VIOLENT LOVE-MAKING

A Young and Beautiful Princess Abducted During a Fete.

Tiffis, Feb. 16.-Trans-Caucasian society is excited over the abduction of the young, beautiful and rich Princess Samson Tzulukidze of Kutais, one of the wealthiest of the old Georgian families of that part of the Caucasus. The Princess is only 17 years of age, but has had many aspirants for her hand among the impedunious sprigs of nobilty of the Province of Kutais. A short time ago the young lady, with her mother, went to a fete given by a member of the family, who had a hand in the plot. The usual galety of a Georgian fete prevailed, and toasts drunk in the light wine of the Trans-Caucasus added animation to the occasion. But amid the clinking A Proclamation Issued Annexing of glasses to the pledge, "Allah-ver-di" (God give you health), and the singing of the Georgian bacchanalian refrain, "Mraval jamilerre," neither mother for daughter had a suspicion of what was coming. Towards the end of the entertainment the lady of the house inder pretense of a headache, left the company, followed by the other ladies present, the young princess straying to a part of the house by herself. Sud-denly one of the more audacious of her admirers appeared, and in spite of her Glasgow, caused by the retirement of cries and struggles carried her off to Sir George A. Trevelyan (Liberal), was held today, resulting in the return of Sir Charles Cameron (Liberal), by 4.—

gents were called upon to cease hos-ilities pending the decision of the powers as to the future of Crete.

To this the Greek commander replied: "I have come here with four battalions of Greek troops, with orders to occupy the country, and I must carry out my orders, pending further instructions."

The orders of the foreign admirals being confined to prevent the landing of Greek forces at Canea, Retimo and Heraklion, they could not interfere with the Greeks. Later an officer of Gendarmeries was sent to Akrotiri to notify the insurgents of the joint ocupation of Canea by the forces of the powers, and calling upon them to down their arms and cease hostilities. The insurgent leaders promised to consider the matter, and it is un-derstood will send a delegation for that purpose to Canea. The occupation of Canea was carried out by the foreign fleets with the consent of the Turkish officials, and is not in any way likely to add to the complications at Constantinople. The Turkish authorities are demoralized and are simply following out the recommendations they receive from the foreign admirals, who are acting in ac-

ANNEXATION OF CRETE. It is thought certain that the next departure will be the establishment of a provisional Christian Government of rete, pending consent of the powers being given to the annexation of the island to Greece. If Turkey is willing to accept the situation and submit to annexation of Crete to Greece, the foreign marines will be promptly withdrawn and Greece, in turn, will take her fleet from Cretan waters. practically belongs to Greece. If Turkey accepts the situation the marines withdraw, and Crete will pass under the sovereignty of Greece. The Grecian Government, it is asserted, has signified its assent to this arrangement, and Prince George and his flotilla will be withdrawn from Cretan PROTEST BY THE PORTE. London, Feb. 16.-A Times special from Constantinople says that the Porte is sending a note to Greece and threatens to break off diplomatic relations unless the Greek squadron withdrawn from Turkish waters. Ismail Bey, the Turkish official who had succeeded Berovitch Pasha as Governor of Crete, has been in comnunication with the foreign admirals, and is understood to have entered a ormal protest against the landing of the Greek forces at Platonics. A WILLFUL GIRL Shot Herself Because She Couldn't Go to a Party.

Apology Offered

By Conservative Agents for Charges Made Against London Liberals.

The Plea of Mistaken Identity Tendered-A Humiliating Situation.

The Facts of the Matter - Parties Ag grieved Have No Redress

Brantford Expositor of Monday. The farce of bringing three young nen from London and chargin; them with having personated voters in the interest of the Liberal candidate, has completely "petered out," as the sayng goes. On Saturday the Expositor said the charges were incapable of the slightest proof. The following letter of apology was received from Messrs. Wilson & Watts, the legal advisers of the complainants:

"Brantford, Ont., Feb. 1:, '97. "J. T. Hewitt, Esq., Barrister, City:
"Dear Sir,—Re O'Gorman and Coop er, I find on further investigation that Mr. O'Gorman and Mr. Cooper were not the parties that were guilty of personation at the last election, and, therefore, we will not proceed further in the presentation of informations laid in the matter. "I regret that Mr. O'Gorman and Mr. Cooper were mistaken for the of mistaken identity. 'Yours truly "P. S.—In reference to Mr. Fitzhenry, we take it for granted that his case was disposed of last Wednesday, he not being the man intended for the information."

