G. West.

According to the doctor, this patient, one of a number whom the doctor has been treating, has been able to stay out of trouble to stay out of jail and to refrain from theft since he has been treated by him. The director of the Narcotics Control Division of the Department of National Health and Welfare has written to the doctor as follows:

> The Department of Health and Welfare has no desire to interfere with medicine in the treatment of drug addiction so long as it is within the concept of good medical practice.

The Government and the Department talk frequently in another context about not interfering in the doctor-patient relationship, but there we have a classic example of Canadian practice in that the treatment for drug addiction is being decided, not by the doctor, not by the medical profession but in fact by the Government, by the enforcement officers of the Department along with representatives of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

This question was discussed in a recent issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal and it was stated that it would be better and safer on the whole for doctors to stay away completely from treating addicts. What we are faced with in Canada is a policy which we do not admit exists because we have adopted the very pleasant and safe habit of ignoring all problems. The policy is that if you do not talk about these problems and sweep them under the rug people will be convinced they do not exist.

We have been following the same policy as the United States for the last 50 years in trying to deal with the problem of drug addiction. We have declared drug addiction to be a crime. We have followed the policy of believing that the crime can be eliminated or at least controlled by being ever harder, ever tougher on drug addicts, by watching them by keeping them under the closest surveillance by methods which can only be described as being part of a police state.

It is not my intention to discuss that aspect tonight. We can put the methods on the record on another occasion. This policy has been as complete a failure in Canada as has been a similar policy in the United States, in so far as reducing the number of addicts is concerned. Now, the medical profession, and this doctor in Etobicoke so far as I can find out, have been attempting to experiment with methods which have been used so successfully in Great Britain for a number of years. These methods have been described and explained in Canada by people in recent years, one of whom was Lady Franklin. I am suggesting to the Minister and to the department that they stop working so closely with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and stop following the police mentality and police methods. They should give the doctors a chance. They should give an opportunity to a few doctors in Canada who have not been harassed, who have not been browbeaten and who are not afraid to try this treatment. They should be given a chance to use medical methods of treatment. They should be given a year or two, whatever is required, so that they would be able to treat these persons as successfully as they have been treated in Great Britain. Then, we may well evolve a policy which may work, in contradistinction to the methods which we have used up until now and which have been a complete failure.

Mr. J. C. Munro (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, after the hon. Member raised this point I referred him to the position taken by the Department with respect to this Etobicoke doctor, and to the Department's feeling that any inference they were interfering with the right of a practitioner to carry on his practice was resented by them. They point out that, in the first place, the narcotics legislation was brought directly in line with the comparable British legislation as regards the right of a doctor to treat narcotics addicts and utilize narcotic drugs in such treatment. The hon. Member has just referred to the British system.

The department has been prepared to give full support to any doctor who undertakes the usually thankless task of treating drug addicts. At no time has the department sought to interfere with the doctor's efforts in this difficult area. The department added that the purpose of treatment in any medical sense is to lead to the reduction of an addict's daily drug requirements and eventually to his ability to abstain completely from reliance on drugs. They do not regard substantial increases in daily requirements as constituting treatment in any medical sense.

I suppose what drew the matter to the attention of the department in the present case was the substantial increases in the quantities of narcotics purchased by the doctor in question. He was asked for an explanation, as is provided under the authority of the legislation. When the explanation was given it became apparent that the daily requirements of the addicts under treatment were progressively increasing over a given period. In the case of one at least, the increase was six times the amount he was being given initially. This was drawn to the attention of the physician, with the suggestion that if he co-operated along the lines recommended by the Canadian Medical Association, there would be no further need to correspond, nor would any further difficulty occur. It is my understanding that the physician has agreed to do so. The physician himself has indicated that he will follow the suggestion of the Deputy Minister, Dr. Cameron and that he will work with these patients through the Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Research Foundation of Ontario. He is most happy to comply with that suggestion.

Proceedings on Adjournment Motion

• (10:10 p.m.)

ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE—REVIEW OF CRIMINAL CODE PROVISIONS RESPECTING BAIL

Mr. Reid Scott (Danforth): Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight to voice a plea for the very large number of Canadians who are grossly discriminated against and unjustifiably imprisoned when they are charged with offences and not permitted bail.

Last September 17 our Minister of Justice told me that he was preparing a review of the Criminal Code and that among the items under review would be the question of bail for those in custody. The other day, on June 14, I had thought that after nine months that would have been a sufficiently long time for him to have given birth to some new ideas in this field, and I questioned him about it. But in response to my question he informed me that the whole matter was now to be relinquished and assigned to the special committee.

My indignation was prompted by a series of articles by Martin Friedland, appearing in the Globe and Mail, in which he points out the very disturbing relationships between custody pending trial, and the outcome of the case, and the determination of the guilt, and the sentence imposed. For example he points out that 41 per cent of those in custody at trial were sent to jail as opposed to only 13 per cent of those released on bail. Some 79 per cent of those in custody received sentences of one month or more, while only 24 per cent of those allowed bail received such sentences. I have not time to go into the article more fully, but the point is that great injustice exists in Canada with respect to the whole question of bail.

When we raised this nine months ago with our Minister of Justice we thought we had a Minister of Justice who was going to take this matter seriously, who was going to speak out for the people for whom there is no voice, who was going to give some protection to these people for whom there is no one to speak. But we are fast learning that in our Minister of Justice we have a person who is long on promises and very short on performance.

He has had nine months in which to conduct his survey, to think about the rights of these accused people for whom there is no one to speak. He is the man to whom we look for guidance and leadership for these people, and from whom we have got nothing except this last promise, that the whole thing is to be swept under the rug and referred to this committee of experts.

I would have thought that at least out of some sense of humanity and justice he would have brought in some interim regulations which could be amended at a later date, but but that has not happened. These are our fellow citizens who are suffering this unjust discrimination. No doubt the Minister's apologist, the Parliamentary Secretary, will get up and fluff the whole thing off, just as the Minister has done himself.

Mr. D. S. Macdonald (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): Mr. Speaker, first I should welcome the hon. Member for Danforth back to the House. He and I had an assignment here last night on the question of parole but unfortunately he did not make it, perhaps because of the traumatic experience he has been going through as a result of the Ontario redistribution.

The hon. Member has said he is fast learning in this matter. Unfortunately he does not appear to have learned fast enough from his law school training and professional experience that the particular application of bail is a matter subject to provincial jurisdiction. Also, if he had read more closely the articles by Professor Friedland in the Globe and Mail he would have found that Professor Friedland's objection was not mainly on the question of the state of the law, but on its application; that he had pointed out that something like 94 per cent of accused in Toronto were being required to post bail rather than being made the subject of summonses, and that this latter procedure now provided in the code, was not being used by the provincial authorities, and more particularly by the police authorities in the City of Toronto.

As long ago as last January I had the opportunity of discussing with Professor Friedland the study on which he was engaged. I have arranged with him to get advance proofs of his study on bail in the Toronto area. I have also made arrangements for him to come down and talk to the officials of the Department of Justice on this important question. As Professor Friedland has pointed out, and as the hon. Member could find out if he read up on the subject with a little care, instead of trying to make a cheap political speech on this matter, the great problem is not with regard to the existing provisions of the Criminal Code or other related Federal statutes in this area, but it is with regard to their application and enforcement by the provincial authorities.

I do not think anything useful can be added by the choirboy from Brome-Missisquoi. In this regard I would point out to the hon. Member that he might read with care Professor Friedland's study when it comes out—

Mr. Grafftey: What a pompous ass!

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I would point out to the hon. Member for Brome-Missisquoi that the Parliamentary Secretary has the floor.

Mr. Grafftey: Such pomposity I have never heard.

Mr. Macdonald: Only when the hon. Member for Brome-Missisquoi is speaking.

Mr. Grafftey: All the wit in the world.

Mr. Douglas: You can leave, now. You have made your three minute speech.

An hon. Member: Come back tomorrow at ten o'clock.

HEALTH AND WELFARE—INQUIRY AS TO NATIONAL MEDICARE PROGRAM

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I put a question on medicare to the Acting Prime Minister this afternoon. When the answer struck me as being not very satisfactory I suggested that it be posted for one of these overtime periods.

My question was prompted by the interesting announcement made this day, June 15, 1965, that we are going to have colour television in Canada in 1967. This was not only an interesting announcement; I am sure it will be very popular across the country. But it occurred to me immediately that if it is possible for the Government in 1965 to announce colour television some 21 months later it ought to be possible after all the years which have been spent studying the question of health insurance or medicare to make a similar announcement with respect to the intentions of the Government of Canada on this very important subject.

My question is a very simple one, a very narrow one. I did not enter into the whole subject of health insurance and I do not intend to do so tonight. It was this: Is it not possible for the Government some time this summer to make a clear announcement that it is intended to have medicare established in Canada by 1967, which happens to be our centennial year?

The Acting Prime Minister said my question would be given consideration. If by that he meant that within the next few weeks the Government would consider the possibility of making an announcement parallel to the one which was made today, we in this corner of the House would be delighted. We are aware of the many years during which this matter has been under study, the many promises which have been made and all the election campaigns which have been conducted on this issue. Some of us are conscious of the reports which have been given us on this question—the voluminous report of a committee during the war years, for example. Then there was the Marsh report and the Green Books at the time of the Federal-Provincial Conference in 1945. There was the announcement made when we got hospital insurance that medicare, or health insurance as it was called then, was on the way. In the meantime many developments have taken place across the country. There is wide interest in the subject. Some of the provinces are now moving in a way which seems to some of us to be inadequate to meet the situation in accordance with recommendations of the kind made in the Hall report. We think it is a disservice to the people of Canada that this matter should be put off repeatedly.

The Liberals like to boast of the social legislation they have brought in during the years in which they have been in power. I suggest this is a piece of social legislation which should be put on our statute books. I ask the Government to subject itself to the discipline of making a statement as to its target date for medicare. I do not ask for a statement about the Government's interest in medicare and all it has done in the last 15 or 25 years. I simply ask that it give consideration to telling us before this House leaves for its summer recess, or, in the event that there is no recess, before this summer is over, that 1967 is the target year and that in 1967 we will get medicare. If this decision is put off again, year after year, we may have to wait a few more decades. We have waited 46 years already since the first promise of 1919. Surely that is long enough.

• (10:20 p.m.)

Television itself came in only a decade or so ago, yet now we receive an announcement that within 18 or 20 months we can expect to have colour television. I think the Government ought to accept the responsibility for making up its mind that the next social advance to be made, and this would be appropriate for the centennial year, will be a Canadian medicare plan. I would ask the Government to consider seriously the making of an announcement before this House rises for a summer recess, or before the summer is over, in the event we do not have a recess, that it has decided definitely that we will have medicare in Canada by 1967.

Mr. J. C. Munro (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the Speech from the Throne is in effect a Government announcement, or at least that is its purpose. In that speech it was stated:

> My government believes that public policy should be directed to improving the quality of health services and to ensuring that all Canadians can obtain needed health care, irrespective of their ability to pay. Accordingly my government will at an early date meet with the governments of the provinces in order to discuss with them the way in which federal and provincial action can most effectively contribute to programs that will provide health services to Canadians on a comprehensive basis.

As the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre already knows, a Dominion-Provincial Conference is to be held on June 19, and medicare is one of the items on that agenda. The Government has set out the principles it advocates in respect of medicare, and that it should be designed on a universal basis irrespective of the ability to pay. That is certainly an essential element of the recommendation contained in the Hall Commission report. The hon. Member also knows that the establishment of any medicare program requires the co-operation of the provinces, in view of the fact they have paramount jurisdiction in this field. Before any commitment as to a precise date can be made, discussions with the provincial authorities obtaining their feelings on the matter will have to take place. For those reasons it is impossible to predict the precise date of the adoption of a medicare plan.

The hon. Member suggests that such a plan should be put into effect by 1967. If we can obtain the agreement of the provinces so that the whole plan can be worked out in detail, with the implementation of certain of the Hall Commission recommendations, perhaps it can be implemented before that date. Surely the time factor must depend on successful conferences with the provinces, for the reasons I have suggested.

Motion agreed to and the House adjourned at 10.23 p.m.

The House met at 2.30 p.m.

DOMINION-PROVINCIAL RELATIONS

QUEBEC—ADDRESS TO HER MAJESTY RESPECTING PROVINCIAL CONSTITUTION

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as the Prime Minister indicated on June 1, the Lieutenant Governor of Quebec has transmitted to the Governor General, with favourable advice from the Government of Quebec, the Address to the Queen concerning the powers of the Legislative Council and the Address to the Governor General requesting him to transmit the Address to the Queen, with the assent of the Government of Canada, both of which were approved by the Legislative Assembly of Quebec on May 26. The Address to the Queen requests the passage of a new section 79A of the British North America Act to redefine the powers of the Legislative Council of Quebec.

I should now like to table copies of the Addresses of the Legislative Assembly to the Queen and to the Governor General; of the instrument of advice from the Government of Quebec to the Lieutenant Governor of Quebec; and of an exchange of letters which the Prime Minister subsequently had with Prime Minister Lesage to confirm that the Government of Quebec recommended action in accordance with the Assembly's Address.

To complete the outline of events to this date I may add that on June 8 the Governor General wrote to the Prime Minister asking for his advice as to the action he should take on the Address to the Queen.

In determining the nature of advice that it is the duty of the Government to give to the Governor General in this matter, the Government has given the most careful consideration to every aspect of what is a most complex and genuinely unprecedented situation.

The Address requests an amendment to the constitution of the Province of Quebec. Normally an amendment to the constitution of a province is made by provincial legislation under section 92(1) of the British North America Act. Indeed, the Government of Quebec sought to make the change in this way, but was frustrated in securing passage of the Bill by the Legislative Council, although the legislation had received the approval of the Legislative Assembly. The power of the Legislature to enact legislation under section 92(1) does not remove the jurisdiction of the British Parliament to amend the British North America Act itself, and it is such an amendment that is now sought by the Government of Quebec. The course proposed is entirely constitutional even though it is unprecedented.

Since there is no doubt as to the constitutionality of the course of action the Government of Quebec has recommended, the second question for our government has been the procedure it should follow with regard to it.

The proposed new section 79A of the British North America Act concerns only the provisions in that Act respecting the Legislative Council of the Province of Quebec. It affects neither the Parliament of Canada, the Government of Canada, the operation of the laws of Canada, nor any other province. The proposed change is in no way repugnant to the other provisions of the British North America Act. In short, this is a purely provincial matter of concern to Quebec alone. Because of these features, the proposed amendment is without any precedent in our history. We have never had an amendment to the British North America Act that concerned the constitution of only one province without concerning any other province, and which did not concern the federal authority.

The White Paper on Constitutional Amendment points out that a constitutional practice has developed that the sanction of Parliament is required for an amendment to the British North America Act. But that practice grew up in relation to amendments that concerned Parliament, the Government of Canada or the relationship between the Federal Government and the Provinces. What the Government has had to consider is how this practice relates to an unprecedented type of amendment.

The precedents with regard to amendment of the B.N.A. Act are listed on pages 11 to 15 of the White Paper on the Amendment of the Constitution of Canada which was tabled in this House on March 2, 1965. Hon. Members can readily confirm that not one of them was like the present one in being purely in relation to the constitution of one province. On those facts it is clear that the "principle" enunciated on page 15 of the White Paper, that the "sanction of Parliament is required for a request to the British Parliament for an amendment to the B.N.A. Act", does not apply to the present case.

For the same reasons it is equally clear that the opinion expressed by the House of Commons of 1871, as set forth on page 11 of the White Paper, does not apply. The House of Commons of that day adopted a resolution expressing the opinion that " . . . no changes in the provisions of the British North America Act (would) be sought by the Executive Government without the previous assent of the Parliament of this Dominion". That view does not apply to a change sought by the Government of a Province relating solely to the Constitution of that Province.

Moreover, in a purely provincial matter of this kind, it seems to the Government that it would be wrong to act on a basis that appeared to suggest that Parliament could sit in judgment on the action of a Province within its own constitutional sphere. The Government has assumed that Parliament would not wish to do anything which would either deny the right of a Province to have its own Constitution amended in an entirely constitutional way, through amendment of the British North America Act, or to imply that the Federal Parliament has through an Address of the Senate and House of Commons the right or power itself to decide what the internal organization of a particular provincial authority should be. Apart from the office of Lieutenant Governor, those are matters which concern that province alone and not the Senate or House of Commons in Ottawa.

We have consequently come to the conclusion that the Government should advise the Governor General and, through him, the Queen to act in this matter in accordance with the advice of the responsible provincial Ministers, with whom alone the Government of Canada can properly communicate on matters relating to the Provinces as such. The Government of Canada comes into the matter because it has a responsibility to advise the Governor General and the Queen. The Canadian Government also must make the determination that there is not any aspect of the proposed change that is of Federal concern. The Government has made that determination and intends to assume its constitutional responsibility of advising the Governor General and the Queen. The Government's advice will be favourable to the action requested for the reasons I have mentioned.

In case there is any doubt as to the propriety of revealing advice to the Crown before it is actually given, let me say at this point that, for ample caution, the permission of both the Governor General and the Queen has been secured to inform Parliament of the course that is intended.

To complete the elements of this complex problem that the Government has considered, let me say that the basic position of the Government would not differ as between an Address to the Queen from the elected Legislative Assembly and one from the appointed Legislative Council. The essential question in this matter which concerns Quebec only is the advice of the responsible provincial Ministers. The Government is satisfied, after an exhaustive study of the matter, that the course I have outlined is the right and proper one in an unprecedented and difficult situation.

However, in a matter of this kind the Government is not prepared to act formally until this House has a chance to express a view if it so wishes. In accordance with its opinion that this is a matter that concerns only the Constitution of Quebec, the Government does not propose to introduce any Address or Resolution calling for parliamentary action by both Houses. The Prime Minister stated on June 14 that the House would have an opportunity of expressing its views on this matter before any request was made of Her Majesty or of the British Government. Accordingly, to provide this opportunity the Government will be prepared to introduce a supply motion next Monday so that Members of the House may express their views on the course which the Canadian Government has decided to follow. No advice will be formally tendered to the Governor General or to the Queen until that opportunity for the expression of opinion in this House has been provided.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I say at once that the only notice that we of the official opposition received from the Government that this matter would be brought up today was two minutes' notice in advance of the opening of this House; when a copy of the statement to the press was, by the grace of the Secretary of State for External Affairs, given to those who would have to discuss it. This is but another example of an attitude on the part of the Government that is not in keeping with the traditions of Parliament.

I say at once that the alleged opportunity given to the House of Commons to discuss this matter by calling a supply motion on Monday next is an evasion of Parliament. It simply amounts to this, that the Government has not got the backbone to introduce a resolution in the House of Commons but wants to determine what shall be the amendment moved by the Opposition. This is a further step along the road of control that had its beginning when this Government took office and which it has followed since. Let the Government make its recommendation by an Address and bring it before Parliament.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Diefenbaker: It has been said—my quotation may not be correct but it is to the point—

O, what a tangled web we weave,
When first we practise to deceive!

This certainly applies to the Government in regard to this matter.

What is this course that is being adopted? I had the opportunity as the hon. gentleman read the statement to read it along with him, and I can summarize it in this way. This course is one that is dangerous to the Canadian constitution and its preservation.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I am not arguing the question whether there should or should not be a second chamber in the province of Quebec.

Mr. Sharp: Why not?

Mr. Diefenbaker: I have my own views with regard to the unicameral system and the bicameral system, but that is not the issue here.

Do you know what happened, Mr. Speaker, in this matter? Arrangements were made under the table between the Prime Minister of Canada and the Premier of Quebec; and if the Cabinet do not know about them they had better read what Mr. Lesage said as to the arrangements in the Legislature of Quebec. An arrangement was made between them in the spirit of what they now call co-operative federalism, which more and more is becoming a system of under the table arrangements, whereby the Prime Minister of Canada agreed to recommend to Her Majesty the Queen the acceptance of a resolution by one House of the Legislature of Quebec.

The Constitution clearly provides that the Legislature of Quebec consists of the Queen, the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly. That is the fact, and they agreed to this. They undertook to do whatever the Premier of Quebec wanted done, but they would not admit it in the House. I asked the Prime Minister, and he said there had been no agreement whatsoever and no arrangement whereby a resolution of one House, the Legislative Assembly, would be accepted and that recommendation passed on to the Crown. Having taken that stand—and I can quote from the Prime Minister's words—when finally it became apparent that this House would find out the fact and that the letter sent to Mr. Lesage would have to be produced, then the Prime Minister admitted that discussion in that connection had taken place.

This to me is a serious matter, and do you know what is behind it? It is the smiling Minister of Justice, the leader of the new guard. The leader of the new guard had to find a way whereby he could shove through the formula for the amendment of the Constitution. It was feared that as long as there was a Legislative Council he and those associated with him would not be able to force through the formula, and Mr. Lesage admitted that in the legislature. Something had to be done before the amendment formula was brought before the legislature, and the means followed were these. It first started with an address which passed the Legislative Assembly, was amended by the Legislative Council and then was withdrawn. It was realized that the hopes of the new guard, the old guard or the discards would not and could not be made effective, so they decided on a short cut.

Section 92(1) of the British North America Act provides that the Legislatures of Provinces have the exclusive power to amend the Provincial Constitution except as to the office of the Lieutenant Governor. This is an amendment of the Constitution of the Province of Quebec, and no amount of serious philosophy such as appears in the statement made by the Acting Prime Minister can get over this fact.

What is the legislature of Quebec? Under section 71 of the B.N.A. the legislature consists of the Lieutenant Governor and of two Houses, styled the Legislative Council of Quebec and the Legislative Assembly of Quebec. What is being done here? The Federal Government, afraid to face Parliament by standing for what it states it believes, in a speech made today by the Acting Prime Minister seeks a devious and unconstitutional course so the Prime Minister's agreement with the Premier of Quebec can be carried out. Does this mean that the Constitution is to be turned aside when it is convenient to do so? The answer must be in the affirmative, and that is the reason the Government adopts this ludicrous proposal of promising to give the House of Commons the opportunity of debate, as set out in the statement:

Accordingly, to provide this opportunity—

That is, for the expression of the views of this House.

—the Government will be prepared to introduce a Supply Motion next Monday, so that Members of the House may express their views on the course which the Canadian Government has decided to follow.

Then, wrapping themselves in the garments of constitutional purity, these words were added:

No advice will be formally tendered to the Governor General or to the Queen until that opportunity for the expression of opinion in this House has been provided.

How nonsensical can a Government become, to use our supply motion in order to provide that opportunity. This Government has no backbone. This is another example of a Government that reminds me, as I have said on other occasions, of a cushion that bears on itself the marks of the last person who sat on it. They have been told what to do. They promised what they would do, and now they carry out the promise.

I mentioned the promise. The Premier of Quebec, with unusual frankness—and I have the Hansard here for those who would read—said it would be impossible to bring about the end of the Legislative Council if the formula to amend the constitution were accepted. In other words he is saying that we have a formula and we want to bulldoze it through, but we will not be able to get it through the legislative council. Therefore let us remove the legislative council's powers by a recommendation through the Government of Canada. This is playing ducks and drakes with the constitution simply because of the promise that was made by the Prime Minister to the Premier in the month of February. In other words, the fact that the Premier of Quebec has so stated indicates that he recognizes that once the so-called Favreau formula—

Some hon. Members: Fulton, Fulton.

[Mr. Diefenbaker.]

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Fulton has already disavowed it in a statement he made the other day.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The Acting Prime Minister has made a statement on motions, and my understanding of the rules is that the leaders of the other parties are entitled to comment on the contents of the statement but not to debate it. I have some doubts as to whether this is not what the Leader of the Opposition is doing now. Perhaps he would want to bear this in mind.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I am not trying to debate it; I am trying to throw some light on the nefarious conduct of this Government. If I were to debate it I would be quoting the precedents.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. Perhaps I might add that the statement made by the Acting Prime Minister indicated that an opportunity would be given to debate it on Monday, and that might be the time to debate the matter.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, you are always very fair, but you certainly cannot be asking us to allow the Government to tell us what amendments we are going to move.

I have before me all the various instances that have occurred since 1867. I am not going into them except to say this, that the statement made by the hon. gentleman today to the effect there is no precedent that can be used is entirely without basis in fact.

Mr. Churchill: It is false.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Well, that is an expression you are not allowed to use in Parliament unless you belong to the Government ranks. I say this. If I were to argue the case I would refer to two instances in which the very reverse of what is being done here form the precedents.

I said a moment ago that this goes back to a promise, denied in this House by the Prime Minister when I asked him about it, but then when it became apparent that it would be revealed, he admitted it. Here is what Mr. Lesage said on May 11 as reported on page 2,441 of the debates of the Quebec Legislative Assembly, and I am translating from the French. "Without doubt", Mr. Lesage said, "I am going to read the text which has been written by Mr. Pearson and by me". Then it says, "The Prime Minister of Canada said that his Government, if the Legislative Assembly of Quebec approves the Address to the Queen which he proposes to submit to it, this Address would be transmitted to Her Majesty with favourable notice—avec avis favorable"—my French may not be good, but my understanding of the words and the translation is good.

The promise was made. Now what are they going to do? They talk about colonialism, and then they take this over to the United Kingdom. They recommend, in effect, that it be accepted, in spite of the fact that the Legislative Council which is part of the Legislature of Quebec has taken a different view. What do they do? They place it on the doorstep of the United Kingdom. They place the Queen in the arena of party politics. I regret this action, but they would do anything to escape the consequences of the promise that ought not to have been made by the Prime Minister to the Premier of Quebec. The Address to the Queen is being used as a club by the Federal Government and the Government majority in Quebec to coerce one of the branches of the Quebec Legislature into assuring approval of the Favreau formula.

This is an action that I protest. I say that the statement made by the Minister today is a massive evasion and does not reveal the facts in so far as the constitutional development of our country is concerned, and constitutes an action that cannot be justified. It means that Premier Lesage agrees with us as to the freezing effect of the formula for amending the constitution, because afterward there cannot be any changes. I underline that.

Amendments to curb the powers of or abolish second chambers have been attempted before. I have before me, but I shall not read it on this occasion, an extract from the report of the committee of the Privy Council of Canada, approved by His Excellency on October 8, 1894, when the abolition of the second chamber in Nova Scotia was to take place. The decision in this case was as follows:

> The Minister, in conclusion, observes that if Her Majesty's Government should think the circumstances sufficient to warrant so grave a step as their support to any amendment of the British North America Act, 1867, to enable the Legislative Council to be abolished by proclamation, it would seem to be quite contrary to the spirit of the constitution that such a proclamation should, at any time, be a measure for the consideration of Your Excellency, for the reason that such matters are not, according to the Constitutional Act, under the control or supervision of Your Excellency and your Ministers with regard to any of the provinces.

Finally they agreed years after, and the institution was abolished.

I take the strongest objection to this attitude on the part of the Government of playing fast and loose with the constitution for political purposes, to carry out political promises that ought not to have been made.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, first I want to protest having a matter as complex as this brought up on motions, with those who are expected to comment on it given no notice whatever about the nature of the statement which the Government was going to make.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Douglas: I received this statement which was to be made by the Acting Prime Minister just as I was coming down to enter the Chamber. I have had no opportunity whatever to peruse it, and it seems to me if the Government is going to make statements on matters that are of as far reaching importance as this, we ought to have some opportunity to look at these statements, and some warning in this regard.

Also Mr. Speaker, I want to protest against the suggestion of the Acting Prime Minister that this House should be satisfied to discuss the matter on a supply motion next Monday. This is becoming a very bad habit with the Government, of trying to sneak things in under some other item. Right now we are having the problem of the exclusion of certain American magazines amidst 18 other items in a budget resolution, and at times we have had $1 estimates to cover quite wide programs.

Now the Government is virtually seeking to get approval for an amendment to the British North America Act without consulting Parliament. When the Acting Prime Minister says we can have a debate on the motion to go into supply, may I point out that this involves a motion of confidence; that those who want to register their objection would have no choice but to defeat the Government; that if the supply motion should pass, in spite of the protests of those who may object to the subject matter under discussion, the Governor General in Council will still be the body that will be forwarding this proposed amendment to Her Majesty the Queen, and not the Parliament of Canada.

Not since 1871 has the executive ever sought to exercise the authority to recommend amendments to the constitution without consulting the elected representatives of the people of Canada. Why are we being asked to act as rubber stamps for this Government?

There is no doubt, Mr. Speaker, as to where this party stands with reference to the abolition of upper chambers. We do not want to become involved in any internal disputes in the Province of Quebec, but the constitution has to be complied with and there are procedures set down which ought to be followed.

An hon. Member: Explain.

Mr. Douglas: I am just going to explain, if the hon. Member will be patient. I would be glad to explain, but I am not sure that in giving my hon. friend an explanation I can give him the intelligence with which to understand it.

The Acting Prime Minister says the resolution passed in the Commons in 1871 does not apply. That resolution said that "no changes in the provisions of the B.N.A. Act would be sought by the executive government without the previous consent of the Parliament of this Dominion."

Mr. Martin (Essex East): That is right.

Mr. Douglas: The Acting Prime Minister says that does not apply, as this has to do only with the Province of Quebec. In the next paragraph in his statement he says:

> The Government has assumed that Parliament would not wish to do anything which would either deny the right of a Province to have its own constitution amended in an entirely constitutional way—

Mr. Martin (Essex East): That is right.

Mr. Douglas: But, Mr. Speaker, the fact is that it is not being amended in a constitutional way.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Of course it is.

Mr. Douglas: If this matter pertains only to the Province of Quebec, then the Province of Quebec can amend its own constitution.

This refers to section 72 of the B.N.A. Act, and in 1941 the Province of Quebec amended the Legislature Act. It has the power to amend the act now without reference to this Parliament or to Her Majesty the Queen, but the reason it has not amended the Act is that the Legislative Assembly cannot get the concurrence of the Legislative Council. For that reason it is now asking the Government of Canada to forward an address to Her Majesty the Queen so that one section of the Legislature of Quebec may ask for an amendment.

Mr. Diefenbaker: To do what the constitution says cannot be done.

Mr. Douglas: The moment that was sent to the Government of Canada the Government of Canada had to decide whether it was going to forward it, but in our opinion the Government cannot forward it without submitting it to Parliament.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Douglas: So long as this matter can be dealt with by the Legislative Assembly of Quebec, then it is a Quebec matter; but the moment it is forwarded to the Government of Canada then it becomes a matter for Parliament.

When the Acting Prime Minister says we can have a debate on the supply motion I am sure he realizes that the debate would only be in this chamber. Is the other place to have no voice in discussing this matter? If this were to become a unicameral Parliament I would be very happy, but let us do it properly and not by ignoring the other place. I certainly hope it will not be too difficult to persuade the Government to use the same method to abolish the upper chamber in this Parliament that is being used to abolish an upper chamber in a province.

I think, Mr. Speaker, we have a right to demand that the Government, if it is favourable to the address passed by the Legislative Assembly of Quebec, bring that address into this Parliament. If there is to be a change in section 72 and the other relevant sections of the B.N.A. Act, then those changes ought to be contained in an address by the Parliament of Canada, not merely passed on by the executive without any reference to Parliament.

When I think of all the speeches hon. gentlemen opposite have made about having due regard for Parliament, and now they are going to recommend to Her Majesty the Queen by executive authority, a change in the constitution of Canada without any reference to Parliament Mr. Speaker, it does seem to me that this action will live to haunt the Government, revealing as it does the hypocrisy of all its pretensions about its devotion to Parliament.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Would the hon. Member permit a question? I know the hon. gentleman did not intend to say we were amending the constitution of Canada. What is being amended is that portion of the constitution which, under the constitution, remains the exclusive province of the Province of Quebec.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Douglas: Even a layman like myself knows what humbug that statement is, Mr. Speaker. If this amendment is solely within the jurisdiction of the Province of Quebec, then the Province of Quebec can deal with it without reference to the Federal Government at all. The fact is that they are not able to do so because they cannot get the concurrence of the upper chamber. So they are seeking an amendment not to the Legislature Act of Quebec but to the British North America Act; and these gentlemen opposite who have talked about democracy and their devotion to parliamentary government are now proceeding to ignore Parliament and act by executive authority alone in making a recommendation to Her Majesty the Queen which in my opinion sets Canada back 90 years.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Douglas: I want to tell the Government here and now that we shall not be satisfied with a debate on the supply motion next Monday. We shall insist, and keep on insisting, that the Government bring this address before Parliament. If this matter is to be handled by the Federal Government it must be handled by Parliament. I contend that the Government has no right to make any recommendation to Her Majesty on anything affecting the constitution of Canada without the advice and consent of this House and the upper chamber.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): That is right.

Mr. Douglas: The Acting Prime Minister says "That is right". If it is right I suggest that he bring an address before this House asking Her Majesty the Queen to agree to the proposals made by the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Quebec.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): If it affects the Parliament of Canada.

Mr. Douglas: If the Government refuses to do this and bypasses Parliament, then the people of Canada will know that this Government is setting aside any pretensions it ever had of respect for parliamentary government and the constitution of this country.

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): I should like to join in the protest which has been made by previous speakers because we did not have a chance to see this document—

Some hon. Members: That's a change.

Mr. Thompson: Mr. Speaker, we have listened now for 45 minutes to a debate on this question. We in this group have given an attentive hearing, although I was not aware that a statement made on motions entitled the House to engage in a full debate. It seems to me that the same respect and courtesy we gave could be extended to us now.

I think it was unfortunate that the Acting Prime Minister did not make copies of his statement available to us before we entered the House; they were handed to us only as we came in to the chamber. Having said this, I doubt very much that we have the right to consume the afternoon in a debate on this subject, whether or not we agree with the Minister's statement, especially since we are not fully prepared to take up this subject.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Thompson: I cannot imagine this statement being prepared without the legal advisers of the Crown having given careful study to its contents. I believe we are dealing now with something which is certainly very rare as far as the Constitution is concerned, even if it is not altogether unprecedented. I think, therefore, the Government should have provided an opportunity for us to debate this question in circumstances other than those which arise on a supply motion. As I say, I do not think we are entitled to enter into a full debate on the issue this afternoon.

There is one point in the Minister's statement which impresses me. It is that this is purely a provincial matter of concern to Quebec alone. I believe this to be correct. Quebec is the only province in Canada which still has an upper house, and it seems to me that the organization of the structure of government within a province and the jurisdiction for which that Government should be responsible must belong to the elected Members of the provincial legislature.

I believe some Members of this House have been losing sight of a basic principle here. If this matter does concern strictly the Province of Quebec, then those responsible for decisions relating to the organization of Government within that province must be those who are elected as representatives of the people of Quebec. We live in a democracy. We say we believe in democracy. If that is so, then responsibility rests with those who have been elected to the assembly, provided always that the issue is strictly a provincial one.

The hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam told us that never before had an amendment to the constitution been made without consultation with the people of Canada. However, this particular issue is one which relates only to the people of Quebec; and whether or not we agree with this action which has been taken in relation to the upper house in that province, it is the representatives elected by the people of Quebec who should have the say. I would say this is within their constitutional authority.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Thompson: Again I would ask those Members who are interrupting to show the same respect in listening to what I have to say that we gave to the leader of their own party. I will say this. I do not believe it is the constitutional right of the Province of Quebec to deal directly with the Crown, and therefore the transmission of their message—if they believe this is what should be done—should be carried out through the Federal Government.

I realize that the Minister's statement was made as a result of this problem having been placed before the Governor General, who approached this Government and asked for advice. This has been the advice. I believe it would have been much better for the Government to have sought the advice of Parliament, because I believe the transmission of such a request must be done through Parliament. Nevertheless, let us not lose sight of the democratic principle that the people of Quebec through their elected representatives have the final responsibility as far as this type of action is concerned.

I do not think we should prolong this debate further. Again I urge the Government to provide this House with an opportunity to discuss this issue in circumstances other than those which arise in connection with a supply motion. According to the Minister's statement a decision has already been made, so what is the use, after all, of bringing the matter before the House at all? It would do no more than provide us with an opportunity to state our various opinions. Still, it seems to me only reasonable that this subject should be brought before the House so that we may debate it in an appropriate manner.

[Translation]

Mr. Gilles Grégoire (Lapointe): Mr. Speaker, it can be clearly seen that this problem places us in a very complicated situation and on the horns of a dilemma; indeed, for many of us, this procedure is quite unorthodox and often contrary to general opinion.

Surely suggestions can be made to solve that problem.

May I mention that the person mainly responsible for the dilemma facing us today is the Quebec premier, because he has been elected to take care of Quebec's problems and he has no business transferring those problems to the Ottawa government, the London government, the Governor General or the Queen.

In two elections, he cried: "Masters in our own house"! But now he can no longer settle his own problems, having to place them in the hands of other governments, of the governor general and of the Queen, etc., etc.

It is a problem for Quebec, not for Parliament in Ottawa. It is none of our business, it is Quebec's business.

I was glad to hear, a moment ago, the Secretary of State for External Affairs (Mr. Martin) say that it does not concern us, that it is not our problem, and that is a fact. If the matter has been placed in the hands of the federal government the latter should send it back as quickly as possible to the government of the province of Quebec telling them to solve their own problems. I am sure that when the citizens of Quebec read in Hansard tomorrow that all of us here said in turn that it is none of our business, that it is Quebec's business, then the Quebec government will realize how humiliating it is for them to have asked someone else to settle their own problem when they could have settled it in Quebec.

The responsibility rests mainly on the Quebec Premier who was unable to settle a problem coming exclusively under Quebec jurisdiction.

Others are also responsible. Members of the cabinet, especially Quebec ministers, are responsible for the mess we are in. The petition was sent to the Governor General in order to be forwarded to the Queen. It was not sent to parliament. The fact that parliament is taking over constitutes a diversion of mail; it is diverting letters from their destination. The petition is addressed to the Queen and when ministers take it and bring it before parliament, this means that they are opening letters before they should and diverting them from their addressee.

Why submit it to parliament? Send it to London, to the Queen, and she will deal with it; it is no concern of ours.

I think the Quebec ministers are more responsible than others, because they had no business, since they know how proud are the people of the province of Quebec, to bring that matter before parliament. The joy was particularly evident on the face of the Leader of the Opposition, because he knew that he could once again sling arrows in the back of the province of Quebec.

Everybody noticed—

[English]

Some hon. Members: Order.

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. The hon. Member for Lapointe is continually making these charges without any foundation whatsoever.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Starr: Because of this I have come to the conclusion, as have many Members in this House, that he has been a detriment to Parliament, and he has degraded Parliament ever since he came here.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[Translation]

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, the truth hurts. This is just another example. It is true, and everyone knows it, even the members of the Progressive Conservative party—two of whom sitting right across from me have left the party—because that is the truth. As for the others, it is just that they haven't the courage to do so—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I believe the hon. member for St. Hyacinthe-Bagot (Mr. Ricard) wishes to rise on a question of privilege.

Hon. Théogène Ricard (St. Hyacinthe-Bagot): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I rise on a question of privilege. The hon. member for Lapointe has just said that the members from the province of Quebec should protest against the Leader of the Opposition's words, which are insulting toward Quebec.

Mr. Speaker, I come from the province of Quebec myself and I cannot help but say that the lies uttered by the hon. member for Lapointe are an outrage against the province of Quebec.

And far from agreeing that the Leader of the Opposition is against the province of Quebec, I say that he is the one who, in the house, has proved to be the most anxious to preserve the rights of the province of Quebec.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order.

[English]

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. May I suggest that we seem to be getting away from the substance of the statement made on motions by the Acting Prime Minister. I would ask the hon. Member for Lapointe to cease and desist making these personal allusions. Certainly nothing can be gained in this kind of debate by making this type of allusion. I suggest that the hon. Member for St. Hyacinthe-Bagot also used rather strong language—

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I am sure all hon. Members would admit that we should try to avoid using this type of language. In any event, I would ask the hon. Member to keep in mind the provisions of our Standing Orders and limit his contribution as closely as possible to the subject matter of the statement made by the Acting Prime Minister.

Mr. Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): The hon. Member for Lapointe is a disgrace to Quebec.

Mr. Ricard: Mr. Speaker, I rise again on a question of privilege. I take objection to the fact that you mentioned a while ago that I used strong language. I think I have used only decent language, and I would like to bring to your attention that I have been speaking as a French Canadian who recognizes the facts as they are.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

[Translation]

Mr. Speaker: The hon. member's standards may be different from other member's. He used the word "lie" which, in my opinion, is unparliamentary.

Mr. Ricard: Mr. Speaker, if you do not like this word, I will readily withdraw it. As for everything else I said, I say once again that it was well within the truth.

Mr. Speaker: Only this word has offended the Chair.

Mr. Grégoire: Mr. Speaker, I do not mind whether the hon. member withdraws or does not withdraw the word "lie"; his insults leave me quite indifferent.

Mr. Valade: You mean insignificant.

Mr. Grégoire: When I saw him rising on a question of privilege, I thought he was claiming the privilege of sitting as independent.

To revert to the matter under discussion, I would point out that all this occurred because the Government of the province of Quebec tries to force the people of Quebec to swallow the notorious Favreau-Fulton formula. It wants to adopt it despite public opinion.

I suggest that this problem could be settled as follows: let the people of Quebec decide for themselves, through a referendum or an election. Let the people of Quebec decide, and they will be happier to have done so themselves than to have left the decision to Ottawa, London or the Queen of England.

I believe that the best solution would be for the Government to return to Quebec, as soon as possible, all this bundle of documents, so Quebec can settle and solve its own problem. If it cannot settle it, then the people should find better representatives who will settle it, because it is easy to solve to the advantage of the people of Quebec.

5. If not, when is such a decision likely to be made?

6. Is construction to commence in the year 1965 and, if so, on what date?

Answer: 1. Representations have been made by Northumberland Consultants Limited and The Island Development Company.

2. See answer to No. 1.

3. No.

4. A decision on the final design or construction of the causeway will not be reached until studies have been completed and the consultant's report has been reviewed.

5. See answer to No. 4.

6. See answer to No. 4.

INCREASED SERVICES FOR PLEASURE BOAT TRAFFIC

Question No. 241—Mr. Stefanson:

What steps has the government taken to formulate a policy to provide services for increased pleasure boat traffic on Canada's lakes and rivers, and when will this policy be implemented?

[Mr. Grégoire.]

Mr. Jean-Charles Cantin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The formulation of government policy in respect to this matter is under active consideration by the government and when a decision is reached it will be made public.

COURT ACTION BY WALSH ADVERTISING CO.

Question No. 252—Mr. Aiken:

Within the last 10 years has Walsh Advertising Company Limited of Toronto brought action in the courts against the Government of Canada and, if so, on what date, in what court and with what result was this litigation carried on?

Mr. L. T. Pennell (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): Yes, on December 17, 1957 in the Exchequer Court of Canada. The result was judgment in favour of Walsh Advertising in the sum of $13,000 and costs.

WATER AND SEWER INSTALLATIONS, C.N.R. SECTION HOUSE, AVONLEA, SASK.

Question No. 424—Mr. Watson (Assiniboia):

1. Who were the C.N.R. officials responsible for calling tenders for the installation of sewer and water systems in the section house at Avonlea, Saskatchewan?

2. Is it the practice of the C.N.R. to install such facilities on C.N.R. properties for appearance sake only?

3. Are there sewer or water connections available for this property?

4. What is the deficit in this department of the C.N.R.?

Mr. Jean-Charles Cantin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The Management of Canadian National Railways advise as follows:

1. The company's engineering officers in Saskatchewan.

2. No.

3. Sewer and water connections are not available on railway property; however, application has been made for an easement through school property to enable connections being made to the town facilities. Approval is expected momentarily and until received, the regular country convenience is being used.

4. The engineering department is a service department and as such has no income. Expenditures are governed by budgetary control.

ARMED FORCES RECRUITMENT

Question No. 533—Mr. MacLean (Queens):

Is recruitment for the Armed Forces done by allotment of requirements to areas in Canada and, if so (a) where are these areas (b) on what basis are the allotments made (c) what have been the allotments for each area since 1962, or since this system came into effect, whichever is the more recent?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of National Defence): No, recruiting requirements are established annually in total for each service and adjusted from time to time as necessary in the course of the year. For administrative and management purposes recruiting units are assigned target recruiting figures based on past experience of recruiting performance and these are co-ordinated at Canadian Forces headquarters in accordance with the over-all requirement.

AIR CANADA SERVICE TO PROVINCIAL CAPITALS

Question No. 551—Mr. Mullally:

1. Has the government received, at any time, a request for the establishment of regularly scheduled Air Canada service to and from Charlottetown, P.E.I.?
2. How many provincial capitals are not served by regularly scheduled Air Canada flights?
3. How many Canadian cities with a population of over 25,000 do not have such service provided?
4. How many Canadian cities with a population of under 25,000 do have regularly scheduled Air Canada service?

Mr. Jean-Charles Cantin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): 1. The Air Transport Board advise that they have no record of any request for the establishment of a regularly scheduled Air Canada service to and from Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Regarding parts 2, 3 and 4, the Management of Air Canada advise as follows:

2. One, Charlottetown, P.E.I.

3. 26.

4. 6.

DEVELOPMENT SURVEYS, P.E.I.

Question No. 552—Mr. Macquarrie:

1. What officials of government departments or agencies attended the recent meeting in Charlottetown to discuss resource development and allied subjects?
2. What departments or agencies are planning to participate in development surveys of Prince Edward Island?
3. What survey projects are contemplated and what will be their scope and area of study?
4. What is the estimated cost of each such survey?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources): 1. Mr. A. T. Davidson, Assistant Deputy Minister (rural development) Department of Forestry; Mr. R.R. McIntyre, Chief, Soil and Water Division, ARDA, Department of Forestry; Mr. J. A. Bergasse, Area Development Agency, Department of Industry.

2, 3 and 4. The Province of Prince Edward Island is negotiating at the present time with a private firm for certain rural development surveys, but provincial proposals have not yet been completed and no federal department or agency has been requested to participate. Since the Provincial Government is still considering the type and scope of such development and the recent meeting consisted only of preliminary discussions, no federal department or agency is planning to participate in development surveys of Prince Edward Island at this time.

INFORMATION RESPECTING MONEY SUPPLY

Question No. 567—Mr. Caouette:

1. What was the money supply during the last five years?
2. What are the components of the money supply?

Mr. L. T. Pennell (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): 1 and 2. Statistics of notes and coin held outside banks and of the various categories of deposit liabilities of the chartered banks over the period in question may be found on page 298 of the Bank of Canada Statistical Summary for May 1965.

3. Did the R.C.M.P. officers question Mrs. Sauvé about an article which she had written for possible sale to Maclean's or to the Toronto Globe and Mail?
4. Did the R.C.M.P. officers take, from Mrs. Sauvé's office, correspondence and manuscripts?
5. Did the R.C.M.P. officers who questioned Mrs. Sauvé and search her home inform Mrs. Sauvé of her right to refuse to answer questions and of her right to have legal counsel present when she was questioned?
6. Did Staff/Sgt. Linden warn Mrs. Sauvé not to attempt to get her article published and, if so, under what authority was this warning given?
7. Did the R.C.M.P. officers who called on Mrs. Sauvé have a search warrant and, if not, under what authority were documents taken from Mrs. Sauvé's home?
8. Have the documents taken from Mrs. Sauvé been returned and, if not, for what reason?

Mr. D. S. Macdonald (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): 1. S/Sgt. Linden was the only member of the R.C.M.P. who visited the home of Mrs. C. Sauvé of North Bay on April 15, 1965. Mrs. Sauvé's home was not searched.

