NOTES AND NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

Some men are born to misfortune. At a Fourth of July picnic a Covington chap got his eye punched for speaking to another fellow's girl, and when he tearfully explained that he'd "knocked her these thirty-five years" he got all his hair pulled out.

The Science of Health for August is a capital number of this most popular and useful health magazine. It contains an illustrated article on Restoring Life when apparently drowned; Popular Physiology; Summer Complaints; How to Get Well and Keep Well; Is Alcohol a Poison? Are Medicines Causes of Disease? Dysentery—Cause and Cure; Fruits as Food for Man; Seasonable Recipes for Using Berries; A Bill of Healthful Fare for August; The Survival of the Fittest; Epileptics; Special Foods for Specific Conditions; Who are "Bad Soles"? Charcoal; Cause and Cure of Dyspepsia, &c.

Michael Leahy, who recently graduated at the Pittsfield (Mass.) High School at the age of 21 years, obtained his education under difficulties. When a child, while playing on the railroad, he was run over by a train, and it was necessary to amputate both arms close to the shoulder; that perceptible stumps are left. Nevertheless, he has persevered in his studies, has not been absent or tardy once in his four years at the High School, and has become a proficient in the branches there taught, turning the leaves of his book with his tongue. He has also acquired a very legible and even handsome style of penmanship, which he executes with his mouth.

Apropos of novels, says a Boston correspondent, Estes & Lauriat are republishing some good English tales, which have been for some time out of print, in a style which does them credit. In fact, they are externally the very prettiest paper-covered novels I have seen. The paper is a delicate French gray, and the lettering upon it is crimson. They are to cool-looking and neat in appearance that it is a pleasure to read them. So far the set includes "Sisters of Ring," by F. W. Robinson; "A Tangled Skein," by Albany Fonblaque, Jr.; "Deep Waters," by Anna H. Dury, and "Tumor," by the author of "Counterparts."

They have a social, pleasant way of doing things in Texas, if the following copy of a hand-bill just received at this office is in evidence. Baker is not the man to be amused with such goings on, we shall expect soon to see him take up his Cross and send him to that not even Mercury will save him:

CARD.

The notorious villager, slanderer and blackmailing, J. H. Baker, of the Galveston Mercury, having maliciously and maliciously assailed me in double columns of this morning's issue of his necessary paper, I hereby denounce the said Baker as a well-known blackguard, a thief, a liar, a coward and a scoundrel.

AWAY.

Galveston, July 8, 1874.

Arizona is certainly a tender-hearted and sympathetic place. We noticed that among a gentleman on these, engaging in single combat and getting more lead than he can digest, leaves the gentle vale, as Major Duffield did the other day. The editors do their best in manufacturing a tender obituary. It's hard work sometimes. Thus, upon the demise of Duffield, The Arizona Miner is obliged to say: "His reputation in the community was not such as a quiet, orderly citizen should bear, and many that knew him will say that he lived as he died." This was certainly rough on the deceased Duffield; and naturally enough before finishing, The Arizona Miner relates an amusing anecdote. "Nevertheless, Major Duffield had many good streaks in his singular composition, and his friends everywhere will feel and ever his untimely fate." "Mary good streaks" is good, and "friends everywhere" implies a large circle of lovers and admirers. The Major was probably passionate, domineering, and brutal, always ready for a quarrel, never loth to kill when the quarrel came; but then he had many "good streaks of character," and that is about all that our best friends will be able to say of the best of us, when we have been decently or otherwise "urged."

Why is it, asks Appleton's Journal, that American races at Jerome Park are entirely wanting in the out-of-door pleasure and picnic character that so notably marks the English Derby? "It would seem," it goes on to say, "as if we lacked national genius for out-of-door amusements. Long Branch is sometimes called a democratic watering place, because among its visitors are many without social standing; but Long Branch is really never off its dignity. The sands are for the most part deserted, except at bathing hours, while the groups on the hotel piazzas are always circumspect, and dull. Late in the day, when the drive is thronged, or at the time when the lathers are in the surf, there is considerable animation; but at the English seaside places people abide on the sands all day. There is always a throng; always groups of people picnicking; always family clusters, with books, maps, and lunch baskets; always happy children digging and playing in the sand; always an abundance and heartiness in their enjoyments which we do not commonly find among American pleasure seekers."

GENERAL.

On Thursday afternoon a portion of Mr. Nanner's theatrical company entertained the inmates of Mount Hope Asylum with recitations, &c.—Hz. Colonist.

An English Company have for some time been working the copper ore on the North side of Grand Manan, and will soon have a cargo ready for shipment.

The publishers of the Hamilton Spectator have appeared before the Police Magistrate on a criminal charge of libel, for having advertised for sale in aim for advertising against the proprietor of an hotel. The case is to go before a jury.

Paris ladies wear around the neck the medals or crosses won by their husbands for the service they have rendered their country. The gentlemen wear the ribbons only; the ladies wear the medals.

In Toronto, last week, a brute named David Searning beat his wife to death. He had been in the habit of beating her three times a week, according to one witness. A verdict of wilful murder was given by the coroner's jury, and Searning is in custody.

