The Little Traveller.

Straight down the city's crowded street
A little Traveller went;
The eager throng, with hurrying feet,
On gain or pleasure bent,
Made free for him a narrow way,
But none among them bid him stay.

Only a child, yet for his sake
Wealth, thoughtful, stepped aside,
Power waved a while its right of place,
And Rank forgot its pride,
While many a head a moment bent,
As on the little Traveller went.

A stranger from some far-off land
Spoke then in doubtful tone:
"Tis said your race bow not to kings,
But unto Worth alone,
Who, then, is this to whom all pay
Such homage in the crowded way?"

"A Traveller, more noble far
Than kings of noblest age;
Purer than any praying priest,
Wiser than any sage,
He rests in yonder holy place;
Come, thou, and look upon his face."

The tender lights fell soft and dim;
The air was thrilled with psalms;
He lay in coffin white and small,
With lilies in his palms—
Serenely peaceful, as those sleep
Who have no longer watch to keep.

O happy Traveller! thus to win,
While yet unsoiled by tears,
The home that we shall hardly find
Through weeping, weary years,
Whose small, unsandalled feet may stray
On heights for which we vainly pray!

EVERY DAY THROWS A SHADOW.

CHAPTER II

"I suppose it's some confounded tick or other, and the old boy won't fork out." Harry Nash reached the office, and walked into his father's private room. Mr. Nash was not there.

"Jameson, how long has my father been out?"

"About half an hour, sir. I expect him here every minute."

The young man slammed the door, and left.

He went to his father's residence, and shut himself in his own room.

The old housekeeper, who had often nursed him when he was a child, came to see him in very great perturbation.

"Now, what's the matter wi' ye Master Harry?" said the old woman. Sure you're not a going to be ill wi' the fever, or none o' them disorders? Bless the boy! how his forehead burns."

And she placed her great hand on his brow.

"No, Martha; it's only a headache. I shan't move out of the room to-day. The best thing I can do is to keep quiet."

"Well, poor soul, he shall do as he likes," rejoined Martha. "I'll bring ye up soup and pudding soon and it'll do ye good."

And she moved out of the room, thinking, as all housekeepers do, that the best cure for all ailments is eating and drinking.

Harry Nash paced the room, and found little rest during the night.

"I will not marry that woman," he said to himself, "I cannot. I should but embitter my own life, and hers as well. If I do not marry Jane, I will have no other. No! I will go to sea, and leave my wretched father to his fate."

He got up late next morning, fully determined to act upon his resolution.

He went to the office to acquaint his father with his plans.

Mr. Nash was absent.

The head clerk said he would probably be there soon.

"Then I will wait till he comes in."

He had not been there five minutes before there was a rap at the door.

"There is a person I have never seen before in the waiting-room, sir," said Jameson; "he has the appearance of coming from abroad. He has asked several curious questions about the family, and says he should like to see you till your father comes."

"Show him in," said Harry Nash, his lips quivering with the thought that it might be some one come to proclaim his father's poverty.

CHAPTER III.

The stranger entered the room. He was a tall, dark man, with moustache and beard, the length of which showed that it was nursed in a warmer climate than ours.

"Mr. Harry Nash, I presume?" said the stranger.

The young man bowed.

The other threw himself into a seat in a lounging position.

"You don't remember me, possibly?" the stranger began; "and I should not have known you had I met you. The last time we met you were a child scarcely a year old."

"And might I ask whom I have the pleasure of addressing?"

"Edward Wilmot, is—"

The young fellow started.

"My mother's name was Wilmot," he said.

"It was," rejoined the other. "She died a few months after your birth. Harry Nash," he continued, rising, and shaking him warmly by the hand, "I am your uncle!"

"And you have not been in England for years," said his nephew, returning his warm shake of the hand.

"Not for twenty-three years," replied Wilmot. "I should never have left my country had it not been for your father's—"

At this moment Mr. Nash entered. He fell back against the wall at the sight of Wilmot, and a ghastly paleness overspread his face.

"You're here!" he gasped. "I thought you were dead long since!"

