BERLIN, Sept. 4.—The public

casioned by the cholera is fast dying out, owing to the limitation of the disease in an opidemic form to the Hamburg district, and the confidence that is felt in the vigilance of the authorities. Cool weather and abundant rain storms are keeping down disease simulating cholera. The undoubted cases of Asiatic cholera that have been taken to the Mosbit Hospital are all traceable to Hamburg. The marvelous rapidity with which the Hamburg infection operates was instanced in one case. Not half an hour elapsed between the time the victim went near the infected linen and the victim went near the infected linen and the time be was stricken down.

VIEULENT NATURE OF THE DISEASE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—There cannot be any doubt of the virulent nature of the disease. Heinrich Lamiers, who died today at 6 o'clock was only taken this morning. Antonio Herla, on board the Rugia, was also taken sick for about 30 hours. The last remaining child of the Born family, an intant of a few months old, is not expected to live through the night. Of the whole family of children, five in number ten days ago, running from 10 years down to the baby in arms, the little one, which is sure to die, is all that the parents have left.

But the increase is far greater than these figures show, for in 1842 the steamers belonging to the United Kingdom were few in number, while now that country owns 5,042,517 tons of steamships, which have at least four-fold the freighting capacity of a similar amount of tonnage of sailing ships. Of those vessels 3,601 British steamships, measuring 4,563,119, and carrying 124,654 men, are engaged in the foreign trade alone; yet this vast fleet had hardly a representative on the ocean in 1843.

A Rich Man on the Relations of Labor and Capital.

His Unprejudiced Views-How He Pro poses to Regulate the Distribution of Wealth-A Question Propounded to Cause His Own Class to Think.

Less than half a century ago the people of the United States were comparatively poor and the wealth of the country distributed with a near approach to equality, less than a dozen individuals having fortunes approaching the million mark. The laws had been wede for the existing conditions. had been made for the existing conditions of labor, and were as, a whole, of a satis-

No one had yet dreamed of the marvelous inventions and discoveries of natural wealth which were to upset all conditions of production, and make the succeeding 50 ears as a wealth giving period, unpre-edented in the history of the world. Anhracite and bituminous coals, petroleum, thracite and bituminous coals, petroleum, the cotton gin, the resper, steam and electricity, with their thousand marvels, were studdenly emptied upon a community whose laws had been made for conditions the very opposite of those now existing.

It is not to be wondered at that the American mind should seize upon the possibilities which old laws gave to individuals for grabbing these new-found troasures. They would have been more than human if they could have resisted the temptation, and, besides, it must be recollected that the Christianity practiced was of a perfunctory character, formal and nominal rather than real, and civilization just beyond the period of wild beast skin wearing.

In 50 years the creation of wealth has be

In 50 years the creation of wealth has become prodigious; the distribution of wealth has become frightful in its inequalities. The laws, which were beneficent for an agricultural and pastoral people, worked degredation and infamy in a manufacturing community. They permitted the few to grab the greater part of this new wealth.

LUXUKY AND FOVERTY SIDE BY SIDE.

With great fortunes are coming upon the scene an unparalleled luxury upon the one hand, and a poverty upon the other, scarcely surpassed in the days when production did not equal one-tenth of the present output. In the strife for wealth the law-making power was found to be a useful auxiliary.

Judges were bought. Senatorships were sold in the interests of railways and the great corporations; and within the last ten years we find wealth—not contented with the advantages which the laws, con-fessedly in its favor—give it—hiring private armies to give force to edicts allot-ting to the laborer a lesser share of the Thousands of good men held the same thought regarding their slaves before and during the war. legal, but fair, and authorized by the teachings of the Gospel.

There is only one class to dispute this proposition. They are the toilers, whose labor is the immediate cause of the production of our wealth. We may say that there must be intelligence to direct, and that to the intelligence which takes advantage should come the gains.
But Mr. Carnegie and Mr. Frick are proofs that in the rauks of labor itself there is intelligence to direct. Many Carnegies and many Fricks would spring up to-morrow if opportunity permitted.

LABOU'S JOYLESS EXISTENCE.

If one would study the justice of a system of political economy let him surrender his vested rights of property and take his lace among those whom the system orushes, whose labor it devours and whose reward for labor is a bare joyless existence.