Questions

2. Yes.

3. Yes.

4. Yes. Mrs. Sauvé voluntarily handed over to S/Sgt. Linden her complete file and manuscripts which she had in her possession.

5. No.

6. No.

7. Yes.

8. Yes.

COMPONENTS OF CHARTERED BANK ASSETS

Question No. 611—Mr. Caouette:

1. What are the components of the total chartered bank assets as published in the Canada Year Book and the components of the total chartered bank assets as published in the Annual Report of the Bank of Canada?

2. If there are any differences between the components of the total shown in the Canada Year Book and the total shown in the Annual Report of the Bank of Canada, what are these differences, and what are the reasons for using a different basis?

3. What is the subscribed capital of each chartered bank?

4. What have been the increases in chartered bank assets during each of the following decades: 1934-44, 1944-54, and 1954-64?

5. For the years 1934, 1944, 1954 and 1964, what was the total volume of bank notes and coins in circulation?

6. For these same years, what was the value of bank credit and of the money supply?

7. At the end of the last financial year, what were the assets of each of the chartered banks?

Mr. L. T. Pennell (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): 1. The components of total chartered bank assets shown in both the Canada Year Book and the annual report of the Bank of Canada are derived from the asset items shown in the monthly statement of assets and liabilities prepared in the Department of Finance and published each month in the Canada Gazette.

2. The presentation of chartered bank assets in the annual report of the Bank of Canada is intended to facilitate analysis of the Canadian operations of the banks. To this end various foreign currency asset and liability items are "netted" and the difference included as "net foreign assets" whereas in the Canada Year Book these items are shown on both sides of the banks' balance sheet. Also, the annual report of the Bank of Canada does not include certain asset items such as "bank premises" and "letters of credit", changes in which are either quite small or not relevant to the analysis of the domestic banking situation. The only other difference of any importance between the two tables is that "items in transit" shown among the asset items in the Canada Year Book is "netted" against chartered to bank deposit liabilities in the annual report of the Bank of Canada in order to calculate a figure of money supply free of the duplication of "float".

3. The subscribed capital of the chartered banks is:

Montreal	$ 60,750,000
Nova Scotia	30,000,000
Toronto-Dominion	30,000,000
Provinciale	9,000,000
Commerce Imperial	69,680,000
Royal	66,528,000
Nationale	12,000,000
Mercantile	8,000,000
	$285,958,000

4. Increases in total chartered bank assets as shown by the monthly return of assets and liabilities have been as follows: December 31, 1934—December 31, 1944, $3,540 millions; December 31, 1944—December 31, 1954, $4,974 millions; December 31, 1954—December 31, 1964, $12,439 millions.

5. The amount of Canadian bank notes and coins in circulation (i.e. outside banks) was as follows: December 31, 1934, $184 millions; December 31, 1944, $990 millions; December 31, 1954, $1,458 millions; December 31, 1964, $2,254 millions.

6.

	Money Supply (1)	Bank Loans (2)
	(millions of dollars)
December 31, 1934	2,132	991
December 31, 1944	5,892	1,213
December 31, 1954	10,314	4,237
December 31, 1964	18,049	10,514

(1) These figures are one of the commonly used calculations of the money supply, i.e. total Canadian deposits of the chartered banks less items in transit plus notes and coins in circulation.

(2) Total Canadian loans (including mortgages) of the chartered banks. In addition, of course, banks have other assets such as securities so that their total assets equal their total liabilities.

7. Total assets of each chartered bank: Montreal, October 31, 1964, $4,668 millions; Nova Scotia, October 31, 1964, $3,051 millions; Toronto-Dominion, October 31, 1964, $2,669 millions; Provinciale, October 31, 1964, $507 millions; Commerce Imperial, October 31, 1964, $5,503 millions; Royal, November 30, 1964, $6,232 millions; Nationale, November 30, 1964, $963 millions; Mercantile, September 30, 1964, $125 millions.

SECOND NATIONAL PARK IN SASKATCHEWAN

Question No. 614—Mr. Southam:

1. What period of time will be involved by federal National Park officials working in conjunction with Provincial Parks officials in selecting a site for Saskatchewan's second National Park?
2. What are the names and official designations of these officials?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources): 1. The appraisal of potential national park sites in Saskatchewan is currently under way and a report will be completed within the next four to six weeks. However, before a site for this park can be selected, the recommendations contained in this report will have to be agreed to by the federal and provincial authorities.

2. The Saskatchewan representative in the survey is Mr. R. G. Young, Chief, Parks and Recreation, Department of Natural Resources; the federal officials on the survey are the following four officials of the Natural and Historic Resources Branch of the Department of Northern Affairs and National Resources: Mr. H. K. Eidsvik and Mr. C. L. Merrill of the Planning Division; Mr. Dalton Muir, Parks Naturalist; and Mr. T. Fenton, Regional Engineer from the Calgary office.

BURLEIGH FALLS, ONT.—REBUILDING OF DAM

Question No. 618—Mr. Stenson:

1. Is the Department of Transport not going to rebuild the dam at Burleigh Falls on the Trent canal system?
2. When prices were called for this construction, what were the prices submitted for the cost of rebuilding this dam?
3. What were the costs for the repairs to this dam?
4. Do the engineers feel this dam is in a satisfactory condition at the present time?

Mr. Jean-Charles Cantin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): 1. Not immediately but the project will remain in future program.

2. Tenders were called for construction of the gates for this dam and the prices submitted were as follows: Canadian Vickers Ltd., Montreal, P.Q., $286,966; Canada Machinery Corp., Ltd., Galt, Ont., $326,526; Dominion Bridge Co., Ltd., Montreal, P.Q., $400,170; Horton Steel Works Ltd., Toronto, Ont., $402,815.

3. The cost to repair this dam was $11,057.78 exclusive of cost of continuing labour and government owned equipment.
4. Yes.

CANADIAN CONTENT IN AUTOMOTIVE PRODUCTION

Question No. 620—Mr. Stenson:

1. Have the Canadian automotive companies signed an agreement with the Canadian Government that they will try to conform with the government's desire to have 60 per cent Canadian content in all cars built in Canada, or did they sign an agreement that they will have 60 per cent Canadian content in all cars built in Canada?
2. Was the Ontario Government consulted when the agreement was made with the United States Government?

Hon. C. M. Drury (Minister of Industry): 1. The objectives for the industry are set out in tariff item 950 to which the automotive companies are required to conform and in their letters of commitment establishing goals which they have agreed to meet. The former was tabled in the House of Commons on February 16 and the latter were tabled on April 26.

The objectives are expressed in the following requirements:

(a) Ratio of Vehicles produced to Vehicles sold in Canada: An automotive company is required under tariff item 950 to maintain, in any 12 month period ending on July 31, the ratio of the net sales values of vehicles produced by it to the net sales value of vehicles sold by it in Canada in the 12 months ending July 31, 1964, or not less than a 75 to 100 ratio if its production to sales ratio was less than this in the base year.

(b) Canadian Value Added requirement in Vehicles Produced in Canada: An automotive company is required under tariff item 950 to maintain the Canadian value added in any 12 month period ending on July 31 which it achieved in the 12 month period ending on July 31, 1964. The meaning of "Canadian value added" is defined in the regulations pertaining to the tariff item.

(c) Additional Canadian Value Added related to growth of companies sales in Canada: The automotive companies have undertaken in their letters of commitment to increase their Canadian value added in any subsequent 12 month period ending on July 31 to equal a percentage (established in each letter of commitment as 40, 50 or 60 per cent) of the increased sales in Canada of vehicles covered by the program.

(d) Canadian Value Added increase required beyond growth of Canadian market:

The automotive companies have undertaken in their letters of commitment to increase Canadian value added before the end of the 12 month period ending on July 31, 1968, by $260 million a year beyond the amounts required in items (b) and (c) above.

2. Discussions were held with senior officials of the Ontario Government concerning the Canada-U.S. agreement on automotive products.

*ALLOCATION OF OFF-SHORE MINERAL RIGHTS

Question No. 636—Mr. MacLean (Queens):

1. Is it the intention of the government to introduce legislation at the current session of Parliament to convey to the provinces to which they are adjacent the offshore mineral rights which lie outside the boundaries of any province and accrue and belong to Canada as a whole as a result of a recent international convention?

2. If so, will such legislation include provisions similar to those that were enacted by the Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec Boundaries Acts of 1912, with regard to those vast areas which belonged to Canada as a whole at that time?

Mr. John N. Turner (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources): Mr. Speaker, the answer to the first part of this question is no. The second part is not applicable.

P.E.I.—EXTENSION OF ROADS TO RESOURCES AGREEMENT

Question No. 644—Mr. Mullaly:

1. Has the government received a request from the Government of Prince Edward Island for an extension of the Roads to Resources Agreement beyond the present expiratory date?

2. If so, what is the nature of the request and what response has the government made?

3. Under the terms of the present Agreement, how many miles of highway were approved for construction and paving in Prince Edward Island?

4. To date, how many miles have been completed?

5. What has been the total contribution by the federal government to Prince Edward Island under this program to date?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources): 1 and 2. Yes, the Province has requested a one year extension to the program, and the Government has the matter under consideration.

3. 441 miles.

4. 361 miles.

5. $5,966,073.

PICTOU, N.S.—REQUEST FOR URBAN RENEWAL SURVEY

Question No. 646—Mr. MacEwan:

1. Has an application been received by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for an urban renewal survey from the various towns in the County of Pictou and the Municipality of the County of Pictou?

[Mr. Drury.]

2. If so, has a decision been made on this matter and what is the decision?

3. If a decision has not been made, when can one be expected?

Hon. J. R. Nicholson (Minister of Citizenship and Immigration): 1. Yes.

2 and 3. The application for a grant to assist in carrying out an urban renewal study is under consideration, and it is expected that a decision will be reached shortly.

SILVER DOLLARS ISSUED BY ROYAL CANADIAN MINT

Question No. 649—Mr. Nugent:

1. What was the number of silver dollars sent from the Royal Canadian Mint to banks in Toronto in the last four months?

2. What proportion of the total number of silver dollars forwarded to the banks in the Toronto area was made available by the banks directly to the general public?

3. What proportion was sold to dealers and business firms for re-sale to the public?

4. At what prices were the coins offered by dealers and business firms to the general public?

Mr. L. T. Pennell (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Finance): 1. 558,000.

2, 3 and 4. The Mint does not have this information.

*AIR CANADA—NAMING OF AIRCRAFT

Question No. 651—Mr. Marcoux:

Does Air Canada intend to christen their aircraft, particularly those on transatlantic flights, as do most other airlines around the world and, if not, for what reason?

[Translation]

Mr. Jean-Charles Cantin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): The management of Air-Canada informs me as follows:

Air-Canada have never christened their aircraft and do not intend to do so. This is not the usual practice, as suggested by the question, and it does not offer any economic or advertising benefits. It even has some disadvantages. Every aircraft can easily be identified by a number appearing in a conspicuous place.

AUTOMOTIVE SAFETY EQUIPMENT

Question No. 657—Mr. Noble:

Has the government given consideration to introducing legislation making it compulsory to equip automobiles being sold in Canada with all safety devices currently proven practical and efficient?

Hon. C. M. Drury (Minister of Industry): It should be emphasized that the Provincial Governments have the responsibility of drafting and enforcing regulations pertaining to the operational standards of motor vehicles. A great deal of work has already been undertaken by various groups to determine the areas where improvement in design or vehicle construction could lead to greater safety which would be useful in the preparation of a safety code. It would, of course, be necessary to obtain the agreement of the Provinces before a uniform safety code could be established for motor vehicles. The Department of Industry would be happy to co-operate with the Provinces in the preparation of such a code.

TENDERS FOR COASTGUARD VESSELS

Question No. 668—Mr. MacEwan:

1. When will the first tender for new coastguard vessels be called?
2. How many coastguard vessels will be constructed in the year 1965-66?
3. Will the tenders be called on a nationwide basis or on a regional basis?

Mr. Jean-Charles Cantin (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Transport): 1. In view of the Department's intention to carry out extensive tank model seakeeping tests before determining the vessels' final characteristics, precise scheduling of tender calls and construction commencements cannot be accurately forecast.

2. Answered by 1 above.

3. Action in this regard has not in this case been determined.

APARTHEID STUDY BY B. AND B. COMMISSION

Question No. 673—Mr. McCutcheon:

Has the B. and B. Commission dispatched a research team to South Africa to study the origins and applications of the policy of apartheid, and the successful supplanting there of English by the Afrikaan language?

Mr. Jack Davis (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): I have been informed by the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism as follows: No, the Royal Commission has not sent a research team to South Africa for the purposes mentioned. One of the Commission's research supervisors, Professor K. D. McRae, has recently been in South Africa for three and a half weeks to investigate language policies and practices in South Africa. He was not sent "to study the origins and applications of the policy of apartheid" nor to study "the successful supplanting there of English by the Afrikaan language".

*REPORT RESPECTING HAL DORNAN

Question No. 685—Mr. Basford:

1. Has the government received any comment or report from Hon. Mr. Justice F. Craig Munro with regard to Mr. Hal Dornan, Special Assistant to the Prime Minister, and his actions in connection with Mr. Al Williamson in the Harry Stonehill application for landed immigrant status resulting from the recent trial of Mr. Al Williamson, held in North Vancouver, B.C.?
2. If so, what was the nature of such comment or report?

Mr. Jack Davis (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the answer to the first part of this question is yes.

The answer to the second part is extracted from the text of the remarks of Hon. Mr. Justice F. Craig Munro after receiving the verdict (Case No. 91-65) Regina vs. Albert Hampton Williamson. It reads in part as follows:

Mr. Dornan appeared as a witness at this trial and told the court what part he took in the matters under investigation at this trial.

While I cannot speak for the jury, I can say that in my view no evidence was adduced before me that in any way reflects discredit on Mr. Dornan, and, in particular, there was no evidence to indicate that he did anything wrong or that he acted in any improper way.

I note in the Press that the Prime Minister has recently expressed his confidence in the integrity of Mr. Dornan. Based upon the evidence at this trial I can only say that such confidence is fully justified.

I make this comment only because in a trial of this nature where names of prominent citizens are mentioned it is possible that some members of the public may be confused as to just who was on trial. Mr. Dornan, of course, was not accused of anything, and was not on trial, and could therefore not receive a jury's verdict clearing his reputation.

SEA COAST EXTENSION, KEJIMKUJIK NATIONAL PARK

Question No. 692—Mr. Crouse:

1. Is it the intention of the government to set aside a section of sea coast for an extension of the Kejimkujik National Park as incorporated in the original plan drawn up in 1962?
2. If so, how many acres does the government plan to acquire for this development?
3. Will this section of sea coast be in Lunenburg, Queens or Shelburne Counties of Nova Scotia?
4. What amount of money is set aside in the estimates to cover this sea coast park extension?

Hon. Arthur Laing (Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources): 1, 2 and 3. Yes, if a suitable area can be found and the provincial and federal governments are agreed that it ought to be devoted to national park purposes. In such event it would then be the responsibility of the provincial government to provide title to the area, free of encumbrances to the federal government. However, it is not possible to give an estimate of the size of such area at this time. The federal government has suggested a joint federal-provincial survey of the Atlantic coast line from Canso Strait to Yarmouth, to be carried out this summer.

4. The sum of $10,000 is provided in the current estimates for investigations of potential park areas across Canada.

*HOSPITAL CONSTRUCTION, JOLIETTE, QUE.

Question No. 714—Mr. Pigeon:

1. Has the Government of the Province of Quebec through the provincial Department of Health submitted plans to Ottawa for the construction of a new 500 bed hospital in the Town of Joliette?
2. If so, when and what will be the cost involved?

Mr. J. C. Munro (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the answer to the first part of the question is no. The second part is not applicable.

QUESTIONS PASSED AS ORDERS FOR RETURNS

CRIMINAL STATISTICS

Question No. 35—Mr. Matheson:

1. During each of the last ten years of record (a) how many criminal offences were reported (b) what percentage of these crimes remained unsolved (c) how many persons per 100,000 population were convicted of indictable offences?

1. What has been the number of employees, year by year in the following Crown corporations since their establishment (a) Canadian National Railways (b) Air Canada (c) Canadian Broadcasting Corporation (d) Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corp. (e) Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (f) Eldorado Aviation Limited (g) Eldorado Mining and Refining Limited (h) Northern Transportation Co. Limited (i) Polymer Corporation Limited (j) The Seaway International Bridge Co. Limited (k) Atomic Energy of Canada Limited (l) Canadian Arsenals Ltd. (m) Canadian Patents and Developments Limited (n) Defence Construction Ltd.?
2. Are employees of these government enterprises of an industrial or commercial nature, subject to the Civil Service Act?
3. Do these employees enjoy a special status?

MOTOR VEHICLE PUCHASES BY DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Question No. 583—Mr. MacLean (Queens):

From March 1, 1964 to May 1, 1965, how many motor vehicles have been purchased by the Department of Justice (a) manufactured or assembled in Nova Scotia (b) manufactured or assembled in Ontario (c) imported from the United States (d) imported from other countries?

Return tabled.

NAMES AND CLASSIFICATIONS OF CENTENNIAL COMMISSION PERSONNEL

Question No. 664—Mr. Hamilton:

1. What are the names, classifications, titles and salaries of all personnel hired by the Centennial Commission since April 22, 1963?
2. What are the names, classifications, titles and salaries of all personnel hired by contract by and for the Centennial Commission since April 22, 1963?
3. What are the names, classifications, titles and salaries of all personnel hired for the Centennial Commission by the Civil Service Commission since April 22, 1963?
4. What are the names, classifications, titles and salaries of all personnel hired by the Centennial Commission since April 22, 1963 which were appointed by Governor in Council?
5. What are the names, classifications, titles and salaries of all personnel hired by the Centennial Commission since April 22, 1963 upon the submission of a recommendation of the Secretary of State?
6. What are the names, classifications, titles and salaries of all the Centennial Commission personnel appointed since April 22, 1963 which were recommended to the Secretary of State for employment by the Centennial Commissioner prior to approval by Governor in Council or Treasury Board?
7. What are the names, classifications, titles and salaries of all personnel hired by the Centennial Commission since April 22, 1963 by approval of the Treasury Board following submission of a recommendation by the Secretary of State.
8. What are the names, classifications, titles and salaries of all personnel released, transferred or seconded from the Centennial Commission since April 22, 1963 by means of submission to Governor in Council, Treasury Board Minutes, Ministerial Order or Civil Service approval?

CLASSIFICATION OF MEMBERS OF ARMED FORCES

Question No. 734—Mr. Tucker:

1. How many Canadians served in the Canadian Armed Forces in (a) World War I (b) World War II?
2. How many in question (1) were born in (a) Canada (b) United Kingdom (c) other British possessions (d) elsewhere?
3. How many in question (1) were of (a) Anglo Saxon origin (b) French origin (c) other ethnic origins?
4. What was the total enlistment in each province?
5. What was the classification by main religious denomination in (a) World War I (b) World War II?

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

Mr. J. B. Stewart (Parliamentary Secretary to Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, motion No. 44 is acceptable to the Government. I understand that notice of motion No. 32 is to be withdrawn. I ask that motions Nos. 39 and 41 be allowed to stand.

SUSPENSION OF ARMY BENEVOLENT FUND SECRETARY

Motion No. 32—Mr. Bigg:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all correspondence and documents concerning the suspension and reinstatement of the National Secretary of the Army Benevolent Fund, between the Minister and General Gauvreau or any other department official.

Order discharged and motion withdrawn.

SAFETY STANDARDS IN AUTOMOBILE MANUFACTURE

Motion No. 44—Mr. Grafftey:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of all correspondence since January 1, 1960, exchanged between the federal government and the automobile industry relating to minimum safety standards in the manufacture of automobiles and components thereof.

Motion agreed to.

HEALTH AND WELFARE

CONSIDERATION OF MEDICARE BY DOMINION-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister and ask him whether or not the Government intends to place before the Federal-Provincial Conference on July 19 a plan for compulsory medicare calling for a joint 50-50 federal-provincial contribution and participation of every province, at an estimated cost of $500 million to the Federal Government during the first year. At the same time, in view of the fact that the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare is mentioned in this press statement, is the Government considering the possibility of one or more provinces having their own scheme wholly financed by the province?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, in answer to the right hon. gentleman I would say that this whole matter is under consideration by the Government.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Is there any foundation for what the hon. gentleman must have read this morning, a statement in the Press giving the benediction of the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare in this regard? Is there a committee of Liberal Members who are preparing this for the edification of the Government?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, the right hon. gentleman will understand that I have been rather busy today and have not yet seen this statement.

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Then may I put a supplementary question to the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. I wish to ask the hon. gentleman whether he is Chairman of such a committee studying medicare.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, I think the practice in this House is that questions involving Government policy must be directed to the Government.

Mr. Bell: Why did he say it?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Unless the Minister in charge of the Department concerned makes other provision, it is not proper, in respect of a matter on which there has been no decision reached by the Government, for a question to be put to a private Member, whether he be a Parliamentary Secretary or not.

Mr. Starr: Then I will ask the question of the Minister of National Health and Welfare. I would ask the hon. lady whether the Parliamentary Secretary is chairman of a group of Liberal Members of the caucus studying medicare.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the question which my hon. friend is asking me is not one which comes within my purview as a Minister of the Crown.

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, my supplementary question is to the Acting Prime Minister and it is with respect to a question I put to him yesterday and to which the Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of National Health and Welfare replied last night. Was the Parliamentary Secretary speaking for the Government when he said that a medicare plan could be in effect by 1967, or perhaps earlier?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, we all know that the hon. Member for Hamilton East is, and all of us recognize him to be, actively interested in all matters in this House. I would be very surprised, knowing of his achievements, and of his interest in social and health questions, if he was not to the forefront in his Party in putting forward ideas in which he has a sincere belief. That is why he is in this House, and that is why he is going to continue here. But it must be clear that only a Member of the Government can announce Government policy.

Mr. Knowles: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. I should like to ask the Acting Prime Minister whether the Parliamentary Secretary, who spoke for the Acting Prime Minister last night, said what he did with the approval of the Acting Prime Minister.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, the answer to that question has already been given.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): If I have not made it as clear as I intended, then I would say to my hon. friend, who knows the rules so well and who is recognized as an authority, that only a Member of the Government can expound Government policy.

[Later:]

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Acting Prime Minister, in view of the statement he made a few moments ago to the effect that Parliamentary Secretaries cannot speak for the Government, whether there is any value in having them answer for the Ministers during the adjournment debate at ten o'clock. I should like to ask the Minister whether he will consider seeing to it that in future Ministers are on hand for these debates, since there would seem to be very little value in carrying on these discussions at ten o'clock if those who reply for the Government have no authority to do so.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, my hon. friend I know is too busy, as I myself find sometimes, to read fully the rules, but they provide for replies at that hour by Parliamentary Secretaries. The rule is also well established concerning about those who may speak for the Government. My hon. friend was a hard-working Premier for a long time, and when I say "hard-working" I do not mean he was always right, and he knows perfectly well that only Members of his Government could express the official policies of that Government of which he was the head for such a long time.

Mr. Douglas: I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Would that not make it more important—

Mr. Munro: On a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Douglas: —that Ministers be here when—

Mr. Munro: I have a question of privilege, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. Is the hon. Member rising on a question of privilege arising out of an immediate matter?

Mr. Munro: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Just prior to the remarks of the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam the hon. Member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles) quoted a statement made by me in the House last night. His remarks prior to that statement asked for a precise date as to when we might expect medicare. He is well aware that my answer was that this would depend upon a meeting of the Federal-Provincial Premiers that is to be held in July, and that I did not know the precise date. I said that in view of the provinces having paramount jurisdiction in this field I did not know what the timing could be, because we must depend on reaching an understanding at that conference. The hon. Member is well aware of that, and that I said I did not know, but that it could be next year or—

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Munro: I said I did not know, and the House is well aware of that.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Speaker, since the—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. May we have order. I recognize the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam.

Mr. Douglas: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order. A short time ago the Acting Prime Minister said that Parliamentary Secretaries could not answer for the Government, but now the hon. Member is answering for the Government.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Munro: On a point of order.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

An hon. Member: Sit down.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The hon. Member has raised a question of privilege and another hon. Member has answered. Now, the Parliamentary Secretary wants to rise on a point of order. We have only 30 minutes for questions and I would suggest that perhaps we should get on with them.

REPORTED INCREASE IN CONGENITAL ABNORMALITIES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Heward Grafftey (Brome-Missisquoi): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. In view of the fact that the Canadian Medical Association yesterday directed two of its general council committees to begin an immediate investigation as to the possible cause of thalidomide-like deformities of newborn children, suggesting that possibly a thalidomide crisis looms, I should like to ask the Minister whether she has initiated an investigation into this situation, and is any immediate action planned in this regard?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Minister of National Health and Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I have seen the reports referred to. The one in the Globe and Mail appeared to have an accurate headline, but the one in the Montreal paper seemed to be unsupported by the story.

In these articles Dr. Gingras suggested that there has been an increase in limb deformities not associated with thalidomide, but he goes on to say that the Canadian Medical Association's Committee on Maternal and Child Health has had its attention directed to the question as to whether or not there truly is an increase in this birth deformity.

Since the thalidomide tragedy of 1961-62 my Department has been engaged in two relevant areas of activity. Under the Health Grants Program three Prosthetic Research and Training Centres have been established to deal specifically with the problems posed by congenital limb deformities. One of these Centres is located in Montreal and is under the direction of Dr. Gingras. The deserved reputation of Dr. Gingras' Centre has no doubt resulted in an increased number of cases being referred to that Centre. We are inclined to give most weight to this explanation for the suggested increase, but Dr. Gingras' comment that other factors may be responsible will be pursued with him, as it relates to the efforts to improve our knowledge of the occurrence of congenital anomalies.

In addition, my Department, through its Expert Committee on the Occurrence of Congenital Anomalies, has been concerned with this very problem, that is, methods of improving our information about the numbers and kinds of congenital anomalies occurring in Canada. We are working with our advisors and the Provincial Health Departments in the development of a surveillance system for the purpose of detecting promptly any unusual occurrence of abnormalities. We are, of course, dependant upon the reporting of cases by individual physicians and I am, therefore, especially pleased to note the continuing interest of the Canadian Medical Association in this difficult problem.

AIR POLLUTION—CONTROL OF AUTOMOTIVE EXHAUST GASES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. P. V. Noble (Grey North): I should like to direct a question to the Minister of National Health and Welfare. In view of the fact that carbon monoxide is contributing to air pollution, and may also be a major factor in the increasing incidence of lung cancer, would the Minister consider introducing legislation which would require all automobiles to be equipped with an anti-smog device?

Hon. Judy V. LaMarsh (Minister of National Health and Welfare): I have always understood, Mr. Speaker, that aside from a consultative role, jurisdiction in the matter of air pollution was with the provinces.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Mr. Noble: May I ask a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker? If this matter is of national concern in the United States could it not be given the same prominence in Canada?

Miss LaMarsh: We have different constitutional forms in the two countries.

PUBLIC SERVICE

LETTER CARRIERS—REQUEST FOR SALARY INCREASES

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Michael Starr (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, on Monday last I asked the Government whether anything was being done to increase the salaries of letter carriers, and I understand that there may be a statement in this regard to be made today by one of the Members of the Treasury Benches.

Hon. E. J. Benson (Minister of National Revenue): Mr. Speaker, a number of questions were directed on Monday to my colleague the Postmaster General (Mr. Nicholson), with respect to periodic pay review of employees in Group "D", including the postal classes.

As hon. Members know, the Civil Service Act requires the Civil Service Commission to present its recommendations with respect to pay increases for these and other employees to the Treasury Board for final determination of the rates to be paid. The Treasury Board cannot make its pay decisions under the Act until it has received and considered the recommendations of the Commission. Further, the Act provides for consultations to be held between the Minister of Finance or his representatives, and staff associations requesting such consultations.

The present position is that the recommendations from the Civil Service Commission reached the Treasury Board yesterday. These will have to be examined by the Treasury Board staff and a report thereon submitted to the Ministers of the Board. The Postal Workers Brotherhood has also requested consultations with the Minister of Finance, who has undertaken to arrange these consultations once the Civil Service Commission's recommendations have been received and examined. It is expected that other staff associations will also require consultations, and that meetings with representatives of these organizations will have to be arranged.

Hon. Members can be assured, therefore, that the procedures required by law which I have mentioned will be completed as quickly as possible, and that the Treasury Board's decision as to the pay rates to be established for all Group "D" classes, including postal workers, will be made with a minimum of delay. On the basis of past experience and the present timetable of progress, this is likely to be possible about the middle of July.

[Miss LaMarsh.]

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CYPRUS—INQUIRY AS TO CONTINUATION OF CANADIAN FORCE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. R. N. Thompson (Red Deer): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Secretary of State for External Affairs. In view of the decision of the Security Council yesterday and the invitation which has been expressed by the Secretary General, can the Minister tell us whether or not Canada is going to continue with its peace keeping forces in respect of the Cyprus situation?

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, the Security Council did meet yesterday and we have received a formal request from the Secretary General of the United Nations asking Canada to participate in the UN force in Cyprus for a further six months by supplying a contingent of the same strength as in the past. The Government has decided to accept the invitation and to continue its participation in this force which has rendered such valuable service on that island.

VIET NAM—REFERENCE TO STATEMENT BY UNITED STATES SENATOR

On the orders of the day:

Mr. W. B. Nesbitt (Oxford): I should like to direct a question to the Acting Prime Minister. Does the Government of Canada agree with the views and proposals set out this morning by Senator Fulbright, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee of the United States concerning the situation in Viet Nam? If so, has the Canadian Government transmitted its views on this matter to the United States Government?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I would want to examine carefully the latest declaration of Senator Fulbright. Perhaps tomorrow in the External Affairs Committee my hon. friend, who is the distinguished Vice Chairman of that body, could put his question.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): In connection with the question asked by the hon. Member for Oxford a moment ago, will the Minister say if he shares the view of the New York Times to the effect that a land war on the continent of Asia is now under way? Have there been any communications with the United States in the past three or four days in this connection that would lead us to believe there is any hope of an arrangement being made whereby a conference would be convened, for every day this situation seems to be escalcating to an extent that has peril for mankind?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, yesterday I had a conversation in Ottawa with the United States Ambassador. I am not in a position at the moment to reveal the details of that conversation. He left with me a document that we are studying carefully. This document, however, is not in any way related to any escalation of this regrettable situation. It has to do, however, with steps which the Government of the United States has taken in its endeavours to try to bring about negotiations without pre-conditions.

I may say that on our part we are likewise actively engaged, independently of the United States, in efforts designed to try to bring about some discussions that may, we hope, lead to an easing of the situation in Viet Nam, and that we hope ultimately might have the effect of establishing a basis for negotiations.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Is the Minister in a position to say whether Prime Minister Wilson of the United Kingdom has placed before the Government of Canada a plan which, in his opinion, according to the only way I get information through the press or radio, might lead to negotiations? One has to word his question carefully, and that is the reason for the uncertainty in the way it is advanced.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): I am not in a position to divulge, until such time as the Prime Minister of Britain himself has made public, any initiative he has in mind; but we are aware of the proposal that is being put by Her Majesty's Government in Britain and it is a proposal that will receive strong support from Canada.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Has it been before the Government yet?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): We have it.

NATIONAL DEFENCE

OPERATIONAL READINESS OF CF-104 AIRCRAFT

On the orders of the day:

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary North): I should like to direct a question to the Minister of National Defence. In view of the fact that 25 CF-104's have now crashed can the Minister inform us as to how many of these are of the operational configuration and how many are of the training type, and whether any of them have been capable of being salvaged, repaired and put back into operation? I think the question is of importance because if they are all of the operational configuration it reduces the number of our CF-104's to a dangerously low level.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I suggest to the hon. Member that perhaps his question fails on two grounds. It appears to call for a complicated reply, and it may be placed on the order paper.

Mr. Harkness: I do not believe the reply should be complicated. The Minister should have these figures, which involve only 25 aircraft, in his head.

ROYAL CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICE

QUEBEC CITY—FAMILIARITY OF PERSONNEL WITH EXPLOSIVES

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Robert Beaulé (Quebec East): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Minister of Justice.

Does he propose to order that, in future, at least one member of the R.C.M.P. squad in Quebec should have adequate knowledge of how to handle explosives?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: That question should be placed on the order paper.

[English]

EXPO '67

REPRESENTATION OF CUSTOMS OF ESKIMOS AND INDIANS

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Marcel Lessard (Lac-Saint-Jean): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Secretary of State relating to Expo '67.

Are the authorities of Expo '67 taking the necessary steps so that the usages and customs of the citizens inhabiting our country before we came here in the 14th century, that is Indians and Eskimos, may be well represented during Expo '67?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: This also is a question for the order paper.

Inquiries of the Ministry

[English]

NATIONAL CAPITAL COMMISSION

LOSS OF EMPLOYMENT THROUGH DEMOLITION OF ROXBOROUGH APARTMENTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): I wish to ask a question of the Minister of Labour which has nationwide implications. In view of the fact that some 18 women and 25 men will lose their employment as a result of the National Capital Commission's expropriation of the Roxborough Apartments, would the Minister inform the House if the Government accepts any responsibility with respect to these unfortunate victims of Government action who, in some cases because of their age, will find it difficult to find other employment?

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): I will be glad to look into this question and give the hon. Member an answer later.

REDISTRIBUTION

ONTARIO—PUBLICATION OF MAPS IN WEEKLY NEWSPAPERS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. A. D. Alkenbrack (Prince Edward-Lennox): I should like to direct a question to the Secretary of State, following up a request made on Monday last by the hon. Member for Ontario. Can the Minister now advise if the weekly newspapers of Ontario are going to be allowed to participate in publishing the electoral boundaries, and whether or not they will be authorized to do so for next week's publication?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): The suggestion made by the hon. Member for Ontario has been communicated to the commission.

Mr. Alkenbrack: I should like to debate this at ten o'clock tomorrow night.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

REQUEST FOR EXTENSION OF TELEVISION SERVICE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. S. J. Korchinski (Mackenzie): In view of the Secretary of State's recent announcement that colour television will be provided to those areas already serviced by multi-channel television, does the Minister have any plans to immediately ask for funds in the supplementary estimates to provide for television coverage for the over 50 per cent of Canada's area still unserviced?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): I have already said there was no absolute deadline in this respect, but we were waiting with great anxiety for the report of the Fowler Commission.

Mr. Robert Simpson (Churchill): May I ask a supplementary question in relation to the same statement? The Secretary of State admitted that the extension of service had a higher priority than colour television, so would he not now consider asking for a report of the advisory committee on the extension of service, as he did in connection with colour television?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I have already said in the House that there are several millions of dollars in the current estimates for extension of service.

FINANCE

REMOVAL OF SALES TAX ON POLLUTION CONTROL MATERIALS

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Alvin Hamilton (Qu'Appelle): Mr. Speaker, I would like to address a question to the Minister of Finance. In view of the fact that last week the Minister of Transport announced that the Government has decided to put substantial financial support into the correction of water pollution in Canada, would the Minister consider exempting all materials that go into anti-pollution equipment and plants operated by private enterprise from the 11 per cent sales tax?

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I appreciate my hon. friend's concern with this matter. As he knows, there was an announcement in the budget speech which will give very considerable relief to private industry in this field, and from the letters I have received, private industry seems to be very well pleased.

REQUEST FOR EXTENSION OF MUNICIPAL LOAN LEGISLATION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Robert Muir (Cape Breton North and Victoria): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Finance. In view of the fact that the Minister of Municipal Affairs for the Province of Nova Scotia has stated that, as a result of the Minister's recent statement concerning the Municipal Development and Loan Act, it could be that three hospitals planned for construction in that Province may not be proceeded with, and in view of the exceptionally high unemployment rate in the Atlantic Provinces, may I ask the Minister whether he and his colleagues in the Government would give consideration to extending this legislation beyond March, 1966?

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): I have already announced the Government's view on this matter.

EDUCATION

STUDENT LOANS—INQUIRY AS TO IMPROVEMENTS IN PLAN

On the orders of the day:

Mr. G. H. Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance. In view of the tabling on Friday of the report on the operations of the Student Loans Plan, has the Government decided yet on improvements to the plan and, if so, does it intend to bring forward legislation before the new year begins?

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the committees of provincial and federal officials that have been steadily working on the plan since its inception have worked out a number of improvements in the administration of the plan which will make it more uniform across Canada, and generally work better. It may be that at some appropriate time it will be desirable to bring in amending legislation, but I have no plans to do so at the moment. The Canada Student Loans Plan in general is working very well indeed.

Mr. Eric A. Winkler (Grey-Bruce): As a supplementary question I would like to ask the Minister whether he has considered the extension of any capital grants to universities in Canada?

Mr. Gordon: I have answered this question before, Mr. Speaker, and I do not know whether I should repeat myself. As my hon. friend knows, we are waiting for the report of the Bladen Commission.

Hon. W. G. Dinsdale (Brandon-Souris): As a further supplementary question, could the Minister indicate whether the bursary program announced two years ago is going to be introduced by the Government before commencement of the next college year?

Mr. Gordon: I am afraid I must say, with respect, to my hon. friend that I am not prepared to announce an important matter of Government policy of this kind at a late hour on orders of the day.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

QUEBEC—STEPS TO IMPROVE UNEMPLOYMENT SITUATION

On the orders of the day:

Hon. Théogène Ricard (St. Hyacinthe-Bagot): Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Labour. In view of the fact that his party has promised full employment, and also in view of the fact that the Province of Quebec has nearly 40 per cent of the actual unemployment in all Canada, could the Minister tell us what are his concrete plans for securing some employment for those of my co-citizens who are jobless?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order please.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

INQUIRY AS TO APPLICATION OF CANADA LABOUR CODE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, may I direct a question to the Minister of Labour. In view of the fact that there are appearing in today's newspapers full page advertisements showing the Minister of Labour being interviewed on television giving the details of the Canada Labour Code, may I ask him whether the provisions of the Canada Labour Code apply on Parliament Hill?

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, the policy of the Government is to apply the principles of the Canada Labour Code to all its employees, and I would gather that the employees on Parliament Hill would be in exactly the same position as other federal employees.

Mr. Knowles: Would the Minister permit a supplementary question? Is he aware of the figures listed in Monday's Votes and Proceedings showing a number of salary rates on Parliament Hill which are below the minimum wage level set out in the Canada Labour Code?

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, so far as I am concerned that ought to be corrected, and the quicker the better.

Mr. Knowles: As a further supplementary question, is the Minister going to correct this before July 1?

Mr. MacEachen: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. G. H. Aiken (Parry Sound-Muskoka): I have a supplementary question for the Minister of Labour in connection with the full page advertisement published this morning. Is this advertisement being paid for by the National Liberal Federation or by the people of Canada?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. The 30 minute period allocated for questions is now expired.

An hon. Member: Saved by the bell.

WAYS AND MEANS

The House in Committee of Ways and Means, Mr. Lamoureux in the Chair.

INCOME TAX ACT

Resolved, that it is expedient to introduce a measure to amend the Income Tax Act and related provisions of the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act and to provide among other things:

1. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years the income tax payable by an individual be reduced by an amount equal to the lesser of 10 per cent of basic tax or $600 and for the 1965 taxation year by an amount equal to the lesser of 5 per cent of basic tax or $300.

2. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer may deduct in computing his taxable income an amount for the support of a person who was his niece or nephew and who during the year resided in Canada, was wholly dependant upon him for support, and was

(a) under 21 years of age,

(b) 21 years of age or over and dependent by reason of mental or physical infirmity, or

(c) 21 years of age or over and in full-time attendance at a school or university,

if

(d) the mother of the niece or nephew was divorced or separated and not in receipt of alimony or similar payments, or

(e) the father of the niece or nephew was deceased or mentally or physically infirm,

not exceeding $300 if the person was a child qualified for family allowance and $550 if he was not so qualified.

3. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer may deduct in computing his taxable income an amount not exceeding $550 expended by him during the year for the support of a person who was his aunt or uncle and who during the year resided in Canada and was dependent upon him for support by reason of mental or physical infirmity.

4. That for the 1970 and subsequent taxation years the additional exemption of $500 now allowed to a taxpayer who has attained the age of 65 years be allowed only if the taxpayer has attained the age of 70 years and that for the taxation years 1966 to 1969 inclusive a taxpayer who has attained the age of 65 years but has not attained the age of 70 years be allowed the additional exemption of $500 only if he did not receive a pension under the Old Age Security Act in respect of any month in that year.

5. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer who deducts in computing his income from an office or employment

[Mr. Knowles.]

(a) annual dues to maintain membership in a trade union or to maintain membership in an association of public servants,

(b) annual dues retained from his remuneration pursuant to the provisions of a collective agreement and paid to a trade union or association, or

(c) annual professional membership dues the payment of which was necessary to maintain a professional status recognized by statute,

shall not by reason of such deduction be ineligible to deduct the standard deduction of $100 described in paragraph (ca) of subsection (1) of section 27 of the Act.

6. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years a person, the spouse of such person residing with him and previously resident in Canada, or any dependent child of such person, shall be deemed to have been resident in Canada throughout a taxation year if such person was at any time in the year performing services in a country other than Canada under a prescribed international development assistance program of the Government of Canada, and was resident in Canada during a part of the year preceding the commencement of such services.

7. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years a contribution made by a person under the Canada Pension Plan or under a provincial pension plan as defined in section 3 of the Canada Pension Plan may be deducted in computing the income of such person.

8. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years the limitation on the amount related to earned income that a taxpayer may deduct as a premium under a registered retirement savings plan be increased from 10 per cent of earned income to 20 per cent of earned income.

9. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years such part of any amount that would otherwise be included in computing income of a taxpayer as a retiring allowance be deductible if it is paid in the year, or within 60 days after the end of the year, as a contribution to a registered pension fund or plan, as a premium under a retirement savings plan, or to a trustee under a deferred profit sharing plan.

10. That there may be deducted in computing the income of a taxpayer an amount in respect of an outlay or expense made by the taxpayer in the 1965 and subsequent taxation years

(a) to a person with whom the taxpayer is dealing at arms length and who is the lessee of property owned by the taxpayer, to obtain the cancellation of a lease on such property,

(b) for landscaping property used by the taxpayer for the purpose of gaining or producing income,

(c) for clearing land or laying tile drainage for the purpose of carrying on a farming business,

(d) as or on account of the cost of making representations to a government, municipality or other public authority in connection with a business carried on by the taxpayer, including representations for the purpose of obtaining a licence, permit, franchise or trademark,

(e) as or on account of the cost incurred in investigating the suitability of a site for a building or other structure planned by the taxpayer for use in connection with a business carried on by him.

11. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a corporation shall be deemed to be resident in Canada throughout a taxation year if

(a) it was incorporated in Canada before April 27, 1965 and was resident in Canada in its taxation year that included April 26, 1965 or in any subsequent on taxation year, or

(b) it was incorporated in Canada after April 26, 1965.

12. That with respect to payments received by a taxpayer after April 26, 1965, other than a payment made upon the death of an employee, the amount that a taxpayer may elect to have taxed under section 36 of the Act shall not exceed

(a) in the case of a single payment

(i) out of or pursuant to a superannuation or pension fund or plan, or

(ii) pursuant to deferred profit sharing plan, or

(iii) pursuant to an employee's profit sharing plan,

$1,500 times the number of years during which the employee, in respect of whom the payment was made, was a member of the plan, or

(b) in the case of

(i) a single payment upon retirement of an employee in recognition of long service, or

(ii) a payment or payments made by an employer to an employee or former employee upon or after retirement in respect of loss of office or employment

$1,000 times the number of years during which the employee, in respect of whom the payment was made, was an employee of the employer who made the payment.

13. That for taxation years commencing after April 26, 1965, a trust or estate (other than a trust or estate arising on death) that has income from a business carried on by it in Canada may not deduct in computing its income an amount paid or payable to a beneficiary who is

(a) a non-resident of Canada,

(b) a non-resident-owned investment corporation, or

(c) another trust or estate resident in Canada, unless that other trust or estate

(i) arose on a death, or

(ii) has been since April 26, 1965 a beneficiary of the trust or estate paying the amount and the trust or estate paying the amount has been carrying on the business since April 26, 1965,

and any amount paid or payable out of the income for the year of the first-mentioned trust or estate will continue to be included in the income of its beneficiary notwithstanding the fact that the first-mentioned trust or estate was not entitled to deduct the amount in computing its income.

14. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years the amount of income derived from a new mine that a corporation may exclude in computing its income shall be confined to income from the operation of the mine by the corporation.

15. That where a joint exploration corporation acquires after April 26, 1965 a right, licence or privilege to explore for, drill for or take petroleum, natural gas or other related hydrocarbons, the cost of the right, licence or privilege may not be renounced to a shareholder corporation.

16. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years an amount that a taxpayer may exclude from his income because it is consideration for a mining property acquired as the result of his effort as a prospector, or as the result of efforts of a prospector who was employed or financially assisted by him, shall not include a share of profits, a royalty or a payment based on production.

17. That the Minister of National Revenue with the approval of the Governor in Council may on behalf of the Government of Canada enter into an agreement with the government of a province, under which one government undertakes to transfer to the other, in respect of income tax paid by an individual from whom deductions were made at source as though he were resident in a place other than the province in which he was resident on the last day of the year, a part of the amount deducted or withheld under section 47 of the Act or a similar provision of a provincial income tax act.

18. That in order to give effect to the provisions of paragraph 1 without reducing the amount of equalization payments to any province a consequential amendment be made to the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act to adjust the fractions set out therein in the definition of "standard individual income tax" used in the computation of equalization payments.

19. That a new section be added to the Act concerning expenditures of a taxpayer for advertising space in a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical having effect substantially as follows:

"12A (1) In computing income, no deduction shall be made in respect of an otherwise deductible outlay or expenses of a taxpayer for advertising space in an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical dated after Decmeber 31, 1965 for an advertisement directed primarily to a market in Canada.

(2) An issue or edition of an issue of any newspaper or periodical that is edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada and that was not on April 26, 1965 a Canadian newspaper or periodical shall be deemed, for the purposes of subsection (1), not to be an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical if

(a) through the period of twelve months ending April 26, 1965 issues or editions of issues of that publication were being edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada at the usual intervals for issues of that publication and have since that date continued to be so edited, printed and published without interruption except for a reason other than the cessation of the business of publishing that publication; and

(b) in the case of a periodical, the periodical is similar, in content and in respect of the class of readers to whom it is directed, to the issues or editions of that periodical that were throughout the period of twelve months ending April 26, 1965 being edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada.

(3) Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an advertisement in a special issue or edition of a newspaper that is edited in whole or in part and printed and published outside Canada if such special issue or edition is devoted to features or news related primarily to Canada and the publishers thereof publish such an issue or edition not more frequently than twice a year.

(4) Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an advertisement in

(a) a catalogue, or

(b) any publication the principal function of which is the encouragement, promotion or development of the fine arts, letters, scholarship or religion.

