BRAKEMAN DOYLE'S DEPLORABLE DEATH

While Opening a Vestibule Near Newcastle He Falls
from the Train.

BODY FOUND LATER.

Doyle Was One of the Most Popular Trainmen on the Intercolonial

Owen Doyle, one of the best known and most popular trainmen running between Moncton and Campbellton, was killed about two miles this side of Newcastle, Saturday morning. The body was found by sectionmen, lying across the track. No one saw the accident, but trainmen believe that in opening the vestibules Brakeman Doyle was thrown from the car by a lurch of the train, and killed by the fall. He was not missed until after the train arrived at Moncton. The news was received with deep regret in Campbellton. Mr Doyle being widely known here, and a general favorite with all, his cheery, genial manner having endeared him to a large circle of friends and acquaintances. Alexander McPherson, was the conductor on the express, but he, like others on board, can only surmise as to the circumstances which led to Mr Doyle's untimely end.

Baggage Master John Montgomery was probably the last person to have conversation with Mr Doyle. The latter was rear brakeman on the train, and shortly before reaching Newcastle, he came into the baggage car for a few minutes. He had been particularly bright and active during the morning, assisting with vigor in the handling of the baggage.

As the train was about two and a half miles from Newcastle, almost opposite the stone quarries. Brakeman Doyle, who was sitting on a trunk in the baggage car, remarked to Baggage Master Montgomery that it was about time to go back and open the vestibules on the rear of the train, in readiness for the arrival at Newcastle.

With these words he left the car and was not afterwards seen alive. As the vestibules of Brakeman Doyle's portion on the train were opened when Newcastle was reached it is believed that he had opened them, and then losing his balance through an unexpected lurch of the train, was thrown out the car door to his death beside the rails.

According to the trainmen, there is a good deal of oscillation of the cars at this point, and it would be an easy matter for a person standing on the car platform or steps to lose his balance.

There would seem to be something radically wrong with a system which would permit one of the train crew to be missing for ninety-one miles without the remainder of the crew being aware of the fact. It was not until Moncton was reached that the remainder of the train crew became aware that Brakeman Doyle had not travelled with them to Moncton. It was a part of Brakeman Doyle's duty to remove the outfit box which was suspended on the rear of the train and shortly after Moncton was reached, Brakeman Martin Hayley, also a member of the maritime crew, noticed that this had not been done. He looked around for Brakeman Doyle and failing to find him, notified Conductor McPherson. The latter going to the telegraph office, left instructions to wire Harcourt, and see if Brakeman Doyle had been left there, but as the Moncton operator was sending the message, the despatcher at Newcas-

HONORED BEFORE THEY MOVE AWAY

Consul Benedict and R. H.
Anderson Given Sail and Handsome Presents

MANY TAKE THE SAIL

Mayor Murray, Judge Mc-
Lachy and W. A. Mott
Make Addresses.

That J. S. Benedict and family and R. H. Anderson and family are held in high esteem by the people of Campbellton was substantially shown, Tuesday evening, when about two hundred ladies and gentlemen, representative of the leading social and business interests tendered them a sail on the Restigouche on board the Intercolonial Navigation Company's steamer, Lady Eileen and presented them with cut glass berry sets—one to each family.

Gaily decorated for the occasion the Lady Eileen cast off her moorings about eight o'clock. A heavy fog enveloped her, but this didn't deter those on board from taking up comfortable positions on the hurricane deck where the Campbellton Brass Band had already commenced to play sprightly airs.

The steamer went as far as Dalhousie and then turned. On the return trip, all on board gathered in the spacious saloon. Here, Mayor Murray was seated on an improvised platform. On his right sat Mr and Mrs. Benedict with the stars and stripes gracefully draped at their backs and on his left sat Mr and Mrs. Anderson with the Canadian ensign draped behind them. Mayor Murray arose and in a few well chosen words made the presentations. He spoke of the decesses that had gone forth from the directorate of the Bank of Nova Scotia and State department at Washington depriving Campbellton of two of its most estimable families. He referred to the cordial relationship existing between the Bank of Nova Scotia and the United States consulate on the one hand and their numerous clients in the Town of Campbellton and its environs on the other.

