The Famous Rayo
Gives the Best Light at Any Price

When you pay more than the Rayo price for a lamp, you are paying for extra decorations that cannot add to the quality of the light. You can't pay for a better light, because there is none. An oil light has the best effect on the human eye, and the Rayo Lamp is the best oil lamp made, though low in price. You can pay $5, $10, $20 for some oil lamps, and although they give a better light than the white, mellow, dimmed, unflaring light of the low-priced Rayo.

It has a strong durable shade-holder. This season's burner adds to the strength and appearance. Made of solid brass, nickel-plated, and easily polished.

Once a Rayo User, Always One

See your dealer for the full description of this lamp. It will be found in the Imperial Oil Company.

RHEUMATISM YIELDS TO THE GREAT KIDNEY REMEDY

I have been troubled with rheumatism for the last five years. Suffered in much pain in the limbs, back and feet and my joints have been badly swollen. Also suffered from constipation. Being a regular physician, I had tried every remedy without success. The best benefit I received was from a bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. I can take it, never thinking, inaugurated for me, but must acknowledge, has done wonders for me. Have there been more than a dozen bottles and feel that I have been a God-send to me. I am recommending it to all my friends.

Yours very truly,
H. A. ALDRICH,
Haverhill, Mass.

Personally appeared Ira Aldrich, and made oath that the statement subscribed by him is true, before me on this 8th day of February, 1911.

FAMOUS GEMS OF PROSE
STONEMAN JACKSON'S LAST BATTLE.
By Gen Fitzhugh Lee

Pen picture of scenes in the Confederate lines at the battle of Chancellorsville. From an oration before the Virginia division of the army of Northern Virginia at the Capitol, Richmond, Va., Oct. 29, 1877.

THE sun rose unclouded and brilliant, gilding the hillsides and penetrating the vapors of the valley. Rising as gorgeous as did the "sun of Austerlitz," which produced such an impression upon the imagination of Napoleon, it should be remembered by the people of the south, for its rays fell upon the last meeting in this world, of Lee and Jackson.

Below, and but a few hundred yards distant, ran the federal line of battle. I was in rear of Howard's right. There were the lines of defence, with abatis in front, and long lines of stacked arms in rear. Two cannon were visible in the part of the line seen. The soldiers were in groups in the rear, laughing, chatting, smoking, probably engaged, here and there, in games of cards and other amusements indulged in while feeling safe and comfortable, awaiting orders. In rear of them were other parties driving up and uttering beseeches. The remembrance of the scene is as clear as it was sixteen years ago. So impressed was I with my discovery, that I rode rapidly back to the point on the Plank road where I had left my cavalry, and back down the road Jackson was moving, until I met "Stonewall" himself.

"General," said I, "if you will ride with me, halting your column here, out of sight, I will show you the enemy's right, and you will perceive the great advantage of attacking down the old turnpike instead of the Plank road, the enemy's lines being taken in reverse. Being only one courier, as you will be in view from the top of the hill." Jackson assented, and I rapidly conducted him to the point of observation. There had been no change in the picture.

To the remarks made to him while the unconscious line of blue was pointed out, he did not reply once during the five minutes he was with me, and yet his lips were moving. While talking of the great goal of battle, how could he hear what a poor cavalryman was saying?

"Tell Gen. Rodes," said he, suddenly whirling his horse toward the courier, "to move across the Old Plank road halt when he gets to the Old Turnpike, and I will join him there." One more look upon the federal line and then he rode rapidly down the hill, his arms flapping to the motion of his horse, over whose head it seemed, good rider as he was, he would certainly go. I expected to be told I had made a valuable personal reconnaissance—saving the lives of many soldiers, and that Jackson was indebted to me to that amount at least. Perhaps I might have been a little chagrined at Jackson's silence, and hence commended inwardly and adversely upon his horsemanship. Alas! I had looked upon him for the last time.

THE DE BERCY AFFAIR
BY GORDON HOLMES
Author of "A Mysterious Disappearance," "By Force of Circumstances," etc.
[Copyright by Melton & Allen, Toronto]

Winter read, and frowned. Furneaux, too, read.

"The 'Sill' he muttered. 'What Heaven, what a fatal date to her!'

"What was that to think?" continued Janco. "Antonio shared my view. He met Pauline at the Exhibition, and was ready, if necessary, to let the first opportunity there at the time Rose de Bercey went to her reckoning; but he is not in the mood he had not heard of the Petersburg murder."