"What do you know of the character of this man?"

was asked of a witness at a police court the other day. "What do I know of his character? I know it to be unbleachable, your honor," he replied with much emphasis.

Measures are being taken to examine the diamond fields of Senegambia, in the West Indies, and it is being actively carried on in that country, and Ralph Brooke's Government are working some mines on their own account.

It is hard to understand why the following advertisement should have been published in the Witness of Montreal, a daily religious journal. "If the lady who took my black silk umbrella out of Miss Claudina's store, Hagedone street, will call at 47 Metcalfe, she can have my parasol also."

On Thursday morning, Mr. Alexander McKay, station master at Wellington, jumped off the Truro freight train, while it was in motion, and fell on his head. His forehead, upper lip and cheek were badly cut, and it is feared that more serious injuries have been sustained.

It is said that on Feb. 16 the body of the Russian courier from Peking to Khabarovka was found frozen to death in the snows of the Mongolian desert. Although this postal service has now been carried on, it is said, has never happened before.

The Halifax papers note the dismissal by Mr. Bridges' recommendation, of Mr. John Conrick, who grieved the car wheels at Richmond Station and about a dozen carpenters.—St. John Telegraph. If Mr. John Conrick had been guilty of "grinding a dozen carpenters," or half that number, he deserves to be dismissed. Mr. Bridges acted promptly in this instance.—Halifax Citizen.

On Sundays Montreal is the most orderly town on earth. The observance of the day indicates a conscientious piety in the majority of the people. The churches of every denomination are full of devout worshippers, and but for the rumbling of the street cars, and the clanging of the bells, it would seem as if a world of quietude and order had been provided their drinks beforehand.

The Ministry are said to be in trouble about the Halifax Collection of Customs. They kept the office open for Mr. "W. W." Ross, hoping that he would accept; but he prefers to retain the covered post of Minister of Militia and several thousand dollars a year, while Mr. Macdonald does the work and for the honor of his Cabinet accepts the responsibility. In the meantime so many aspirants for the office of Collector of Customs, that the Ministers are in a fix, for if they give the position to one they will mortally offend all the others. The candidates are Messrs. Goudge, Forbes and Ray, besides a host of minor lights in the Critic constellation.

The Pacific Railway Telegraph Line contract is one of the mysteries that are among watching. A few tenders are in, among them one from Mr. Drummond, formerly manager of the Dominion Telegraph Company's line. He has filed a contract for an extension of the Dominion telegraph poles, which he intends to adopt on the Pacific line, if he gets the contract. The contract is for a line of poles in the shape of a tripod, ingeniously fastened at the bottom into iron spikes with sockets, and by the aid of the poles with 10 men build a mile of telegraphic line per day, by his system, and use any kind of material for the poles, which will not rot so rapidly as when they are planted in the earth.

M. Paul Cassagne was tried for the publication of articles in the Pays, calculated to disturb the public peace and to stir up hatred and contempt among citizens. M. Cassagne was defended by himself. M. Lachand was counsel for the printer and publisher of the paper. The jury returned a verdict of acquittal. The Bonapartists were a great party, having as good a right as others to the protection of the law. He remained in Liberia and married the daughter of ex Gov. Hicks, of the colony. This was a lucky hit, for she could speak five or six of the native languages, which was of much value in the advancement of his prospects. Before he had been in the colony three years he was a wealthy man, and turned his attention to political advancement. He was Senator and Chief Justice, doing good and able service in both capacities. He was three times nominated for the Presidency and defeated. In 1868, however, he was successful and was elected for two years. But his party thought they were strong enough to keep him in his seat without an election but failed. He was imprisoned for usurpation, and was drawn up while trying to make his escape to a British steamer in the bay of Monrovia. He was the wealthiest man in Liberia, and his family will not want, though much of his property was confiscated.

Dumas and the Virgin.

Dumas has been stirring up another sensation in Paris by a letter written to the anonymous author of a new work entitled "The Return of Christ; Appeal to Women," who had sent him the proof sheets. He gives his views upon Catholicism broadly and especially upon the worship of the Virgin. He says: "I believe that were it not for Mary, Christianity would triumph much sooner than it did. Christ, I bow to her in passing because she is the mother of my race; but because she is full of grace, if you like; but we have nothing to say to each other, and the proof is that when her Son is raised I do not meet her at the tomb.

Let us be on our guard about Mary. She is the Virgin, she is the mother, but she is always the woman; she appears too much to the little girls of the country. From the fact that man wanders from the right path, do not let us conclude that it is woman who will lead him back again. She can only follow him when he has found the right path again, and he will find it himself alone." M. Veulliot, a spiritual eagle, has swooped down upon the dramatist. He informs that the book in question is written by a woman, and that Dumas has been fascinated by his "soft seductiveness." He thinks that "all serious men will play him for having written a letter beneath mediocrity in thought and more than unseemly in style," but he regrets it as a much more grave matter than Vere Didos, a priest of the Order of St. Dominic, should take up on the same side. Dumas has said that the person to whom he sent the letter has violated confidence in publishing it.
