OPENING OF PARLIAMENT.

Opening Ceremonies Took Place at Ottawa Thursday.

SPEECH FROM THRONE.

The Dominion House of Commons opened Thursday with usual ceremonies. The attendance of members was larger than usual.

The speech from the throne was as follows:

Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate:
Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

In opening the third session of the tenth Parliament of Canada, I avail myself of the opportunity to offer you my congratulations on the unparalleled prosperity prevailing in all parts of the Dominion. The harvest has been abundant and the trade with both Britain and foreign nations continues to expand in annually increasing volume with every prospect of continued growth for many years to come.

The number of immigrants seeking homes in Canada still continues to increase and it is very satisfactory to observe that a larger proportion than in former years has in the past season come from the British Isles. During the recess following last session, I visited the four western provinces and was much gratified to note the great advance that is being made in the development of the vast resources of these highly favored sections of the Dominion. I found the people of the west rejoicing in their prosperity and full of hope and confidence in the future growth of its growth of its agricultural and industrial wealth.

The quinquennial census recently taken in the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan shows that these provinces are now entitled to an increase in their representation in the House of Commons. A bill giving effect to that provision will be submitted for your approval.

In accordance with the announcement made in a previous session, you will be asked to consider a bill for the revision of the customs tariff.

The sanction of Parliament will be required to give legal effect to the treaty made with the empire of Japan. A bill for that purpose will be submitted for your approval.

The products and manufactures of Canada show at the present international exhibition held in the city of Milan proved a great attraction and as a result it is confidently believed our trade with Central and Southern Europe can be materially increased.

The naval authorities having relinquished the use of the dockyard at Halifax, a proposal was made to transfer it to the government of Canada. The offer has been accepted and the dockyard will now be used by the department of marine and fisheries as a base for its operations in connection with aids to navigation.

Many immigrants having in recent years been induced to come to Canada by false representations made in United Kingdom, at the request of the Minister of Labor, a clause has been added to the merchant's shipping bill now before the Imperial Parliament for the punishment of any person who may be found guilty of that offence.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

The accounts of the past year will be laid before you. I am glad to say that the revenue has shown

I. C. R. STATION AT NELSON WAS BURGLARIZED

Articles Belonging to the Agent Were Taken.

Chatham, N. B., Nov. 23.—A thief broke into the I. C. R. station at Nelson Tuesday night, and stole Station Agent J. A. McIntyre's rifle, valise, and clothes, all packed for a hunting trip. He also broke open a cash box and ticket case but it is not known if any of the latter were taken. The agent does not live over the station, but in town. Entrance was effected by breaking a window. A man dressed up in women's clothes was seen that night in Douglasfield, and a search is being made for him as a suspect.

large expansion and has not only proved adequate for ordinary expenditure, but has also to a great extent provided for the outlay on capital account. The estimates for the coming year will be laid before you at an early date.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate, Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

A united application having been received by the Ministers from the Governments of the several provinces asking for an increase in the provincial subsidies. A conference was recently held, when reasons for granting additional aid were fully set forth and discussed.

Resolutions based on the conclusions reached by my government will be submitted for your consideration.

Bills will be laid before you amending the election acts; the post office act; the dominion lands act.

A bill for the more effective supervision and inspection of Canadian canned food products, meats and fish; a bill relating to the sale and manufacture of patent medicines; and also a bill to make better provision for dealing with juvenile delinquents.

It is hoped that the report of the commission appointed to enquire into the working of insurance companies will early be completed, when it will be laid on the table.

The subjects I have mentioned will, I hope, receive your best consideration, and the measures to be submitted for your approval will, I trust, tend to the well being and good government of the Dominion.

A CORDIAL INVITATION

TO DISEASE.

This is an apt description of constipation. It's an "unnatural condition to begin with, and it's more, because it brings about blood deterioration, interferes with digestion, renders you susceptible to the infectious diseases and causes anaemia. Not so much a purgative as a natural stimulant to the bowels is what you need. You get it in Dr. Hamilton's Pills which increase liver activity, restore the bowels to perfect action and positively cure constipation and its attendant evils. Insist on having only Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut, 25c. per box at all dealers.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

Boils and Pimples

Red Rash, Eczema, in fact any skin disease, disfigures the complexion because the bowels are constipated—or because the kidneys do not rid the system of waste—or because the skin itself is unhealthy.

Ointments, salves and soaps are useless. Because the trouble is with the blood.