(5) In this section,

(a) 'Canadian issue' means,

(i) in relation to a newspaper, an issue, including a special issue,

(A) the type of which, other than the type for advertisements or features, is set in Canada,

(B) the whole of which, exclusive of any comics supplement, is printed in Canada,

(C) that is edited in Canada by individuals resident in Canada, and

(D) that is published in Canada, and

(ii) in relation to a periodical, an issue, including a special issue,

(A) the type of which, other than the type for advertisement, is set in Canada,

(B) that is printed in Canada,

(C) that is edited in Canada by individuals resident in Canada, and

(D) that is published in Canada,

but does not include an issue of a periodical

(E) that is produced or published under a license granted by a person who produces or publishes issues of a periodical that are printed, edited or published outside Canada, or

(F) the contents of which, excluding advertisements, are substantially the same as the contents of an issue of a periodical, or the contents of one or more issues of one or more periodicals, that was or were printed, edited or published outside Canada,

(b) 'Canadian newspaper or periodical' means a newspaper or periodical the right to produce and publish issues of which belongs to or is vested in

(i) a Canadian citizen,

(ii) a partnership of which at least ¾ of the members are Canadian citizens and in which interests representing in value at least ¾ of the total value of the partnership property are owned by Canadian citizens,

(iii) an association or society of which at least ¾ of the members are Canadian citizens,

(iv) Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province, or a municipality in Canada, or

(v) a corporation

(A) that is incorporated under the laws of Canada or a province,

(B) of which the chairman or other presiding officer and at least ¾ of the directors or other similar officers are Canadian citizens, and

(C) of which, if it is a corporation having share capital, at least ¾ of the shares having full voting rights under all circumstances, and shares representing in the aggregate at least ¾ of the paid-up capital, are owned by Canadian citizens or by corporations other than corporations controlled directly or indirectly by citizens or subjects of a country other than Canada; and

(c) 'issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical' means an issue that is not a Canadian issue of a Canadian newspaper or periodical."

Mr. Cowan: Mr. Chairman, when the House adjourned last evening I was commenting on some features of paragraph 19 of the resolution before us and had made a direct reference to the so-called brain drain to the United States. I stated that I would comment on that feature in passing. Many of us have heard the expression used, "I don't think that the so-called brain drain to the United States is a one-way street. I believe we can get as much from foreign countries in mental development as we contribute to those foreign countries".

• (4:20 p.m.)

But of course Canadians are well aware of the great contributions Canadians have made to the building up of American institutions, and even to the American system of government. The late Mr. Lane, Secretary of the Interior in Woodrow Wilson's cabinet, was a Canadian from the Atlantic Provinces, a man often described as one who would have made the presidency if it had not been for his birth in this country. There is Dr. Wallace Sterling, a man born, bred and raised in Ontario, a former professor in the University of Alberta, who is making a tremendous contribution to the educational life of the United States as President of the Leland Stanford Jr. University in Palo Alto, California, and most of us are aware of the great and beneficial career of the late Dr. Schurman who was raised and educated in the Maritime Provinces and placed Cornell University in the forefront of modern universities during his lengthy presidency. On the other hand we have men such as Dr. Wilder Penfield of the Montreal Neurological Institute. As I said earlier, I do not consider the brain drain to be a one-way affair.

But in the publishing business one has to consider the products of brains which are sold to the United States, even though the Canadians concerned may continue to reside in Canada. This is the problem which faces Canadian publishers. Not only do the brilliant writers and artists of this country move to the United States in large numbers, because of the greater market for their wares, but many of those who remain in Canada make their livelihood by selling to foreign countries, because of the better rewards they receive for their contributions as compared with those which Canadian magazines can afford.

I can give the committee one definite and striking case which remains in my memory. At the time of the thalidomide cases which were being discussed two years ago, one of the Canadian magazines ran an interesting article on this drug, its discovery, manufacture and use. The article went into these things in some detail. It was quite an interesting one and I learned considerably from reading it. Then a friend of mine suggested I purchase a United States magazine which also had an article on thalidomide and I went out of my way to secure a copy. I can only say that as a Canadian I felt very sorry about the superiority of the United States article as compared with the Canadian article. Indeed I was impressed to the point where I got in touch with the publishers of the two magazines. I found that the Canadian publisher had paid $750 for his article, which was all he felt he could afford. The United States publisher, on the other hand, had paid the brilliant writer who had written the article for him, $7,500. I do not criticize the Canadian publisher in any way. But when United States publishers are able to pay that kind of remuneration for a good article, it is easy to understand why the editorial content of many United States magazines is superior to that of Canadian magazines.

I say, too, that Canadian magazines suffer from the brain drain to the extent that writers resident in Canada send their best pieces to the United States, and other countries abroad where they can receive higher compensation. Not only do we have this brain drain to compete against—and when I say "we" I am speaking from the standpoint of Canadian publishers. We have to consider the fact that if a United States magazine wishes to dump back on this country its editorial expenses such as the $7,500 for the thalidomide article, it can do so, and these expenses are spread not only over the magazine's circulation in the United States but also over its circulation in Canada. When the cost of an article is divided by this combined circulation the publisher will find it works out to a great deal less than the cost of an article to the publisher of a Canadian paper with a much smaller circulation restricted to this country. This is nothing but dumping. The entry into this country of magazines such as Time and Reader's Digest, their editorial content supplied almost entirely from the United States side, is a gross example of dumping.

Canadian consumer magazines are in trouble today; there is no question about that. The greatest obstacle to the successful conduct of Canadian consumer publication is the subsidized advertising rates offered by the nationally owned Canadian Broadcasting Corporation. In the United States market, magazines have to compete with television and radio stations, but at least the publishers know they are competing with private businessmen who must set advertising rates high enough to cover their operating costs and provide a profit. In this country, magazine and newspaper publishers are faced with Government subsidized competition from the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation whose advertising rates need not cover the costs of the operation. If an advertiser refuses to pay the rates offered him, the C.B.C. will simply reduce them to any figure which will attract him. These rates need not cover the cost of operation, because subsidies provided by the Canadian public will make up any loss incurred. Canadian publishers have to establish rates which will attract advertisers to their pages in competition with Government-subsidized C.B.C. advertising rates on radio and television, and this is not fair. Many Canadian publishers find they cannot secure advertising at rates which cover the cost of publication in the newspaper and magazine fields.

There are other angles in the business world of the publisher which make one wonder at times whether the Government of Canada—and I do not mean this Government specifically; I am talking about governments which have come and gone over the last 20 years—is really interested in developing a Canadian publishing economy. I wonder how many people in Canada realize there are hundreds of foreign publications coming into Canada with a total circulation in the hundreds of thousands. Once these publications cross the Canadian border they do not pay anything whatsoever for carriage through the mails. This is due to a postal convention which operates on the theory that if a foreign publisher sends a magazine into Canada, a Canadian publisher presumably sends a Canadian magazine abroad. The result of this arrangement is that many hundreds of foreign papers come into this country by mail from Britain or France or the United States to addresses in Canada. The country of origin gets all this postal revenue, and once these publications cross the border into Canada we Canadians carry them free from their port of entry to wherever they happen to be addressed. Then the Canadian publishers are given the privilege of picking up the deficit by way of taxation to support the Post Office, which is carrying competitors' material free through the mails. I do not know any other business in Canada which is subject to this kind of competition, where a competitor is carried at your expense.

This situation has existed for many years. Canadian publishers have been protesting about it for years and years. We always get the same story: The Postal Union meets only once every five years; when the next meeting comes around we will fix this up. To my own knowledge these protests have been made for 25 years, now, and five meetings of the Postal Union have been held. But the Canadian Government has never yet straightened out this situation.

I should like to draw attention to the fact that the O'Leary Commission, reporting on the Canadian magazine industry, drew the attention of the country to the fact that these magazines and periodicals are carried free in Canada if they are mailed in a foreign country to a Canadian address. On page 97 of the report of the Royal Commission on Publications we find the following:

> The Canadian Post Office receives no revenue from the delivery of foreign second class mail because, under the terms of the Universal Postal Convention, all governments are required to handle free of charge whatever is passed to them by foreign post offices. The foreign post office retains whatever payment is made for the service.
>
> The arrangement is reciprocal and therefore, in theory, equitable. Experience has shown, however, that between Canada and the United States theory fails completely in practice. Canadians receive far more second class material from abroad than they send abroad.

And the Royal Commission recommended:

> That, in the matter of second class mail, the United States be asked for compensation in the form of terminal payments.

If American publishers were required to make terminal payments it would lighten the tax burden on Canadian publishers, who have to compete at present on such an unfair basis.

• (4:30 p.m.)

But we have a practice in Canada which is known as the American remailing rate. The term is irregular, but it is known as that. Under this system approximately 60 United States publications, either by truck, express or freight send their periodicals into Canadian post offices, largely in Montreal and Toronto. While it is called the American remailing rate, it is better known as the American mailing rate, because they are not being remailed; they are being mailed for the first time.

Postage rates in the United States are so high, if a periodical is going to cross the international border and come into this country, that those who have a tremendous circulation have evolved a system, with the Canadian Government whereby, by sending the papers in bulk into Canada, they put them into Montreal and Toronto post offices and the Canadian Government collects a postage rate which is slightly higher than the Canadian publishers are asked to pay, but considerably below what these American publishers would pay if they had mailed in the United States.

Under this American mailing system the Canadian Post Office picks up about $900,000 a year. If the papers were mailed in the United States the Canadian Post Office would not pick up any revenue, so you might state that this $900,000 a year is better than nothing. But for the $900,000 a year that we now receive from American publications coming in under the American remailing rate, it is estimated that the cost of handling those periodicals is in the neighbourhood of $2 million. So you have a direct subsidy to these 55 or 60 papers, through the American remailing rate, of about $1,100,000. And these are Post Office figures.

Canadian publishers have competition also with the Americans in the overflow circulation of the American pulp papers that come into this country. If you see Gordon's gin advertised in an American periodical, just because you are reading it in Canada does not mean that the advertisement has lost its effectiveness. If you see Johnson's wax, which is made at one place in the United States, and in Brantford in Canada, advertised in an American publication and you read it in Canada, the impact of the ad is not lost on the Canadian reader. You can buy Johnson's wax just as easily in Canada as you can buy it in the United States. But the manufacturers' reaction when these articles are nationally advertised in a Canadian paper is, "We have a 100,000 overflow circulation in Canada for which we do not have to pay a cent. Why would we pay anything to a Canadian periodical to carry our advertising, when we pay the cost of advertising to the American papers and the overflow into Canada makes it possible for us to reach our market without any additional cost to us?" Canadian publishers have to meet this obstacle of the overflow circulation.

In addition, the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in its television programs attracts the attention of the public in viewing their programs. This also is paid for by the Canadian taxpayers, including the Canadian publishers. So the Canadian publishers have another opportunity to pay for their competitors with regard to the time they spend viewing this television advertising. The C.B.C. news service is in open competition with the news service of the Canadian Press, which was originated by Canadian publishers in about 1897 and is recognized the world over as a first-class news media. Why do we have to have a Government-subsidized news service running in competition with the Canadian Press, which has been built up at a great deal of expense to the Canadian publishers in this field?

Frankly, Mr. Chairman, I cannot support paragraph 19. It is an omnibus provision and I believe it should be split into sections. You will remember that the original flag motion when introduced into the House of Commons was split into two parts by the Speaker, and I maintain it was rightly so split. Now we are asked to support paragraph 19, an omnibus clause which would allow Time and Reader's Digest to be classified as Canadian publications. I am not opposed to paragraph 19 if it applies equally to all bogus Canadian editions including Time and Reader's Digest. Steps have been taken to impede the entry into Canada of certain foreign publications, but bogus Canadian editions such as these two are to be granted separate permission. I say to you that making statements that this legislation is going to protect the Canadian magazine industry while allowing Time and Reader's Digest to be circulated in this country is the same as a farmer saying he is going to protect his chicken-house and he will shoot any fox that he sees, but he is not going to shoot the two foxes that are inside the chicken-house when he takes up his place at the chicken-house door with his shotgun. That farmer, if he had any sense, would clean out the two foxes that are inside.

The statement is made that if the advertisements in Time and Reader's Digest are taxed in such a way, the freedom of the press is involved. Freedom of the press is in no way involved. The publishers of these two magazines can send them into this country just as freely as the Financial Post, Newsweek, Atlantic and similar publications send in their copies. Freedom of the press is not involved in any way, shape or form.

The Canadian publishers are talking from the standpoint of dumping, and we are being subjected to this in every manner, shape and form by foreign publications. I have in my hand an editorial from the Ottawa Citizen of June 16, 1961. This is an article entitled "A magazine report" which was written just after the O'Leary Report came down. They pointed out that what is happening in the industry are unfair practices and they should be dealt with accordingly, for they are a form of dumping. That verifies what I have stated to you. This form of dumping in the Canadian publishing business has not been readily recognized by all Canadian businessmen.

This omnibus paragraph No. 19, would also, we are told, afford an umbrella type of protection to the Canadian owners of daily newspapers. I can only point out that with the exception of one daily newspaper in Canada, the other 103 have protested against this proposed action of the Government, and this proposed legislation. I am told by some people that a certain publisher in this country wrote a letter to the Government and said, "I have reconsidered my stand on the matter and I do believe your legislation is worth while and for the good of the country". I would like to point out that the publisher of the daily newspaper who wrote that letter is a member of a publishing chain which not only has daily newspapers in its stables but has either the first or second largest stable of trade magazines in Canada. This legislation, which will penalize advertisers who use foreign publications, will be of tremendous benefit to the trade magazines in Canada. Of such legislation I approve. But I cannot sit here and see two publications such as Time and Reader's Digest being afforded special treatment while efforts are made to impede the entry of other publications.

The Deputy Chairman: Order. I must inform the hon. Member that his time has expired.

Mr. Cowan: I wish simply to state that I cannot support this legislation.

Some hon. Members: Carry on.

The Deputy Chairman: Does the committee give unanimous consent to the hon. Member's continuing?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Cowan: I thank you sincerely, Mr. Chairman, and hon. Members for giving me extra time. I had intended to speak again, possibly when this matter comes up for further consideration, because I am sure the matter is not going to be settled this afternoon. Since I have stated that I cannot support this resolution simply because of paragraph 19, might I point out to you that I still consider myself a Liberal. I think Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent and Hon. Walter Harris, the Minister of Finance in 1956, struck a great blow for the Canadian publishing industry when they imposed that 20 per cent advertising tax on Time and Reader's Digest. It was later rescinded by a Government not Liberal. But I say that Prime Minister St. Laurent and Hon. Walter Harris were doing the right thing at that time, despite protests that were received at that time from the United States that this was in violation of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. Prime Minister St. Laurent, speaking personally to Canadian publishers, said:

• (4:40 p.m.)

I told the President of the United States that something had to be done for the Canadian publishing industry and I was doing it.

I sincerely believe that I should tell the present President of the United States that something has to be done for the Canadian publishing industry; and I submit we should impose the same restrictions on advertising in Time and Reader's Digest that the Government is willing to impose on other publications.

An hon. Member: Time.

Mr. Cowan: In discussing the question of Time and Reader's Digest a great deal is heard about their employees in Canada.

Mr. Rock: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order, the hon. Member's time has expired and he did not get the permission of the Committee to continue.

Mr. Crouse: He did.

Mr. Rock: There were a lot of noes, and I was one of them.

The Deputy Chairman: Order. It was the understanding of the Chair that the hon. Member had the consent of the committee to continue. If that is not so, I should like to hear so now. Does the committee give unanimous consent for the hon. Member to continue?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Crouse: Yes, go ahead.

Some hon. Members: No.

The Deputy Chairman: I hear noes. The hon. Member for Burnaby-Richmond.

Mr. Prittie: Mr. Chairman, I am sorry that there were some noes, because I always find the hon. Member for York-Humber very interesting to listen to, not simply because he is a maverick but because he discusses this particular subject of the publishing business well. I have something in common with the hon. Member for York-Humber in that I do not like this particular measure either, and I particularly object to the fact that we are dealing with an omnibus resolution which includes so many things in it. This is not just an ordinary resolution which deals with taxation matters; it goes much further than that. The question of Canadian nationalism and the type of feeling which should exist in this country in the future is involved, as one hon. Member mentioned last night.

We have heard a great deal in the last year or two about the nationalism of French Canada and the future survival of French Canada. I think that this is a similar situation for the country as a whole. What does it take for a particular national or linguistic group to survive and to maintain the particular feeling which must be built up so that survival is possible?

There are many agencies in the country which are working at the idea of a national feeling. Certainly radio and television are two agencies which are very important in that respect. I suggest to you, Mr. Chairman, that if one were determined to wipe out French Canada, one of the things he would do would be to eliminate the broadcasting field entirely. In Canada we have taken deliberate decisions in the past to maintain, at quite great cost, a national broadcasting system. Complaints are made from time to time about how the system operates and how much its costs; but by and large, with very few exceptions, the majority of Members of Parliament reflect the view of the majority in the country that we must have this system for the survival of a Canadian national feeling in the future. We have a great many regulations designed to make sure that Canadian broadcasting is maintained, and we spend a great deal of money on the maintenance of this system.

I would suggest that our school system is another of the agencies which is used to maintain a feeling of Canadian identity—I am very much aware of this because before I entered this House I was a high school teacher of history and the social studies. In this field you work with whatever tools are available. You use textbooks. If popular journals are available dealing with Canada and various aspects of our history, then you use those as well. During my teaching career I have found that periodicals such as Maclean's magazine, Saturday Night and Weekend Picture Magazine were of considerable aid in this regard. If these were not available and we had to rely on United States publications, only, then would the task of the teacher be much more difficult. Therefore anything which strikes at Canadian periodicals I think endangers the type of feeling in our young Canadians which we wish to maintain in this country.

Let us take the case of Maclean's magazine. I have read it for many years. It has had its ups and downs. Sometimes it is good, sometimes not so good. I think it is on one of the down periods at the present time; nevertheless it is one of the best we have in the country. This magazine, published by the Maclean-Hunter Publishing Company, is subsidized by that company. They must take part of the profits which they make from their trade publications in order to maintain the publication of Maclean's magazine and its French edition, Le Magazine Maclean. This company is a private enterprise. It is not a philanthropic organization. It is not a sort of Canada Council and it should not be expected to plough its profits from one side of its operations back into maintaining something which I think is essential for this country.

I do not suppose that many Members of this House would agree that the Canada Council or some other Government agency ought to give this company a direct subsidy to carry on with its work, but I think that the Government could take action to make the task of such companies a little easier at the present time. Certainly the proposed action of Canadianizing Time and Reader's Digest, thus depriving these Canadian periodicals of potential advertising revenue, is no help to them at all.

This has come about in a very strange way. I noticed one of the columnists in the Toronto Star, Mr. Robert Fulford, had this to say in his column on April 27, 1965, and I thought he summed up the situation very well. He said:

> Canadian nationalism, as expressed by the federal government, is frequently more eloquent than rational. Consider the broadcasting regulations which limit foreign content on T.V. They were announced in 1960 as a means of promoting Canadian programs but instead the airways are today dominated by Hollywood to an extent few of us would have thought possible in the 1950s.

I realize that is another problem.

> In the same way, the legislation on magazines announced last night by the finance minister is a kind of rhetorical shadow-boxing. It can have no seriously beneficial effect.
>
> The magazines of this country—those few which still exist, largely through the generosity or optimism of their owners—say they are dying from a lack of advertising revenue. They believe their revenue has been drained off by Canadian editions of Time and Reader's Digest.
>
> So Walter Gordon has bravely declared that foreign-owned magazines other than the two said to be causing the trouble will not be allowed to operate on the same tax basis as other publications. In effect he has said: the magazines are dying, so, to protect our national identity, we pass a law making certain that the situation stays as it is.
> In this there is a kind of logic which is comprehensible only in Ottawa.

I do not know why this particular clause has been put into the resolution. From all his past statements it is very much contrary to the thinking of the Minister of Finance. It is contrary to the thinking of many supporters of the Government. One can only conclude that the pressure in the Cabinet was such that the Minister of Finance had to bow to the wishes of someone and is loyally going along with the decision which has been made.

I can only assume that this is the same sort of decision which the hon. Member for Verdun had to take when he spoke yesterday. At that time he said, as reported at page 2460 of Hansard:

> If somebody could get up tonight and convince me that the elimination of Time and Reader's Digest from the Canadian scene would automatically ensure the future of Maclean's, and other Canadian magazines, I would be the first to vote for this legislation; but somehow I am afraid the problems of Canadian periodicals run a little deeper than legislation to force advertising revenue into the pockets of those magazines.

I think we can make the attempt, Mr. Chairman. I am very sure that if we do not make the attempt the Canadian periodical scene will be dominated by these two foreign-owned publications for a long time in the future. It seems to me that if these two magazines want to be considered as completely Canadian, then let them be Canadian. Let them set up complete editorial offices in Canada and let the complete work of preparation be done in Canada.

I am very disappointed by the operations of Time magazine in one particular respect. I admit that I read the magazine all the time and have done for 25 years or so. I would probably subscribe to it whether it was published in Canada or in the United States, and would do so even if the price were higher than it is. It has a gossipy form of coverage of the news that I happen to like.

• (4:50 p.m.)

However, I notice Time magazine publishes an insert for Canada of three or four pages at the beginning of every issue. If you buy Time in the United States you do not see that. There might be some justification for what they are doing, if the Canadian section appeared in the United States issue. They might be able to say that they were passing on to Americans the general news about Canada. As we all know, they are not very well informed on this subject. However, they are not even doing that, because the Canadian insert is simply for the Canadian edition, and I suggest this is something we could well do without if we have to pay the price contemplated in this particular legislation.

As far as Reader's Digest is concerned, I have not seen very much value in this magazine. I sometimes buy the French edition just to practise reading French, but as far as the English edition is concerned, it is not of very high quality in my opinion. But that is quite beside the point.

Regarding the proposal concerning newspapers, I think most Members of the New Democratic Party support the idea. We feel that steps should be taken to keep Canadian newspapers under Canadian control, and that this is a matter of some importance. This subject came up in New Zealand some time ago when there was a danger that one or two of the leading newspapers of that country were being considered for purchase by outside interests. The New Zealand Government at the time acted promptly to solve the problem.

I seem to remember from the history of the 1930's that there was some similar trouble in France, and that many of the newspapers of that country were effectively controlled, if not owned, by outside interests. Editorial comments appeared in those newspapers which were very much against the interests of the French people, and in the history of France, leading to their downfall in the war in 1940, this played a significant role.

Very frequently we are criticized by the United States for the type of measure which is proposed here concerning newspapers. I suggest that if the United States was in the same position as Canada and there was a danger that the majority of the publications of that country were to come under the ownership of some other country, the United States would react very quickly. United States citizens are very protection conscious, and if one of their products is likely to be affected by an import from Canada or some other country, Congress hears about it very quickly. I suggest that if United States publications were seriously threatened, this is what would happen, although that situation is not likely to develop in view of the growth which has taken place in that country and in view of its size and power.

Let us suppose the situation between the United States and Mexico was reversed and there was a gigantic Spanish speaking country of 190 million people living next door to the United States, and the power of that country threatened to dominate the smaller country next door. I suggest to you that the United States would be thinking and advocating action along the lines which are proposed in Canada at the present time concerning both periodicals and newspapers.

Mr. Churchill: Would the hon. Member permit a question?

[Mr. Prittie.]

Mr. Prittie: Yes.

Mr. Churchill: I do not like to interrupt, but does the hon. Member see any threat of foreign ownership of Canadian newspapers at the present time?

Mr. Prittie: I do not know the details of what newspapers are up for sale or who the possible purchasers might be, but certainly that is a real possibility. After all, a newspaper is a business operation and if it is paying well I should imagine there would be foreign individuals or chains, such as in the United States, who might like to buy them out because they are profit-making organizations. However, one must remember that a newspaper is something more than a profit-making organization, it is a journal of opinion, and opinions can be formed through editorial columns.

I might say that I suppose those of us in the New Democratic Party should not worry too much about who owns the newspapers, whether it is Americans or Canadians, because we get whacked regularly in the editorial columns.

Mr. Rock: That is because you are anti-American.

Mr. Prittie: That is about the silliest comment I have heard for a long time.

I am concerned that these vital matters of information and publications should be under the control of Canadian nationals, and I will have to add, however bad they may be sometimes. I am optimistic and I always live and hope for improvement in the publishing world.

At the beginning of my remarks I said that the whole question of Canadian nationalism is involved in this question of periodicals, as it is involved in the question of radio and television. It has been said that this country was built in defiance of geography. It has been maintained in defiance of geography, living as we do next to a country which is so powerful. I do not think that country deliberately tries to do many of the things that have been done; that is, deliberately attempts to further Americanize Canada; but that does take place. They just cannot help it, because of their power and the media that they control.

If we want Canada to exist as a separate country and, more important, if we want the people to think and feel as Canadians, then we will always have to make an effort in the future to be Canadian and to promote the feeling of Canadian entity. Certainly we cannot promote this type of feeling of Canadian entity if we pass measures such as those proposed here, which give a privileged position to two United States-owned periodicals. We will simply have done nothing for the Canadian publishing industry by Canadianizing Time and Reader's Digest, which at the present time operate in Canada at a very low cost from the point of view of advertising, while depriving our Canadian periodicals of the support they need in order to do the job of promoting the feeling of Canadian entity. I think this is absolutely essential and I am sure every Member of this House must feel the same way, otherwise we would have all packed up and gone to the United States a long time ago, perhaps for better pay. This measure strikes at any work that is to be done in the future to build an effective Canadian periodical publishing industry.

Mr. Chairman, may I call it five o'clock.

Mr. Walker: May we have the question?

Mr. Prittie: May I call it five o'clock, Mr. Chairman.

Progress reported.

AIRPORTS

VANCOUVER—CONSTRUCTION TO ASSURE ACCESS TO SEA ISLAND

Mr. R. W. Prittie (Burnaby-Richmond) moved:

That, in the opinion of this House, the Federal Government should give consideration to the advisability of constructing a bridge or tunnel across the North arm of the Fraser River between the City of Vancouver and Sea Island in the municipality of Richmond for the purpose of assuring uninterrupted access to the Vancouver International Airport.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I should like to see a Canadian-built tunnel in the area in question. This has been a continuing problem which was debated in the House over a year ago, but there has not been very much progress made since that time.

The Vancouver International Airport, which is the third busiest airport in Canada serving the third largest metropolitan area of the country, is in a unique position. For the benefit of Members who have not had the good fortune of visiting the ever green playground, perhaps I can draw a comparison. If the airport in Toronto, that is the main International airport, were situated on Toronto Island and if that airport were connected to the city by a narrow, two lane swing bridge which opened when tugs or barges came by, you would have some idea of the problem with which this particular area is faced. You can imagine the outcry that would be heard in the capital city of Ontario if, from time to time, this bridge were held open for a period of two hours while traffic was backed up for miles.

• (5:00 p.m.)

The Vancouver International Airport is situated on a small island called Sea Island. Now, this island cannot be reached from the mainland, from the Burrard Peninsula on which the cities of Vancouver, Burnaby and New Westminster are situated, unless you go to another island called Lulu Island. You cross a bridge to that island, and then you cross a second small bridge to get out to the island on which the airport is actually located.

There have been problems in the past in connection with this bridge, Mr. Speaker. I have not kept a catalogue of the number of times the bridge has been out of commission and traffic has been held up. However, I should like to quote briefly from an article which refers to one of the worst examples of traffic being held up. I am quoting from the Richmond Review for April 19, 1962. The article describes the traffic tie-up which was caused by the failure of this bridge to function properly, and I quote:

Sea Island was cut off from Canada for 2½ hours on Sunday.

A mechanical failure is believed responsible for the jamming of the swing span on the Moray channel bridge. The bridge was opened for marine traffic, but refused to close completely.

While the defect was investigated, traffic backed up from the crossing to the airport. On the other side of the bridge, traffic piled up to the toll gates of the Oak Street bridge, where motorists were advised to take another route.

Incidentally, there is no other route to the airport.

Traffic flow was eventually restored before the fault was corrected, after traffic officials determined that the bridge was safe for traffic in spite of being two feet out of line.

Two flights were held up to allow delayed passengers to make connections. One, a Viscount flight to Edmonton was held up 40 minutes, and another Viscount to Victoria and Seattle was delayed 20 minutes.

Incoming passengers merely sat at the airport and fumed.

There is another heading in this newspaper which refers to the Liberals asking for quick action. The Liberal candidate for Burnaby-Richmond at the time commented on the situation and said that Ottawa ought to do something about it. He noted that Mr. Chevrier, speaking in the House on this subject introduced by the previous Member for Burnaby-Richmond, had said something should be done about the situation. So, we have this problem, and I suggest that if the problem existed at Dorval Airport near Montreal or Malton Airport near Toronto, we would have heard a great deal more about it. The fact remains that the third busiest airport in Canada serving the third largest metropolitan area in Canada is tied up because of this bridge. This is quite important because of not only the possibility of delay for ordinary air line passengers, but the question of safety is involved. The main hospital in British Columbia is Vancouver General Hospital and it often has to receive people flown into the Vancouver International Airport from many parts of the Province. Someone may be seriously hurt in a logging accident. When he is flown to the airport, he has to get to the hospital as quickly as possible. If this bridge is out because of some passing marine traffic or because it has been hit by a barge, we have a very serious situation.

As I say, the problem is there and it has been there for several years. It is not a political matter so far as I am concerned. My predecessors who have represented Burnaby-Richmond, a Conservative and a Liberal, have both brought this matter to the attention of the House in the past. About a year ago the Federal and Provincial Governments did agree to undertake an engineering study to determine if a bridge or a tunnel were feasible at this point. The cost of this study was to be shared 50-50 by the two Governments. The report resulting from that study has not been published as yet, although I think they have had a great deal of time. Many local organizations are interested in this subject, as you would expect. The council of the municipality of Richmond, the Chamber of Commerce of Richmond, the Vancouver Board of Trade and the Sea Island Community Association, are all interested.

Recently the Richmond Chamber of Commerce wrote to the Deputy Minister of Transport about this subject. They wrote to the Minister of Highways in British Columbia as well. The reply from the Deputy Minister of Transport was dated April 29, 1965, and I quote:

> With reference to your letter of April 23rd, addressed to the Minister of Transport and requesting a copy of the survey made on traffic flow from Vancouver to Sea Island, it is suggested that you direct your request for a copy of this report to the Department of Highways in Victoria.

[Mr. Prittie.]

> While it is true that the cost of the survey is being shared equally by the Federal Department of Transport and the Provincial Department of Highways, the survey was initiated by and is being prepared under the direction of the Highway Department and, at the time of writing, we have not received the report on the second half of the study.

Then, they wrote to the Minister of Highways of British Columbia, Mr. Gaglardi. They received a reply dated May 7, 1965, and I quote:

> This is still under study in conjunction with the City of Vancouver and necessarily has to tie in with urban street developments throughout the whole area. For this reason no final decision has been made and additional data is required before any further planning can be carried out.

Now, Mr. Speaker, some Members may wonder how the Federal Government becomes involved in this matter. Well, the airport is owned by the Federal Government and operated by the Department of Transport. Not only do they own the airport but they own almost 75 per cent of the land on this island. There remains on the island two residential subdivisions and a small amount of industrial area, but the largest part of the island is under federal control. I imagine that in the future, as we approach the day when supersonic aircraft will be operating, the Department will require more and more of the Island, so that eventually they will own it all. The Government is the owner of this property and administers the airport. The Government must feel some responsibility for making sure that passengers arriving at the airport from points in the United States, Latin America, Eastern Canada and Europe by direct flight can get off this small island and into the city or the surrounding municipalities. Similarly, people leaving Vancouver to go to many parts of the world should be able to leave without having to worry about a two-lane bridge that may be out of operation.

The Federal Government therefore is the owner of the property and the operator of the airport. For these reasons, I feel they have a definite responsibility to do something about access to the airport. I do not want to suggest the Federal Government has the entire responsibility. Generally speaking, bridges, tunnels and highways are a provincial responsibility. Certainly, the Government of British Columbia should accept some responsibility in this regard. The Government of British Columbia prides itself on the number of highways and bridges it has built. Those of us who live in the metropolitan-urban areas have a feeling the Government is rather more generous with other areas of the Province than they are with the more heavily populated lower mainland region from which they get the greater portion of their gasoline taxes.

• (5:10 p.m.)

A year ago the Minister of Transport said that the Federal Government probably would not participate in the cost of building the type of connection requested here. He made some remark about the great big beautiful debt free Province of B.C. and that it could afford this itself. However, following that, the Department did agree to go 50-50 with the Provincial Department of Highways in the engineering survey.

Since that time the Minister of Transport has moved a little further. I imagine he has been prodded somewhat by the Minister of Northern Affairs and National Resources (Mr. Laing) who is a native of Richmond. His riding is on the Vancouver side of the area I am speaking about, and he has stated publicly and in letters to organizations that he feels such a tunnel should be built. He has had some success with his colleague, but not complete success.

The Minister of Transport was out there at the end of March, and he had this to say as reported in the Vancouver Sun of March 30, 1965:

> Transport Minister J. W. Pickersgill said here today the Federal Government has made no decision on a suggestion that a tunnel be built between Vancouver International Airport and the city.
>
> The Minister said in an interview studies are being made regarding better access to the airport, but no decision has been made as to whether a tunnel or a bridge or anything should be built.
> "A study has been going on for some time, and a first report completed," he said.
>
> "I will be studying that report when I return to Ottawa, and then a second study must be undertaken, presumably to determine cost."
>
> Pickersgill was commenting on an announcement here last week by Northern Affairs Minister Art Laing that the government is considering construction of a tunnel.
>
> The Minister said Laing was merely expressing a personal desire to see a tunnel built, rather than a bridge.
> "I don't disagree with him that good access is needed to the airport," Pickersgill said, "but cost will be a large determination."

This problem becomes more urgent and there is the ever present danger of the bridge being out when it is needed at a vital time should an emergency arise.

Construction has begun on a large new terminal at Vancouver International Airport, and it is needed because there is increasing business there. I believe action should be taken now to begin the construction of a better access from the populous part of Vancouver, and surrounding cities, to the airport.

The new terminal building is scheduled for opening in 1967. I doubt very much whether we can have a new crossing to Sea Island Airport ready at that time, but this very important decision must be taken quite soon. Between the time a decision is taken and plans are drawn up, and the time construction is carried out, a large amount of time elapses. Therefore I urge that the Minister of Transport ask his officials to conclude some type of negotiations with the Provincial Department of Highways on a cost sharing basis, so that engineering plans can be started and so that construction of this very necessary link be undertaken before many months pass.

The Minister of Transport said it all depends on the cost. If the Government admits it has a responsibility in this connection, being the owner and operator of the airport, then it has to bear part of the cost in agreement with the Government of B.C. I know agreement with B.C. may not be easily come by, but this is one of the tasks of government, to negotiate and obtain a proper cost sharing agreement so that the link from Vancouver to the airport can be begun and so that we will not suffer this ridiculous situation for many more years.

Mr. Jack Davis (Parliamentary Secretary to Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, as a Member from the west coast I do not hesitate to endorse the general position taken by the hon. Member for Burnaby-Richmond Mr. Prittie) that we should have improved access from the built-up areas in Vancouver to Vancouver International Airport.

We read a good deal these days about the collapse of time and space. We know we can travel to any part of the world in a matter of hours, and it is a matter of some frustration to many of us that once we are grounded, once we are reduced to surface travel, the time elapsing between arrival at an airport and one's final destination is often comparable to that which one has spent in the air.

Some 50 years ago it took five days to cross Canada from Montreal to Vancouver. Today, even allowing for a half hour stop at Toronto, one can get from Montreal to Vancouver in approximately five hours. I do not want to imply that in a foreseeable period of time we will be able to span that distance in five minutes, but certainly if the supersonic air transport era arrives, in 10 or 15 years time it will be possible to get from Montreal to Vancouver non-stop in perhaps an hour and a half. For this reason delays on the ground become of increasing importance.

I would suggest that we as a nation can afford to invest much larger sums of money in improving our avenues of surface transportation between the principal gathering points in downtown areas and the airport terminals. In this country air passenger miles have increased no less than fivefold over the last decade. This is a fantastic rate of increase. Air travel is relatively becoming more important than passenger rail travel, and is gaining on road transportation. Many more of the average Canadian's transportation dollars are going into air transport, and this is significant. We have some 5 million Canadian air passengers moving about the country each year. The proportion of the total population which is now flying from one point to another in Canada is substantial, and I submit is growing rapidly.

The sums of money involved in improving access routes to air terminals are not necessarily very large. They are certainly not large in relation to the sums of money being spent on subsonic, and in future years supersonic aircraft. They are not large relative to the sums of money being spent on the terminals themselves.

The tunnel which conceivably could be built under the north arm of the Fraser River, which would permit one to arrive at the Vancouver air terminal and 20 minutes later be downtown in Vancouver, might cost in the order of $6 million. This $6 million figure is small relative to the current investment Air Canada has in planes alone, which is something of the order of $300 million. This $6 million for the tunnel is also relatively small as compared with the estimated $23 million cost of the new air terminal building in Vancouver, which will be completed in our centennial year, 1967.

I suggest that if air pasengers had their choice they would put up with the present air terminal in Vancouver if they could get downtown in perhaps less than half the time, perhaps a third of the time that it takes them now to get from the terminal to the centre of the city.

I shall not attempt to describe the location of the proposed tunnel, because the hon. Member for Burnaby-Richmond has endeavoured to do that, but I would like to answer somewhat more specifically some of the points he has raised. In particular, he has asked for information.

Traffic circulation between the downtown Vancouver area and Sea Island on which the International Airport is located, and the adjacent Lulu Island, has been a matter of considerable concern for a number of years. In view of the anticipated growth of airport operations as indicated in economic studies of the area—and in passing I may mention that the Stanford Research Institute recently completed a very extensive review of the Vancouver area—the situation can be expected to become acute within a short period, particularly as the present access to the airport is solely by means of one swing bridge which must also cater to the needs of the river traffic.

• (5:20 p.m.)

In 1963 the Federal Government entered into an agreement with the Province of British Columbia whereby the Province would undertake a study and make a report on the feasibility and costs of a bridge or tunnel crossing the north arm of the Fraser River between the mainland and Sea Island. The Federal Government undertook to bear 50 per cent of the cost of such a study, such a contribution not to exceed the sum of $30,000. It was stipulated in the agreement that there was no undertaking, implied or otherwise, that the Federal Government would bear any of the cost of the construction of the crossing if it was built.

A firm of consulting engineers, Phillips, Barratt and Partners of Vancouver, appointed by the Highways Department of the Province of British Columbia did in January 1965 submit to that Department Part A of the Sea Island access study covering traffic forecasts and alternate routes. Part A of the access study was forwarded to the Minister of Transport by the Provincial Minister of Highways on March 23, 1965 requesting comments on the report. The Minister of Highways indicated he was prepared to initiate the second phase of the study concerning preliminary engineering and capital costs estimates for alternative crossings at Hudson Street, provided such action was agreeable to the Minister of Transport. In a reply dated April 14, 1965, the Minister of Transport here concurred in proceeding with Part B of the access study, namely the engineering cost study. In discussion with the officers of the Highway Department the target date for receipt of part B of the report from the consultants has been set for the end of September 1965.

I should like to summarize a synopsis of Part A of the report dealing with the traffic and the congestion expected to occur on the present bridge access to the Sea Island airport. Both the Oak Street and Middle Arm bridges and their approaches are now loaded to their practical capacities, and during peak hour traffic flows their capacities are exceeded. This traffic growth will soon make conditions on the existing Middle Arm Bridge intolerable. A new four lane traffic facility, either a bridge or a tunnel, should be located across the North Arm of the Fraser River to accommodate the bulk of airport traffic which originates from or is destined to Vancouver. This location would not only represent the most direct route to Sea Island but would also help reduce traffic flows across the existing Oak Street bridge. The most feasible locations for this crossing are at either Hudson or Granville Streets. Department of Transport regulations, which limit obstructions on and in the vicinity of Sea Island, make a bridge crossing along the Granville Street route absolutely prohibitive. A high level bridge on the Hudson Street route is, however, marginally possible.

Later in the synopsis it is stated that in view of the many location, timing and cost uncertainties concerning the proposed Stanford freeway system for Greater Vancouver, it is not recommended that the new crossing to Sea Island be planned and designed as an integral part of a projected North-South Freeway. However, provision for a connection between a new Sea Island Crossing and a future North South Freeway can and should be made.

That is the position. The preliminary traffic study has been completed. It indicates there is an urgent need for either a tunnel or a bridge. It suggests that a four lane tunnel or bridge be built in the near future. The second phase of the investigation, namely engineering costs and related studies, is now under way and should be completed later this year. Obviously this is a subject which is of concern to the City of Vancouver and to the surrounding municipalities and, hence, to Greater Vancouver. It is of concern to several of the outlying municipalities which I represent—the districts of West Vancouver and North Vancouver, and the City of North Vancouver, which include among them the highest income municipalities in Canada. Their populations include people who travel a great deal more than most Canadians. They travel not only to different parts of Canada but to different parts of this continent and across the ocean, and in doing so they use airport facilities a great deal and are directly concerned with improvements in ground transportation.

The province, which is primarily responsible for highway construction, is obviously directly involved. However, I suggest that the Federal Government also has a responsibility in this connection. As a result of a transaction completed with the City of Vancouver a few years ago, it now owns the Vancouver International Airport. It is responsible for certain air force operations; and the Department of Transport operates on Sea Island. Moreover, the Department is primarily responsible for air transportation in this country and it must, therefore, concern itself with the physical facilities associated with such travel. In recent years, particularly in post-war years, we have done very well in respect to the vehicles of travel, such as aircraft. We have several very fine fleets which are relatively up to date. Air terminal facilities in this country are improving rapidly—I have in mind the airports at Montreal, Malton, Halifax and so on. We as federal taxpayers have invested more than $100 million in new construction to make it easier for passengers to arrive, board aircraft and be discharged from them.

I think a logical extension of this immense investment would be to take an interest in the access facilities to downtown areas so as to help people to travel more rapidly from these airports to their final points of destination. This calls for co-operation between the municipalities concerned and the Provincial Government, as well as between the Provinces and the Federal Government. In a very practical way I think we shall see another exercise in co-operative federalism in this field. I trust we shall see it at the Vancouver International Airport in the near future. I know we shall have a fine new air terminal in Canada's third largest and third busiest airport and I trust we shall also have by far the most efficient means of transporting passengers to outlying communities.

It is possible that a new tunnel—and I would certainly advocate a tunnel rather than a bridge—would enable passengers arriving at the airport to get to downtown Vancouver in 20 minutes. This would be a remarkable situation and a great improvement compared with the hour, or several hours sometimes, it takes to reach airports in other parts of the world from the centres of the cities they chiefly serve.

I, personally, as a private Member, intend to press for the construction in the near future of a $6 million four-lane tunnel under the North Arm of the Fraser River to speed up surface transportation to Vancouver International Airport.

Mr. Arnold Webster (Vancouver-Kingsway): The resolution presented by the Member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie) reminds us that in these days of rapid growth, one of the most difficult problems facing large cities is that of transportation. This is especially true of Vancouver because of the geographical features of the lower mainland. All motor traffic comes from the South or the East. The area we are now discussing and with which I am very familiar contains two islands, Lulu Island and Sea Island, formerly farmland but now largely subdivided into private homes occupied by people who work in Vancouver.

The suggested bridge or tunnel across the North Arm of the Fraser River would provide an alternate route for thousands of motorists during the morning and evening rush hours. We should remember, in this regard, that after the opening of the Oak Street Bridge several years ago the old bridge to Sea Island was demolished and never replaced. Another condition that merits examination is the fact that heavy traffic from and to the United States will continue to increase and create a bottleneck where cars leave the present bridge and enter Oak Street in Vancouver.

However, the most compelling reason for the Federal Government giving favourable consideration to the resolution before us is the need of providing a second route to the airport on Sea Island. Today there is not only the possibility of inconvenience and delay for thousands of passengers, but the ever present danger of inability to deal with emergencies which may arise at any time. Surely it is the responsibility of federal authorities to plan ahead and to recommend facilities that will assure uninterrupted access in the future from Vancouver to the International Airport.

Mr. Grant Deachman (Vancouver Quadra): Mr. Speaker, I am glad to see this resolution brought forward again this year. As the hon. Member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie) mentioned in his opening remarks, the resolution was put on the order paper last year; it came forward and was debated. Now a year has rolled by and we are a little nearer to having a new airport built in Vancouver, but there is still time to debate this resolution again.

I am sure, Mr. Speaker, it must come as something of a surprise to you to learn that while we are on the eve of letting tenders to build a very large airport terminal in Canada's third largest city we have not yet settled the question of how to get to it. Here is the airfield where it has sat now for many years since the airport on Sea Island was taken up first for R.C.A.F. purposes and as a local airport, and it has expanded until now it has become one of the great major airports of the country. The question of how to get to this little island in the mouth of the Fraser is still a critical question, and is apparently still an unsolved question as we come right to the moment when we are about to build this air terminal.

One would expect, naturally, that the Province, which is responsible for the building of roads, and the municipalities, which are responsible for the building of local roads, would long since have taken up this question and we would not now have to be threshing away with surveys such as my colleague the Parliamentary Secretary to the Prime Minister (Mr. Davis) mentioned in the course of his remarks, to determine whether to put a bridge and road through to this important airport. If the Province cannot get around to doing what the Province ought to do, supplying highways to the important points in British Columbia, I am sure the task will eventually fall back upon the Federal Government. The Federal Government will not let the people of Vancouver go begging one way or another, and will find some way of seeing that the road and the bridge are built.

If they do not, and these two jurisdictions are quite unable to do this, we will have a magnificent airport sitting out there on Sea Island and there will be no adequate access to it, except over the overcrowded Moray Channel approach. That will be a great day indeed for Okanagan Helicopters. This company, one of the biggest helicopter companies in the world, has its home base and head office on Sea Island, where this airport will be, and I am sure they would be delighted to lift all the passengers from the City of Vancouver to and from the airport if the Federal Government and the Provincial Government or the City of Richmond cannot figure how to get there by road or bridge.

When the hon. Member for Coast-Capilano, the Parliamentary Secretary, mentioned the traffic that is growing on the Moray Channel bridge and which will shortly overcrowd that bridge, I reflected on how many times I myself had been held up going to and from that airport. One can recall the times not very long ago when the bridge, which is a swing-bridge, was opened to permit fishing vessels to go underneath. It is a narrow bridge. The road must converge at that point into one single stream of traffic in either direction in order for one to reach the airport or to come back from the airport. So that traffic cannot move very swiftly. Unless you hit it at rush hours, it is not too inconvenient; but at rush hours the traffic may back up until it is standing for several blocks in either direction waiting to get across the Moray Channel bridge. And at times when there is really some great occasion to move out to the airport, such as for a reception for some great person who comes to visit Vancouver, or something of this kind, then the road is plugged completely and vehicles stand there with the drivers pumping on their horns and hoping against hope that the traffic will move, wondering whether they will get home for dinner or whether they will have to camp out. So it is most important indeed that this matter be taken up along with the question of building a new airport at Vancouver.

While I am on this subject, Mr. Speaker, I want for a moment to digress. This is an hour of the day in which digressions seem to occur, and perhaps Your Honour will permit a digression in connection with the building of an airport at Vancouver. A number of us in Vancouver have been taking up with the Minister the question of airport art. As you know, it is the custom today to put into all the new airports in Canada some contentious art work. In the airport at Edmonton there is a great splash of a mural on the wall which looks as if an aircraft had "pranged" there.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Deachman: In the new airport at Regina, I think it is, they have some children's blocks placed upon the wall, painted in different colours, as children's blocks generally are, and that looks quite interesting. In the airport at Winnipeg they have some bars up and down and a few of them across, and that is a very interesting design indeed. I am sure an artist of great renown built that and sold it to the Department of Transport at a considerable price. In the airport at Toronto they have some rather different things. This shows the broadness of our national culture. There on a steel pole one can see several shafts or rods pointing in different directions, which gives one a bit of a feeling of flight. However, if flight should fail you can go down to the other end of the airport and there you can find what might be best described as junkyard art. This is that field of sculpture which embraces such things as old, cast-off engine blocks and things like that which have been moulded into some pleasant and appealing pattern. They have one or two of these in that airport.