He dwelt on the high standing of the departing gentlemen as citizens and of the important part played by Mrs. Benedict and Mrs. Anderson in the social and intellectual development of the community. While the townspeople would regret the departure of Messrs Benedict and Anderson they were pleased to see that the transfers were in the nature of promotions and what would be Campbellton's loss would be St. John's gain. The Mayor hoped that when in after years Messrs Benedict and Anderson and their families looked upon the mementoes of the occasion they would be reminded of the esteem in which they were held in Campbellton.

Both Messrs Benedict and Anderson in thanking the Mayor and citizens for their kindness on behalf of themselves and families referred in feeling terms to their sojourn in Campbellton. They had spent several very happy years here and would never forget the kindness and generosity shown them. Judge McLachy made a few remarks eulogistic of the departing gentlemen and their families. He was followed by W. A. Mott, M. P. P. who said he had much pleasure in endorsing all that had been said, and so well said—in praise of their guests. Following this the assemblage sang "Auld Lang Syne."

When the steamer returned to her berth here about 11 o'clock all present had voted the occasion a most enjoyable one and one never to be forgotten.

A FULL FLEDGED "DETECTIVE," BUT--

Newcastle Sleuth was put on Track of Two Bold Bank
Robbers by Jokers.

GOT "TELEGRAM" HERE.

It Stated that Men Were in
This Vicinity and Sleuth Watched the Trains.

Detective Alphonse Goguen of Newcastle is down in the dumps. Small wonder! When a man discovers that he is as far from the goal of his ambition as ever, after being led to believe that he is within sight of it, he is very apt to feel depressed.

That's the way it was with Mr Goguen. It has long been his dream to emulate the deeds of the immortal Sherlock Holmes. With this end in view he became a member of the staff of the Webster Detective Agency, Indianapolis, Ind., and made Newcastle his headquarters. He pinned a regulation sleuth's badge conspicuously on his waistcoat and stood ready to unravel the deepest mystery or run down the most sought after crook. For a long time, however, there was nothing doing, and when he arrived in Campbellton last Friday on business for the International Correspondence Schools with which he is also connected, he had about given up all hope of ever distinguishing himself as a Hawkshaw. But, he had scarcely been here an hour when he received a "telegram" which ran—"Bank broken into by two Italians. About $27,000 stolen and two watchmen fatally shot. Men wanted supposed to be somewhere on the I. C. R. between St. John and Montreal. Two thousand dollars reward for their capture." Signed: Webster Detective Agency.

This was what Detective Goguen had long prayed for. Hastily notifying the police he boarded the down freight and went as far as Bathurst. He stayed in the Gloucester shirtown until the arrival of the Maritime express; then he came north again. Between Bathurst and Campbellton he went through the express several times, but failed to discover any Dagoes. He said afterwards that the sleuthing conductor refused to permit him to search the berths, and that he had to content himself with an examination of the passengers in the first and second class cars. He got off at Campbellton feeling rather disappointed, but not discouraged. The following day he was on the job again, bright and early. He watched every train which passed Campbellton, but all to no avail.

Meanwhile, all sorts of rumors were in circulation in Campbellton. One was to the effect that the Bank of Nova Scotia, St. John had been broken into; the night watchman shot and $27,000 stolen. I. C. R. Detective Noble desiring to get at the bottom of the matter,

BRITISHERS DIDN'T LIKE THEIR JOBS

Number Brought Out to Work on International Railway
"Flew the Coop".

ROUNDED UP HERE

When Taken Before Magistrate They Decided to go to Work

About two hundred and fifty Englishmen arrived here on Friday to work for Thomas Malcolm on the International railway. They went out on the road that night, but the following day there were defections from their ranks. A number who had found the conditions under which they had to labor not so congenial as they had anticipated "hit" the rails again, and reached Campbellton Saturday afternoon. It cost Mr. Malcolm $32 a piece to bring the men out, and as they were all under contract he had the runaways cajoled. Saturday night, Chief Gray and Policeman Savoy rounded up eight and took them before Justice of the Peace, McAlister. They were given the option of going back to work or going to jail to await trial. They decided to go back to work. Three others captured Monday morning also decided to return to work. They were all taken back by Officer Savoy at noon.