"It is not your fault that I am here!" said Wilmot, sternly.

"Had you had your wish, I were starved to death years ago."

He glared fiercely at the attorney from under his shaggy eyebrows.

"Ah!" he continued, "you may well be concerned, you may well sink down in a chair. You ruined me and my only brother; you deprived us of our father's hard-earned money. The greater part of that money passed into your own pocket. You laughed coldly at me when I asked you for a few pounds to pay my passage to Australia. I cursed you—in this very room I cursed you—and prayed that the money of which you robbed us, might canker your heart and devour you. 'Gold is current coin,' you said, 'and leaves no stain on the holder's hand.' I have always remembered those words—they have gnawed my bosom. I have burnt with passion when I recalled your cold sneer, 'You yet owe me much, and if you do not at once leave the office your body shall wither in a debtor's prison. Nash! if any man deserved a beggar's fate 'tis you!'"

The old solicitor groaned and writhed in his seat.

"Curse me not for the past, Wilmot," groaned he, "your wish is fulfilled—I am a beggar and an outcast!"

Wilmot started back in amazement.

"It is true," said he, clasping the back of his chair convulsively, "I am in debt to the amount of forty thousand pounds. There is the letter I received but yesterday," and he staggered up and unlocked a drawer; "read it for yourself, and glory in the downfall of the man who ruined you."

Harry Nash rose, and placed his DIDACTICS.

We have undergone so many changes of feeling in regard to this subject that we can hardly tell just how to view it.

First we viewed it as a useless innovation, a waste of money, and felt that the proper place for a chair of that kind was at the Normal School Truro. In fact we were the first paper to raise a dissenting voice, the other papers having all expressed very favorable opinions in regard to it.

Then every one started. Here was a grand opportunity to write for the press, to make a brilliant spread of themselves. Champions of the Baptist denomination, graduates of Acadia arose as one man and all said the same thing with a very slight change of language (some being more poetical than others and some having a little more sense, but not much) and one or two ideas in each showing the individuality of the writer.

Then the strangest thing of all took place. No one replied but Mr. Eaton and he, poor man was so soon trodden under foot that he faded away and left the field.

The governors have taken no public notice of it whatever, Dr. Rand has said nothing has not even taken the trouble to tell the people what Didactics means and what he is going to teach. He takes no more notice of them than if they were not in existence, and probably were the truth told that is what ails half of them. He is making preparations to come here and in all probability it will not be until he has got fairly to work that the public at large or any one else for that matter will know what Didactics is.

Now for Certainties. First the grand certainty is that Dr. Rand will come to Wolfville and take his place as Professor of Didactics. Second, that the energetic correspondents will wait in vain for an answer to their effusions. Third the general public will be greatly astonished when they get Dr. Rand's definition of Didactics. Fourth, when Dr. Rand takes his chair there will be an awful disturbance among the Baptists. We don't profess to be a prophet but just wait awhile.

GENERAL NEWS.

U. S. ELECTIONS.—Butler has been defeated in Massachusetts by from 15 000 to 20,000 and the Republicans have secured three fourths of the whole legislative machinery. Connecticut has been carried by the Democrats, New Jersey elected Abbott (democratic) governor by 25,000. The Democratic ticket is carried. New York has gone Democratic by probably 45,000 majority.

The Mark Lane express in its weekly report dated Oct. 30th says:—The weather has generally been fine and mild and the land is in an excellent condition for sowing. Prices are weaker. All qualities of wheat except fine are cheaper. Flour is difficult to sell and the market favors buyers. Mixed American maize is scarce and dearer. The tendency of the Flour market is downward.

On the evening of Oct. 30th a terrible explosion occurred at London near the Praid St. underground station on the Metropolitan Railway, almost simultaneously a violent explosion occurred on the underground Railway between Charing Cross and Westminster stations. The sound in both cases was like that of Artillery. Carriage lamps, windows etc. were smashed and all traffic suspended. Both explosions are matters of greatest mystery and by some are thought to be of Fenian origin.