We in Vancouver, Sir, thought a little differently about this. We had a notion, strange and antique though it might be, that we would like to see something representative of the culture and work of the coast. We thought in terms perhaps of some of the magnificent trees, and so on, which grow in our forests and which adorn many of our buildings and public edifices in Vancouver. We thought of our magnificent mountains; we thought of some of the great Indian art which has become a part of the culture and the heritage of the coast, and we went to the Minister and officials of the Department of Transport. I went along with other people from Vancouver interested in this matter to see them about it. Sir, we met with considerable resistance. No one really wanted to think that when you alighted in a city like Vancouver you should be unnerved by a regional feeling. The thought was that you should get a grip on the whole of Canada, as it were, as you stepped into the airport and should not see just the great mountains of the Pacific, the feeling of our forests, our woods and so on. But like that aircraft which "pranged" at Winnipeg, or those twisted engine blocks you can see at Toronto, you have a feeling of the whole country from junkyard to junkyard, from city to city, from Atlantic to Pacific. So we badgered them to some considerable extent. Gradually I felt some life was creeping into the Ministry and that, indeed, they might listen to us. I had hoped that when this airport was finished and the gates were opened you could go there and find, to the astonishment and dismay of art circles from coast to coast, something which you could recognize and which suggested to you that this is the great and broad country of the Pacific, something which we could all understand and appreciate.

• (5:40 p.m.)

Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, this is a digression which you will permit me, but I will try to return in a moment to the topic at hand. This airport is important not only as the western terminus of Air Canada, not only as the home and base of a great commercial helicopter company, to which I referred a moment ago; it is also the head office and central terminal of Canadian Pacific Air Lines. I was very interested to hear the Minister of Transport (Mr. Pickersgill) announce in the House a few days ago the new policy for dividing the overseas operations of Air Canada and Canadian Pacific Air Lines into regions. As far as Canadian Pacific Air Lines is concerned, which will very shortly be a world girdling air line, one of the very few, its head office and base will be at this very airport to which we find such difficulty of access today. It will be bringing passengers and cargo from the Orient, from South America and from around the world through its head office and through this airport at Vancouver.

It is for this reason, as well as for the reason of serving other major Canadian air lines such as Air Canada and the local air lines which serve the interior of the province, that we need in Vancouver more than a single lane for traffic travelling in each direction to and from this airport. This is why it is essential that the planning of this access gets under way concurrently with the planning of this great terminal, so that when the gates of the terminal are opened we do not find ourselves as frustrated as we have been in the past with the inadequate road and bridge accommodation which is provided today.

I think that these remarks, brief and divergent though they may be, may give the House some idea of the importance of this issue and why my hon. friend from Burnaby-Richmond has seen fit to bring the question back in the form of the motion now before the House this day. I hope that this debate, which will be recorded in Hansard, will be read by the Minister, and indeed, more than that, will even be read by Mr. Gaglardi, the Minister of Highways of the Province of British Columbia, whose magnificent roads stretch almost everywhere except in adequate size to Sea Island, where we need a road, bridge and a new airport.

[Translation]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to hear a government member telling us how much he appreciates the efforts of a Social Credit minister of British Columbia in order to carry out splendid projects in road construction. I see the hon. member for Drummond-Arthabaska (Mr. Pepin) applauding. This shows perhaps that, like us, he appreciates highly the work done by the Social Credit government in British Columbia.

Mr. Speaker, the object of the notice of motion of the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie) is the building of a bridge or a tunnel across the North arm of the Fraser River between the City of Vancouver and Sea Island in the municipality of Richmond for the purpose of assuring uninterrupted access to the Vancouver International Airport.

In my opinion, this request is far from being extravagant. It is realistic and very worthwhile. I think the house should pass the motion right away, because it is not a matter of politics or partisanship; on the contrary, it is a question of giving to a province a service of which it was deprived up to now.

We are not well acquainted with British Columbia and this is something which is not done in the province of Quebec in spite of the fact that we have already asked for a bridge or tunnel between Quebec City and Lévis. We have no objection to the construction of a bridge or a tunnel within the limits of British Columbia. The hon. member is certainly right and his notice of motion was undoubtedly submitted as a result of requests from his constituents and citizens of Vancouver or people living in the vicinity of the Vancouver airport.

Mr. Speaker, we heartily support this motion and we hope that members of the government will not object to the building of a bridge or tunnel—whatever is the cheapest, because the burden of Canadian taxpayers is heavy enough as it is—in order to serve adequately the people from this area of Canada.

Mr. Speaker, since it is 5.50 p.m. and our group does not wish to prevent the passage of this notice of motion or the carrying out of this project, I shall speak no further.

Before resuming my seat, I shall merely add that we fully endorse the request of the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond.

Mr. Prittie: You are very generous.

• (5:50 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. J. A. Byrne (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, this seems to be British Columbia day in the House, with one exception. I believe the hon. Member who has just spoken has probably been out over the mountains and has begun to realize what a beautiful and great province we have. I am, generally speaking, in agreement with the proposal made by the hon. Member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie). This would require, of course, another large expenditure on the part of the Federal Government in respect of what is essentially a provincial or municipal responsibility—more particularly provincial, as municipalities are creatures of provinces.

It should not be forgotten, as so often it is, Mr. Speaker, that Vancouver and the lower mainland of British Columbia is only part of that Province; that is, British Columbia consists of something more than just the lower mainland and Vancouver. Other expenditures are required in areas where the wealth of that Province is actually developed. In this regard there is a requirement for great expenditures on the part of the Provincial and Federal authorities in order to carry out joint programs. I would have thought that this matter, together with many others, would have been an excellent subject for discussion by the representatives from British Columbia, if not at the Dominion-Provincial Conference itself, at least with others here in Ottawa when the British Columbia Cabinet members and the officials are here attending that Conference. We have been informed, however, at least through the press, that the Premier of British Columbia finds it will be impossible for him to spend more than one and one half days at the Dominion-Provincial Conference, having just returned of course from two weeks abroad.

An hon. Member: He will be here.

Mr. Byrne: Yes, it is understood that he will be here, but it appears that he will not have sufficient time to discuss this important matter.

Mr. Caouette: I should like to ask the hon. Member a question. The hon. Member has just said that this expenditure would be too high. Will the hon. Member tell us whether there is a shortage of materials to build such a bridge or tunnel so that the required services may be provided at that point? Why is the hon. Member speaking about the expenditure, in view of the fact that everything physically necessary is available?

Mr. Byrne: Mr. Speaker, that is a typical expression of Social Credit philosophy: Anything that is physically possible is economically feasible. That may or may not be so, but so far in this discussion I have not said that the proposed project is not justifiable.

Let me assure the hon. Member that if the Premier and the Cabinet of the Province of British Columbia were more co-operative and assisted us at least in informing the general public as to the amounts of expenditures the Federal Government makes in respect of joint programs, and in respect of direct grants, it would be helpful, but this co-operation is singularly lacking on the part of the Cabinet of the Province of British Columbia. I think every Member, whether he is a politician or a statesman, must and does realize that under our system of responsible Government, and no one knows this better than the Cabinet of the Province of British Columbia, when an expenditure is made by a body that has collected the taxes, that body should at least receive some credit. It should be shown that the contributing body is contributing, otherwise our system of responsible Government breaks down, and I refer particularly to the federal system.

I should like to give one example of the lack of co-operation in this regard, and this refers to something which took place while the Conservative Party was in power here in Ottawa. On the completion of a section of the Trans-Canada Highway through a very mountainous section of the Rockies and Cascades, which had received great publicity, the Federal Government planned a joint Federal-Provincial grand opening ceremony. The Provincial Government rushed ahead and conducted an opening ceremony two weeks ahead of the planned joint opening. The joint financial arrangements for the construction of this section of the highway provided that the Federal Government would contribute 90 per cent of the cost of 10 per cent of the highway, plus 100 per cent of the cost of construction of the highway through Western National Parks. As a result of this the Federal Government spent almost $100 million, whereas the Provincial Government spent $2,700,000. That is an example of the lack of co-operation on the part of the British Columbia Cabinet, and that is why I say that at least in respect of joint programs the provincial governments should co-operate in a small measure by informing the general public as to the source of this money.

An hon. Member: It is six o'clock.

Mr. Winch: Would the hon. Member permit a question? Is the hon. Member sure that in his recent automobile accident he only cracked his ribs?

Mr. Byrne: Would the hon. Member repeat his question, please.

Mr. Winch: I was wondering whether during the hon. Member's unfortunate and regrettable recent automobile accident he only cracked his ribs.

Mr. Byrne: From an observation of the actions of the hon. Member in this House over the past few years it is my thought that he must have had a serious accident some time ago.

The Acting Speaker (Mr. Batten): Order, please. I must inform the House that the time allotted for private Members' business has now expired. If there is any reference to the business for tomorrow, it should be made now.

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. MacNaught: Mr. Speaker, tomorrow we will resume the business that was interrupted at five o'clock, namely a discussion of the budget resolutions. If they are completed, and I should imagine they will be early tomorrow, we will then consider Item No. 10 on today's order paper, resuming debate on the motion of the Minister of Justice to set up a joint committee on penitentiaries. That will be followed by Item No. 21, a resolution preceding the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act; Item No. 22, a resolution preceding a bill to provide for the construction of the Canadian National Railway Froomfield spur line near Sarnia. We will then take up supplementary estimates A relating to the Department of Labour; payments under the winter house building program. On Monday there will be a supply motion.

Mr. Knowles: You have a quahaug's imagination.

At six o'clock the House adjourned without question put, pursuant to standing order.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Thursday, June 17, 1965

The House met at 2.30 p.m.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

CONCURRENCE IN FIRST REPORT OF STANDING COMMITTEE

Mr. John R. Matheson (Leeds) moved that the first report of the Standing Committee on External Affairs presented to the House on Tuesday, June 15, 1965, be concurred in.

[Translation]

Mr. C. A. Gauthier (Roberval): Mr. Speaker, before this motion is agreed to I must point out that the member of our party who sits on this committee will find it hard to attend every sitting, since it will meet while the house is sitting.

It is understood that if a matter relating to external affairs is being discussed in the house, so that the attendance of our representative is required in the house, he will not be able to be in both places at the same time.

I merely wanted to warn the house, and especially the members who have criticized us in the past, suggesting that we did not attend certain committee meetings. Both sides of the matter must be considered.

If the committee and the house meet at the same time in the future, our representative will certainly not be in a position to be in both places. I only wanted to forewarn the house.

Motion agreed to.

CONSUMER CREDIT

MOTION FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF JOINT COMMITTEE

On the order: Government notices of motions:

June 15—The Solicitor General:

That a joint committee of the Senate and House of Commons be appointed to inquire into and report upon the problems of consumer credit, more particularly but not so as to restrict the generality of the foregoing to inquire into and report upon the operation of Canadian legislation in relation thereto;

That twenty-four members of the House of Commons to be designated by the House at a later date, be members of the joint committee, and that standing order 67(1) of the House of Commons be suspended in relation thereto;

That the said committee have power to call for persons, papers and records and examine witnesses; to sit while the House is sitting, and to report from time to time and to print such papers and evidence from day to day as may be deemed advisable, and that standing order 66 be suspended in relation thereto; and to engage the services of counsel, accountants and such other clerical and technical personnel as may be deemed necessary, that the minutes of proceedings of and evidence given before the joint committee at the past session be referred to the said committee and be made part of the records thereof; and that a message be sent to the Senate requesting that House to unite with this House for the above purpose, and to select, if the Senate deems it advisable, some of its members to act on the proposed joint committee.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Pursuant to section 2 of Standing Order 21, this notice of motion is transferred to and ordered for consideration under government orders at the next sitting of the House.

AGRICULTURE

FEED GRAINS—SPEECH BY FORESTRY MINISTER RESPECTING WHEAT BOARD

On the orders of the day:

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): I rise to ask the Acting Prime Minister whether the Government intends to make changes in the Wheat Board act, and whether the Minister of Forestry in the speech which he was kind enough to send me was expressing Government policy when he said:

The policy of the Canadian Wheat Board cannot be regarded as a national farm policy.

And further:

The Canadian Wheat Board is therefore using its powers for strictly regional purposes.

And later on:

If we are to change the present feed grains policy, we have two options before us: either the Canadian Wheat Board relinquishes its wide powers over what happens to feed grains in Canada, in exchange for a gradual abandonment of freight assistance for grains shipped to eastern Canada, or the Prairie producers will have to resign themselves to seeing the eastern feeders set up an effective countervailing agency. Since acceptance of the first option seems highly unlikely for the time being, the setting up of an agency in eastern Canada with wide powers, plus a system of equalization payments based on the difference in price between the two grain markets, seems to offer an alternative worth considering.

Is the Government in agreement with this speech? Does it agree with the view that the wheat board "juggles with delivery quotas, adjusts interim payments and regulates the allotment of freight cars, and has sometimes been able to bring about an artificial rationing of feed grain availabilities at the Lakehead"? Does this speech represent the view of the Government, and does the Government intend to attack the wheat board in this way, an attack that has not been made against that body for as far back as I remember?

Mr. Fisher: The new guard.

Hon. Maurice Sauvé (Minister of Forestry): Mr. Speaker, on Friday when I spoke in Drummondville I was talking about options. This is on page 2 of the speech, where I said:

We shall now consider the various options open for Federal Government action in an attempt to resolve the problems just raised.

I tried as much as possible to explain how the feed grains market operated in Canada, and I explained the various problems. It seemed to me that inasmuch as I was trying to explain to people what was happening, I was doing my duty so that public discussion could follow the presentation of the report of the Standing Committee on Agriculture and Colonization of the House of Commons, which was tabled in this House on March 22, 1965. Before Government legislation was introduced in this House it would be excellent to have public discussion. You will recall, Mr. Speaker, that in the Speech from the Throne there was an announcement about a feed grains policy.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, I did not know the Minister would be answering this question. Does the Minister now state that he believes the Wheat Board, "by juggling with delivery quotas, adjusting interim payments and regulating the allotment of freight cars, has sometimes been able to bring about an artificial rationing of feed grain availabilities at the Lakehead, basic stocks on which the bidding runs on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange"?

Does he believe that these charges against the Wheat Board are well founded, and do they represent Government policy?

Mr. Sauvé: Mr. Speaker, it is evident that inasmuch as the wheat board and the brokers are the only outlet for feed grain for eastern farmers, the price is set by the wheat board for eastern feeders.

[Mr. Diefenbaker.]

Mr. W. H. Jorgenson (Provencher): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Does the Minister not realize that in the report of the Standing Committee on Agriculture and Colonization, which he quoted, they completely absolved the Canadian Wheat Board of any responsibility for the problems of feed grain in eastern Canada?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. May I suggest that this is becoming a debate.

An hon. Member: Answer that question.

Mr. Smallwood: That is a good question. Get up and answer it.

[Later:]

Mr. E. Nasserden (Rosthern): Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the Minister of Forestry what he meant by the "pervasive influence" of the policies pursued by the Canadian Wheat Board.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I suggest this is not a proper question at this time.

Mr. Nasserden: Mr. Speaker, I submit that when a Minister of the Crown attacks an agency of government such as the Canadian Wheat Board using the word "pervasive" in regard to influence, that is a matter which should be brought up on the floor of the House of Commons.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: The hon. Member has done that now.

Hon. Alvin Hamilton (Qu'Appelle): Mr. Speaker, my question is addressed to the Minister of Trade and Commerce and deals with the same matter. I want to ask the Minister of Trade and Commerce this question in view of his remarks in Winnipeg on June 11, which was the same day the Minister of Forestry made his remarks at Drummondville. Does he agree with the scurrilous statement made by the Minister of Forestry against the Canadian Wheat Board?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, I have only heard the excerpts that were read by the Leader of the Opposition, and if that was all that my colleague said, then I would not agree.

An hon. Member: Read the rest.

Mr. Sharp: I cannot say whether the Leader of the Opposition has fairly represented the views of my colleague.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Mr. Speaker, may I immediately ask that the Minister of Forestry table in the House and make available to the Minister who reports to Parliament for the wheat board these statements that are a scandalous derogation of the Wheat Board. I am surprised that the Minister has not seen these statements.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

[Later:]

[Translation]

Hon. Théogène Ricard (St. Hyacinthe-Bagot): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a supplementary question to the Acting Prime Minister.

Does the Minister support and approve the remarks and views of the Minister of Forestry (Mr. Sauvé) concerning feed grain as expressed in Drummondville last week?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I would like to examine this statement before answering. I would be undoubtedly pleased to say to my hon. friend that I agree, but I will at first consider this statement.

Mr. Ricard: Can I infer that the Acting Prime Minister is in agreement with his colleague the Minister of Forestry?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): I have already answered that question, Mr. Speaker.

[English]

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary North): Mr. Speaker, I should like to direct a question to the Liberal Party chief agricultural critic while in opposition, the present Acting Prime Minister. Is the basic purpose of the Government's agricultural policy in regard to feed grains to transfer to the greatest extent possible the feeding of livestock from western Canada to eastern Canada?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, first of all may I say that I would be lacking in the human qualities if I did not at once acknowledge the tribute which the former Minister of Agriculture has paid to my capacity as agricultural critic in those days when he was both the Minister of Agriculture and the Minister of National Defence. I should say, however, that when he was Minister of Agriculture he did not recognize these qualities to the same generous degree that he has today. I will have to take notice of the question.

Som hon. Members: Oh, oh.

[Later:]

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): I rise on a point of order. The Minister of Forestry quoted from the speech he made in Drummondville. We are all interested in it and in view of the fact that he has quoted it in the House would he agree to table it?

Mr. Fisher: Get it printed in Hansard.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I understand that since this is not an official document the unanimous consent of the House would be required in order to have it published as an appendix to Hansard.

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Mr. Churchill: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I understand there is an objection.

Mr. Churchill: Table the speech. Only its tabling should be accepted.

Mr. Douglas: On a point of order. Surely the Minister cannot quote from a document without tabling it.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. This is a very simple matter. If the Minister is prepared to table it and there is no objection, we shall proceed on that basis.

Mr. Knowles: Agreed.

TRADE

WHEAT—EXTENSION OF INTERNATIONAL AGREEMENT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. T. C. Douglas (Burnaby-Coquitlam): Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether the Minister of Trade and Commerce could give the House some information with respect to the International Wheat Agreement. I understand that the present agreement, which expires on July 31 this year, is to be extended for one year, and that the United States Senate has just ratified the extension in so far as that country is concerned. Has Canada signed an extension? Will this matter be referred to the House of Commons? If it has not been signed by the Government of Canada, is it the Government's intention to sign it fairly soon?

Hon. Mitchell Sharp (Minister of Trade and Commerce): Mr. Speaker, my recollection is that I announced in this House that it was the Government's intention to agree to an extension for one year. There are no changes in the provisions of the international wheat agreement; the provisions are simply to be extended for another year. At that time I expressed the hope that the United States would ratify the extension, and it has done so.

There will be an opportunity, I hope very soon, for the estimates of the Department of Trade and Commerce to be brought forward for discussion, at which time there will be an opportunity to examine me and members of the Canadian Wheat Board.

Mr. Douglas: A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Are meetings now going to be held with respect to either a new agreement or a further extension after the expiration of the present agreement, which will expire on July 31, 1966? Has the Minister any hope that there will be any change in the price range?

Mr. Sharp: Mr. Speaker, the international wheat agreement was not renegotiated but was simply extended for another year because of the discussions now going on in Geneva concerning a cereals agreement which will comprehend not only wheat but other grains. It was because of those discussions which were proceeding currently that it was decided that it would not be in order to attempt to renegotiate the international wheat agreement itself. We are hopeful, indeed I can give the assurance, that there will be an agreement in effect before the present international wheat agreement expires.

LABOUR RELATIONS

STRIKES OF GRAIN HANDLERS AT VANCOUVER AND MONTREAL

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Minister of Labour. I should like to ask him whether any progress is being made in settling the strike of grain handlers at the port of Montreal. I understand that a federal labour conciliator has been appointed. I would also ask him the position of the grain handlers' strike which has been going on in Vancouver for the last two weeks.

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, in Vancouver the Industrial Inquiries Commission is still at work and has not yet reported on efforts which are continuing to settle the dispute. In Montreal the officers of the Department are presently attempting to get a resumption of work so that the conciliation board can proceed in a normal way to deal with this dispute.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

IMPROVEMENT OF WORKING CONDITIONS OF INTERPRETERS

On the orders of the day:

[Translation]

Mr. Réal Caouette (Villeneuve): Mr. Speaker, I should like to put a question to the Secretary of State.

I have been informed that the employees doing the simultaneous interpretation of the debates of the house come under the Civil Service Commission instead of coming under the Speaker of the house.

Could consideration be given to changing their status; there are six interpreters at the present time and they work from 2.30 p.m. to 10 p.m.? Under the circumstances they are not treated as human beings because they are overworked.

Would the Secretary of State see to it that the lot of the interpreters of the house is improved?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, some time ago I gave a lengthy reply to a question put by the hon. member for Quebec East (Mr. Beaulé) and the hon. member for Burnaby-Richmond (Mr. Prittie). I said then, among other things, that the working conditions of the interpreters of the house were being considered very carefully. I hope to be able to make a statement very soon in this regard.

Mr. Caouette: Mr. Speaker, a supplementary question.

Would the Secretary of State consider the possibility of transferring interpreters from the Civil Service Commission to the staff of the house?

Mr. Lamontagne: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

CANADIAN BROADCASTING CORPORATION

VANCOUVER—POSSIBLE USE OF FORMER R.C.A.F. BASE

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Harold E. Winch (Vancouver East): Mr. Speaker, I desire to direct a question to the Secretary of State which is of a most urgent nature, and of which I gave notice yesterday afternoon.

I should like to ask the Minister whether Mr. Caple, the regional director of the C.B.C. in Vancouver, spoke with the authority of the Government when he advised the Vancouver City Council that the C.B.C. would require a lease of not less than 25 years on the former R.C.A.F. Kitsilano property, and that if the same was not forthcoming the C.B.C. would remove its operations from Vancouver to some adjoining municipality. Further, did the same Mr. Caple have the authority of the Government to repudiate the commitment given last fall by Hon. John Nicholson, that the Federal Government would contribute financially to urban development in downtown Vancouver, which development would include a location for the C.B.C. if the City of Vancouver and the Province would participate on a financial basis?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I have already asked the C.B.C. to make a full report about this incident, but unfortunately I have not yet received that report. As soon as I receive it I will be very pleased to answer the question the hon. gentleman has asked.

Mr. R. W. Prittie (Burnaby-Richmond): I have a supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Will the Minister remind the President of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation that land in Burnaby has been offered to the C.B.C. if it cannot find a location in Vancouver?

BICULTURALISM AND BILINGUALISM

VISIT TO YUGOSLAVIA BY DELEGATION OF COMMISSION

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Erik Nielsen (Yukon): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Secretary of State. Will he inform the House whether he has authorized or the Bilingualism and Biculturalism Commission has decided to send a delegation to Yugoslavia, and for what purpose?

Hon. Maurice Lamontagne (Secretary of State): Mr. Speaker, I have said repeatedly in the House that I am not responsible for this or any other Royal Commission. The Prime Minister is responsible for Royal Commissions.

Mr. Nielsen: Then may I ask the Acting Prime Minister if this is the case?

Hon. Paul Martin (Acting Prime Minister): What was the question?

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Mr. Speaker, I was thinking of the brilliance of my reply to the hon. Member for Calgary North. I will therefore want to carefully consider my reply to this question.

Mr. Nielsen: Will the Acting Prime Minister answer it tomorrow?

Mr. Martin (Essex East): I will certainly endeavour to do so if the circumstances warrant a reply.

EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NATO—POSSIBLE WITHDRAWAL OF CANADIAN FORCES

On the orders of the day:

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, I should like to address a question to the Minister of National Defence. In view of the fact that that great British field commander, Field Marshal Montgomery, has recently expressed the opinion that British forces no longer serve a useful purpose in Europe and has urged their withdrawal from NATO at this time, would the Minister inform the House whether the Canadian Government is giving consideration to the withdrawal of all Canadian forces now committed to NATO in Europe?

Hon. Paul Hellyer (Minister of National Defence): Mr. Speaker, I just received notice of this question as I entered the House and I have not yet seen the article referred to by my hon. friend containing the statements attributed to Field Marshal Montgomery. I would certainly want to study it very carefully before expressing any opinion on the matter.

With regard to the direct question, is the Government of Canada giving consideration to the withdrawal of all Canadian forces now committed to NATO in Europe, the answer is no.

[Later:]

Hon. Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West): Mr. Speaker, on June 11 I asked the Secretary of State for External Affairs a question with regard to reports of basic shifts in the policy of western countries in NATO and whether this would involve a reduction in Canadian forces in Europe at this time. The Minister of National Defence has partially answered, but I am wondering whether the Secretary of State for External Affairs can confirm that there are these basic shifts in the defence policy of western countries in Europe, and can tell us in which of these changes Canada is actually involved.

Inquiries of the Ministry

Hon. Paul Martin (Secretary of State for External Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I am sorry I did not give this reply earlier. I had intended to give it yesterday but my hon. friend was unavoidably absent, I am sure on public business.

Hon. Members are aware that reports of a speculative character appear from time to time concerning developments in NATO, and particularly concerning the effect of these developments on the future of the alliance. The Canadian military contribution to NATO is, of course, under constant review in the light of political, strategic and technological developments in order that Canada, like other member states, may determine the best way in which we can make a realistic contribution to NATO's capability to deter aggression. Thus, for example, Canada last year committed a battalion group to the allied command Europe mobile forces which was established to enable SACEUR to respond to threats to the flanks of NATO. I think that my colleague's reply of a few moments ago, read in conjunction with this reply, will more than satisfy my hon. friend.

EDUCATION

STUDENT LOANS—DISCLOSURE OF INCOME OF PARENTS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. George Muir (Lisgar): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Finance. Inasmuch as the Government is now going to apply a means test in granting student loans, will the Minister explain how he justifies the required disclosure of the parents' taxable income, when it is my understanding that even the Minister of National Revenue is prohibited from making such disclosures?

Hon. Walter L. Gordon (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I presume my hon. friend is referring to the report tabled last week on this matter. As I said at the time, or I think I did, the officials of the Provinces who have been working on the application or administration of this program with the officials of the Department of Finance include Provincial officials who have had the most experience in this field. It was their view that if this particular program was to be administered uniformly and fairly across the country, they should ask for certain information.

As my hon. friend will know, it was agreed that the administration of the program would be left to the Provincial officials. It was their considered judgment that they should ask for such information, and that is why the matter is included in the report. They have been asking for information about the financial position of parents. They feel strongly that they should ask for this information; and it is information which the parent, of course, is free to provide or not as he sees fit.

Mr. Muir (Lisgar): A supplementary question, Mr. Speaker. Is it the Minister's view that parents should be forced to disclose their financial means to the Provincial authorities—

Mr. Gordon: There is no enforcement, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Muir (Lisgar): —before such loans can be obtained?

Mr. D. M. Fisher (Port Arthur): As a supplementary question I would like to ask the Minister whether his officials have had legal advice from the Department of Justice, in that the asking of such information by any authority from a taxpayer may be illegal under the acts administered by the Department of National Revenue.

Mr. Gordon: I will be glad to inquire as to whether they had any formal legal opinion on the matter. This is a practice which has been followed in the provincial field for many years, but on the particular question I will be glad to inquire into it.

LABOUR CONDITIONS

BRITISH COLUMBIA—EMPLOYMENT OF OLDER WORKERS AT MILITARY CAMP

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Stuart A. Fleming (Okanagan-Revelstoke): Mr. Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister of Labour. In view of his presumed interest in the fortunes of older workers in this country, may I ask him why a directive has been issued by his Department forbidding the employment of temporary workers over 65 years of age at Vernon military camp this summer?

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I cannot offhand understand how the Department of Labour would issue a directive of this kind, but I would be glad to inquire and advise my hon. friend later.

Mr. Fleming (Okanagan-Revelstoke): As a supplementary question may I ask why the Minister has not been made aware of the fact that I wrote to him on the subject on June 7 and have not even had the courtesy of an acknowledgement? What I am particularly concerned about, and I said this in my letter, is the position of war veterans allowance recipients and disability pensioners who have always had these opportunities, but who have been advised this year that they are withdrawn.

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, I regret that my hon. friend's letter has not been answered, but I will look into the matter and advise him more fully later.

CANADA LABOUR CODE

EXPLANATORY ADVERTISEMENTS INCLUDING PICTURE OF LABOUR MINISTER

On the orders of the day:

Mr. Andrew Brewin (Greenwood): Mr. Speaker, I have a question for the Minister of Labour, and I am sorry I did not send him notice of it. Will the Minister tell the House whether the very expensive full page advertisements which appeared in a number of newspapers yesterday purporting to give an account of the Canada Labour (Standards) Code passed by Parliament, and which contained excellent pictures of himself standing before a microphone in front of the parliament buildings, were paid for by the taxpayers of Canada; also, whether he thinks it is appropriate to introduce political propaganda into paid public advertisements?

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, the advertisement was paid for by the Department of Labour in an effort to inform the Canadian public as to the terms of the Canada Labour (Standards) Code. It was suggested as an effective form of advertising, and I think it has demonstrated itself in that respect in view of the interest of my hon. friend and others in it. If he will look again at the ad he will observe there is no picture of the Minister of Labour in the ad at all.

Mr. Eric A. Winkler (Grey-Bruce): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister a supplementary question. Did he approve of the ad?

Mr. MacEachen: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I approved of the ad after careful consideration.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Of the political benefits.

Hon. Théogène Ricard (St. Hyacinthe-Bagot): A while ago the Minister said it was not his picture that appeared in this advertisement. Could the Minister tell us whose picture it was?

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. D. M. Fisher (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Minister of Labour whether his department is planning to supply more substantial, more factual and more detailed information, particularly with regard to how the Canada Labour (Standards) Code is going to affect railway and marine workers; and will he supply this before July 1 in lieu of the advertisement in which we have all taken such an interest, and which glorifies and beautifies the Minister so much?

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, it is proposed to distribute a booklet in connection with the Canada Labour Code containing greater detail with respect to the operation of the Code itself, and very shortly we hope to be able to announce the regulations, that are now under consideration by the Government, in connection with the Code. When these additional steps are taken a good deal of the interest shown by the groups mentioned will be expressed in them.

Hon. D. S. Harkness (Calgary North): Is this further pamphlet that is to be issued going to be in the same format as the advertisement which we have just been talking about, primarily designed to enhance the self-aggrandizement of the Minister?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The 30 minutes allotted for questions has now expired.

Right Hon. J. G. Diefenbaker (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, the question period having expired, I rise on a question of privilege. The Minister has just said that the ad did not have his picture in it. Well, I have the ad here, and this person noted for his masculine pulchritude has all the appearance of being the Minister. Does he disavow this person as being he?

Mr. MacEachen: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the question of privilege raised by the Leader of the Opposition, I said it was not a picture. It is not a photograph.

Mr. Diefenbaker: Oh.

Mr. MacEachen: It has been suggested that it is a likeness of the Minister of Labour, but it is not a picture or a photograph.

Mr. Diefenbaker: More deception.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. Is the hon. Member for Burnaby-Coquitlam rising on the same question of privilege?

Mr. Douglas: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Then I suggest to hon. Members that there is no point of privilege in what has been raised by the Leader of the Opposition, and I would like to call the orders of the day.

APPLICATION OF MINIMUM WAGE TO FEDERAL WORK UNDER CONTRACT

On the orders of the day:

Mr. David Orlikow (Winnipeg North): In connection with the Canada Labour (Standards) Code I would like to ask the Minister whether the provisions of the Code in respect to the minimum wage of $1.25 an hour will be applied to employees working on Federal Government work which is contracted, bid or tendered for by Canadian business or industry?

Hon. A. J. MacEachen (Minister of Labour): Yes, Mr. Speaker. I have indicated several times that it is the intention of the Government to propose amendments to the Fair Wages and Hours of Labour Act, applying the wage principle to special categories of Federal contracts.

PENSIONS

CANADA PLAN—INQUIRY AS TO INFORMATION PAMPHLETS

On the orders of the day:

Mr. S. J. Enns (Portage-Neepawa): Mr. Speaker, my question was intended for the Minister of National Health and Welfare, but perhaps in her absence her Parliamentary Secretary might shed some further light on the information pamphlet which arrived on our desks which deals with old age security pensions, the question of when to apply and so on. The Canada Pension Plan is a very complicated piece of legislation. Is this one of a series of pamphlets about this important legislation, or is this all the information the public will be given?

Mr. J. C. Munro (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of National Health and Welfare): I am informed it is one of a series.

WAYS AND MEANS

The House in Committee of Ways and Means, Mr. Lamoureux in the Chair.

INCOME TAX ACT

Resolved, that it is expedient to introduce a measure to amend the Income Tax Act and related provisions of the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act and to provide among other things

1. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years the income tax payable by an individual be reduced by an amount equal to the lesser of 10 per cent of basic tax or $600 and for the 1965 taxation year by an amount equal to the lesser of 5 per cent of basic tax or $300.

2. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer may deduct in computing his taxable income an amount for the support of a person who was his niece or nephew and who during the year resided in Canada, was wholly dependant upon him for support, and was

(a) under 21 years of age,

(b) 21 years of age or over and dependant by reason of mental or physical infirmity, or

(c) 21 years of age or over and in full-time attendance at a school or university,

(d) the mother of the niece or nephew was divorced or separated and not in receipt of alimony or similar payments, or

(e) the father of the niece or nephew was deceased or mentally or physically infirm,

not exceeding $300 if the person was a child qualified for family allowance and $550 if he was not so qualified.

3. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer may deduct in computing his taxable income an amount not exceeding $550 expended by him during the year for the support of a person who was his aunt or uncle and who during the year resided in Canada and was dependant upon him for support by reason of mental or physical infirmity.

4. That for the 1970 and subsequent taxation years the additional exemption of $500 now allowed to a taxpayer who has attained the age of 65 years be allowed only if the taxpayer has attained the age of 70 years and that for the taxation years 1966 to 1969 inclusive a taxpayer who has attained the age of 65 years but has not attained the age of 70 years be allowed the additional exemption of $500 only if he did not receive a pension under the Old Age Security Act in respect of any month in that year.

5. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer who deducts in computing his income from an office or employment

(a) annual dues to maintain membership in a trade union or to maintain membership in an association of public servants,

(b) annual dues retained from his remuneration pursuant to the provisions of a collective agreement and paid to a trade union or association, or

(c) annual professional membership dues the payment of which was necessary to maintain a professional status recognized by statute,

shall not by reason of such deduction be ineligible to deduct the standard deduction of $100 described in paragraph (ca) of subsection (1) of section 27 of the Act.

6. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years a person, the spouse of such person residing with him and previously resident in Canada, or any dependant child of such person, shall be deemed to have been resident in Canada throughout a taxation year if such person was at any time in the year performing services in a country other than Canada under a prescribed international development assistance program of the Government of Canada, and was resident in Canada during a part of the year preceding the commencement of such services.

7. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years a contribution made by a person under the Canada Pension Plan or under a provincial pension plan as defined in section 3 of the Canada Pension Plan may be deducted in computing the income of such person.

8. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years the limitation on the amount related to earned income that a taxpayer may deduct as a premium under a registered retirement savings plan be increased from 10 per cent of earned income to 20 per cent of earned income.

9. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years such part of any amount that would otherwise be included in computing income of a taxpayer as a retiring allowance be deductible if it is paid in the year, or within 60 days after the end of the year, as a contribution to a registered pension fund or plan, as a premium under a retirement savings plan, or to a trustee under a deferred profit sharing plan.

10. That there may be deducted in computing the income of a taxpayer an amount in respect of an outlay or expense made by the taxpayer in the 1965 and subsequent taxation years

(a) to a person with whom the taxpayer is dealing at arms length and who is the lessee of property owned by the taxpayer, to obtain the cancellation of a lease on such property,

(b) for landscaping property used by the taxpayer for the purpose of gaining or producing income,

(c) for clearing land or laying tile drainage for the purpose of carrying on a farming business,

(d) as or on account of the cost of making representation to a government, municipality or other public authority in connection with a business carried on by the taxpayer, including representations for the purpose of obtaining a licence, permit, franchise or trademark,

(e) as or on account of the cost incurred in investigating the suitability of a site for a building or other structure planned by the taxpayer for use in connection with a business carried on by him.

11. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a corporation shall be deemed to be resident in Canada throughout a taxation year if

(a) it was incorporated in Canada before April 27, 1965 and was resident in Canada in its taxation year that included April 26, 1965 or in any subsequent taxation year, or

(b) it was incorporated in Canada after April 26, 1965.

12. That with respect to payments received by a taxpayer after April 26, 1965, other than a payment made upon the death of an employee, the amount that a taxpayer may elect to have taxed under section 36 of the Act shall not exceed

(a) in the case of a single payment

(i) out of or pursuant to a superannuation or pension fund or plan, or

(ii) pursuant to deferred profit sharing plan, or

(iii) pursuant to an employee's profit sharing plan,

$1,500 times the number of years during which the employee, in respect of whom the payment was made, was a member of the plan, or

(b) in the case of

(i) a single payment upon retirement of an employee in recognition of long service, or

(ii) a payment or payments made by an employer to an employee or former employee upon or after retirement in respect of loss of office or employment

$1,000 times the number of years during which the employee, in respect of whom the payment was made, was an employee of the employer who made the payment.

13. That for taxation years commencing after April 26, 1965, a trust or estate (other than a trust or estate arising on death) that has income from a business carried on by it in Canada may not deduct in computing its income an amount paid or payable to a beneficiary who is

(a) a non-resident of Canada,

(b) a non-resident-owned investment corporation, or

(c) another trust or estate resident in Canada,

unless that other trust or estate

(i) arose on a death, or

(ii) has been since April 26, 1965 a beneficiary of the trust or estate paying the amount and the trust or estate paying the amount has been carrying on the business since April 26, 1965,

and any amount paid or payable out of the income for the year of the first-mentioned trust or estate will continue to be included in the income of its beneficiary notwithstanding the fact that the first-mentioned trust or estate was not entitled to deduct the amount in computing its income.

14. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years the amount of income derived from a new mine that a corporation may exclude in computing its income shall be confined to income from the operation of the mine by the corporation.

15. That where a joint exploration corporation acquires after April 26, 1965 a right, licence or privilege to explore for, drill for or take petroleum, natural gas or other related hydrocarbons, the cost of the right, licence or privilege may not be renounced to a shareholder corporation.

16. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years an amount that a taxpayer may exclude from his income because it is consideration for a mining property acquired as the result of his effort as a prospector, or as the result of efforts of a prospector who was employed or financially assisted by him, shall not include a share of profits, a royalty or a payment based on production.

17. That the Minister of National Revenue with the approval of the Governor in Council may on behalf of the Government of Canada enter into an agreement with the government of a province, under which one government undertakes to transfer to the other, in respect of income tax paid by an individual from whom deductions were made at source as though he were resident in a place other than the province in which he was resident on the last day of the year, a part of the amount deducted or withheld under section 47 of the Act or a similar provision of a provincial income tax act.

18. That in order to give effect to the provisions of paragraph 1 without reducing the amount of equalization payments to any province a consequential amendment be made to the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act to adjust the fractions set out therein in the definition of "standard individual income tax" used in the computation of equalization payments.

19. That a new section be added to the Act concerning expenditures of a taxpayer for advertising space in a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical having effect substantially as follows:

"12A (1) In computing income, no deduction shall be made in respect of an otherwise deductible outlay or expenses of a taxpayer for advertising space in an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical dated after December 31, 1965 for an advertisement directed primarily to a market in Canada.

(2) An issue or edition of an issue of any newspaper or periodical that is edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada and that was not on April 26, 1965 a Canadian newspaper or periodical shall be deemed, for the purposes of subsection (1), not to be an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical if

(a) through the period of twelve months ending April 26, 1965 issues or editions of issues of that publication were being edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada at the usual intervals for issues of that publication and have since that date continued to be so edited, printed and published without interruption except for a reason other than the cessation of the business of publishing that publication; and

(b) in the case of a periodical, the periodical is similar, in content and in respect of the class of readers to whom it is directed, to the issues or editions of that periodical that were throughout the period of twelve months ending April 26, 1965 being edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada.

(3) Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an advertisement in a special issue or edition of a newspaper that is edited in whole or in part and printed and published outside Canada if such special issue or edition is devoted to features or news related primarily to Canada and the publishers thereof publish such an issue or edition not more frequently than twice a year.

(4) Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an advertisement in

(a) a catalogue, or

(b) any publication the principal function of which is the encouragement, promotion or development of the fine arts, letters, scholarship or religion.

(5) In this section,

(a) 'Canadian issue' means,

(i) in relation to a newspaper, an issue, including a special issue,

(A) the type of which, other than the type for advertisements or features, is set in Canada,

(B) the whole of which, exclusive of any comics supplement, is printed in Canada,

(C) that is edited in Canada by individuals resident in Canada, and

(D) that is published in Canada, and

(ii) in relation to a periodical, an issue, including a special issue,

(A) the type of which, other than the type for advertisement, is set in Canada,

(B) that is printed in Canada,

(C) that is edited in Canada by individuals resident in Canada, and

(D) that is published in Canada,

but does not include an issue of a periodical

(E) that is produced or published under a licence granted by a person who produces or publishes issues of a periodical that are printed, edited or published outside Canada, or

(F) the contents of which, excluding advertisements, are substantially the same as the contents of an issue of a periodical, or the contents of one or more issues of one or more periodicals, that was or were printed, edited or published outside Canada,

(b) 'Canadian newspaper or periodical' means a newspaper or periodical the right to produce and publish issues of which belongs to or is vested in

(i) a Canadian citizen,

(ii) a partnership of which at least ¾ of the members are Canadian citizens and in which interests representing in value at least ¾ of the total value of the partnership property are owned by Canadian citizens,

(iii) an association or society of which at least ¾ of the members are Canadian citizens,

(iv) Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province, or municipality in Canada, or

(v) a corporation

(A) that is incorporated under the laws of Canada or a province,

(B) of which the chairman or other presiding officer and at least ¾ of the directors or other similar officers are Canadian citizens, and

(C) of which, if it is a corporation having share capital, at least ¾ of the shares having full voting rights under all circumstances, and shares representing in the aggregate at least ¾ of the paid-up capital, are owned by Canadian citizens or by corporations other than corporations controlled directly or indirectly by citizens or subjects of a country other than Canada; and

(c) 'issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical' means an issue that is not a Canadian issue of a Canadian newspaper or periodical."

Mr. Prittie: Before I continue my remarks I should like to ask the Minister of Finance a question which has occurred to me. Will the effect of the Canadianizing of Time magazine permit the Time-Life Corporation to purchase Canadian radio and television stations? I believe the Corporation owns a number of such stations in the United States.

The Chairman: Order, please. It is very difficult to follow the hon. Member's speech.

Mr. Prittie: I think the Minister heard my question, the question I should like to ask before I proceed further.

Mr. Gordon: The answer is no, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. Fisher: How can we be sure?

Mr. Prittie: We shall have more to say about this later.

There has been a great deal of discussion about the clause which deals with newspapers and the proposal to retain Canadian ownership of Canadian newspapers. Some have said that the freedom of the press is involved in this proposal. I cannot agree with that at all. If we consider what the freedom of the press means we can only conclude that it means freedom to print editorials and news stories without government interference or censorship of any kind. And it presumably includes freedom to establish publications in the country. In practice the latter freedom is severely restricted by economics, as I am sure the owners of the Vancouver Times would testify. Their venture has already cost them about $1½ million and the future of the publication is not at all certain.

Essentially, freedom of the press must mean freedom to print what is desired without interference. I cannot see that this is affected by the proposal before us. Certainly the freedom to sell Canadian newspapers to non-Canadian owners is interfered with, but this is a very different matter from what we generally understand as being the freedom of the press.

I feel the term "freedom of the press" is much abused. In many cases it merely means that the press is as free as the publisher of the paper wants it to be. In Canada many newspapers are personally controlled by their publishers, and these newspapers do exactly what their publishers want them to do. For example Mr. Bassett, the owner of the Toronto Telegram, is quite free to call the present Leader of the Opposition Canada's greatest Prime Minister one year to turn against him the next. He is free to publish the column written by my hon. friend from Port Arthur or to kill it at any time he wishes. The same applies to the contributions by Mr. Lubor Zink. The former publisher of the Ottawa Citizen was quite free to let his editorial staff determine the paper's editorial policy; it was rather to the left of centre. But when the new publisher took over he was free to get rid of that editorial staff and establish an editorial policy the effect of which was to make the paper almost an organ of the Liberal party. The former publisher of the Vancouver Sun was free to run editorials supporting the Liberal party, but he was also free to suggest to his reporters that they should write stories at election times in favour of Liberal candidates. The publishers of La Presse were quick to fire Mr. Pelletier when they did not agree with the editorials he was writing. It is true these are probably bad examples, and I am not suggesting that all Canadian newspapers act in this way.

How free do publishers want to be? They have the freedom to run their papers in any way they please, and the public be damned. This is increasingly true, I suggest, in cities which have only one newspaper, an increasingly common circumstance today.

I object to being presented with this omnibus resolution which includes so many things —income tax reductions for most taxpayers, exemptions dealing with dependants, trade union dues, mineral exploration, important principles dealing with the press, and so on. The opposition is placed in the position of voting either for or against the whole package. This may be smart politics, but it is a poor way of transacting public business.

The proper way to handle this would be to take certain important clauses out of the resolution and allow the committee to debate them separately. The clause dealing with periodicals should be debated separately, and the clause dealing with newspapers should be debated and voted upon separately. I think if given the opportunity to vote on these items separately, members of this party would support the provision suggested by the Minister concerning ownership of Canadian newspapers. However, during such a discussion I believe some members could propose other methods of handling this particular problem.

I am sure the Minister has received a copy of the Winnipeg Free Press of yesterday with its editorial, as have other Members of the House. If he thought the hon. Member for Port Arthur was rough with him the other night he should read that issue of the Free Press, in which the words "outright falsehood" are used. I do not intend to quote the whole of this editorial, but there is one part of it I should like to draw to the committee's attention:

> Mr. Gordon knows full well that there are a number of practical alternatives to the advertising tax which are equally effective and far less dangerous. One (proposed by F.P. Publications) would involve voluntary renunciation by newspapers of the right to transfer their shares to nonresidents. Another would have Parliament simply declare, by resolution, its intention to prohibit take-overs should they occur. Still another would be to invite the provinces, which have constitutional power over property and civil rights, to introduce their own legislation forbidding foreign ownership of the press.

I am not sure that this would be as effective as the measure which is proposed, but they are certainly alternatives and perhaps these, as well as others which hon. Members might like to propose, could be voted on. We cannot do that as long as we are dealing with this legislation in what I would have to call this rather tricky manner of including everything in the one resolution.

• (3:20 p.m.)