Owing to defective action of bowels, kidneys or skin, the blood becomes laden with impurities. It is these impurities—deposited by the blood—that make boils, pimples, and painful, disfiguring skin diseases. It is because the trouble is with the bowels, kidneys or skin, that FRUIT-A-TIVES cure these diseases.

Fruit-a-tives

OR "FRUIT LIVER TABLETS" act directly on the eliminating organs—correct their irregularities—strengthen them—and thus clear the skin and make the complexion clear and soft.

If you have any skin trouble—or any fault with constipation, liver trouble, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, rheumatism—cure yourself with Fruit-a-tives. They are made of fruit juices and tonics—and never fail to cure.

Irish Kings.
From the beginning of the Christian era until Ireland was conquered by Henry II. of England (1172) there were seventy-six Irish kings, of whom fifty died violent deaths, mostly by assassination. Three of them are on record as having been "killed by thunderbolts" within a period of seventy-five years.

The Gloves.
A woman who is careful of her hands must be careful of her gloves, for this is most important. If they are tight, they ruin the shape of the hand; if they are badly cut, they give a common aspect to the whole appearance, and such gloves are the dearest in the end.

IN A CLASS BY ITSELF

There are many emulsions of Cod Liver Oil, all more or less good, no doubt, and all very much alike, the principal difference being in the quantity and quality of the oil that enters into their composition, and perhaps something in the method of manufacture.

FERROL

on the other hand, while it is an emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, occupies a place entirely above and beyond the ordinary preparations above referred to.

The reason is, that FERROL combines with the oil iron and Phosphorus, which all other emulsions lack, and without which no emulsion is anywhere near perfect.

In FERROL the well-known virtues of Cod Liver Oil as a flesh and weight producer, the unparalleled qualities of Iron as a blood builder and purifier, as well as the undoubted advantages of Phosphorus as a Nerve and Brain tonic, are all not only combined and retained, but wonderfully enhanced by the process of amalgamation.

No argument is necessary to prove the inestimable value of such a preparation as FERROL in the treatment of Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Croup and all Bronchial or Lung Troubles.

FERROL is not a patent mystery. The formula is freely published. It is prescribed by the best Physicians. It is endorsed by the most eminent Medical Journals. It is used in the most famous Hospitals.

Dyspepsia of Women

Caused by Female Disorders and Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A great many women suffer with a form of indigestion or dyspepsia which does not seem to yield to ordinary treatment. While the symptoms seem to be similar to those of ordinary indigestion, yet the medicines universally prescribed do not seem to restore the patient's normal condition.

Mrs. Pinkham claims that there is a kind of dyspepsia that is caused by a derangement of the female organism, and which, while it causes a disturbance similar to ordinary indigestion, cannot be relieved without a medicine which not only acts as a stomach tonic, but has a peculiar tonic effect on the female organism.

As proof of this theory we call attention to the case of Mrs. Henry Beaubien, 58 Sparks St., Ottawa, Ont., who was completely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after everything else had failed. She writes:

"I had been troubled with indigestion and general stomach disorders for nearly a year. I had a soreness in my stomach and was unable to digest my food. I dieted and dosed without success, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me permanent relief. I used three bottles and it cured me of my stomach trouble and built up my general health. I now enjoy a splendid appetite, can eat all kinds of food, have no trouble with indigestion, and know that I owe it all to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement, or has such a record of cures of female troubles, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Union Advocate,
ESTABLISHED 1867.
NEWCASTLE, NOV. 28, 1906.

Hon. H. R. Emmerson, who for two years has been accumulating information on the subject of pensions, will recommend to parliament a pension system for government railway employees. To many this will be a most welcome announcement.

Scott Act violation in Motion is becoming an extremely hazardous occupation, the financial profits of which are much less than formerly. A law can always be enforced if the officers are willing to act and know that public opinion is behind them.

Happily for St. John, the threatened strike of the Longshoremen's Association has been averted by conciliatory advances on both sides. The union has not been granted a monopoly of the loading of vessels, but has been assured that no non-members will be employed so long as the Union can supply the full number of laborers required.

The Toronto Custom House clerks, setting forth the too well known fact of the great increase in the cost of living during the last few years, have petitioned the Dominion government for a substantial increase in wages. As the government has increased the salaries of country postmasters and is promising pensions to railway employees, the request of the clerks will probably receive due consideration.

