Not Till I Have Won.
Place not the barrel on my head
Now, when the race is just begun;
Be more discreet, and wait instead
Till I the prize have won.
A kindly word my heart might cheer,
And help me to complete my task;
Yet if bestowest thou my share,
Till it is done, I ask.
Think how I would be mortified,
And how with grief my soul be tossed,
If I should find me should decide
That the prize had been lost.
Your wishes are no doubt sincere,
And for my good are surely meant;
Yet if bestowest thou my share,
Make use o'er content.
And how dependent you would feel
Should I be thus, my dear friend,
And failure should the first reveal
I have kept me from my end.
So friend, pass by my words restrain
The words of mine, I show
And when the prize I seek I gain,
On me thy words bestow.

An Atrocious Suggestion Quashed.
The preposterous suggestion to arm the school boys of New York City with rifles and provide for their military training was promptly and uncompromisingly opposed by Mr. Thomas W. Churchill, president of the Board of Education, and Dr. William H. Maxwell, superintendent of the city schools. President Churchill declared that he would oppose any system of military practice in the schools that would give the boys wanton ideas about human life and give them an incentive to shoot. Dr. Maxwell is reported to have made the following vigorous statement:
"The law prohibits a reasoning man from keeping for his own protection arms in his home, and yet this scheme proposes to put into the hands of unreasoning school children army rifles, and to store them in the public schools. It is preposterous."
"No occasion should be neglected to impress upon our children the horrors of war—not merely the immediate horrors of the battlefields, but the collateral horrors that follow in the wake of war—the orphaning of tender children, the widowhood of loving wives, old age deprived of its natural support, the flower of a country cut off in its youth, the poverty, the disease, the unspeakable anguish of mind and body. And all this to the end that our children, to whom in years to come may be committed the issues of peace or war for a beloved country, may learn that war is, so dreadful a thing that it should never be entered upon lightly, but only as a last resort in defense against national peril or in support of some fundamental principle of transcendent value to humanity, as, for instance, the abolition of slavery with its horrors worse than war."

A great German writer declared that when the boys of a country were found playing war as a favorite game the nation was in the verge of war. The whole theory of extensive armament as a preventative of war has been shattered by the spectacle of blood-drenched Europe.
"Seek peace, and pursue it." That is far better. Think peace, talk peace, hope peace, pray for peace. Tell our boys that bravery and victory on one side of the battlefield means inevitably that those on the other side of the field are wounded and slain. Impress upon them what is happening where the bullet stops rather than the courage of the man who starts it on its way. There are other and better ways than battle for developing and demonstrating courage. The whole country will endorse the bold statement by the leaders of public education in the metropolis against arming and militarizing the boys of the public schools.

The Lights of London.
"Although the street lights of London are now lowered by night, London dwellings continue to be more efficiently lit than they were in early Victorian days. Edmund Yates, who was born in 1815, relates that in his boyhood there was gas in the streets and shops, and wax candles for the great ones of the earth; but those who could not afford such luxuries were compelled to seek their illumination in tallow candles which required snuffing—i. e., the removal of their burnt wicks—about every quarter of an hour. For a night light we used a long 'larding' rushlight set up in the middle of a huge tin light-house perforated with round holes, the reflection of which on the walls and ceiling was ghastly in the extreme.
"Is the water you get at your board 'pig-house pure'?"
"No, we frequently find traces of coffee and other substances in it."

What Maritime Provinces Have to Offer Home-seekers.
The Canadian Government has wisely issued a warning against indiscriminate immigration. For several years a crusade has been carried on in Europe urging upon all and sundry the advantages offered by Canada to its new settlers. The result was an immigration including all classes and conditions. Among them were the untrained, the idle, the indolent, expecting to find a land, if not flowing with milk and honey, at least affording an easy living. Many were disappointed. There was work in plenty but the immigrant and the work were not adapted to each other. The farms were calling for help but the majority of immigrants preferred city life and they stayed in the cities. Today they are idle and complaining that Canada is a poor place for the immigrant.