I repeat, Mr. Chairman, that it may be a smart political move, but it is a very poor way to transact public business. The effect of it will only be to make the whole resolution much more difficult of passage. I would like the Minister to bear this in mind, because Members are placed in the position of opposing certain items and supporting others. But we do intend to put up a fight on those items to which we are very strongly opposed.

Mr. MacLean (Queens): Mr. Chairman, I want to take the time of the committee for only a short period in order to make some comments on this resolution which precedes a bill to amend the Income Tax Act. I do not intend to spread my remarks over all the items in this package of amendments proposed to the Income Tax Act; I shall confine my remarks to two items that are in the resolution.

Prior to doing that I want to express my disappointment with regard to an omission from the resolution. I refer to the failure to relieve from corporation taxes private corporations engaged in the production and distribution of power. I think this is an opportunity the Minister and the Government should have taken, because here in my judgment we have a discriminatory tax. After all, these private corporations operate in a field in which many provincial Crown corporations also operate; they are providing the same service. Although they are not usually in direct competition with each other, they are nevertheless supplying a service to the Canadian people.

The nature of their industry is such that due to the fact that they have no competition in their field, they are a monopoly in the area in which they operate and are therefore controlled by provincial utilities commissions. This produces the result that Canadian citizens in areas served by private corporations supplying the public utilities are subject to a tax to which Canadian citizens in other areas are not subject. This of course creates a situation where there is tremendous pressure on Provincial Governments to take over privately owned public utilities and transfer them into provincially owned Crown corporations. This is a situation that cannot be justified from any purely logical point of view.

I am not one who maintains that public utilities should necessarily be publicly owned. I think there are cases where it is in the general interest that they be publicly owned, but on the other hand I think there are cases where services of this sort can be operated perhaps more efficiently by private industry. The two methods should be judged on their merits; and one method, namely private ownership in this case, should not be burdened with an artificial load which happens to fall on it and its clients because of an anomaly in the income tax structure.

For example, in my own province of Prince Edward Island the power is provided by a privately owned corporation in most cases. This means there are extra taxes going into the federal treasury from Prince Edward Island which are part of the individual citizen's light bill in that area. This would not be the case if it were a provincial Crown corporation. This to me is completely unfair from any logical point of view, and the Minister should have taken the opportunity to correct this anomaly.

I now wish to refer briefly to paragraph 10, in which reference is made to certain items of expenditure that now can be claimed as an expense by taxpayers. I refer to (d) and more particularly to (c), which says:

> That there may be deducted in computing the income of a taxpayer an amount in respect of an outlay or expense made by the taxpayer in the 1965 and subsequent taxation years
> (c) for clearing land or laying tile drainage for the purpose of carrying on a farming business,

Subparagraph (b) also provides for such a deduction in respect of landscaping property used by the taxpayer for the purpose of gaining or producing income. I presume that both these things would apply to farms; that is landscaping and clearing land or laying tile drainage. This is a very small step in the right direction, I believe, and I commend the Minister for taking it. I regret, however, that it will have very little application and therefore the beneficial effects flowing from it will be minor indeed; because I think it will apply only in isolated cases. It will only provide an incentive to landscape or clear land where the operation is already a profitable one, sufficiently profitable to be taxable under the Income Tax Act. But the greatest problem, as far as agriculture is concerned, in this field is that many operators do not have an economic unit; it is too small to be economic and therefore is not profitable. It is these people who need most to enlarge their acreage of land under cultivation, and there will be no incentive for them to do so.

I believe, Mr. Chairman, that we should give careful consideration to the importance of keeping our agricultural land in Canada in such condition that it is potentially productive even though it is not in production at the present time. We should keep it in such a state that it can be readily made productive in the very near future. I am convinced that within very few years, probably in this decade, agricultural surpluses will become a thing of the past, and that the full impact of the world population explosion will begin to hit the productive capacity of North America as it has long since hit the productive capacity of more highly populated countries.

I think in this circumstance it is wasteful from a national point of view that large acreages of our productive agricultural land should be going out of production permanently due to temporary conditions. A great deal of suitable agricultural land is being used up every day for the development of residential and commercial areas, airports and things of that sort. But this is not all. There are vast acreages of good agricultural land in Canada that have been abandoned because the units in which it has been operated up to the present time have not been economic.

• (3:30 p.m.)

In this connection I would refer to the Province of Prince Edward Island. There are vast acreages of farms there which have been abandoned over the years because of the economic conditions in agriculture which have existed over a long period of time. These abandonments have also been caused through the inability of the owners of these farms to acquire the necessary capital and markets to operate them as economic units. I am sure the situation is the same in other parts of Canada.

This is an appalling state of affairs, because this agricultural land is growing up in scrub and bush and becoming almost worthless, producing nothing of value. If it were growing up in valuable timber this would prove a long term asset, but in this case this land grows up in scrub, becoming unsuitable for agricultural use except at great cost for clearing and so on. This situation is more widespread than is generally realized by the public, I think.

In Prince Edward Island agriculture is the main industry, the backbone of our whole economy. Our only other important industries are the fisheries and tourism, but agriculture is far more important than they are, relatively speaking. In this regard I should like to quote from "Land Utilization in Prince Edward Island", which is Geographical Memoir No. 9 published by the Department of Mines and Technical Surveys. The following is a quotation from page 49:

> Between 1911 and 1956 the Island's acreage of improved agricultural land decreased from 769,140 acres to 645,492 acres, or by approximately 16 per cent. Since all but a small proportion of this contraction has occurred since 1931, and as much as 74 per cent between 1941 and 1951, much of the abandoned acreage has had insufficient time to revert to forest growth.

I might say that most of it will never revert to forest growth which will have any value.

I think this provision is a tentative step toward recognizing the need for farmers to be in a position to bring more potentially good agricultural land into production, but it will not touch the heart of the problem. I would most strongly suggest that the Minister point out this question to his colleagues the Minister of Forestry and the Minister of Agriculture, because something much more than this minor assistance must be given before there is any appreciable benefit.

I now wish to turn for a few moments to another item in this omnibus resolution. I refer to paragraph 19, which reads in part as follows:

> In computing income, no deduction shall be made in respect of an otherwise deductible outlay or expense of a taxpayer for advertising space in an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical dated after December 31, 1965 for an advertisement directed primarily to a market in Canada.

Then it goes on to define what is a Canadian publication and what are the exceptions; and the following paragraphs Canadianize—artificially, I think—Reader's Digest and Time magazine. I not only object to the detail of the matter; I object most strenuously to this approach to the problem. It is dangerous when a government takes the attitude that it can judge which freedoms can be encroached upon with impunity, especially in view of the necessity for the complete freedom of the press. By that I do not mean licence, but the complete freedom of the press to criticize, and to criticize especially actions of governments where the press think it is suitable to do so. This is something which should not be tampered with in any way either directly or indirectly.

In his remarks the other evening the Minister expressed the opinion that no strong opposition had been taken to his measure by the Canadian press. To refute this, Mr. Chairman, I would merely quote from an editorial which appeared in yesterday's Toronto Telegram which I think summed it up well. It says in part:

> The Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association unanimously passed a resolution condemning the Gordon proposal and sent a delegate to Prime Minister Pearson urging the abandonment of this legislation.
>
> Freedom of the press is at stake in this issue, in spite of Mr. Gordon's protestations to the contrary. It always has been.
> The whole principle of protecting Canadian publications—periodical or daily—through legislative manipulation is odious. It touches the question of press independence, one of the pillars of a free society.

I agree wholeheartedly with this point of view. I object to the other items and details contained in the proposal, but I object most strongly of all to this particular principle. Therefore I would strongly urge the Minister to seriously consider dropping this item from the resolution. For my part I must say that I am in favour of the first part of it, which provides for reduced taxes for many individuals; but the odious part of this resolution cannot be forced down my throat by putting it into a package like this. If this item remains in the resolution, then I cannot support the resolution, despite the fact, as I say, that it contains a good many items of which I approve.

[Translation]

Mr. Caouette: Mr. Chairman, my comments concerning the proposed amendment to the Income Tax Act will be rather short.

A while ago we had the opportunity of saying a few words on this, and I do not intend to repeat what was said then. On the other hand, I find it odd that the Minister of Finance (Mr. Gordon), who introduces these amendments, did not take into account our representations when the resolution was before us for the first time.

For instance, last year difficulties were encountered with regard to receipts for charitable donations throughout the province of Quebec and Canada. Income tax inspectors burst into rectories and called on clergymen to enquire about the accuracy of charitable donations receipts. Please note that according to the act, a Canadian citizen has the right to deduct up to a maximum of 10 per cent for charitable donations. And yet the department does not accept from a taxpayer receipts not exceeding 10 per cent of his income.

Last year these receipts were reduced to their simplest expression, namely $100, amount which any Canadian taxpayer has the right to claim without producing receipts. Someone produced receipts totalling $500 and it was reduced by $400 to $100.

This year, instead of changing the situation, a basic deduction of 10 per cent is proposed. This is an amendment which will help those having a high income but Canadian workers will gain no advantage on the whole. I ask the Minister of Finance this: instead of providing that charitable donations may be deducted up to a maximum of 10 per cent, thus leading the taxpayer to believe that he is entitled to deduct the maximum of 10 per cent of his income, why not reduce the rate to 6 per cent and tell him that he may deduct this amount without having to produce receipts?

[Mr. MacLean (Queens).]

• (3:40 p.m.)

[English]

Mr. Gordon: Mr. Chairman, the hon. gentleman has asked me a question which to my knowledge has nothing to do with any of the items in this resolution. Perhaps it would be more appropriate to ask that question of the Minister of National Revenue, who is responsible for the administration of the Income Tax Act.

Mr. Caouette: I knew that was coming; nevertheless, these are amendments to the Income Tax Act, and when I am dealing with the Income Tax Act I believe I am in order.

Mr. Knowles: The Minister of National Revenue never makes amendments to the Income Tax Act.

Mr. Gordon: But he is responsible for its administration.

Mr. Caouette: Surely we can discuss the whole thing. The Minister is in the potato field, anyway.

[Translation]

Mr. Chairman, we are dealing with the Income Tax Act and, as was pointed out by the hon. member for Medicine Hat (Mr. Olson) and the hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Knowles), only the Minister of Finance is empowered to amend this act. When we discuss it, the Minister tells us that to speak about the income tax is to go beyond the scope of those items.

Mr. Chairman, section 1 introduces an amendment providing that for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years the income tax payable by an individual be reduced by an amount equal to the lesser of 10 per cent of basic tax or $600 and for the 1965 taxation year by an amount equal to the lesser of 5 per cent of basic tax or $300.

I said a while go that the minister was not helping the Canadian workers with this 10 per cent reduction of the basic tax. If the Minister of Finance had, for example, moved an amendment providing that incomes less than $5,000 for married persons and $2,500 for single persons would be exempted from income tax, then he would have helped all Canadian workers.

I would like to point out that under this new legislation, those earning high salaries will profit more from it, but low income groups will not profit from it at all. The federal members of Parliament will profit from this legislation, since our taxable income will be reduced by 10 per cent, out of our income of $12,000 per year and we will thus save about $350 or $375 per year on income tax. But our fellow citizens, our electors in our respective ridings, will get hardly anything out of it.

Mr. Chairman, there is something else. The Minister of Finance should have added another amendment to that act to allow workers, for instance, to deduct from their income the cost of the tools they need to work and do their job.

If a lawyer buys something for his office, furniture, for instance, his bookkeeper deducts the cost of it from his income tax. If a doctor buys some equipment, scalpels or something else, he is allowed to deduct the cost from his income; he can get an income tax deduction for those amounts. As the owner of a garage, if I buy equipment for it, I can deduct it from my income.

But the worker who has to buy for $800, $900, $1,500, or $2,000 of equipment, the carpenters, the mechanics, those people are not entitled to deduct from their income the cost of the tools which they need to do their job.

Why did the Minister of Finance not take into account our suggestions, while preparing those amendments to the Income Tax Act. Had he done so, he would have helped, thousands of Canadian workers.

In conclusion, I shall say—I have often said it before I repeat again—that the legislation introduced by the Minister of Finance allows the rich to grow richer, though fewer and the poor to grow poorer and to multiply. It seems that the government and its ministers always come up with this kind of legislation.

Therefore, I suggest to the Minister of Finance to consider seriously the possibility of stabilizing, for instance, the percentage in respect of receipts for charitable donations. The basic exemption should be increased to $5,000 for married men and $2,500 for single persons. This would permit those in the lower income brackets to enjoy some advantages and workers should be allowed to deduct from their income amounts spent for purchasing the tools they need to work at their trades. Then, they would not have to pay heavy taxes on the equipment they need to do their work.

Mr. Chairman, there are several other important points besides those I have mentioned. There is for instance the provision under which a nephew, a niece or another dependant may finally be recognized as human beings. We approve the good points of this measure.

We also approve the 10 per cent income tax reduction, but we think it does not help sufficiently the small wage earner, the farmer or the worker.

We agree with the good things contained in these amendments, but we find that the government is, once again, rather mean as far as a great number of Canadian workers are concerned. We would like the government and the minister of Finance to be more generous and fair for those who need it most, that is the Canadian worker, the Canadian farmer, in short, the people of Canada.

[English]

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Chairman, I enter this debate because of the importance of the resolution, particularly paragraph 19 with which I want to deal in detail. I do so also because at the resolution stage hon. Members are provided the opportunity of pointing out deficiencies in proposed legislation, and the Government is provided with an opportunity to reconsider and withdraw or modify the bill which follows the resolution.

• (3:50 p.m.)

It may be that the bill is printed and ready. Nevertheless, if the Minister of Finance will heed those Members of the House who have spoken and accept their advice he may be saved from error in the future, though I doubt very much that this particular Minister can be saved from making mistakes. But at the resolution stage an opportunity is presented to make suggestions, and on the basis of those suggestions the Minister can then redraft his bill, if that is necessary, or modify it by withdrawing the offending section entirely.

I have another reason for speaking today on this particular matter. The proposed change in the Income Tax Act as envisaged in section 19 of the resolution is, as has been pointed out by others, the beginning of an attack on the freedom of the press. The Minister cannot brush this aside by any casual statement such as he gave us on Tuesday. He cannot convince us, and I do not think he can convince the Canadian people, that this Liberal Government, as he said in the course of his remarks, "would never contemplate any measure which could seriously be construed as interfering with the freedom of the press". We do not have that confidence in this Government; and any confidence the people of Canada had in the Government two years ago has been dissipated over the course of the period since then.

The reason that confidence has been dissipated is the lack of information supplied to the House of Commons from day to day. As long ago as October, 1963 the hon. Member for Kootenay West used these words, as found on page 3887 of Hansard:

> Regardless of our differences, it has always been the practice of this House and in the country to respect the word of a member of the Cabinet. When we can no longer respect the word of a member of the cabinet, democracy in this country is on the downhill grade.

Those are very serious words from a senior and highly respected Member of this chamber. As long ago as October, 1963 the hon. Member for Kootenay West cast doubt upon the type of information that was being supplied at that time by the Government. We have had example after example over the intervening months. I have said in the House before that I can no longer rely on the word of the Prime Minister, which is a very serious matter indeed. I doubt very much that I can rely any longer on the word of the Minister of Finance, as I will point out in a minute or two.

One of my reasons for losing confidence in the Prime Minister emerged last year during the course of the flag debate, when on three different occasions he stated in the House that "none of us saw a Canadian red ensign in those years", referring to the first world war. That statement was refuted by our late friend Hon. George Nowlan and by myself, both of us having served in France during that period. But despite that denial by serving soldiers who had been there and who saw that Canadian flag, the Prime Minister repeated that statement in the House, on three occasions although he himself, of course, was not present in France. That is one of the reasons I cannot place any confidence in statements made by the Prime Minister.

We are accustomed to evasion time after time in the House when we ask questions. We are subjected to evasion on the part of the Secretary of State for External Affairs—I am sorry he is not here—who on six or seven different occasions has evaded the question when I have asked him what the Government is doing about its promise to negotiate out of the use of nuclear arms. He has engaged in evasion instead of simply saying no, we have not done anything about it, which would be the truthful answer.

I get evasive answers from the Minister of National Defence. Only last week I inquired whether our Voodoo planes in Canada are equipped with nuclear missiles. His answer was that they are fully operational, which was an evasion of the question, instead of saying either yes or no. Today we had an example in the case of the Minister of Labour. So it goes down the line.

But the situation has become very serious with regard to the Minister of Finance. He has been attacked by very prominent Canadian newspapers, and I think he must make a statement to the House with regard to these attacks. He has been accused in words that we are not allowed to use in the House. He has been accused of falsehood. His statements are called untrue, and these accusations are broadcast throughout the country. When newspapers of the standing of the Globe and Mail and the Winnipeg Free Press make such accusations against a Minister of the Crown the situation becomes extraordinarily serious. These are not accusations such as are sometimes made in the heat of debate in this chamber, but are accusations made by responsible newspapers. What answer is the Minister going to give to these accusations? In an editorial in the Globe and Mail of June 16 these words appear:

> Finance Minister Walter Gordon suffers either from a bad memory inexcusable in a Minister of the Crown, or he is tampering with the truth.

What stronger statement could be made? There is a stronger statement in the editorial, which quotes these words from the speech of the Minister on June 14, as found on page 2386 of Hansard:

> —this had not aroused opposition or suggestions that it posed a threat to the freedom of the press when it was to be applied to periodicals. It has been surprising, therefore, that this charge should be raised when the same principle is now to be applied to newspapers. It is difficult to accept the fact that a principle can be right and good, and widely accepted as such, when applied to one field of communications but not when it is applied to another.

What does the Globe and Mail say? These are the words of the Globe and Mail of June 16:

> Mr. Gordon's statement is false.

I say, Mr. Chairman, that this is indeed very serious. What is the Minister of Finance going to do? The people of Canada have read that statement in the Globe and Mail. Are they going to place any further reliance on statements made by the Minister of Finance? The editorial in the Globe and Mail goes on to point out that that newspaper had expressed opposition to the proposals time after time, going back to the proposals with regard to periodicals in 1961. Yet the Minister says that it has not aroused opposition, or suggestions that it poses a threat to the freedom of the press.

• (4:00 p.m.)

I do not know how he describes opposition to his proposals. If we say they are wrong, is that not opposition to his proposals? If the newspapers say they are wrong and that other things should be tried, is that not opposition to his proposals? Yet he has the audacity to stand up in this Chamber and say this has not aroused opposition, or suggestions that it poses a threat to the freedom of the press.

Two days ago when the Leader of the Opposition was speaking he drew attention to opposition expressed by the Winnipeg Free Press, which dealt with a resolution passed by the Canadian Daily Newspapers Publishers Association, and quoted from the Winnipeg Free Press as follows:

> They could lay open the way for some future and less scrupulous government to use them as a method of punishing or bestowing favours on Canadian newspapers.

Then he quoted further, as recorded at page 2424 of Hansard for June 15:

> Whether by design or through sheer clumsiness, what the Minister proposes would give this and all future governments the power to interfere with the right of all Canadians to read what they choose.

That is opposition to the Minister's proposals. The Leader of the Opposition expressed opposition to them but there has been no substantial reply, if any, from the Government side. As recorded at page 2427 of Hansard the Leader of the Opposition stated:

> The freedom of the press in a society of free men depends upon commercial freedom of the press, freedom from direct or indirect government subsidies or other form of control. The irony of the present situation is that the Government purports to assist the press by making it impossible for ouside competitors to compete. The fact is that these budgetary proposals will bring about a degree of government control not known in this country, and not known in any country today which has inherited the British tradition of freedom.

There could be no more complete description of what is contained in the Minister's proposals, and surely that is opposition to his suggestions.

The most serious attacks on the Minister's proposals have come from the Winnipeg Free Press. That is not a Tory paper. It is not a supporter of mine, as I have well known all these years. I enjoyed the experience of getting a small but complimentary editorial comment in the Winnipeg Free Press 14 years ago when I entered this House and made my maiden speech—

Mr. Knowles: The hon. Member and I have this in common.

Mr. Churchill: —and that was the end of our friendly relations. Nevertheless I have respect for many of the men who report for the Winnipeg Free Press, and sometimes its editorials are worth reading with considerable care. The one it published on June 16 deserves the most careful scrutiny. I expect that editorial will be widely quoted by other papers across the country. It makes the strongest attack yet on the Minister of Finance; and under these circumstances, with other papers attacking him and accusing him of misleading the House of Commons and the public, there is only one reasonable recourse for him. The Winnipeg Free Press has this to say:

> Mr. Walter Gordon's defence in the Commons Monday evening of the Government's legislation to prevent foreign take-overs of Canadian publications is a mixture of weak arguments and outright falsehoods.

These are not my words. These are the words of the Winnipeg Free Press—"outright falsehoods." We are entitled to the truth from the treasury benches. How can you carry on democratic government if you cannot get the facts and the truth, if you are to receive evasions to questions and, in the words of the Winnipeg Free Press, "outright falsehoods"? This reminds us of Goebbels at the time of the Second World War and prior to it; the falsehood repeated over and over again.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Cameron, High Park): Order. May I suggest to the hon. Member that he is trying to do indirectly what he has no right to do directly.

Mr. Churchill: I thank you for your direction and advice, Mr. Chairman, but I am dealing with a very serious matter here. The Minister has introduced a section in his resolution to amend the Income Tax Act which strikes at the freedom of the press, and he has stated in the House that what he is doing does not strike at the freedom of the press, that no objections have been made, that his proposal asserts no control whatever over newspapers and other publications, that it provides no precedent for any kind of government interference with complete freedom of the press, that no practical alternative has been found despite careful thought and much discussion with the people concerned, and so on.

The Acting Chairman (Mr. Cameron, High Park): May I direct the hon. gentleman's attention to Beauchesne, citation 157(5):

It is not in order to read articles in newspapers, letters or communications emanating from persons outside the House and referring to, or commenting on, or denying anything said by a member or expressing any opinion reflecting on proceedings within the House.

I suggest to the hon. Member that probably on reflection he will do directly what he is now trying to do indirectly; then I will be able to try to rule on what he is doing.

Mr. Churchill: Mr. Chairman, you are not suggesting that I do not accept these statements? Unintentionally I think you are leaving an innuendo that I do not believe these statements are accurate. I am inclined to believe they are accurate, and I certainly will accept them for accuracy; because it is a simple matter dealing with the false statements that the Minister made in the House, and shows the inaccuracy of the Minister.

I think I am within my rights to draw attention to the fact that the editorial in the Winnipeg Free Press of June 16 condemns the Minister of Finance in the strongest terms for misleading statements which it calls "outright falsehoods." That is a term I cannot use here, but I am quoting from what the paper says. Surely the Minister should be able to deal with this, and I hope he will before the debate is concluded.

We are aware that a great many newspapers have opposed the suggestions put forward by the Minister. That is common knowledge, and we have opposed them too. As recorded at page 2386 of Hansard for June 14 the Minister stated:

The Government proposal asserts no control whatever over newspapers or other publications.

This has already been drawn to the attention of the Chamber by hon. Members who preceded me. I am quite prepared to accept the statement of the Winnipeg Free Press, and I will accept its words:

• (4:10 p.m.)

This is the exact opposite of the truth. The Government's proposal asserts, for the first time, the Government's right to impose discriminatory taxation on advertising by defining who shall and who shall not be entitled to tax exemption.

This is what is contained in the Government's proposal. The Minister went on to say, as reported at page 2386 that it "provides no precedent for any kind of Government interference in the complete freedom of the press". I am prepared to accept the statement made by the Winnipeg Free Press in respect of this matter—"Again a complete falsehood". And those are not my words; they are the words of the Winnipeg Free Press.

[The Acting Chairman (Mr. Cameron, High Park).]

The legislation does set a precedent, and a most dangerous precedent at that. Having asserted for the first time a Government's right to tax advertising on a basis of ownership there is nothing to prevent extension on other bases.

That is a statement which I accept as a reply to the Minister's earlier statement. Then the hon. gentleman went on to say—and again his words may be found in Hansard—that no practical alternative had been found despite careful thought and much discussion with the people concerned. Well, alternatives were suggested. The Winnipeg Free Press put forward quite a number before this resolution came before us for debate.

I can mention three which have been drawn to my attention. It was suggested that the Government might urge all newspapers to voluntarily forfeit the right to their own alienation through the sale of their voting stock. That was one suggestion. Another suggestion was that the Government might declare any foreign purchase of a Canadian newspaper to be null and void. The Free Press made a further suggestion. It said if the Government were to introduce a formal resolution in Parliament to the effect that in no circumstances would the alienation of Canadian newspapers be allowed, and that if necessary retroactive legislation would be passed to deal with such a situation, such a resolution would receive unanimous or virtually unanimous approval. Then, trying to win the attention of the Prime Minister, the paper suggested that if the Prime Minister would proclaim in the name of Parliament and the whole of the Canadian nation a solemn embargo on the foreign control of communications media, all foreigners would understand.

These are alternatives which have been suggested, but the Minister brushed them all aside and said that no practical alternative had been found. I think these are practical alternatives. The Minister himself gave us an example, reference to which will be found on page 2386. He was very proud of the announcement he made last September the effect of which was retroactive to the time of the earlier statement he made in September of 1964, with regard to the acquisition of any of our chartered banks by people not resident in Canada.

There are two points at issue here. One is the maintenance of the freedom of the press, which is just as important to the Canadian people as is the maintenance of freedom of speech in this Chamber. We feel this proposal would be an encroachment on the freedom of the press. It is our duty to protect the Canadian people against any such encroachment. We are not satisfied with assurances that this particular government would, of course, not do anything which might interfere with press freedom, an expression merely of good intentions on the part of this administration.

I mentioned earlier in my remarks that there is no longer any confidence in this House or throughout Canada with regard to the good intentions of this Government. There is too much evasion, too much withholding of information, and a regrettable lack of frankness in this Chamber. Here is the culminating point. We find the Minister of Finance accused by leading newspapers in this country of not telling the facts, of not giving the truth. They use the word "falsehood" with regard to his statements.

This, I say, is a most serious thing. It is one of the most serious things which have occurred in the last two years and which have come to our attention. The Minister of Finance, one of the most powerful figures in the Cabinet, close adviser to the Prime Minister, is accused by leading newspapers in this country of falsifying the record. I think there is only one course open to that Minister, and that is for him to submit his resignation.

Some hon. Members: Oh, oh.

Mr. Diefenbaker: There is little I can add to what has been said by my hon. friend from Winnipeg South Centre. However, while I have been sitting here my mail came in and it does carry strong support for the views expressed a moment ago by my hon. friend.

This Government has made the telling of partial truths the cornerstone of Government policy. We have had example after example, particularly in the last few months, of Ministers giving us but part of the truth. We had an example this afternoon from the Minister of Labour. I do not understand it. I cannot conceive that giving answers which are not truthful is any mark of forensic capacity or of ministerial responsibility in this Chamber.

We had an example a couple of weeks ago in connection with the action being taken by the Government to bring in a new social security card. I had certain information. I brought it before the House. It had to do with the removal of the coat of arms of Canada from the card and the substitution of a single maple leaf. The answer I received was evasive. The information I had was that objection was being raised in parts of Canada to having a coat of arms because it had the crown and the union jack on it. I had that direct information, because I do not ask questions in the House of Commons unless I have reasonable ground for knowing what the answer will be.

But they do not learn over there. When I have asked questions and those questions have been evaded, it has not been very long before the truth has come out showing that the questions were well based. But they cannot learn. One does not expect some of the Parliamentary Secretaries to learn; that would be expecting too much. But I knew this was a fact. The answer was evasive. First the Minister of Labour said, in effect, "There is nothing to it". Well, they have come out with it now. They had to admit it.

• (4:20 p.m.)

Now that card bears the strongest possible resemblance to the membership card of the Liberal Party organization in Canada. The removal of the coat of arms and the substitution therefor of the maple leaf produces a card that bears a striking resemblance to that denoting membership in the Liberal Party.

The point I make is this. This Government does not give Parliament the facts. The Prime Minister—and I am not going to deal with him in his absence; I have dealt with him in his presence on this—told Parliament last November that he had no information regarding the connection of an executive assistant with alleged bribery. He maintained that position until after a period of weeks, knowing that it would be revealed in the crime report, he finally remembered that he had been told.

A selective memory is not conducive to sound Parliamentary procedure. Indeed, if one looks at the British system, Profumo was not removed for his extramarital activities; he was removed because he deceived Parliament. Over and over again this Government has shown a propensity for deception in answers.

The Minister said the other day there had been no complaints offered about the press legislation. I am not going to quote from any editorial but, Sir, if you are looking for reading in your spare time, read the condemnation of the Government in the editorial entitled "Weak Case" referred to by my hon. friend from Winnipeg South Centre. I have never been one to complain about criticism. That is not criticism; that is condemnation of evasion of Parliament. One paper after another is taking the same course.

It is obvious, Sir, that in the past few years deception and maliciously false propaganda have become a course of action followed by the Liberal Party. They did it in 1962; they did it in 1963. I could go over the record of the things they condemned and said were wrong. They follow today the courses that we followed. Now they have become right. Mr. Chairman, deception, delusion and outright falsehood can never be tolerated in a democracy.

It is said that there is no foundation for fear about this measure. The full story of Parliament and what happens here is not getting out to the people. I have referred to the C.B.C. and to the fact that after discussions in Parliament there are always commentators able to smooth over the problems and wipe out the inferences. There will be nothing in the news about this. It would not be helpful to the Government if it got out that once again Parliament had been fooled. I use that expression advisedly. Cover up, conceal, attack, assassinate character, endeavour to destroy your political opponents by falsehood that you know is false.

Mr. Byrne: That is what you are doing.

Mr. Diefenbaker: This has become the cornerstone of Liberalism in Canada.

Mr. Clancy: It always has been.

Mr. Diefenbaker: It did not take place in the days of Laurier and King, but it does today. I say to the Minister of Finance: You had a lot to do with the falsehood of the campaigns of 1962 and 1963. Indeed, you were the planner, I am told.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Diefenbaker: I am also told the Minister of Finance was the father of the truth squad, although he has never admitted paternity. But I have information, he might be surprised to learn, on that and it makes him the one who said "If we follow this course we can destroy the Leader of the Conservative Party". And he today finds himself in a position—

Mr. Byrne: You are destroying yourself.

Mr. Diefenbaker: —where he has placed before Parliament legislation that gives him the right to control. He may not exercise it today. Is he exercising it? Well, I do not know anything about this paper; it came to me a few moments ago. I have before me the Muskoka News of June 16. It is 10 cents a copy and it is published at Gravenhurst, Ontario. I do not know the publisher; I do not know the paper. It says it has a fairly large circulation. This is what it says:

Ottawa Gestapo Tries to Silence Free Press

Gravenhurst—Without warning the "Gestapo" branch of the Department of National Revenue seized the advertising income of the Muskoka News in reprisal for articles published in this paper critical of the Liberal government in Ottawa.

Some hon. Members: Shame.

Mr. Diefenbaker: That was yesterday. It came to me while the hon. gentleman who preceded me was speaking. Then it says this:

The Muskoka News payday is on Wednesday.

Then it says:

Garnishee proceedings were instituted against the free press without a warning to the publisher who, if advised in time, could have taken appropriate action. Like a thief in the night, our government forces have invaded the freedom of the press and set it back 50 years...to the time when governments told editors what they must not print about scandals in public affairs.

That is yesterday's paper, as I say.

Mr. Bigg: Freedom of the press.

Mr. Diefenbaker: What further evidence do you need to support the contention that what this Government has tried to do, is bring about thought control in Canada, destroy political opponents, malign them by means of mercenary publicists who peer in keyholes or invent in the darkness of their offices. Isn't it a strange thing that this has all developed within the last two, three or four years?

I have never complained but, Sir, the libels that have been published have been inspired. What a Government. Why, only the other day it was shown that even the Civil Service within the departments cannot recognize their Ministers. It indicates how things are going. An Order for Return was brought in and was found by the Hansard office to come from the Department of Public Works, in the name of "Honourable Lucien Rivard". Just imagine; this went through the Civil Service. It must have gone through the Minister. This shows the tremendous impact the Minister of Public Works has made on his own Department; or else it reveals the fact that Mr. Rivard enjoys a position of responsibility akin to that of a Minister of the Crown. Imagine the alertness shown by the Hansard people. We have not yet had an explanation from the Minister of Public Works, and I should like to hear from him what happened. What would hon. gentlemen opposite have said when we were in office if one of the greatest thugs engaged in narcotics distribution had been so signally honoured as to have been raised by the Department of Public Works to the status of minister on a document of Parliament, elevated to the Privy Council, indeed the Cabinet itself?

• (4:30 p.m.)

Now, Sir, what is the reaction to this legislation? I know the Government has tried to tell us that this is the same legislation as that which was recommended by the O'Leary Commission. It is nothing of the kind. The O'Leary Commission made no recommendations about newspapers. It endeavoured to preserve Canada's periodicals against unjust competition by Time and Reader's Digest and other United States magazines which have masqueraded as Canadian, establishing themselves in Canada in a preferred position to Canadian magazines endeavouring to retain a Canadian identity.

I speak of Maclean's magazine, Chatelaine and the like. We wanted to see something which was Canadian preserved so that Canadian opinion would be available. We said if these people can come into Canada from the United States with what I call ready print or ready prepared editorial content or other content against which Canadian magazines cannot compete, then this matter is far removed from the question of newspapers. This was at the request of Canadian periodical publishers, it being the only course for their preservation as national entities within Canada.

Who asked for the present legislation? Nobody. Why do the Government want it? They must have a reason. They published tremendous advertisements in the press during the last few days giving the detail of the redistribution of seats in the provinces as an attempted sop to the great newspapers of Canada. After all, they said, here is a quarter of a million we will let you have. They thought they could buy silence with that.

What is going to be the reaction to this legislation in other parts of the world? We have already had one reaction from the International Press Institute meeting in London. Sean MacBride, Secretary General of the International Commission of World Jurists, quoted Article 19 of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, as proclaimed by the United Nations, in a speech he made within the last week. That declaration says:

> Everyone has the right to freedom of opinion and expression. This right includes freedom to hold opinions without interference and to seek, receive and impart information and ideas through any media and regardless of frontiers.

This is the most important right guaranteed to human beings, and, as he said in his speech, it must be preserved.

What is behind this, Mr. Chairman? I have seen this Government throttling opinion, pressuring people by the subtleties of modern propaganda, covering up facts relating to matters before Parliament. It is the strangest thing today, but a matter is reported on one page of a newspaper, and anything difficult or embarrassing to the Government is then explained away by commentators. With this sort of governmental control, where will freedom be?

Who asked for this legislation? We would like to know if the Minister would tell us. Did it have the same paternity as the truth squad? Did it have the same paternity as the campaign which has been waged across this country? I dislike mentioning myself personally, but it is a campaign designed to destroy, to assassinate. Indeed, the Prime Minister said "I do not think we need to worry about 'him' any more" in the speech he made in Toronto in September, 1962.

Who asked for this? Whose brainchild is this political abortion? What is behind it? The Minister has but to read the press comment across Canada to discover that they are not asking for it. Since I came into the House today a number of telegrams have come to me. One of them is from Mr. I. H. MacDonald, Deputy Chairman of Thomson Newspapers, dealing with these proposals in detail. Immediately it will be said "Oh, he is one we are getting after". Is that the reason for this legislation, because some of the Thomson newspapers have not bent the knee at will? Mr. MacDonald says in his telegram:

> Canada's image abroad can be seriously impaired by impetuous action on press restrictions.

It then goes on to deal with the speech made by Mr. MacBride, to which I have referred. Mr. T. L. Wilson, publisher of the Oshawa Times, who is one of the great publishers of our country, says:

> We of the Times of Oshawa are deeply concerned that the Government would even consider placing on the statutes any motion that interferes with the free flow of advertising in publications whether wholly owned by Canadians or otherwise. We must therefore register our strongest opposition to the bill now under discussion.

That was dated 1.58 p.m. today. The next one is from the publisher of the Daily Standard-Freeholder of Cornwall. Are these men who are not entitled to consideration? The Minister laughs, but what does Mr. Robertson, the publisher, say? He says:

> Proposed legislation restricting newspaper ownership serious blow to freedom of the press and inherent right of Canadians to be informed by press free of Governmental control. Implications of legislation and possible abuses threaten this democratic right. Am gravely concerned and oppose contemplated legislation. Reconsideration urgent.

Then I read from the telegram sent by Dick Malone, general manager of Free Press Publications:

> Before final decisions taken on projected press legislation I wish to register on behalf of our newspaper group our strongest possible protest against this discriminatory taxation measure which would threaten press freedom in Canada.

• (4:40 p.m.)

Are these men mad? Have they no common sense? Are they to be brushed aside? Is that the Government's view?

This afternoon one of the hon. Members from Vancouver mentioned that this resolution should be divided up, but we want an opportunity to oppose it and oppose it strongly. As the hon. Member for Queens has said, they have wrapped this up in one parcel and you either take all or take nothing; you take the things that are beneficial with the things which cannot be condoned. Should we divide this up? Let us go further than that; let us remove it, or let the Government drop it.

What will be the situation all over the world if this type of stand is taken? Let the Minister take the trouble to find out the ownership of some of the papers around the world and he will find that many of them are owned elsewhere. In Hong Kong the South China Post is British; in Okinawa the Morning Star is American; in the Philippines the Manila Bulletin is Swiss and the Evening News is American; in Thailand the Bangkok Post is Canadian and the Sienyitpo is Chinese; in Malaysia the Strait Times is British and Sinchew Jitpo is Chinese; in Kenya the ownership is Indian and British; in India the Calcutta Statesman is British; in Lagos the Sunday Graphic and the Sunday Mirror are both British.

What is the situation in Europe? The New York Herald Tribune, Paris edition, is American and the New York Times, Paris edition, is American. The Rome American is American and the Scandinavian Times is American, and the Weekly Tribune, Geneva, is American.

No one has ever said that the ownership of these papers circulated abroad is undermining the thinking of the people of those countries. I would have more to say about this but I am anxiously awaiting the Minister's reply, because no one could possibly sit silent in the face of the press references to the Minister's action.

I said earlier that the Minister had said that the O'Leary Commission report recommends some measures for imposing Canadian control on periodicals. The Winnipeg Free Press answers that suggestion by saying:

> Mr. Gordon is comparing apples with oranges. The O'Leary Commission was concerned with magazines, not newspapers; its dubious recommendations were aimed at channelling advertising from foreign owned (mainly Reader's Digest and Time) periodicals to domestic ones. Since no Canadian magazines were threatened by foreign take-overs, the matter of ownership was of little or no concern to the commission; the question of ownership of newspapers was not even touched upon.

Where did this idea come from and who produced it? Is this part of Mr. Kent's philosophy which he enunciated in September of 1960, that advertising was dangerous and that if manufacturers could not advertise then people would not buy things they did not need? After all, bureaucratic men know what is good for Canadians and do not think Canadians have the capacity of being able to decide what is good for themselves.

The Winnipeg Free Press says the Minister made the statement that the Government's proposal asserts no control whatever over newspapers or other publications. The answer in the Winnipeg Free Press is:

> This is the exact opposite of the truth. The government's proposal asserts, for the first time, the government's right to impose discriminatory taxation on advertising by defining who shall and who shall not be entitled to tax exemption. Advertising revenue is the lifeblood—the principal source of revenue—of any publication and the power to tax it is the power to control the press.

This article deals also with the question of there being no precedent for any kind of Government interference, and I am sure the Minister has read this. The Minister represents many of the great industrialists in Canada who look up to him as the apostolic successor to Keynes, another economist, and the other day he said that some wealthy business financiers objected to the tax because they secretly wanted to expand into other countries and were afraid that foreign governments might retaliate. I ask him now to tell us who are these mysterious businessmen; who are these nefarious wealthy financiers? Has the Minister not already been advised that retaliation will be in order and that this is a contravention of the provisions of GATT? I think about two years ago Mr. Dillon, the Secretary to the Treasury of the United States, took a strong stand in this regard; and did not the Government at that time make one of its frequent retreats in the face of what was said?

Finally, this article says the Minister stated:

"I cannot believe—any Canadian government at any time would ever contemplate any measure which could seriously be construed as interfering with freedom of the press. I know that no Liberal government would ever think of doing so—"

I believe that of the Liberalism of the Laurier and King governments, but not of the Liberalism of today. The Minister was speaking of the past. That statement is answered by the Free Press in this way:

The fact, of course, is that a Liberal government has not only contemplated a law interfering with press freedom, it has introduced one—and in a particularly vicious and dangerous form.

Surely these responsible newspapers are not taking a stand based on personal considerations, and there can be no such suggestion. This goes beyond that, and that is why I come back to the request to the Minister that he drop this proposal. No good can come of it, and the dangers have been pointed out. The press of this country, with two exceptions, say this is wrong. Will the Minister even now not give what might be called a pause, because it is a pause that refreshes, as has been suggested by the Government in another connection? Let us drop this matter.

• (4:50 p.m.)

If he will not do that, will he put it in cold storage, set it aside and let a committee of Parliament consider the matter, thus giving an opportunity to the press of Canada and to all who love freedom in this country to place their considered views before that committee? The Minister turns his back on all arguments that are advanced, smiles with that enigmatic smile for which he is famous, and deals with all criticism by pretending that he is not the kind of person who would undermine freedom. Mr. Chairman, everybody in history who has ever undermined freedom has always protested his love for freedom while at the same time doing his best to destroy it.

The one question the Minister must answer is, who is the father of this proposal? Who suggested it? What organization across Canada in the newspaper world asked the Minister to protect them? He has not been able to answer that question. If he could he no doubt would clear away a great deal, because we would get the truth and if we got the truth in that connection, out the window would go the bill.

Mr. Saltsman: Mr. Chairman, my colleagues have informed me that I did not have to give way to the Leader of the Opposition. I wish I had known that. I would have argued for the opportunity to speak before him, because his is quite an act to follow. However, I have only a few words to say with regard to section 19 of the resolution. I intend to be brief and concise in my objections to the section as it now stands.

Let me say first of all that I have a fair amount of sympathy with the Minister of Finance, his desire for Canadian objectives and his concern about Canadian nationalism. I think that desire is shared by very many people on this side of the House. However, I disagree considerably with the Minister both with regard to his diagnosis of the problem and the solution he proposes, and I resent the way the Government is bringing in this measure.

The Government is being very brave with Canadians and Canadian newspapers in particular. I do not see the Government being nearly as brave in bringing about Canadian ownership of some of the industries of this country which are dominated by foreign interests. I think the Government could very well have shown its bravery, its desire for Canadian nationalism and its recognition of the need for greater Canadian ownership of our industries by approaching the matter from that end.

I find it very difficult indeed to see how the Government can justify the measures it is proposing and the arguments it has made. Its worries in connection with the ownership of Canadian newspapers exclude Time and Reader's Digest. I believe we have in these two magazines a domination of the Canadian mind through a pervasive pattern such as would never exist even if every one of our newspapers was owned by foreign interests. I think any measure that excludes Time and Reader's Digest cannot be anything but an ineffectual device.

It makes no sense whatsoever to me to exclude Time and Reader's Digest and at the same time say we must be concerned about Canadian ownership. I see the Minister is smiling. I know he has heard this before and I am sure he is not smiling unkindly, but simply because he is saying to himself that this is the same old song he has already heard yesterday and today. However, this matter is important, and unless the Minister is willing to recognize the significance of what he is doing in this respect the entire legislation is meaningless. Certainly it is meaningless in terms of Canadian nationalism or in terms of there being some merit in having our Canadian newspapers owned in Canada.

I should like to refer to the editorial in the Winnipeg Free Press. Like every other Member of the House I too was lobbied, but I do not think one can say that freedom of the press is the issue in this particular debate. The issue is not freedom of the press, but whether Canadian nationalism and Canadian objectives are going to be best served by the kind of proposal the Minister has introduced. I should like to read from this editorial because it makes some sense:

> No one, least of all the newspapers of Canada, quarrels with the Government's objective of assuring a press which is completely controlled by Canadians and immune from foreign ownership. It is with the method Mr. Gordon has chosen that every responsible newspaper must strongly disagree and, if it is adopted by Parliament, seek to have rescinded by some future Government.

Speaking in the House the other day the Minister said he was open to suggestions with regard to this matter, and that he was looking for alternatives. He challenged those who said they too were interested in Canadian nationalism and interested in things Canadian to say what alternative proposals they had. There is an alternative proposal. It involves speaking loudly and clearly not only with regard to newspapers but everything that concerns Canadian nationalism, and making it clear that we will not tolerate any further take-over of the resources of this nation by foreign interests. It involves the indication of a willingness on the part of the Government to step in if such a danger is imminent.

Such a policy should not apply only to newspapers. I think the Government is being very discriminatory in picking out newspapers and ignoring these other things. If you have a national policy you have a national policy; but you cannot simply pick out one group and say you are going to pass laws or implement a policy affecting them while at the same time not doing anything about anyone else in the same circumstances. I object to the solution proposed. I object to the back door method of using advertising to determine the conduct of newspapers.

The other day I had the privilege of listening to the Leader of the Opposition. I always enjoy listening to his speeches. I have a very high regard for the manner of his delivery, but in this particular case I was not impressed by the content of his speech. He referred the other day to this measure having been proposed at a thinkers' conference by Mr. Tom Kent among other suggestions made by that gentleman with regard to advertising generally in Canada. The right hon. gentleman denounced Mr. Kent, but I must say that I have a great deal of sympathy for some of the things Mr. Kent had to say.

There is a serious problem with regard to advertising in this country, but why does the Government not face up directly to that whole problem instead of confining itself to one aspect of it? I think the pervasive and underhanded influence of some of the advertising techniques that are used in other areas is far more dangerous to our concept of national unity and the formation of a national policy that will benefit Canada than the aboveboard advertising that is found in our newspapers. I think there is far more brainwashing being done by lobbyists who are not identified or recognized as such than from the straightforward advertising that appears in newspapers.

• (5:00 p.m.)

I have said before that I resent the way in which the Government has brought in this measure. I am not the only one to have said so, but I think it bears repeating. In the past I have had to vote for measures which were part good and part bad. I sometimes suspect that the Government makes them so almost intentionally. But in this particular case I refuse to support the Government measure and I intend to tell the people of my riding why I refuse to support it. It has many good things in it which I would like to support, but I have come to the end of my rope on this particular principle, this idea of inserting things which should be debated separately, things which have special significance but which are put into a package deal, along with other things that are good for the people of my riding and of Canada generally.

I do not think the Government has a right to do this. The Minister is a reasonable man. I hope he has not considered my remarks as unkind or unreasonable. They were not intended that way, but I certainly hope he will reconsider in this particular case. He has heard the arguments from this side of the House. Some of them have been reasonable, some unreasonable, but above everything else one argument is coming through, that this kind of measure could best be introduced in some other way.

I think the idea of a voluntary approach to Canadian newspapers would be very effective. I have been highly impressed,—though perhaps I should not be, because the newspapers have not been particularly friendly to those of us who sit on these benches,—with the fact that newspapers in Canada tend to be quite fair and to be Canadian oriented. The Government, I think, should seriously consider a voluntary approach to the newspapers in order to find the solution, knowing the objective and knowing that a solution can be worked out that will be satisfactory without this kind of imposed direction.

Again I repeat the problem of freedom of speech is not involved. I do not think that is the intention of the Minister or the Government, but it could work out that way and it brings suspicions to the fore that something along this line is being considered. Therefore I ask the Minister to remove this paragraph from the resolution so that we can all vote for the things that are good in it, and so that we do not have to vote against measures simply because we resent one portion of them. There would be no loss of face involved in removing the paragraph. There are alternative answers to that suggested by the Minister.