We who have the money can reason speciously regarding the justice of our laws, the excelence of our system of government. The laboring man can only groan in spirit. He has not hitherto had the power of his vote, notwithstanding our boasted representative government, because his brothers in the agony which poverty brings, in their effort to relieve the hand-to-mouth miseries of their existence, have sold at each election this birthright for the merest taste of pottage. Every one knows that this has been rue; that the labor vote has never been a unit, that its purchasability has been one of the well-understood factors in ward politics, that there has been no combination, no willingness to submit to leadership, and Nevertheless there is a ground current steadily moving acrosss the continent. Workmen, who were wholly ignorant 30 years ago, are partly educated to-day. Within fifteen years a highly intelligent class has sprung up among the workmen themselves, and there are a few really able men who have been making efforts for their advancement. That man Powderly, for instance, is a statesman of a high order. He has capacity for organization, he has singleness of purpose, he has determination and he has courage. And he is only one of a number. They have been educating their followers, and teaching them to unite upon certain simple propositions. It is like the fencing master who puts in the hands of his pupil the singlestick before he confides to him the glittering rapier.

A CURIOUS INTERVIEW.

That was a curious interview between the commandant of the militia, the gentleman born and bred—with an inheritance of belief regarding the rights to accumulate property, even if in so doing one crowded one's fellow mortal to the wall—and the iron workers who constitute the Homestead committee.

Nevertheless there is a ground current

Gold-spectacled, practiced in the art of snubbing and aure of the physical strength at his back, the officer was more than a match for the laborer, who in his turn was awed by his inherited respect for wealth and power. Chilled and overawed, the representatives of labor went down the hill from this meanul interview.

representatives of labor went down the hill from this unequal interview.

The general in charge had neither the grace nor the will to recognize a labor association which embraced a membership large enough, if properly organized, to sweep out of existence the entire army of the United States. They must have re-flected, as they went down the hill, these representatives of labor, that if a militia organization carried such weight wave. organization carried such weight, per-mitted such freezing dignity upon the part of a citizen towards other citizens, it might possibly be well for their interests to have a few thousands of their own men enrolled in this axis militie.

There is nothing to prevent a body of American citizens from organizing them-selves as a militia organization with proper arms and equipments. There are enough workmen in Pittsburg and vicinity to give 100 regiments of the full complement of 10 companies of 70 men each, with as many more left over for onlookers at parades. Six months of hard drill such as the enthusiasm of these men would permit would leave them equal to the best Philadelphia troops. Does anyone believe for an instant that if there had been 100 such regiments among the workingmen of Pitts. instant that if there had been 100 such regiments among the workingmen of Pitts-burg Gen. Snowden would have declared that he could not recognize the existence of such a body of men as the Amaigamated Association? I choose to ask this question as a reducto ad absurdum, in the hope that it will cause my own class, who have nower and anti-

Hogs should graze in the fields as much as cows or hoges, as they are essentially grazing animals. Ontario farmers have not as much save land lying around loose as their brothers on the Northwestern prairies, but they have plenty for the purpose indicated.

When lambs are weared there are two essentially important points—to take the ewes from the lambs, and not the lambs from the ewes, and to place the latter out of hearing of the former. The stronger and higher conditioned the lambs when weaned, the greater the necessity for treating them well afterwards. A field of fresh pasture should be reserved for them, where they can be placed in a day or two when their grief has been overcome, and the pangs of hunger compelithem to settle down to feedling. While they need at this period an abundance of "keep," they do the old pasture on which they have partially kept. Perhaps the most in ant of all is to keep the lambs away the clover when it is wet with dew of until they are thoroughly broken in use. A little cake and oon render

KEEP HIM QUIET. The Trade and Labor Council of Toronto have once more taken steps to protest against "the unwarranted and repeated utterances of Sir Charles Tupper, Canadian High Commissioner in London, in respect to the condition of Canada's labor market.' Tupper persists in asserting that work for laborers and various mechanics is plentifu in Canada, but the workingmen know in Canada, but the workingmen know better. Hundreds of mechanics have left Toronto for the States within the past year because there was no work for them to do, and similar experience has been the lot of workers in London, Hamilton and slaewhere. The High Commissioner is one of the worst enemies that Canadian wagetarners have to combat.