"Yet he, and the rest of your gang, were prepared to let Mr. Osborne hang for this crime," said Winter, surveying the conspirator with a condemning eye. But his voice or soon was alike to Janco, who threw out his arms again.

"Cre mon!" he cried, "why not? He is not a rich bourgeois like the rest? He and his class have crushed us without mercy for many a century. What matter if we were hanged by mistake? He could be spared—say Pauline could not. He is merely a rich man, Pauline is a mystery to the cause!"

"Listen to me, Janco," said Winter severely. "Suppose you had your finger in your rotten club, but if ever you dare again to plot—even to plot, mind you—any sort of crime against life or property in this free country, I shall crush you like a beetle—like a beetle, do you hear, you wretched creature! Now, get out!"

"Monsieur, my sister!"

"What outside there! He also comes. You will try to do your best in a British prison on any day for your theories."

Janco bowed.

"Monsieur," he said, "a prison has made me what I am."

Pauline was candid as her brother. She had, in truth, misinterpreted the rapist's words. She had got rid of her English acquaintance, the cook, very easily after meeting Pauline by appointment. They hurried back to the mansion, where, owing to her intimate knowledge of the intricate arrangements, she counted on entering and leaving the flat unseen. She was mistaken.

"The knife that rid us of a traitress was sacred. I thought the dagger might be used to the—"

"Yet you gave it to Mr. Clarke without a demurrer?"

The girl shot a look at Clarke in which a mingled with hatred.

"The girl I was afraid of him," she stammered.

Winter opened the door.

"They went forth, hand in hand, in no wise cast down by the loathing they had inspired. Clarke looked far more miserable than they, for by their going he had lost the prize of his life."

"Now for Osborne," whispered Furneaux. "Leave him to me. Winter, trust me implicitly for five minutes—that is all."

Osborne was brought in by the state inspector, that human being who would record without an unnecessary word the name of the Prime Minister or the Archbishop of Canterbury on any charge preferred against either by a responsible member of the force. The young man was calm now, completely self-possessed, disdainful of any indignity that might be inflicted on him. He did not even glance at Furneaux, but nodded to Winter.

"Your assurances are seemingly of little value," he said coldly.

"Mr. Winter is quite blameless," whispered Furneaux, obviously nettled. "He is a man of honor. Please attend to me, Mr. Osborne—this affair rests wholly between you and him. Rose de Bercey was my wife?"

Osborne did not truth at hearing that remarkable statement. Clarke's mouth literally fell open; even the uniformed inspector was stirred and began to pace the room. "I have been betrothed to her with a phenomenally sharp knife, this being the only sign of excitement he had ever been known to exhibit."

"Yes, unfortunately for her and me, we were married in Paris soon after she ran away from home," said Furneaux. "I thought—she should be happy. She had rare qualities. Some of them and they fascinated you as they fascinated me. But she had others, which I learnt to my sorrow, while you were spared. I cannot explain further at this moment. I have only to say that you are as free from the guilt of her death—as I am!"

Winter alone was conscious of a queer note in the little man's voice as he dwelt on the comparison. He seemed to be searching for some simile of widest improbability, and to have hit upon himself as supplying it. But Osborne was in no mood for bewilderment about present or future while the horrid past still held the place first in his mind, and his prospects his with Rosalind.

"In that event, one might ask why I am here," he said quietly. "Not that I am concerned in the solving of the riddle. You have done your worst, Mr. Furneaux. You can never have been happy in your marriage with Miss Rosalind Marsh while the shadow of suspicion clung to you. Please do not forget that the world believes you killed Rose de Bercey. If you walked forth now into Regent street, and the word went around that you were there, a house and people would mob you in a minute, while ten thousand would be prepared to lynch you within ten minutes."

I have played with you, I admit—with others, too, and now I am sorry—to a certain extent. But in this case, I was at once detective, and judge, and executioner. If you want to be dissolved, your love for the dead woman to the living one, I cared not a straw what you suffered for how heavily you were punished. That phase has passed. Today you have justified yourself. Within twenty-four hours you will be free to marry Rosalind Marsh, because your name will have lost the smirch now placed on it, while your promise to Hylda Frost will be dissolved. But for twenty-four hours you must remain here, apparently a prisoner, in reality as much at liberty as any man in London. Yes, I vouch for my words—for at last wonder has deeply entered Osborne's eyes.