I have some strange ideas—maybe they are not so strange—for someone who is a member of this party. My strange ideas relate to the profit motive in newspapers. A few years ago I saw Mr. Roy Thomson being interviewed on television by one of Canada's leading intellectuals who, I am sure thought he was going to make mincemeat of Mr. Thomson. The burden of his argument went like this, "Mr. Thomson, don't you think it is a terrible thing that Canadian newspapers should be run for profit instead of ideology?" I was quite impressed with Roy Thomson's reply with his argument that if you run a newspaper essentially for profit you tend to be guided by public intention, by the need for public acceptance, and that this tends to neutralize a newspaper. A newspaper run with this motive does not get on a high horse and start developing ideologies. This, I think, is a good thing.

I am far less suspicious of a newspaper that is run for profit than of a newspaper run to promote some ideology. All of us at some time or another would wish to see a newspaper that in its editorial policies favoured us quite strongly. But as Mr. Thomson pointed out, the day may come when it will favour the very things we disagree with, and then we cannot do anything about it.

There is a strong argument in favour of newspapers in this country being accepted as profit making organizations. Our freedoms are in much better hands under those circumstances than they would be in the hands of the ideologists. We have seen many examples in the United States of press barons who decided they were going to change the world with their ideas. They were not interested in whether their papers made or lost money, as they made their profit in other ways. They used their newspapers for propaganda and the result was that they spewed hatred, and everything else that went with it.

We in Canada are quite fortunate that our newspapers are run on a profit motive. One of the leading newspapers in my riding is the Evening Reporter, a Thomson newspaper. I have had many disagreements with the Evening Reporter, both as a businessman in the community and as a politician who felt he was not getting a square deal, but I will say this for the Evening Reporter, that it reports local thought and local opinion, and at no time have I felt someone was telling it what to print, someone somewhere else. If it wants to criticize me, and that is local criticism, well, fine; but I would resent any central organization trying to direct that criticism. This problem of Canadian ownership and identity connected with newspapers is important. We are not going to get it through Canadian editions of Time and Reader's Digest.

I suggest to the Minister that some time in the future the Government might consider subsidizing political journals in Canada to ensure that all Canadians get fair access to coloured opinion. There is a need for interpretive news reporting. It cannot be given in the daily papers, nor should they attempt to give it, but it should be attempted in the weeklies and the magazines. Many of the people in the smaller parties, many of the people who do not agree with what the majority think, are entitled to have their voice heard; but at present they cannot, except in special cases. To me this would be a practical way to create a Canadian identity and disseminate ideas that might be of value to all Canadians.

Mr. Hales: Mr. Chairman, my remarks will deal specifically with paragraph 19 which reads:

That a new section be added to the Act concerning expenditures of a taxpayer for advertising space in a non-Canadian newspaper—

I am amazed that this piece of legislation should be introduced in this fashion.

• (5:10 p.m.)

Last session as I recall there was a separate resolution on the order paper dealing with this very question. It was there for weeks and weeks. It was discarded and is now concealed in the new income tax resolutions. We have been asked to accept or reject the whole deal. I think the Minister would have been much better advised to have brought in this proposal as a separate resolution since it deals with a matter of such great importance to the people of Canada, namely the freedom of the press.

This has all the appearance of a piece of legislation which was rushed through and poorly thought out. In my humble opinion it seems to be the first step toward control of the press. The remarks I have to make will be along this line of thinking—that the power to tax is the power to control. If this Government has any notion of obtaining control of the press it is on the most dangerous ground which a Government could tread. For an example we need only turn to the country of Ceylon, where last year, the lady Prime Minister of that country decided to gain control of the press and fought an election on that issue. She met with a resounding defeat. Let me warn the Government that if it has any thought of obtaining control of the press it is treading on dangerous ground.

As I have said, my remarks will centre on the statement that power to tax is power to control. I do not think there is any escaping the logic of that statement. The other day the Minister said the proposal put forward by the Government asserted no control whatever over newspapers or other publications. This would seem to be an unusual statement because the Government's proposal does assert for the first time its right to impose discriminatory taxation on advertising by defining who shall, and who shall not, be entitled to tax exemption. As we all know, advertising is the lifeblood of any publication, whether it be a newspaper or a periodical. If this revenue is taken away, freedom is taken away at the same time.

The Minister also said concerning this resolution that it provides no precedent of any kind for Government interference with the complete freedom of the press. Well, in my opinion this legislation does set a precedent, and a most dangerous precedent at that. Having asserted for the first time a Government's right to tax advertising on a basis of ownership there is nothing to prevent extension on other bases. What is there to prevent the Government, in the case of the ownership of a newspaper by a religious or trade union group, for instance, of which it does not approve, imposing such conditions on advertising as to make the venture impossible? The power to tax is the power to control.

I suggest that the Minister should withdraw this proposed legislation in the interest of freedom. He should throw it out. If he does not agree to do this now, he should certainly reintroduce this particular resolution so that the question can go before a committee where representatives of the press and those connected with publishing would have an opportunity to put forward their views. The Minister has said he is prepared to stand or fall by this legislation. Those are strong words and I hope he will think very carefully before he proceeds further with this proposed legislation. In any case I sincerely hope he will consider excluding newspapers from the resolution. To the press I would say this: It is time you spoke out on this subject; do not let the Government silence you with regard to the particular subject now before the Committee, thereby losing the freedom you now enjoy.

Mr. Baldwin: Looking over this fairly complex and lengthy omnibus resolution I am reminded that taxation will always be with us. It has been said that only in heaven will there be no taxation, and then only because Minister of Finance usually go to the other place—and, when I say that, I do not mean the other place usually referred to in this House.

On clause 19 I have this comment to make. In some ways I do not take such a serious view as to the merits of the issue which is now being debated fairly extensively. I would be glad at some time to debate the whole question of economic nationalism which, in its present form, to my way of thinking is cutting across the trend of world development today. However, that can be done on another occasion. But clause 19 does seem to introduce a principle—and this has been referred to by my hon. friend from Wellington South—which constitutes a travesty on the whole constitutional process by making use of the power of taxation as a means by which the British North America Act can be circumvented and the Federal Government can enter into spheres of jurisdiction and authority which certainly do not lie within the contemplation of that Act.

As hon. Members know, section 91(3) of the B.N.A. Act says the Federal Government has jurisdiction with respect to "the raising of money by any method or system of taxation." It seems to me to be quite outside the simple English meaning of that section for a Federal Government to use fiscal policy in such a way as to attach conditions of the kind set out here, and then, by exempting certain types of development, to control them, in effect, by the incidence of taxation. By this use of fiscal policy the Government is in effect laying down conditions and regulations with respect to commercial undertakings—in this case, newspapers—which it cannot control in a direct way.

• (5:20 p.m.)

It is well known that in 1933 the Alberta Government passed a press bill. I have not the legislation here, but it purported to be a form of licensing to bring newspapers under what could be probable Government supervision. There was no intention indicated in the legislation that it was to control the press; it was simply a licensing bill. The then Liberal Government recognized the dangers of a policy of this kind. There was no attempt, no suggestion, that this legislation was ultra vires. There was a tacit admission that this lay squarely within the powers of a provincial government if it saw fit to exercise the powers. So the then Liberal Government disallowed the legislation, and to my thinking properly disallowed it, although at the time of disallowance no attempt had been made by the Alberta Government to take advantage of the authority which it might have exercised if it had seen fit to do so. I think there is no doubt that the control of newspapers is a matter lying squarely within the ambit of provincial jurisdiction.

This particular philosophy introduced by paragraph 19 could be pursued in many, many other ways by simply attaching conditions to any industry at all, the power to regulate which industry lies squarely and solely in the Province. Then the Federal Government by attaching certain conditions would say in effect, "If you, the industry, comply with these conditions you are in a position to avoid the incidence of taxation or to take the benefit of certain exemptions". If this power were utilized, as it could well be, then I see no field of endeavour into which the Federal Government could not intrude if it desired to do so, and I would think quite legally. I would doubt if a principle of this kind can be successfully attacked in any court, but I suggest it is an attempt to do indirectly what the British North America Act, our Constitution, says you cannot do directly and I would be rather surprised if some of the Provinces do not, on the occasion of some Federal-Provincial Conference, raise this issue.

It may be all right. I am not going to argue the merits of this newspaper issue at this particular time. But as a practice, as a precedent I deplore it and feel that it could lead to very serious consequences. I think it was pointed out today by one hon. Member, as it was once before in the House, that this was done in the Broadcasting Act. I did not like the way it was done then, but there is this difference, that by a Privy Council decision the right to deal with matters of broadcasting was vested exclusively in the Federal Government, and when the Federal Government saw fit, whether rightly or wrongly, to attach certain conditions in connection with the formation of companies and the ownership of shares in companies which would be entitled to participate in broadcasting activity, they were legislating properly within the terms of their jurisdiction. I will not say any more on this matter, Mr. Chairman. I felt I should deal with it on this basis because, while I do not take the same view as other hon. Members as to the actual merits, I do think I would be derelict in my duty if I did not point out the dangers involved in a course of this kind.

Before I sit down, Mr. Chairman, there is another matter I wish to bring to the attention of the Minister and on which I ask for some comments either now or before the legislation is finally passed. I refer to paragraph 10(c) dealing with the clearing of land for the purpose of carrying on a farming business. This involves, in my constituency probably more than in any other constituency or area of Canada, a measure which could be and I hope would be beneficial if there is a liberal construction of this particular section. It could bring considerable benefits. There are in the constituency of Peace River some 10 million or 11 million acres of land now being farmed, and, some two million or three million acres which need to be cleared in order to be brought under cultivation. In addition, following the construction of the Pine Point Railway and as a result of the improved means of transportation and the increasing flow of settlers into the north, there is another vast area of 10 million or 12 million acres of land, most of which has on it a great variety of brush both heavy and light. This is the kind of area which could benefit from a proper definition of the phrase "clearing land" contained in this particular amendment.

This is no idle suggestion, either, because during the course of the last four years approximately 2,000 or 3,000 homestead leases or homestead sales have been made in each year in the Peace River land district. These involve units of 320 acres, and by simple arithmetic it appears that annually there are well over half a million acres of land being taken up for settlement; and this process will continue for a number of years yet. Under those conditions, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that some time in the next 15, 18 or 20 years, 10 million to 12 million acres will benefit from legislation of this kind if it means what I think and hope it does mean. Clearing land is the first step in making it available for cultivation. This is a request which has been made for many years by people in the north country. I recall 20 years ago sending resolutions down here urging that there be provided a provision to deduct on a yearly income tax basis moneys expended in clearing and breaking land. This has been neglected, and I am happy to give credit to the Government for taking this first, but still rather feeble step in the right direction.

It happens that other parts of Canada, through certain programs applicable to the designated areas, have received substantial benefits through the accelerated write-off and recently through outright grants. We from the north, my colleague the hon. Member for Yukon, the hon. Member for Northwest Territories and other hon. Members, have for many years urged that some particular concession on an income tax basis be provided for those who live in the north and who have to undergo the difficulty of meeting much higher costs either in their business or farming operations. I have no objection to these other benefits being made available to the designated areas in Canada, but it does seem to me very highly illogical to keep on doing so when it may have the result of perpetuating uneconomic conditions, and at the same time paying no attention to making similar benefits available to the northern parts of the country, which are now in the early stages of development.

I do not know what the Minister means by "clearing land". I assume this may have to be subject to interpretation by the officials of the Department of National Revenue. If it does in fact mean all the steps which need to be taken to clear brush from land so it can be cultivated, then it is a substantial step in the right direction. The only difficulty about it is, as I think one hon. Member pointed out, that all too frequently the people who first take over these homestead leases and homestead areas have to go for a period of several years before they come into the tax paying bracket. I would suggest to the Minister that he give consideration, if not now then certainly the next time there is an amendment to the Income Tax Act, to giving to people who could benefit from this amendment the right over a period of years to select the year in which they can ask for this particular deduction.

Generally it takes a homesteader three or four years to break, cultivate and brush 150-200 acres of land. Only at that time does the farmer come into a position where he might hope to make sufficient revenue from which taxation would be paid to the federal Government. Unfortunately most of the money spent in doing the clearing is paid several years before the first year in which the farmer earns a taxable income. I think it might be feasible for the Government to consider providing a period of five or six years following the year when the clearing has been done in order to permit the farmer to select the year when he can ask for and obtain his exemption. I would ask the Minister to give consideration to this suggestion. I am quite sure that this would be a very valuable and useful aid to settlements in Northern Canada, and I feel that the Government, having taken this first step, might well consider going the whole distance.

• (5:30 p.m.)

Mr. Coates: Mr. Chairman, up until the introduction of this resolution the newspaper industry has looked upon the ineptitude and stupidity of this Government in a rather nonchalant way. That industry has not become personally involved at any time with the kind of legislation this government has been bringing forward in the House for the two years they have been in office. But all of a sudden the newspaper industry has come face to face with the nonsensical intrusions that this Government has been making into the field of free enterprise ever since it has taken office, and this may be an indication to the industry just how dangerous a Government this is.

When one reads the resolution and interprets what this Government intends to do in connection with newspapers which have been in existence for many years, and have rendered great service to the Canadian nation by way of providing information, we become aware of the degree of irresponsibility to be found in the actions of this Government almost every day of the week. When the Minister of Finance indicates that the life of the Government would depend on the acceptance of the legislation embodied in this resolution, Canadians will quickly become aware that this Government's life expectancy is not too long as of now. When a newspaper such as the Winnipeg Free Press, which has been willing to coddle the Government so often, makes the kind of statements found in the editorial of that publication for June 16, one becomes aware of the degree of interference exemplified in the legislation proposed by this resolution. If the Minister of Finance and the Government have the brains that God gave a goose they will be clever enough to remove this particular legislation from the order paper, and remove it quickly.

This is a Government loaded with bureaucrats who want to interfere in everything that is going on in this nation of Canada. These bureaucrats, as my leader pointed out in his speech earlier today, are experts in red tape and deceit. The Government has Cabinet Ministers who do not know how to give a straightforward answer to any question asked; they have become experts in half-truths. The Government has a Prime Minister who has been described as having selective amnesia; one who has had to sit in this House and watch every Member from every party in the Opposition question the authenticity of his statements in the House; one who, if he were in Great Britain, would have resigned his office when the vote was taken.

The Winnipeg Free Press entitled its editorial, "Weak Case". Some may assume from the title of this editorial that it is not very damaging. Let me tell the Minister of Finance that the only thing weak about it is the title. It is the most damning piece of editorial writing that has probably ever appeared in this paper, one which has been the guardian and promoter of the Liberal party ever since it has been in existence. I do not intend to read every word contained in the article, although it is all good advice to which the Minister of Finance should pay very close attention. It tells the Minister just how shocked it is by what he proposes, and just how afraid it is of this oligarchy of bureaucrats who form the Government today and run this country in whatever way they feel it should be run, no matter what the Canadian people might think.

This publication is not alone in this view, Mr. Chairman. There are many supporters of the contention set out in the editorial of the Winnipeg Free Press. Here are some telegrams received by the Leader of the Opposition which I intend to place on the record for the edification of the Minister of Finance. This one is from Ralph Costello, publisher of Saint John:

> The Telegraph-Journal and Evening Times-Globe of Saint John, N.B. are among the many Canadian newspapers which strongly oppose the Government intervention and threat to freedom of the press contained in the advertising tax measure now being considered by the House of Commons.
> It is conceivable that the almost unanimous opposition of daily Canadian newspapers to this method of control will be ignored by the House. This opposition has not been motivated by self interest. In opposing this measure the newspapers of Canada are sincerely concerned about the precedent being established and the possible misuse of this precedent in future.

● (5:40 p.m.)

It is signed by Ralph Costello, publisher of the Telegraph-Journal and the Evening Times-Globe.

I have another telegram which reads:

> This newspaper strongly opposes budget proposal to control newspaper ownership through control of advertising budgets. This regarded as first insidious step toward possible future government control of press and contrary to Bill of Rights. Strongly urge proposal be withdrawn for further study
> Robert L. Curran, Sault Daily Star

I feel certain, Mr. Chairman, that every newspaper, whether or not affected by the tax in question in this resolution, will oppose this resolution with vim and vigour.

Let me tell the Minister of Finance this. Up until now the Liberal Party has enjoyed a degree of attention from the newspapers of this country that in my opinion certainly has been unjustified from any point of view, for it has been a Government so fraught with fumbling and bumbling and outright stupidity that if the newspapers of this nation had educated the public as to its faults, it would not now be in office. Perhaps the newspapers will now smarten up and realize just how far the fumbling and bumbling of this Government has gone, just how willing it is to interfere with any and every facet of the economy of this nation, and how willing it is to weaken and damage even the freedom of the press if it benefits in some known or unknown way.

One of the newspaper groups that will be adversely affected by this legislation if it is passed is the Thomson chain. While there is not a Thomson newspaper in my constituency, and I have no love or hatred and hold no brief for this chain, I want to go on record as saying that I have found it to be the kind of newspaper chain about which no one in Canada can complain. I have seen this chain purchase newspapers and know that one would never realize that the ownership had changed because there has been no change in the editorial policy; and the same requirements, maintaining its standards in the community, have remained. This Government is willing to throttle and destroy that chain just as surely as if it passed a law which forced Canadians to stop purchasing its newspapers.

It would appear that if this Government cannot control a newspaper, it intends to destroy it. The Leader of the Official Opposition indicated that one newspaper in Ontario, and I believe it was the Muskoka News, has already had the boys from National Revenue move in and tie up its operations. What will happen after this legislation is passed? It would be difficult to even guess what will occur next, particularly when one realizes what is in the minds of those men who sit in the Treasury Benches of this nation today. Those men can get themselves into terrible messes without even knowing that they are walking into them.

Let me say this to the Minister of Finance. If he thinks he ran into difficulty in respect of the budget resolution dealing with the 11 per cent sales tax, he has no idea what trouble is, and could certainly not envisage the difficulty he is going to encounter in the days to come as he endeavours to get this piece of legislation through this House. As bad as the 11 per cent sales tax was and is, with the many bankruptcies of reputable businessmen it has brought about, it is nothing compared to what will emanate from this legislation because of the degree to which the freedom of the press will be suppressed.

No one in his right mind would bring this kind of legislation before the House unless he had an ulterior motive. One certainly cannot discover what the Government's ulterior motive is in this regard. Certainly any Member of the Opposition who by asking questions has made an effort to find out why this Government does the things it does from day to day, knows how difficult it is at any time to obtain a straight answer in respect of any matter, important or unimportant.

I should like to conclude my remarks by quoting the last paragraph of an editorial which appeared in the Winnipeg Free Press of June 16, 1965, as follows:

> No one, least of all the newspapers of Canada, quarrels with the government's objective of assuring a press which is completely controlled by Canadians and immune from foreign ownership. It is with the method Mr. Gordon has chosen that every responsible newspaper must strongly disagree and, if it is adopted by Parliament, seek to have rescinded by some future government.

I should like to say this. This is North America, not South America; this is a democracy with a democratic Government, not a dictatorship. We do not use the gag or the mailed fist to stop the newspapers from saying what they desire to say in their columns. If that is the intention of the Government, then I say once again: Smarten up; take this legislation off the order paper, and let us get on with the business of the country.

• (5:50 p.m.)

Mr. Peters: Mr. Chairman, I want to make a comment or two following the statement made by the hon. Member for Peace River with regard to the matter of a tax concession to farmers who clear land. We are all well aware of the fact that the Minister of Agriculture is concerned with a certain class of farmer who is in a fairly high economic bracket and does, I am sure, pay income tax. However, anyone who has really looked at agriculture in the development areas of northern Ontario or other areas of northern Canada where land clearance is still worth while, and an economic proposition from the point of view of the country would have to question whether or not this provision really gives much of a concession to such farmers.

It is quite true that in some areas of southern Ontario land is being cleared, and I am sure this is probably the case in the southern areas of other provinces as well. I know that considerable land clearance is going on in southern Quebec. But such clearance in the main is not being done by individual farmers setting out to homestead, as many of those in the newer areas are doing. Rather, it involves the clearing of land on a fairly large scale.

It is well understood that the Province of Ontario has been concerned about land clearance and I know that this is also true of the Province of Quebec. The former Federal Government showed some inclination to interest itself in this field through ARDA. I think it is a fact that a great deal of land has been cleared in Ontario and Quebec that never should have been cleared at all. This has resulted in a very detrimental situation and one that ARDA was really established to correct.

We know that the Ottawa valley, for instance, once had one of the largest and most valuable stands of timber in the country. The trees were cut down and land was cleared for agricultural purposes which any agency interested in the conservation of our resources would know should never have been cleared. As a result water and land conservation problems have arisen which we are now having to face, and under ARDA a program of planting trees is being carried out because of the fact that the land is not agricultural and never will be.

It is also known that much of the land being cleared in many areas today is being cleared with the help of provincial grants, which take care of about half of the actual cost of clearing the land. In northern Ontario, where land is selling for $30 to $50 an acre, it has always surprised me to find the Farm Credit Corporation, a Federal agency, making grants of from $12 to $18 an acre for clearing farmland, while the Ontario Provincial Government has paid $25 an acre for the clearing of similar land on the basis of a 50 per cent grant.

I am well aware that there are farmers in my area who will take advantage of this tax concession. I as a Member of Parliament can take advantage of it. I have been thinking for some time of clearing some land I own, and I am also often concerned about the amount of income tax we have to pay. I also know that I was going to be able to clear some of the land in another manner and that this provision obviously cuts me off now from doing so. The fact is that companies will want to get into the business of clearing land for purposes of speculation. They will have the equipment to do so and they will find that clearing land can be done for the grants that will be allowed, and they will also be entitled to a write-off for tax purposes.

I wish to refer to another point brought out very clearly by the hon. Member for Peace River who represents a large segment of the newly developed areas of Canada. I am not too sure whether the riding of Peace River covers what I consider to be the Peace River area, but I know of people who have gone to the Peace River area and have secured land there, just as people have in my riding. On the basis of cases that have come to my attention and my personal knowledge I know that most of these people have no income at all. In my area they can receive no assistance from the Provincial Government because they have less than 25 acres cleared and the agricultural representative considers that they do not earn half their income from the land they have cleared. These people, of course, are not now eligible for assistance from the province and they are not going to be eligible under the provision in the resolution, for the simple reason they are not earning any income and do not pay any income tax.

I am wondering whether some safeguard is going to be provided by the Department of Finance and whether the Minister is really going to consider certain things that may be in direct conflict with some of the other things the Government is doing. I have always been concerned with what appears to be the lack of knowledge of the Liberal Government with regard to the purpose for which the ARDA program was established. I think we have here another indication that there has not really been too much co-ordination of thinking between the people who are going to benefit from this provision, and those concerned with ARDA who really believe in the conservation of our natural resources and the application of those resources to bring about the greatest economic benefit to the Canadian people.

We know that many of the areas that are going to be reforested under the ARDA program are areas where the Ontario Government made a considerable monetary contribution for the clearing of the land without really knowing if the land should have been cleared. I was of the opinion that in the initial stages of the ARDA program a survey would be made right across Canada for the purpose of seeing that land was properly utilized and put to the most productive use. I do not see any protection under this provision for that aspect of the ARDA program.

There are many people in Timiskaming and elsewhere who really are not pioneers any longer because pioneers usually have only a quarter section of land and really are not in a position to make the kind of contribution that would warrant an income tax reduction for any purpose. But those engaged in large farming operations are in a position to buy land and will be able to take advantage of this proposition. Before the resolution passes I hope the Minister will indicate what type of regulations he anticipates the Department will make to guarantee that there will not be a conflict with the best utilization of land under ARDA and to make sure that this deduction will be in the general interests of the best utilization of our land.

I hope the Minister will consider this point which was raised initially by the hon. Member for Peace River because I think there is a conflict between what many of us hope the ARDA program will do with regard to land utilization and what this program may do for those who really do not need this type of concession.

The Chairman: Order. It being six o'clock it is my duty to leave the Chair so the House may proceed with the consideration of private Members' business.

PROCEEDINGS ON ADJOURNMENT MOTION

SUBJECT MATTER OF QUESTIONS TO BE DEBATED UNDER ADJOURNMENT MOTION

Mr. Deputy Speaker: It is my duty, pursuant to Provisional Standing Order 39A, to inform the House that the questions to be raised at ten o'clock p.m. this evening are as follows: The hon. Member for Prince Edward-Lennox (Mr. Alkenbrack), redistribution—publication of maps in weekly newspapers; the hon. Member for Parry Sound-Muskoka (Mr. Aiken,) education—student loans—inquiry as to improvements in plan; the hon. Member for Rosthern (Mr. Nasserden), agriculture—feed grains.

• (6:00 p.m.)

Order. It being six o'clock the House will now proceed to consideration of private Members' business as listed on today's order paper.

Hon. J. Watson MacNaught (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, could I have the unanimous consent of the House to revert to the item of business "Presenting Reports by Standing and Special Committees" to permit the Whip to make a report on the personnel of the various committees?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

STANDING COMMITTEES

Mr. J. E. Walker (York Centre) presented the first report of the Special Committee appointed to prepare and report lists of Members under Standing Order 65 to compose the Standing Committees of the House, as follows:

[Mr. Walker.]

Mr. Walker moved that the report be concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. J. Watson MacNaught (Solicitor General): Mr. Speaker, I wonder could I have the unanimous consent of the House to revert to motions to refer the estimates of various departments to the committees announced by the Whip?

Some Hon. Members: Agreed.

REFERENCE OF DEPARTMENTAL ESTIMATES TO STANDING COMMITTEES

Hon. J. Watson MacNaught (Solicitor General) moved:

That, saving always the powers of the Committee of Supply in relation to the voting of public moneys, the items listed in the Main Estimates for 1965-66, relating to the Departments of Defence Production, Fisheries, Industry, Justice, Labour, National Defence, Trade and Commerce and Veterans Affairs be withdrawn from the Committee of Supply and referred to standing committees of this House, as follows:

Defence Production—to the Standing Committee on National Defence;

Fisheries—to the Standing Committee on Fisheries;

Industry—to the Standing Committee on Industry, Research and Energy Development;

Justice—to the Standing Committee on Justice and Legal Affairs;

Labour—to the Standing Committee on Labour and Employment;

National Defence—to the Standing Committee on National Defence;

Trade and Commerce—to the Standing Committee on Finance, Trade and Economic Affairs; and Veterans Affairs—to the Standing Committee on Veterans Affairs.

Motion agreed to.

MOTIONS FOR PAPERS

REPORT RESULTING IN RETIREMENT OF R.C.M.P. OFFICERS

Mr. Robert C. Coates (Cumberland) moved:

That an Order of the House do issue for a copy of the report prepared by the Commissioner of the R.C.M. Police which resulted in the forced retirement of Chief Superintendent Bélec and Sub-Inspector Poitras.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I have waited some time to have an opportunity to enlarge upon the request that I first made in the last session of Parliament to have tabled in the House the report that was prepared by the Commissioner of the R.C.M. Police for the Minister of Justice, (Mr. Favreau).

I realize that when the Government spokesman answers me he will no doubt explain to the House, through a long recital of precedents, the reason why this should not be done; but it is my intention in as brief a manner as possible to state the reasons why I feel this should be done, and should have been done many months ago.

The situation related to this matter is almost unprecedented for, to the best of my knowledge, what happened was that a request was made by the Commissioner of the R.C.M.P. to the Minister of Justice to dismiss the two individuals mentioned, Chief Superintendent Bélec and Sub-Inspector Poitras. One will quickly appreciate that these were not insignificant individuals in the R.C.M.P. Indeed, it is my understanding that Chief Superintendent Bélec was in charge of the R.C.M. Police in the Province of Quebec, and it is indeed a serious matter when the Commissioner of the R.C.M. Police considers it necessary to make a recommendation to the Minister of Justice to have an Order in Council passed for their dismissal.

One must always keep in mind that the high reputation of the R.C.M. Police must be maintained at all times, regardless of the involvement of any individual; but it is my belief that the Minister of Justice did not do that on this occasion. When he received this request from the Commissioner he had two alternatives available to him. Certainly we in the House do not expect the Minister to rubber-stamp anything that might come before him from the Commissioner, but at the same time we do expect that, when a request comes to his desk from the Commissioner, he will give it that consideration which warrants action almost immediately.

• (6:10 p.m.)

In the circumstances the Minister had two alternatives available to him. He could have said to the Commissioner: The facts as set out are correct; the action you recommend is correct, and an order in council will be prepared immediately for the dismissal of these men. Or he could have said: The facts are not serious enough to warrant the kind of action you recommend. In either case the Commissioner and the R.C.M.P. would have known where they stood. But the Minister of Justice, instead, did the worst thing possible: He did nothing. He allowed the matter to hang in the air in suspended animation. He allowed it to hang there for months, and during that period of time a great deal of talk developed which materially affected morale in the force. He allowed two senior men, men who had spent many years in the R.C.M.P., to remain on tenterhooks not knowing what their fate would be. The Minister placed the force in a most demoralizing position for reasons no one knows—reasons which no one can know unless the report in question is tabled in this House, or a public inquiry is recommended by the Government.

In the end, what we find is that the two individuals involved are no longer members of the R.C.M.P. But they do have their pensions. It is something very strange when two individuals find themselves in a position where they can no longer remain members of this illustrious organization—their actions have resulted in their no longer being considered capable of remaining in the force—while at the same time they are allowed to leave with their pensions.

Mr. Speaker, one is either guilty or not guilty. If these men were not guilty of the offences of which they were accused, they should have been allowed to return to the posts from which they had been suspended. If they were, they should be dismissed, brought before the courts and prosecuted for the offences which are alleged. We find it is impossible to learn exactly what transpired except that these men are no longer members of the R.C.M.P. and that they have obtained their pension entitlement from that force. With the affairs which have taken place in the Province of Quebec over the past two years and with the involvement of Members of the Liberal party in so many of these scandals, and with the involvement of those officers in matters associated with suggested devious actions, one begins to wonder whether the Government is not afraid of what might be said by these two individuals if a public inquiry were announced and those involved were allowed to state their case and place their story before the Canadian people.

I am responsible enough to know that one does not in ordinary circumstances expect the Government to agree to the tabling of a report of this kind. But these are not ordinary circumstances: These are very strange circumstances. These are circumstances of the kind which revolve around everything which has been going on between this Government, the upper echelon of the executive which serves the Cabinet of this country, and organized criminals in the Province of Quebec. If these men have been involved in any way, it is my belief the Canadian people should know about it. They should know also that the Commissioner was willing to take action of the kind which would eliminate this kind of thing from the R.C.M.P. Instead, we find the Minister of Justice and the Government unwilling to provide the facts for the Canadian people, though willing to allow the reputation of the R.C.M.P. to be discredited for their own protection.

I believe that in fairness to everyone concerned this report should be made available or a public inquiry should be set up in order that the Canadian people may be allowed to judge the facts in a public way.

Mr. D. S. Macdonald (Parliamentary Secretary to Minister of Justice): The hon. Member has made certain insinuations about a connection between Members of this House, members of this party and of the executive, and organized criminals. I take great exception to that. I say they are wholly unfounded. They are false insinuations and I regard them as contemptible.

As the hon. Member knows very well, I am not in a position to make the details of this particular disciplinary case available, but they bear no relation at all to any of the other incidents which may have been discussed in this House or to any of the insinuations which he or other Members of his party have made with regard to certain people in this House or outside it.

Mr. Churchill: Is the Parliamentary Secretary not himself making certain insinuations by saying that hon. Members of this House have made insinuations? Speak plainly.

[Mr. Coates.]

Mr. Macdonald: I am just dealing with the rather contemptible remarks of your colleague. I make no insinuations. I say directly that they are contemptible.

The hon. Member has professed some familiarity with the precedents and the law affecting this situation. He says he is aware of the long established principles which have been laid down in this House in connection with matters of this kind. Yet he makes the statement—a puzzling one in view of the clear provisions of the R.C.M.P. Act—that either these persons are guilty or they are not. He says that if they are guilty they should be dismissed and brought before the courts.

• (6:20 p.m.)

I think it is necessary for the benefit of the hon. Member and for the sake of the record to make clear exactly what are the provisions of the R.C.M.P. Act in this respect, and the purpose of those sections which provide for disciplinary procedure—the procedure followed in this case. Before doing so I would just like to make reference to some of the precedents in this House which make it quite clear that it is long established tradition that the internal documents of the R.C.M. Police relating to disciplinary matters should not be made subject to an order under this type of motion. The rule, of course, is founded very soundly on principle and is related to the special character of the service which the R.C.M. Police perform on behalf of Canada. It is related to the very high standards of discipline which in part at least have contributed to the high reputation that force has, and to its very great responsibility as a police force, which is something all police forces have.

I would like to make reference to Hansard for May 7, 1952, and to a motion by the hon. Member for Prince Albert, now the right hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Diefenbaker), for the disclosure of all the evidence taken on a similar kind of disciplinary proceeding against a former member of the R.C.M.P. Speaking on behalf of the government of that time, the former Minister of Justice, Hon. Stuart S. Garson, laid out several principles which I think it is well for the House to bear in mind in dealing with this particular motion. After making reference to the fact that there were precedents—and he cited them on that date—for the non-production of this kind of material, he went on as follows:

The right of the Commissioner, acting under the authority given to him by the Act and under the general supervision of the Minister, to engage and discharge personnel at his discretion has over the years proved to be one of the principal factors in maintaining a high level of discipline and efficiency within the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. Any suggestion that that authority may be questioned would weaken the whole fabric of discipline and control.

Then he continues in the same passage:

The strict, even severe, standards of discipline insisted upon by the force are well known and are accepted by recruits when they are engaged as well as by older members each time they re-engage. The reputation the force enjoys and is striving successfully to maintain in the face of recent substantial expansion is based very largely on adherence to these standards.

That particular motion was refused by the House. It was submitted to a vote of the House and the vote was negative. One would have assumed that if the hon. Member for Prince Albert, who was the mover of the motion at that time, had felt the proceedings with regard to disciplinary action in the R.C.M. Police were wrongful, if he had felt there should have been a change in the governing statutes so as to make these proceedings public, he would have taken action to bring about that change. The fact is that while the right hon. gentleman headed the Government of this country the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act was brought before the House, and perhaps even the hon. Member for Cumberland was present when it was submitted to some very searching scrutiny by the Opposition of that day.

It might be useful, Mr. Speaker, to put on the record the exact details of both the disciplinary proceedings which are followed and some of the statements made by the former Minister of Justice, Hon. E. D. Fulton, on the question of disciplinary proceedings and what were the views of that Government. Under Section 25 of the Statute there is set out a series of offences which are referred to as major disciplinary offences for which disciplinary action may be taken against members of the force, and under Section 26 distinction is made between those offences and certain other violations of the regulations which are referred to as minor service offences.

Hon. Members will recognize at once that Section 25, and indeed the regulations, impose higher standards in many cases than are expected of a person in normal employment. The disciplinary offences are put there in order to maintain the particularly high standard of performance and service in this police force, and because someone may have been tried under that particular section, as was the case with the two former officers involved in this motion, it does not necessarily indicate that there has been anything in the nature of an offence against the Criminal Code nor does it necessarily indicate, as the hon. Member seemed to think, that the individuals in question should be tried in the courts or prosecuted in the courts for these offences. This force, like the armed services, is a highly disciplined one and the failure to observe these particularly high standards may result in this disciplinary action being taken, which of course would not necessarily involve and did not in this case involve the bringing of any proceedings in the criminal courts against the members.

Once an offence has been discovered it is provided by section 32 of the Statute that an investigation is to be carried out, and if after the investigation it appears to an officer that a member has committed a major service offence, a report shall be made to the Commissioner, and if the Commissioner feels the evidence justifies it he shall direct that a written charge be prepared and served on the member. The Statute goes on, under Section 34, to provide the procedural rules which are to be followed in trials under this provision.

This proceeding under the former Statute and as contained in the present one is not a proceeding in the normal course, and it is because of the special character of the R.C.M. Police that the former Government supported by the hon. gentleman decided to take this particular matter outside the ordinary courts and establish it in a particular tribunal to be conducted internally by the R.C.M. Police. Under these provisions, once the sentence is given, by Section 35 it is provided that if the presiding officer is satisfied on the evidence submitted at the trial that the accused is guilty of the offence as charged, he must so find and the presiding officer may then sentence the accused to such punishment as is provided by that part of the Statute.

There is provided to a member of the force the right of appeal. The appeal is to the Commissioner and thereafter a Board of Review shall be appointed under the Statute to consider the appeal. I have already made clear, Mr. Speaker, that the opportunity was there for the former Government, if they felt there was something wrong about these proceedings, and particularly that there was something wrong about the proceedings being conducted in camera, to change the law and make provision for open and public trial in these matters. This was all the more so because several years before the right hon. gentleman assumed power, that is to say in 1956, the Supreme Court of Canada had had the opportunity of passing judgment on this particular proceeding. I am referring to the case of The Queen and Archer v. White, reported in 1956, Supreme Court Reports, at page 154. There, again, there was disciplinary action taken against a member of the force who subsequently took proceedings by way of certiorari to bring those proceedings before the normal civil courts for review. The Supreme Court of Canada refused at that time to review this particular decision, but stated that if it could be established that there was a lack of or an excess of jurisdiction by the R.C.M.Police tribunal, the courts could review. Mr. Justice Rand, who perhaps more than any other living Canadian can claim to be a defender of justice and of civil rights, remarked in that particular case as follows—and I think it is useful to have the statement of such a jurist put on the record with respect to the force:

> Parliament has specified the punishable breaches of discipline and has equipped the force with its own courts for dealing with them and it needs no amplification to demonstrate the object of that investment. Such a code is prima facie to be looked upon as being the exclusive means by which this particular purpose is to be attained. Unless, therefore, the powers given are abused to such a degree as puts action taken beyond the purview of the statute or unless the action is itself unauthorized, that internal management is not to be interfered with by any superior court in exercise of its long established supervisory jurisdiction over inferior tribunals.

He goes on to point out that the force is "a group executing a function of a public or quasi-public nature where obedience to orders and dependability in carrying them out are, for the safety and security of the public, essential and their maintenance of standards the immediate duty of every member". For this reason the learned jurist concurred in the conclusion of his colleagues that the proceedings were not such as to require, on the basis of natural justice, a review by the ordinary civil courts of the country, and he concurred in the reasonableness of the establishment of a special procedure for disciplining members of the force.

• (6:30 p.m.)

I have already made reference to the fact that the former Minister of Justice, Hon. E. D. Fulton, had some considerable comments to make about the procedure of which the hon. Member appears to be so critical, and also he commented on the stand being taken by the Government, one which has been taken by all Governments in the past, namely that the subject matter of these particular proceedings should not be made the subject of public scrutiny and debate. On June 9, 1959, as reported at page 4483 of Hansard, during the course of discussing the bill which has now become Chapter 54 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1959, the former Minister of Justice had this to say:

> I turn now to the provisions regarding discipline. Here, as I have said, the emphasis is upon making the procedures more democratic and of eliminating wide and arbitrary powers which were contained in the former act. Again I want to emphasize that the fact that these powers are eliminated and modified should not be taken and is not to be taken as an indication that there were abuses in the past; but we have felt that when we are introducing legislation to amend and to modernize the Royal Canadian Mounted Police Act then, in accordance with the pattern and indeed with the desire of the senior officers of the force itself, it is better to provide what I call a democratic procedure, and particularly to provide for a review and appeal procedure in connection with those disciplinary cases.

A little further on he continues in this way:

> We are making an attempt here and I think a successful attempt, to write into the statute the rights of the accused with respect to the holding of his trial so that he will know and have in statutory form that protection which is also available to a person tried before the civil or criminal courts.

I think it is clear from the two authorities I have cited that, first, every effort was made —and the hon. gentlemen opposite passed judgment on what was a reasonable procedure in these circumstances—to provide members of the force who are disciplined for major offences with all the proper defences they could have, given the circumstances of the case. That was certainly the view of the former Minister of Justice, who was supported by the hon. Member for Cumberland. It is also clear, I think, from the remarks I have made in connection with the case of The Queen and Archer v. White, that the remedy of certiorari was available to the two members of the force if they felt that action should be taken in the civil courts indicating a lack or an excess of jurisdiction by the tribunal concerned.

I suggest that all proper proceedings were taken in this case. It does not lie with the hon. Member to suggest that there is any impropriety here. I agree it is a matter of concern—I think all hon. Members will agree with this—and indeed of some chagrin, not only for members of the force but for all members of the public, that from time to time there should be these unhappy cases of discipline. But given that situation, I am sure that the House would not want to aggravate those particular circumstances, or to put in jeopardy those particular disciplinary proceedings or to set aside the long series of precedents established in the House in this connection, by acceding to this motion. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I hope that the hon. Member and other hon. Members who have had an opportunity of expressing themselves on this question will recognize that this is not a matter to be made the subject of political debate. It is an important matter for the internal operation of the R.C.M.P. It is also an important matter for the status of the members of the force in the eyes of the public. Therefore I hope, now that the hon. Member has been promoted to the front bench, that he will exercise a little of the responsibility which goes with that position in the House, and withdraw his motion.

An hon. Member: You are the one who should withdraw.

Mr. Macdonald: Well, he may not be there long either.

Mr. Churchill: We are trying to get you moved up to the front.

Mr. Macdonald: Let me say I appreciate the kindness behind the hon. Member's efforts. Nevertheless, the amendment passed by hon. gentlemen in 1959 was again scrutinized by the courts, and this in connection with another of the great legislative enterprises in respect to which they take so much pride, namely the Canadian Bill of Rights. Here again in the case of Re Walsh and Jordan, which was tried in the Ontario Supreme Court in 1961 and is reported in volume 31 of Dominion Law Reports, second series, page 88, another effort was made by a disciplined member of the force to take proceedings to set aside one of the disciplinary decisions of the R.C.M.P. on the ground that improper procedure had been followed.

The court pointed out in this case that a special regime had been established under the statute which, given all the circumstances, assured a fair trial of the officers in question. Reference was made to the Canadian Bill of Rights in this case, and once again the Canadian Bill of Rights was found to be not applicable to the circumstances of the particular case.

I submit, Mr. Speaker, that if hon. gentlemen opposite, such as the hon. Member for Cumberland, had been concerned about the procedure which they had passed into law at that particular time, they could well have prevailed upon their own colleagues—bearing in mind that this was 1961—to introduce amendments so as to make these particular procedures public, and thus require publication of these matters. I think it is obvious from that fact that they did not do this that those responsible in that day, along with members of Governments who preceded them, had recognized that the best interests of the Mounted Police would not be served, and the desire of Canadians for an effective operation of the service would not be effectively achieved if this type of material was made public. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, if the hon. Member decides not to withdraw his motion, he having had his day in Parliament and made his political speech, I would ask hon. Members to take the early opportunity, when the matter does come to a vote, to reject this particular motion.

Mr. H. W. Herridge (Kootenay West): Mr. Speaker, before I commence my brief remarks on this interesting motion for the production of papers I want to bring to the attention of the House that at the present time there is no Member of the Government in the House, and I am wondering whether the Parliamentary Secretary has the authority of the Minister to speak for him on this question.

Before proceeding with what I wish to say, let me say that as a Member of the Opposition I do not like the tone of the Parliamentary Secretary when he accuses the hon. Member who brought this motion forward of doing so in a contemptible manner, and so on. The hon. Member for Cumberland (Mr. Coates) has asked for this report for one reason only. It is because he wants to make certain that justice is done equally to all people in Canada. I am not much enamoured of these legal arguments which some lawyers make in cases I have read, certainly not since I discovered on reading the reports of the Supreme Court that one lawyer in this country managed to get $3,000 damages because the fair name of Harold Chamberlain Banks had been trespassed upon by a certain newspaper of this country. This award was granted upon an argument based upon technicalities and legalities similar to those the Parliamentary Secretary put forward today.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order. I realize the hon. Member's remarks are introductory and that he proposes in due course to return to the subject matter of the motion, but as he knows, these motions are very limited in scope. What we are now considering is whether the documents sought by the hon. Member for Cumberland (Mr. Coates) should or should not be tabled, and it seems to me that the hon. Member is straying some distance from that very limited subject.

• (6:40 p.m.)

Mr. Herridge: Mr. Speaker, I respect your position in that respect, but I was simply illustrating my reason for suspicion in respect of the argument put forward by the Parliamentary Secretary. The interesting thing about his argument is that not once did he suggest to this House that the Commissioner agreed with the Minister's decision, and he was very careful to avoid that statement. If the Commissioner did agree with the Minister's decision, I should like the Parliamentary Secretary to so inform the House. Did the Commissioner agree with the Minister's decision in this respect? The hon. Member is silent.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please.

Mr. Herridge: What have I done wrong?

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Is the hon. Member relinquishing the floor?

An hon. Member: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: I suggest that the Parliamentary Secretary has made his speech, and that it is not in accordance with the rules of debate that an hon. Member in the course of his speech should resume his seat, seeking answers from the other side of the Chamber.

Mr. Herridge: Mr. Speaker, I shall be only too pleased to donate a minute of my time and interrupt my remarks to give the Parliamentary Secretary an opportunity to reply, or to rise on a question of privilege, if necessary.

The subject of this question has been of considerable importance and concern to the public generally, but the only information the public has at the present time is that meagre information that has appeared in the press. A great number of people in Canada believe that these former officers of the R.C.M.P. are guilty of misappropriation of funds. I am not going to discuss that feeling, or the information leading to it, as it will be brought to the attention of the House when the Minister's estimates are before us, but there is more information about this situation than is commonly known and I am sure that the Parliamentary Secretary will be surprised when the Minister's estimates come before the House.

[Mr. Deputy Speaker.]

There is a general feeling in Canada that the law is not being applied equally to all Canadians. It is very natural, but unfortunate that the people of Canada need have concern in this regard. Many people are under the impression as a result of what they have read in the press and stories that have been going the rounds in Montreal—I am not going to go into those at the present time—that these officers are guilty of misappropriation of funds. If they are not guilty, let the Parliamentary Secretary inform this House that they are not guilty.

The R.C.M.P. held an inquiry under the R.C.M.P. Act, and we understand that as a result the Commissioner recommended to the Minister of Justice (Mr. Favreau) that these officers be dismissed from the force, and this is the thing that the ordinary citizen of Canada and the Members of this House are concerned about. Are these senior officers of the R.C.M.P. being treated differently than the ordinary Canadian citizen would be treated? That is the core of the question, not a question of irresponsibility in dealing with this matter in a contemptible way, as the Parliamentary Secretary suggests. This is an attempt on the part of the Members of the Opposition to get the facts.

I am not quite certain that this is the best way to obtain the truth, although I support the motion in principle. The Minister may have some personal reason for his decision to recommend the retirement of these officers with substantial pensions, and there is no question but that they have retired on substantial pensions. Perhaps the Parliamentary Secretary can inform the House as to the basis of the Minister's decision. I understand these two ex-officers are now employed by some private agency, so their talents have been recognized.

