The valley stream swelled to the dimensions of a mighty torrent and sweeping along, it carried with it huge blocks of rock and ice. Then the bathers tried to escape, but it was too late. The entire northern slope of Mount

Kasbek, with the glacier above, began to move rapidly. Village after village was swept away, and eyerything in the path of the landslide was destroyed. CROWN JEWELS IN PAWN. A dispatch to the London Daily Express from Lisbon says that a rumor that has been current for a time has developed into a grave scanday. It is alleged that the Government, owing to its need for money, has pawned the crown jewels, which are worth a fabulous amount. They included the famous diamond-incrusted scepter of Don Juan IV. which is valued at $5,000,000. The precious gems embedded in the royal crown are said to have been taken out and paste substituted, and the real gems have been sold or pledged to the Bank of Portugal. It is reported that the bank is pressing the Government for repay-

RIOTING IN AGRAM. Many houses in Agram, Hungary, were wrecked and sacked Tuesday night. The rage of the mob was first directed against the house of Capt Witas, a retired army officer, who had fired on the crowd, hitting a man in the breast. The rioters erected barricades, smashed the windows, and were proceeding to storm the place when the military dispersed them. The mob, however, soon returned, and forced their way into the house, which they wrecked, and threw the furniture into the street. Capt. Witas and his wife escaped. The rioters then sacked the houses of a number of Servians. Mobs plundered Servian shops, piled their stocks in the streets and set fire to them, Capt. Witas was badly

SPLENDID PROSPERITY OF WESTERN CANADA ASSURED

Mr. Charles S. Hyman, M.P., of the development there is that it is not a boom, but is the result of a very Enthusiastic Over Outlook.

Mr. Charles S. Hyman, M. P., who

day he told The Advertiser of his trip. DEVELOPMENT OF THE SOO.

The party was fortunate in being at Sault Ste. Marie just at the time when the first steel rails ever manufactured in Canada were being made. "This was but one illustration of the not visited the Son before the present enterprises began can realize what an astonishing change has been brought about. Not many years ago the Can-adian Soo was practically at a standstill, and now it is forging ahead very quickly. The Clerque establishments there have some of the most wonderful labor-saving machinery that I ever saw in my life. We saw steel manufactured and turned into rails without being touched, you might say, by fortunate combination of great natural resources."

IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Mr. Hyman was entirely sanguine about the outlook for the future in British Columbia, but he said that for the immediate present the prospects there are not bright.

"The country just at present," said, "is in an unfortunate position. has just returned from a lengthy tour The mining industry is practically at of the Far West, has come back more a standstill. Yester-day he told The Advertiser of his trip dissatisfaction in the Rossland country about a tax on mines imposed by the local Government. That and the labor trouble, which they have been having at Crow's Nest Pass, has not helped things any. "When we were on the coast," Killed, 5,774; wounded, 23, Mr. Hyman said, "we spent a day at wounds or disease, 16,163. the fisheries. There are 45 canneries on the Fraser River. The catch this really marvelous development under year has not been good. Last year it which that district is progressing," amounted to 1,000,000 cases, and this year, to only 270,000, so that things are comparatively quiet in that industry. We found considerble change and improvement at Vancouver and Victoria. These seemed to be the only places that are progressing. It is only fair to say, though, that the people are bound-lessly confident in their country, and I am too. They look for a resumptoin of the work in the smelter. The lumbering industry is going ahead rapidly. It is only a temporary distress, and the ounting to $18,000. TERRITORIES ARE PROSPEROUS. Mr. Hyman said that there is no doubt whatever of the splendid condition the Territories are in at the present time. The whole immense stretch of country east of the Rockies, he be-floating dry dock there and have built up a big industry. When Mr. Hyman was in Victoria H. M. S. Amphion was in their dry dock being repaired, the Bullens having the contract

lieves to be just at the portal of a great period of prosperity. He said it is not a boom that is responsible for the largely increased interest that is being taken in the West. The country itself is compelling the attention which it is receiving. Its tremendous size and remarkable fertility, together with the rapidly increasing area of cultivated land, and an improving system of transportation are the factors that are making for the rapid development and wealth of the Canadian West. In the Territories Mr. Hyman said that ranching remains the chief industry, but that agriculture was fast becoming

It was the same in Manitoba as in the territories. An assured crop of unprecedented proportions was having its natural effect upon the people. "We saw the crops being harvested in Minnesota," Mr. Hyman said, "and we saw the crops in Manitoba immediately af-ter. There was no comparison between them. While we were in Manitoba we took a special trip of two days 500 miles into Southern Manitoba. It was an exceptional chance to see the wheat fields at their best. Part of the crop was standing, part was cut, some was in the shock, and in places they were threshing. As far as the eye could reach in all that 500 miles we could see nothing but wheat fields. It was a revelation of the immensity of the crop this year, when we considered that we could have gone the same or longer distances in any other direction, and have witnessed similar scenes. Mr. Hyman was quite confident that the crop will be harvested all right, and be carried to the sea quicker this year than ever before in the history of the west. The question of transportation is the great question of the time, both for Manitoba and the territories. It was the question which the members from the west most earnestly discussed at the last Parliament, and the prominence that was given it then has of the House, is himself greatly interested in the problem, and gave it close undertaking to move close on to one hundred million bushels," he said, "but from what I saw and learned out west I believe that it is going to be done this year in such a way that the wheat growers in Manitoba and the territories will have no cause for complaint. that it ever was to carry the wheat down to the sea. They have put forward immense efforts to meet the situ ation. The same is true of the Can-

able to handle the crop satisfactorily this year. This means a great deal to the westerners, as a slight loss on each bushel totals up to an enormous ada Northern, which will materially aid in getting the crop to the mar-ket. The erection of a number of small elevators throughout the country, and the increased elevator capacity at the lake terminals, will guard the wheat growers from loss. The C. P. R. offi-

AT THE CAPE

Premier Sprigg Holds Office by Sufferance.

ANOMALOUS SITUATION

Boers Abandon Pretensions to Reopen Surrender Terms-Another Conference. London, Sept. 4.-The anomalous situation in Cape Colony is regarded with misgivings by the Unionist party and with ill-concealed delight by a good many Liberals. Sir Gordon Sprigg now holds office solely owing to the support which he receives from the Africander Bond, and Cape Colony has virtually passed under the domination of the very organization which was in some measure at all events responsible for the war.

SPRIGG'S DIFFICULTIES. Sir Gordon Sprigg is blamed for aving allowed himself to drift into an ignominious position. He is apparenttrying to govern by playing off the Bond against the Progressives, but he will scarcely be able to accomplish ple not yet settled were simply living such a difficult feat. His reply to the deputation of loyal Dutchmen has imigration has just started. He said given great offense in many quarters, that the Americans who are coming and Mr. Chamberlain is being urged over are the best kind of settlers. They to reconsider the question of the suspension of the constitution as the only prise with them; they understand our in- method of carrying on the governstitutions, and, he believes, will rapidly assimilate and become excellent dizing all the fruits of the war.