SIR HENRY TYLER'S ADVICE.

Sir Henry Tyler, president of the Grand Trunk Railway, who is expected in this city within the next day or two, is a firm believer in reciprocity. Montreal he said:

"I know the situation is difficult, since the passing of the McKinley law. But what does the difficulty show? Why, that Canada and the United States should meet in a friendly way and pass a measure of reciprocity between the two countries, and then live in peace and good followship side by side. There should be nothing impossible in that."

That is a smaller approach to good a chapted

Governor-General-in-Council and the President of the United States should issue and the remedial measures now taken may dent of the United States should issue proclamations prohibiting immigration until such time as the epidemic has run its course. This would be a radical and farreaching precaution. But it is not at present within the power of either the Canadian or United States authorities to take this action without the direction of Parliament and of Congress. But they can achieve most theorem of present within the process of previous was so little alive to the interests of posterity. Parliament and of Congress. But they can maintain most thorough quarantine regulations, and it is satisfactory to know that the seaboards of both countries are watched with a carefulness never before exemplified, though there are still defects to be remedied in the St. Lawrence. POVERTY AND FAMINE THE RESULT OF DEFORESTATION.

Canada, as recently pointed out, may yet be a good way off from serious trouble, as a result of the prodigal slaughter of her forests and the failure to plant young timber in something like the same proportion as the trees that are cut down for commercial or domestic purposes. But a day of reckoning will come unless the voice of warning is heeded. The terrible experience of Russia in the last two years should not be lost on our governing bodies and on the farming community, who will be the first to suffer if wise counsels do not prevail. The Preussische Jahrhaber of Berlin, in the last issue to hand, points out that the regions of the mighty rivers, the Don, the Volga, and the Dneiper, the great arteries of Russia, were formerly fringed with wide-spreading forests, along the whole upper and middle courses, which sheltered their sources and tributaries from evaporation throughout the year. These forests have now for the most part disappeared. Mile after mile the traveler sees nothing but lows shrubs and melanchely stumps in unbroken succession; the "Mother Volga" grows yearly shallower; "Mother Volga" grows yearly shallowe POVERTY AND FAMINE THE RE-peared. Mile after mile the traveler sees nothing but low shrubs and melanchely stumps in unbroken succession; the "Mother Volga" grows yearly shallower; steamers find scarcely seven or eight feet of water in mid-stream; and the ferries pursue their snake-like course from bank to bank in search of the ever-shifting channel. The Don with its tributaries is choked; the sources of the Dneiper creep downward, and its chief tributary, the once noble Worskla, with a flow of some 200 English miles, is now dry from source to mouth. The city of Poltawa lies on its banks, and it was at its mouth that the Swedish army surrendered to Peter the Great. This stream which fertilized a broad region, supporting a numerous population, exists no more—not temporarily run dry, but with all its springs exhausted, so that in fature it may be stricken from the map. The Bitjug, another river in the Don The Bitjug, another river in the Don Theigion, the upper course has wholly disappeared—valley and bed are filled to the banks with sand and earth. As if by magic, wide, fertile lands are buried under the sands, and whole villages desolated. "There has been," says Wiestnik Jewropy, "an unparalleled revolution of natural conditions, which threatens a great part of tie country with the heat and aridity of the Central Asian Steppes."

There is perfect unanimity in attributing the theretening catastrophe to the dehoudation of the forests. And this has been the direct operation of the protective tariff system. Its object was to secure a high price at home for textile fabrics made with the inferior machinery of 40 and 50 years ago, and the first direct result of this artificially fostered industry has been to a strickelly fostered industry has been to a strickelly fostered industry has been to a strickelly fostered industry has been to a first direct result of this artificially fostered industry has been to the inferior machinery of 40 and 50 years ago, and the first direct result of this artificially fostered industry has been to

Innumerable factories sprang into existence, and, in the absence of any systematic provision for coal supply, they were erected in the heart of the forest, and after having consumed all the available fuel within easy distance, their plant was actually

The fatal east wind finds no impediment, and brings ruin in its train. This wind will perhaps at no distant date prove fatal. The Grecian colonies went under probably from the same cause. Protect them with rigorous haws. The Volga and Don, and all the rivers of Southern Russia will be silted up and disappear unless the forests be protected."