In conclusion, I should like to say this. I have great respect for the R.C.M.P. and it is very fortunate that we in Canada have a force of this kind, particularly when we hear about the corruption of lesser forces in this country, and how corruption can creep into a force so easily and quickly.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Herridge: We are very fortunate to have the R.C.M.P. and throughout the years we have respected this force, although perhaps we have not agreed with their actions on occasions. We have always respected their integrity and I should like to say right now that I respect the integrity of the Commissioner. I have not always agreed with certain actions taken by him, but I do believe the Commissioner of the R.C.M.P. is an honourable man whose integrity cannot be questioned. Like any other human being, he may make mistakes. In fairness to the force, to the accused, who will otherwise live under a cloud for the rest of their lives in this country, and in fairness to the public who are concerned with the procedure that has been adopted in this case, and that justice be applied equally to all people, I think this matter should be cleared up.

If an ordinary citizen steals a loaf of bread, he must appear before the local beak and accept his punishment. Every Canadian should be treated alike and, in fairness to the groups I have mentioned, there is only one thing the Minister of Justice can properly do, and that is to stand in this House and say that he has ordered a public inquiry into this whole matter so that the truth will be established and the facts made known, which will put the public's mind at rest.

Mr. Macdonald: Mr. Speaker, the hon. Member suggested that I might reply, but I do not know whether I have the consent of the House to do so.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. The hon. Member has already taken part in this debate.

Mr. H. A. Olson (Medicine Hat): Mr. Speaker, we in this party do not disagree with the contention of the Parliamentary Secretary (Mr. Macdonald) respecting the statutory provisions for dealing with a disciplinary case in the R.C.M.P. It is pretty obvious that the former Government when it was in power had the power to change the statute if it so wished, but did not, and did not therefore disagree with the provisions.

At the outset let me say that whether or not the remarks of the hon. Member for Cumberland (Mr. Coates) are contemptible, or whether or not he has attempted to drag political parties, particularly the Liberal party, into this case involving discipline within the R.C.M.P., I think that is a wrong thing to do. The R.C.M.P. should not be associated with parties and political activity, or, which is perhaps a better phrase, dirty political actions. As to whether that has happened, the Parliamentary Secretary could very easily allay any suspicions in that respect by simply telling the House whether or not there was any ministerial discretion exercised in respect of these two officers, in that they were treated in a manner somewhat different from that recommended by the tribunal that heard the case. We should like to obtain that information. Did the tribunal that heard the case recommend that these two men be dismissed without pensions because the gravity of their offence was such that this was proper punishment, and was there then some intervention by the Minister of Justice (Mr. Favreau) that lessened the punishment? If that is the case, then there is some credence to the remarks made by the hon. Member for Cumberland. The Parliamentary Secretary could settle the matter very easily, but since he has had his opportunity to speak, perhaps some other Member of that party could do so.

As a result of stories which have been circulating in Montreal and other parts of the country, as well as newspaper reports, we are under the impression that there was some misappropriation of funds in this case. The stories that are circulating are to the effect that these funds were provided to pay for information. That is probably the normal and acceptable way a police force, particularly one charged with the responsibility of national security, obtains information. It may be that that is one of the most effective ways of getting information that is essential to the performing of that function. However, the question arises as to whether or not the suggested misappropriation of funds is simply a matter of internal management, and of maintaining disciplinary standards within the force, or if it involves an offence under the Criminal Code of Canada.

• (6:50 p.m.)

We would like to have explained whether or not the offence was one coming under statutes with which this internal tribunal should deal, or whether the nature of the offence was such that it should have been tried in an ordinary court of law as an offence under the Criminal Code. On the basis of what information we have I cannot agree that these men were either guilty or not guilty. There are degrees of guilt, and even in an ordinary court of law penalties are meted out according to the nature of the offence. Therefore I can accept that perhaps the proper sentence would be that of being dismissed with pension, or perhaps without pension. If they were guilty of a violation of the Criminal Code amounting to theft or misappropriation of funds, maybe a penalty even more severe than dismissal without pension would have been appropriate.

But so far we have not been given any of this information. However, I am prepared to accept the decision of the tribunal that heard the evidence, without asking for any more details, provided there was no overriding ministerial order.

I think I will leave it at that, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. F. J. Bigg (Athabasca): Mr. Speaker, as an ex-member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and having some intimate knowledge of this matter, I think I might be permitted to say a word. In my opinion the Parliamentary Secretary is setting up a straw man in imputing motives to the hon. Member for Cumberland (Mr. Coates). I am convinced that the hon. Member for Cumberland wants nothing more than complete frankness. I am not going to support the demand for the production of these papers, without some reservations, but I certainly feel that the matter has to be cleared up.

The Commissioner of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police is in a very unenviable position. On the one hand, he is permitted to exercise almost unlimited discretion and in certain cases the Government is willing to stake its reputation and its whole future on his judgment. On the other hand, other decisions made by the same man are either completely ignored or overridden. I suggest that you cannot have it both ways. If the Commissioner of the Mounted Police is so omniscient that he knows all the answers and his decisions are to be accepted without reference to a higher authority, that is fine; but let that be the system. I believe that generally speaking no person in Canada should be seized with the responsibility of making irrevocable decisions. The House of Commons is the only tribunal which should make irrevocable decisions, and even here our decisions are not really irrevocable because they are subject to the opinions of the Canadian people by the changing of governments.

I think this whole matter should be brought out in the open with complete frankness. It is common gossip not only among the people of Canada but among members of the force itself that there are aspects of this case which have not been brought to the attention of the Canadian people, or even of Parliament. It is very unfortunate that this situation arose because the fact is that any suspicion of protection or the exercise of unfair ministerial discretion certainly reflects on the ability of the Mounted Police to run their own operation. There is a reflection on the Minister himself if he refuses to give frank answers to the House.

The matter is so serious that I should like the Minister himself to explain why he used his ministerial discretion. I do not deny him that discretion, but over the head of the Mounted Police I think there must be either an independent police commission, something in which I do not believe, or an alert Parliament; and in my view an alert Parliament is all the ombudsman we need. When proper questions are asked in the House I think we are entitled to frank answers. I for one do not impute low intentions to hon. members opposite and I certainly fly to the rescue of Members on this side when all we are seeking is common justice.

From time to time the Mounted Police are forced to discipline members of that organization. I ought to know because I was released from my duties in that force some 20-odd years ago for the crime of getting married without permission. The rule with regard to marriage was changed from six years to seven years service without consulting me, but in spite of that fact I saw fit to get married, which I think is the right of every Canadian citizen over the age of 21, and I was dismissed and fined. I have not complained and I am not complaining now. The standards of the Mounted Police require absolute conformity to the regulations and in my opinion this should apply from the latest joined constable up to the Commissioner himself.

I am not entitled to a full pension. My pension was reduced by 33⅓ per cent some 25 years ago for the crime of getting married and it is still reduced by that amount. I have no recourse, but I am not complaining. I am merely stating the facts of the case. I should like to know whether the far seeing Minister of Justice (Mr. Favreau) would like to review my case some day and decide quite impartially and fairly whether I should not be treated in the same way as these two gentlemen who were relieved of their duties, or asked to retire, or whatever it was that happened to them. We do not know. However, I venture to guess that their pensions have not been reduced. I will also venture to say that they are allowed to wear what is known as the long distance medal. I am not allowed to wear that medal, although my combined service in the Mounted Police and Her Majesty's forces amounts to over 23 years. My service has been smeared because I had the temerity to get married. These men have been charged with embezzlement and misappropriation of funds. That is the only knowledge we have because the facts have not been made public. Must we sit here quietly and trust to ministerial discretion in this regard without explanations and answers to perfectly legitimate questions in the House?

This is not the first time I have mentioned this subject in the House. I have spoken about it on more than one occasion. We hear these days about angry young men. At times I think I am becoming a very angry middle aged man. There is no reason we should not receive answers to questions which are put in good faith. If our questions are not going to be answered in good faith, I am afraid we are going to have to replace those who sit on the treasury benches by people who will answer in good faith. It is not good enough for the Government to say that the former Government did not do it and therefore they are not going to. Surely that is not a good excuse for a Government that knows all the answers.

Mr. Ryan: May I call it seven o'clock?

Mr. Wahn: Before calling it seven o'clock, Mr. Speaker, I wonder whether I could have unanimous consent of the House to give second reading to Bill S-7 relating to the Interprovincial Pipe Line Company so as to refer it to a committee. It will be recalled—

Mr. Deputy Speaker: Order, please. I must bring to the attention of hon. Members that the hour appointed for the consideration of private Members' business has expired unless the hon. Member has unanimous consent to continue.

Some hon. Members: No.

Mr. Deputy Speaker: There is not unanimous consent. The hour appointed for the consideration of private Members business has now expired. The House will now resume the business interrupted at six o'clock.

WAYS AND MEANS

The House in Committee of Ways and Means, Mr. Lamoureux in the Chair.

INCOME TAX ACT

Resolved, that it is expedient to introduce a measure to amend the Income Tax Act and related provisions of the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act and to provide among other things:

1. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years the income tax payable by an individual be reduced by an amount equal to the lesser of 10 per cent of basic tax or $600 and for the 1965 taxation year by an amount equal to the lesser of 5 per cent of basic tax or $300.

2. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer may deduct in computing his taxable income an amount for the support of a person who was his niece or nephew and who during the year resided in Canada, was wholly dependant upon him for support, and was

(a) under 21 years of age,

(b) 21 years of age or over and dependent by reason of mental or physical infirmity, or

(c) 21 years of age or over and in full-time attendance at a school or university,

if

(d) the mother of the niece or nephew was divorced or separated and not in receipt of alimony or similar payments, or

(e) the father of the niece or nephew was deceased or mentally or physically infirm,

not exceeding $300 if the person was a child qualified for family allowance and $550 if he was not so qualified.

3. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer may deduct in computing his taxable income an amount not exceeding $550 expended by him during the year for the support of a person who was his aunt or uncle and who during the year resided in Canada and was dependant upon him for support by reason of mental or physical infirmity.

4. That for the 1970 and subsequent taxation years the additional exemption of $500 now allowed to a taxpayer who has attained the age of 65 years be allowed only if the taxpayer has attained the age of 70 years and that for the taxation years 1966 to 1969 inclusive a taxpayer who has attained the age of 65 years but has not attained the age of 70 years be allowed the additional exemption of $500 only if he did not receive a pension under the Old Age Security Act in respect of any month in that year.

5. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a taxpayer who deducts in computing his income from an office or employment

(a) annual dues to maintain membership in a trade union or to maintain membership in an association of public servants,

(b) annual dues retained from his remuneration pursuant to the provisions of a collective agreement and paid to a trade union or association, or

(c) annual professional membership dues the payment of which was necessary to maintain a professional status recognized by statute,

shall not by reason of such deduction be ineligible to deduct the standard deduction of $100 described in paragraph (ca) of subsection (1) of section 27 of the Act.

6. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years a person, the spouse of such person residing with him and previously resident in Canada, or any dependant child of such person, shall be deemed to have been resident in Canada throughout a taxation year if such person was at any time in the year performing services in a country other than Canada under a prescribed international development assistance program of the Government of Canada, and was resident in Canada during a part of the year preceding the commencement of such services.

7. That for the 1966 and subsequent taxation years a contribution made by a person under the Canada Pension Plan or under a provincial pension plan as defined in section 3 of the Canada Pension Plan may be deducted in computing the income of such person.

8. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years the limitation on the amount related to earned income that a taxpayer may deduct as a premium under a registered retirement savings plan be increased from 10 per cent of earned income to 20 per cent of earned income.

9. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years such part of any amount that would otherwise be included in computing income of a taxpayer as a retiring allowance be deductible if it is paid in the year, or within 60 days after the end of the year, as a contribution to a registered pension fund or plan, as a premium under a retirement savings plan, or to a trustee under a deferred profit sharing plan.

10. That there may be deducted in computing the income of a taxpayer an amount in respect of an outlay or expense made by the taxpayer in the 1965 and subsequent taxation years

(a) to a person with whom the taxpayer is dealing at arms length and who is the lessee of property owned by the taxpayer, to obtain the cancellation of a lease on such property,

(b) for landscaping property used by the taxpayer for the purpose of gaining or producing income,

(c) for clearing land or laying tile drainage for the purpose of carrying on a farming business,

(d) as or on account of the cost of making representations to a government, municipality or other public authority in connection with a business carried on by the taxpayer, including representations for the purpose of obtaining a licence, permit, franchise or trademark,

(e) as or on account of the cost incurred in investigating the suitability of a site for a building or other structure planned by the taxpayer for use in connection with a business carried on by him.

11. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years a corporation shall be deemed to be resident in Canada throughout a taxation year if

(a) it was incorporated in Canada before April 27, 1965 and was resident in Canada in its taxation year that included April 26, 1965 or in any subsequent taxation year, or

(b) it was incorporated in Canada after April 26, 1965.

12. That with respect to payments received by a taxpayer after April 26, 1965, other than a payment made upon the death of an employee, the amount that a taxpayer may elect to have taxed under section 36 of the Act shall not exceed

(a) in the case of a single payment

(i) out of or pursuant to a superannuation or pension fund or plan, or

(ii) pursuant to deferred profit sharing plan, or

(iii) pursuant to an employee's profit sharing plan,

$1,500 times the number of years during which the employee, in respect of whom the payment was made, was a member of the plan, or

(b) in the case of

(i) a single payment upon retirement of an employee in recognition of long service, or

(ii) a payment or payments made by an employer to an employee or former employee upon or after retirement in respect of loss of office or employment

$1,000 times the number of years during which the employee, in respect of whom the payment was made, was an employee of the employer who made the payment.

13. That for taxation years commencing after April 26, 1965, a trust or estate (other than a trust or estate arising on death) that has income from a business carried on by it in Canada may not deduct in computing its income an amount paid or payable to a beneficiary who is

(a) a non-resident of Canada,

(b) a non-resident-owned investment corporation, or

(c) another trust or estate resident in Canada, unless that other trust or estate

(i) arose on a death, or

(ii) has been since April 26, 1965, a beneficiary of the trust or estate paying the amount and the trust or estate paying the amount has been carrying on the business since April 26, 1965,

and any amount paid or payable out of the income for the year of the first-mentioned trust or estate will continue to be included in the income of its beneficiary notwithstanding the fact that the first-mentioned trust or estate was not entitled to deduct the amount in computing its income.

14. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years the amount of income derived from a new mine that a corporation may exclude in computing its income shall be confined to income from the operation of the mine by the corporation.

15. That where a joint exploration corporation acquires after April 26, 1965 a right, licence or privilege to explore for, drill for or take petroleum, natural gas or other related hydrocarbons, the cost of the right, licence or privilege may not be renounced to a shareholder corporation.

16. That for the 1965 and subsequent taxation years an amount that a taxpayer may exclude from his income because it is consideration for a mining property acquired as the result of his effort as a prospector, or as the result of efforts of a prospector who was employed or financially assisted by him, shall not include a share of profits, a royalty or a payment based on production.

17. That the Minister of National Revenue with the approval of the Governor in Council may on behalf of the Government of Canada enter into an agreement with the government of a province, under which one government undertakes to transfer to the other, in respect of income tax paid by an individual from whom deductions were made at source as though he were resident in a place other than the province in which he was resident on the last day of the year, a part of the amount deducted or withheld under section 47 of the Act or a similar provision of a provincial income tax act.

18. That in order to give effect to the provisions of paragraph 1 without reducing the amount of equalization payments to any province a consequential amendment be made to the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act to adjust the fractions set out therein in the definition of "standard individual income tax" used in the computation of equalization payments.

19. That a new section be added to the Act concerning expenditures of a taxpayer for advertising space in a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical having effect substantially as follows:

"12A (1) In computing income, no deduction shall be made in respect of an otherwise deductible outlay or expenses of a taxpayer for advertising space in an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical dated after December 31, 1965 for an advertisement directed primarily to a market in Canada.

(2) An issue or edition of an issue of any newspaper or periodical that is edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada and that was not on April 26, 1965, a Canadian newspaper or periodical shall be deemed, for the purposes of subsection (1), not to be an issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical if

(a) through the period of twelve months ending April 26, 1965 issues or editions of issues of that publication were being edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada at the usual intervals for issues of that publication and have since that date continued to be so edited, printed and published without interruption except for a reason other than the cessation of the business of publishing that publication; and

(b) in the case of a periodical, the periodical is similar, in content and in respect of the class of readers to whom it is directed, to the issues or editions of that periodical that were throughout the period of twelve months ending April 26, 1965 being edited in whole or in part in Canada and printed and published in Canada.

(3) Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an advertisement in a special issue or edition of a newspaper that is edited in whole or in part and printed and published outside Canada if such special issue or edition is devoted to features or news related primarily to Canada and the publishers thereof publish such an issue or edition not more frequently than twice a year.

(4) Subsection (1) does not apply with respect to an advertisement in

(a) a catalogue, or

(b) any publication the principal function of which is the encouragement, promotion or development of the fine arts, letters, scholarship or religion.

(5) In this section,

(a) 'Canadian issue' means,

(i) in relation to a newspaper, an issue, including a special issue,

(A) the type of which, other than the type for advertisements or features, is set in Canada,

(B) the whole of which, exclusive of any comics supplement, is printed in Canada,

(C) that is edited in Canada by individuals resident in Canada, and

(D) that is published in Canada, and

(ii) in relation to a periodical, an issue, including a special issue.

(A) the type of which, other than the type for advertisements, is set in Canada,

(B) that is printed in Canada,

(C) that is edited in Canada by individuals resident in Canada, and

(D) that is published in Canada,

but does not include an issue of a periodical,

(E) that is produced or published under a licence granted by a person who produces or publishes issues of a periodical that are printed, edited or published outside Canada, or

(F) the contents of which, excluding advertisements, are substantially the same as the contents of an issue of a periodical, or the contents of one or more issues of one or more periodicals, that was or were printed, edited or published outside Canada.

(b) 'Canadian newspaper or periodical' means a newspaper or periodical the right to produce and publish issues of which belongs to or is vested in

(i) a Canadian citizen,

(ii) a partnership of which at least ¾ of the members are Canadian citizens and in which interests representing in value at least ¾ of the total value of the partnership property are owned by Canadian citizens,

(iii) an association or society of which at least ¾ of the members are Canadian citizens,

(iv) Her Majesty in right of Canada or a province, or a municipality in Canada, or

(v) a corporation

(A) that is incorporated under the laws of Canada or a province,

(B) of which the chairman or other presiding officer and at least ¾ of the directors or other similar officers are Canadian citizens, and

(C) of which, if it is a corporation having share capital, at least ¾ of the shares having full voting rights under all circumstances, and shares representing in the aggregate at least ¾ of the paid-up capital, are owned by Canadian citizens or by corporations other than corporations controlled directly or indirectly by citizens or subjects of a country other than Canada; and

(c) 'issue of a non-Canadian newspaper or periodical' means an issue that is not a Canadian issue of a Canadian newspaper or periodical."

Mr. Bigg: Mr. Chairman, the changes in the Income Tax Act are one of the most important things we can devote our time to in this Chamber. I agree with many of the recommendations for changes, but once again am faced with the difficulty of what I call the iced cake or double resolution, in that we are expected to pass a group of changes under one heading just because we approve of one or two of them. I approve of one or two of them—

Mr. Barnett: On a point of order, is it in order to deal with Government business without a Member of the Government present in the House?

The Chairman: The Chair knows of no requirement in the rules that there should be a Minister in the Chamber during debate.

Mr. Moreau: On the same point of order, quite often we proceed without any Member of that particular group in the House.

Mr. Barnett: I am sure the hon. Member recognizes that those of us in the N.D.P. are not Members of the Privy Council.

The Chairman: A point of order has been raised by the hon. Member on which, rightly or wrongly, a decision has been rendered by the Chair, and I suggest we allow the hon. Member for Athabasca to continue his speech.

Mr. Bigg: Again it seems to me we bog each other down in these points of order. We have come here to discuss the business of the nation and I am going to try to keep myself on that tack.

I agree with some of these improvements, including the so-called 10 per cent reduction in personal income tax, but had the Minister lowered the basic exemption it would have been much preferable. The whole purpose of income tax, as I understand it, is to seek the big pocket, and to make it possible for those who do not have enough money to live by the contributions of those who do. If this is our avowed intention, then the proper thing to do is make sure we have a basic living before dipping into it for extraordinary expenditure, and it is only an extraordinary expenditure which should make it necessary for people to dip into their basic living to pay for things which other people need. This may sound a little socialistic, but I call it co-operative living.

With inflation I suggest that anything less than a $3,000 exemption for married couples would not be sensible. I am against moonlighting, but some people say it is perfectly all right if you cannot live on $2,500 a year to get $5,000 by putting your wife out to work. Surely that is not the avowed intention of the Government.

I am pleased with the provision covering improvement of land, but I agree with the hon. Member for Timiskaming that it is an empty gesture toward people living on homesteads, people in the Peace River and Athabasca districts and the outlying northern districts, because the person clearing land there has no income during the time he is doing it.

There should be exemptions for land clearing if a man is clearing land to make himself a better farm and a more productive unit, and I suggest there should be an income tax reduction for the digging of wells, the damming of streams and such things, especially for reforestation as a result of land clearing. I know thousands of acres of land, principally sand hills, where it would be better for people to put it back into evergreens and fast growing wood rather than clear it for farming. Therefore I think the Minister should get together with ARDA people and the farm union people, rather than stepping off in the blind and just making tax reduction gestures. With the proper help farmers can make themselves better farms and preserve the natural resources of the country.

It is probably fair to allow union dues as tax exemptions. It is impossible for many skilled trades people to make a living unless they contribute to a union, and if federal and provincial statutes make it necessary or advisable for people to belong to a union in order to make a living union dues should be income tax free. However, I think we should attach a rider and say when these dues go to the financing of political parties, and are used for political purposes by unions, they should not be tax free. I can see no reason why a good Tory or Liberal should not have his contributions to party funds exempted from income tax, if no such rider is attached to union due exemptions. Unless union dues go into welfare funds or are used for the protection of unemployed workers, they should not be totally exempted from tax.

[Mr. Bigg.]

• (7:10 p.m.)

The paragraph which worries me most, and which has been debated at length this afternoon, is the one concerning freedom of the press. The Minister has said that when this becomes law it will not be abused, and that we are putting up straw men. I say they are putting a tiger's teeth into the head of a sheep. Although the sheep may bleat comfortably and quietly in the fold, how do we know that it may not become a tiger? I would be horrified to think I had helped to pass a statute which put teeth into a provision by which I might myself be torn asunder. Perhaps it makes an amusing picture—someone with democratic ideas fleeing over the hill with an important part of his trousers missing, and the tiger licking his chops.

This is one of the package deals I am supposed to accept because I am in favour of tax exemptions in respect to land clearance, or parts of the ARDA program. Unless we divide this resolution clause by clause I may well find myself, in helping to give the homesteader who digs a well an income tax rebate, voting to restrict the freedom of the press. We accept the freedom of the press in this country without much question. It is our way of life and I suppose we do not think about defending it any more. That is when the thief always comes—when you are asleep. If the Minister is as innocent as he says he is, it is our plain duty to shake him, wake him up and tell him what is in this package deal he is asking us to pass. This resolution reminds me of one of those iced cakes I was speaking about a few days ago, those iced cakes which are full of bitter sawdust. I would not be surprised to find, in view of the Minister's record, that he really is innocent and naïve. He offers us these cakes and he does not even know the icing is thin and the sawdust unpalatable. On other occasions when he has been told about this he has withdrawn, and put a few raisins in there. I beg him to take another look at this resolution and see whether he can take these sour nuts out of the cake and give us those parts which are acceptable to the economy.

Let him not lay the blame on the O'Leary report. The O'Leary report nowhere suggested that pressure should be placed on the press of Canada. Quite the contrary; the report was intended to put up one more peg on which freedom might hang, not to provide rope on which to hang freedom, in the other sense. This Government is too fond of blaming its failures on other individuals or organizations or commissions. If you are looking for weak arguments to back up this type of legislation, somebody may have been reading the gospel according to Kent and Lamontagne. This is the kind of two-headed axe with which they intend to chop down the tree of freedom. This may sound like a florid remark but I do not know how you can expect a man to sit quietly here in the Committee when the press itself is allergic to this proposal, and such notable Whig newspapers as the Winnipeg Free Press have openly called the Minister of Finance a prevaricator. We are not allowed to do that in this Chamber, but I am tempted to agree with this florid opinion from that Whig newspaper. It is only open criticism of the Government, apparently, which can bring them to their senses. We are not allowed, under the changed rules, to do it in the House so there is all the more reason why we need a free press to do it.

In recent years I have at times thought Canada was sound asleep—that the people did not listen to what we said, either here in the House or outside it. I began to think the press was only interested in florid stories and would print nothing unless a man criticized his boss or left his party, or something like that. Perhaps it is because this is closer to home that we have heard so much about it. It would be strange if the press of Canada did not come to the rescue of the press of Canada. In this regard I support the views the press has taken. I do not care whether they appear in a Tory paper or a Whig paper or a red paper. The truth is just as valuable, regardless of the editorial policy. I intend to write to the Free Press in Winnipeg and say: Bravo! This is a fresh breath of air coming out of Western Canada at a time when it is badly needed.

I do not usually quote poetry. I do not think this is very a poetic situation. But about 100 years ago Alfred Lord Tennyson in England summed it up very well. He was answering a hypothetical question—why he stayed in the foggy old island and put up with the English class system, vested interests and so forth. And he gave the answer in four lines of poetry which have always stuck in my mind. The last two are the punch lines:

> It is a land where girt with friends or foes
> A man may speak the thing he will.

Believe me, if we ever reach the point in Canada where any Government or group of people could control the press of this country you will find me living in the hills, and I will be a very unpleasant customer. As long as a free Parliament stands, I know this: The main peg on which our freedom hangs is freedom of the press. We are going to have it as long as free men live in this country or we shall know the reason why. It is going to take more than a rule book to stop us. If ever there was a filibuster required it should be required until this clause of this particular resolution is taken right out, like a rotten nut out of the same sawdust cake. Then we will not be forced to vote for something we do not like merely because it is wrapped up among certain things we do like.

Mr. Danforth: I wish to speak first of all on the part of this resolution which has to do with agriculture, and I should like to compliment the Minister for having incorporated in these provisions some relief for farmers in respect of two particularly vexing expenditures with which they are often faced, namely, clearing land and laying tile drainage.

It is true that in areas where there is a tremendous amount of work to be done and whole farms have to be cleared there could easily be no income at all for taxation purposes and the clause would not be applicable.

• (7:20 p.m.)

But there are, on the other hand, as is the case in the area that I have the honour to represent, many farms that are covered with small wooded areas varying from 5 to 50 acres, many farms which have pastures which for one reason or another have become overgrown with thorn bushes and are not as productive as they might be. I am sure that this particular measure which exempts expenses incurred in clearing this type of land will be especially beneficial to our farmers. In our area a tremendous amount of land is not drained, and farmers are going to be very pleased indeed to find that their representations over the years in this particular field have at last met with success, and the Minister is granting them this much needed income tax exemption in connection with expenses incurred in laying tile drainage.

I am particularly impressed with subparagraph (b) which deals with the exemption from income tax of expenses incurred for landscaping property used by the taxpayer for the purpose of gaining or producing income. I hope that the interpretation of this measure will mean that this relief will be available to farmers across our country, because for many years the lack of income or the time of those working the farm has made it impossible to care for lawns and plant the various bushes which are so necessary to make these farms the perfect picture that they might become. If this provision is interpreted in such a way that exempts expenses incurred in landscaping this type of property, I am sure many farms will benefit from it.

Under subparagraph (d) one can deduct from income tax expenses incurred on account of the cost of making representations to a government, municipality or other public authority in connection with a business carried on by the taxpayer, including representations for the purpose of obtaining a licence, permit, franchise or trade-mark. I hope this particular provision will be interpreted in such a way that farmers and businessmen will be able to claim exemption from income tax of any expenses incurred in making representations to government in regard to charges and assessments levied against them. There have been many instances where charges or assessments that have been made against farmers and small businessmen have not been valid. In some instances large expenditures would have been incurred in making these representations and it has been found impossible to make the necessary recommendations. These costs should be allowed to be written off as expenses incurred in the business operation.

Having dealt with that matter, Mr. Chairman, I, too, must turn to paragraph 19, because I think in its present form and the manner in which it has been introduced, it is a deliberate affront to every Member who conscientiously represents Canadians in this House of Commons. After listening to the various speakers who have preceded me it has become increasingly apparent that the smokescreens are rolling away from the course of action taken by the present Government. The various policies and the way in which they have been introduced during the session have made it abundantly clear how the Government proposes to deal with controversial legislation. Mr. Chairman, I listened to the Minister of Finance when he explained patiently to the House of Commons that no government would even conceive of the idea of applying any sort of pressure or control on the news media of this country, even if this particular resolution were adopted. I also heard this Minister explain patiently to the House that our publishers have been consulted and there was no indication of any opposition from those directly concerned with this particular provision. But you can understand, Mr. Chairman, my concern about the credibility of this Minister when, like every other Member of the House, I receive telephone calls and there come across my desk representations in the form of telegrams and correspondence stating in no uncertain terms the strongest opposition to this particular provision.

This seems to be a pattern that is being adopted by the present Government. Here we have a whole series of measures in which is incorporated what we feel to be relief to the people who need income tax relief. We have relief for farmers, for businessmen and for labour. In some instances this relief is very minute, but it is at least a start. Then we have incorporated in paragraph 19 a principle which it is almost impossible to accept, knowing the way this Government campaigns on the election platform. Everyone sitting in the Opposition knows that if we vote against these measures on the basis that we are strongly opposed to controlling the press or limiting the freedom of the press in any way, we would be charged on the hustings with voting against exemptions of income tax and exemptions for expenses for land clearing, tile drainage, union dues and the whole gamut of those things contained in these resolutions. We would be subject to this type of attack on the hustings if we dared to oppose paragraph 19 in no uncertain terms.

I resent most vigorously another picture that is developing, and it is this. We are all concerned about a summer recess. We did not have one last year. We want to get back to our own constituencies; we want to be with our families.

Some hon. Members: Hear, hear.

Mr. Danforth: But the same pattern is developing as developed last year. We are told, "Pass this legislation, or else". We are told that the Government stands or falls on certain legislation. We are told that if we do not pass this legislation there will be no recess and we will be here all summer. Here we walk between the club and the carrot and are asked to take our choice. This is the kind of action on the part of this Government that I absolutely resent, and I know that every man in the Opposition resents it. We resent the attitude of a government that would not separate this resolution, which they know is contentious in some parts, and let us deal with it in that way, without having to determine how we are going to vote in connection with the whole package because we do not in any way agree with paragraph 19.

This is what has happened time and time again. They take an issue that has public favour and tie it in with something they know the Opposition find very difficult to tolerate. The same pattern is involved here as was involved in the reform of Parliament. What happened? This Government brought in desirable reforms of Parliament which all parties accepted, and then they buried in them the guillotine rule, which gives them control because they can stop our debating in the House. Now they are speaking of control of the press. They hold up their hands in holy horror when we suggest they are trying to control all the segments of this country. When we suggest they might be exercising some control over the C.B.C. we hear them deny this in the most vigorous way. But we have only to look back to see what happened to that great production of the Prime Minister that was made for the C.B.C. We know it is gathering dust somewhere, but we do not know where. Hon. gentlemen say they do not control the C.B.C.; yet the C.B.C. produces the film but could not put it over the air.

• (7:30 p.m.)

Then there is the Canada Pension Plan, which has now been adopted. We received warnings from financial circles that through the Canada Pension Plan governments, be they federal or provincial, or their appointees, could control the tremendous amounts of money brought into the plan, thus giving this Government a great deal of control over all finances in the country. So we have control of the C.B.C., control over finances, and we now see an attempt to control the press.

When is this type of action going to cease, Mr. Chairman? Perhaps now is the time for the Opposition to take a stand and say: No further. The people of Canada expect to have a democracy; they want a democracy. But the actions of this group opposite lead one to think that we are now heading toward a dictatorship. We in the Opposition had been afraid that we were drifting toward a republic. It now begins to appear that we are drifting toward a dictatorship. We must watch what the Government is doing and the actions it is taking. We cannot accept paragraph 19 in its present form and I think the Government knows it. The Minister of Finance has been criticized over and over again for this type of action. The Government as a whole must take the responsibility for such action, not just the Minister of Finance.

I am hoping that the Government will seriously consider the suggestion which was put forward this afternoon by our leader, when he requested that this resolution be withdrawn. In this event we could then proceed into ways and means and deal with these matters in a responsible manner, this particular paragraph having been excluded. I suggest this paragraph was put in deliberately so as to force the Opposition into accepting it along with the other items included with it, thus placing responsibility on our shoulders. This is a deliberate plan to incorporate this disagreeable type of legislation in a honey-coated package, in the hope that the Opposition, either browbeaten or cajoled, will accept it in total.

Paragraph 19 will, I believe, in no way solve the problem to which it is directed but will put the Government in a position where it holds a sword over the heads of the entire press of the nation. But we are not only concerned with the press of this country; we are also concerned with the international press and about the entire picture which actions of this type can conjure up. And we have no guarantee that this is the end. We lost our vacation last year because we found dollar items buried in the estimates. This package deal is the same type of proceeding.

We in the Opposition are tired of these package deals. We think that the Government should stand on their own responsibility and introduce their measures into this Parliament in the way a responsible Canadian Government should, giving the Opposition an opportunity either to support or to vote against them, and to do so conscientiously without being blackmailed in the manner we are here, through the addition of the other items tied into this resolution. I, like all Members of the Opposition, believe that now is the time for the Government, if they are ever going to act like a responsible Canadian Government, to start acting like one and to withdraw this resolution.

Mr. Enns: Mr. Chairman, I do not want to trespass too long on the time of the committee, but I should very much like to make a modest proposal to the Minister of Finance which I am sure he will find reasonable and which will not demand the expenditure of any funds by the Government. However, I would gladly yield my time to him if he would get up and say that he will separate this resolution and make it easier for Members to vote on it paragraph by paragraph, so we can approve those paragraphs we like and vote against those we cannot accept. Surely that makes good sense. It is a businesslike approach and is a way of delineating a complex resolution which cannot find, and certainly will not find, the total acceptance of this House. I know the Minister could do this, and if he really wants to curtail further debate on this resolution that is all that needs to be done. He need only offer to split the resolution into parts or to withdraw paragraph 19 of it.

If I may come to the modest proposal to which I referred, it deals with aid to agriculture which has really been left out of the particular paragraph of the resolution, but which was nevertheless referred to in the budget speech on April 26. The hon. Member for Victoria-Carleton and the hon. Member for Acadia have already referred to the fact that included in the budget is exemption of income tax on money expended on grain storage bins, yet in the resolution we find no reference to it. This is a grave and serious omission in view of the fact that the agricultural industry needs continuing attention. I am pleased to say that it had all kinds of attention from the previous Government, but the present Government seems to be devoid of new plans to aid this important industry.

My supposition—I think it is correct—is that silos, for example, which are used in the developing mechanization of dairy farms to feed dairy cattle, are still subject to a 20 per cent duty when imported from the United States. At the same time farm machinery is exempt from tax. This seems to me to be a contradiction. Both are tools needed in the dairy industry, yet there is a 20 per cent duty on silos and no tax at all on farm machinery.

The suggestion I made in writing to the Minister some days ago was in support of a resolution passed by the Interlake Regional Development Board of Manitoba, which has said that exemptions of capital investment in farm buildings should be applied to all farm structures, not just grain storage bins. I think this would be a tremendous incentive to improve what the Minister of Agriculture has referred to in various speeches across the country as rural slums. He has said that there is a great need to improve farm buildings across the country; and one way of giving an incentive to Canadian farmers, at the same time not costing the Government one penny, would be to make this incentive applicable to the whole structure of farming and to exempt capital cost or depreciation on farm buildings.

The policy of our tax structure these days is getting more and more to be one of penalizing the progressive. We can improve conditions, not just of farms, if we provide the kind of incentive of which I speak.

• (7:40 p.m.)

In discussing the whole question of silos and grain storage there is a very remarkable difference between the taxation experience of our farmers, and that of farmers in the United States. In regard to silos again, since I want to make my point in this way, United States farmers have the benefit of a capital allowance plan whereby the cost of farm buildings can be depreciated in four years. In other words, they are allowed a depreciation of 25 per cent per year. Our farmers are allowed a 2½ per cent per year depreciation allowance, or capital cost allowance, so that it takes them 40 years to write off the cost of buildings which probably become useless to the farm operation in 10 or 15 years. In fairness to these farmers I think that this injustice should be corrected.

Another feature of the tax laws in the United States which appeals to me, is that feature which allows companies to build storage bins and silos and charge a rental for seven years, at the end of which time they sell them to the farmer for $1. This feature does away with capital cost allowances and depreciation.

That illustration clearly indicates that we in Canada are behind in our methods of providing incentives to the development of better and improved farms. I make the plea to the Government to remove entirely the duty on silos, and to change the capital cost allowance or depreciation rate on farm buildings from 2½ per cent per year to 25 per cent per year, allowing farm buildings to be written off in a four year period.

When I commenced my remarks I suggested that the proposals I intended to make were moderate and would not cost the Treasury any money at all, but would provide marvellous incentives to our farmers, so that perhaps by the Centennial year the rural scenery in this country would be vastly improved. I could perhaps have followed up the excellent comments made by various other Members of the Opposition parties in respect of other paragraphs of the resolution but, as I intended, I have confined my remarks to those two subjects I have mentioned. I draw these remarks sincerely to the attention of the Minister, and I hope he will give them some serious consideration.

Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo - Cowichan - The Islands): Mr. Chairman, while I must certainly subscribe to the views of the two speakers who preceded me in regard to the evil practices of governments presenting us with package deals, I must say that I am always impressed by the ability of parties in opposition to peer past the mote in their own eye to see the beam in the Government's eye, when the Government follows the same practice that they followed when they were in office. I suggest this is merely an example of that which Acton suggested: All power corrupts. We can be thankful that this is a minority Government in view of the fact the Minister of Finance is not likely to obtain absolute power and thereby become absolutely corrupt.

One of the favourite parlour games of Members of the Opposition, particularly in this Parliament, is to examine all the possible fluctuating fortunes of Members of the Privy Council on the other side within the framework of the Liberal Party, and what position of any Member of the Privy Council excites more interest than that of the Minister of Finance? The question of the day very often is: Is Walter up or is he down? Speaking personally, I may say I am always rather cheered when I see evidence that perhaps he is up, and I feel a little depressed when I see evidence that perhaps he is down. I would not want anyone to think that this means too much more than that he is the best of a bad lot.

I am impelled to speak tonight, Mr. Chairman, because of a remark the Minister made when my colleague, the hon. Member for Port Arthur, introduced an amendment to the notorious paragraph 19(a) of this resolution. At that time you will recall that the Minister said he had great sympathy for the purpose behind that amendment. This is interesting to me because I had come to the conclusion that, since the Minister had seen fit to make a special exception of two periodicals, he is a secret Time magazine addict, or is accustomed to taking Reader's Digest to bed with him in order to gain the benefit of the ersatz culture of that magazine, which I find rather a despondent situation. His comment implies that he has great sympathy with the idea that this should not have been done, and we are forced to ask ourselves why it was done when this responsible Minister apparently felt unable to bring such a resolution before the House, and that he had to make this special exception for Time magazine and Reader's Digest. If this was not done because he has some love for those periodicals, there must be some other reason. I can only suppose that, unlike Jacob wrestling with the Angels of the Lord, the Minister of Finance wrestled and was thrown by some emissaries of the devil, who insisted that the two magazines should be subsidized by the taxpayers of Canada to further debase the intellectual standards of the people of Canada.

I wonder whether, in view of that evidence that the Minister lost out in this action, he wanted to do a worthy act but was not allowed to do it; because he has told us he has sympathy for the purposes of the amendment, but by his actions has indicated that he was unable to produce any concrete action to carry his sympathy into fact. I suppose we will now be told that he is planning, as he has told us he was going to plan, some other way of curbing these two rather pernicious periodicals.

On April 26 of this year as recorded at page 435 of Hansard the Minister said this, in the course of his budget speech to the House:

> —nor will advertising in the two small foreign-owned weekly newspapers already being published in this country. The question of the subsidized postal rates now enjoyed by the Canadian editions of non-Canadian periodicals will be studied as part of a general review being made of postal rates.

I presume part of that general review will also entail a very careful redefinition of what constitutes a Canadian publication. Had it not been for the fact that the Minister has by his actions admitted that he was unable to persuade his colleagues to withdraw the subsidy for Time and Reader's Digest, one might be quite hopeful that he was actually going to do something about the postal rates now enjoyed by those two foreign publications.

• (7:50 p.m.)

We have to consider two things. Has the Minister any assurance to give us that he is going to prevail over the forces of evil among his colleagues and solve this problem, which he was not allowed to do in the obvious way of doing it, or has this been merely a little carrot he was holding before us, suggesting that if we pass the iniquitous paragraph 19(a) he would try to do by the back door what he was not allowed to do by the front door? It seems to me we need some assurances from him that these words of his on April 26 had some meaning and were not just a meaningless gesture toward the recriminations he was likely to receive when the House realized that once again the Government of Canada was not prepared to deal with these two publications. It is a fact that this Government is not any more courageous than its predecessor in office, which contented itself by appointing a Royal Commission and letting the matter drop. Nothing was done as a result of that Royal Commission and Senator O'Leary's work went up the chimney. This present Government is in no better shape. I think that the night before last the Minister, perhaps having been somewhat irritated by the remarks of my colleague, the hon. Member for Port Arthur, may have gone a little further than he would have done otherwise when, rather like a rooster on a dung-heap, he jumped and flapped his wings and said that the Government would stand or fall on the position of Time and Reader's Digest. It seems an astonishing thing to me for the Government of Canada to be prepared to stand or fall on the maintenance of the position of these two disreputable periodicals. It seems an astonishing thing that the Government, in the words of the Minister, is prepared to stake its life in order to provide special favours at the expense of the taxpayers to support these two extremely deplorable publications which we can well do without in Canada and which at least we should not subsidize to the detriment of Canadian periodicals, Canadian identity and Canadian public life as we are doing today.

I would hope that the Minister would reconsider his rash statement of the other night and subtract from his income tax resolution this sorry business of providing special privileges for periodicals for which he says he has no sympathy.

The Deputy Chairman: Shall the resolution carry?

Some hon. Members: On division.

Resolution agreed to, on division.

The Deputy Chairman: Shall I report the resolution?

[Mr. Cameron (Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands).]

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

The Deputy Chairman: The Committee will now proceed to the consideration of the Customs Act resolution.

THE CUSTOMS ACT

Resolved, that it is expedient to amend the Customs Act by:

1. Striking out subsection (1) of section 22 and substituting the following:

22. (1) Unless the goods are to be warehoused in the manner by this Act provided, the importer shall, at the time of entry,

(a) pay or cause to be so paid, all duties upon all goods entered inwards; or

(b) in the case of goods entered in accordance with the terms and conditions prescribed by regulations made under subsection (3), present in respect of the duties upon such goods a bond, note or other document as prescribed by such regulations; and the collector or other proper officer shall, immediately thereupon, grant his warrant for the unlading of such goods, and grant a permit for the conveyance of such goods further into Canada, if so required by the importer.

2. Adding to section 22 the following subsection:

22. (3) The Governor in Council may make regulations prescribing

(a) the terms and conditions upon which goods may be entered into Canada free of any requirement that the importer shall, at the time of entry, pay or cause to be so paid all duties on the goods so entered inwards; and

(b) the terms and conditions of any bond, note or other document presented upon the entry of such goods in respect of the duties thereon.

3. Striking out subsection (1) of section 35 and substituting the following:

35. (1) The value for duty of goods imported shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of sections 36 to 41A.

4. Striking out all that portion of subsection (2) of section 35 preceding paragraph (a) and substituting the following:

35. (2) In this section and sections 36 to 41A, with reference to any goods,

5. Adding immediately after section 37 the following section:

37A. Where the Governor in Council is satisfied, on a report from the Minister, that the application of subparagraph (i) of paragraph (e) of subsection (2) of section 36 or subsection (3) of section 36 is inequitable in that it results in discrimination against the importation of goods of a class from any country, as compared with the importation of goods of that class from any other country, the Governor in Council may prescribe the manner in which the value for duty of goods of that class, as determined under section 36 or 37, shall be reduced; but the value for duty of any imported goods upon being reduced as provided in this section shall not be less than an amount equal to the cost of production of the goods plus such amount for gross profit as is deemed reasonable by the Governor in Council.

6. Adding immediately after section 41 the following section:

41A. In the case of any imported goods that

(a) were shipped indirectly to Canada from the country of origin through one or more other countries; and

(b) would, but for this section, be valued for duty under sections 36 to 40B at less than the value for duty of such goods would be if the country of export were the country of origin;

the goods shall, nothwithstanding subsection (1) of section 36, upon such terms and conditions as to shipment, documentation, warehousing, transshipment or the like as the Governor in Council may prescribe, be valued for duty as if they were imported direct from the country of origin at the time they were first shipped from that country.

7. Striking out section 79 and substituting the following:

79. Subject to subsection (1) of section 22, no person shall make, nor shall any officer accept, any bond, note or other document for the purpose of avoiding or deferring the actual payment of duties legally accruing on goods imported into Canada, or arrange for deferring payment of such duties in any way, unless such goods are entered for warehouse, and duly deposited therein according to the laws and regulations governing the warehousing of such goods.

8. Adding to section 104 the following subsection:

104. (1a) Where goods, the property of the government of a country other than Canada, that were imported into Canada free of duty or at a rate lower than that to which they would otherwise be liable, are sold or otherwise disposed of on behalf of the government of such country in accordance with an agreement between the governments of such country and Canada, such goods shall be charged with duties payable at such rate as may be determined by the Minister.

Mr. Lambert: I take it that we are on the Customs Act resolution and is the Minister not going to make an opening statement?

Mr. Gordon: I will be glad to make a very short statement, Mr. Chairman. I do not think there is anything in particular in this resolution to which I need to draw the attention of hon. Members of the Committee. It does provide for certain relief in the case of British exporters. As my hon. friend knows, the British have felt for some time that they have been under a disadvantage in their efforts to export to Canada. I was in London in July of 1964 and on that occasion I said that we would look into the matter and if we felt they were justified in their complaints I would suggest certain changes at the time of the budget.

We did review this matter and we felt, particularly in view of the difficulties that the British have been having lately, that some changes should be made in the administration of the Act. If it meets with the approval of the Committee, I should like to call on my colleague, the Minister of National Revenue, who administers the Act, to continue the explanation.

Mr. Benson: Mr. Chairman, during his budget speech on April 26 my colleague, the Minister of Finance, announced several proposed changes in the Customs Act. Two of the proposals deal with matters raised by the Auditor General relating to practices followed by the Department of National Revenue in releasing goods under bond and in assessing duties and taxes on foreign Government owned surplus goods disposed of in Canada. The proposed changes will implement the recommendations made in this connection by the Standing Committee on Public Accounts.

The third proposal deals with the discriminatory effect which the valuation provisions of the Customs Act have on certain compact countries, which matter has been brought to our attention by the British. The fourth point relates to a situation which is regarded by Canadian manufacturers as a loophole in the law in that in certain circumstances foreign exporters are able to avail themselves of lower values for duty than would normally be the case simply by altering the route of shipment to Canada. The proposed change will remedy this situation. The fifth change which is proposed in the Customs Act is a consequential one in numbering resulting from the introduction of the new section which I have just described.