A bill for the effective inspection of earned goods will be submitted to parliament at an early date. Upton Sinclair's novel is hanging its effect, much to the chagrin of some packers who would get rich quicker than is good for the public health. It having been shown that many patent medicines contain more alcohol than is good for the users, a bill dealing with that class of articles will also be introduced.

A writer in a London paper, who has recently paid a visit to this Dominion, says that Canada is rapidly becoming one of the dearest countries in the world to live in and that by and by only millionaires will be able to live there. This may be an extravagant way of putting it, but ministers and other people on small salaries who have watched the cost of living going up steadily and rapidly from year to year will be apt to think there is at least a streak of truth in it.—Maritime Baptist.

The principle of old age pensions is spreading rapidly in many parts of the world. Last week, in the British parliament, Premier Campbell-Bannerman and Chancellor Asquith assured a deputation of members of the Liberal and Independent Labor parties that the matter of old age pensions for all classes of workmen would be taken up as soon as time and money permitted. The deputation was assured that the Imperial government considered the pension questions one of extreme urgency.

A young Quebecer, Monsieur Leclerc, is said to have invented an appliance to extract from the earth electricity enough to heat and light dwellings so cheaply so as to put gas and coal out of use. But it is also said that he has sold the patent rights to a coal company which will keep the invention from being put to use. In such a case the Canadian and British governments should cancel the sale of the secret, reward the inventor handsomely and throw the discovery open to the public whose interests are of more importance than those of the present owners of the fuel and light supply.

The prohibition of the sale of absinthe Lausanne which resulted in the in the canton of Vaud, was very exciting, owing to the agitation which was started on account of two peculiarly brutal cases of murder, committed by confirmed absinthe drinkers, who in both cases, returned home and killed their wives and children. Powerful opposition of commercial interests connected with the Swiss absinthe industry failed utterly, and it is felt that other cantons of Switzerland will follow the examples one by one and enact laws classing absinthe with forbidden poisons.—Forward.

The Political Equality Society, founded to promote woman suffrage, held its first meeting last week. Mayor Coakworth presided and expressed himself in sympathy with the movement; and Inspector J. L. Hughes, an educationist well known far beyond the bounds of Ontario, declared that all arguments against female suffrage were without foundation. The equality of woman with man so far as voting is concerned seems to work well in New Zealand, Australia and the Rocky Mountain States. And in Russia, the constitutional Democrats and all the Reform parties are unanimous in demanding for woman the absolute political equality she has lately gained in Finland.

The House of Commons, which opened on the 22nd, is by this time settling down to the serious work of the session, which will likely be prolonged. The speech from the throne commented upon the good financial standing of Canada; and during the resulting debate it was shown that, while the annual expenditure had increased, the national debt per head is less than formerly. Changes were foreshadowed in the election laws, which statutes can not be made too strict. The report of the Insurance investigators, which can not fail to be interesting, was not ready. Those manufacturers who have been asking for a high tariff will have to be satisfied with what we now have, or a lower one; for the government evidently intends, and rightly so, to suit the tariff changes rather to the more numerous agricultural portion of the people than to the manufacturing interests. The probability is that the alterations in the scale of duties will be slight. The British preference of 1897—that move on Canada's part which may yet lead to the confederacy of the British Empire—is to be maintained. The bye-elections have not materially altered the numerical standing of the political parties since last session. The government has still a very decisive working majority.

Wedding Bells.

DOYLE-WHEELER.

St. Mary's church was the scene of a very interesting event Wednesday evening, when the marriage of Dennis P. Doyle and Miss Mary Georgina Wheeler took place.

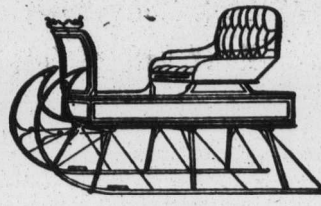

The bride was gowned in ruby velvet with Persian trimmings and wore a black velvet picture hat trimmed with white Irish lace and black and white plumes. She carried a shower bouquet of white carnations and maiden hair fern. The bride was given away by her brother Allan J. Wheeler. Miss Clare Wheeler, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and was becomingly gowned in a costume of grey corduroy with blue trimmings and wore a turquoise blue velvet hat and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

The groom was supported by Dr. F. J. Desmond. The church was thronged with friends, among whom were heard many expressions of admiration of the charming bride. The church was artistically decorated with ferns and potted plants and pink and white chrysanthemums, the altar and sanctuary being a blaze of lights. The ceremony was performed by Rev. P. W. Dixon.