There is room yet in Canada for many millions more. The West is still calling for men to till the soil, to break new land; calling for women to share in the pioneering processes which will eventually convert the great western wilderness into a land of bounded harvests. In the United Kingdom desirous of taking up farm lands in a settled country could find no better opportunity than in the Maritime Provinces. There are three classes of immigrants to whom Eastern Canada holds out welcoming hands and assurance of remunerative work, namely:
Farmers with a limited capital to purchase farms already cultivated, a 'going concern' in a desirable environment, a soil of infinite possibilities, a genial climate, an assured market and all the comforts that civilization has to offer in return for honest work.
Farm laborers willing to work for a reasonable wage, with comfortable housing, plenty of good wholesome food and an opportunity to purchase farms of their own.
Domestic servants, trustworthy and willing to work in comfortable homes in country or city, at liberal wages. There is, perhaps, no class of employees so much in demand at present as domestic servants, and no class as liberally paid.—Bony Eut.

The Right to be Bitter.
"I've a right to be bitter if I want to." A man dying of tuberculosis was speaking. "My life has been one long mockery of hardship and failure. I've never known a year's perfect health, and all around me I see men who can squander their inheritance of health with impunity. It's been a grim struggle to get enough money to keep soul and body together, and everywhere I see those who have more money than they need or that is good for them. Now, in early twilight, I am dying. If I am bitter, I think I've a right to be!"
Doctor Brown nodded sympathetically. "It isn't your right in the matter that I am concerned about," he said, very quietly, "just why God has allowed your lot to be so heavy, when mine has been comparatively so light, I don't know; but I am sure that sometime we are both going to understand, and see that all the time he was doing what was best. I suppose the eternity so long will be so short and so unthen that it will mean more to us than ten thousand considerations now hidden from us that we shall then see, will make it all appear very different. Some day we shall see conclusively that divine love was all about our suffering here. I am sure of that."
"But just now, I am greatly concerned over the needlessness of your voluntarily adding another burden to the others. I wish I could make you see that bitterness only adds another burden to your lot. You don't even get the poor satisfaction of avenging yourself on the world or on anyone. You are the one it stings. It only takes from your every possibility of entering into any of the positive joys that, in spite of their suffering, those who do suffer have known. Circumstances have made your life terribly hard, my dear friend; I beg you not to add a hardship greater than the others of your lot!"
It was a changed man who grasped Doctor Brown's hand a day later. In his eyes was a new peace. "The bitterness is gone," he said. "I've let the heaviest burden I ever had to bear."

At a recent Salvation Army Congress some excellent stories were told. One of the best, a favorite of General Booth's, related to a certain drunkard who fell into the hands of the Salvation Army. "He had been drunk so long," said the General, "that he was able to give no very little information about himself. Eventually, however, we discovered that he was married and that his deserted wife lived in a town in the Midlands. We immediately telegraphed to her: 'We have found your husband.' In a very short time we got the reply: 'You can keep him!'"

Death's Harvest.
The following from the Victoria County, N. B. News, will be read with interest by Wolfville people. The deceased was the father of Mrs. Henshaw of this town:
RAINSFORD W. LOVELLY.
In the death of Rainsford W. Lovelly on Sunday evening, Oct. 4th, at his home, Perth, loses another of its old and respected landmarks.
Mr. Lovelly has been gradually failing for the past year, but few people knew that the end was so near. He had, however, gone past the three score and ten mark, having just his 75th birthday. He was not only a native of Perth, but has always lived on the homestead where he was born, a beautiful spot which he dearly loved. Mr. Lovelly has always taken a very active interest in everything that tended to build up the country. Development of the country from its infancy, from stage coach and tow boat and steamboat, as well as the old-fashioned dug out canoe from Fredericton to Perth as a means of transit, was inspiring to him in his day, but finally came the railway, (narrow gauge) and then standard gauge, bicycle, telephone and automobile, together with the building of the Town of Perth, and the general improvement of the whole country on a vast scale, with the individual energy he himself was able to put into these great developments, made life to him one grand, moving picture, well worth living to enjoy. And to say that he did enjoy life is only putting it mildly, and even at his advanced age, all who knew Rainsford Lovelly will learn of his demise with sorrow. It will be remembered that Perth in the past was noted for its singing. No corner in all the Province of New Brunswick could render such beautiful singing as Perth, and under the leadership of the late Barnabas Armstrong, Sr., Mr. Lovelly, from his singing school days up to within a few months ago could always be found among the good singers, as it was his life. He was a most devoted husband and father, and a man who took great pride in his home. Perth will miss him.
His father was Daniel Lovelly who died when Rainsford was a small boy. His mother, who was Phoebe Larlee, married again her second husband being the late Abraham Topham. They moved to Perth, Michigan, in the early 60's, where, a little later they both died.
His only sister was Mrs. Samuel Gauthier, who on one time lived in Caribou, Me., finally in 1856, moved to Perth, Minn., where she died in 1884. Mrs. Hilda Craig, a half sister, died last spring and beside her he leaves two half brothers and a half sister, Mr. Joseph A. Topham, of Staples, Minn., Mr. Bernard G. Topham, of East Saginaw, Mich., and Mrs. Annie Coggins, of Flint, Mich.
Besides a sorrowing wife, daughter of the late Stillman Armstrong, he leaves three daughters and six grand children, Mrs. Captain H. A. Henshaw, of Wolfville, N. S., and her two sons, Vaughn and Eldon, attending college. Mrs. John H. Weaver, of Bassano, Alberta, and her four children, and Mrs. A. G. Gaster, who is at home with her mother.
The funeral was held from his residence on Wednesday, the 7th, and was one of the largest seen in Perth for many years, probably not since the funeral of his son, Herbert, in 1901, who was brought home from Washington. The sermon was preached by Rev. W. M. Fields, from text of his own selection, from St. John 1:2, 3. Mr. Lovelly was happy in the thought of meeting his friends and loved ones on the other shore.
The interment took place in his lot in Larlee Creek Cemetery.