More fatal even than the drying up of the streams is the cessation of the speing and summer rains. This is the immediate cause of last year's harvest failure in Russia and on it even depends the current year's harvest. There have been local rains, but not nearly enough. This roversal of old

There are some practitioners who make a point of always giving aloes in the first dese of medicine administered in a case of colie; but this use of a purge of a drastic nature is held by others to be a source of evil. There are several points against it. In all cases of internal inflammation the use of drastic purgatives is contra indicated, and there is very little doubt but that they commonly provoke a fatal termination by this. If the Alerts hadn't started the fire-works so early in the game the ball match between the crack home team and the Athletics, of Hamilton, on Kensington Park, Saturday, might have possessed more subsequent interest. But with nine runs against them in the first juning the visit-ers must have been rather discouraged. They did not give up, however, and they played their best through the nine innings. The crowd sympathized with them, and would have been pleased to see them over-come the lead in order to give snap to the contest.

come the lead in order to give snap to the contest.

The Athletics are a very fair hall nine—in fact they hold the championship of the Welland district; but they are hardly fitted to cope with the Alerts, a team that vave even beaten the famous Blues three times, the last by a score of 9 to 0. (Tilsouburg papers please copy.) They are lighter than their opponents and can hardly hit or field or run bases as well. The Alerts' nine runs in the first inning were secured by a succession of easy hits and buses on balls. The Athletics braced up for a few innings, but towards the end the local men commenced another fusilade with the bat.

The visitors made eleven hits off Hiscott, but they were well scattered. In the sixth, four runs, one of them carned, were secured partly through good stick work and partly through charity. Jennings, formerly pitcher of the G. I. R. carshops club in this city, played for Hamilton and distinguished himself at bat.

The only interruption to the game occurred when the ball was batted into the adjoining vegetable garden and the owner declined to give the sphere up unless paid 10 cents. Score

SHAMFORE WOB--Q to 3.

STRATFORD, Sept. 3.—The last of the schedule games in the Canadian Lacrosse Association, senior, was played here this afternoon, and resulted in a victory for Stratford ever Niagara Falls by 5 goals to 1. Batteries-Dwyer, Daub, Murphy and Vaughn; Vickery and Robinson, Umpire-ATHLETICS. ORICEET.

If it had not been for the terrific batting of some of the London willow-wielders the liderton eleven might have been in the match on the former's grounds Saturday. The visitors, however, served a useful purpose in affording the home oricketers some great practice with the bat. Ed. Hall became weary after he had piled up 104 runs—only 104—and retired to have a rest. Goodhne was forced to be content with 66, while Sayers made 48, Harris 20, Reid 16 and Dr. Williams 14. Altogether the very fair score of 310 was secured. Barling, Gonin, Humphrey and Macbeth carried off batting honors for the Ildertonians, who put together 118 runs in two innings. The score:

United States the decline is even more noticeable.

This small remuneration for capital is suggestive of an idea which merits careful consideration, and to which we invite attention and criticism. Of ocurse one of the main ideas in accumulating wealth is to make provision for that time of life when "youth and enterprise begin to flag," or provide a competency for those who are dependent upon us, and who would be but badly provided for in case of our death. Here are two cases taken—the man who places his yearly savings on deposit in a bank at 4 per cent. and the other who invests in a Compound Investment Policy. We will suppose they are both men of 30 years of age, and that their yearly savings amount to $303 50 each; if more or less than this sum, the results will be proportionately greater or smaller.

Best Advertising!

After all it must be admitted the goods sold by the advertiser is his successful advertisement. We find the candid expression of those who buy our clothing to others of their satisfaction with it do more for us than any self praise we can possibly bestow. Yet it is necessary when so many are clamoring for trade and using such enticing devices to take in the unthoughtful for us to show what advantages the manufacturer CAN and DOES give in QUALITIES and VALUES. For remember the manufacturers who stamp with their own name the goods they make and sell directly to the consumer certainly MUST give BEST values and surely dare not offer anything but the most reliable in quality. We put particular stress on these two points, because they are the vantage ground we occupy above all others.