The wedding march was beautifully rendered by Miss Helen Black, and as the bridal party were leaving the church the choir sang the "Magnificat." The groom's present to the bride was a handsome fur lined coat with pink trimmings, and to the bridesmaid a valuable gold chain. The best man received a pearl scarf pin as a souvenir of the occasion. The ushers were P. J. McEvoy and Charles Dalton. After the ceremony luncheon was served at the residence of the bride. The bridal party left on the Maritime express for an extended tour in the Upper Provinces. Bunting floated from many private and public buildings in honor of the marriage of the popular young couple and the many and costly presents testified to the high esteem in which both are held. On their return to the city they were met by a large number of friends at the residence in Mr. Doyle's house on King's Highway.

DENNIS-EASTY.

The marriage of Mr. Joseph Dennis of Halcombe, L. S. W. and Miss Mary A. Easty of Seville, was solemnized at the R. C. church Redbank on Wednesday last. The bride was attired in a suit of grey ladies costume cloth with hat to match, and was attended by Miss Julia Foran of Newcastle, who also was attired in grey. The groom was supported by Mr. John Fitzgerald of Newcastle. The young couple, who will reside at Halcombe, have the best wishes of the community for a happy and prosperous wedded life.

"I contracted a series of colds from the changing weather," says Mr. Bryce Allen, a well-known resident of Jarvis, Ont., and a member of Haldimand County Council for his district, "and gradually my lungs became affected. I tried medicine and doctors prescribed for me, but got no relief. With lungs and stomach diseases, nervous, weak and wasted, I began to use Psychine. With two months' treatment I regained my health. To-day I am as sound as a bell, and give all the credit to Psychine."

There is a proof of what Psychine does. It not only cures Colds and kills the germs of LaGrippe, Pneumonia and Consumption, but it helps the stomach, makes pure, rich blood and spreads general health all over the body. You will never have Consumption if you use

The Adventurers

By E. B. MARRIOTT WATSON

COPYRIGHT, 1898, BY HARPER & BROTHERS

"Shepard whistled. 'I got a good post behind a cottage and spied on him. He's transferred his luggage to a yacht. By thunder, but he must have made his preparations well! I couldn't see much of the crew, but that I could see. He's got the load aboard by this time.'

"Then we're done!" I cried.
"No, not a bit," said Sercombe cheerfully. "I've taken French leave with a bit of a boat down yonder. Daren't stop to wake 'em up for permission, you know, Mr. Grestorex. 'Twould take too long and delay us and make it public. We can pay coming back."

We did not stop to discuss the ethics of the question, but the feeling that the time was past for argument and that henceforward we were committed by our original decision to a certain course of action I shoved aside sophistries and ran down to the beach. Here Sercombe had secured a dashing and ugly boat, furnished with dipping lugs. "It doesn't look very much," he whispered, "but it's the only craft sufficiently far from them to keep our movements quiet."

Shepard stared down at it dubiously. "It's not a rig I like," he said.
But here Montgomery pointed with his finger, seizing me by the arm. "There they go," he said.

"Then here we go," returned Sercombe, leaping into the boat.
Sure enough, in the lessening darkness I could catch sight of a blacker spot moving slowly outward. We ran up the lugs under Shepard's direction, and the boat stood out.

"We shall have more wind," whispered Shepard to me. "I don't think we see the end of this yet."
"I'm sure we don't," I returned moodily. "What are we going to do now? We have played the fool and must go on playing the fool, I suppose."

I spoke somewhat bitterly, for at that moment an interval of sanity reigned in my mind, and I seemed to see in a flash the portentous consequences of this adventure.
"Anyhow we must go on," said Shepard briefly and put up his tiller to fetch the nose of the boat about.

Even as we ceased speaking the wind came down in a roar from the wide spaces of the channel and blew out our lugs till they rang like drumheads. A great noise filled the sea, and the blocks were straining and shrieking. Shepard was a skilled hand, and he kept his head cool. He came up to the wind as near as the abominable lugs would let him. There was no sign of the other boat.

"She'll beat down the estuary," said Sercombe, "and make for some point upon the Somersetshire coast, probably."

"No, no; he's bound for Newport," said Shepard. "He can get away from Newport like any honest skipper. Anyway, we'll try it at that."