Northern Messenger.
Our good old Sunday "Story-teller" friend, the "Northern Messenger," has been for nearly fifty years a favorite with the Canadian people. It gives splendid value for the money, and contributes largely to a Sunday so well spent as to bring a week of content. It is a strong ally to the temperance cause and every other moral reform, and is truly a character builder.
It is such a fine paper that many of the largest city Sunday Schools distribute it as their regular Sunday School paper. For they realize that a paper that gives so much for the money and interests the older members of the family as well as the youngest, gives the parents an additional incentive to see that their children attend school every Sunday. And through the weekly visits of the "Northern Messenger" the church helps to cheer and hearten many who cannot, and whom who will not attend its services.
The "Northern Messenger" is about to celebrate its Golden Jubilee—50 years of usefulness in hundreds of thousands of homes. Will it have a welcome in yours this year?
On trial to new subscribers—to individual addresses, 12 months for 30 cents; Sunday Schools, in any required quantity, 3 months free trial; clubs of ten copies a week to one address for 12 months for $2.00. Larger clubs price, on application.
The "Northern Messenger" is published by John Duggall & Son, "Witness" Block, Montreal, Can. Try it for a year.

Bright, Healthy, Attractive Girls.
THIS CONDITION CAN ONLY BE MAINTAINED THROUGH RICH, RED BLOOD.
It makes all the difference in the world to a girl whether she develops into a bright, healthy, attractive woman or sinks into a sickly, unhappy, suffering semi-invalid.
The girl whose blood is poor and scanty—who is anaemic as the doctor terms it—starts life under too great a handicap. She is weaker and more frail than her companions who have rich, red blood. She is more easily fatigued in body and mind, and work of any kind exhausts her. In time her health breaks down. She becomes pale, looks worn out, is languid, irritable and nervous. Her heart palpitates violently at the least exertion, and she falls behind other girls in looks, health and a capacity for enjoying life. Abundant rich, red blood is the one thing that can restore good health to the many thousands of such girls. The rich, red blood can only be obtained through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They have given thousands of weak, white-faced, bloodless girls, robust, vigorous health and high spirits. Here is a bit of proof. Miss Olive Gauvreau, St. Jerome, Que., says: "I have reason to be more than grateful to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for they restored me to health after more than one doctor and many medicines had failed. I suffered as so many girls do from anaemia. I was all run down, tortured with headaches, could not stand any exertion, and had no appetite, though of course I had to force myself to eat. I was in this condition for nearly two years, and although doctoring continually, seemed to be steadily growing worse, and I was very much discouraged and despondent. Finally a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I discontinued all other medicines and did so. In the course of a few weeks there was no room to doubt that I had at last found the right medicine. My appetite returned, the headaches began to come less frequently, the color was returning to my face. The continued use of the pills for a little longer fully restored my health, and I have since been as healthy and active as anyone could wish. I cannot too strongly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to other weak and ailing girls."
You can get these Pills through your medicine dealer or by mail post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $5.00 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Why Perfidious?
Whatever her enemies may say of England's policy, it is difficult to understand how any man of sense can call it perfidious in the present instance. Surely she has made no bones about her hostility to Germany. That Germans should resent it is only human nature. But there is a strange incongruity in the epithets they apply to it. On the one hand, they point out how England has for years joined with the other powers in thwarting German attempts at expansion in Morocco and elsewhere. On the other hand, they profess to be amazed at finding her still in the same attitude. In one sentence they recall the abuse and the jingo desire for the destruction of the mercantile marine. In the next they reproach England for perfidy in doing what they claim she had long intended to do.—New York Globe.