Bearing these two points in mind, you will see what we offer you at this season in genuine bargains. Our Men's Furnishing Department is the most complete

The Opening of the Grand To-night.
The Grand Opera House season opens tonight with the great and only Herrmann and his clever wife, as the entertainers.
The principal part of Herrmann's entertainment consists of rare and all-startling phenomena to which his own original and collective brain has given evistence. His work seemingly sets at naught all natural laws. It is replete with mysticism and those occult deeds ordinarily ascribed to the redoubtable Prince of Darkness. Yet everything is simply done, and Herrmann frankly disclaims any supernatural agencies.

The feats of legerdemain performed by Herrmann, are none of the ordinary slight-finance affairs to which the old line of theater-goers are accustomed. He is simply a marvel beyond the comprehension of the ordinary mortal, and is one of those instances of where it is necessary to see in order to believe. His performance is a succession of surprises, each succeeding one being more bewildering than its predecessor. He doesn't stoop to any of the old tricks that have for years been the stock in trade of the peripatetic magician, but entertains and amuses you with phenomena which baffle the most skillful and scientific to explain. This weird stage worker should be seen even by people who never go out to the theater, because his performance is something that will set one thinking about the mysterious forces around vs.

She remembered her own words so well; she remembered the winter night when William in his cener by the fireside announced to her his cone by the fireside announced to her his cone by the fireside announced to her his some work, of which so often in her eager, militions mind she had freamed; and he ore membered it. The romance of the old mes will never die. She had belted on his purs and his sword in yonder quiet evenge, and now the lady's color was on the lance of the true knight!

Mrs. Buchanan in the little parlor heard the light, quick step without, and knew by its pace that the gloom was gone; but she also was ooccupied within, and somewhat puzzled, was turning over the damp,

"Id on ot know what this is, Helen," said Mrs. Buchanan, as her daughter entered the room, "but I suppose William thought it would please you. It came by the coach, my dear, and it is directed in William's hand."

Helen sat down by the table to look at that especial passage again. Her heart was full; she wanted to say something, but could not say it, her shyness veiling the new joy, sa well as the emotions of so frank a face could be veiled; but that was not saying much. At last she rose and laid the book before her mother, and stood half behind her leaning upon her shoulder. "I don't care for that," said Hope, bravely. "Are you going home, Helen? Will you let rego too? It is only other people who call him clever, you know, Helen: but he is our William."

CHAPTER VII.

CHAPTER VII.

Werena my heart licht, I wad dec.
—Grizzel Baille.

At the same bright hour of noon as that on which Helen set out so sadly, commissioned with her mother's domestic errands, Lilias Maxwell sat in the sunshine upon the mossy steps of the old sundial in the garden of Mosagray. She had her work in her hand as usuual, and was sewing listlessly with long intervals of idleness. It was an occupation very ill-suited for her at that time, for there was nothing in it to deliver her from the sway of her own thoughts; and so she pursued the quiet work and the long trains of musing together, looking, as she always did, very pale and very sad. To morrow—to-morrow was the day.

The "soul of happy sound" surrounded her on every side, and she was faintly conscious of it; the drowsy stir of summer life, the hum of passing bees, the ripple of the water as it went on its way, plaintively, beyond the willows, softened by the warm medium of that sunny air through which they came, fell gently on her ear—perhaps they soothed her unawares; but we feel the solemn weight of our humanity more heavily when the heart of Nature throbs beside us in its spring joy, conscious of an inner are of greater import to ourselves than all the happy changes of the earth.

Helen at home. She was overjoyed to find her here.
"I saw you reading a book," exclaimed Hope, when the first greeting was over. "I am quite sure you are reading a book—Helen, may I not see it? Why did you put it away?"

"It is a grave book, Hope, not such as you would like," said Helen, looking as she felt, embarrassed and conscious.
"But I like grave books—sometimes," said Hope. "I am fitteen—I am not a girl now, Helen; but do you mind what Tibbie said, last Hallowe'en? You were to get your fortune out of a book. On, Helen, will you tell me? Have you ever got your fortune yet?"

Helen fairly turned her burning check away, with a nervous start. So it was fulfilled, the simble prophecy of Tibbie; the hour and the book had oome, and this was "the fertune" of Helen. She did not make any answer. She held her procious volume under her shawl and looked over the wan ware, away into the vacant air, with her changful smile.