One reason why the men deserted, they said, was the poor beds they were given to sleep on; another was their inability to draw a half month's pay in advance. An Englishman who knew them, however, declared that they were a lazy lot, that they had never worked at home and didn't come out here with the intention of working.

Twenty-five who arrived for the Richard's Company were also taken on by Mr. Malcolm, there being no work at present for them with the company for which they came.

Fortteen cleared out from Malcolm's camp again this morning. Out of 270 only about 165 now remain.

hunted up Detective Goguen and together they went to the telegraph office where it was found out that no such telegram as Goguen had received had arrived. Detective Noble concluded that the whole thing was a joke. Goguen now believes that it was, and he would give a good deal to know who was responsible for it. The little joke cost him $4.50 in cash besides about twenty-four hours time.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Possibly, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden thing—the nerve that really is all at fault. This disease is not the failure, or Heart Nerve weakness, and must have more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the heart must continue to fail and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves. This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and failing hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this mental, retarding, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is also directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help. If you would have strong hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these nerves—re-establish them as needed, with

WANTED—A PARK

Campbellton is sorely in need of a suitable place where its boys and girls may romp at will during the long, delightful summer days, where nurse-maids may wheel dinky carriages laden with bouncing babies, where spooning couples may loll with hands exchanged and count the stars. In other words Campbellton needs a park—a playground for its boys and girls, its men and women. The present Council, ever alive to the best interest of the town, has had the matter under consideration for some time, but so far, no action has been taken. We trust, however, it will not delay action any longer and that before the summer has passed away, work on a park will have been commenced. The McMillan property is regarded by many as an ideal site for a park, and we understand that it is in the market. We should favor its purchase by the town for this purpose, provided that the present owners do not demand an unreasonable figure for it. Almost all the towns, of any size, in the maritime provinces have well kept parks, why not Campbellton? Let us maintain the reputation, which we now enjoy of having the most attractive town on the north shore in which to reside. Our Council can assist materially by providing a public park.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The Campbellton Brass Band offers to give an open air concert one evening a week during the months of July, August and September for $10. per concert. We trust that the Town Council to whom the offer was made, will see its way clear to accept it. It is a very reasonable offer, and we are sure the ratepayers as a whole, are heartily in favor of its acceptance.

Nothing will be gained by the Conservatives from a political standpoint by stirring up strife between a people that would be at peace. True Canadianism is found in the sentiments expressed by the eminent French Canadian who have recently addressed the electors of Ontario—the harmony and friendship which subsists between the two races, cannot be disturbed by two ambitious politicians such as Dr Sproule and Col. Sam Hughes.

The provincial press is somewhat agitated over the proposal of the Atlantic and Lake Superior Company to extend its road so that it will run through New Brunswick almost parallel to the International. The proposal, it is felt, embodies disaster for Mr Malcolm's road, whose bonds the province has guaranteed. As we pointed out in a recent issue a bridge across the Restigouche at Campbellton might lead the Atlantic and Lake Superior Company to abandon the idea of extending its road through New Brunswick.

The federal officers in Chicago are in a quandary as to what constitutes Scotch whiskey under the pure food law. Is it whiskey that smells like carbolic acid or whiskey that is made in Scotland? If it is the former the saloonists in Chicago do not care much, for they have lots of that brand, but if the only genuine Scotch whiskey is whiskey made in Scotland they will have to dump more than half of their stock into the sewers and get in a fresh consignment. In a matter of this kind, it is best to appeal to the experts, and the only experts are the Scotch experts. Their decision is that if you get a drink that seems to be sunlight imprisoned in nectar, and if after drinking it you find yourself in a heaven where the angels wear tartan kilts and plaids and play the bagpipes instead of the harp, it's all right. Have another. That's Scotch whiskey sure enough.