BOER SCHEMES Experience has proved that it is best to be skeptical of the assertions as to what the Boer generals now here are seeking to achieve. It has been known for some time that they were seeking a locus standi from which to deal with the Government. While it is true they have been courteously declining the advances of prominent persons, such as Mr. Victor Cavendish, M. P., nephew of the Duke of Devonshire who wished them to spend some days at his country mansion, and other invitations from prominent men for them to join house parties, still is has been impossible for the British Cabinet to confer with them while they held the views they did. TO CONFER WITH CHAMBER-LAIN.

Now comes the announcement, made by the Telegraph, a ministerial organ, that "Colonial Secretary Chamberlain has arranged to meet the Boer generals in London on Friday. He be accompanied by Gen. Kitchener. The difficulties in the way of such a meeting have been overcome by the abandonment by the Boer generals of their pretensions to reopen the terms of surrender, signed by Gen. Kitchener, Lord Milner and themselves at Pretoria on May 31."

A POLITICAL AGENT. The Boer generals, the moment they landed in England, suggested a conference. They made the meeting conditional upon certain matters to which the Government demurred. These have now been waived by the Boers. They have a political agent, Mr. Fischer, here to consult with during their dealings with Mr. Chamberlain. The same paper, which printed, with all others, the authentication of the three Beor leaders that they were delegated on behalf of their fellow-Boom to come to Europe, now say that they "only in a very vague sense represent

OUR AUSTRALIAN GUESTS

Sir Edmund Barton and Sir John Forrest Banqueted at Toronto.

Toronto, Ont., Sept. 4.-Sir Edmund Barton, Sir John Forrest and party were the guests last night of the Toronto Board of Trade at a banquet held at the Toronto Club.

In his speech Sir Edmund Barton, after referring to the need for an independent Canadian news service.spoke of the solidarity of the self-governing portions of the British Empire, and laid stress on their being self-governing on their autonomy. He discussed the relation of colonial to imperial politics, pointing out that the selfgoverning colonies, when in twenty years they have the same population as Britain, will not submit without having a voice in the question. He then discussed the imperial conference, paying a tribute to the manner in which British statesmen had grasped the principle of colonial autonomy. Touching on imperial trade, he pointed out the need for elasticity in any propositions made, as they would have to run the gauntlet of many parliaments, each with their own fiscal systems. It would not do to draw up a scheme which would be upset by the defeat of one of the many governments represented. All that could be done was a general understanding that each premier would propose measures of preference. They must either lower the duties against British goods, or leave those duties where they were, and raise the duties against foreigners.

When the coal stocks are dumped on the market, as they must be if this thing goes on, they will be bought by men who have sense enough to settle this strike for the good of all concerned. I would buy them myself, with the help of some associates.

CONVERSION OF MARSHALL HUNT

Being a border town, San Marcos, condone all his other shortcomings had a hard time shaking off its "wild west" atmosphere. To be sure, the hooting, hard riding, pistol-shooting cowboy no longer galloped on the sidewalks or "shot up" the saloons, but there was still a remnant of the old "hard" element, gamblers, drinkers, cowmen and young adventurers from the East, who refused to submit to the willing dominance of the reformers. The women had a social econom-The moving reason for this course ics club, a culture society, a Chautauqua circle and a number of lesser enterprises devoted to the uplift of the town. The billboards had been spotted with yellow cards reading. "Be Sanit-ary and Be Sane"; the Ladies' Sanita tion Society had obtained an ordinance making expectoration on the streets, sidewalks or other public places a misdemeanor. The movement for culture and reform was strong. It divided the social aspect of the town in clear, well-understood lines; it cut a figure in politics; supplied the town debating society with topics and net-

The greatest blow which the better element had ever sustained was the murder of Dr. Wilcox, pastor of the First Church, and his only son, a boy of 12. They had been waylaid, murdered and robbed by a cattle rustler named Terry Dunlap while they were driving from Ojo, where the pastor sometimes preached, to San Marcos where he had lived. Terry Dunlap had been a ranger with the reputation of a college education. He turned outlaw because he was drummed out of the Texas service, and for three years he had been the terror of all that country which lies between the lower Nueces and the Pecos, and even across the Rio Grande, where he sometimes forayed. The murder of Dr. Wilcox and his son was still an absorbing topic. though it had been done more than a year ago. The widow and her daughter, who was 18 years old, yet lived in the little stone rectory in San Mar-cos, but the church was closed, except when an itinerant clergyman hap-pened along. None of these errant preachers, most of whom were search of health, "cared to remain." Perhaps they were frightened by the story of Dr. Wilcox's fate, perhaps the town looked "rough," but at any rate the First Church had no regular

Next to the Wilcox murder the chief source of society gossip in the town was the "love affair" between Luke Hunt and Bessie Wilcox. Luke was the town marshal, 6 reet 1, 30 years old, an ex-ranger, silent as a sphinx with a quiet smile and a seldom laugh but ready to shoot-too ready, said the reformers-and consumed with an ambition to be sheriff of the county. That Bessie was inclined to smile upon his patient suit was no secret. was the opposition of Mrs. Wilcox. The chief objection to Luke was that "he was never seen inside of the church." Then "he drank," not to excess perhaps, but the reform element was "dead set" against liquor, and Luke Hunt "used" it. He had been in the rangers with Terry Dunlap, and Luke's enemies went so far as to whisper that the marshal connived at the murderer's escape. Nobody said anything like that "out loud," but his oponents were using it to stop Luke's chances of being sheriff.

As for Luke, he had three ruling ambitions. He meant to marry Bessie Wilcox, he was determined Sheriff of Rico county, and he would have given his right hand for a fair shot at Terry Dunlap. In a certain sense the last, though most remote, was the most important, for the capnew $6,000 racing automobile. While ture or killing of the outlaw would give him a cinch on the shrievalty and in the eyes of Mrs. Wilcox. In the meanwhile, however, the Wilcox home was denied him, the reform element was working tooth and nail for Deacon Black, and the love affairs of Luke Hunt as well as the political aspiration of Marshal Hunt were withering between the cross-fires of rivalry and It was at this time that a fair-

Mrs. Wilcox "took him the young ladies of the Economic and Culture clubs lionized him, the leading spirits of the better element took up a subscription to launch him upon his pastoral career, and he leaped at once into popular favor by making nightly evangelical incursions into the tough district "across the tracks." He was eloquent. There could be no doubt about that. Luke Hunt listened one night while he was har-anguing a crowd of railroad men and cow punchers at the Plaza saloon, and went away convinced that the rew clergyman was a "whirlwind for talk." Before Sunday the new preacher, whose name was St. Clair—Rev. St. Clair Dubose-sought out the marshall and complained that beer was being sold in tin cans to boys by some of the "groggeries." Luke didn't like the reverend gentleman's lisp, but he promised to "look into it," and they parted after Mr. Dubose had invited Luke to attend the Sunday service. certain half an hour before the Sunday morning service commenced. Not even in the days of old Dr. Wilcox had there been such a turnout, but the most astonishing feature of the vival was the presence of Marshal