The facts of the case, and the extremely flimsy pretexts upon which the names of three respectable young men were dragged in the mud in the effort to create an impression that hat Liberal victory was the result of personation, may be judged from the following narrative of the circum-

William Lockie's name appears on polling subdivison No. 8, at the fire hall. Someone voted on the name, either William Lockie himself or some one for him. Be that as it may, the Liberal scrutineer objected to the man, challenged his vote and make him take the oath. No objection was raised to him by the other side. Afterwards the Conservative scrutine claimed that the man who voted was not Lockie, and described the part who did so as a large, tall man. On the strength of this information Mr Adams, who had been on the Indian reserve all day until 4 o'clock, swor out an information against O'Gorman, who, in company with Mr Cooper, had charge of bringing the Liberal vote from London and there abouts to Brantford. The purport of Mr. Adams' oath was that he did not believe Mr. O'Gorman would attend a summons, and so it would be neces man and Mr. Cooper were at once apprised of the fact, and they at once started for Brantford, passing on the way the constable who had charge of the warrants. They instantly pre-sented themselves before the chief of police and demanded an explanation Conservative scrutineers, were supposed to have described Mi O'Gorman, immediately saw he wa not the man. The deputy returning officers, the poll clerk, the two Liberal scrutineer and the remaining scrutineer unhesitatingly said the same thing. Mr. O'Gorman was acquitted of the charge. And now with regard to Mr. Cooper: That person was charged with the ludicrous charge of having personated Mr. George D. Smith, the city hall janitor. Mr. Cooper is a young man of some 20 years of age, while Mr. Smith is a middle-aged man with a full beard, yet Mr. Cooper was charged with impersonating the janicharged with impersonating the jani-tor. Mr. George D. Smith's name ap-pears on two subdivisions, viz., No. 11, at the court house, and No. 12, at Peel street. The genial janitor voted at the court house. He was subse-quently told that he had been personated at No. 13. He, of course, reported the matter. What were the facts? No man applied for a ballot in the name of George D. Smith. The facts were inquired into, and what were they? A man came to the outside scrutineers, and in passing in, said his name was George D. Smith. When he got inside, however, he asked for a ballot in the name of Henry R. The Liberal scrutineer Patterson Mr. Edmund Harley, who had Patter son marked as a Conservative and a being in Manitoba, at once objected request of Mr. Harley the man took the oath. No objection was made to him by the Conservative scrutine According to Mr. Harley, this man was a short man with whiskers, and as unlike Mr. Cooper as any two men could possibly be. When Mr. Cooper was presented to the Liberal and Conservative scrutineers they all denied ever having seen him before. It was on this kind of evidence that two young men were brought from London and charged with a most serious of ence, annoyance and reproach. As to Mr. Fitzhenry: The attempt to connect him was more flagrant still. He had never seen Brantford in all his life, until he came to answer serious charge laid against him. This, then, is the sum and sub-stance of the loudly proclaimed charges of wholesale personation adequate remedy for persons placed in the position of these three young men. Their only remedy is an action for damages against the who may, or who may not, parties, who make be worth a cent.

MR. GLADSTONE'S MOTHER. Literary Digest.

In reproducing Justin McCanthy's Story of Gladstone's Life" outlook, we noted the fact that the biographer had very butle to say of Mr. Gladstone's mother. A Canadian reader of the Outlook, noticing the same omission, has since written to that journal as follows: "When one observes that Mr. McCarthy traces the genealogy upon the father's side back to the close of the thirteenth century and shows how an ancestor, Herbert de Gledistames, figures as one of the de theustaires, ingures as one of the lairds 'who swore fealty to Edward I.' one wonders why the mother should not be as much as mentioned by name. 'He (the father) was a pure Lowland Scotchman, and he married an Highland Scotchwoman.' Yes, but that woman could also trace here lies. that woman could also trace her line-age back to a thirteenth-century man who won against Edward I. one of the world's decisive battles and secured for Scotland her independence. Anne Robertson was descended in a direct line from Robert the Bruce. Upon reading the scant reference to this bot street.