There is at least one man in St John who isn't going about with a winter-port bee in his bonnet. Alderman Kelly is the man. He is of the opinion that St. John would be better off if the whole winter-port idea were cut adrift. In time other prominent citizens of the New Brunswick metropolis will express the same opinion. During the past ten years the city of St John has expended in the neighborhood of two million dollars upon harbor improvements for the benefit of western grain shippers. If the expenditure has benefited St. John in any way it is not noticeable. There is absolutely no evidence that either the prosperity or the population have increased because of it, but, had the same amount of money been expended in industrial enterprises the city would doubtless have reaped a substantial gain. It has always been an unfathomable mystery to us why St John should be so desperately anxious to have a few steamers load and discharge cargoes at its piers during the winter months. Of course, it is nice to have them, but it seems to us that two million dollars is a mighty huge sum to expend in order to get them.

To compel a man to suffer more for the misdeeds of others than for his own is arbitrary and unjust. Yet this is precisely what Magistrate Dennison of Toronto did the other day when he sentenced one Flood, a baseball player to a term of fifteen days in jail without the option of a fine, for assaulting the umpire during the progress of a game. Because players had been assaulting umpires for years, and escaping scot free, Magistrate Dennison imposed this rather drastic sentence upon Flood. His honor's action reminds one of the school master, who, desiring to break his pupils of the habit of chewing gum during school hours stood one of the offenders on the floor and compelled him to chew gum incessantly for one whole day. The teacher compelled his pupil to suffer for the misconduct of others. Magistrate Dennison compelled Mr Flood to do the same. Had rowdiness in sport been an unheard of thing the Toronto ball player would doubtless have escaped with a nominal fine. But because it had occurred with alarming frequency the magistrate felt it incumbent upon himself to make an example of Flood. It seems altogether unfair. A man's offence should not be aggravated by the frequency with which it has been committed by others. In short the one hundredth man should not be compelled to suffer for the other ninety-nine. The same punishment should be meted out to all. To make an example of an individual often seems to be a rather judicious thing to do, but on reflection it is found to be most unjust and arbitrary.

SIDE LIGHTS.

A WRITER in the New York Sun declares that Canada is an old man's country—that it is governed by wizened up old men with antiquated ideas. Well, you see we have had the other kind, notably among whom were, Messrs Emerson and Hyman. We prefer the "has-beens".

TWO CHORUS girls are to wed Chicago millionaires. Satan will doubtless open a new ledger.

A HARTFORD preacher says party leaders help the devil. No, sir! They help themselves.

ACCORDING to the Quebec Telegraph a missing girl is described as "five feet six inches in height and wearing an open work waist." It might help out the description to add that she wore a side comb and sometimes sneezed.

SOME OF the open work shirt-waists this summer are said to be "haley frights."

"THE Adventures of Harry Orchard" is the latest piece of fiction among the "six best sellers," the heroism and crime almost justifying a dramatization.

Closing a letter in the "Bugle" a correspondent thanks the editor for the valuable space awarded him. "Valuable space"—that's rich! The letter just saved one of the St. John papers from being hacked to pieces.

The Bugle says, Silas Perry has gone to Moncton where he has accepted a lucrative position with a leading insurance company. As a matter of fact, Silas has been writing away for a job for the past six months and last week jumped at the chance to go to Moncton to work in the office of a slot machine insurance company which is opening a branch there. He gets six per and a small commission.

TOWN TOPICS

A handsome steam yacht owned by Fred Ayer, a wealthy Bangor lumberman is in port this week. Mr Ayer and a party of friends are fishing up at Dawson's.

Harry Jones has been appointed a policeman, temporarily, in place of officer Savoy, resigned. He will likely be appointed permanently at the next meeting of the town council.

Dominion Day was quietly observed here. The rain deterred most people from celebrating, but a few venturesome spirits went picnicking.

John White and W P Gray attended the high court of the I O F at St John this week. It was decided to hold the next annual court at Campbellton.

Alex Cook, who is believed to be the man who fired the shots at the fishing officers, Sunday, June 23rd at Dalhousie was arrested today on a warrant and taken before justice at the peace Basset. Bail was fixed at $2,000 for his appearance next Wednesday. W. A. Mott is defending him and Jas S. Harquail appears for the prosecution.