"—my chief, Mr. Winter, will tell you that I have never spoken in this manner without making good what I have said. I never, I repeat, if I could spare you the necessity of passing a night in a cell I would do so; but I cannot. You are the decoy duck for the wild creature that I mean to lay hands on before sunrise this afternoon. Make yourself as comfortable as possible—the inspector will see to that—I must keep you here, a prisoner in all outward semblance. Are you willing?"

That ship of yours that's coming in—only you communicate with it by wireless!"

Backache is the first and the sure sign of kidney disease.

When the back aches or becomes weak it is a warning that the kidneys are affected in some way.

IN PARLIAMENT

Ottawa, Feb. 7.—The Conservatives have even yet been unable to agree on their stand relative to reciprocity and by their own application to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, H. L. Jordan has had the debate postponed until Thursday.

The house was taken up in passing estimates for public works in the west. Ottawa, Feb. 7.—Contrary to expectations, the Canadian Lumbermen's Association did not take any action with regard to reciprocity at their annual meeting held this afternoon. It has been reported in certainty that the western branch of the association has taken a decided stand on the matter, but explanations given at the meeting showed that some misapprehension had been done by the reports sent out of their meeting. No resolution was passed.

BROGAN WILL NOT BE TAKEN BACK AND FREDERICTON-ST. JOHN MATCH MUST STAND

There will be no reinstatement of George Brogan, the Marysville hockey player, neither will the St. John-Fredricton game be played over. This much would seem to be final as the result of statements made today by A. W. Cover for the M. P. A. A. committee, in reply to the reported demands of Marysville management and by Manager E. Percy Howard for the Fredericton contingent that their game should be replayed.

Regarding Brogan's case, Mr. Cover said that he had a statement from James McBaine, manager of the Clipper baseball club, to the effect that Brogan was brought here to play for his team for money, and in that respect his case was identical with that of Cribbs. The St. John team, individually or collectively, had nothing whatever to do with the action regarding Brogan and Cribbs, in fact had on more than one occasion endeavored to have Cribbs reinstated but the committee had declined on any condition to accede to this, and Brogan's case, being identical with that of Cribbs, in the same position as Cribbs.

So far as Titus was concerned, Mr. Cover said, in spite of the mistake of Secretary McMillan, the Fredericton man was not eligible to play until he had made application for a registration card, and received one. He considered it strange that while the Fredericton team had made application for cards for other members of the team, none had been made for one for Titus.

Manager Howard said that he could see no reason why his team should replay the Fredericton game, as it was through no fault of their that Titus was laid off. In fact Fredericton had themselves to blame

TO BUILD COLLEGE TO TRAIN NATIVES OF SOUTH AFRICA AS TEACHERS

London, Feb. 8.—It is proposed to build a South African native college for the purpose of training native teachers and affording opportunity for higher education to native students at Fort Hare, Cape Province, near to the Lovedale institution for the education of the natives, where about 700 natives are at present being educated. It is intended that the full and individual control of the college should be in the hands of the governing council upon which sit representatives of government and it is the aim of the proposed college to train men of character fitted to do useful work for their own people requiring special education.

The need of guidance by educated natives is particularly urgent in view of the transition from tribal to city life, and instruction in agriculture is considered especially important. A sum required is £20,000, of which £40,000 has already been subscribed.

RICH FIND OF OLD GOLD COINS IS MADE

Nobles of the Reign of Edward III Unearthed in Norfolk—Some Rare Types

London, Feb. 8.—A remarkable discovery of treasure consisting of about 200 gold nobles of the reign of Edward III, has just been made at Kakenham in Norfolk. Many of the pieces are in mint preservation and some very rare types are to be seen.

They include coins struck at Calais and London mints. Some issued between 1331 and 1399 bear the title of King of France in addition to those of King of England and lord of Ireland; others issued between 1390 and 1399 have the title of Duke of Aquitaine and lord of France. The nobles issued between 1380 and 1377 have both titles, and of these there are several varieties.

The gold nobles of the reign of Edward III, were composed of almost pure gold, only half a grain of alloy being used. The design of the obverse is that of the king armed and crowned standing in a ship from the masthead of which flies a streamer bearing the cross of St. George.

It is stated that the treasure is worth some hundreds of pounds, a large proportion of which, according to modern usage, goes to the man who made the discovery.