THE WONDERS OF MODERN CHEMISTRY SARSAPARILLIAN AND ITS ASSOCIATES.

DR. RADWAY'S SARSAPARILLIAN RE-SOLVENT cures with astonishing rapidity diseases hitherto considered incurable, and invests those marked with the seal of death with new life, vigorous health and strength, with the purest and richest blood that ever flowed through the veins of man, woman or child.

For years Dr. Radway has been laboring in the vineyard of medical science in improving the process of obtaining the active properties from medicinal substances without heat. This great desideratum he has successfully accomplished, so that every ingredient used in Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent and the Ready Relief and Radway's Pills are the pure, unadulterated, active properties. In Radway's Sarsaparillian Resolvent one teaspoonful contains more of the pure curative principle of Sarsaparilla than will be found in a quart bottle of the weak decoctions of the advertised Sarsaparillas.

In Tumors, Nodes, Hard Lumps and Syphiloid Ulcers; in Dropsy, in Venereal Sore Threat, Ulcers, and in Tubercles of the Lungs; in Gout, Rheumatism, Rickets; in Mercurial Deposits—it is in these terrible forms of disease, where the human body has become a complete wreck, and where every hour of existence is a torture, wherein, this great remedy challenges the astonishment and admiration of the sick. It is in such cases, where all the pieasures of existence appearent off from the unfortunate, and by its wonderful, almost supernatural agency it restores the hopeless to new life and new existence, where this great remedy stands alone in its might and power.

In the ordinary skin diseases that every one is more or less troubled with, a few doses will, in most cases, and a few bottles in the more aggravated forms, work a permanent cure. guilty parties. It was clearly a case TUMOR CURED.

TUMOR CURED

Dr. Radway, New York—Dear Sir: For temouragement of others in similar circum stances to what I have been, I think it right forme to return my heartfelt thanks to you for the benefit I have received from the use of the Radway medicines. I had been afflicted over six years with tumor in the abdomen. Had been to six of the best doctors I could hear of in Iowa. They all told me the same story, that my trouble was out of the reach of medicine, and that it would in time kill me. I happened to see in your Almanac about tumers being cured. I immediately, as a last resort, resolved to try your treatment. To my great surprise I soon experienced good effects, and with only using three botties of the Resolvent, one of the Rady Relief, and by continuing on with the Pills longer, I was completely cured. I was so enlarged that I was 4 feet 2 inches around, while now I measure 2; feet around. Before using your medicine I had not laid down in six months. Now, if this sketch will be of any benefit to suffering humanity, I am willing to have it published. Yours with respects.

A. SLATER,

It caused a jump of the to the at the start and kept the crowd in a nervoid condition afterwards. The decline of 15-16 to 1 point in English consols added to the apprehension of shorts, who covered with considerable freedom. The regular Monday statistics also encouraged the buying and holding of wheat. There was a decrease in the visible supply of 1,227,600 bu, and one of $80,000 bu in the amount of ocean passage. The English visible supply was reduced 235,000 bu. The world's shipments for the week were extremely light, at 3,337,000 bu, or just about one-half the theoretical requirements of importing countries. After the opening, which was very strong, prices cased off almost a full cent, but later rose 1½ from the inside, losing a part of the improvement in the last hour. Closing Paris and Antwerp cables were lower. Berlin was 4 mark higher. Liverpool opened 4d lower and closed 3d higher than Saturday. May wheat opened from 75½ to 75½ c, sold between 74½ c and 75½c, closing at 75½ to 75½c—1½c higher than Saturday. Cash wheat was film and 1½c kigher. Corn advanced ½c and oats ½c. THE WEATHER TODAY: Cloudy to fair.

A pleased customer is our best advertisement. It is easy to un derstand why. Pleased customers not only return when in need of more goods, but they send others. That's one reason why we are so particular about the quality, style and price of our goods; another reason is that IT IS RIGHT to be particular, not only in the way a customer is treated, but in the quality of goods sold. It is being particular about such things that recommends our store to purchasers, and that brings the crowds to us-even though they have to pass other stores to

A Big Bundle.