The success of the new paster was Hunt. He came a bit late, and Dr. Dubose was on the point of beginning his sermon when Luke walked slowly down the aisle to the front pew. The preacher looked a bit disconcerted for a few seconds as the gigantic officer came in, but quickly regained his composure and even smiled with quiet satsfaction as he recognized the importance of this recruit. The congregation, according to their prejudices, took different views of the sensational appearance of the mar-shal. The women thought it was a bid for Mrs. Wilcox's favor; the politicians said it was a play for the reform vote; everybody stared at Luke until the sermon began. It was a corker. The women were in ecstasies, the men were surprised and edified "Set your affections on things above not on things of earth," said the preacher, raising his dark eyes heavenward, "for your life is hid with Christ in God. ### Letters to the Editor.

To the Editor of The Advertiser: May I take the opportunity in expressing my thoughts, through your valuable columns, in answer to an item that came out in one of the daily papers several days ago, with the heading. "Dealers Sore On Farmers"? The local dealer or dealers who had this item published states that there may be another side to the story, but that the dealers say not. The farmers are not a class of people who make a habit of placing all their little misfortunes before the eyes of the public. When they are imposed upon for the wrongdoing of some black sheep, as you state them, they are compelled to defend themselves. This local dealer also states that the farmers are a reputable lot. If so, why does he call them a suspicious class? I do not write this item with the opinion of defending the farmers who sold the hogs and oats to the local dealers. The farmers say that bargains are being broken by the wholesale, and that the local dealers show lack of principle. I have personally known and witnessed a local dealer to stop a lady and two small boys with a load of wheat on Wellington street, and offer her a price far below the market price. This gentleman also offered a small sum of money to bind the bargain, but fortunately the kind offer was not accepted. I have known of a farmer to sell a load of oats to a local dealer, receive a ticket, and when he delivered the oats the buyer refused to take them until the farmer called a police officer and presented to him the ticket. The local dealer was at once warned to take the oats, and give the promised price. I have known a farmer to sell a load of wood to a local dealer, and after delivering the wood into man's cellar was refused pay, and told to take his wood away, as he brought it there. The farmer took the wood away, as he considered this gentleman was not worth making a dispute over him. I have known a farmer to sell a load of hay to a local dealer, and after delivering the load into a long, narrow lane, he was refused help to put off the load. As the lane had entrance from one end only, the farmer had to put off the hay alone. Another deal-

The question asked above was suggested by an unusual sight on lower Fulton street this morning. An organ grinder with one of the old-style instruments, which always, in the reporter's boyhood days, not so long gone by, was accompanied by a "monk," passed by on his way to the upper residential districts. Instead of a monkey, however, he had with him a pug dog, which he led by a string. In answer to a question by the reporter the organ grinder said:

"Da monk he maka da lot trooble; da olds gal she keek, say da Etalian hurta da monk, da cop he pulla me and da monk in. I pay da lot mon for da monk; had trooble. Da dog he pleasa kid same da monk, no costa mooch, no so mooch seek, no trooble." This explanation was perfectly satisfactory to the organ grinder, who evidently gets as many pennies with the dog as an attraction as he would with

OPERATORS MAKE NO CONCESSIONS

Status of Coal Strike Remains Unchanged.

LABOR COMMISSIONER'S REPORT

No Confidence Between the Bosses and the Men-Conciliation Committee Proposed.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 3.-President G. F. Baer, of the Reading Company, and U. S. Senators Quay and Penrose held a long conference this afternoon in the executive offices of the Reading Company in this city, at which the anthracite coal miners' strike was thoroughly discussed. At the conclusion of the conference. Presdent Boer issued a lengthy reply to the two senators. Among other things he said:

"I recognize that it is your right, and your duty as senators, representing the great State of Pennsylvania, to do whatever can legitimately be done to end a strike that so seriously affects business and brings so much suffering to the women and children of the coal regions. The newspaper's story that I said 'The strike was a private effair which did not concern the public' is a reckless fabrication. If we yield to the extravagent demands of the miners we will lose money. If we attempt to increase the price of coal we will destroy the industries depending upon anthracite fuel. If we increase the price of the domestic sizes we will be called robber barons, oppressors of the poor, monopolists and enemies of mankind. We have concluded, therefore, that our duty to oursilves and to the public will best be served by standing firm. You cannot arbitrate a question of wages when an increase destroy the business and a decrease will be unacceptable to the workingmen.

cannot arbitrate a question as to whether operation and business gen-erally shall be managed under the sense rule of law and equity by the owners and the servants they have selected, or by a labor organization. You cannot arbitrate the right to protect from the mob rule of labor who only need his patronage and coin organizations who boldly proclaim a purpose to destroy property, and en-deavor to make their proclamation effective by killing and injuring their fellow-workmen who refuse to join in their lawlessness. When John Mitchell ordered the engineers, firemen and pumpmen to desert their posts he treated with the liberality for which that unless the operators could supply their places the mines would be destroyed, and with their destruction 140,000 men, with their wives and children dependent upon their labor, would be deprived of work for a long time." COMMISSIONER WRIGHT'S RE-

They also believed that many of the alleged wrongs endured by the miners might be corrected by appeals to the employers.

FRUITLESS CONFERENCE. Their attempt, however, to secure conferences between the representatives of the mine workers and the mine operators proved fruitless and the miners themselves decided that a strike should be organized. Nearly all of the operators have no confidence in the ability of the Miner's Union to control its own members to such a degree as to assist in maintaining proper discipline. Some of the operators Monday in a lot at Twenty-ninth street some of the union officers believe that and Thirteenth avenue, known as the no great progress will be made toward Devery barbecue, had all the shamea more peaceful condition in the mining regions until anthracite miners have a union of their own.