Last evening Chief Gray rounded up two more Englishmen who had escaped from Mr Malcolm's camp. They expressed their willingness to return to work, so after being kept in the lockup over night were placed on board the International train this morning. When a few miles from here, however, they jumped from the train and have not been seen since.

Two special trains passed through here early Wednesday morning, bearing a number of provincial people on the pilgrimage to the shrine of St Anne de Beaupre. Father Roy was in charge of the party and was accompanied by St. John's representative Bishop Casey. The return will be made, Friday evening. The pilgrimage is conducted by the Sisters of Charity.

The Summer school for Sunday School workers of the Presbytery of the Miramichi is on here this week in St Andrew's church. Three sessions are held daily, the first one having been held last Tuesday evening. They are addressed by Prof. Richard Davidson of Toronto University and Prof. Walter C. Murray, of Dalhousie University, Toronto. Both these gentlemen are speakers of eminence and eloquence and are well worth going miles to hear. The sessions which are open to the public will be continued until Saturday. About eighty delegates are in attendance.

John Neilson, a sailor on board bark Ralph did not want to go to sea again. He tried to run away but was captured by the mate and captain and handed over to two sailors for safe keeping. He broke away from the sailors and ran away again. Over taken by the mate on Ramsey street he drew a knife and it would have gone hard with the mate had not Chief of Police Grey arrived on the scene. He handcuffed Neilson and took him before Magistrate Matheson who fined him $5, and costs and ordered him back to his ship. The Ralph sailed this morning with Neilson aboard.

L. S. Channell of the Sherbrooke (Que) Daily Record, who is travelling in the lower provinces commences a letter to his paper as follows:—"The first place of any size reached in New Brunswick, going east on the Intercolonial Railway is Campbellton, on Chaleur Bay. It is a junction point of the railway, and a growing town. Here the change in time from Eastern to Atlantic Standard takes place, and watches are set forward just one hour. Some of the scenery for which New Brunswick is so famous is to be found around Chaleur Bay, while probably no part of America offers greater opportunities for the measures of hunting and fishing than this part of New Brunswick, though all parts excel in this sport."

The annual meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was held on Tuesday, June 25th. Reports received showed that much faithful work had been done in the various departments. With Edged Tools

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN
Author of "The Sowers," "Roder's Career," "From One Generation to Another," Etc.

Copyright, 1898, by HARPER & BROTHERS

Jack Meredith gave her the lead before long.

"Millicent," he said without a vestige of embarrassment, "has consented to be openly engaged now."

Lady Cantourne nodded comprehensively.

"I think she is very wise," she said. "I know she is very wise," she added, turning and laying her hand on Jack's arm. The two phrases had quite a different meaning. "She will have a good husband."

"So you can tell everybody now," chimed in Millicent in her silvery way.

Lady Cantourne was not very communicative during that refined little tea a tris, but she listened smilingly to Jack's optimistic views and Millicent's somewhat valueless comments.

"I am certain," said Millicent, at length boldly attacking the question that was in all their minds, "that Sir John will be all right now. Of course, it is only natural that he should not like Jack to—to get engaged yet. Especially before, when it would have made a difference to him in money, I mean. But now that Jack is independent—you know, auntie, that Jack is richer than Sir John."

Lady Cantourne was rather thoughtful at that moment. She could not help coming back and back to Sir John. "Of course," she said to Jack, "we must let your father know at once. The news must not reach him from an outside source."

"I will write and tell him," said Jack quietly.

Even minerals and lovers must bow to necessities, and Jack Meredith was not the man to outstay his welcome.

He saw Lady Cantourne glance at the clock. Clever as she was, she could not do it without being seen by him.

So he took his leave, and Millicent went to the head of the stairs with him.

CHAPTER XXI.

OF late Sir John had felt a singular desire to sit down whenever opportunity should offer, but he had always been found standing on the hearth rug by the butler, and, hard old aristocrat that he was, he would not yield to the somewhat angular blandishments of the stiff backed chair.

He stood for a few moments with his back to the smouldering fire, and, being quite alone, he perhaps forgot to stiffen his neck, for his head drooped, his lips were unsteady; he was a very old man.

A few minutes later, when he strode into the dining room, where butler and footman awaited him, he was erect, imperturbable, impenetrable.