These days we are pleasing many customers. It costs us quite a bi to do it, but when goods are selling at regular prices those who take advantage of the present low prices will come back and be pleased to buy. In many instances we are giving TWO DOLLARS worth of goods-not shoddy-for one dollar. This is where we lose. But in the long run we would prefer you to have the profit than to be compelled to bring out for sale old goods next year. If styles never changed things would be different; but they do change, and this store keeps right up with every change and enables its customers to have the latest cut in the newest fashionable material. Those who are keen for a genuine bargain in Dress Tweeds, Jackets, Furs, etc., are invited to see what we can do. This short space prevents our going into detail, but customers can rest assured that when we say a bargain is awaiting them-THAT'S WHAT WE MEAN. Remember, all the goods marked down since stock taking will be cleared out as quickly as possible, and if you expect to take advantage of the low prices don't delay,

"Hungry Babies."

AM raising my baby on MELLIN's FOOD and I find it to be a great benefit to her. I commenced using it when she was about one month old. Before I used MEL-LIN'S FOOD I gave her cow's milk alone, and she always seemed as hungry when she got through nursing as she was before: but now a better, healthier child cannot be found, and she never cries. I cannot say enough for MELLIN'S FOOD. MRS. ELLA M. WELLS. Sellersburg, Ind.

A baby should not be "hungry all the time" any more than an adult; neither should a baby be eating all the time.

An infant that is hungry all the time is not getting sufficient nourishment even if he is eating all the time. The amount of food digested is what satisfies the baby and makes him grow.

MELLIN'S FOOD contains the proper elements of nutrition in sufficient quantity to satisfy the child's appetite and promote the perfect growth of the body. Write to us (a postal will do) and we will Thomas McEvoy was an interested party in the notes given, and the bank instructed Mr. J. M. McEvoy to take proceedings when the mortgage became due. This was done, and the goods sold to John Graham, of this city, for $30 50. The goods were finally turned over to Thomas McEvoy, and last Wednesday Gitty removed them, whereupon a search warrant was issued. The constables were ordered to arrest Gitty if any of the goods were found on the premises. A shed door was broken open and McEvoy's cow was found. Gitty was placed under arrest by Detective Ward, who, in driving in to the lockthrough illness.

THE SEASON'S EVENING TOILETS.

ful Dinner Gown-The Shirred Sleeves The Stomacher Design-Rungarian Costumes-A Young Lady's Ball Dress. [Copyright, 1897, by American Press Assecta-

Even the prettiest gloves, reaching nearly to the shoulders, are not good enough this season without some sort of trimming to add to their costliness. There are some everlaid with medallions of real point lace, others have beading done in finely cut steel or jet beads, and sometimes imitations of gold or silver beads sewed in among the jet. Others are daintily embroidered in soft floss silks, and still others have ruchings around them, made of tulle or narrow lace. The latest fancy has been to have them decorated at the top with three rows of dark fur. In some cases it is put around the glove, and in others it is set on in V points. It is so very odd that one scarcely knows whether it is pretty or not. One pair of flesh pink mousquetaires had brown stitching on the back of the hand and three V shaped applications of fur at the top. These gloves were arranged especially to be worn with a very rich ball gown of pink moire. The waist was covered with lace, and the sleeves were composed of two ruffies of lace and one of doubled moire. Down the right side was a cascade of lace from the right shoulder to the knee. There was a belt shaped to the bottom of the waist in points front and back, and the same extended up on the right side of the bodice to the shoulder and over. This belt was made of pink satin and embroidered with gold thread and set with imitation emeralds where leaves would be designated. Where one might look for flowers in the design there were little tufts of fur sewed on just like that on the gloves. It made the oddest piece of work I ever saw, and yet it was pretty. I mention it more to show how everything appears to be considered fashionable than in the expectation that others would follow the lead.