Canada's Opportunity.
"Industrial Canada," published by the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, has a number of helpful ideas calculated to better conditions provided the people co-operate with the manufacturers. In making efforts to restore confidence the magazine truly points out that in putting forth such efforts the manufacturers are acting in the public interests as well as their own.
The prosperity of the whole country is closely connected with the uninterrupted turning of factory wheels, so much so that widespread closing of manufacturing concerns would produce a condition bordering on panic.
The manufacturers are doing all in their power to overcome obstacles. They put forth every effort to keep factories open even if they are in some instances obliged to reduce the staff. As a result the panic is passing.
Now is the time for the people to help. A sentiment in favor of "Canadian made" goods will be one of the greatest sources of strength to the home market.
At this crisis, our people should realize that every dollar sent out of Canada for an article made at home retards the progress and prosperity of Canada.
The present struggle is desperate, but cool-headed courage and loyalty will win, if we continue the present tendency to substitute Canadian-made articles for those formerly imported.
In an address before the Manufacturers' Association recently, Mr. R. C. Wilkins, President of the Eastern Townships Association Boards of Trade, voiced this sentiment in the following stirring words:—
"The only manufacturing industry now working full time in Germany is the establishment for the manufacture of Widows and Orphans of which the German Kaiser is the President and Managing Director. Let us be awake to our opportunities and obtain our share of the prosperity that is bound to come to Canada, once this German-made, cold blooded, diabolical plot against humanity and civilization has received its quietus at the hands of the allies. The soil fertilized by British blood spilled on the fields of battle produces the greatest crop of liberty and justice known to man."

Consumption Takes Hundreds of People.
Hundreds of people succumb to consumption every day.
Science proves that the germs only thrive when the system is weakened from colds or sickness, overwork, confining duties or when general weakness exists.
The best physicians point out that during changing seasons the blood should be made rich and pure and active by taking Scott's Emulsion after meals. The cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion warms the body by enriching the blood; it peculiarly strengthens the lungs and throat, while it upholds the restorative forces of the body to avoid colds and prevent consumption.
If you work indoors, the easily feel languid or nervous, Scott's Emulsion is the most strengthening food—most everyone knows. It is totally free from opiate drugs. Avoid substitutes.

What the Polar Explorer Eats and Drinks.
Sir Edward Shackleton, the antarctic explorer, who is leading another expedition to the south pole, gave an interview to a newspaper correspondent before he left London. He spoke, among other things, of the value of sugar as food to travellers in that region. The craving for it is very strong, he declared, and then he added:
"To show you how valuable sugar is to the explorer, there was an occasion when we marched for miles, drawing large sledges in fourteen days and a half. Every two hours we each took two or three lumps of sugar. Within ten minutes of eating them, we could feel the heat going through our bodies. The highest temperature of that march was sixty-two degrees below zero."
We shall take with us no stimulants except tea and cocoa. We drink the tea at midday to refresh us for the afternoon march. The cocoa is taken the last thing at night to preserve bodily heat during the hours of sleep. The greatest temptation that assails an arctic explorer is the desire to drink on the march. At his feet there is potential liquid in unlimited quantity. But the snow is at forty degrees below zero, and must be melted in the mouth. The heat required to melt it is much too precious to be used in that way; it is needed to keep up the bodily heat and energy.
"Catching cold" is almost unknown in polar regions. The only time we ever suffered from cold was just after we had opened a bale of English clothes to serve them out for winter wear. The germs, apparently, were lying dormant among the clothing. They "woke up" on being heated. The men whose duties took them into the open recovered in a day. The others suffered for four or five days.

Editorial Briefings.

If some of the time and energy wasted on war discussion were spent in pushing business, the latter would not feel the depression so strongly.