At dinner it was evident that his keen brain was hard at work. He forgot one or two of the formalities which were religiously observed at that solitary table. He hastened over his wine, and then he went to the library. There he wrote a telegram, slowly, in his firm, ornamental handwriting.

It was addressed to Gordon, Loango, and the gist of it was—"Wire whereabouts of Oscar—when he may be expected home."

At half past 8 Jack arrived. Sir John was awaiting him in the library, sitting in his high backed chair, so carefully dressed as for a great reception.

He rose when his son entered the room and they shook hands. There was a certain air of concentration about both, as if they each intended to say more than they had ever said before. The coffee was duly brought. This was a revival of an old custom. In bygone days Jack had frequently come in thus and they had taken coffee before going together in Sir John's carriage to one of the great social functions at which their presence was almost a necessity. Jack had always poured out the coffee—tonight he did not offer to do so.

"I came," he said suddenly, "to give you a piece of news which I am afraid will not be very welcome. Millicent and I have decided to make our engagement known."

"You know," said Sir John gravely, "that I am not much given to altering my opinions. I do not say that they are of any value; but, such as they are, I usually hold to them. When you did me the honor of mentioning this matter to me last year, I gave you my opinion."

"And it has in no way altered?"

"In no way. I have found no reason to alter it."

"Will you, at all events, give me your reasons?" he asked. "I am not a child."

"I think," he said, "that it would be advisable not to ask them."

"I should like to know why you object to my marrying Millicent," persisted Jack.

"Simply because I know a bad woman when I see her," retorted Sir John deliberately.

"I am sorry you have said that," said the son.

"Just," continued the father, "as I know a good one."

He paused, and they were both thinking of the same woman, Jocelyn Gordon.

Sir John had his say about Millicent Chyne, and his son knew that that was the last word. She was a bad woman. From that point he would never move.

There was a long silence, while the two men sat side by side gazing into the fire.

"I am getting too old to indulge in the luxury of pride," said the father at length. "I will attend your marriage. I will smile and say pretty things to the bridesmaids. Before the world I will consider you the daughter of my wife. But I bow to the force of circumstances. I admit that you have a perfect right to marry whom you choose—in two months' time."

So Jack took his leave.

"In two months' time," repeated Sir John, when he was alone, with one of his twisted, cynical smiles—"in two months' time—qui vivra vera."

There are some places in the world where a curse seems to brood in the atmosphere. Masala was one of these. Perhaps these places are accursed by the deeds that have been done there. Who can tell?

Could the trees—the two gigantic elms that stood by the river's edge—could these have spoken, they might perhaps have told the tale of this little inland station in that country where, as the founder of the hamlet was in the habit of saying, no one knows what is going on.

All went well with the retreating column until they were almost in sight of Masala, when the flotilla was attacked by no less than three hippopotamuses. One canoe was sunk and four others were so badly damaged that they could not be kept afloat with their proper complement of men. There was nothing for it but to establish a camp at Masala and wait there until the builders had repaired the damaged canoes.

The walls of Durnovo's house were still standing, and here Guy Oscar established himself with as much comfort as circumstances allowed. He caused a temporary roof of palm leaves to be laid on the charred beams, and within the principal room, the very room where the three organizers of the great simlacine scheme had first laid their plans, he set up his simple camp furniture.

Oscar was too great a traveler, too experienced a wanderer, to be put out of temper by this enforced rest. The men had worked very well hitherto. It had, in its way, been a great feat of generalship, this leading through a wild country of men unprepared for travel, scantily provisioned, disorganized by recent events. No accident had happened, no serious delay had been incurred, although the rate of progress had necessarily been very slow. Nearly six weeks had elapsed since Oscar with his little following had turned their backs forever on the simlacine plateau. But now the period of acute danger had passed away. They had almost reached civilization. Oscar was content.

When Oscar was content he smoked a slower pipe than usual, watching each cloud of smoke vanish into thin air. He was smoking very slowly this third evening of their encampment at Masala. There had been heavy rain during the day, and the whole lifeless forest was dripping with a continuous, ceaseless clatter of heavy drops on the tropic foliage, with an amaginated sound like a widespread whisper.