Many ob-Wright met disclaimed distinctly that servers from other parts of town, who | they had any antagonism to labor went there to be amused, turned away union as such. They did object, and most seriously, to some of the methods adopted by the union, and they feel men and women scrambling for glasses that when asked to make a contract with the unions, the latter should put themselves in a position to be pecuniarily responsible for carrying out such contracts. The specific demand of the union that where miners are paid by weight, 2,240 pounds shall constitute the ton. represents a long-standing difficulty, When it is shown that a ton of coal says Mr. Wright, contains a varying percentage of refuse as it comes from the mine, it is difficult to see the force of the argument why it should not be weighed and the miner paid for the

At least the operators, he thinks, ought to share in the loss of labor in mining impurities. The demand of ing these builocks represented 1,700 the miners that wages be increased ten per cent in the rates per ton to those men who perform contract work of the beef, and there was an unlimit- and ten per cent reduction in the time of those men who work by the day, is backed by the statement that after the increase which was granted in 1900, the prices of all commodities in a minreplied to the Rev. The operators meet this demand with the statement that they are able to market only 60 per cent of the capacity of their mines, and that the increase of 20 per cent in wages, which the men demand, would mean about 46 cents a ton increase. POLITICS WILL NOT INTERFERE

Philadelphia, Sept. 3.—United States Philadelphia, Sept. 3.—United States Senators Quay and Penecos held a protracted conference today with President Baer, of the Reading Railway, in reference to the miners' strike.
After the conference Senator Quay

"We went over the situation thoroughly, and are now satisfied that nothing can be accomplished at the present time.'

"Politics will not be allowed to in-terfere in this strike," was President Baer's only comment.

QUESTION OF SUING A UNION. Toronto, Sept. 3.-In the suit being brought by the Metallic Roofing Com-pany, Limited, against several of the strikers and the local union of sheet metal workers, another step was taken this morning when an appearance was entered by Messrs. Lee and O'Donough, Dineen building, on behalf of the in-dividual defendants. With respect to the union only a conditional appearance was entered, as it is intended to fight the question of the application of the Taff-Vale decision in Canada. The contention of the defendants is that a trade union cannot be sued as such in Ontario. The matters are of great importance to unionism in gen-

Dubln, Sept. 4. - The lord mayor of Dublin will convene a meeting of citizens to protest against the proclamation of the crimes act in the Counties of Kings, Limerick, Longford, Queens and Westmeath, and the boroughs of Dublin and Limerick. A prominent landlord, Capt. Shawe

Taylor, of Ardrahan, has published a letter inviting the Duke of Abercorn, John Redmond, Lord Barrymore, Col. Saunderson, the lord mayor of Dublin, T. P. O'Connor, Wm. O'Brien, and T. W. The Nationalists regard the new proclamation, which brings a total of seventeen counties
-nearly the whole of Ireland-under its operation, as a declaration of war by George Wyndham, chief secretary for Ireland, on the Irish League, and the not unlikely precursor of the suppression of the league. The proclamation empowers trial by special jury in instances of summary jurisdiction. The Counties of Kings, Limerick, Longford, Queens and Westmeath have been the scenes of recent Irish League agita-

In 1884, after agrarian agitation in Ireland had culminated in several dynamite explosions in Birmingham and London, England, in addition to nu-merous scenes of violence in Ireland, the British Parliament decided to renew the crimes act in Ireland, originally framed for the purpose of suppressing popular outbreaks over political and land questions, and the organizations and agencies believed to be exciting the minds of the people to such acts of treason against their English rulers.

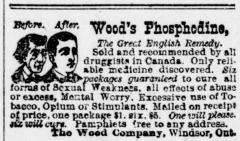

OPERATION OF THE ACT. Violent discussions followed this proposal in Parliament, and numbers of the Irish members of that body were thrown into prison for their utterances in debate. As it stood, the crimes act provided that inquiries might be held in any place under its stated jurisdiction at any time, and any person, whether guilty or suspected, might be tried before a commission of three judges. Membership in any Irish patriotic society, participation in any prohibited public meeting, or discussion, as well as open acts and utterances, were held to be crimes, punishable at the will of the judges by fines, imprisonment or exile. This system worked badly, for judges often refused to act, and Parliament amend The Shah of Persia was most anxious | ed the act by providing for the impaneling of "special juries" for the trial

Safety by Land and Sea.

Tourists from the United States and Canada may poke fun at the English milroad passenger coach, but it is one of the safest places on earth. Of the 300,000,000 of people carried by English railroads last year, not one was killed. One employe in every 1,127 lost his life last year, as compared with one out 576 in the year 1881, showing a steady increase in the immunity from accidents. On the United States railways last year, one employe out of every 400 was killed, and one out of every 26 injured. The English systems may not measure up to American standards in some respects, but they are not behind in speed, and they are decidedly ahead in safety-two prime This would indicate that their physical condition on the average must be superior to the American, though the latter can show a greater efficiency in carrying power, particularly in freight. On the Canadian and United States systems the size of the locomotives and the capacity of the cars have been continually increased; so as to handle the largest volume of traffic at the lowest cost per unit. The English roads have yet to economize in this direction. They stick to the small locomotives and freight cars.

A parliamentary paper just issued shows that the British merchant ship is almost as safe as the British railway carriage. Last year only twelve passengers were lost in the British mercantile marine, by far the lowest figure ever recorded. According to this paper, 225,443 masters and seamen were employed in the mercantile marine during 1901, and of this number 1,025 lives were lost, or one for every 180 employed. Ten years before, in 1891, there were 218,247 employes and 1,659 lives lost, an average of one in every 115, while twenty years back, in 1881, there were 186,719 employes and 3,084 lives lost, a proportion of 1 to every 57 employed. The figures for 1901 were the lowest, both in the actual number of lives lost and the proportion of losses to those employed, of any year in the record. The board of trade officials declare that they are well satisfied that their efforts have made in British conveyances, and the figures prove that the board of trade has done its work well.

Prohibition in Vermont.

The vote in Vermont on Tuesday hinged largely on the liquor question, Vermont being a prohibition State. There were two Republican tickets in the field. Gen. John G. McCullough, who stands by the present prohibition law. was nominated for governor by the regular Republican convention, but the anti-prohibition delegates bolted and nominated Percival W. Clement, who for years has led the agitation to replace the present law with a high license or local option statute. The returns from the polls are not yet complete, but 200 cities and towns give McCullough 26 497 votes and Clement 23,239 votes. The Democratic candidate polled 6,932, and the straight prohibition nominee 2.052. The result seems to be that no one is elected, as the State law requires a majority vote to elect, and no one of the candidates has more votes than his three opponents combined. This will throw the election into the Legislature. Clement claims that prohibition, which has been in force for 50 years, has received its death-blow. The Legislature, however, will probably elect McCullough. The majority of its members support the present law, as every town, large or small, has equal representation, and a majority of the municipalities are for prohibition.

A Stroke of British Enterprise.

The American press is greatly interested in the latest stroke of enterprise by the British postoffice in establishing a parcel post to the United States. Strange to say, this arrangement has heen made without consulting the United States postal department. The latdoes not co-operate in any way. parcels posted in England do not go through the United States mails, but are turned over to the American Express Company, which gets a share of the postage. A three-pound package can be sent from Great Britain to San Francisco for 24 cents. A threepound package mailed from New York to San Francisco would cost $1 in postage. The people of Great Britain can actually post parcels to any point in the United States at a far cheaper rate than the people of the United States can post parcels from one point to another in their own country. The result is that the parcel business in the United States is about monopolized by the express companies. Such a state of affairs has naturally caused widespread comment in the United States, erwise. The Government of the United States, as everybody knows, is run largely in the interest of big financial concerns, trusts and corporations." The Bay City Post-Democrat says: "It must be admitted that in some things the British Government manages better than does that of this country. The people of the United States ought to have the advantages of the parcels post system. But they will never obtain them so long as the managers of the dominant party nurse corporations which are expected to aid in keeping those managers in power." These are samples of the criticisms going the rounds of the press.