Mr. Lambert: Mr. Chairman, in examining the various paragraphs of the resolution to amend the Customs Act perhaps I might be permitted in my general remarks to comment on each paragraph as I go along. There may be other Members of the Opposition who will then wish to comment on individual paragraphs. I should like to make a suggestion, Mr. Chairman, to avoid the confusion in discussion which arose on the last resolution. After the Minister and one representative from each of the parties have had a general go at the resolution I suggest that the discussion be limited to the paragraphs seriatim. I think this will create some continuity of discussion.

I trust I have made my point clear, Mr. Chairman. With regard to the nature of our discussion I suggest that after a ministerial statement and a general statement by a spokesman for each party the discussion should then be limited to each paragraph seriatim in order to avoid the going forward and then coming back in which we engaged during our discussion of the last resolution. I think this will make for better continuity in our discussion.

Mr. Benson: We have no objection.

Mr. Lambert: That is standard procedure. So far as paragraph 1 is concerned, its purpose is to provide what one might term administrative ease for the benefit of both the Government and the importer. I do not think it causes any undue difficulty and it is related to paragraph 7 which is consequential upon paragraph 1.

However, when I come to paragraph 2, which adds a subsection to section 22, I am reminded of a certain debate that took place in 1961 when the Government of the day proposed to introduce ministerial discretion with regard to the Customs Tariff Act. At that time there was a great holler and to-do from those then on this side of the House. I can remember the Minister of Transport, the Secretary of State for External Affairs, the President of the Privy Council, the Minister of Mines and Technical Surveys, crying to high heaven for days that the proposed action was arbitrary, that here was another case of ministerial discretion. They did so even though the late Member for Digby-Annapolis-Kings, then Minister of National Revenue, indicated that under the Customs Act and the Customs Tariff Act there were only 60 instances where the Minister was given discretion. I find this proposal passing strange in view of the fact that members of the present administration objected, objected and objected again when they were in the Opposition at that time. If ever there was an opportunity or, shall we say, an encouragement to apply the guillotine, it was on that occasion. Every possible step in the rule book was used to try and block the legislation in the House, and then of course it was blocked in the Senate.

• (8:00 p.m.)

Personally I think the Opposition may have had something on that occasion, but a position had been taken that there had to be the exercise of ministerial discretion in class or kind, without appeal. From an administrative point of view that was absolutely right, but from a public point of view there were objections. When we come to paragraph 5 of the resolution I am going to indicate to hon. Members that here we have an introduction of ministerial discretion without real appeal, notwithstanding all the fine words that may appear in the proposed paragraph, and the methods of appeal which follow in the act.

It states that the "Governor in Council may make regulations prescribing...." That is ministerial discretion, and in the exercise of ministerial discretion there is no appeal to a court because no court will substitute its discretion for that of ministerial exercise of discretion. This is an old axiom of law, and it is only those people who are not versed in law who may believe a court will substitute its discretion for that of ministerial exercise of discretion. This is an old axiom of law, and it is only those people who are not versed in law who may believe a court will substitute its discretion for that of a minister if it is properly exercised.

Paragraph 3 reads:

The value for duty of goods imported shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of sections 36 to 41A—

But sections 36 to 41A are nothing but ministerial discretion all the way through. We may agree with what the Government is trying to do, but we quarrel with the way it is trying to do it.

Paragraph 5 reads:

Where the Governor in Council is satisfied, on a report from the Minister, that the application—

This establishes valuations, and the Minister of National Revenue cannot tell me where there is going to be any right of appeal, because following section 37 of the act we come to the sections, starting with No. 41, dealing with appeals to a Dominion Customs Appraiser, one of the Minister's officials.

Is he going to upset the Minister's opinion in the report that is furnished to the Governor in Council? From the Dominion Customs Appraiser it goes to the Deputy Minister. From the Deputy Minister it may go to the Tariff Board, and from the Tariff Board to the Exchequer Court on a point of law—not valuation, not discretion. I defy the Minister to tell me where, in the provisions of 37A, there can be any exercise of law. It is entirely a matter of judgment.

The Governor in Council is possibly one of the highest authorities in the land. Are we going to be led to believe that a Customs Appraiser is going to upset its valuation on an appeal from a competitor? This is to assist not only British goods but others. The terms are general but the valuations are important to people who may be exporting to Canada from other countries. They have a vested interest in these valuations, and so do Canadians.

The Minister of Industry is going to be interested so far as Canadian automobile manufacturers are concerned. Is a Dominion Customs Appraiser going to vary a valuation established by the Governor in Council on recommendation of the Minister? Let us not be nonsensical. Is the Deputy Minister going to do it? The Tariff Board might, but the chances are awfully slim.

Let nobody tell me they are going to go to court. Why, there is not a bit of law to be exercised at this point and, recalling from memory, the act specifically states under section 43 or 44 that there lies an appeal to the Exchequer Court on a point of law. In other words, it is not a blanket appeal from the decision, yet these were the people who cried to high heaven in 1961 about the exercise of ministerial discretion without appeal. But if you know your Act, if you understand the workings of the Customs Act—not the Customs Tariff Act—you will note that this is the same thing. Plus ça change, plus c'est la même chose.

I trust some of my colleagues took note of some of the things said by the Minister of Transport. He stood over here on this side and waxed most indignant. It was something to behold. This was the traducing of all that was fair and aboveboard and right in this country. This was a denial of democracy. This was a denial of the rights of law, that a Minister should have the right to determine a value without appeal. Now these self-same people come to us and say that the Governor in Council can be satisfied on a report from a Minister. This makes a nonsense of what they said and did.

It will be very instructive to see what the majority of the Government party in the other place does on this occasion. Will it block the legislation? On that occasion it saw fit to block it. I wonder whether their consciences are going to be so tender this time. Is the conscience of the Government going to be so tender, and are its backbenchers going to swallow this?

Mr. Benson: I hope the hon. Member has noted that the proposed amendment to section 37A says that "the Governor in Council may prescribe the manner in which the value for duty of goods of that class, as determined under section 36 or 37, shall be reduced". The Governor in Council has the right to reduce the value, not to increase the value, as was proposed by the legislation which my hon. friend was supporting when his party was in power.

Mr. Lambert: Under the Customs Tariff Act it was not a case of increasing values. It was a case of determining values, and regardless of the words, this means that the Governor in Council is going to fix the value.

Mr. Benson: Reduce.

Mr. Lambert: The Minister says reduce, but reduce to what? It is still a value. It comes to a determinate figure, which is the value for import purposes. I do not care how the Minister wishes to slice it, it still comes out as bread whether it is cut on the length or the breadth. It still comes out as value.

• (8:10 p.m.)

The Minister insists that this does not provide for the values to assist British and other imports in the event that there may be some technical contravention of dumping legislation, but this is a provision whereby the Governor in Council may circumvent our dumping legislation. This is all that the British have been complaining about. Our dumping legislation establishes a value. It sets out criteria. This provision allows the Governor in Council to devise criteria—to arrive at some other value. But there will be a value and that value is not the subject of appeal. It cannot be, because the appeal provisions make nonsense in relation to a decision by the Governor in Council. I do not disagree with what the Minister is trying to achieve. This is not a new problem; it has arisen under previous administrations. What I am quarrelling with is the method adopted and the sanctimonious attitude of the Minister's colleagues in 1961 when they objected to the same sort of procedure.

Mr. Benson: You were not reducing values.

Mr. Lambert: It is a setting of values. The Minister can argue that reducing values is not a setting of values. What is the difference? Under the Customs Tariff Act the Minister was given authority to determine that a class of goods was of a class or kind not made in Canada. It need not have any value, even. Now the Minister intends to ask us to agree to a provision reducing a value to another value. Again, what is the difference? You are making a final decision from which there is no appeal. I am sure the Minister recollects that in 1961 his colleagues did not object to the Minister determining that goods were of a class or kind not made in Canada. The great objection was, so they said, that there would be no right of appeal. I am not quarrelling with the Minister's setting the values or determining the criteria upon which values are to be set. What I am quarrelling with is the fact that he is not providing for an appeal. Either Members opposite meant what they said in 1961 or it was a hollow mockery. And I prefer to believe the latter.

There is not one iota of an appeal that is meaningful in this regard. With regard to the words I am about to read I should like the Minister to tell us exactly what goods may be affected. For the benefit of hon. Members of the Committee I intend to read section 104(1a) in toto.

Where goods, the property of the government of a country other than Canada, that were imported into Canada free of duty or at a rate lower than that to which they would otherwise be liable, are sold or otherwise disposed of on behalf of the government of such country in accordance with an agreement between the governments of such country and Canada, such goods shall be charged with duties payable at such rate as may be determined by the Minister.

I understand these are goods which are brought in either duty free or at some lower rate because they belong to a government of a foreign country. For example, they might be bulldozers or other machinery brought into Canada by the Government of the United States. If they had been used for a while they could be brought in at a lower rate and that rate could be zero. I mention bulldozers, but these may already be subject to no duty at all; I may be wrong in my classification. But there are categories of goods which are disposed of by the government of a foreign country and in respect of which the Minister may determine the rate of duty at the time of disposal. This is, of course, the exercise of ministerial discretion. This is nothing new under the Act. As I say, it exists in over 60 places in the legislation. This merely provides for further discretion, I am not worried about that. What I am worried about is the change of mind or conscience on the part of the hon. gentleman's colleagues since they were on this side of the House. "Encore plus ça change plus c'est la même chose." I should like the Government to tell us precisely the type of goods which the Minister envisages—whether it is furniture in embassies, or something like that, or goods meaningful in volume. He may answer when he is dealing with the questions asked not only by myself but by other Members of the Committee.

As I have said a number of times, this is a further introduction of ministerial discretion. Without the Act before me I cannot see how anyone can appeal against a decision in this regard. This section 104 may be related to the sections which are headed "value for duty" by cross-reference. If so there would be appeals to the Customs Appraiser, etc. I will have an opportunity to look at that later. What I am primarily concerned about in this section is not what it attempts to achieve but the manner in which the intentions of the Government are carried out. I would simply say that I believe a lot of the things which were said in 1961 by some of the Minister's present colleagues were nothing but pure sham and hypocrisy.

Mr. Benson: Would the hon. gentleman permit a question? I believe he was a member of the Public Accounts Committee.

Mr. Lambert: No.

Mr. Benson: I believed the hon. gentleman was, in which case he would know, with respect to the amendments to section 104 that they are specifically as recommended by that Committee.

Mr. Lambert: Thay may be so. I am not a member of the Public Accounts Committee. I have enough to do without being on that Committee.

Mr. Hales: In joining this discussion on the customs tariff I should like first of all to substantiate what my hon. friend from Edmonton West has said regarding ministerial discretion. My attitude toward this is well known. I recall very clearly what happened in 1961 and the position the Liberal Party took during the debate at that time.

I should like the Minister to explain to the committee how section 37A would operate in connection with the importation of cherries into Canada from the United States, and what value for duty would be established. The season is fast approaching and Canadian cherry producers will suffer severe competition unless some protection is given to them either through import duty provisions or by means of the stabilization act. Possibly the Minister has some observations he can make in this regard.

• (8:20 p.m.)

It was simply a case of the American Govvernment moving in a great quantity of dirt-moving machinery that was made in my constituency. This machinery was sent to help establish an American base in Canada. When they had established the base, in accordance with a deal made between the Liberal Government of this country and the American Government the machinery would be thrown on the Canadian market for auction and Canada would be paid 10 per cent for its work in selling the machinery.

The Minister has improved this situation slightly by saying that when this second-hand machinery is sold it will be charged with the duty payable at such rate as may be determined by the Minister. But what rate will be determined by the Minister? This is wide open. The Minister might say, "It is free; there is no rate on it"; or he might say, "It is at just half the regular rate". It leaves the matter wide open for graft and patronage, in my opinion, because of the way it is set out in the amendment. I would suggest to the Minister that this rate should be the same as would be applicable if that machinery had been imported into Canada by a private individual.

Mr. Fisher: Mr. Chairman, there are two pieces of information I would like from the Minister. It would not be necessary if he had given a long, detailed explanation when this was introduced, but I do not think he did. One of the questions I would like to ask the Minister is this. Why is it not possible under section 37A to give some indication of a percentage in terms of the gross profit? The reason I ask is that it seems to me that if this clause is designed to assist the British, for example, coming into the Canadian market, the people shipping into the market would be prepared to give some cost figures in regard to production, and then would come the really controversial point as to what was the profit picture. Almost all the British automobile manufacturers, for example, are world-wide agencies to the degree that the manufacturing organizations are in a sense in many cases American subsidiaries. I do not know how you go about tracing profit, and matters like that, in such a situation. That is why it seems to me that if you just leave it as "such amount for gross profit as is deemed reasonable by the Governor in Council" it will, as was pointed out earlier, give a great opportunity for free play. I would like the Minister to tell me why it could not be a figure like 4 per cent, 7 per cent, or something like that.

Mr. Benson: Mr. Chairman, perhaps I could deal with the questions that have been raised. First of all dealing with the questions raised by the hon. Member for Edmonton West, of course the matter of the valuation of the particular quantity of goods imported into Canada is always a matter of fact, and a matter which the Dominion Customs Appraiser and the people in my Department try to establish very carefully. I am informed that in connection with the proposed amendment to Section 37, namely the addition of section 37A—which was the section to which the hon. Member objected—there is an appeal by the Canadian manufacturer if there is the belief that the value established is lower than the cost of production, plus a normal gross profit.

At this point, Mr. Chairman, I might deal with the question raised by the hon. Member for Port Arthur.

Mr. Douglas: Is there any right of appeal by the importer?

Mr. Benson: The appeal is by the person in Canada, the affected industry in Canada.

At this point I might very well deal with the question raised by the hon. Member for Port Arthur with regard to the establishing of the amount of gross profit. The valuation which is placed upon the goods may not be less than the cost of production plus gross profit. I do not think it is possible to transscribe into legislation what figure of gross profit should be applied in various industries, because from my experience as an accountant before coming to this House, the amount of gross profit varies a great deal depending on the type of industry concerned.

I should perhaps at this point go back and deal with the various matters raised by my hon. friends opposite. I notice, first of all, that the proposed amendment with regard to bonding was not raised as a factor by any hon. Member. The changes here are changes that were recommended both by the Auditor General and the Public Accounts Committee. So perhaps I need not deal with those any further. I will go on to deal with the proposed section 37A, which was the main point raised by the hon. Member for Edmonton West. As I mentioned in his absence I have been informed by officials of my department that under section 37A there is the right of appeal if the value which is established by the Minister under this section is lower than the cost of production plus gross profit. In that case a Canadian producer can appeal this matter; I have been informed.

Mr. Lambert: To whom?

Mr. Benson: He can appeal to the Exchequer Court.

Mr. Lambert: The Minister is aware of section 45 of the Act. It is a point of law, in his opinion?

Mr. Benson: The opinion of the officials of my department is that it is.

Mr. Lambert: You speak as an accountant, not as a lawyer?

Mr. Benson: Yes, I am not giving a legal opinion. Section 37A is being added mainly because of the different methods of distribution that exist in a compact country such as Great Britain, and exist in Canada. Section 36 specifies that the value for duty of imported goods shall be the fair market value of like goods when sold for consumption in the country of export under the conditions which are laid down in the section. Under subsection (3), if an exporter is selling to a wholesaler in Canada, while in the home market he sells only to retailers, the value for duty is based on the price to such retailers. Subsection 2(e) (i) provides that if the quantity shipped to Canada is larger than the largest quantity sold for home consumption—that is, in the country of export—those quantities shall be deemed to be the same quantities in determining the value for duty.

The British claim that in certain cases the operation of these two provisions discriminates against the United Kingdom exporter in favour of exporters in other countries. Because of the geographic size of the Canadian market, the lines of distribution in Canada are often longer than in compact countries such as Great Britain. In Canada, for example, goods may pass in turn from the manufacturer to a wholesaler, to a retailer and finally to the consumer, while in Britain the manufacturer often sells to the retailer. Hence the British argue that while they sell in Canada to the same trade level and in similar quantities as, for example, American exporters, the British must, because of the combined effects of section 36 and the anti-dumping law, price their goods as if they were selling in the much more compact British market to a lower level of trade and in smaller quantities. This has raised the value of their goods being imported into Canada. They are thus hard put to compete with other exporters who, because their domestic market is similar in structure to the Canadian one, are allowed to claim trade and quantity discounts denied the British in establishing value for duty under the present law.

In effect, the existing legislation discriminates against certain countries by imposing a higher valuation base than would be obtained if market conditions in those countries were similar to those in other exporting countries. Not only are ordinary duties assessed on the higher values, but in respect of goods of a class or kind made in Canada exporters are prevented from reducing their prices to competitive levels by the threat of our anti-dumping duty.

[Mr. Benson.]

• (8:30 p.m.)

The proposed new section 37A provides authority to remove these inequities to provide for lowering of values of British goods coming into Canada, while at the same time retaining sufficient safeguards against unfair prices—that is, that there will not be wholesale dumping by people selling in Canada at prices lower than their cost of production, plus the normal gross margin in the trade.

The application of the section will not, of course, be limited to Britain but will also be available to other countries against which the present legislation discriminates. The intention of section 37A is to be relieving. I could inform hon. Members that in discussions which my officials have had with British officials they are very pleased that we have introduced this particular legislation in order to assist them and other such countries in the valuation for duty which is placed on their goods coming into Canada. There has been a very warm reception by the British Board of Trade and the British Government of this particular amendment to the Customs Act.

The other main question which was raised was that raised by the hon. Member for Edmonton West and the hon. Member for Wellington South with respect to section 104 (1a). I can tell my hon. friends that this does not apply with respect to cherries. I remember very well, when the cherry producers last year were in great difficulty, that our eminent Minister of Agriculture, in consultation with his other colleagues in the Cabinet, came to the aid of the cherry producers in a manner that has never happened before under any Government in Canada's history, and the cherry producers were very well treated last year.

Mr. Pugh: I wonder whether the Minister could at this point state under what authority payments were made to the cherry growers of Canada.

Mr. Benson: These were payments allowed the Department of Agriculture under the farm stabilization act.

Mr. Lambert: That was legislation enacted by the previous administration.

Mr. Benson: Even I admit that some little pieces of legislation passed by the previous administration were good. They provided the instrument and we took advantage of it.

Mr. Starr: Do not be so modest.

Mr. Benson: In regard to section 104 (1a), the proposed new subsection is designed to give authority to a practice which has been followed by the Department of National Revenue for some time now, both under the previous Government and the present Government, and which would be consistent with the general responsibility for appraisal imposed by the Customs Act and the Customs Tariff. The subsection is intended to deal particularly with disposal in Canada of surplus United States government property, such as equipment used in joint defence installations. Much of this equipment was originally imported free of duty and taxes under appropriate authority, such as tariff item 708, being the property of the United States government. However, when subsequently sold in Canada the goods became liable to the payment of duties in accordance with subsection (1) of section 104 of the Customs Act.

Over the years the Canadian Government has been a party to an agreement with the United States Government providing for the sale in Canada of certain United States surplus goods by an agency of the Canadian Government, namely Crown Assets Disposal Corporation. Under the terms of the agreement the selling price of such goods to the Canadian purchaser is deemed to include duties and taxes. Crown Assets Disposal Corporation remits a certain percentage of that selling price to the Department of National Revenue as representing the duties and taxes applicable. This percentage is a composite rate based on the average rate of duty, and taxes paid on imports from the United States.

Again I reiterate that this has been the practice over a good many years and was a question raised by the Auditor General and discussed by the Public Accounts Committee. Such a composite rate representing both duty and tax is thought to be a logical expedient in view of the special circumstances relating to the disposal of the surplus goods in question. Under normal conditions imported goods are presented to qualified customs officers who have facilities for rating and valuing in accordance with the law. However, the United States surplus goods are often located in remote and inaccessible areas such as D.E.W. line sites in Labrador and the far north of Canada. In addition, a great variety of goods is involved. This combination of circumstances makes it practically impossible to appraise the goods in the normal way without undue expenditure of public funds. That is to say, the cost of sending Customs Appraisers to go and look at the goods disposed of would be far greater than the amount of maximum additional revenue which the Department of National Revenue could realize from such an appraisal.

During the past year the Department's practice was studied by the Standing Committee on Public Accounts. The committee in its eighth report to the House on December 7, 1964 recognized the practice as being sensible and practicable.

Mr. Simpson: Would the hon. gentleman permit a question. When these goods are being disposed of interested bidders are provided with a comprehensive listing of all equipment item by item. Therefore, is it necessary to have inspection of this equipment which is being disposed of, which in many cases the bidders themselves have difficulty seeing?

Mr. Benson: If one is to consider disposal of used equipment in the far north of Canada, Canadian Customs Appraisers must not only value the goods according to their description but also according to their condition. It had been decided by the previous Government which my hon. friend supported in this House that it is much better to establish a composite rate of duty and apply it to the goods, rather than have Customs Appraisers trail off into the far north, look at the goods and try to establish the value; and the Public Accounts Committee and Auditor General have agreed with this.

However, the Public Accounts Committee did recommend that an amendment be made to the Customs Act or to the Customs Tariff to provide a statutory authority to establish a composite rate to be applied to the proceeds of all sales in Canada of United States government property by Crown Assets Disposal Corporation. All we are talking about is the rate of duty which we apply; and it was recommended by the Auditor General and decided by the Public Accounts Committee that such composite rates should be established by statute, which is exactly what we are trying to do by section 104 (1a).

Mr. Hales: Just one question in this regard, and I apologize for displaying ignorance. Was it the fact that previously the full rate of duty was applicable to second hand machinery?

Mr. Benson: As I understand the situation and have been informed by my departmental officials, for many years, dating back through the administration of the previous Government, the entire term of the Government previous to it, and some time before that, a composite rate of duty was used. All we are trying to do here is to establish statutory authority to legalize what has been done in these situations.

• (8:40 p.m.)

Mr. Doucett: Do I understand the Minister to say that when a machine is sold the duty is charged on the equity left in the machine? Suppose it was half worn out, would 50 per cent of the duty be charged, or is that arranged before it is handed over to Crown Assets or whoever sells it?

Mr. Benson: No. What has happened in the past is that a composite rate of duty on like goods has been established and applied to all goods being offered by Crown Assets Disposal Corporation, and that amount reverts to the Department of National Revenue.

Mr. Douglas: I merely want to ask the Minister a question about the proposal made by the hon. Member for Port Arthur. I think 37A will be greatly improved, from the standpoint of British importers who have suffered serious discrimination in the past, particularly with reference to the import of cars. I think some provision like this is essential to meet this discrimination which they have suffered. The Member for Port Arthur, however, was asking the Minister whether it would not be possible to tie this down a little better, because it says only that the Governor in Council can set an amount equal to the cost of production of the goods plus such amount for gross profit as is deemed reasonable by the Governor in Council. I recognize the Minister's point that you cannot set a specific profit or value of profit margin, but would it be possible to either set a maximum, which would be the cost of production and not more than X percentage of profit, so as to prevent the Governor in Council from adding to the cost of the production of machinery a profit that was so unrealistic that the discrimination could actually continue; or if that is not practical, could the importer have some right of appeal, such as the manufacturer in Canada now has so that he might show that his gross profit was nowhere near the amount that was suggested by the Governor in Council?

Mr. Benson: First of all, I should indicate that this last provision of the Act goes back to the minimum values which anybody can place on anything which is coming into Canada, or being exported to Canada and sold in this country; that is, the cost of production plus the normal gross margin in the country in which it is produced. This gets back to the absolute minimum amount of value that can be placed on any goods that are imported into Canada, without being subject to dumping duty. So the values established for goods coming in from other countries would not ordinarily get back to this cost of production plus gross profit.

This is the argument that the British people have been placing before the Canadian Government, that because their lines of distribution are much confined in that country and they frequently sell manufacturer to retailer, we should vary this system in order to put them in a comparable position with other countries which have lines of distribution such as Canada, where the goods may pass from manufacturer to wholesaler to retailer.

Really the question that is raised is a question of minimum valuation, which is the minimum valuation as I understand the situation under the whole of The Customs Act. The minimum valuation that one can arrive at is the cost of production plus the normal gross margin. This is not arrived at by my Department arbitrarily. If a question is raised with regard to value of duty, an officer of my Department looks into the actual cost of production and gross margins in that particular industry in the particular country. I do not think one could establish arbitrarily by law a gross margin that would apply, because if one takes a look for example at the jewellery industry, and I mention this only as an example, he might find a high gross margin, such as 100 per cent of cost. If one takes a look at other sorts of production in different countries, he might find that the gross margin is only 10 per cent. The fair way is to look at the particular industry in the particular country and apply the gross margin to the particular industry that is involved.

Mr. Douglas: Does the Minister think the right of appeal is impracticable?

Mr. Benson: Well I did mention this, but I will repeat it. I am not going to give a legal opinion, as I am not a lawyer; but in regard to section 37A my Department officials have indicated to me that the right of appeal is on the side of the importer, or the person in Canada who is being affected in this regard.

Mr. Douglas: But there is no right of appeal for the importer who may feel that the Governor in Council has estimated too high the gross profit, with the consequential result that the valuation for the purposes of duty is much higher in his opinion than it should be.

Mr. Benson: I think my hon. friend is correct in that regard. This applies generally throughout the Customs Act. If one looks to the Tariff Board, he will find that there are cases of appeals by people importing into the country who have felt the law as it exists has been unfairly applied.

Mr. Douglas: They would not have an appeal against a decision made under section 37A by the Governor in Council. Would there be any right of appeal against such a decision?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to get myself into the position of giving a legal opinion, and I want to reserve the right to get in touch with my hon. friend to give him the legal opinion of my Department in this regard. I do not wish to attempt to argue the legal rights in respect of appeals.

Mr. Kindt: I should like to ask the Minister one or two questions concerning the suggested amendments to section 104 (1a), which relate to the composite rate. As I understand what the Minister has said, these goods will be sold on the basis of a composite rate. In other words, they will be lumped together, for some reason of which we are not clear, and offered for sale on the basis of a composite rate. The question which arises is this. Supposing a small operator has a legitimate use for and wants to buy one piece of machinery such as a dredge, tractor, or some part of the composite group—and I speak with some experience in this regard—will it be possible for him to do so? My experience has been that it is impossible for an individual to purchase just one piece of machinery because the Government prefers to sell a whole lot as a composite group. The Government prefers to make one deal, and the individual is left outside in the cold. He may have a use for and a desire to purchase a particular piece of machinery, but it is sold as part of the composite group.

• (8:50 p.m.)

The Minister's intention is to impose a composite rate. I take it from the word "composite" that what he has in mind is to take a whole floor of machinery and lump it all and then somebody will come along and buy the whole thing. Will you please answer that question?

Mr. Benson: First of all, I should explain that under this section of the Customs Act the Minister of National Revenue is not at all involved in selling the particular goods in question. How they are sold by Crown Assets Disposal Corporation is entirely up to the Corporation. The Department of National Revenue has nothing to say about this. What we are dealing with in this particular section is securing for the Federal Government out of any ultimate sale the amount of tariff to which the Government is entitled. We do not affect the method of sale or to whom Crown Assets Disposal Corporation sells the particular goods. We are simply saying here that the amount of tariff payable to us will be at a certain rate on the particular amount of goods.

As I mentioned previously, this is a matter which was commented on by the Auditor General. It was also studied by the Public Accounts Committee and it was recommended to the Department of National Revenue that something be put in the Customs Act in order to legalize this method of applying duty. We are not at all involved in the selling of the goods. We have no interest in to whom they are sold or in how tenders are called, or anything else. Our sole interest is to apply a tariff to the goods which is fair in all the circumstances, and which provides for the minimum cost of collection so far as the Federal Government is concerned.

Mr. Kindt: Then you have two Government Departments, the Department of National Revenue and Crown Assets Disposal Corporation, valuing goods. Crown Assets Disposal Corporation usually refers to the appraisal made for duty purposes as a guide in establishing their value and offering the goods to the public.

Mr. Benson: No.

Mr. Kindt: The Minister says "no". In this legislation there is an open end with regard to what method the Department of National Revenue has to follow in making valuations for duty purposes. At the same time the valuation finds its way into the final price which people are asked to pay to Crown Assets Disposal Corporation and the fact is that the two are related. I have followed these sales through Crown Assets and they have got to look somewhere in order to get their value. They will send a man out and he will appraise the goods, and in making his appraisal he will take his cue from the value that the Government has already placed on them for duty purposes.

Mr. Benson: Mr. Chairman, I should like to answer this question by saying that the whole purpose of this section is so that we do not have to go out and appraise goods. The goods are appraised by Crown Assets Disposal Corporation and we apply a composite rate of duty to the appraisal placed on them by the vendor. The selling of the goods has nothing to do with the Department of National Revenue. All we want to do is to collect a fair amount of tariff in respect of these goods. We are authorized by this amendment to the section, which is detailed in the bill that will be forthcoming when we complete the resolution, to apply a composite rate of duty rather than applying a rate with regard to each specific item as valued.

Mr. Kindt: Do I understand the Minister to say that you take the appraisal of the goods given to you by Crown Assets Disposal Corporation and apply a rate?

Mr. Benson: Right.

Mr. Kindt: Then there are not two Government organizations making appraisals. What assurance have you that Crown Assets Disposal Corporation will make a proper valuation? What basis do they use in making their appraisal? Is it market value, is it value in use or is it whatever someone is willing to pay? We have been given no guide lines with regard to the definition of value, and how it is arrived at is about as uncertain as trying to pin an eel with a blunt fork. The Government should get down to business and give us something to stand on.

Mr. Doucett: Mr. Chairman, I am not very clear yet on this matter and I should like to ask the Minister a question. When those who bring the machinery into Canada are finished with it, and it is then turned over to Crown Assets Disposal Corporation and the Corporation disposes of it, does the Corporation pay the Department of National Revenue on the basis of the price at which they sold it, or do they value it prior to that time and pay on the basis of that amount?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Chairman, if there are any other questions perhaps I might deal with them at the same time.

Mr. Olson: I want to ask the Minister a question. Under this section the composite rate may be such rate as is determined by the Minister. It has been admitted that the Government has been doing this in the past and is now coming to Parliament to legalize a practice that has been going on. I should like to ask the Minister what this rate has been in the past, compared with the regular rate on new equipment?

Mr. Benson: Mr. Chairman, the composite rate is applied on the selling price, the price at which the goods are actually sold. The composite rate that has been used is 15.25 per cent, I am informed by officials of my Department, and I would think that this rate is determined by taking a group of various assets that are being sold and averaging the rates on all of these assets rather than applying a specific rate to each particular asset.

Mr. Olson: The rate of 15.25 per cent is levied on the actual selling price?

Mr. Benson: Yes.

Mr. Doucett: Mr. Chairman, if the Minister does not mind I should like him to tell me whether the 15.25 per cent is on the valuation established by Crown Assets or on the sale price by Crown Assets?

Mr. Benson: The sale price.

Mr. Kindt: Do those who make the appraisal for Crown Assets Disposal Corporation take into consideration that they can sell the goods at a certain figure, make their appraisal accordingly and then at the same time include within their appraisal the 15.25 per cent? In other words, if Crown Assets valued them any higher they would not be able to sell them.

Mr. Benson: Mr. Chairman, I am not competent to answer with regard to the basis on which Crown Assets Disposal Corporation may place values on goods. My job as Minister of National Revenue is to collect a reasonable amount of customs tariff on goods which may have come into Canada duty free, or at a small rate of duty, and are then sold within this country. The Department of National Revenue applies a composite rate of duty on the actual selling price of the goods. Our belief, which I think was confirmed by the Public Accounts Committee who looked into the matter, was that we were collecting the amount of duty to which Canada would normally be entitled, and by using the composite rate method rather than proceeding to examine all the goods we were collecting the revenue with the lowest cost to the Government of Canada. The methods used by Crown Assets Disposal Corporation in valuing such goods for tender purposes, and so on, really are not part of the responsibility of the Department of National Revenue.

• (9:00 p.m.)

Mr. Hales: To return to my original question, why do we not place on this second hand machinery the original duty that would be appliable to it if it were brought into the country by a private individual? In other words, someone is buying this machinery cheaply, gaining on the duty, and it is unfair competition to the manufacturer of such machinery in Canada. The Public Accounts Committee simply asked that what has been done be legalized, but it did not say this was the right way or right policy.

Mr. Benson: I would like to think that the Public Accounts Committee, if they thought this was wrong—and I was a Member of it two years ago—would have said they thought it wrong, and said so rather violently. As I explained, under normal conditions goods are presented to qualified customs appraisers in Canada who have facilities for rating them and valuing them in accordance with the law. The U.S. goods which are disposed of in this manner are often located in remote, inaccessible areas such as D.E.W. line sites.

In addition a great variety of goods may be involved in any single disposal. This combination of circumstances makes it practically impossible to appraise the goods in a normal way without undue expenditure of public funds. In other words, it would cost us more money to go and appraise them, and collect the duty than it does to apply a composite rate.

Mr. Lambert: If my memory serves me right there is a condition about the sale of these goods which come primarily from the United States, that they shall not be reimported into the continental United States. In other words, Canada is being used as a dumping ground for this surplus of equipment.

I know of cases where traders have swept up equipment in the Pacific islands and brought it to Alaska where huge auctions are held. Then the equipment is brought into Canada. I disagree with the policy of Crown Assets. The Department of National Revenue is not getting what it should, because these goods are sold in the north on an as is, where is basis, and trucks and tractors can be got practically for a song because of the remoteness of the area and the limited number of purchasers.

With modern methods of transportation it would be much better to bring these goods to a more centralized market site where there would be more competitive bidding and the prices would be higher. I ask the Minister to use his good offices to convince the Minister of Industry that Crown Assets policy is rather shortsighted in this regard.

These goods are brought into Canada primarily for a military purpose. They go through some usage and then they are dumped. There are instances of astute men making 1,000 per cent to 5,000 per cent profit by buying this equipment and transporting it to where there is a good market for the goods.

Mr. Benson: I would like to assure the hon. Member for Edmonton West that as Minister of National Revenue I am interested in getting everything to which the Canadian Government is entitled out of these goods in the form of customs tariff, and I will bring his useful suggestions to the attention of the Minister of Industry.

Mr. Kindt: If the Minister or anyone else went into the areas where these sales take place they would find discontent among the residents because usually a trader buys the goods for a song. He offers any items he can sell locally to the residents, but transports the rest to another area and the profits are tremendous. It is impossible for the small man to get a crack at this gain through Crown Assets Disposal Corporation. It is all very good to smile, but if the Minister was up there trying to buy this equipment he would find that what I am saying is exactly the truth. If he wants to keep happy and contented people in these areas, he should look at the problem as it exists in them.

Mr. Benson: I have already indicated that neither I nor my department are involved in the disposal of the goods but I will bring the representations of hon. Members to the attention of the Minister of Industry.

Mr. Pugh: I am thinking along the lines of protection for Canadian manufacturers. This paragraph states that the rate will be such as may be determined by the Minister, and he has said it is based on the actual sales value of whatever equipment might be sold. This may approximate a fire sale, and goods sold at a fire sale, if they are sold in this country, do in effect come in as dumped goods. The rate should be fixed on the reasonable cost of similar goods in Canada, taking into account transportation to the points at which the goods are sold.

In this field Canada is losing revenue, and if the duties were at a higher rate Canada would gain more revenue.

• (9:10 p.m.)

Now if they are being undercut by much more, the suggestion is that this might bring about an imbalance in the production of Canadian manufacturers. That is the suggestion I have to make to the Minister. The fixing of the rate is discretionary and if a rate is fixed on the basis of a selling price alone then it constitutes discrimination against the Canadian manufacturer who is producing goods for the same market and for the same people.

Mr. MacInnis: I have one further question to ask with regard to this kind of dumping. If I am wrong in my assumption I hope the Minister will correct me. When the Americans bring in this type of equipment for D.E.W. line operations or construction in Newfoundland, Labrador or wherever it may be, it is my understanding that there is legislation for bidding its re-entry into the United States. Why does not the Canadian Government set up a duty more comparable with the value of the equipment which comes into Canada in this way?

Mr. Benson: I understand that the primary purpose of this material is national defence. The intention is not to offer these goods for sale on the Canadian market. In many instances, as the hon. Member knows, they are used in the far north where the wear and tear on goods and machinery is extremely heavy. The sole purpose of this provision in the legislation is to carry out the recommendation of the Public Accounts Committee that the Minister be authorized to apply a composite rate of duty—15.25 per cent—rather than send somebody out to try to value these things as used.

Mr. MacInnis: The Minister has referred to the value of this equipment as "used". Is he aware of the fact that much of this material is re-sold before it is ever put to use? This was the situation during the years between the end of the war and 1957, and it is still going on at the present time.

Mr. Kindt: I should like to ask the Minister, or the Minister in charge of Crown Assets, whether he would discuss the possibility of selling these goods by public auction rather than to individual traders. It seems to me it would give a better chance to the little fellow if this material were sold by auction rather than holus-bolus for a lump sum. In addition, I believe the Department of National Revenue would get more money. The small buyer, in turn, would get an opportunity to purchase equipment at a reasonable price and everyone in the area where these sales take place would be in a better frame of mind.

[Mr. Pugh.]

I make this suggestion despite the fact that the person sitting behind the Minister of National Revenue continues to laugh and smile as though he knew something about what goes on in these areas, though I think he is as dumb as the dumbest person could possibly be in regard to matters of this kind.

Mr. More: I rise merely to make the suggestion that if the Minister of Agriculture were put in charge of the disposal of this equipment he would surely be happy about the results he could get.

Mr. Simpson: I should like the Minister to tell us how the duty is paid. Is it paid by the purchaser who bids on the equipment or does the Crown Assets Disposal Corporation pay it to the Department of National Revenue out of the over-all sum which the purchaser bids? Or does the purchaser pay what he bids for the equipment, plus an additional sum in duty?

Mr. Benson: I am subject to correction but I believe it is paid out of the over-all sum. The bid is made and 15.25 per cent of it automatically goes to the Department of National Revenue.

Mr. Simpson: In that case the purchaser would be paying no duty as an individual.

Mr. Benson: That is correct.

The Chairman: Does this conclude the discussion of paragraph 1?

Some hon. Members: Agreed.

Paragraphs 1 to 8 inclusive agreed to.

Resolution agreed to.

CUSTOMS TARIFF

Resolved, 1. That the Customs Tariff be amended by adding thereto, immediately after section 16 thereof, the following section:

17. (1) The Governor in Council, by order, may from time to time amend

(a) Schedules A to C, and

(b) any lists of articles or goods the duties on which are removed or reduced pursuant to any Act or any order in council under the Customs Act or this Act, by renumbering the items set out in Schedules A to C or in any such list but not so as to affect the status of any of those items with respect to the payment of duty.

(2) On and after the coming into force of an order under subsection (1) a reference by its former number in any Act or in any statutory or other instrument or document to any item renumbered by that order shall, unless the context otherwise requires, be construed to be a reference to that item as renumbered by the order.

(3) The Minister of National Revenue may, from time to time by publication in Part I of the Canada Gazette, give notice of any change required to be made, by virtue of an order under subsection (1), in any reference in any Act or in any statutory or other instrument or document to an item renumbered by the order where the reference thereto is by the former number.

2. That Schedule A to the Customs Tariff be amended by striking out tariff items 209 E, 210i, 263e, 384, 440m(1), 440n(1), 445z, 541a(2) and 695(c), and the enumerations of goods and the rates of duty set opposite each of those items, and by inserting therein the following items, enumerations of goods and rates of duty:

3. That Schedule B to the Customs Tariff be amended by inserting therein the following item, enumeration of goods and rate of drawback of duty:

4. That Schedule C to the Customs Tariff be amended by striking out item 1,220 and the enumeration of goods set opposite that item, and by inserting therein the following item and enumeration of goods:

5. That Schedule C to the Customs Tariff be amended by inserting therein the following item and enumeration of goods:

6. That any enactment founded upon resolutions 2, 3 and 4 of the foregoing resolutions shall be deemed to have come into force on the 27th day of April, 1965, and to have applied to all goods mentioned in the said resolutions imported or taken out of warehouse for consumption on or after that day, and to have applied to goods previously imported for which no entry for consumption was made before that day.

7. That any enactment founded upon resolution 5 of the foregoing resolutions shall come into force on the 1st day of January, 1966, and shall apply to all goods mentioned in the said resolution imported or taken out of warehouse for consumption on or after that day, and shall apply to goods previously imported for which no entry for consumption was made before that day.

Mr. Pennell: Perhaps it would be useful to the committee if I were to make a few general remarks at this point.

The first resolution provides for the renumbering of items in the Customs Tariff by Order in Council. As was mentioned in the budget speech, this will permit the use of modern tabulating equipment for correlating import statistics and tariff items.

The second and third resolutions cover a miscellaneous group of items. Some of the items expire this year and they are being extended without change for another 12 months. The amendments to other items are of a relieving or of a technical nature.

Resolution 4 provides for an amendment to the item which governs the importation of offensive weapons.

Resolution 5 establishes a new item 1221 to come into effect on January 1, 1966. Entry into Canada will be prohibited for the periodicals described in this item.

Resolutions 6 and 7 relate to the coming into force of the previous resolutions.

Mr. Lambert: With regard to paragraph 2, we note that items 440m and 440n are redundant. I think that at some time in the past the Parliamentary Secretary indicated that an effort would be made to regularize the position of these annual extensions having to do with aircraft not including engines. This concerns a particular type of aircraft and a particular type of engine. But we seem to be going from year to year without reaching a definite decision. I believe I raised this point last year and the year before. When I was occupying a position similar to that of the Parliamentary Secretary I wondered why we were making these entries from year to year. Perhaps the hon. gentleman could tell us why we do this on an annual basis rather than incorporate it into an item which could eventually be removed.

As to item 445z, may I ask what is the quid pro quo in respect to this change in duty? The item refers to parts for use in the manufacture or repair of electric dry shaving machines for use in removing human hair or of rectifer converters used in conjunction therewith. Has this to do with ordinary electric razors and the rectifiers which are used to convert current from one voltage to another? What is the quid pro quo in regard to this.

• (9:20 p.m.)

Then item 695c has to do with—and this is a very important matter, I am sure—original sculptures and statuary, including the first 12 replicas made from a sculptor's original work or model; all the foregoing—and I want to know who determines this—the professional productions of sculptors only, and valued at not less than $75 each. Who determines the professional productions of sculptors only?

Mr. Grafftey: The Secretary of State.

Mr. Lambert: Is this done under certificate from the ministry for culture, or the Secretary of State? Then we have item 695e, which deals with hand-woven tapestries, suitable only for use as wall hangings, valued at not less than $20 per square foot. What particular sophisticates are going to benefit from this, because this material is now coming in free of duty? In particular, from what countries will this material be imported? To what countries is this provision primarily intended to apply, and why? What, again, is the quid pro quo with regard to this tariff concession?

Then we will also have to deal with item No. 5. I think the Parliamentary Secretary had better have a very good explanation because this has to do with split runs and we are back into the periodicals business. In the first line thereof again we have "regulations prescribed by the Governor in Council". Depending upon the answers we get from the Parliamentary Secretary, particularly as to item No. 5, we will see how the discussion will go. The other items are more on the basis of information.

Mr. Pennell: Mr. Chairman, I thought at first I might ask the indulgence of the committee but I carried on without asking it. However, after the deluge of questions directed at me by the hon. Member for Edmonton West perhaps I should ask for the indulgence of the committee in my first attempt at dealing with the Customs Tariff. With regard to items 440m(1) and 440n(1), aircraft and aircraft engines, these items were established in 1952 and have been renewed periodically since then. I suppose the hon. Member pondered the same question between 1957 and 1962.

Mr. Lambert: And I was told they were going to be made permanent.

Mr. Pennell: The renewal of these items, I might say, has the support of the Air Transport Association, which represents the operators of aircraft, and of the Air Industries Association of Canada, which represents the manufacturers. I hope that information is helpful to the hon. Member for Edmonton West. I presume these items have been continued on the representations of the Air Transport Association and the Air Industries Association of Canada.

Dealing with tariff item 695c, sculptures, the amendment to this item is of a technical nature to simplify its administration. The words "when certified by the Director of the National Gallery of Canada as being of a cultural character" have been removed from the item because it is thought this might expedite the administration of the item. Limitations as to minimum value and maximum number of replicas made from an original work have been inserted to safeguard against any abuses of this particular item. The hon. Member posed the question as to who is going to determine this matter. I would assume that the officials of the Department would do this, in the same way as they deal with the value of paintings from time to time.

Mr. Lambert: Yes, but on the basis of a certificate? Are we going to have an Appraiser of Culture?

[Mr. Lambert.]

Mr. Pennell: I would assume that the officials of the Department are competent to exercise the necessary judgment, Mr. Chairman.

I believe the next item raised was in connection with electric shavers, tariff item 445z. Item 445j provides for the free entry of "electric dry shaving machines for use in removing human hair, and parts thereof". Certain parts, however, such as transformers and nickel-cadmium batteries, are deemed to be more specifically provided elsewhere in the tariff and are not admitted under Item No. 445j. These parts would be dutiable at 15 per cent British preferential and 22½ per cent most-favoured-nation.

The purpose of item 445z is to supplement item No. 445j by providing for the free entry of those parts which do not qualify for admission under Item 445j. The maintenance of the duties on these parts would have made it uneconomical for electric shaver manufacturers to continue the production in Canada in competition with complete shavers which enter duty free. With regard to the other item raised by the hon. Member for Edmonton West, I must apologize to him, but it escaped my attention.

Mr. Lambert: It was 695e, hand-woven tapestries, that you hang on a wall.

Mr. Pennell: This is a new item, as the hon. Member pointed out, and it provides for the free entry under all tariffs of hand-woven tapestries, suitable only for use as wall hangings. These tapestries are normally made of wool and were dutiable as manufactures of wool under tariff item 533a, at 25 per cent and 27½ per cent. Under this new item they will be accorded the same tariff treatment as most other works of art. The minimum value limitation will ensure that commercially produced tapestries are not entered under this item.

Mr. Lambert: In view of the fact that the valuation must exceed $20 per square foot, obviously they are going to be rather sophisticated items. What is the quid pro quo for this change? What have we gained as a result of this change, because this is usually as a result of bargaining between countries? Is there any advantage that Canada has gained, because frankly I do not think we are giving away very much here; but on the other hand, what are we gaining?

Mr. Pennell: I am not in a position to give a categorical answer, but I understand that the former rates prohibited for all practical purposes the importation of these very expensive tapestries. As the hon. Member has pointed out, he does not expect very heavy importations; and after all, they must be limited to those for wall-hanging purposes. I am satisfied it was done, not in the interest of making a quid pro quo arrangement but really to deal with works of art.

Mr. Lambert: What about item 1221?

Mr. Pennell: To be quite frank, Mr. Chairman, I expect further comment on Item 1221 so I would, with respect, reserve comment until later.

Mr. Fisher: Mr. Chairman, I wanted to make some comments upon part 5, which opens up the whole question of periodicals legislation, Time, Reader's Digest and all that.

Mr. Knowles: This is where I came in.

Mr. Fisher: There are some very interesting problems that come to mind when one looks at this particular clause. I think we are all aware that this Government has entered into an agreement with the United States, and with some American corporations that have Canadian subsidiaries, in connection with the automobile trade. I would like to know whether the Minister has ever considered what a road block this particular rule could be to a real integration of the automobile industries of Canada and the United States. I see we have got the real authority on agriculture and automobiles in the House in the person of the Acting Prime Minister, and I turn to him.

Mr. Knowles: Agriculture and culture.

Mr. Fisher: And automobiles. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask—

Mr. Martin (Essex East): Don't say anything about my constituency.