Oscar was sitting in the windowless room without a light, for a light only attracted a myriad of heavy winged moths. He was seated before the long French window, which, since the ash had gone, had been used as a door. Before him in the glimmering light of the mystic Southern Cross the great river crept unctuously, silently to the sea. It seemed to be stealing away unperceptibly while the forest whirled of it. In its surface the reflection of the great stars of the southern hemisphere ran into little streaks of silver, shimmering away in darkness.

All sound of human life was still. The natives were asleep. In the next room Joseph in his hammock was just on the barrier between the waking and the sleeping life, as soldiers learn to be. Oscar would not have needed to raise his voice to call him to his side.

The leader of this hurried retreat had been through there for two hours. The slimy moving surface of the river had entered into his brain; the restless silence of the African forest alone kept him awake. He hardly realized that the sound momentarily gaining strength within his ears was that of a paddle—a single, weakly irregular paddle. It was not a sound to wake a sleeping man. It came so slowly, so gently through the whisper of the dripping leaves that it would enter into his slumbers and make itself part of them.

Guy Oscar only realized the meaning of that sound when a black shadow crept on to the smooth evenness of the river's breast. Oscar was eminently a man of action. In a moment he was on his feet and in the darkness of the room there was the gleam of a rifle barrel. He came back to the window—watching.

He saw the canoe approach the bank. He heard the thud of the paddle as it was thrown upon the ground. In the gloom, to which his eyes were accustomed, he saw a man step from the boat to the shore and the canoe up. The silent midnight visitor then turned and walked up toward the house. There was something familiar in the gait—the legs were slightly bowed. The man was walking with great difficulty, staggering a little at each step. He seemed to be in great pain.

Guy Oscar laid aside the rifle. He stopped and looked to the open window.

"Is that you, Durnovo?" he said, without raising his voice.

"Yes," replied the other. His voice was muffled as if his tongue were swollen, and there was a startling break in it.

Oscar stepped aside and Durnovo passed into his own house.

"Got a light?" he said in the same muffled way.

In the next room Joseph could be heard striking a match, and a moment later he entered the room, throwing a flood of light before him.

"Good God!" cried Oscar. He stepped back as if he had been struck, with his hand shielding his eyes.

"Save us!" ejaculated Joseph in the same breath.

The thing that stood there, sickening their gaze, was not a human being at all. Take a man's eyelids away, leaving the round balls staring, blood streaked; cut away his lips, leaving the grinning teeth and red gums; shear off his ears—that which is left is not a man at all. This had been done to Victor Durnovo. Truly the vengeance of man is crueler than the vengeance of God!

Could he have seen himself, Victor Durnovo would never have shown that face, or what remained of it, to a human being. He could only have killed himself. Who can tell what cruelties had been paid for, piece by piece, in this loathsome mutilation? The slaves had wreaked their terrible vengeance; but the greatest, the deepest, the most inhuman cruelty was in letting him go.

"They've made a pretty mess of me," said Durnovo, in a sickening, tremulous voice, and he stood there with a terrible caricature of a grin.

Joseph set down the lamp with a groan and went back into the dark room beyond, where he cast himself upon the ground and buried his face in his hands.

"O Lord!" he muttered. "O God in heaven, kill it, kill it!"

Guy Oscar never attempted to run away from it. He stood slowly gulping

"Good God!" cried Oscar.

ing down his nauseating horror. His teeth were clenched; his face, through the sunburn, livid; the blue of his eyes seemed to have faded into an ashen gray. The sight he was looking on would have sent three men out of five into gibbering idiocy.

Then at last he moved forward. With averted eyes he took Durnovo by the arm.

"Come," he said, "lie down upon my bed. I will try to help you. Can you take some food?"

Durnovo threw himself down heavily on the bed. There was a punishment sufficient to expiate all his sins in the effort he saw that Guy Oscar had had to make before he touched him. He turned his face away.

WOMAN'S WORLD

THE TOUCH OF BLACK.

A hint of black gives a surprising amount of smartness to many a light summer frock. The pretty surprise bodice frocks have narrow lines of black liberty or taffeta bordering the folds and repeated very slightly in the sleeves, although no black appears elsewhere in the gown.