Oh the 18th of Nov. the new Standard of time will be adopted by the railways of Canada and the United States, in accordance with the plan suggested by Prof. Abbe, of the U. S. Signal Service, and Mr. Sandford Flemming late Chief Engineer of the C. P. R.

The London Times in an editorial on the departure of Lord Lorne from Canada is very flattering to the Dominion. Canada's prospect is spoken of in glowing terms, the Dominion being described as loyal and law-abiding the least costly and least troublesome and yet the greatest of Briton's Colonial possessions.

Holmes and Bracken, the alleged dynamite smugglers, were brought before Judge Thompson on Tuesday last on an Habeas corpus. His Lordship dismissed the prisoners on that charge on the grounds of illegal remand by the Stipendiary Magistrate.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions of our correspondents.]

To the Editor of the Acadian,
Sir:—

During the past few weeks several communications have appeared before the public in reference to the duties of the Municipal Council and assessors in making up the coming assessment, one writer in the Western Chronicle suggests that the Warden call the Council together to enact laws, and in response there appeared a long article in the W. C. purporting to be instructions passed by the Municipal Council and distributed among the assessors for their information. Now it appears to me that if the writer above referred to had made himself familiar with the laws of the land and also with the power of the Municipal Council he would not have advised such a course of proceeding. The Law as placed upon our Statute Book is very plain and any man of even ordinary intelligence could not misunderstand it without the Councilors authorizing the expense of printing and distributing such elaborate instruction, it surely reflects no credit on the intelligence of the person so appointed when such become necessary. If a little more discretion was observed in the selection of County Officers (Assessors in particular) it would not be necessary to go to such expense to instruct them. There are plenty of good and conscientious men in the several wards who would take the trouble to qualify themselves as to their respective duties and act accordingly. The law is not so much at fault as are the men who profess to carry it out. What think you of assessors sworn to faithful discharge of their duties and who sign a certificate that according to the best of their information they have assessed all the real and personal property in their respective district, place themselves upon the assessor's book as owing from $100 to $200 worth, when at the same time they know themselves to have at least $1000 worth. Could you expect fair play or justice from such? The remedy would be to appoint better men.

ODE TO DIDACTICS OR CHARGE OF SIXTEEN HUNDRED.

Sixty leagues, sixty leagues,
Sixty leagues onward,
Into ACADIA'S breach
Where Welton used to teach DIDACTICS thundered.
"Forward" the PEDAGOGUE said
And the wild charge he made
For the DIDACTIC Chair
Was Sixteen Hundred.

"Forward" the Pedagogue said
"Think not that I'm dismayed
Though all the Baptists know
They're to be plundered.
They raised a hue and cry,
To know the reason why
ACADIA'S so fierce to try
How much can be squandered."

"Baptists to right of me,
Baptists to left of me,
Baptists all round me
Sputtered and thundered:
Ink slingers splashed me well,
But though the college fell
Straight to the mouth of hell
DIDACTICS still must sell
For Sixteen Hundred."

"And all the Baptists say
What are Didactics pray
That there's so much to pay?
And it's much wondered
If all the Pedagogues
Are not just petty rogues
And all their Didactics
A set of scurvy tricks
To grab SIXTEEN HUNDRED.

Local and other Matters.

Look out for Lovell's.

Potatoes only 25 cents this week.

Lovell's beats the world.

The chimney on north end of Acadia Seminary burnt out on Tuesday evening and made quite a scene for a few minutes. No damage was done.

A favorite song in some localities: "Murmur gentle lyre."

Lovell's only 10, 15 and 20 cents.

We saw a funny man last week. He came into our office and guess what he said. He wanted to know "why he was like Baalam's ass," and when we all gave it up, he said it was "for instance." Oh! he was an awful funny man, in fact the funniest man we ever saw. His obituary will appear next week.

ACCIDENT.—A horse belonging to Rev. J. B. Hemen: got scared the other day while standing near the Post Office and running down the street he caught on a post and tore the shafts off the waggon. No other damage was done.