When the primitive people of uncivilized parts hear of the awful slaughter in civilized Europe, they must wonder whether civilization is really worth while.

When the government does go to the country thousands of Liberals will condemn their party leaders for denying the German menace and refusing to strengthen the imperial navy against the gravest emergency in history.

The Ottawa Free Press declares that if the Laurier naval programme had been followed Canadian warships would now be hunting German commerce destroyers.

The editor of a country paper received the following inquiry some time ago: 'Can you tell me what the weather will be next month?'

Addressing a Toronto audience in support of the Belgian Relief Fund a few days ago, M. L. L. Vauderdelve a Belgian lady, asked her hearers to 'think of Belgium as a wilderness!'

Those engaged in preaching sedition among the Boers in South Africa appear to have succeeded in inciting some of the soldiers to rebel.

Everywhere throughout Canada consequent upon the revelations coming from Great Britain of the wholesale system of espionage established by the German government, there is a rising feeling of uneasiness and insecurity among the Canadian people generally.

No one desires a political conflict in the present crisis. Parliament will only be dissolved through high public necessity and not for partisan advantage.

It is remarkable if they remember that the Opposition, through its partisan Senate, is forever waiting for opportunity to damage and destroy any of their administration measures!

Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Davidson, of this town, celebrated the twenty fifth anniversary of their marriage on Friday last. They were married at the Blittown Baptist church on Wednesday, Oct. 16th, 1889, by Rev. S. B. Kempton, D. D., then pastor of the Canard Baptist church.

Mrs. Simon Annot, Muskoka, Ont., says: 'My baby was ill and cried continually till I began giving her Baby's Own Tablets. They worked a marvelous change in her and she became happy, gained in weight and all signs of sickness left her.'

A New Mandate.

We have not advocated a dissolution of Parliament, neither have we discouraged any such dissolution. There will be, however, a dissolution, and an appeal to the people for a new mandate some time before Christmas.

The Liberal party at the emergency session gave an undertaking through its leaders not to oppose such measures as the government might deem it advisable to bring in for defense purposes.

The blind leading Liberal newspapers, led by their chief, The Globe, are protesting against an election now.

The West is grossly under-represented in the Commons. The Senate has made it impossible for the government to carry any first class measure of which the Opposition disapproves.

Canada has so far had to make decisions on questions over which there has been wide differences of opinion between the Canadian parties.

In other words, every father of a family would have to pay $9,000 to the German conquerors.

It is remarkable if they remember that the Opposition, through its partisan Senate, is forever waiting for opportunity to damage and destroy any of their administration measures!

Acadia 19—Kings 0.

Acadia defeated King's here last Saturday afternoon by the score of 19-0. The weather was dull and showery but the grounds good. A good number of spectators witnessed the game. The play was for the most part loose, Acadia making up a little in the second half. Both teams show need of practice and Acadia has a good outlook for the trophy with a little more team play worked in. The game was noticeable for off-side play and free kicks. C. Graham, of Halifax, refereed in a very satisfactory manner. Acadia have their usual fast half line, Leeman starting as usual by his spectacular run. Gregg is a fast quarter and will be greatly missed. He left on Monday to fight for his country. Parker also does good work. Acadia's scrim is lighter than usual, but gave King's more than they could handle. Eagles did some good kicking. Herbert of King's also did good kicking but was soon suppressed.

The line up of both teams was as follows:—

Acadia	King's
Stackhouse	Parlee
Halves	McConnell
Eagles	Herbert
Leeman	Harley
McCurdy	Hutchinson
Harlow
Quarters	Bell
Gregg	Feater
Parker	Hallett
Archibald

Obituary.

The death occurred at her home on Wednesday afternoon of a very estimable and highly regarded lady, Miss Julia M. Elderkin. The deceased was a daughter of the late Johnson Elderkin and was born in Wolfville 46 years ago. Some years ago she was a most efficient teacher in the Wolfville public school, and many old pupils have an appreciative remembrance of her painstaking efforts in their behalf. Miss Elderkin had been in poor health for some time. She was a consistent member of the Methodist church and was always when in health active in every good work. Many tributes throughout the province will miss her. The funeral will take place from her late residence this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Mr. Clifford Borden, of Boston, arrived in Wolfville on Tuesday and will spend some time among old friends. Mr. Borden's visit is chiefly on account of the illness of his mother, Mrs. S. S. Borden, whose condition, we are glad to know, is somewhat improved. Mr. Borden expresses himself as much pleased with the growth of Wolfville since his last visit to his old home town.