To return to gloves, I am told that gathered all the way across the back, and down each seam was sewed a fine line of jet trimming. There was a high pointed swiss girdle of heavy repped silk, with a rich trimming of cut jet around the bottom. There was a full vest of pale blue silk mull sawed at inch intervals, with rows of cut jet heads. There was a figure, bordered with the jet trimming and having a dog gollar, trimmed also with the jet.

ing a dog collar, frimmed also with the jet, and a puring of the blue mull above it. The sleeves were very novel, being, as I just explained, cut on the straight and having a straight line of the fine jet trimming along the seams. The wrists were finished off with jet and a culf of rep, edged with a double ruffle of the blue silk mull. It made altogether an elegant cos-tume. The electes were dignified and more artistic than those with the arbitrary little puffs, so often seen during this transition period in sleeves.

There was a very nevel inner gown shown in one grand establishment. This was of lifac satin duchess, with immense faint green figures in it resembling conventionalized clover leaves, put over the fabric very sparlagly. The gown was cut so as to have the leaves thrown into such position that they would appear as trim-ming on the skirt and sleeves. These were of the leg o' mutton variety, slashed into deep to be at the wrists and not trim-med there with lace, though I think they should have been, as the tabs looked hard. The bodice was made snug and plain, slightly pointed in front. There was a belt entirely covered with imitation emeralds and pink pearls. The wide pelerine collar was also made one stiff mass of these imitation jewels, the most of the pearls being of very large size. The collar was edged with two rows of white point de paris lace, and the stomacher front was filled in with it. The lines around the wrist were not softened by lace. This style of gown was suitable only for a middle aged person. For the young there was a pretty old ose surah, with two narrow accordion plaited ruffles of old gold silk muslin around the bottom. This is the first time I have seen that always pleasing combination of color for a long while. There was a plaited girdle of old gold satin, with pretty bows in the back where it closed. These had strass buckles in the centers. The puffed sleeves were of the satin, with two ruffles of the mull above. Around the neck there was a band of fine houlton embroidery, and this was fulled on down the front in the form of a stomacher, with several bows of old gold satin, like those on the

The stomacher design is talked of as a new idea, and it may suddenly spring into high favor. The Hungarian national full dress requires a velvet bodice, low in the neck, though this may be put over another corsage to simulate it. The front of it is left open, and it is laced over a fancy sort of vest of some hin material. The lacing spring and during the summer for cycling and all outdoor sports and ordinary occasions, but the cuff part will not be so flaring as it used to be. These are more for their usefulness in protecting the wrists from the dust than for their strict beauty, though they are by no means ugly. This is the midseason, while the new spring street dresses are in course of construction and the social functions call for the handsome evening toilets. The tea gowns are sot worn so extensively as they were three seasons ago, but they make up in richness what they lack in number. The preferred design this year is to have, or appear to have, a complete underdress of some light and elegant fabric, with many folds and much fullness. Over this hangs a long surtout of black or very dark moire, or velvet, or brocade, lined with some rich silken fabric to match the undergown. Some of these surtouts have a watteau train, while others are slashed in the back and at the sides, the edges being bordered with jet or wax pearl beads. Some surtouts have sleeves and some have none, the full and generally rather diaphanous sleeves of the underdress showing through. That reminds me of another seen quite a number of evening dresses and dinner gowns, where there were sleeves reaching from the shoulder to the wrists, made of shirred silk muslin or crepe lisse. These long sleeves fit closely to the arm The shirring is always lengthwise, which makes them wrinkle the whole length. The tops are tacked in under the puffed or ruffled real sleeve to the gown. It is a very quaint fancy and a real boon to women with thin arms, though their use is not always confined to dresses for thin folks. I saw a very beautiful dinner gown made of heavy black velvet cut en princesse, with a demitrain. There were immense revers at the waist, which served a triple purpose. They were ornaments, they opened the front in V shape, and they lapped in surplice style. The revers were of ivory white satin, richly embroidered in gold thread. They, as well as the "sprung' plaiting, were bound with skunk fur. There was a full "tucker of pale pink silk muslin at the inner edge of the revers, and there were long shirred undersleeves of the pink muslin. It made a very striking and elegant costume. For the summer silks and many of the muslins and other soft, thin goods the gathered sleeves are also made. On the whole, I think these shirred sleeves much prettier than those cut straight and smooth. These are shirred up to very near the shoulde where they are met by puffs or ornamental "cap sleeves." Sleeves are very curious this spring. There are some out straight from the shoulder to wrist, with no curved seams, though they slant a little toward the wrist. The tops are plaited in to look as square as possible.