The West Against Tariff Increase.

The most significant token on the tariff question comes from Hon. Clifford Sifton, minister of the interior. Sifton as the western representative in the cabinet, has some authority to speak for the West, or at least for the Liberal party of the West, which elected fourteen out of seventeen of the members who sit for the constituencies between Lake Superior and the Pacific coast. Mr. Sifton was asked yesterday by the Globe what today in an article on Canadian trade. his position on the tariff was. He re- It says for one thing, that the pre-stands is a compromise, well and carefully worked out. Its adaptability to the requirements of the trade of Canada is shown by results. Manufacturers and consumers are alike getting fair treatment. We would like the tariff lower, but we recognize that there must be mutual concessions and for the present we recognize the present tariff as a reasonable one."

Will not some revisions be necessary at the next session?"
"Revision of the tariff from time to time at reasonable intervals becomes necessary, and it may be that at the next session something will be done

"That is probably when the attempt will be made to induce the Government to go back to high protection " suggested the correspondent.

'Any attempt to increase the protective features of the tariff in favor of manufacturers as against consumers will meet with the strenuous opposition of every Liberal elected west of Lake Superior.'

"You are absolutely determined on "Quite so. With a trade which was stationary under high protection now growing beyond the most sanguine pre- kill all the rats about the place.' dictions, and with are Western prairies, empty and desolate under Conservative rule, filling up with settlers and we regard the position as extremely satisfactory, and we have certainly no intention of supporting an attempt to Tory policy which kept the country in a state of stagnation for fifteen years.' "Will you, with your Western supporters, stand alone in this attitude? "Not at all. I am satisfied that the great bulk of the Liberal party is sound on the question.

party which advocates a general increase in the tariff will have to reckon with a solid West, which would reduce the tariff if it had its way. It will in this parliamentary paper go far to be interesting to watch the maneuvering of Mr. Borden, the Conservative leader, during his Western tour this month. No practical politician ever had a harder task. He shows courage in tackling the job, but will he show the courage of his convictions? The Winnipeg Free Press kindly tenders his this advice:

"The only honest thing for Mr. Borden to do is to frankly advocate his policy of higher protection. To do so will of course kill off any Conservative strength that may remain in the West: but it will add to Mr. Borden's personal reputation as a man of frank courage. As glory is about the only thing that Mr. Borden is likely to get out of politics-for many years to come, at any rate-the gain will perhaps counterbalance the loss."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier will probably have more success with French trade than with French emigration. The French are too contented with France to leave it. In no country is there such an even distribution of wealth

Tom Johnson's star is in the ascendant. He has captured the Democratic primaries in Ohio and is now hailed as his party's candidate for the presidency in 1904. He wrote an admirable treatise showing the intimate connection tween agriculture and chemistry, when Sir Humphry Davis, who afterwards made that subject his own, was at school. He presented a copy of that treatise to the British Government, and did not even get an acknowledgment, but several American States sent him complimentary letters appreciating the value of his experiments. When one adds to these brows a forehead, in its lower lobe that of a mathematician, in its upper that of an idealist, and the jaws and chin of a man of action, one begins to understand something of the bewildering complexity of Kipling's character, in which the poet jostles the mechanic, soldier, the philosopher, the traveler, the recluse. As regards the outer man, Mr. Kipling dresses as only the very rich or very famous can afford to do. On this occasion he wore a dark gray flannel suit, obviously not cut in the vicinity of Bond street, a striped linen shirt, and—horresco referens—a very low striped turndown collar, of which about an eighth of an inch was visible above the coat. Round this was a large black tie-not a bow-of the kind worn chiefly by elderly city clerks. Other "items" were a straw hat new and probably purchased most reluctantly for the occasion, a gold band round the third finger of the left hand and black shoes untidily laced.

In the face of danger or difficulty

Lord Dundonald becomes so essentially a man of action that it is difficult to think of him as completely happy in any other character or adapting himhelf readily to more prosaic surroundings. Yet many of his intimate friends the battle field or the barracks, and a who have never campaigned with him may think that he is more at home in a library or a laboratory than in the tented field. If facts did not convince them they might even question the capacity for leadership in one whose favorite occupations suggest a deliberate mind rather than the noble rashness that counts not odds. But when time presses, Lord Dundonald does not waste any of it in elaborate

And on the ever-memorable Feb. 28, after fighting the Boer rear guard all day, and not knowing what hostile force might still be in front of him, he left two of his best regiments to hold the ground already while with a mere handful he pushed on through the gathering dusk and brought the glad tidings of re-

In saying that Lord Dundonald seems peculiarly at home amid such circumstanuces, one does not for a moment mean to suggest that he is a fire-eater who takes little interest in anything but war. With all his love of soldiering Lord Dundonald bears inhis peaceful home-life no taint of stranger might talk to him for hours and yet have no suspicion that he was anything more than a person of keen intellect, with a strong partiality for scientific pursuits. Lord Dundonald is not a collector of battlefield trophies. His town house in Portman Square displays no bristling array of barbaric weapons brought by the owner from African campaigns. The few war relics that Lord Dundonald treasures marching hosts in the distance, may stimulate memory to recall scene after scene in swift succession. The quiet seclusion of Lord Dundon-ald's library conduces to more contem-plative moods and the slower processes of reasoning. Here he worked out, by the aid of many figures and neat diagrams, the mechanical problems for which he has hereditary aptitude. "Virtute et labore" is the ancient family motto, and no race has ever earned a better title to it. Lord Dundonald, however, takes for his personal guidance a more concrete form of the same idea. He holds it not enough that a man should accumulate by courage faut produire," is his favorite watch-word, and so he sets himself to produce things by invention. It may be doubted, however, whether a strong sense of duty or any other guiding principle is half so strong a motive power as inherited impulse in this direction. His great-grandfather, the ninth earl, held for 21 years patent rights for the man-in his grandson's house, relics of the great admiral's achievements at sea are less conspicuous than records of his intellectual labors. At any rate it is of these that the present earl talks with liveliest appreciation, perhaps because mere valor and prompt action where danger threatens are matters of course to all men of a race that sprang, so the chronicles say, from a Scandinavian sea-rover. To the reception rooms and galleries are relegated all pictures of sea-fights and ancestral portraits save two that hang on the walls of Lord Dundonald's library. One is a painting of Lord Cochrane, presented to him by the electors of Westminster as a proof of their unabated confidence in him after the unjust sentence that ruined his career in the British navy; the other, photograph of him in the last year of his life, when he had gathered other honors than the "red ribbon" of which he was so cruelly deprived until Queen Victoria gave it back to him at the beginning of her reign. But it may safely be predicted that, whatever the claims on his time may be in his new command, he will not fail to complete schemes by which he aims at bettering the condition of British troops in the field. With plans for giving a pure water supply to soldiers on the march his thought are busy in the intervals of more pressing work. Yet he would break off serious talk on such subjects or on problems of military re-form to explain the meaning of a little lock of hair that hangs beside his library mantelpiece above a miniature of the great Napoleon, whose bust is on an old oak cabinet, and a lifesize likeness beside a window where the morning sunlight falls full upon it. Howland, Thedford, and Mrs. Banton, Thecompany assembled soon after sun down, and after a short time spent in conversation, singing and instrumental music, Mr. Archibald Dallas was called to the chair, which he very ably filled, and the programme began about 10:30 by instrumental music by Mrs. Banton, who throughout the evening delighted the audience by the sweet music which she discoursed on the piano, and who, by her geniality of manner and lively conversation, contributed much to the pleasure of the entertainment. Among the ure of the entertainment. Among the speeches, special mention must be made of that of Rev. D. S. Hamilton, who referred feelingly to the old times when he preached his first sermons, and also of the high opinion he had of Rev. Mr. Hutchinson as a young man of sterling integrity and plety; but the climax was reached when Mr. Hutchinson was invited forward and the following address was read by Mr. John McGhee:

"Mr. J. J. Hutchinson: Dear Pastor,—We are gathered here tonight to show our good-will to you and our appreciation of your faithful work among us.

"Your kindness, courtesy and devotion to duty have endeared you to us all, and we shall ever remember you with feelings of kindness. turned home after a very enjoyable ings of kindness.

ouragement spoken to him from time to time.

An instrumental piece by Miss Edith Hodgson was rendered in excellent style, and two solos by Miss Lena Shay, who is fast coming to the front as a soloist two others by Mr. James Sullivan, whose singing in the choir is so much esteemed The programme was much enlivened at by instrumental music by Mr Banton, who played all the acc ments. The chairman's speech masterpiece of eloquence, and at is close refreshments were served in the free and easy manner so natural to Lake Shore ladies. Quantity, quality and order were conspicuous by their presence.

Afterwards there was more singing by the young people present and more instrumental music, then the company dispersed to their homes about midnight, after singing "God Be With You." There was no votes of thanks, but veryone felt that Mrs. Hodgson deserved special mention for opening her house freely, as she is wont to do in the interests of the Congregational Church and the young people of the vicinity. #### BAYLY-SEABORNE WEDDING Ceremony Was Performed at St. Paul's Cathedral This Afternoon.

A pretty autumn wedding took place this afternoon in St. Paul's Cathedral, when Dr. Benjamin Bayly, of this city, was married to Miss Alice Seaborne, daughter of the Rev. William Seaborne.

The church was decorated with golden-rod and palms, large bunches of golden-rod being tied to the ends of the pews with white satin ribbon. The bride was given away by her brother, Dr. George Seaborne. She wore a gown of tucked ivory white satin with deep yoke of all-over lace, and carried a large bunch of white chrysanthemums. Her bridesmaids, Miss Edith and Etta Bayly, sisters of the groom, were gowned alike in white tucked silk with large black picture They carried large bouquets of golden-rod. Dr. Edwin Seaborne, brother of the oride, was groomsman, and Mr. Will Pope, Mr. George Sippi, Mr. Vivian

OFFICER CRAIG'S GOOD RECORD

President Going South on Friday Many Congratulations on His Safety.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Sept. 4 .- Dr. Lung President Roosevelt's physician, this morning said that he anticipated no serious results to the President from yesterday's accident. The President will leave here tomorrow on the Sylph preparatory to starting from Washington on his short southern trip. He will leave Washington at 7:30 p. m. tomorrow on a special train for Chattanooga, where he will attend the annual convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen on Monday.

DRIVER PLATT. Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 3. - A dispatch says that the driver of President Roosevelt's carriage, D. J. Pratt, was very badly hurt, and it was reported that he had died. His body was taken into the Stevens House, and it was found that Pratt was unconscious, but not dead. A few minutes later an ambulance from the Pittsfield hospital arrived, and he was delivered to that institution. The crowd became greatly excited, and pouring into the street surrounded the wrecked carriage and the car, shouting at the motorman and conductor and creating a great disturbance. Almost immediately persons began snatching away the fragments of the carriage in which the President had ridden. Only by their utmost efforts, a force of police, which had been quickly summoned, prevented the entire demolition of the vehicle by sou-

The Advertiser's New Saturday Serial Story.

The Advertiser has made arrangements with the publishers, whereby it has obtained, at considerable expense, the serial rights for Canada of Mary Hartwell Catherwood's stirring romance, "Lazarre." The story will be published each Saturday, and the first installment will appear in the issue of Saturday next, Sept. 6.

"Lazarre" ranks among the comparatively few successful books of the year. Reports from the chief literary centers of the continent indicate that there is little diminution in the demand for this extraordinary story. Like "Trilby," "The Seats of the Mighty," and other books which have enjoyed a phenomenal run of popularity, "Lazarre" had taken the great reading public by storm almost before the ink was dry. It is an exquisite love story into which a tender vein of pathos is woven. It is the story of two noble characters-Lazarre and the woman he loved. Every line throbs with human interest. The New York Commercial-Advertiser, a journal always most conservative in the expression of its opinions, says of it: "We feel justified in predicting a widespread and prolonged popularity for this latest comer in the ranks of romantic fiction."

"Lazarre" will be published only in the Saturday editions of The Advertiser, but in such generous installments that readers will be able to follaw the story closely. The opening chapters will appear next Saturday.

CHAPTER VI.

In spite of all Arthur's care, Miss Montrose took a severe cold, and a serious illness followed the exposure and excitement of their adventure on the island. For more than a week she lay in a raging fever and was quite delirious. Those who attended her never forgot that illness, nor the secrets which she revealed during her wanderings, for anyone who listened to her, for but an hour, would have learned how tenderly and devotedly she had grown to love Arthur devotedly she had grown to love Arthur

Halstead shared the anxious mother's vigils, and was often moved to tears by the wild passionate words in which the beautiful sufferer revealed her which the beautiful sufferer revealed her affection for her son.

When she told her husband, he replied though somewhat nervously:

"Well, well as soon as she gets better it will be all right; there will doubtless be an engagement, and we can announce it to our friends, though for that matter everybody is talking about it now as it it were a settled fact."

One morning, after the fever had turned and Ida was pronounced much better, Mr. Halstead sent word to his son to come to him in his private parlor.