PRINCE OF WALES TO SERVE IN THE ARMY

London, Feb. 8.—The Prince of Wales, accompanied by his brother, Prince Albert, has gone to the naval college, in Dartmouth, recently, the Prince of Wales to complete his last term of training as Prince Albert to commence his.

On leaving the Royal Naval College it is understood that the Prince of Wales will serve for some time in the army, in order that he may become well acquainted with both services, a most essential part of his education, in view of the numerous duties he will be called upon to perform in the future.

It is understood that the Prince of Wales is to commence his military career by joining the Tenth Hussars, a regiment of which the famous Beau Brummel was once an officer.

CLEARING THE AIR

The addresses delivered in this city by Mr. Ernest A. Sherman, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, have made out so clear a case in favor of the commission plan of government that one is led to wonder on what possible ground a reasonable objection to its adoption in St. John can be based.

What Mr. Sherman said about the bad results of the ward system was in line with local knowledge, as was his statement concerning the inability of the people under the city council system to fix direct responsibility or secure prompt redress of grievances.

This is a striking and true statement he made, and especially true of St. John, that while in all other directions great progress has been made, there has been little progress in the system of municipal government.

A man may be proud of his city's location, resources and advantages, but when asked about its government his enthusiasm subsides.

It was a really marvellous story that Mr. Sherman told of what three years under the commission plan had done for Cedar Rapids, and yet it was only the story of a business system conducted by men of fair ability, whose capacity was developed by the very task set them and the direct responsibility placed upon them.

The public service was vastly improved, large expenditures made on public works, departments reorganized on a better basis, the debts of the city practically doubled, the debt reduced by a very substantial amount, and along with all this an actual reduction of the tax rate, without any increase in valuation of property for taxable purposes, except such as naturally resulted from the growth of the city.

Mr. Sherman was able to answer all objections which have been raised in St. John against the plan, and to cite illustrations to emphasize the statements which he made. The applause which greeted many of his statements made it clear that his audience appreciated their significance, and that the people remained until 10.30 o'clock asking questions and listening eagerly to the answers was convincing evidence that he had made a deep impression on the minds of his hearers.

As at the luncheon yesterday, Mr. Sherman talked in a matter-of-fact way, without the slightest attempt at phrase-making or rhetorical effect. It was in himself an admirable illustration of business ability and direct treatment of the subject in hand.

There is no mystery about the commission plan. It is neither intricate nor involved. It can be carried out by average men, and it yields immediate results. Not a single question asked last evening presented an objection that could be regarded as at all serious in relation to the application of the system to conditions in St. John. Indeed the questions asked were not captious, but sought to elicit further information in support of the plan.

The advocates of commission did a very wise thing when they induced Mr. Sherman to come to St. John. He has cleared the air. The opposition to the plan is now largely narrowed down to those who are constitutionally opposed to change of any sort, and those who have personal reasons for opposing a change. Perhaps it should be said that there is still opposition from those who have not taken the trouble to study the question, and who merely echo what the ward politician says about it; but their number is not large, and it will rapidly decrease as the educational campaign proceeds. After all, the people desire to see something done for their money which is spent, and they are not likely to be swayed by prejudices when the question of how it shall be spent is put before them in a definite way, in the way of or against commission.

RIGHT OF ASYLUM

Easy the cry, while vengeance now is wrought.

And from his lair the Anarchist is hurled.

"Shut her harbors, closed the every port.

And from our shores be every alien turned.

Yet while the clamor and pursuit is hot, And public anger pulses mad through the streets, Be it not soon nor easily forgot.

That England thus an ancient time centuries a pillow hath she spread For all that widowed goes, and wanders from western interests when proposals relative to intercolonial extension are made. But they have been successful, and it is now up to Mr. Hazen.

What is his record in the matter? Since a time long before our founding he has professed a great desire to have the Valley Railway constructed. What has he done? He has offered a bond guarantee for a railway that would not meet the requirements of the people. He has been talking about an electric railway. He has been denouncing Dr. Pugsley and Mr. Carvell. The article in today's Standard does not offer the slightest suggestion of what Mr. Hazen proposes to do, further than the general intimation that he has no intention of cooperating with the federal government, if he can avoid it, to provide the people with a real railway.

It is useless for the premier to attempt to side-step at this stage of the proceedings. The federal government is prepared to do its part, and the evidence is found in the resolution introduced in parliament by the minister of railways. The people, having the opportunity to get a railway service equal to their requirements, will be content with nothing less.