The sail tore at the canvas as though it would strip it in ribbons. We had a great way on, the boat scudding through the rough water with her port gunwales ripping under her port. We got out some distance, and then he said:

"I must fetch her round. We'll have to try a long board in this wind."
We said nothing, but I jumped to the lug. Down dropped the sail, a heavy lump of damp canvas, and Montgomery and I hauled till we dragged it into position.

"Lord, what a beast!" said Shepard. He put over the tiller, and round she swung, the lugs cracking and the blocks jumping. She lurched as though she would strip it in ribbons. We had started off like a hare upon her new course.

"By thunder," said Sercombe, "she goes well!"
"Anything would go in this weather," returned Shepard.
Sercombe laughed. "It's a good night for us," he observed.

Montgomery at this juncture raised a cry which took our eyes to him. The light was rising over the water, and a soft darkness ruled.

"I see them," he said.
"You're right, by Jove!" cried the captain, from the bows. "She's there."

Shepard peeped under the sail. "A yawl," he said, "and we can catch them if we want to."
Not a hundred yards separated the two boats, but it was questionable if they would see us unless they were on the lookout for us. Certainly in that coil of wind and water no sound of us would reach them.

"We've just got to lug them now," said Shepard, "until it gets lighter."
"No, no," said Sercombe impatiently. "Lay her alongside. I want to come to terms with Mr. Hood."

Shepard leaned to me. "What shall I do, Ned?" he asked in a low voice.
"Go ahead!" called Sercombe in a loud voice. Shepard eased her and let her run.

The yawl was creeping close hauled on the other tacked, and we gave the lugs their full advantage," explained Shepard. "Close hauled she'll move a yard to our foot."

So far so good. If we had not been seen we were all right and could come on them later with a wet sail. The wind then shifted up the channel, swelling into a gale. The night was flecked with bright points of light, and then they died, and a mist of rain crept down. In a little the yawl had disappeared, but by the last glimpse we had of her she was fighting up inch by inch. Shepard ran down for some minutes, and then he jammed the tiller down, and the boat came up into the wind. The lugs flapped and rattled. Montgomery and Sercombe took the sheets. For a moment we hung in the wind, silent and motionless. It was only for a moment. In that moment Shepard's eyes met mine. I knew what he was thinking. Even then we might have paused, and yet not so. Sercombe in the bows seemed possessed of a devil, roaring against the wind and the tide and laughing aloud with diabolic delight. Montgomery's face was set with the lust of battle. Shepard said no word, but his eyes returned to the leaping water. He put up the tiller slowly, and then the lugs flew out in the wind.

"Let her go!" yelled Sercombe from the bows.
Shepard jammed up the tiller, and away, like a leaping tiger, sprang the lugger upon her prey. The black depths of that greedy channel were broken into pools and mountains. Fountains of green water spouted upon all sides, and we were plunged into drenching spray. And upon all this pomp of war and devilry the dawn broke slowly.

Before us, and still creeping up the wind, scarce 200 paces, we made out the yawl, but the light served us no further, though that gray curtain of rain; but the next moment we were aware that Hood had awakened to our neighborhood, although he could not have suspected our identity or our errand. A voice shouted something from the bows, but we could not catch the words. Hands were gesticulating, and then a light was flashed. The figure on the yawl grew clearer, distinct against the gray light, as we rode into the trough.

By this time we were plain to her occupants, as plain as they were to us, and I could make out Hood himself standing by the big mast with one arm about it. A Greek stood near him, and one was at the helm. He stood without moving, watching us with those stealthy eyes I knew so well. The roar of the rain and wind upon the water was deafening. We descended into the trough of the waves, and when we rose Hood stood at his post, his hand stretched forth to the Greek. The next minute he held a gun to his shoulder.

"Look out!" I sang out to the bows.
The two boats were now quite close, tossing on the same piece of water. Even though that lurid burly report reached my ears, and at the same time Sercombe staggered and went back against the sail. It was all instantaneous. The Greek shifted his tiller, and the yawl heeled off. Montgomery pulled Sercombe up and propped him in the bows.

"It's all right, my lad," he said. "That black devil got me. I meant to do for him. Well, it's luck."

We gave him some brandy, and he spoke no more, breathing with difficulty.

I turned to Shepard. "Let her away!" I cried furiously. "We'll have that bloody scoundrel or die for it!"
The boat dipped her nose and once more took a watch on him. I cried:

Montgomery took his pistol from under his waistcoat. I gripped mine. I think we were all taken with the frenzy of bloodshed.