I noticed a very handsome costume of heavy black grosgrain silk. The skirt was pearls. The rich and beautiful Hungarian coat or cloak for the completion of this costume may be of black, white or dark blue cloth, but it should be richly braided with gold and black and have the hussar loops and buttons and the fur bordering. I cannot tell how very striking a costume this makes. Where the Hungarian laced waist is worn in a ballroom or at a small reception, opera or dinner the cloak is carelessly thrown over one shoulder; perhaps one arm is passed through the opening made for the purpose. The effect is not only handsome, but extremely picturesque.

The colorings in the Hungarian costumes are not so barbaric as are those of many other countries. The Bulgarian embroideries, with their melange of red, blue, green, and, in fact, every color in the rainbow, are quite popular, and those worked on the coarse, jutelike homespun weaves of wool and flax peculiar to that country bid fair to be much employed as adjuncts to the new and ugly burlap weaves, such as vests, figares, yokes, and, in short, every other needed accessory or trimming. new liberty wools, mixed silk and wool stuffs and the venetian cloths are all well liked. The loose, rough weaves predominate in all but the cloths. The bourette suitings in the warm wood browns and blacks are very stylish and almost universally becoming.

The dainty foulard silks in dots are really better liked than the sprawling scroll and arabesque designs. One exceedingly pretty frock of light gray foulard, with bright green dots, had a plain skirt. The waist was made with a yoke of brocade in gray and cream, with revers edged with lace. There was a folded moire stock, and belt made of moire, in watery green. The sleeves were puffed at the top and shirred all the rest of the way down the arm.

I must not omit to mention the very prettiest and most original ball dress I have seen yet for a young lady. It was of pure white silk mull, the skirt gathered and hemmed. The waist was baby shape, with a bertha of crepe lisse ruching and a spray of velvet nasturtiums across the front. The waist was defined to a point by a double ruche of lisse at the bottom. Across the three front breadths there was a delicate, rather straggling design representing nasturtiums in different shades of yellow and green, done in chentile embroid-The effect was as if the flowers were real and that they lay loosely against the filmy lisse. Around and through the flowers there wound a narrow white lace insertion sewed over still narrower black velvet ribbon, and this was sewed into true lovers' knots among the flowers. MATE LEROY.

The Violin.

Its Form Has Remained the Same Through Centuries.

Modern Ingenuity Has Failed to Improve It-Paganini the Unequaled Master the Noble Instrument.

The violin consists of three parts, the neck, the table and the sounding board. The strings are tuned in fifths, the com pass of the instrument exceeding three octaves. The violin assumed its present shape in the beginning of the seventeenth century. Many attempts have been made to improve upon the original idea, but it is significant that the oldest violins are ever rgarded as the best. The instru ments manufactured by the Arnati, Stradivarius and Gnarnerius families, of Cremona, are especially celebrated.