W. R. MONTGOMERY GUILTY; JURY RECOMMENDS MERCY

New York, Feb. 7.—William R. Montgomery, former president of the Hamilton Bank of New York, a state institution, was found guilty late today of feloniously converting to his own use $44,000 of the bank's funds. The jury returned its verdict Oct. 23, 1907, on the day that the bank closed, and it was Montgomery's defence that he used the money to save the bank from suspension.

The jury which returned its verdict after four hours' deliberation, recommended the defendant to the mercy of the court. Montgomery nearly collapsed when he heard the verdict. He was remanded for one week for sentence.

Mrs. Montgomery entered the court room with Mr. Osborne, and, seeing her husband standing at the bar, ran to his side and, throwing her arms about his neck, burst into tears. Montgomery whispered a few words in her ear and kissed her, after which he was led back to the Tombs, where he had spent the night.

Montgomery was tried on one of a series of five indictments found against him in 1907, two years after the closing of the Hamilton Bank. He was charged with the larceny of $44,000 from the Tremont branch of the Hamilton Bank. That on the afternoon of Oct. 23, 1907, the day

ATTEMPT TO KILL THE COMMISSION

Eight Aldermen go Back On Their Record On Piebescite

FAVOR ALTERNATIVE

Ask Mayor to Call Special Meeting for Friday—His Worship Comments on Lack of Consistency Shown

There are apparently some of the aldermen who feel that the decision to ask for a plebiscite on the elective plan of civic government was taken too hastily, or that a mistake was made in allowing a bill to go to the house that might result in the people voting them out of office. This morning the mayor received a communication signed by eight aldermen asking that a special meeting be called for Friday afternoon to consider the taking of a plebiscite on an alternative measure to that of the commission.

The petition with the names of those signing it appears below:
The undersigned hereby request that your worship may be pleased to call a special meeting of the members of the common council for Friday next, the 11th inst., at 3 o'clock, P. M., for the purpose of considering the question of a plebiscite on an alternative measure to that proposed by the members of the board of trade.

JOHN B. JONES,
H. G. SMITH,
W. H. WHITE,
W. E. SCULLY,
S. ELKIN,
R. W. WIGMORE,
JAMES SPREULL,
JOHN WILLETT.

This is taken to be the outcome of the action of His Worship Mayor Frink at the common council on Monday last in refusing to allow the resolution submitted by Ald. Jones for a plebiscite on the question of a council to be composed of a mayor and nine aldermen. At that meeting the mayor ruled that the resolution was out of order as an amendment to the commission bill. Now the aldermen supporting the new measure propose to get theirs through in another way.

The mayor, in commenting on the matter this morning, said it hardly looked consistent for the aldermen, after unanimously adopting the idea of preparing a bill for the common council, to turn about and ask for a plebiscite on another scheme. It appeared as if the whole object of the idea was to defeat the commission plan.

In view of the application the mayor will probably call the meeting, but whether it will be on Friday yet depends on the matter of the C. M. B. agreement being ready, as he does not wish to call another special meeting within a few days. It is understood that the agreement is practically complete, and copies will be printed and placed in the hands of the members before the meeting.

The citizens will no doubt watch with great deal of interest the progress of the plebiscite plans. With eight men signing the petition, it needs only a majority of the council to be adopted and it is regarded as practically certain that Ald. McGoldrick will support the new measure, as he has made no secret of his opposition to the commission plan.

LIQUOR STORE ROBBERY

Evidence Given Today in Case of Three Men Under Arrest

The case against Frank Elliott, Frank Sprague and John McGloin, charged with breaking into the store of Philip O'Neill, North wharf, and obtaining a quantity of liquor, was continued this morning before Judge Ritchie in the police court. Nothing new was brought out in the evidence, and the prisoners were further remanded. K. J. MacRae is appearing for Elliott.

Mr. O'Neill was recalled and made statements regarding the closing of his premises on Saturday and how he found them on his return, with a police lock holding the door secure. John McGuire, clerk in the store, told of vacant spaces on a shelf where the liquor is kept, and Policeman Geo. Henry told of searching the prisoners on their arrest, and finding on McGloin a "quantity" of gin about sixty cents in change.

HAD PLENTY OF IT

Stranger Arrested on Drunkenness Charge Had $525 in His Pocket

When locked up it was found that he had in his pocket nearly $500 besides a check for $75. Charles Anderson was fined $4 on the same charge and Edward McCann remanded.