Mr. Francis St. George Cautfield, of Clarendon, Kingston, N. S., passed through Wolfville on Tuesday on his way to England, in consequence of a telegram which he had just received giving information that his wife is seriously ill. Mr. Cautfield was well known in this town a few years ago, when he made a prolonged stay prior to purchasing the above named property. He also informs us that his son, who was also known here, has gone to England with the rank of captain in the Canadian contingent.

Captain Black, R. O., who at the outbreak of the war was ordered to Canada as a military censor, returned home on Monday and will resume his work as Town Clerk of Wolfville until such time as he may receive further orders. Capt. Black speaks very highly of the hospitality of the town and Hazel Hill residents and has promised, as soon as time permits, to give us a short article on the progressive town of Canoe, which town, by the way, has just installed an up to date Gas Producer Municipal Electric Light plant, the streets being brilliantly lighted with an all night service.

In his speech at Montreal there was a touch of the real Laurier. He said, 'I am not here to discuss whether or not we have a perfect autonomy in Canada. I will do nothing to embarrass the Government, though I do not deny that there is a great temptation to discuss the naval question at the present time.' The Liberal leader in 1909 also yielded to any more temptation. The autonomy boys the war has destroyed. The masses of the Liberal party look back with dismay to the action of their leaders in Parliament on the Borden naval proposals.

HIS HEALTH IN A TERRIBLE STATE

"Fruit-a-lives" Healed His Kidneys and Cured Him

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 26th, 1913.
"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen 'Fruit-a-lives' advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect, I found more than satisfactory. Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected. My kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am enjoying the best health I have ever had."

B. A. KELLY

Open the Door.

Open the door of your heart, my lad,
To the angels of love and truth,
When the world is full of unnumbered joys

In the beautiful days of youth,
Casting aside all things that mar,
Saying to wrong, 'Depart!' To the voices of hope that are calling you
Open the door of your heart.

Open the door of your heart, my lass,
To the things that shall abide;
To the holy thoughts that lift your soul
Like the stars at eventide;

All the beautiful fadeless flowers that bloom
In the realms of song and art,
Are yours if you'll only give them room;

Open the door of your heart,
Heedless of class or creed,
When you hear the cry of a brother's voice.

The sob of a soul in need;
To the singing heavens that o'er you bend
You need no map or chart;
But only the love of the Master and Friend;

Open the door of your heart.
No More Toasts.

Close on the heels of the recent receipt of the czar to the new minister of finance, urging the necessity of so directing the administration of the state monopoly of spirits as to save the country from drunkenness, comes the imperial order abolishing the time honored custom of army commanders to raise the cup to the health of the czar and the imperial family in front of the troops at the conclusion of parades and manoeuvres. This new proof of the czar's earnestness in the matter of temperance has not come a moment too soon, for the ravages caused by the drink habit among the masses of the Russian people are frightful enough, they are doubly dangerous in the case of the army, on which the very safety of the empire depends.

The physique of the Russian youth from which the army is recruited is none too good. In a large number of localities—especially in Siberia—the percentage of rickets reaches as much as 70, and the general recruiting standard is lower than in Austria, France and Germany. As General Rodiger, the former minister of war, once stated, the adoption by Russia of the Austrian standard would result in a loss of over twelve per cent. of the army. A physique so unsatisfactory as this is incapable of resisting the influence of any considerable quantity of alcohol, and what this means in the case of an army has been recently shown by experiments in Sweden.

It has been proved by them that the absorption of half a liter (one this one) of beer half an hour before shooting reduced the marksman's accuracy by nearly 40 per cent., and that the effect of a daily consumption of one bottle of beer for twelve days continues for a whole week after. Yet, according to the investigation of Dr. Brand in one particular recruiting locality only fifty young men out of a total of 150 turned out to be fit for military service. Dr. Brand has found among the specially selected men of the frontier garrison only 15 per cent. fit for military service.

Courage in Every-day Life.