Stradivarius, or more properly, Antonio Stradivari, the great violin maker, was born in 1649 and died in 1737. Almost the whole of his life was passed in Cremona, Italy, where, in his gloomy workshop, he spent his days and most of his nights. He was in early life a workman in the violin factory of Amati, also a famous violin maker, and there learned his trade. Evidence of his workmanship is thought to appear in many of the Amati violins, which become the more valuable from that circumstance. The violins made by Stradivarius in his prime differ in many particulars from those of previous makers. Though the differences, in themselves, seem trifling, the sum was sufficient to bring the violins of this celebrated maker into the nighest repute, even in his own time, and no subsequent maker has been able to effect any improvement in the manufact ture of this delicate instrument. The secret of the superior excellence of a genuine Strad arius violin' is believed to be partly in the wood employed, partly in the outlines and partly in the varnish said to be a secret composition. The greatest improvements he effected were in the bridge, which, before his time, was made almost at haphazard, and in fixing the exact shape of the sound holes and their position in the instrument. His violins, in his own time, were sold for four louis d'or, in England for £4. Nearly a thousand violins from this factory are known to exist, and he made a great many kits, lyres, mandolins, theorbos. lutes and guitars. His instruments are very unequal, some being too weak to bear the pressure of the bow in playing, but a genuine Stradi arius, of good quality, has been known to change hands at from $2,000 to $4,000. The name of Amati was borne by a large family of violinmakers at Cremona in Italy during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Cremona was at that time the heart of a rich agricultural district and had many wealthy churches and monasteries. It was, therefore, a great musical and artistic center, and for two centuries enjoyed almost a monopoly of the manufacture, not only of violins, but of violas, violoncellos, basses, mandolins, guitars and other ringed instruments. The Amatis were the founders of violinmaking in Cremona, and one of the most famous of the family was Nicola, or Nicolo. Cramona contin ued to be famous for its violins till about 1760, the names of Stradivari, Juarneri, Landolfi and Seraf'n being almost as famous as that of Amati. The value of the violin depends altogether on its qualities and in no degree on the name of the maker, nor on the ornamentation. There is a common superstition that every violin bearing the name of one of the great Cremona makers is a treasure from that circumstance alone, but the fact is that the violins of Cremona are very unequal, and while some are practically priceless, others are worthless save as curios; not a few, even of those made by Amati and Stradivari, being too weak to bear the strain incident on the high pitch of the present day. Instances have been known of the violins of Amati and Stradivari changing hands at a price of several thousands of dollars, but such prices are dictated more by fancy than by the real merits of the violins. Why, it may be asked, was the violin called a fiddle? The violin is said to be the modern form of the viola da braccio. a small viol supported on the arm. It differed from the true viol in having the back as well as the front arched, in the number of strings, and in various technical points. Earlier than the viol were the troubadours' instruments, small bowed instruments known variously as geiges, crowds, rebecks and fidels. They were rested on the shoulder and played with deeply curved bows, and were much smaller than the modern violin. Originally they were so small that they produced only shrill notes, fit to accompany boys' voices; to get deeper tones for men's voices, larger instruments were used, and from them came the viols, and from the viols the violin was refined. The name fiddle, though now used almost lways contemptuously or humorously is the proper English name for the violin. The word comes from the middle Latin vitula, a fiddle, and it is found also in the Tetuonic languages in various forms. genius with the violin that the world ever knew. His technique was something wonderful, but mere technique would never have accomplished the results he btained, nor would it have thrown the musical world into spasms of admiration as he did. The accounts of his playing seem almost incredible. With the first note the audience was spellbound and remained so to the last. From the violin he drew tones which were unsuspected to exist and invented and played passages believed to be impossible. Moore said: 'Paganini can play divinely, and does so for a minute or two, then come his tricks and surprises, his bow in convulsions, his enharmonics like the mewing of an expiring cat." The main technical features of Paganini's playing were his unfailing intonations, his wonderful rapidity, and a command never equaled of harmonics and double harmonics. He was wonderfully tricky, however, and often accomplished effects not understood even by experts, by turning his violin in a different manner from that usually employed. A certain trick passage, running up two octaves while holding B flat, seems to be impossible to the ordinary violinist, but, it is said, by tuning a semi-tone higher the passage presents no unusual difficulty. He never allowed anyone to hear him tane his violin, and when professional people attempted to solve the problem of his playing by requesting him to play in private, he invariably contrived, in some way or other, to disappoint their expectations. The secret of his execution died with him, and he has never been equalled as a

OATS AND PEAS. Grown For Summer Ensilage by England Farmer.

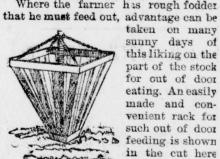

"We have hardly come to an understanding of a suitable rotation of soiling Grops and the methods of handling them before the summer silo offers itself as a rival to the soiling system. This new method obviates some of the objections to soiling. It is cheaper to handle a whole erop at once than in fragments every day in all weathers. The handling of the crop is concentrated and therefore cheapened. The ground is promptly cleared for the next crop. If spring grown crops can be matured and harvested into the empty corn silo in time to meet the midsummer drought, we are saving expense in several directions. Under our conditions this can be done," writes a Connecticut farmer to Rural New Yorker. Following are additional gleanings from the same source: The oat and pea crop here is prepared for and sown in the same manner as oats are alone. About 1 1-2 bushels of each per acre are sown. As far as the stage for cutting is concerned, I look for the time when the oats are going out of the milk and the peas are pretty well podded, although the matter is more often decided by the lodging of the crop. When considerable of the crop goes down, the sooner it is cut the better. Our silo is 15 feet square and 20 deep. In winter we feed 22 or 23 cattle from the top of it, and in cool weather this does well enough. But in summer we feed some half dozen less, and with the hot weather one-half the above surface would be plenty large enough. For a summer silo I would say, therefore, get as much depth as possible and not more than six or seven square feet per animal of top surface. If a silo is airtight and frostproof, it will exclude warm air as well as cold, and the only point of attack and of resistance will be from