"Board her!" cried Montgomery.
"Lay her along!" I shouted.
"Lay her along!"

Shepard twisted his tiller, and the lugger struck the starboard quarter of the yawl with a crash. Instantly Montgomery leaped, pistol in hand, upon the enemy.

At that instant a shrill scream of terror from the Greeks stayed my foot in the act to follow. I beheld Hood, with his raised arm holding a knife, his nostrils distended, but his eyes were not on me or toward the boat. They were directed across the empty, yelling sea and that gray mist of rain. These facts passed in a moment. I had an instantaneous impression of that devil with his implacable and imperturbable face, leering as it were upon me, and then I heard his shout, and his arm went up toward the sky. Montgomery had stumbled into the yawl, and his hand had knocked down the man at the helm. The yawl tugged and flapped in the heaving water. Hood leaped toward the helm. I saw him gesticulate at Montgomery, and it was only then that I looked in the direction in which his eyes were set.

those dreadful noises of the storm, a great shrill sound, and upon our port bows loomed the black hulk of an ocean liner making for the sea.

That was the impression of one moment. The next she was upon us, a monstrous menace of death. Her cut-water struck the yawl amidships.

Even to this hour I have never been able to discover the sequences of that tragic moment. I saw the yawl part and dissolve in a mist of water, and then my next recollection was of bumping and grinding in the boat against the iron shell of the liner. Windows full of lights passed before me, and voices called, and then we swung out again like a teetotum upon the wilderness of howling water.

The liner sheered off into the darkness, and there was nothing visible. Shepard kept the tiller hard, and we rolled and tossed together. The wind, as though its dreadful mission were fulfilled, dropped suddenly away, and we were conscious of a silence. Suddenly Sercombe's voice broke on us, startling me.

"Give me a little brandy, Grestorex."

I handed him the flask, and he set his lips to it. "Put your hand down here," he said, pointing to his breast. I did so. "That's the place. I know when I've got my dose. I was always good at that." He was silent for a moment. "I'm glad I saw the man die," he said presently. "I was right, after all. I swore I'd see him out. But I'm sorry about the boy."

I had nothing to say, and he sank into silence again.

"There's that steamer coming back, Grestorex," he said after a time.

I looked and saw that he was right. "They'll pick you up," he continued. Then: "See here, this thing's been badly managed. It's been a stomachful for all of us, but there's no need to make it worse than it is. But I'll tell you what. This gunboat is not going to be easy for you, not by a long slice. It looks ugly, Grestorex, and that's a fact. A yawl run down—there's no harm in that—but when it comes to letting blood, why, there's sure to be questions."

The lights of the liner gleamed a hundred yards away, and a voice hailed us.

"That's gospel truth," said Sercombe thoughtfully. "And the treasure's at the bottom of the sea, along with one good man at any rate. Once more he was silent, and once more he resumed speaking, with difficulty: 'I've got my gun. See here, this is my gun. I'll not play Jonah in the circumstances.'"

He ceased, and raising himself upon an arm, looked toward the liner. Then with a swift movement of his body he pulled himself upon the gunwale and rolled off into the water.

I uttered a cry and rushed to the edge of the heaving boat. There was no sign of body, alive or dead, in that tumultuous waste of waters.

Shepard sat trembling, with his hand on the tiller. He whimpered. The boat's head fell off and fell on, and we rocked on the disordered face of the sea.

I went over and took the tiller from his hand, and I put her nose toward the liner.

GOVERNMENT ON INSPECTION TOUR

Local Executive Went Over Intercolonial Railway Yesterday.

AN UP-TO-DATE ROAD.

When Completed the Line is Expected to Develop a Vast Tract of Country and Carry an Immense Traffic from Gaspe District.

Campbellton, N. B., Nov. 22.—All the members of the executive council of New Brunswick Hon. Messrs. Pugsley, LaBillois, Farris, Sweeney and Jones—made a thorough inspection of the Intercolonial Railway today. A special Pullman car was engaged for the visitors at Moncton and when they woke in the morning they found themselves a distance of twenty miles from Campbellton near the Upsalquitch River.

After taking breakfast at one of Mr. Malcolm's camps the train ran ten miles further, covering the third section, a distance of thirty miles. Considerable work has been done on the fourth section which was inspected by the visitors who walked through the new work and witnessed some very heavy rock cuttings.