THE NEW GUIMPES.

The surprise bodice finish and wide kimono sleeves call for the sheer and dainty neck and sleeve pieces. These are shown in the form of deep guimpes, exquisitely fine, and ranging from simple effects, with lace inserting to elaborate and costly designs to suit the demands of simple or elaborate gowns.

OSTRICH PLUMES WORN.

The plumage of the season is something to enthuse over, the dressy hats are sporting ostrich plumes by the dozen. The generous size of the summer models allows much latitude, which has been taken advantage of. The crown covered with nodding feathers (is perhaps the most chic, while another idea is the Alsatian bow effect, carried in upstanding feathers directly in front. On the right person these are decidedly smart.

NOVEL EFFECTS.

Every day sees the development of many new and novel effects in trimmings, one of the latest fads being cretonne applique. So far this has only been seen on the imported models. The idea was broached in the spring hats, some of the French models. The idea was broached in the spring hats, some of the French models showing facings of chintz and cretonnes. It goes without saying that such effects must be handled with discretion and clever manipulation.

THE BLOUSE SALES.

There is no denying the charm of the fine lingerie blouse. It is a charming garment, infinitely more feminine, more becoming and more coquettish than the old time shirtwaist, but unfortunately the abuse of the blouse mode is more in evidence than its uses, and much cheap trimming and orate effects are to be seen on every side.

The blouse sales are under way, and many really good models are to be picked up at very reasonable prices. In the hurry and excitement of a sale many women are inclined to make hurried selections and only find out their mistakes after the laundry has revealed many glaring faults. The dressing and finishing on a new article will frequently give quite good effects to shoddy materials, and the skillful way in which many of the attractive "fronts" are built up of finer stuff than the rest of the waist requires experience or advice in order to detect the difference. Of course there are women who never care what the back looks like as long as they make a good show of trimming on the front but there are others who much prefer less pretentious effects and finer materials. They can all find much to please them on the counters these days, but it is necessary to look closely and select with due allowance for tubing, which will bring out the quality of the laces and embroideries most appallingly.

Jokes.

"Speaking of borrowing, I have an acquaintance who has had a brand new overcoat of mine for a long time and he won't give it up." "Who is it?" "My tailor."

Those whose hearts have been moved by the recent terrible distress in China will be glad to learn that the China famine fund monies cabled by the 'Montreal Witness' amounted in all to $10,000, most of which was cabled during the last two weeks of the fund.

These gifts were received from all over the Dominion, and a good many more 'Witness' readers were preparing to remit when they learned that the fund was closed.

The 'Witness' has always lent itself to this work of receiving and forwarding subscriptions for worthy causes, and vast sums have been collected by it for such purposes, one fund, the Armenian Relief fund alone amounting to over $15,000. The amount of work and expense involved in receiving, acknowledging and forwarding these large sums of money is very much greater than the general public can at all realize, but the 'Witness' has done it gladly and ungrudgingly, making no charge for services or for newspaper space used.

James H. Robertson, St. John has announced his intention of giving annually a silver medal and $50. as a prize for the best marksman in the province. Here is a chance for Campbellton's crack shots.

Last week the local government sent a tug and two barges here to facilitate the work of the dredge. Hitherto the dredge lost considerable time in going down river to dump. Now this work is done by the tug and barges and the dredging continues without interruption.

Policeman Savoy resigned from the force this week and went on duty on Tuesday as policeman at the I. C. R. station in place of Officer Dobson, who has resigned. Savoy proved himself a faithful officer and his services will be missed by the town. His successor has not yet been appointed.

The soldiers in the Newcastle 12th field battery were quite badly scared Sunday morning at Camp Sussex. They had just started for drill when they were called to a halt, all the men were quarantined and Dr. Harris, of Moncton, ordered a tent tore down, and the eight men who slept in it were placed apart from the other soldiers. The cause of the trouble was a supposed case of smallpox. One of the men's face broke out in a rash, but it was found that it was not even a case of measles.

The closing exercises in connection with the Campbellton High School took place on Friday morning.