"Well, Arthur, Miss Montrose is pronouced out of danger this morning," he said, as the young man entered, and catermined to find out his intentions without further delay.

"I am really glad to hear it, father; I trust she will soon be quite well again," the young man returned, in all sincerity, but not at all as an anxious, eager lover would have spoken.

"Of course we are all glad; but I sup-but not at all as an anxious, eager lover would have spoken.

"Of course, we are all glad; but I supposed you would be more rejoiced than anyone else," replied Mr. Halstead.

"How so?" Arthur queried, though a hot flush rose to his cheek as he said it.

"Why, everybody believes you are as good as engaged to Ida, and it is but natural to suppose that a lover would feel no small degree of anxiety over such a severe illness as she has passed through, and be proportionately elated when learning that all danger is passed."

"Father, I am not Miss Montrose's lover," Arthur asserted, abruptly and decidedly.

"What! Do you mean to tell me, after having followed her about for weeks like a pet dog, that you have no serious intentions regarding her?" cried Mr. Halstead, with some warmth.

"The force of circumstances, and nothing log of these thrown me continually

"The force of circumstances, and nothing else, sir, has thrown me continually into Miss Montrose's society—has, in fact, compelled me to act as her escort on all occasions. I have felt from the first that it was placing me in a false position, and I should have been glad if it could have been otherwise; but I could not to refuse to accompany her upon our excursions without appearing rude and ungracious. You know how the others have paired off leaving me no choice in have paired off, leaving me no choice in the matter. I regard her very highly—shall always esteem her as a valued friend; but I have not given a thought to any nearer relation than that."

'Pooh, pooh! Arthur! most fellows would jump at the chance you have had to win a beautiful girl like Ida Montrose, not to mention her handsome fortune."
"Perhaps; and I only regret that someone who would have esteemed it such a privilege could not have had my oppor-tunity," returned the young man, stung to the sarcasm by the false, uncomfortable position in which he found himself.
"Nonsense, Arthur! Do be reasonable.

I had set my heart on this match; so has Mr. Montrose; and it will be a bitter disappointment to us both if you are obstinate." Father, I am not obstinate. I love "Father, I am not obstinate. I love another. I am as good as engaged to a Miss Waldemar, whom I recently met in New York," the young man confessed, in a repressed tone, though his color came and went, and his eyes glowed in a way which betrayed he was no tame lover in this instance.

"Zounds!" cried his father, aghast at

"Zounds!" cried his father, aghast at this announcement. "You don't mean it! What Miss Waldemar?"

"Miss Audrey Waldemar, daughter of the Hon. Dudley Waldemar, They are now traveling, or were. I heard from them only yesterday. They have been detained in Chicago for several weeks by the illness of Mrs. Waldemar."

"I know them. So! sits the wind in that quarter?" muttered Mr. Hichard Halstead, looking very grave. "They're of good blood, fine family—very; but, I say, Art, it won't do!" he concluded, sternly.

"I do not understand you, sir."

"Well, then, to be plain, you are bound to marry Miss Montrose, in spite of all. I wish, for your sake, that I had known of your penchant for Miss Waldemar in the beginning, for I could have helped you to steer clear of this bad fix;

"Do you mean to tell me that I must marry Miss Montrose whether I will or not?" interrupted Arthur the indignant blood dyeing his whole face.
"Can't you see for yourself, Art, that you have compromised her in the eves of everybody? Why, it is common talk that you are going to marry her, and the people have been expecting the announcement of your engagement for some time—they certainly look for it as soon as Ida they certainly look for it as soon as Ida is able to be about again, after what happened last week."

happened last week."

"But I have never spoken one word of love to her; I have treated her only as any friend or a brother might have done."

"I don't know about that," retorted his father. "You have ridden and walked, danced and boated with her; you have been in her society almost constantly; and I doubt if the public would consider you as disinterested as you affirm yourself to be."

"I could not help it I tell you."

yourself to be."
"I could not help it, I tell you. It has all been forced upon me, and I will not be compelled to marry any woman against my will," Arthur returned, with spirit.
"But don't you see-can't you understand how you have compromised her?"

demanded Mr. Halstead, impatiently.
"No. I do not see: I have conducted myself toward her only as a honorable man should conduct himself toward any lady." responded the young man, with dignity.

'I do not doubt that, Arthur; you could not be a true Halstead and be otherwise. But—confound it all! it's a terrible muddle!—don't you see that, as Ida's afflanced husband, all that has passed will be looked upon as all right, otherwise there will follow a scandal which must prove a great injury to her?" said the father, greatly disturbed.

'And what of my relations to Miss Waldense? How is it about compromising demar? How is it about compromising my own name and honor in her estima-tion and that of her friends?" demanded Arthur, sternly

"Hang it, my boy! I am really sorry: it a man can stand such things better than a woman—"
"Audrey Waldemar is a woman." interrupted the young lover hotly: "a lovelier one you cannot find, go the world over. What do you suppose the Hon. Dudley Waldemar would say about my 'compromising' her in a way which would appear most dishenerable?"
"But, according to your own story, you did not know the girl more than three weeks, anyway: and here you have been dancing attendance upon Ida Montrose for almost as many months, and every-body, in this place, at least, thinks you are going to marry her, not to mention her own father and brothers."

"I tell you, sir, that idea—cannot be entertained by me for a moment. I am pledged to Miss Waldemar, and I shall be true to that pledge," said Arthur, firmly firmly.

Mr. Halstead flushed hotly.

He had always demanded implicit obedience from his children; his word had ever been law in his household during their youthful days, and since they had reached the years of maturity, the law of respect and mutual love had restained them from all disagreement and unpleasantness.

It was, therefore, a new departure, which both startled and angered the father, to have his son assert so firmly and independently a determination to go contrary to his wishes and plans.

"Then you will do so at the expense of your relations with me. No son of mine shall conduct himself as you have done during the past two or three months, and then turn his back upon the mischief which he has wrought with impunity," he began, in a low, determined voice.

AS TO CURING HICCOUGHS

Yawning Said To Be the Only Certain and Speedy Remedy.

"Yawning is about the best cure I know of for the hiccoughs," said an observant man, "and I have stumbled on the truth quite by accident. It was proved in my case a sure cure, and by reflection I am convinced that it is a perfectly logical result, a result ex-plainable, too, on physical grounds. "All kinds or remedies are resorted to by men who suffer periodically with hiccoughs, like stopping the ears, and drinking a glass of water slowly and without a stop, or by holding the breath, or counting, or thinking in-tently on some subject, and in many other ways. I have tried all of these remedies, and at times have been fairly successful in checking the hiccoughs Again, I have seen each one of these remedies fail. In my own experience, so far as these remedies are concerned, drinking a glass of water slowly and without breathing is the most satisfactory. But it is torturing enough. On the other hand the yawn is not only efficacious, but it is absolutely without any of the torturing features. There is, as I said before, probably a good physical reason for the yawn being a good remedy for the hiccoughs.