"U think I know," said the sagacious Hope.
"What do you know, Hope?" said Helen.
But Hope was perverse.
"What do you know, Hope?" said Helen. Miss Swinton is coming, but only for a day, and little Mary Wood is to stay all the vacation. Miss Swinton wants to see you, Helen, and she said she would afte you to Edinburgh; but I think you should not go, Helen.
"Hope paused, and as she could think of no satisfactory answer, went on, on another ourse.

As to the killing of the larvæ in the dun

As to the killing of the larvæ in the dung by applying lime to it, or collecting it and burying a foot deep in the ground, both appear to me to be just as impracticable as the lard mixtures. Cows at the present time, now when the hervest is done, have access to all the fields on the farm except one or two. The dung would have to be collected from a large area. In many cases the cows are brought home to be milked from distant fields, from the woods, often by the public road, and the dung is so thin when voided that it would be impossible to collect it with any degree of success towards the amelioration of present troubles.

The soiling of the cows in the stable during the night, is just as utopian as the previous remedies. The flies do not leave the cows at night. I have found them as numerous upon them at daybreak as at noonday. I have killed hundreds of them in the morning before sunrise, lodged about the tail. Neither is the stable a sure quarantine for the troubled animals, for large numbers follow them into the stable and cause great annoyance to cows and milkers. I have not heard of anything yet that appears to me as a feasible ren.edy, of course, judging from my experience and observation.

appears to me as a reason refriction, of course, judging from my experience and observation.

I think that we might have heard something about this peat through either Mr. Saunders or Mr. Drydon before it arrived at its present state. But, supposing some one had warned the farmers, and pointed out a sure antidote, it would not have availed much. You cannot get farmers to benefit themselves by applications to their land, to their crops, to their houses, barns, and live stock, even when the fact of profit has been demonstrated before their very eyes. It is a trulem that paris green applied to potatoes will kill the larve of the beetle, and every year, for many years, this remedy has been applied—with what success? The beetle is just as numerous here this year as it ever was. Now, if every farmer, or grower of potatoes, would use the green thoroughly, as I do, there would not be a bug in this Province next year.

There are many instances of plants, animals and insects being imported into foreign countries, and becoming such a pest as to baffle all man's powers to counteract. Witness the thistle, and rabbit in Australia, and it appears to me the horn fly has come to stay.

The Outlook for Farmers.

The Outlook for Farmers.

Georgia's watermelon crop has brought into the State about $500,000 this season. The crop was not as large as that of last year, but it has been handled more judiciously and brought larger profit. The Ocean Steamship Company carried nearly 1,000,000 melons to New York and over 250,000 to Boston. The movement west increases every year, and was much larger this season than last.

The New Orleans Picasume digs out some important figures on the weed question in a statement of the amount of seeds muny varieties of noxious weeds will produce. —In the estimate of ylelds of grain made during the past month, it is to be carefully noted that the yields are for the most part based upon actual threshing results. In 1891 the August estimate was found to be considerably below the actual yield, the grain as a rule having been much heavier and thicker ably below the actual yield, the grain as a rule having been much heavier and thicker than was at first supposed. Last year was a most favorable, and from the many comments accompanying the estimates of yield referring to shrunken grains, too rapid filling and ripening, it is greatly to be feared that more exact determinations made subsequently will prove the estimated yields of the various grains too high rather than too low.

made subsequently will prove the estimated yields of the various grains too high rather than too low.

—Many potatoes are lost every year by leaving them in the ground where they grow until the middle of autumn, or until the soil is converted into mud by the autumn rains, and not unfrequently till a large portion of them are ruined by rotting. When dug, they come out of the ground covered with mud, and in a condition to favor the increase of rot in winter. Instead of pursuing this mistaken course, dig them as soon as the tops cease growing and the leaves begin to wither. Place them in the coolest outhouse, where there is enough ventilation to prevent the accumulation of bad air, but not to expose them to the wind or to much light. During the latter part of August, the soil will be dry enough to separate freely from them, and to leave a bright clean exterior, and with the requisites mentioned there will be little tendency to rot. There are now crops of early potatoes all through the country, lying in the ground without any possible change, except becoming more and more liable to be affected by the rot. Properly housed they will keep better; or if such a place cannot be provided, put them in heaps in a cool place and cover them well with straw, leaving small openings as far as may be required, for sufficient ventilation.