A team belonging to a man from Gaspereaux got scared at two bicycles coming down on the side walk and turned short around, breaking the axle, one wheel, and injuring one of the horses. Had the load not been a heavy one, more serious damage would have been done. The bicycles are causing considerable comment and some people are swearing vengeance on them. They should not be allowed on the side walk any way. The owner of the team will probably lose eight or ten dollars on repairs, and this should be made up by the bicyclists.

Ask your dealer for Lovell's.

JOURNALISTIC.—We understand that Mr. Elihu Woodworth resigned the editorial chair of the Western Chronicle about two weeks ago. This is a heavy loss to the Chronicle, and its publisher will find it very hard to get a man to fill his place. It is the old saying illustrated: "Never miss the water till the well runs dry." If any one fails to see wherein the loss comes, let him look over the editorials, and other original matter in last week's Western Chronicle. The editorial could be worked into a splendid dime novel and we would suggest as a name "Commanche Bill, or the howling terror of the West."

Local and other Matters.

DON'T FORGET—That A. M. Hoare is still agent for the Scotch Dye Works.

PERHAPS.—Perhaps the boys, who tie strings across the side walk, think it is smart but it is not and as they are known, the results, should anyone fall and get hurt might be startling to them.

WOLFVILLE PLANING AND MOULDING MILL.—Mouldings of any shape or size to 9 inches wide, and stair rails on hand or made to order. Also pine boards planed and matched. Dry pine lumber always on hand.

D. A. Munro.
Wolfville, Oct. 12th, 1883.

FALSE ALARM.—Some of the very smart boys built a bon-fire in front of the "Old Sem." one night this week and then raised an alarm of fire. Some fine night there will be a fire and the bell will ring and the boys yell, but all the same villagers will wake up, say naughty things about the boys making a noise and then turn over and have some more sleep and lo! in the morning the noble pile of buildings will be a little pile of ashes and the faculty will wonder why the people didn't know the difference between the boys' fun and the reality.

Just received 50 Bags Salt and 25 Casks Lime.
S. R. SLEEP.

Go to C. H. Borden's, Wolfville, and get the latest style of an American Hat.

THANKSGIVING.—A cold rainy day, six drunks, a fight, services in the churches and nothing in particular to do, made up the usual holiday programme for Thanksgiving day.

TIME TABLE CHANGE.—Owing to a rush of other work we have been unable to change the Time table this week but our readers will please note the following changes for Wolfville Station. Seeds.

A wonderful thing is a seed—
The one thing deathless forever!
The one thing changeless—utterly true—
Forever old, forever new,
And fickle and faithless never.

Plant blessings, and blessings will bloom;
Plant hate, and hate will grow;
You can sow to-day—to-morrow will bring
The blossom that proves what sort of a
Is the seed—the seed that you sow.

Part of the Young Men.

There is no occupation so grand, so valuable, so profitable, so independent, so pure. It gives you an early start, a steady career, during which you gain strength during the summer. It is a home where good morals can be entertained, without those allurements which are always predominant in city life.

He who tills the soil is engaged in an honorable occupation. Agriculture is the great st among the arts, for it is first in supplying our necessities; it favors and strengthens population; it creates and maintains manufactures; gives employment to navigation, and materials to commerce. It is also the strongest bond of well regulated society, the surest basis of internal peace, the natural associate of good morals.

So, the young man who desires to leave the farm and go out into the wide world for himself, perhaps to some far off city, or to some spot on his native land, where he imagines there will be a paradise open for him; such a step in life should be well considered before taken.

It is a good thing to fit yourself for a lawyer, doctor, or a minister, but it is a better thing to know that you can be one. Young men favored with every opportunity for enjoyment at home, and not over-worked, imagine that they can do far better than to guide the ox, or to turn the stubborn glebe. And with the merest trifle of consideration, the hands are withdrawn from the implements of agriculture and given to the office or the shop work of the city. And thus thousands of young men are utterly ruined. If they would only stop and think, "What can I make of myself?"

The question is, "To what is my ability mostly adapted?" then they might go forward into life's journey with a better prospect of success.

"Ever remember," writes Goldwait,
"that for health and substantial wealth, for rare opportunities for self improvement, for long life and real independence, farming is the best business in the world."