In a space of half mile they saw five concrete bridges which are ready to receive the steel spans. The roadbed along the line is everything that could be desired. Contractor Malcolm was prepared during the summer to give shelter to 1,000 laborers and he has now 200 at work and will push things till he is prevented by deep snow. It is his intention next year to work at both ends of the road.

When this railway is completed and a bridge spans the Restigouche at Campbellton there will be an immense traffic carried on from the Gaspe district, the northern part of New Brunswick and the New England states. The increase of population which is bound to follow after the International is built will make Campbellton one of the most progressive towns in eastern Canada.

The members of the local government have shown a great interest in this line of railway and it must be satisfactory to the country to know that Contractor Malcolm is building an up-to-date road.

PEARY AND HIS BATTERED STEAMER ARRIVE AT SYDNEY.

Sydney, N. S. Nov. 23.—The Roosevelt arrived in port at 7 o'clock this morning Commander Peary and his crew. The vessel shows indications of severe strain under the ice and weather conditions of the polar regions. The stern is gone and the ship is leaking badly. She will undergo repairs here and then proceed to New York. The present crew will not go further in her. A new crew will be shipped.

The story of the strike among the men is in part true. They decided to stick by her when the necessary repairs had been effected at Hopedale. They considered her as seaworthy condition. The reports as being short of provisions are incorrect; there have been plenty on board and to spare. To maintain team coming over from Greenland to Labrador everything about the ship that could be used, including beams, stanchions, ladders, and even blubber, oil, lard and castor oil, of which there was a supply on board, had to be burned. The ship has been leaking since the 5th of July and her pumps have been going steadily since.

Peary will probably leave Sydney for New York tomorrow. He has nothing definite as to his future plans, but it is inferred that he will try again.

THE RESIGNATION OF

HON. C. S. HYMAN.

Unknown Whether or not He Will Offer in London.

Ottawa, Nov. 23.—The announcement of the resignation of Mr. Hyman came as a surprise in the Commons, and excited much speculation. At once a rumor was current that Mr. Hyman would be taken into the cabinet without portfolio, and would act as minister for a time. Mr. Hyman retaining the portfolio until he again returned. Mr. Hyman's resignation of his seat does not at the moment necessarily involve his retirement from the ministry. It is said he resigns because the revelations indicate that he did not obtain his seat fairly; that he desires to relieve the ministry and the party from the responsibility, and that he will again run in London. It is certain that his health is very poor that his attention to his official work and the anxiety brought on by the disclosures before the police court have materially affected his health. Whether in the existing state of affairs he will again offer in London may be regarded at the moment as uncertain, but it is certain that the seat is open.

Why pay two to five dollars when a twenty-five cent bottle of SHILOH will cure you as quickly?

It is of a conservative tendency and immediately relieves from a cough or inflamed condition of the throat.

The Salvation Army's

WORK OF IMMIGRATION.

The 13,000 who Came This Year

not Enough, will Bring 25,000 Next Year.

The Salvation Army has just closed a very successful year of immigration work, having brought out over thirteen thousand settlers to Canada, but seeing that this amount was very far short of meeting the great demand for farm help and laborers of various kinds, have decided to bring out sand, principally for agricultural purposes.

Ten steamers have been chartered, the first will arrive in Halifax about the last of February and will be followed by one each week at St. John or Halifax up to the last of April.

Adjutant Jennings, who represents the work for the Maritime Provinces, is anxious that all who need help should be supplied, while the immigrants are landing at Halifax and St. John, as it is very difficult to get them to come down this way after the boats begin to land at Quebec.

Last year a number of applications were not filled owing to the fact that some farmers delayed the matter until late in the season; those who will need laborers this winter or in the coming spring should apply now stating the date men will be required. This would prevent them having to wait a time or being disappointed altogether. Application forms can be secured at any time by applying to Adjutant Jennings, Box 477, Halifax, N. S.

Neil Gordon, Esq. an aged and highly respected resident of Strathadam died at his home Thursday after an illness of six weeks, aged 84 years.

The deceased gentleman was well and favorably known on the Miramichi where he has lived for a large portion of his life. He could talk entertainingly of the days of Gilmore & Rankine and of the early history of Newcastle. He is survived by one son and three daughters.

The funeral from his late residence on Saturday was largely attended. Interment being in St. James cemetery, Newcastle.