The hiccoughs is described as being a modified respiratory movement, spasmodic inspiration consisting of a contraction of the diaphragm, accompanied with closure of the glottis, so that further entrance of air is prevented. The impulse of the column of air entering and striking upon the closed glottis produces the sound peculiar to the ailment. It is reason able to assume that anything the would relieve the contracted state o the diaphragm, and would reopen th closed glottis, or partially open it, s the air could enter in a normal way would completely relieve the situation It would seem that the vawn, which nothing more than a deep, long breat would bring about this result. While the yawn is supposed to be an invol untary movement, due to drowsines it is yet a fact that a man can yaw at pleasure. This being true, it is easi within a man's power to cure the hic coughs by resorting to the very simp practice of yawning. Of course I can not say that in all cases of hiccough the yawn will prove a good remed; But I believe, in all ordinary case

The demand for Dr. Chase's Ointment during the summer months is enormous. It is during the warm weather especially that there is such great suffering from eczema and similar skin diseases. That Dr. Chase's Ointment is a thorough cure for this torturing disease is proven in hun-dreds of cases similar to the following: Mr. G. H. McConnell, engineer in Fleury's Foundry, Aurora, Ont., states: "I believe that Dr. Chase's Ointment is worth its weight in gold. AT HARLEM. Chicago, Sept. 4.-Lacrimae proved easily the best in the fourth race, at one mile, at Harlem yesterday, after a wretched start, in which Hargis and Jane Holly were badly worsted, Hargis, the favorite, backed from 6 to 5 to even money, was third at the finish, being beaten by John A. Clarke for place. Nellie Waddell won the second race with ease, covering the six furlongs in 1:13, according to the official timer, although a dozen private watches caught the time at 1:12%, which would have given the filly a track record. The official time given was due to an error of the man who held the timer's flag, who forgot to drop it at the right second, and necessitated what was practically a guess at the time made weather was cloudy, and the track good. Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 4.—Red Coat, the Detroit Country Club creek 25-foot sloop, beat the Cadillac on time allowance by two minutes and 26 seconds Tuesday, in the free-for-all closing event of the Port Huron-Sarnia Yachting Association. The race was for the second leg on the Hotel Harrington Cup, and was for boats 30 feet and over, yachts under 30 feet, however, being allowed to enter as 30-footers. The first heat on this cup was won Coat's day, and poor weather for the Cadillac. A special race for a $35 prize was sailed by the 45-foot sloop Sultana and the 35-foot sloop rig, English cutter type, Alborak, of Sarnia, which was won by Alborak in eight minutes and 22 seconds.

The seventh and eighth babies had remarkable eyes and teeth. They were as famous around the City Hall place region as the first comers.

For weeks previous to the arrival of the ninth baby Mrs. Conway, who is a very religious woman, prayed that the baby should be a girl and should be as remarkable as the other children. Her prayer was answered. The bab that the stork brought at midnight was a girl, and was remarkable—she weighed 30 pounds.

The physician who attended Mrs. Conway pronounced the girl the healthiest child that he had ever seen. Some idea of the extraordinary size of the baby may be had by comparing its weight with that of the average baby.
At the J. Pierpont Margan Lying-In Hospital it was said that the weight of the average baby is 7½ pounds, or just one-fourth of Mrs. Conway's latest offspring. The measurements of the Conway baby are as follows:

Circumference of the head at the forehead, 16 inches; or head around cheeks, 17¼ inches; or arm, 7 inches; of thigh, 11½ inches; of chest, 22½ inches; length of the baby, 26 inches. The length of the average baby is 21½ encore the Andante movement from Mendelssohn's Concerto, op. 64, was given. De Beriot's Eighth Concerto, with its wonderful second movement, followed here. Mr. Poure's delicate and skillful up and down bowing, sustaining the note to an indefinite degree, was the marked feature in a brilliant performance of Wieniaw-ski. Perhaps the most interesting number on the programme was the original Mazurka for violin and piano by Mr. Thomas Mitcheltree, which was accompanied by the composer himself. It was a very dainty and striking companied by the composer himself. position, and was rendered with much effect; but the most brilliant effort of the programme was the triple number at the close, which consisted of Wien-lawski's Capriccio Valse, Vieuxtemp's Reverie, and Ovide Musin's Mazurka de Concert, three compositions so well contrasted in style and movement, and interpreted with such a quick and sympathetic change of treatment, that they won the admiration and enthusiasm of the audience. Mr. Poure responded to an enthusiastic recall by giving Scuvenir de Posen. Mr. Thomas Mitcheltree added to the beauty and interest of the programme by his ren-dition of two of his own compositions, a Berceuse and a Waltz Romantic.

Miss Blanche Teeple, the 11-year-old contralto, delighted the audience by her remarkable singing of the Lulla-

Off Ludington the steamer's decks became covered and the fires were extinguished, but there was hopes of reaching safety, as the tug had taken its line and was working hard to get it into port. The boat is owned by C. J. Marsh, of Chicago, and Capt. Kemming and the fourteen members of the crew are Chicagoans. All are safe.

Chief Justice Falconbridge has given out his decision in the case of Hogg vs. Brooke, in which the plaintiff was informed and the plantiff was injured. Held, that it was impossible to hold the defendant township liable, because of the unprecedented fall of snow at that particular season at which the accident occurred, it being practically impossible for the township to keep the eight miles of roadway within the township clear of snow. The action was displayed to the non-repair of a highway in the Township of Brooke. Snow accumulated on the highway, and the plaintiff was injured. THEY WAKE THE TORPID ENERGIES.—Machinery not properly supervised and left to run itself, very soon shows fault in its working. It is the same with the digestive organs. Unregulated from time to time, they are likely to become torpid and throw the whole system out of gear. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills were made to meet such cases. They restore to the full the flagging faculties, and bring into order all parts or the mechanism.

When the victim discovered two of the men in the act of lifting his watch and pulse from his pockets and resisted them, the four men attacked and beat him severely. One arrest was made by Miss Eliza Smith was the guest of the police, who are looking for the others of the quartet. The victim of the hold-up men was W. S. Meyer, of 211 East Thirty-first street. He boarded a north-bound Indiana avenue car at Fortieth street, and took a rear seat. At the next cor-ner a number of people got on, and the car was so crowded that the aisle was filled. Four men soon entered and two of them sat on each side of Meyer, They began to read newspapers and further than noticing that they were well dressed he paid not attention to started than the four men attacked This attracted the attention of all the passengers, who, with the conductor, watched the struggle, Meyer says, without offering to help him. The passengers nearest the hold-up men and their victim tried to get out of the of the combatants until all were crowded together in the north end of the car, while Meyer and his assailants struggled in the rear. clung to his watch and money, alhough struck many times.