We have put in oat and pea ensilage whole as it was cut in the field, and cut into 1 1-2 inch lengths. In either case the ensilage was as palatable as the best corn ensilage. We lost considerable on the outside from dry mold because we had not sufficient pressure to pack it tightly. If there is a preponderance of oats in the crop, it should go into the silo very wet, as the hollow straw carries so much air. If peas predominate, not so much exterior moisture is necessary. Generally speaking, the crop should be carted as fast as cut. We have put eats and peas into our empty corn silo four or five times, and, while there is yet much to learn. I believe that the practice will, before many years, have as firm a hold as the corn silo.

in the cut here reproduced from RACK FOR OUTDOOR the New York FEEDING. Tribune. It can be reached by the stock from four sides, and the last mouthful can be reached, as the bottom is close in to the post in the center. With the sides spread still more, large stock can feed from the outside and smaller stock farther in under the sides. These sides are made of separate pieces, four in all, and each side is held up by ropes or chains attached to the post. The sides may hook together at the bottom.

Fighting Off a Frost. The idea is an old one of fighting off a late frost through orchids, etc., by building small fires. In California, where fruit growers have met with success, the best results have been gained by burning a damp smudge. Small fires of damp straw or stable manure, it is claimed, have saved plantations. Sometimes bags of wet stable manure, weighing about 90 pounds each, are distributed through the orchard. When frost threatens, a little kerosene is poured on each sack and fired. The wet manure burns slowly, sending off large quantities of moisture in the form of vapor, and it is this watery vapor or fog which prevents the frost.

Different growers have different methods for creating this artificial fog. One of them uses frames made of chicken yard netting mounted on wagons filled with wet manure or straw. Under them pots of tar or petroleum are kept burning, and as the heat sends up a cloud of moisture the wagon is slowly hauled about the orchard. Others employ sim-Paganini was the most remarkable | ilar fires as stationary smudges, the wire netting being stretched between four stakes driven in the ground.

News and Notes. A new fungicide for the treatment of smuts bears the name ceres-pulver. It consists mainly of potassium sulphide. An extra early forcing radish, remarkable for the small size of its leaves and called leafless radish, is said to be of excellent quality. An exchange calls attention to a neat package for green beans, peas, etc. It is the half barrel basket. It is an exaggerated edition of the peach basket, though much higher in proportion to its size. It has a wooden cover.

Farm Journal says: Do not plan to plant any one kind of fruit tree in a solid block. Be sure and mix the varieties. Otherwise the orchard will never bear as it skould

The practice of feeding the grain crops, oats or oats and peas unthrashed is becoming common in some localities. The hot water treatment is now very generally advised for the prevention of smut of oats, wheat and barley. Tests on slag of different degrees of fineness showed that the solubility increased with the fineness of the particles.

In the Police Court. Few things are more depressing to the better citizens of a republic than some of the newspaper manifestations of American humor, of which we hear so much. Many of them are silly, flippant and tasteless. Perhaps the most revolting are those which aim to convert the sordid and miserable routine of the police court into a cheap show, enlivened by smart remarks and cynical jokes, at the expense of culprits and witnesses alike Any person who has been unfortunate enough to chance upon anything of the sort recently, will do well to turn to the article entitled "Police Report" in Mr. W. D. Howells' "Impressions and Experiences," by way of taking the taste out of his mouth.

It is said that Prof. John Stuart Blackie often told "on himself" this anecdote, which seems to indicate that personalities are not agreeable, even to those who deserve criticism: This genial old professor used to form a very picturesque feature in the Edinburgh streets. He was a wiry and hair falling in ringlets about his