Have the courage to do without that which you do not need, however much your eyes may covet it. Have the courage to show your respect for honesty, in whatever guise it appears; and your contempt for dishonest duplicity by whomsoever exhibited. Have the courage to wear your old clothes until you can pay for new ones. Have the courage to obey your Maker at the risk of being ridiculed by man. Have the courage to prefer comfort and propriety to fashion in all things. Have the courage to acknowledge your ignorance rather than to seek credit for knowledge under false pretences. Have the courage to provide entertainment for your friends within your means—not beyond.

Bigger Crops Needed.

The Ontario Provincial Government is making a special appeal to Ontario farmers to enter upon the fall sowing season with the neediest of the Dominion first in mind. In consideration of the fact that the predominant demand of the empire while engaged in the present international conflict is for foodstuffs, it is imperative that Ontario should place greater areas of land than ever before under the crops that may be utilized as foodstuffs. The growing of fall wheat is especially urged, as well as other cereals and standard vegetables. In view of the temptations now facing the farmers to sell their cattle across the border at fancy prices, they are exhorted to pay more attention to conserving their live stock.

Mr. Duff said: I recognize that the amount that can be sown this fall must be somewhat limited by the plans which have been made during the summer. At the same time I think special plans should be made to increase the acreage of the crops to be put in, in the spring as well. There will, undoubtedly, be need for foodstuffs along many lines in addition to wheat, such as potatoes, beans, oats, dairy products, live stock and poultry. I would like to point out that during the past season there were over 3,000,000 acres of land devoted to pasture. Now that there is every prospect of a good supply of labor, I think a great deal of this land could with advantage be broken up and put into crop.

MAKING HER HAPPY

One Case Where Love Was Successfully Placed Second to Honor.

By ROSE CARRINGTON.
"If you really loved me, you'd explain," and the girl tossed her head angrily.
"Once more, Helen, I will not."

"Then, Ted, there is nothing more for me to do but to give you back this," and Helen drew off the ring he had placed on her finger with such professions of devoted love that it made her heart ache to remember them.
"Helen, don't," he whispered, but she did not flinch.

"Can you bear to break it off?" he asked softly, but the anger dying out of his boyish face.
"Yes, I can when there is a secret between us. If you have one now, you'd have a dozen after we were married." But her own face was relaxing, and the tears lay near the surface.

"Helen, dearest, just wait. Give me until tonight, and then I promise to tell you everything. You owe me that much, don't you?" Ted smiled a little uncertainly. "You know when a man loses his job he is given a little bit of notice."

"But this is not a job," Helen said; but she slipped the ring back on her finger.
"Isn't it? Well, I just guess you, the finest kind of a one."

"How do you make that out?" and now there was a faint smile about the pretty lips.
"It is a mighty fine job, that of making you happy." Ted returned, his usual merry expression coming back into his eyes as he bent towards her.

"Nonsense, but honest, Ted, if you can tell me tonight, why not now?" and her eyes tempted him to go against what he believed to be right, but he shook off the influence, and returned gravely:
"Remember, Nell, that picture we saw last winter at the art exhibition."

She did not need to be told which one, for there had been only that which had lingered in their memory. "You know the one where the girl is trying to get her sweetheart to wear a white handkerchief so that he will be taken for a member of the other side, and not be killed?"

"Of course."
"And you know what was under it? Something about loving her less if he did not love her more?"

Helen nodded.
"Well, that's my case, girl—honest. I can't tell you because I promised not to, and I can't go back on my honor, for if I did I'd not be worthy of you. See?" And there was a strength of purpose in his dark eyes that appealed to her and made her so dizzy, although, woman like, she asked softly:
"Would you rather give me up than go back on your promise?"

"Ted swallowed hard, 'if you'd want me to, Nell, I don't believe I could care for you as much as I do. You see, I'd feel that something was wrong. Now kiss me, dear, and just wait until tonight, and I'll prove to you that I'm just what I've said I am, and not awfully bad after all.' And without waiting for permission, he drew her into his arms, kissed her not once but several times, then ran away, leaving her gasping, but happier than she had been for several days.

The crux of the trouble had been reached the night before, when there had been a dance to which all of her set had been invited. It was the last she expected to attend before their marriage, and Ted had looked forward to it eagerly. Ted was to come for her at nine, and she had dressed very carefully, pinning on the blush roses he had sent her. After kissing them with girlish tenderness. However, although she was all ready a little before nine, Ted did not come. Nine grew to ten, then eleven, and finally twelve, and still she waited alone and in vain, and worse than all, she received no message of explanation. Finally, frantic with imagining all kinds of accidents, she had thrown herself all dressed, on her bed, and sobbed herself to sleep. In the morning he had telephoned her, asking her to meet him at the park entrance, and when she arrived at the appointed spot she found him haggard, sleepless and with tumbled clothes. He offered her no explanation, except to say that business had detained him. Still, she loved him with all her girl's heart, and as she sat there in the sweet, early spring air after he had left her, feeling alone as though on a desert island, she realized that she was longing to understand more of her woman's nature, to make excuses and forgive without knowing why.

The day passed slowly, and she felt the cool, scarcely wait until evening. The dreariness of the house became more pronounced because of the calls from many of her girl friends, who came so openly to question her absence from the dance, that she felt that her endurance was almost gone.

To them all she replied gaily, hiding her worry beneath a smile. "Why, there's nothing in it. Surely Ted and I ought to be allowed the privilege of choosing our way of spending an evening. You see, Ted is a bit jealous and I honestly believe he doesn't like me to dance with any one else." And with this palatable but innocent fiction, smilingly given, she dismissed every one who came to be made of honor at the wedding.

The latter laughed teasingly as she cried:
"And to think that you'd be so much in love, Nell, that you'd be willing to give up a dance like that last night?" But Nell only smiled back.

"Just wait, Grace, until your turn comes, and then you'll know how Ted's right one can be," and there was a catch in her throat as she spoke, for surely Ted was dearest to her even her sense of justice, and she felt she could not trust him.

"At last, when the gloaming of the spring evening wrapped the world in its cloud, with trembling fingers Helen dressed for Ted, her heart beating so rapidly that she could scarcely get her breath. Long before eight she was ready for him, but it was after nine before she heard his ring as he came to let him in. Somehow she could not reproach him, he seemed so tired and worn. His eyes were deep with fatigue and ring encircled, and so she only put her arms up and drew his head down, saying gently:

"My poor boy, how tired he looks; come, sit down and rest."
"You darling!" he whispered, and for a moment he rested his aching head on the little shoulder lovingly offered for his support, and then he broke out with:
"Thank God, it's all over," and drew her closer to him. All curiosity suddenly left Helen. No longer was she a petulant girl, jealous of her rights, but a strong, courageous woman, with a deep trust in the integrity of the man she was going to marry, and she laid her firm, cool hand on his burning one so confidently that he raised it to his lips before he began:

"I wonder, Nellie, if I were to ask you to keep on trusting me without any explanation, you'd do it?"
"Without any hesitation, she returned:
"I've been thinking about that picture, Ted, and I believe the man was right; he could not have loved the girl as he ought, if he had not been true to his honor. If you can't tell me, it is all right."

It was worth a good deal to him, this directness of her love, but unfortunately Ted did not have to take advantage of it. With a little laugh of pure joy, he sat with his arm about her and told her the story, which after all was simple, clear and understood. An employer's son, who had fallen into bad company, had been driven to forging his father's name. Ted, who was treated as a scapegoat, and then Ted had been sent to find the missing wrong-doer.

"I spent the whole of last night looking for you, and when I found you, I was glad to go back home. I had promised not to breathe a word of it until I landed him safely, and I couldn't break my word, not even for you, sweetheart," and he spoke earnestly.

"Oh, Ted, how good you are," she said softly.
"No, it was the only thing to do. Bob's father has been pretty good to me, and I believe the man was right; he could not have loved the girl as he ought, if he had not been true to his honor. If you can't tell me, it is all right."

"You could not have loved me as much as you do if you had not given me that rival," was Nell's reply. (Copyright, 1912, by W. G. Chapman.)

The Girl Who Thinks.
"My estrangement, if you can call it that, from my mother, dated from the moment I began to think," says a writer under the title of "My Mother Didn't Tell Me," in Harper's Bazar. "I had been very much 'mother's girl.' My mother and I planned my frocks, we sewed a great deal together, we chatted together, we read poetry about together, and also a good deal of modern fiction. My mother was very fond of books, and kept abreast of the times. Our companionship was of a very beautiful sort and still is—so long as I keep within those prescribed limits and as long as I do not venture into any question that has to do with the life or thought of the country today. My mother is as much interested in my frocks today, now that I am twenty-seven, as she was when I was seven. She still has that interest in books, and does her reading very, very late in the evening."
